

•FERC to delay Panhandle decision

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON — After the state asked for a delay, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission deleted from today's agenda a case in which a Panhandle gas company charges oil drillers with tapping into its reserves and illegally selling the gas.

At stake is 8.6 billion cubic feet of natural gas worth millions of dollars and the way Texas divides oil and gas rights. Dorchester owns the gas rights to the Panhandle field in question, and the independents have oil drilling rights.

The independents contend the gas they brought up is "casinghead gas," a natural by-product of oil drilling.

Dorchester contends that, despite the fact that they have oil permits, the independent drillers are not bringing up enough oil to qualify for the label.

That's where the Texas Railroad Commission comes in, because it granted the oil drilling permits to the 37 independents named in Dorchester's complaint.

FERC is involved because if Dorchester's claims are true, the oil drillers illegally sold the natural gas at higher prices than Dorchester could have.

If the federal commission rules against the oil drillers, a remedies hearing follows and they could be ordered to return proceeds from sale of the gas.

Lawyers for both sides expect the case to go to court, regardless of the outcome before FERC.

The Railroad Commission, which is considering a case involving some of the same issues, asked FERC to hold off until the state agency reaches a decision on its case.

FERC spokeswoman Rachelle Patterson said the commissioners did not officially grant the Texas agency's motion for a delay, filed Tuesday. But, she said, the commissioners said all parties had 15 days to respond to the motion and also asked for a status report from the Railroad Commission within 45 days.

Administrative Law Judge Brenda Murray has already ruled in Dorchester's favor in the form of a recommendation to the full commission. FERC commissioners, following cancellation of negotiations with representatives of the independents, had placed her recommendation on today's agenda for consideration.

The Railroad Commission filed a petition Tuesday with FERC requesting the federal agency to hold any action on the case. The RRC petition asks FERC to

•City eyes $1.8 million in certificates

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners Tuesday authorized issuance of notice of the city's intention to issue Certificates of Obligation for $1.8 million.

The general certificates will be used to finance street and drainage improvements, improvements to City Hall and the Service Center, and the site acquisition, building construction and equipment purchase for a sub-fire station.

Notice of the intention to issue the certificates will be published soon to meet statutory deadlines. Commissioners then will consider an ordinance to authorize the issuing of the certificates at 9:30 a.m., April 20.

Ken Smith, financial advisor for the city, said the certificates will be issued only as needed to meet the expenditures of the proposed projects.

"You only spend what you need to spend" up to $1.8 million, he explained. If less than that amount is needed for the projects, the remaining certificates do not have to be issued.

Any amount above the approved $1.8 million would require additional action, he said.

No specific dollar amounts are being attached to each project item at this time, Smith noted. The certificate funds will be allocated as needed as the projects are completed, he said. This allows flexibility for allocating the costs later.

After all the certificates are allocated, they will be refunded in Refunding General Obligation Bonds to get a lower rate of interest, Smith said.

In response to remarks by Commissioner E. L. "Smiley" Henderson, Smith said the calculations of the $1.8 million are based on the amount of such certificates that can be issued at this time without necessitating any additional tax increase.

In other matters, the commission approved the appointment of election judges and alternates for the upcoming city election on April 6.

Appointed were E. E.

Sheilhamer, presiding judge, and H. J. Johnson, alternate presiding judge, Ward 1; Ernestine Pulse, presiding, and Maxine Hawkins, alternate, Ward 2; Lula May Engle, presiding, and Wreatha G. Ramay, alternate, Ward 3; and Aletha Altman, presiding, and Myrtle Leith, alternate, Ward 4.

Phyllis Jeffers, appointed city secretary by the commission Tuesday, will serve as clerk for absentee voting.

In his report to the commission, City Manager Bob Hart discussed options for conducting a historical survey of Pampa for consideration of buildings which could be added to the state's historical register.

Miami superintendent retires from post

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — After 35 years in education, school superintendent Bill Vestal feels it's time to retire.

Vestal, the Miami superintendent for five years, submitted his resignation to school trustees Monday at their regular meeting. The trustees accepted the resignation.

"I have two years left on my contract," Vestal said, adding that 35 years as an educator and 28 of those as a superintendent are enough.

"My plans are kind of indefinite now," he admitted, showing a desire to move back to Amarillo.

Before coming to Miami five years ago, Vestal served three years as superintendent at River Road ISD and at Booker for 17 years before that. He also served at a school in Ellis County. Before taking on an administrative career, Vestal was a principal for two years, a business manager and tax collector at River Road ISD for three years and a coach.

The Miami school board will meet Tuesday to begin selecting a replacement for Vestal.

In other business, trustees agreed to change the wording a lunchroom rule from allowing a "quiet whisper" to "quiet conversation." The rule was changed upon the recommendation of the lunchroom rules committee which was established last month to see how to curb the noise in the cafeteria during lunch.

Another committee that was to have reported to the school board Tuesday was one seeking ideas or alternatives for the annual senior trip. However, that committee has not yet met.

Vestal and principal Phil Barefield were selected as administrative representatives on the teacher career ladder merit pay committee. They are the only two administrators at the school. Vestal said that the five teachers who qualify for the second level of the career ladder would receive a $1,500 pay increase.

Trustees also agreed to pay the travel expenses for high school junior Alicia Covey, who attends the Pampa School of Hairdressing, to tax automobiles on the 1985 tax roll and to grant homestead exemptions.

They agreed to amend the school budget by $10,282 for 20 new band uniforms and $18,646 for their share of payment on a computer for the Roberts County Tax Office. The school is sharing the cost for the computer with the county and the city of Miami.

Trustees agreed to seek bids on a sound system for the auditorium. Vestal said he hopes to get the sound system in time for the annual Miami Cow Calling Contest in June.

The candidate admits that she listed the wrong information but blamed it on confusion at city hall.

"Well, like I told the city manager, you'll never get me to admit it was my mistake," Christensen said.

The disqualified candidate said an employee in the city secretary's office "didn't know anything" and "couldn't answer questions" when she went to file the application.

"I felt it was totally unorganized and mass confusion at city hall," Christensen said.

She said the employee's mention of the incorrect ward number subconsciously put the idea into her head, and that she wound up putting the wrong number on the form.

"When you're upright, things just don't go right," Christensen said. "This was new to me."

"It isn't going to dampen my spirits. I intend to run (as a write-in). It will make it a little harder," she said.

Christensen, who owns and operates the D.M. Campana Art Co., a local retail and wholesale art supplier, is one of three city candidates sponsored by the Citizens for Better Government.

The group was formed in anger last year after city crews ripped out dozens of driveway pipes and entrances during street repairs. City officials said the asphalt mounds and pipes were removed because they caused problems with street drainage and street sweeping and snow removal. The program left some Pampa residents unable to get into their driveways.

The action spawned formation of the better government group. First, the citizens planned a recall of the mayor and city commissioners. Later, that idea was abandoned in favor of running a slate of candidates against the incumbents.

The group's other candidates are mayoral candidate Sherman Cowan and Ward 3 challenger Joe Reed.

Jerry C. Mulanax, a former city employee, also has filed in the mayor's race.

All of the challengers owed delinquent city taxes prior to the filing deadline, according to tax records. Candidates and elected city officials cannot be indebted to the city, according to qualifications in the city code.

Each paid the taxes on the day of the deadline for filing.

Christensen owed 10 years in back city taxes, according to the records.

Her delinquent taxes were owed for the years 1975 through 1984. She paid $6,075 for back taxes owed to the city and school district on the deadline.

The other three challengers just owed city-school taxes for 1984. Their 1984 taxes became delinquent on Feb. 1, about a month before the filing deadline.

The three paid the taxes, clearing the way for their candidacies.

Cowan paid $1,375 in city-school taxes; Reed came up with $421; and Mulanax paid $214.

The two challengers in the mayor's contest face incumbent Calvin Whatley in the April 6 election.

Cowan has Cowan Construction Co., a pipeline construction company.

Refrigeration units triggered oil-gas fuss

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a series of articles on the rulings of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the Texas Railroad Commission in regard to oil and gas rights disputes between majors and independents.

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

On Sept. 8, 1981, Phillips Petroleum Co. filed an application with the Texas Railroad Commission (RRC) to amend special field rules for fields in the Panhandle District, later modifying its application on Nov. 19, 1981.

The application basically concerned the use of separation equipment to strip hydrocarbon liquids from gas and to count such liquids as crude oil for determining classification of oil wells under gas-oil ratios established by the commission.

Thus began the on-going conflicts between the so-called majors and independents that have carried the battles into state and federal courts and into hearings before the state agency (the RRC) and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), a federal agency.

Three years and nearly five months after Phillips filed its application with the RRC, the commission examiners issued their decision based on a series of hearings held in September through November of 1983.

Issued Feb. 1 of this year, the proposed RRC decision - 76 pages long, including the recommended order and appendix - went against the independent oil producers who have been using the separation equipment.

The RRC proposal came in just slightly over two weeks after FERC had received its proposed decision on Jan. 16, a ruling which also went against the independents. Previous articles have discussed the FERC ruling.

In its application, Phillips had requested the RRC to rule that "Natural gasoline or other liquid hydrocarbons (natural gasoline and other liquid hydrocarbons being herein called "natural gas liquids") recovered, extracted or manufactured from gas from any well, by any means, including compression, cooling or refrigeration, or any combination thereof . . . shall not be reported as crude petroleum oil production for any purpose."

"No liquid hydrocarbon mixture, or portion thereof, which is not in the liquid phase in the reservoir, removed from the reservoir in such liquid phase, and obtained at the surface as such shall be reported as crude petroleum oil production or considered as crude petroleum oil for any purpose." (RRC, Pg. 3 - references come from the recommended decision.)

Phillips also asked that when such natural gas liquids were commingled or mixed with crude oil, only the actual crude oil portion should be used in determining gas-oil ratios.

The gas-oil ratios are important since they are used to assign classifications to wells as gas wells or oil wells. An oil well has been defined by RRC regulations as a well which produces no more than 100,000 cubic feet (McF.) of gas per barrel of oil.

And the classification is important since it determines the spacing of wells on leases. Under RRC rules, only one gas well is permitted for each section (640 acres). However, there can be one oil well for every 10 acres, up to 64 oil wells in a section.

Prior to 1977, there had been little conflict of note between gas and oil producers in the Panhandle Field. But in that year, certain operators began using refrigeration units to separate or liquify portions of the gas stream being produced by the well.

Senate committee approves tuition increase

AUSTIN (AP) — A second legislative committee has approved a college tuition increase that would be the first significant hike of its kind in 28 years.

The Senate Finance Committee voted 10-1 Tuesday to triple tuition over the next two years to $12 per semester hour for Texans at public universities. On Monday, the House Higher Education Committee approved a similar bill 8-0.

The Senate committee approved increases in a tuition proposal prepared by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's staff, which would raise an additional $180.8 million in revenue.

An earlier Hobby proposal had as its target $120 million in additional tuition revenue, said research director Tom Scott.

Tuition would rise from $4 per semester hour to $8 this fall and to $12 in the fall of 1986. The minimum tuition per semester would double to $100, but money for student grants also would be increased by about $12 million over the next two years.

There has been only one increase — and that one minor — in college tuition since 1957.

Spokesmen for student groups have supported the tuition increase in lieu of even greater increases proposed by some legislators.

Under the Senate proposal, after the first two years, tuition would go up $4 a semester hour each year until it reached $24, or 20 percent of the cost of providing an education, which currently is pegged at $120 per semester hour.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, objected to any bill that would increase tuition farther in the future than two years.

"If we want 20 percent, let's say 20 percent now," he said. "Vote on that, and the folks would vote on us."

"Are you making that motion, senator?" Parker was asked, and he replied, "No."

He did, however, vote against the tuition increase.

At $12, Texas would still rank third from the bottom of a list of 48 states that responded to a tuition survey. Delaware and Wyoming did not respond and are not included on the list, Scott said.

Tuition for non-residents and foreign students would double to $80 per semester hour in the fall and would go up to $100 the following year, with $20 increases per semester hour per year until tuition covered 100 percent of the cost of an education.

The non-resident increase would raise an additional $41.8 million, Scott said.

Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, said his constituents think a proposal to charge out-of-state students the same tuition a Texan would pay in that state "is the best thing since sliced bread."

Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, said he had seen statistics showing that foreign enrollments at some Texas colleges run as high as one in five.

"Texas taxpayers are tired of paying for educations" for foreigners, said Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana.

Parker, chairman of the education committee, said he was waiting on figures from the state comptroller to put together such a proposal.

The finance committee also voted to raise medical school tuition for Texans from $400 a year to $1,219 in the fall and to $3,950 the following year. Non-residents would pay four times the amount for a resident, or $4,876 and $15,800.

McFarland mentioned a doctor who had just completed his residency asked McFarland's advice on how to invest $250,000 in "disposable income."

"I don't think $16,000 (over four years) for a medical education is too much to spend," said McFarland.

Leukemia victim searches for siblings' bone marrow for chance of survival

HOUSTON (AP) — A leukemia victim is searching for two siblings who can contribute the bone marrow that doctors say will give him the only good chance of surviving the disease.

Steven Akin, 24, of Victoria, Texas, was diagnosed as having leukemia in 1983, and doctors now say his chances of survival are small without a transplant of compatible bone marrow.

Only brothers and sisters, physicians say, have bone marrow that would be compatible.

Akin was adopted as an infant and only recently learned that he has two siblings he never has met. He hopes somehow to find them.

"This is my only chance for a cure," Akin said. "My remissions will get shorter and shorter and eventually there will be no remissions."

He said his doctors at the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute told him that without the bone-marrow transplant "there is only a very slim chance."

Akin and his twin sister, Sandra Campbell, were put up for adoption as infants and were taken in by their stepparents when they were 9 months old. The brother and sister only recently learned that another sister, Winna Miller, grew up in their same neighborhood.

Blood tests on Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Miller show their bone marrow is not compatible with Akin's, although the sisters are mutually compatible.

It was only when Akin legally forced open his adoption papers that he learned he also had two other siblings.

He said the papers showed his real parents were John Davis, now about 62, and Mildred Kaufman Davis, 57. Akin said his adopting file shows that the parents were married in Chicago in 1953 and that in 1957 they placed two children up for adoption in that same city.

Later, the couple apparently moved to Iowa and then to Amarillo, Texas, where they offered for adoption Akin, his twin sister and an older sister.

Akin and his wife, Deanna, 22, said there is little information about the Davis children who were offered for adoption in Chicago.

"There is no way of knowing the sex of those children," said Akin. But doctors said there was an excellent chance that one of those siblings, now thought to be in his or her 30s, will have the bone marrow Akin needs.

Deanna Akin said she has made several telephone calls to the Chicago area to search records. She also has looked for Akin's parents, but said there are more than 100 entries for "John Davis" in the Chicago telephone book and 10 in Amarillo.

Akin said he believes his father could be a migrant construction worker who moves from job to job, but he has no proof of it.

Attempts to check birth records in Chicago have been fruitless.

"The hospitals keep saying they can't give out any information," said Mrs. Akin. "We keep running into dead ends."

Mrs. Akin said she has obtained a 1957 Chicago telephone directory and is calling adoption agencies listed in the book, but has had no luck so far.

Akin received chemotherapy last year and spent six weeks isolated in a germ-free bubble because the powerful chemical suppressed his immune system. At the end of the treatment, most of the mature leukemia cells died, but he said the disease returned.

Any transplant must be of compatible bone marrow; otherwise it can trigger a condition called graft-versus-host disease in which immunity cells from the transplant attack the host body.

Akin said the availability of compatible bone marrow would enable doctors to give him chemicals that would totally kill his leukemic bone marrow. He would then receive a marrow transplant that would reproduce and replace the diseased bone marrow.

The bone marrow is the body's main organ for making blood and immune cells.

The Akins said if they find a sibling with compatible bone marrow, they hope to fly the brother or sister to Houston for the transplant.

Akin said the sibling could remain anonymous, if they choose, and he could arrange the bone marrow transplant through the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute where he is a patient.

"If they don't want to meet me, that's okay," said Akin.

Convicted drifter executed today for woman's murder

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Convicted killer Stephen Peter Morin laid on a death chamber gurney for nearly 45 minutes early today, repeatedly pricked by needles intended to kill him, before Texas prison technicians were able to find a vein in his arm and inject him with lethal drugs.

"We had trouble trying to find a good vein," Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said of the repeated tries by technicians.

Morin, a multiple killer put to death today for the slaying of a 21-year-old San Antonio woman, "admitted that he had ruined his veins by shooting up with dope," the prison system said in a statement chronicling the execution.

Ironically, the 37-year-old Morin had asked for months that he be put to death and had requested that his attorneys cease any attempts to obtain him a stay.

But when the appointed time arrived, it was nearly an hour from the moment the operation began until the time he was pronounced dead. In recent Texas executions, the operation has gone very quickly, lasting only a few minutes.

The drifter from Rhode Island entered the death chamber at 12:02 a.m. and the first injection carrying a saline solution was attempted two minutes later.

At least five more attempts were made to locate appropriate veins in his arms and even legs before the technicians succeeded. A medical technician finally inserted the intravenous needle in Morin's right arm at 12:44 a.m.

Then with 22 witnesses crowded into the death chamber, Morin, who converted to Christianity during the abduction of a woman in 1981, recited about a three-minute prayer.

"Lord Jesus, I commit my soul to you. I praise you and I thank you," he said.

He made a kissing motion to one of the witnesses, closed his eyes, took a deep breath and died calmly.

"It was a prayer of a person that was not afraid to die," Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, who witnessed the execution, said. "I have witnessed several of these. And despite the time it took to find a vein, this was the least violent."

"It was most like a person being put to sleep."

Luther Masters, a corrections department physician, pronounced Morin dead at 12:55 a.m.

"I don't know if this was the toughest (execution)," Brown said. "But it was the longest."

Morin was the sixth Texas prison inmate to be executed since the state resumed carrying out the death penalty in 1982. He was the second to die in the state this year and the 40th nationwide since the Supreme Court allowed resumption of the death penalty.

Kenneth Copeland, a Fort Worth-based television evangelist who was among Morin's four personal witnesses, said he baptized Morin in the Bexar County Jail in 1981.

"He was very firm about it," Copeland said of Morin's insistence that the penalty be carried out. "He is as firm about it as I have ever personally seen him been."

Mail carrier died of two gunshot wounds

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — There was no evidence that Houston mail carrier Debora Sue Schatz had been sexually attacked or beaten before she was shot to death last June, a medical examiner has said in district court.

Harris County assistant medical examiner Vladimir Parungao testified Tuesday that Ms. Schatz died of two gunshot wounds to the head.

His testimony came in the murder trial of David Port, who is accused of gunning down the 23-year-old woman while she was on a mail delivery route in Port's neighborhood. The proceedings were to continue today.

The case has drawn heavy publicity because Port's parents were jailed after they refused to testify before a grand jury.

Both have since been released, but were being held while Port was free on $20,000 bond. Neither has been subpoenaed to testify in the trial and neither has appeared in the courtroom since the case began more than two weeks ago.

Parungao testified that he performed an autopsy on Ms. Schatz's body June 9, 1984, two days after she was killed.

"It is my opinion that Debora Sue Schatz came to her death through gunshot wounds, two, to the head."

Parungao said, adding that she was also hit in the head by a third bullet.

Parungao said he recovered two 22-caliber bullets and three bullet fragments from Ms. Schatz's head.

Jurors were allowed to look at three color snapshots of the bullet wounds, but state District Judge I.D. McMaster refused to allow the panel to see a full-body photo taken during the autopsy.

Under cross examination, the pathologist said he found no evidence of sexual attack on the body.

"There was no evidence of any kind of beating," defense attorney Jack Zimmerman asked.

"I have no finding of that sort," Parungao said.

It's flower planting time

Despite the gray skies and chilly winds in the air making near-farces of weathermen's forecasts of warm and sunny days, spring isn't too far away. In fact, according to the calendars, it should arrive next Wednesday, March 20.

And with spring comes, in varying degrees, those so-called spring flowers. With summer flowers and fall flowers falling in behind — if they resist the cold, or the droughts, or too much rain, or poor soil, or the bugs and diseases, or the neighbors' kids and dogs, or — well, you get the picture.

Yielding to my nieces' suggestions that my yard could use some beautification, I sent off for loads of flower bulbs early last fall. And on one relatively mild day last November, I actually got around to planting them, all 60 or so.

(I like bulb flowers. You plant them once and they keep coming up for years, continually spreading. I can do without any annual dirtying of my hands to plant endless packets of seeds — unless they're perennials.)

Trying not to be too concerned with whether they actually grew, I found myself several weeks ago beginning to look to see if they had peeped above the ground yet. And it turned into a habit — everyday I found myself arriving home and then heading around the yard looking for those yellow-green tips pushing through the sod.

And I was finally rewarded. Monday I could count about 15 of them willing to show my work had been worthwhile.

Now I'm not much for flowers. Oh, I like them okay. But I usually can do without going out and cutting them to put them into a bowl or vase to crowd some table or shelf place. Sure, they look nice. But it's not too long before I find myself having to pick dying petals out of my cereal in the mornings.

Instead, I prefer to just look at them growing against some house or in a garden or in some planter. That's where they belong in a city, though! I admit I like them better growing wild and free in some meadow or field or on some mountainside.

In Pampa you can see a lot of flowers in people's yards and gardens. Those that survive all the above-mentioned setbacks, anyway.

And they look fine.

However, I have to say that I would like to see more flowers around town. They really can spruce up a place and make some homes and yards look more attractive than they really may be.

In fact, they could really add a lot to the appearances of the numerous city parks. Not to mention the various planters located downtown.

At one time there used to be flowers and other decorative plants in the parks and planters, didn't there?

Or is my memory just playing tricks as time for numbing spring fever arrives?

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Cost-plus contracts should be ended

General Dynamics is the first defense contractor called to task as the Defense Department launches a major effort to make cuts in military contracts.

The firm is accused of improperly billing the government for political and advertising expenses, corporate trips and even for the entertainment of influential members of Congress.

GD has more than 1,000 contracts with the Pentagon. About 93 percent of its 100,000 employees work on programs for the government and its allies. GD builds the M-1 tank, submarine, aircraft and missiles.

Secretary of the Defense Caspar Weinberger has announced that "governmental overhead and administrative payments" to GD will be withheld for 30 days or longer, while the Pentagon sends its auditors to look for irregularities. The withheld funds will amount to about $40 million a month, but do not include $660 million a month for the production costs of weapons.

GD Chairman David Lewis told Congress that his company has been subject to unfair criticism. He says all of it has emanated from one source, Takis Veliotis, who once managed GD's Electric Boat Division. Veliotis was indicted for receiving $1.3 million in kickbacks and now is in Greece, a fugitive from justice.

After Weinberger's announcement, however, GD said any billings that are determined not to be bona fide will be withdrawn immediately.

The GD matter is just the first step. From now on all defense contractors will be required to certify under penalty of perjury that their bills contain no expenditures not made directly for the benefit of the government.

What the Defense Department must do in the end is stop agreeing to cost-plus contracts. There is no need for them is peacetime, and they lead to all sorts of boondoggling.

Defense contractors should be held to fixed-price agreements, the same as the rest of the business world.

Higher education nonsense

Once again we are being treated to the scornfully noisy threats of the private higher education bureaucracy - one of the most bloated and wasteful in American society. They say Reagan's budget cuts would, as Bard College (N.Y.) President Leon Botstein warned, "cripple private higher education."

If one of his students were to use such ludicrous hyperbole, he would, I suggest - or at least hope - be given a failing grade for writing nonsense.

Botstein wants us to forget that America's best years of private higher education development took place before 1970, when federal student aid was below $1 billion a year - and tuitions, as well as curricula, made at least a semblance of sense.

He would also like us to forget that from 1970 to 1981 federal aid to higher education soared from $1.5 billion to $8.6 billion. Even under the Reagan administration it climbed to $9.9 billion in 1984 and an estimated $9.3 billion in 1985. All despite a declining student-age population.

The simple truth is: the outcry by the private education establishment is not out of concern for students, but fear of having to tighten their own loose-fitting belts.

The virtually unlimited federal aid to college students created a "seller's market." This made it possible for colleges and universities to expand their bureaucracies at will and pass these costs on in the form of tuitions that rose much faster than the cost of living.

Between 1970 and 1984 the tuition index for higher education rose 180 percent, compared to consumer prices which rose 167 percent. For private colleges and the "Ivy Cartel" the rise was even greater. More important, the greatest rise in costs was not for instruction or research, but for "administrative services" - the bureaucracy.

No wonder the federal tax bill for this lavish padding of an already well-upholstered education establishment soared 560 percent - 274 percent in constant dollars.

Now what does that great Satan - Reagan - want to do to this beleaguered enterprise? He wants to cut total funding from $9.3 billion in 1985, $8.6 billion in 1986, $7.8 billion in 1987, and eventually $7 billion in 1990.

Bear in mind that the college-entry-age population has declined 12 percent since 1977 and is expected to drop another 10 percent by 1990. In other words, it is high time to begin scaling back the level of slush funding being provided to higher education.

More important, we believe this scaling-back will force these bloated bureaucracies to cut costs and tuition increases to keep their enrollments high. It could be the start of a much-needed information of what everyone now agrees is a very sloppily managed, unproductive system.

At least two major studies have concluded that neither students nor taxpayers are getting their money's worth at the nation's colleges: course curricula have proliferated into more and more non-academic fields, allowing massive grade and content dilution. This has made it increasingly easier for less-qualified students to earn meaningless degrees.

To no small degree, readily available increased federal aid helped create this situation, especially in the newer and smaller private colleges which have shamelessly put enrollment at any cost above standards to capitalize on the largesse.

There is nothing new in this. Every time extensive federal subsidies enter any market picture - from agriculture to education - the market is immediately distorted. This distortion arises from the effect of subsidies: making DEMAND grow faster than supply can, or should, reasonably grow.

In turn, such inflated demand leads to the wasteful pursuit of the subsidies themselves - both by direct recipients and those serving them - far beyond the intent of the programs.

Thus, in the huge (500-percent) 1970-81 run-up in federal student subsidies, total college enrollment shot up nearly 40 percent, though the number of academically qualified college-age students was beginning to decline. And the percentage of high school graduates going on to college rose from 24 to nearly 34 percent of a deteriorating academic base.

Ironically, a growing share of these new students chose fields of study already over-supplied in the marketplace. For example, between 1970 and 1983, the number of lawyers DOUBLED despite lawyer-population ratio already twenty times that of Japan and ten times Europe's.

Yet, the number of students majoring in the needed fields of engineering and the physical sciences is 20-percent LOWER today than in 1966! Cut this wasteful program, Congress!

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, March 13, the 72nd day of 1985. There are 293 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 13, 1852, a familiar symbol of the United States, Uncle Sam, made his debut as a cartoon character in the New York Lantern.

On this date:

Ten years ago: The Ford administration's effort to rush military assistance to Cambodia suffered a double setback from the House Foreign Affairs Committee and a Senate Democratic caucus.

Five years ago: A jury in Winamac, Ind., found the Ford Motor Co. innocent of reckless homicide in connection with the 1978 deaths of three young women that resulted from the fiery crash of a Ford Pinto. That same day, company Chairman Henry Ford II announced he was stepping down.

Today's birthdays: Bandleader Sammy Kaye is 72. Opera singer Rosalind Elias is 54.

Shorty is somebody now

Bartender at State Street Grill, Clyde Burton, says, "Shorty's been coming in here for 10, 12 years, a nice old guy, just sits there and drinks his beer, doesn't bother nobody."

Landlady Della Purdy at Shady Grove Mobile Home Park says, "He's been a renter since August of 1978."

Shorty had been married, was divorced in 1952, has a daughter, 35, who lives near Columbia City, treats him well; that is, sends him birthday cards, things like that.

But Christmases and Thanksgivings Shorty was alone - except for anybody else who might happen to be in the State Street Bar and Grill.

The bartender remembers he always seemed to drink more - still just beer - but more of it - around holidays and his birthdays.

The other Monday morning Shorty walked into Fort Wayne National Bank wearing no disguise.

He walked up to the same teller who usually cashes his Social Security check and asked for money.

She gave him some money - some 20-dollar bills. He stuffed them into his shirt and said, "Thank you."

Then he said, "I'm going to the State Street Bar and Grill if you want me."

Shorty entered the bar at 11 a.m. and ordered a screwdriver, vodka and orange juice, instead of a beer. Then to bartender Clyde he announced with a small smile, "Well, I did it: I robbed the bank."

On a metal bed in a cell at the Fort Wayne jail, Shorty said he doesn't mind. "Really," he said. "I'm comfortable and I'm around people."

And what's more important - you've seen the papers, Mister Nobody is Somebody now!

Opportunities await conservatives

By William A. Rusher

NEW YORK (NEA) — The current near-total moral and political collapse of liberalism has presented conservatives with more opportunities than they are quite prepared to handle. It's a little like entering the still-smoking ruins of the capital city of a tenacious adversary who has at last buckled and fled.

There is, for one thing, plenty of mopping-up to do. That handsome Greek-revival building over there, for example, with the words "Equal Justice Under Law" over the portico, is still largely held by snipers who will have to be rooted out one by one. And of course the whole southern wing of the Capitol is still under enemy control.

Moreover, all over the country the foe has pulled back his forces into previously prepared fortresses — notably the media, the universities and the foundations — and is ready to withstand a long siege. At 6:30 on the morning after President Reagan's State of the Union address to Congress, the lead item on the news program of WQXR ("the radio station of The New York Times") was what Tip O'Neill had to say about it. Clearly, the liberals are in no mood to surrender.

But the conservative movement in the United States is muscular, self-aware and positively bursting with energy and new ideas, and it is possible to feel rationally optimistic about its chances of assuming full national leadership. As I wrote in my book "The Rise of the Right" (published by Morrow last May):

"It has numerous candidates for office eager to expound its views; it has seasoned political managers ready to manage their campaigns; it has formidable research institutions developing its analyses of every conceivable issue; it has 'public interest' lawyers testing its contentions in the courts; it has columnists, radio and television commentators, and authors of all sorts, pleading its causes; and slowly but steadily young conservative journalists and academics, in growing numbers that cannot be resisted forever, are entering and rising through those long-hostile ranks."

One logical next step for American conservatives is to look abroad: to find and cement alliances with their counterparts in Europe, Asia, Latin America and elsewhere. The liberals preceded us at this game by at least 35 years, and it shows. The New York bureau of Asahi Shimbun, Japan's largest liberal daily newspaper, is in the West 43rd Street office building of The New York Times; and, fitting symmetry, the Tokyo bureau of the Times is located in Asahi's shiny new office building near the Ginza. That, my friends, is what is called "networking."

An American conservative on a survey trip abroad is likely to feel at first uneasily like Robinson Crusoe exploring his island. In Western Europe especially, the conservative comeback — though very definitely underway, above all in the squarely political sense — does not yet approach American levels in more intellectual respects. As a result, when an encounter between an American conservative and some approximate European counterpart does occur, it sometimes resembles Crusoe's meeting with Friday.

Happily, steps are underway to introduce the world's numerous conservatives to one another at last, and to give the movement's spokesmen in other countries the benefit of the very considerable experience of the American subspecies in everything from free-market theory to direct-mail techniques and television campaigning. The Heritage Foundation has established close contacts with British conservatives; the newly-founded International Policy Forum, headed by Morton Blackwell, recently invited a number of European and Latin American conservative activists to its first Washington meeting; and there are other promising initiatives afoot as well.

From here on out, our liberal friends will discover that "networking" is a game at which two can play. The implications of that for such issues as Mr. Reagan's S.D.I. ("Star Wars") are highly encouraging.

Beef meals for the two of you

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Often, planning meals for two is more of a problem than cooking for six to eight.

Supermarkets in many areas recognize the need to offer many foods in smaller sizes and often will cut meats, poultry and fish to serve two.

Meat can still present a problem since it may be necessary to buy a larger cut than you wish to use for one recipe. The solution here is to plan two meals instead of one when buying meat.

Half a flank steak, for example, may be the heart of a stir-fry sesame beef with vegetables, with the remaining portion prepared on the charcoal grill or in the broiler. Or you may split the second half and stuff it with a nippy filling and broil or bake.

SESAME BEEF WITH VEGETABLES

3/4 pound flank steak
1/4 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup water
1 teaspoon onion powder
3/4 teaspoon ground ginger
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
2 medium carrots
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 pound broccoli cut in flowerettes (2 cups)
1/2 cup beef broth
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1 teaspoon sesame seeds

Thinly cut steak across the grain on the diagonal. (To slice steak easily, place in freezer until lightly frozen.) Place steak in a snug-fitting bowl.

Mix soy sauce, water, onion

SESAME beef with vegetables is special dinner dish for two made with half a flank steak. Remaining steak makes a second meal.

powder, ginger and garlic powder. Pour over steak, coating completely. Marinate for 15 minutes.

Meanwhile, slice carrots on the diagonal, about 1/4-inch thick. Drain meat and pat dry. In a large skillet heat 2 tablespoons of the oil. Add meat; cook and stir until brown on both sides, about 2 minutes. Remove from skillet with a slotted spoon; set aside.

Add remaining 1 tablespoon oil and carrots; cook and stir for 2 minutes.

Add broccoli; cook and stir until vegetables are just crisp tender, about 2 minutes. Mix beef broth and cornstarch; add to vegetables along with reserved meat. Cook and stir until thickened, about 1 minute. Sprinkle with toasted sesame seeds. Serve immediately over rice.

(To toast sesame seeds, place in a skillet over moderate heat or place in hot oven and cook until golden.)

Choosing omelette is an eggs-perience

DALLAS (AP) — How many ways can you prepare an omelette?

According to Roger Zingle, an official of a restaurant chain with headquarters here, the answer is at least 15,225 — and that's no exaggeration.

That's the number of possible omelette combinations customers can order (15,226 if you count plain), says Zingle, vice president of the 100 T.G.I. Friday restaurants.

This mathematical enhancement of the egg menu is made possible by adding or subtracting in various combinations 45 potential ingredients on Friday's menu — including such items as alfalfa sprouts, avocado, cauliflower, guacamole, snow pea pods, turkey and water chestnuts, Zingle explains.

For those always hungry for egg statistics, swallow this one: in Calgary, Canada, in 1981 a 20,117-egg omelette was whipped up in a 10 by 30 foot pan to make the Guinness Book of Records. And at Disneyland, 217 two-egg omelettes were cooked in 30 minutes in 1979.

Though the Roman epicure Apicius create the "ovemelle," a dish of eggs and honey, it was the French who made omelettes a breakfast passion, Zingle notes. In 1794, French revolutionary and philosopher Condorcet stopped to eat a 12-egg omelette at Bourg-la-Reine; and was captured and jailed by Jacobins. Other French omelette lovers were King Louis XV, Descartes and the Duke d'Orleans, who flipped a 120-egg omelette one day at the palace of Fontainebleau.

In a large bowl dissolve yeast in  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup of the water. Stir in remaining water, butter, sugar and salt — butter does not need to melt entirely. Stir in walnuts and raisins, then enough of the flour (about 3 cups) to make a firm dough.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Last summer, on an eating tour in France, Raisin Walnut Bread was served in a new-to-me way. It was always accompanied by fromage de chevre — goat cheese. Sometimes there would be only one variety of the goat cheese, often more. A delicious course before dessert.

I tasted the bread at about half a dozen French restaurants and — much to my surprise — not one loaf duplicated the other. Shapes varied greatly, and so did the dark flour or combination of dark flours added to a good deal of white flour.

A friend of mine, on a recent visit to England, encountered Raisin Walnut Bread — made entirely with whole wheat flour — in one of London's distinguished restaurants and passed along the recipe.

When we tried it, we found we had two small low loaves with dense texture and a very firm crust. It took a strong hand and a serrated bread knife to cut them. We stored one loaf in the refrigerator and, as needed, sliced and heated it. The other loaf went into the freezer to be used the same way. Both loaves were chock-full of the raisins and walnuts that taste so good with chevre.

RAISIN AND WALNUT BREAD

1 package dry yeast
1 1/4 cups water (105 to 115 degrees)
2 2 tablespoons butter, soft
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/4 cups coarsely chopped walnuts
1 1/4 cups golden raisins
3 1/2 cups (about) whole wheat flour

In a large bowl dissolve yeast in  $\frac{1}{4}$  cup of the water. Stir in remaining water, butter, sugar and salt — butter does not need to melt entirely. Stir in walnuts and raisins, then enough of the flour (about 3 cups) to make a firm dough.

Turn out on a lightly floured board. Knead for 8 to 10 minutes or until smooth and elastic, working in the remaining  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup flour as needed to prevent dough from sticking. Form into a ball. Place in a greased bowl; turn to grease top. Cover bowl with saran and let rise in a warm place (75 to 80 degrees) for 1 1/2 to 2 hours or until doubled.

Punch down and divide in half. Form each half into a ball; do not flatten. Place well apart on a greased large cookie sheet. Cover and let rise as previously for 45 to 60 minutes or until doubled.

Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until browned and a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cover with a sheet of foil during the last 10 minutes of baking to prevent raisins on the surface from overbrowning. Remove loaves to wire rack to cool completely.

Makes 2 round low loaves with dense texture and a very firm crust.

Coffee Paradise

Back in the 1950s and 1960s Patricia Murphy's Candlelight restaurants became well-known. There you could order elegant American "tearoom food" in charming settings.

The restaurants were founded and run by Patricia Murphy, an extraordinarily energetic and resourceful woman who as a young girl came to New York from Newfoundland. Although she began her restaurant career in Depression days, she "slugged away" and won success on her own.

In 1961 Patricia Murphy wrote a book called "Glow of Candlelight" (long out of print) telling the story of her life, her adventures in gardening and her food secrets. The food secrets consist of recipes and menus used in her restaurants and residences in New York and Florida.

One of her recipes, Coffee Paradise, is as appropriate now as it was when she served it years ago in her own home. It's a delicate

Dear Abby

Parents say their son stolen away by his wife

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our hearts are breaking. We raised a wonderful son, put him through college, and now he is a successful professional man. He and his family mean the world to us. Our problem is his wife. She doesn't want our son to see us anymore. We want to love her, but she has stolen our son from us. We never see him. They refuse our invitations. We rarely see our grandchildren unless we go to their house, which is not often. They invite us only at a large gathering at their house on Christmas, and again at a big free-for-all Fourth of July party with a bunch of strangers.

Our daughter-in-law is very close to her family. She has won our son over to her people, and now it's as if we don't have a son anymore.

What can we do, Abby? My wife and I are in deep pain. We are decent, churchgoing people who keep praying that our daughter-in-law will give our son back to us. What more can we do?

HEARTBROKEN PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: First, your son is not a sack of groceries that can be "stolen" from you. He has free choice, and if he chooses to ignore you, it's his choice—not his wife's. (She may influence him, but the final decision is his.) I know you're hurting, but it's time you told your son how you feel instead of praying that his wife will give him back to you. He is not "hers" to give.

***

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to be married in November, and so far everything is going as planned—except one thing. My fiance insists that when we feed each other the first two pieces of wedding cake, we're supposed to grind it into each other's faces! We've seen this done at other weddings, and I think it's stupid and disgusting.

Furthermore, I don't relish the idea of getting cake in my hair and ruining my makeup. I want to look my very best on my wedding day.

My fiance wants to go along with this tradition. In fact, he's adamant.

Am I wrong? Or is he being inconsiderate and immature? By the way, he's 26 and I'm 24.

NOVEMBER BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: You're not wrong. And if your fiance is "adamant," knowing how you feel about it, perhaps you'd better take a second look at him. Marriage to such a man would be no piece of cake.

An Event worth waiting for...

St. Patrick Day offers special fare

By TOM HOGE

AP Wine and Food Writer
As sons and daughters of Ireland here and abroad pay annual tribute to St. Patrick, it seems timely to discuss some of the Emerald Isle's favorite foods.

There was a time when the Irish, especially the country folk, lived on potatoes and little else because that was all they could afford. But times have changed.

Corned beef and cabbage, of course, is the traditional feast of St. Patrick's, especially in America. In Ireland, however, many families feature that meat on Dec. 25, just after midnight ends the Christmas Eve fast. But the Irish usually serve the spicy meat cold to lead off the Yuletide banquet.

Ireland has many culinary specialties, such as its renowned white soda bread, as well as griddle, brown and potato breads. These baked delights are usually served with heather-scented honey or one of the country's tangy cheeses.

Ireland is famous for the salmon and trout that swim its well-stocked rivers. Another favorite is the plump Dublin prawn. The country is also known for its delicious oysters, and when the season opens in September, a number of inns stage oyster festivals.

Irish cuisine also features smoked eels, County Down ham and Antrim ham.

Festivals are popular in Ireland and one favorite is the annual beer fest in Kilkenny, held late in May. Another popular beverage, of course, is Irish coffee, featuring Irish whiskey and rich Irish cream.

One unusual dish served at Shannon Airport is scallop chowder, which I sampled on one of my visits and found delicious.

Since everyone knows about corned beef and cabbage, I am featuring another St. Patrick's special: Lime Salad.

1 one-pound can sliced peaches, syrup included
2 three-ounce packages lime gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 cup cold water
1 cup of seedless grapes, cut in half
Coleslaw

Drain peaches. To the syrup add enough water to make 1 cup. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water and the peach syrup. Chill until partly jellied. Place 1 cup of gelatin mixture into a 6-cup salad mold and chill. Place 12 peach slices on the gelatin. Dice remaining peaches. Add peach bits and grapes to remaining gelatin. Pour into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold onto serving platter, surrounding with coleslaw.

New trial denied rancher

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Millionaire rancher Rex Cauble has been denied a new trial by a federal appeals court on his conviction in a massive marijuana drug-smuggling operation dubbed "The Cowboy Mafia."

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in its 11-page ruling Tuesday that "after carefully considering each of the grounds asserted by Cauble for a new trial, we affirm, without hesitation, the district court's denial."

Cauble had appealed the lower court's rejection of his new-trial request. The rancher, serving a 5-year sentence in the Big Spring federal prison, raised four of 11 points he had pursued in the Eastern District Court for Texas.

"We are convinced that Cauble raises no issue here which entitles him to a new trial," the federal appeals ruling said.

Cauble was convicted in 1982 of violating racketeering, banking and criminal travel laws in connection with what prosecutors said was the largest drug-smuggling operation in Texas history.

The rancher claimed in his appeal that the government had withheld testimony favorable to him and that false testimony was used against him.

The federal appeals court said it believed that unheard testimony would have made no difference in the trial. The ruling also said the justices agreed with the lower court that Cauble had been given a fair trial.

Cauble was sentenced to concurrent, five-year sentences on each count by U.S. District Judge William M. Steger.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union buried Konstantin U. Chernenko in a hero's grave in Red Square today after an elaborate state funeral in which the new leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev hailed Chernenko as a man of peace and "faithful servant" of communism.

The coffin of Chernenko, the last Soviet leader born under the czars, was placed near the far right end of a row of graves in which past leaders and major historical figures of the Soviet Union lie, between the Kremlin wall and the tomb of the nation's founder Vladimir I. Lenin.

Artillery salvos thundered across Red Square, the Kremlin bells pealed into the still afternoon air on a bleak late winter day and factory, ship and railroad whistles blew across the nation. Kremlin leaders had decreed that most work would stop for five minutes in tribute.

In Washington, U.S. officials said President Reagan had sent Gorbachev a personal message proposing a superpower summit in the United States. Reagan said Monday he was "more than ready" to meet the new Soviet party leader.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jaroslav Werner said Vice

Mubarak gets Reagan rejection on strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says Palestinians "should be represented" in peace talks with Israel, but he politely rejected a proposal by Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak for preliminary talks between the United States and a joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation.

In a toast at a dinner honoring Mubarak Tuesday night, Reagan said Palestinians should be involved in every stage of the negotiating process and that "we must address forthrightly" the nature of that representation.

"These Palestinians should include representatives from the West Bank and Gaza and other Palestinians as mutually agreed by the parties," Reagan said. "These are wide parameters. They provide ample scope. They should be put to use."

But Reagan earlier made clear to Mubarak in a White House meeting that separate talks between Palestinians, Jordanians and the United States were not the answer.

State Department officials said Mubarak did not disabuse Reagan of the notion that the plan is partly aimed at promoting contacts between the United States and the Palestine Liberation Organization. Officials said they were also concerned that the Arab nations were trying to get Washington to negotiate with Israel on their behalf.

One official said the American response to Mubarak "puts the brakes on the idea that somehow the Arabs don't have to deal with Israel, but only with the United States."

Mubarak, who has been on a five-day visit to Washington, was scheduled to address the National Press Club today before departing for a visit to London.

President George Bush would meet Gorbachev today and hold a news conference "hard on the heels" of the session, set for 10 p.m. Moscow time (2 p.m. EST).

Bush said he came to Moscow bearing "a message of peace" from Reagan, who he said "has no greater hope and no greater goal" than peace with the Soviets.

The ritualized expressions of grief at Chernenko's death were overshadowed by the swiftness and vigor of the transition to the 54-year-old Gorbachev's leadership. Today's edition of the Communist Party organ Pravda was already basing its editorials on Gorbachev's words.

Gorbachev opened the funeral ceremony with a eulogy to the man who had served for only 13 months when he died Sunday at age 73.

"At this hour of grief, Soviet men and women are paying their deep respects to a faithful servant of our party and people, a staunch champion of the ideals of communism," said Gorbachev, the youngest Soviet leader in six decades.

Moments before the coffin was lowered into the freshly dug earth, Chernenko's widow, Anna, bid an emotional farewell to her husband. She stood by the side of his open coffin, stroking his forehead in grief and bending several times to press her cheek against his face.

and kiss him.

The 10 surviving members of the Politburo stood at attention, their arms raised in salute, and Chernenko's coffin was lowered.

As the Soviet national anthem was played, the flag atop a Kremlin building was raised from half to full staff.

With hammer-and-sickle flags trimmed in black fluttering softly in the breeze, military officers carried Chernenko's coffin out of the House of Unions at 12:30 p.m., where it had laid in state.

A group of officers walked by with funeral wreaths and red satin pillows with Chernenko's medals pinned to them.

The coffin was placed on the waiting gun carriage, which began its slow, four-block trip down Marx Avenue, around the Moscow Hotel and across Revolution Square. It was escorted by soldiers walking in slow-motion parade march.

The caisson rolled to a halt before the tomb of the Soviet founder V.I. Lenin, while members of the ruling Politburo, including Gorbachev, gathered atop the mausoleum for the funeral ceremony.

Chernenko's open coffin, covered in red and black crepe, was placed on a low platform in front of the tomb, which sits near the base of the Kremlin's ruddy brick walls.

Rangers counting on Slaught

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — When the Texas Rangers started asking questions about their catching position during the season, they thought the answer would be Jim Sundberg.

But Sundberg, a former Ranger, decided not to bring his six Golden Glove awards back to Texas and suddenly the answer to the same question became Don Slaught, a Ranger addition obtained from Kansas City.

Manager Doug Rader and General Manager Tom Grieve considered shoring up the catching position a necessity after last season's production by Ned Yost and Donnie Scott.

Yost hit .182 in 78 games and had 12 passed balls and two errors defensively. Donnie Scott, who started the season at Oklahoma City, hit .221 with 18 passed balls and 12 errors in 81 games.

"We thought it was vitally important to get a catcher this year and we think we got one in Slaught," Rader said.

Slaught hit .264 with four home runs and 42 runs batted in 124 games last season. He led the Royals with a .364 average in the American League Championship Series against eventual World Series-champion Detroit.

Slaught says he doesn't anticipate a long transition period.

"I hope I can play up to my ability and help the club out," Slaught said. "I've played with the Kansas City Royals the past couple of years and I've helped them out and I hope to do the same over here."

Slaught also thinks the Rangers have a brighter future than last season's seventh-place finish.

"We've got some players up and down the roster that can help us offensively," Slaught said. "We've just got to get some consistency out of our starting pitchers and get the relievers going."

Moving into a position that was weak last season doesn't bother Slaught.

"I don't feel any pressure coming in here," Slaught said. "I was a starting catcher with the Royals and I think I'm coming in here as the starter."

Slaught says his only adjustment will be getting to know the Rangers pitchers.

Slaught foresees no problem in handling the elusive knuckleball thrown by Charlie Hough.

BC coach trying to get the goods on Red Raiders

BOSTON (AP) — Boston College coach Gary Williams says he would have been watching the Southwest Conference Post-Season Classic championship more closely if he had known the winning Texas Tech Red Raiders would be his squad's first-round opponent in the NCAA playoffs.

"It's funny," Williams told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in a telephone interview Tuesday. "They were on TV up here Sunday and I watched some of it, but I didn't stop to think that we might be playing them."

"It just happened to be a basketball game that was on television and I watched ... but not very closely. We're trying to find out all we can about Tech," he said.

Williams' Eagles, the No. 11 seed, and the Raiders, seeded sixth, meet at 7:07 p.m. Friday in Hofheinz Pavilion in one of four first-round games on tap in the Midwest sub-regional.

Other contests feature Memphis State (27-3) against Penn (13-13) at 12:07 p.m., Alabama-Birmingham (24-8) against Michigan State (19-9) at 2:37 p.m. and Duke (22-7) against Pepperdine (23-8) at 9:37 p.m.

The victor of the Tech-BC match meets the winner of the Duke-Pepperdine contest at 4:30 p.m. Sunday in Hofheinz.

Williams says the televised game Sunday has shown him two things about Tech: its 5-10 guard Bubba Jennings, the Player of the Year in the SWC, is a great shooter and the Raiders play very good defense.

"The little guy (Jennings) is amazing the way he shoots the ball. Guys up here don't shoot the ball from that far out," Williams told the Avalanche-Journal.

Aggies win opener

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Shelby Metcalf was willing to take the gamble and had to settle for the consequences.

The veteran Texas A&M basketball coach decided the best way to take on New Mexico in Monday night's opening game of the National Invitation Tournament was to control the rebounding battle.

With all five starters crashing the boards, the Aggies stayed close through the opening half. But to New Mexico's fast-break offense, Brown led the New Mexico assault with 20 points, while Winters shook a season-long slump to an 80-67 victory.

New Mexico and Texas A&M opened the 48th edition of the NIT and the tournament's first-round continues tonight with Canisius at Nebraska. The remaining 14 first-round games will be played Thursday and Friday at sites around the country, with 10 games scheduled for Thursday.

"Everytime I turned around Shelby had all five hitting the boards," said New Mexico coach Gary Colson. "That's why when we did get the ball, it looked like Interstate 10."

Texas A&M had 17 offensive rebounds in the first half and trailed only 38-35. But New Mexico, which shot 61 percent from the field, broke the game open by outscoring the Aggies 15-4 in the first six minutes of the second half for a 53-39 lead that proved too much for A&M to overcome. During that span, the Aggies went more than seven minutes with just one field goal.

Forwards Johnny Brown and Mike Winters frequently filled the lanes in New Mexico's fast-break offense. Brown led the New Mexico assault with 20 points, while Winters shook a season-long slump to an 80-67 victory.

Texas A&M was led by guard Don Marbury with 22 points. Sophomore forward Mike Clifford and center Al Pulliam each scored 11 points.

Colson, who has spent much of this week trying to squelch reports he's in line to succeed retiring Washington coach Marv Harshman, again said he planned to remain with New Mexico.

"I talked to Mike Lude (Washington Athletic Director) earlier in the season but I have not talked to him since and I have not been offered the job," Colson said.

Texas A&M played without its leading scorer, guard Kenny

Brown. Brown, who averaged better than 17 points a game during the season, quit the team Monday. Metcalf, however, preferred to pursue the play of New Mexico.

"They played extremely well. SMU and Houston run a good fast break, but no one runs it much better than New Mexico," he said.

The triumph improved the Western Athletic Conference-member Lobos' record to 19-12. Texas A&M ended the season at 19-11.

Also in double figures for New Mexico were guard Kelvin Scarborough with 13 points, forward Hunter Greene with 11 and center George Scott with 10.

The only NIT game tonight features Nebraska, 15-13, hosting 20-9 Canisius.

On Thursday, it will be Alcorn State, 23-6, at Louisville, 16-16; Virginia, 15-15, at West Virginia, 20-8; Kent State, 17-12, at Cincinnati, 16-13; Wake Forest, 15-13, at South Florida, 17-11; Bradley, 17-12, at Marquette, 18-10; Tennessee, 18-14, at Tennessee Tech, 19-9; Florida, 18-11, at Southwestern Louisiana, 16-13; St. Joseph's, Pa., 18-11, at Missouri, 18-13.

Rangers edge Yanks in exhibition

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tommy Dunbar, trying to make amends for a fielding misplay, tripled to trigger a two-run seventh and enable the Texas Rangers to defeat the New York Yankees 5-4 Tuesday in an exhibition baseball game.

Jimmy Anderson followed with an RBI single that gave Texas a 4-3 lead, and later scored Texas' final run on a base hit by Larry Parrish.

The victory was the Rangers' first in three Grapefruit League contests. New York, which got just five hits off four Texas pitchers, lost for the fifth time in as many outings.

Charlie Hough started for the Rangers and gave up one hit in four innings. Dave Schmidt followed with two hitless frames as Texas built up a 3-0 lead.

The Yankees tied the game in the top of the seventh, nicking non-roster lefthander Tony Fossas for four hits and three runs. Dunbar misplayed lead-off hitter Don Baylor's fly ball to left field into a double. Fossas got two outs, then gave up a single to Scott Bradley and a home run to Andre Robertson before getting out of the inning.

After Texas' two-run seventh, the Yankees got one run back in the eighth against Mitch Williams, a 20-year-old lefthander, without getting a hit. Williams, a hard-thrower with a history of control problems, walked three and had a wild pitch.

Harvesters entered in baseball tourney

The Pampa Harvesters tune up for district play this week in the Dumas round-robin baseball tournament.

The Harvesters meet Borger at 12:30 Thursday in first-round action. Their next game will be against Caprock at 10 a.m. Friday before closing out the tournament against Dumas at 3 Saturday.

Pampa opens District 1-4A play next week, hosting Canyon at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

The Harvesters are 3-2 in non-district play and have won their last two games.

The Pampa junior varsity team is also entered in the Dumas tournament and will meet Lefors Friday in the first round. They play Dumas JV again Saturday.

Tar Heels face heavy pressure

By BARRY WILNER

AP Sports Writer

Just making the NCAA basketball tournament field isn't considered much of an accomplishment by North Carolina fans. Tar Heels Coach Dean Smith isn't being fooled.

Smith has guided the seventh-ranked Tar Heels to their 11th consecutive NCAA tournament appearance and 19th overall. They'll play Middle Tennessee State on Thursday in the opening round of the Southeast Regional at South Bend, Ind.

"We have unrealistic expectations," said Smith, referring to Tar Heel fans who feel the team should be a powerhouse every year. "We could have been with Indiana, Louisville and UCLA going to the NIT. Or not even making that."

Actually, North Carolina had little trouble making the NCAA field of 64. The Tar Heels finished 24-8, were co-champions (along with Georgia Tech and North Carolina State) of the Atlantic Coast Conference and lost in the finals of the ACC tourney to Georgia Tech. This after UNC was picked for fourth in ACC preseason polls.

Regardless of pre-season prognostications, Smith's team always faces heavy pressure to succeed. It goes with the territory for one of the most successful programs in college basketball, one which captured the 1982 NCAA title.

"It's something we have to live with at North Carolina," said Smith. "We don't get to enjoy the underdog role, even when we are in fact the underdog."

They won't be the underdogs against Middle Tennessee, 17-13 and winner of the Ohio Valley Conference tourney. But Smith is making sure his players don't take the Blue Raiders lightly.

"Two years ago, Kentucky was getting ready to play Louisville in the NCAA and Middle Tennessee State was their first opponent," Smith recalled. "Middle Tennessee won the game. I think that's a good indication they're capable."

In other Southeast Regional games Thursday, it will be No. 13 Kansas, 24-7, against Ohio University, 22-7; Purdue, 20-8, vs. Auburn, 20-11, and host Notre Dame, 20-8, facing Oregon State, 22-8.

In the East, at Hartford, Conn., top-ranked Georgetown, 30-2, takes on Lehigh, which at 12-18 is the only team with a losing record in the field — the Engineers won the East Coast Conference playoff; Temple, 24-5, vs. Virginia Tech, 20-8; No. 14 Loyola, Ill., 25-5, taking on Iona, 26-4, and Southern Methodist, 22-9, vs. Old Dominion, 19-11.

At the Midwest Regional in Tulsa, Okla.; it will be Ohio State, 19-9, vs. Iowa State, 21-12; No. 8 Louisiana Tech, 27-2, vs. Pittsburgh, 17-11; fourth-ranked Oklahoma, 28-5 and the top seed in the region, vs. North Carolina A&T, 19-9, and Southern California, 19-9, vs. Illinois State, 21-7.

The action in the West Regional on Thursday will be at Salt Lake City.

You will be fortunate this coming year in establishing idealistic friendships. You are going to meet someone who will be the type of pal you've always desired to have.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In most instances you'll be quite efficient today, with the exception of estimating costs. The projection you make could run over budget. Looking for romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set can show you who you are best suited to romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Success is likely today because you'll have the drive to be an achiever. However, you may leave a few loose threads.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Think in terms of the whole picture today, but do not overlook small but significant details. Be sure there is a piece for every empty space.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It'll prove wise today to be close-mouthed about your present commercial involvements. Don't let information slip out that could be used against you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Things will go smoothly for everyone today if you don't place your interests above those of people trying to help you achieve a collective goal.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The only thing that will count is what you produce, not what you say.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) When socially involved with friends today, don't split hairs or count how many pennies each has spent. Even if they don't ante up what you expect, be understanding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) In financial matters today your judgment may be keener than your mate's. Listen to his input but also think for yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) It will be impossible today to gain the approval of everyone. However, all you have to know is that you'll be able to win over people who really count.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Govern your spending patterns along prudent lines today and you'll have no financial problems. Departing from this procedure brings less-desirable results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be a booster of your friends today, even if you know unflattering things about them. Voicing their flaws won't make you sound better in the ears of your listeners.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll be more productive today if you use your own ideas and methods, instead of those recommended by companions or associates. Do it your way.

Spring is a time for both cheer and woe

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's that time of year. The long, dreary winter seems to drag on without end.

And, as nature edges toward a change, human patience manifests its limits in itchy behavior called "spring fever."

Over the centuries, poets and philosophers have described spring with a curious mixture of cheer and woe, reflecting the differing reactions of humans to the stress of changing weather.

Dr. Michael A. Persinger of Laurentian University in Canada said spring irritability — as he terms spring fever — usually begins to occur in March and April.

"It's triggered by a few bright days ... bright warm days that are then followed by more of the same cold" that has been plaguing people all winter, he said.

Usually spring fever follows a season of "the winter blahs," the cumulative effect of hundreds of small aggravations such as being cooped up indoors for months, Persinger continued. "If people have the money they usually go on vacation. If not, a variety of things occur ...

"We suspect that it's related to a kind of frustrated aggression. ... It's associated with an increase in irritability, a shift in sleep cycles and detached (feeling). A person begins to feel there must be something more to life," the psychology and neuroscience professor explained.

"Spring is a transition season when things change very rapidly," observed Helmut Landsberg, professor emeritus of meteorology at the University of Maryland.

"One major thing is apparently the change in light. ... The most rapid increase in light intensity occurs between February and April," Landsberg explained, and a change that seems to affect human glands and internal reactions.

Other fluctuations causing humans to react include "rapid temperature changes in many places, sometimes highly irregular, changing from low to high to low again," said Landsberg, whose research has concentrated on the biological effects of weather.

This places stress on the body and, scientists are beginning to believe, the mind, too. Human responses vary.

Malaise, romance and even depression are among the reactions to these seasonal changes — although spring fever has been most widely identified with vague feelings characterized by mind-wandering and restlessness.

Allen Robock, another University of Maryland meteorologist, defined spring fever as an increased interest in things other than work.

Dr. Michel Gauquelin, a French psychologist, attributes people's response to "spring hormonal crisis," when the endocrine glands are more active and sexual interest heightened.

"In northern climate populations in late winter and early spring, relative blood acidosis develops when body fatigue is most pronounced. Resistance to infection, to intoxication, to trauma and to emotional impacts is at its lowest level then," wrote Stephen Rosen in his book "Weathering."

Whether the changes are the result of hormones, high blood acid, sunlight or other factors, nearly everyone observes and reacts to them.

Alfred, Lord Tennyson, commented that "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

German studies in the 1960s found that most illegitimate conceptions tended to occur in May, which, the researchers suggested, "seems to indicate that spring may well be the season for all forms of impulsive behavior."

And in the United States the National Center for Health Statistics reports that births in recent years have two peaks — January and July. Allowing for normal periods of pregnancy, that would indicate that April is the most common month for conception, with October ranking second.

On the darker side, French sociologist Emile Durkheim noted a half-century ago that suicides increase in the spring.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control studied the nation's suicide rates between 1969 and 1978 and found that during that decade "the suicide pattern was distinctly seasonal, above average all spring and below average all winter."

Man has 65-year love affair with ham radio

By JAMES RAGLAND
The Dallas Morning News

DALLAS (AP) — The year 1920 signaled the beginning of Elbert J. Haling's career as a ham.

Haling, 10 at the time, became the youngest government-licensed operator of an amateur radio station in the United States.

He remembers the federal examination he had to take 65 years ago to earn his license.

"You had to be able to copy 10 words per minute in Continental code, draw a diagram of the transmitter and receiver you were planning to use and you had to know all the laws and regulations that applied to a radio operator," he said.

Haling has no children — radio has long been his baby. Like a proud father, he isn't shy about pulling out pictures of his old amateur radio station.

Now 75, Haling fiddles with radio dials as a hobby. He toys with a six-band portable radio with a four-band receiver in his Turtle Creek apartment. He often rises at 3 a.m. to tune to stations as far away as Australia and New Zealand.

"I never thought I'd live to be 75," said Haling, who was born in 1910 in Kansas City, Mo. "My father died at 71, and my mother was in her late 60s. We moved to Texas directly from Kansas City when I was 5, and I've been a Texan ever since."

"My father worked for the Western Electric Co.," said Haling, explaining his initial interest in radio. "He brought home samples of microphones and such as they came out of the company. And I loved to talk on the microphones."

Haling's first and only station was called 5HY, and it was born in 1920. But before it could hit the air, Haling said, he had to rig up an antenna, but he did not have the two antenna poles necessary. His father had a solution.

"This was out in Oak Cliff," Haling said. "My father chopped down two 45-foot pine trees in some farmer's yard, tied them to the back of a 1920 Dodge and drove from Grand Saline through downtown Dallas on Pacific Avenue, which was nothing but mud at the time, and dragged them across the Oak Cliff viaduct to where the station was, and put 'em up."

Haling operated 5HY from his parents' Oak Cliff home for about 12 years. He found many ways to have fun with his new toy.

"I played checkers with a man over the radio. We argued a little and gave up. It was sort of an impasse," Haling said, adding that he also used his radio to communicate via Continental code "with all continents."

Those were the days for Haling.

"They didn't know what to think," Haling said of his classmates at the parochial grade school he attended. "I was the kingpin."

Haling's interest in radio led him to Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, where he earned his bachelor's degree in journalism in 1932.

His first job after college was at a broadcast station in Fort Worth.

Haling's two-year stay at the station typifies his entire career — constantly moving.

"In those days we called radio the revolving door," he said, "because you worked for so many stations. You were always hearing a different voice."

Haling's voice was heard next at WFAA in Dallas, where he remained until 1936, when he migrated to WBAP in Fort Worth. He credits himself with establishing the public relations and continuity (commercial-writing) departments at both stations.

"I was writing a commercial at WFAA for what was supposed to have been a painless dentist. And while I was writing, I could hear patients yelling across the street," Haling said, laughing at the memory. "This almost discouraged me."

"I originated a prisoner's program, 'The Suburban Editor,' at WBAP. It became quite popular. They even held up an execution once so the guy could hear the program."

After his six-year stint at WBAP, Haling spent the next three years in the Army Air Corps, where he met Aaron Spelling, now a highly successful television producer. "I knew him real well ... I was a buck sergeant and he was a private," Haling said.

After Haling left the Air Corps, his revolving-door career began to spin even faster.

He had wanted to become a radio operator on a ship — any ship. But those plans were sunk after a magazine offered to buy an article he had written.

"My ambition had been — until I got the $14.50 for my article — to be a radio operator on a ship," he said. "But I figured if I got that much for doing something that I enjoyed, I ought to pursue it."

Writer of Westerns find switch to crime pays off

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Elmore Leonard likes to get his crime stories off to a fast start — just like a gun shot.

"I want to get right into it," Leonard says. "I don't like books that open with a discussion of the weather or a description of a place."

Which explains why the opening sentence of his latest novel, "Glitz," reads:

"The night Vincent was shot he saw it coming."

Vincent Mora is a Miami Beach detective. The punk who shoots him is a junked-up mugger. And in a bit more than a page of tight, hard prose, Leonard has Mora shoot and kill the would-be mugger, land in the hospital with two bullet wounds, and the reader firmly hooked.

Leonard has readers aplenty, although it hasn't been until the last few years that he gained wide popular acceptance. This "amazes" the soft-spoken Leonard, who published his first novel in 1953 and has turned books out with regularity since then. "Glitz" is his 23rd.

"After more than 30 years of writing, I have the odd feeling of just getting really started in the last few years," Leonard says, a wry smile on his bearded face.

"I think maybe it's because my particular style of writing has finally been accepted by the readers. That's very nice, of course, but for me the most satisfying thing is the writing itself. I've always felt that if I satisfied myself, I could satisfy the readers, and it seems that has come about."

Leonard's books bring him more than enough money now, but it was a long time coming.

"I started out writing stories while I was at the University of Detroit," recalls Leonard, who currently lives in Birmingham, Mich., a Detroit suburb. "They didn't sell, but I decided to write seriously anyway."

"I decided that if I wanted to make it, I had to narrow my field down. So, I picked Westerns, because I liked Western movies. I researched the history of the Southwest, then I wrote stories, and I sold my first in 1951."

Leonard was working for a Detroit advertising agency at the time and wrote when he could find time. He found enough to publish 30 stories and five novels during the 1950s.

Landing gear freed from speeding auto

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — The pilot of a small plane with a jammed wheel was "game for anything," so he flew 10 feet in the air at 90 mph as a daring mechanic reached through the sunroof of a speeding car and yanked the landing gear free.

"I had some things on my mind, like the airplane dropping suddenly or the back of the plane hitting me on the head," said Joe Lippo, 26, a 6-foot-4, 250-pound aircraft mechanic at St. Augustine Airport.

Lippo stood with half his body sticking through the sunroof Tuesday while another mechanic held on to one of his legs. Their boss, Jim Moser, 34, drove his Audi sedan at about 90 mph, maneuvering to keep under the plane.

"Joe grabbed the wheel, gave it a mighty tug and locked it in the down position," said Moser, a stunt pilot for 15 years. "It was pretty amazing."

Pilot Scott Gordon, 25, of St. Augustine concentrated on keeping the single-engine Turbo-Arrow's altitude constant at about 10 feet, while the choppy air and brisk cross-runway wind made that tricky.

"It was pretty bumpy," said Gordon, president of Aero Sport Inc., which specializes in aerial stunts. "I was a little bit worried."

U.S. vetoes

resolution

By The Associated Press
The United States has defied Lebanese terrorist threats and vetoed a U.N. resolution condemning Israel for its occupation of southern Lebanon and retaliatory attacks on Shite Moslem guerrillas there.

Israeli defense minister Yitzhak Rabin, meanwhile, said his government might consider pulling Israeli soldiers out of southern Lebanon more quickly than planned because of the Shiites' almost daily ambushes, bombings and other attacks.

The resolution voted upon by the Security Council at the United Nations in New York on Tuesday denounced Israel for its "iron fist" practices in southern Lebanon, which it invaded in June 1982.

Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said the United States would have been prepared to support a resolution that urged restraint on all parties in Lebanon — not just Israel.

She had told the 15-member council last week that three threats were made in February and March against Americans in connection with U.S. votes in the Security Council. Because of those threats, more than 30 Americans working for the United Nations in south Lebanon have been reassigned to Israel.

CBS News quoted sources as saying that the U.S. ambassador in Beirut, Reginald Bartholomew, and other key diplomats had been taken to "secure and secret locations" in Lebanon because of the threats against Americans and U.S. installations.

State Department spokesman Joe Reap said he could not discuss the location of embassy personnel, but added that embassy personnel "are not being evacuated" from Lebanon.

In the U.N. vote, Britain, Denmark and Australia abstained, but France, which has a 600 peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon, backed the resolution.

The resolution sought condemnation for "Israeli practices and measures against the civilian population in southern Lebanon" and demanded that Israel "unconditionally withdraws forces in line with 1982 council resolutions."

On Sunday a truck-bombing killed 12 Israeli soldiers and wounded 14 others.

Public Notices

Notice is hereby given by the Parks and Wildlife Department that a public hearing will be held at 7 p.m. on April 1, 1985 at the Energy Building at Pampa for the purpose of gathering information concerning proposed hunting and fishing regulations for Gray County.

As the result of action by the Texas Legislature, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission under the authority of the Uniform Wildlife Regulations Act, Chapter 61, Texas Parks and Wildlife Code, is responsible for the setting of seasons, bag limits, means and methods for taking the wildlife resources in Gray County. All interested persons are urged to attend and comment upon the proposed regulation changes.

Additional information concerning the public hearing may be obtained by calling our Toll Free Number 1-800-792-1112 or 512-479-4974. March 13, 1985

Moser said he has participated in many air shows and high-risk aerial stunts, including driving a moving plane in an open car to enable a stunt man to climb a ladder lowered from the plane.

"But that involves much lower speeds, 40 to 45 mph," he said. "I've never tried anything like this before."

Moser said he wouldn't want to repeat the experience as a stunt for a show because "it's too tough."

He added that without Lippo, "a big, husky fellow who is pretty agile, it would be pretty hard to do."

FATAL CRASH—An Army helicopter hovers near the site of Tuesday's fatal crash of an Air Force C-130 cargo plane. Six of the eight people aboard died when the plane, on low-level maneuvers, crashed at Fort Hood. (AP Laser-photo)

Military plane crash probed

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — Investigators were scheduled to renew their probe today into the fiery crash of a C-130 military transport plane that killed six of the eight people aboard.

The plane, which was dropping sand bags in a routine low-altitude mission, burst into flames and virtually disintegrated after it crashed Tuesday morning in Central Texas, officials said.

The two survivors were taken to Darnall Army Community Hospital, where they were in stable condition late Tuesday night, said Fort Hood spokeswoman Mary Mueller.

Ms. Mueller said the victims' identities would not be released until this morning so that their relatives could be notified.

Investigators from Dyess and Bergstrom Air Force bases arrived on the scene Tuesday afternoon and were to resume poring over what one firefighter called "the mangled mess" today, Ms. Mueller said.

An eyewitness, Anita Nichols of Gatesville, said the 60-person-capacity C-130E Hercules was flying in formation with two other planes when it crashed about 11:15 a.m.

"One of them just kept getting lower and lower and lower," she said. "I thought, 'Oh my gosh, there's no landing place there.' All of a sudden, he went down and the whole thing burst into flames."

"He wasn't flying with the others," said William Farrar, a Gatesville police sergeant who lives near the crash site. "He was flying kind of erratic."

The plane was on a low-level mission from Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene to Fort Hood, simulating drops of supplies at altitudes between 800 feet and 1,500 feet, said Fort Hood spokesman Maj. George Creach.

"The plane in the middle started gaining altitude at a funny angle. Its left wing tipped up and it was more or less flying sideways," said eyewitness Charles Alton, who runs a grocery store less than a mile from the site.

"The last I saw of the plane was the wingtip on the horizon — then a ball of smoke," he said.

Volunteer fireman Larry McDonald, on the first truck to reach the scene, said the two who survived were standing 50 feet behind the fuselage.

Committee to try, try again on federal budget trimming

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Budget Committee, after rejecting both President Reagan's call for deep domestic spending cuts and Democratic proposals for tax increases, is ready to try again to chop $50 billion from the federal deficit.

But the committee's senior Democrat, Lawton Chiles of Florida, said the panel was at an impasse — with no plan currently being offered capable of mustering majority support.

"Right now, I think we're headed for a train wreck," Chiles said after the committee on Tuesday rejected a pair of Democratic-sponsored proposals for tax increases.

However, Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., was more upbeat, saying the panel will continue working to try to find the additional savings — and the magic combination that will pick up the needed 12-vote majority in his committee.

While conceding that the committee might consider supporting some form of tax increase "down the road" and "as a last resort," Domenici said the committee was not near that point yet. "We can't substitute tax increases for budget cuts this early in the game," he said.

The committee was to work today on a variety of proposals that would make more extensive cuts than the general program freeze it already has adopted — but members said that no plan right now is capable of winning approval.

Aides said that so far, the committee has voted to cut $12.3 billion from domestic programs in fiscal 1986, on top of a recommended $21.1 billion reduction in the administration's defense buildup. The panel has rejected $26.8 billion in domestic cuts the president wants.
