

Reagan: no direct U.S. Mideast talks role

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he would favor a meeting between U.S. negotiators and a delegation of Jordanians and Palestinians to promote Middle East peace, but not if the Palestine Liberation Organization was represented.

Reagan also said he would not permit American diplomats to play a direct role in talks between Arabs and Israelis.

"They've got to understand we are not getting into the direct negotiations," the president said Thursday night during a nationally televised news conference. "That's none of our business."

By contrast, it was then-President Jimmy Carter's personal mediation of the Camp David talks between Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt that led to the signing of the first peace treaty between an Arab state and Israel.

However, Reagan disputed suggestions that he was pursuing a policy of disengagement from Mideast diplomacy, noting that another U.S. envoy would visit the region in several weeks.

Reagan said U.S. diplomats would not deal with the PLO because "they still refuse to agree or admit that Israel has a right to exist as a nation."

"There's a large Palestinian community and I'm sure that there are people that do not consider themselves represented by the PLO," the president said.

Reagan was more upbeat about the possibility of a summit meeting with the Soviet Union's new leader, Mikhail Gorbachev, saying, "I think it's high time that we did this." He said the prospects for a summit should be good.

The president added he wasn't discouraged by the new leader's failure to accept his invitation to attend a summit in the United States.

"The man has only been in office for a few days, and I have some idea of what is confronting him now," Reagan told reporters.

The president defended South African police who shot into a crowd of demonstrators Thursday, killing 17 people, and Israeli forces that fired on and killed a Lebanese camera crew working for CBS News in Lebanon.

Reagan was asked if he was considering changing his policy of using diplomacy to oppose the white South African government's segregationist rule in the wake of the shootings.

He said to suggest that all the violence was coming from the police side was to ignore "the fact that there was rioting going on." He said some of the police involved were black and that there is "an element in South Africa that do not want a peaceful settlement of this — who wants a violent settlement, who want trouble in the streets, and that is what's going on."

There are conflicting reports from South Africa as to whether the demonstrators, who were marching to protest earlier deadly clashes with police, were carrying sticks, stones and gasoline bombs — as officials said — or whether the police attacked without provocation.

Reagan also declined to criticize Israeli troops who fired on a CBS News crew in southern Lebanon, saying, "I'm quite sure ... this was not a deliberate killing." He called the incident a tragedy but said, "These things can happen" in a war in which one side wears no military uniforms.

Reagan opened his third news conference of the year by warning that U.S.-Soviet arms talks could be doomed if the House fails to follow the Senate's lead in voting to release funds to produce 21 more MX missiles.

"No request by an American president for a major strategic system deemed vital to the national security has ever been denied by an American Congress," Reagan said. "And unless that tradition is maintained next week in the House, there's little prospect of success at Geneva."

States lose federal funds in revenue sharing cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oregon and Wyoming would suffer the largest percentage loss of federal aid going to the states under President Reagan's proposed fiscal 1986 budget, an organization of state governments estimates.

Cuts in federal forest and mineral resource programs proposed in the Reagan budget would hit those states hard, according to the analysis by the Federal Funds Information for States, a joint service of the National Governors Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Oregon would lose $259 million, or 17.9 percent, the study said. Victor J. Miller, director of the organization, said the state's loss was proportionately large because of the money it receives from federal forest service programs to harvest trees on federal lands.

"The Reagan administration proposes to reduce the level of reimbursement to counties substantially," he said. "They're heavily affected by this proposal."

Similarly, he said, Wyoming would lose to cuts in revenue shared with states for federal mineral leasing. Wyoming's loss would be $54 million, or 10.3 percent, the study said.

Those losses would be small, however, compared to the dollars lost by New York and California. The study said Reagan's budget proposal would reduce federal outlays to New York by nearly $1.25 billion and to California by $736 million.

They would be followed by Ohio, $534 million; Michigan, $468 million; Texas, $444 million; Florida, $380 million; Illinois, $374 million; Pennsylvania, $362 million; Oregon, $259 million; and Georgia, $242 million.

The Reagan proposals for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 were compared with the amount the states would require to continue providing current services. The total money lost to the states in the first year would be $9.2 billion, the study said.

"States can deal with cuts of this magnitude in three ways," said Raymond C. Scheppach, executive director of the governors association. "They can eliminate federal programs. They can eliminate state programs to replace lost dollars in federal programs, or they can raise taxes."

By percentage of loss, California wouldn't be among the 10 biggest losers, and New York would be only the eighth biggest loser, according to the analysis.

Other big losers by percentage would be Florida and Ohio, 9.8 percent each; New Mexico, 9.6 percent; Maryland, 9.4 percent; North Carolina, 9.3 percent; New York, 9.2 percent; Michigan, 9.1 percent; and Iowa, 9.1 percent.

Israelis storm another town as ## death toll in Thursday raids is 30

By The Associated Press

Israeli soldiers raided another Shiite Moslem village today, shooting and killing one man and detaining 300, a U.N. spokesman said. The raid came a day after police said Israeli troops killed 30 people, including two members of a CBS News camera crew, in a similar operation.

Police said 68 people were wounded in Thursday's action against suspected guerrillas.

Meanwhile, Israeli newspapers reported today that Israel would complete its pullout of southern Lebanon in May, four months ahead of the original schedule. Today's raid was staged in Qlaile, a village of 5,000 about 25 miles southwest of the scene of Thursday's raids, in an area patrolled by U.N. peacekeeping soldiers.

U.N. spokesman Timur Goksel said one man was killed and another wounded in Qlaile. He said the circumstances of the shootings were not known.

Military sources in Tel Aviv, who spoke on condition they not be identified, confirmed that an operation was under way in Qlaile, but said they had no details.

Goksel said a platoon of 20 Fijian soldiers from the U.N. contingent were in the village watching the Israeli operation. About 300 men were taken into a school for questioning, he said.

During the raids on Thursday, terrified village residents fled into the mountains to avoid the Israelis. Police said their station in the southern port of Sidon compiled casualty figures from hospitals and villagers.

Lebanon's newspapers called the raids a "massacre" and described the Israeli raiders as "barbarians." The state radio called it "a cold-blooded atrocity."

In a letter to Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, CBS protested "what eyewitnesses call an unprovoked and deliberate attack by Israeli forces." The network said a third CBS employee, a driver, was critically injured.

The Israeli military command said a tank in the village of Kfar Melki opened fire on "armed men who had taken firing positions" and added: "It appears that the CBS crewmen were among the armed men in the village."

In New York, CBS identified the two as cameraman Tafik Ghazawi, 47, and soundman Bahije Metni, 37. Both were Lebanese. CBS said they were killed by Israeli fire.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said 21 guerrillas were killed and large quantities of arms, including mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and explosives were seized in raids on the villages of Houmine al-Tahta, Srifa and Jbaa.

The sweep was the latest in a month-old Israeli crackdown on Shiite towns and villages in an attempt to halt guerrilla attacks on Israeli forces. Israel invaded Lebanon in June 1982.

It was Israeli army's second major operation beyond its front line since Feb. 16, when it pulled out of Sidon in the first phase of a three-stage withdrawal from Lebanon.

One Lebanese military source said about 60 Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers moved through the town of Arab Salim at dawn and branched out to raid the villages of Houmine al-Tahta and Jbaa as well as Sarba, Jal-el-Arab, Roukine, Roumine, Ankoun, Kfar Fila and Kfar Melki.

Reporters at the scene were told the Israelis did not enter Ankoun and Kfar Melki. However, both villages were hit by Israeli tank fire.

President says it's 'high-time' for summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says it is "high time" for a superpower summit and he would like to meet with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the new Soviet leader, if only to straighten out relations a little bit.

Instead of insisting at his news conference Thursday night on a summit scripted for success,

Reagan said "there are a number of things" he could discuss with Gorbachev if they got together.

The recently revived arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, evidently are one of the topics he has in mind, although Reagan offered no specifics.

Gorbachev, who took over last week, has not replied to the invitation Vice President George Bush carried to Moscow while attending the funeral of Konstantin U. Chernenko.

But Reagan decided not to consider the absence of a reply a rebuff. "The man has only been in office for a few days and I have some idea of what is confronting him now," he said with understanding.

In fact, Reagan said, "I think there is a good chance" Gorbachev will accept and come to the United States.

The last U.S.-Soviet summit was held in Vienna by former President Jimmy Carter and the late Leonid Brezhnev in 1979. The two before were hosted by the Soviets.

TEAM: pending decision could cost Gray County jobs

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Gray County could see the loss of more than 5,000 jobs resulting from the possible shut down of oil and gas wells posed by a pending federal decision, a Texas A&M University economist has warned.

In his report presented Wednesday to TEAM for the Survival of the Panhandle, A&M professor Timothy J. Gronberg predicted the county faces a loss of 5,230 jobs or approximately 46 percent of its oil and gas industry and related field jobs.

The unemployment could occur if a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission recommendation is accepted to include a redefinition of gas to oil ratios for well classification, TEAM staff members have claimed.

TEAM is a coalition of community leaders, royalty owners, producers and contractors formed to increase community awareness regarding the potential adverse impact of the FERC decision upon the counties of Gray, Hutchinson, Moore and Carson.

TEAM claims there is a need for the public to rally in support of opposition to the pending FERC decision to avoid economic disaster in the region. The group is collecting contributions from businessmen and other individuals to finance its attempts to inform the public of the economic impacts which could occur under the proposed federal agency's decision.

The pending decision, issued in January, rules against independent oil producers in portions of the Panhandle Field. The administrative judge writing the recommendation ruled against the independents, stating that they had illegally diverted natural gas from their wells which had been dedicated to interstate commerce and that they had sold the gas above the maximum price levels permitted under federal pricing controls.

TEAM hired Gronberg to analyze the economic impact on the area which might occur if FERC decides to accept a gas-oil ration (GOR) independents claim is implied in the ruling.

Representatives of the independents point to a single paragraph in the recommendation in which FERC enforcement staff members propose a new theory that any well producing above a 2,000 to 1 GOR would be producing gas from the free gas zone above the oil-gas contact.

The independents claim the ruling could be interpreted to allow that proposed ratio to be imposed on well production despite Texas Railroad Commission regulations establishing a 100,000 to 1 GOR for an oil well classification.

Contacted through the FERC public affairs office, Administrative Judge Brenda Murray, author of the proposed recommendation, provided no elucidation on the paragraph cited by the independents. "The paragraph speaks for itself" was all she would comment.

In his report, working on the assumptions that the new ratio would be accepted and imposed on wells in the Panhandle, Gronberg predicted the unemployment factors that could result.

Gronberg notes that oil well production led to increased gas production and an increase in mining employment related to the oil wells.

For Gray County, the economist reported employment in the county from 6,935 in the first quarter of 1973 to a high of 11,149 in the first quarter of 1982, falling to 9,620 in the first quarter of 1984.

Related mining jobs rose from 948 to 1,744 in the same period, Gronberg reported, basing his information on Texas Employment Commission figures.

Similar trends were noted in Hutchinson County and to a lesser extent in Carson and Moore.

Change in indictments approved

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas voters apparently will get a chance in November to cut the number of criminal convictions that are thrown out because of minor errors in indictments.

The House and Senate on Thursday approved separate — but identical — proposed constitutional amendments aimed at reducing reversals in cases where a defendant is "guilty as sin," as Fort Worth Rep. Doyle Willis termed it.

House Sponsor Terral Smith, R-Austin, said the Texas Constitution now requires reversals for harmless errors in indictments — such as a murder conviction thrown out because the indictment failed to name the liquid in which the victim was killed.

He referred to a murder case that was reversed because the indictment said "A killed B by drowning."

"But it didn't say in water," said Smith.

Scores of cocaine convictions have been reversed in recent years because the indictments referred to cocaine, instead of "a derivative of the coca leaf," which is the way the drug is mentioned in state law.

"These are the kind of cases the public gets so upset about," Smith told the House, which approved the amendment 116-11.

Each chamber passed its own version of the amendment, but the two measures are identical. The proposal will be placed on the November general election ballot when one of the chambers goes through the motions of approving the other's proposal.

The Senate approved its version of the amendment 26-0.

"This is a problem that has plagued the criminal justice system and the Court of Criminal Appeals over the years," said Senate sponsor J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson.

The Constitution now sets tight restrictions on what has to be in an indictment. All indictments must be expressly brought "in the name and by authority of the state of Texas" and must end with the phrase "against the peace and dignity of the state."

The constitution also requires that indictments tell defendants exactly what they are accused of doing. That has led to some oft-criticized decisions by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, Smith said.

The Court of Criminal Appeals has had no choice but to reverse such convictions, said Smith.

If the amendment is approved, legislators would write a new law on indictments.

Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, said the change could be unfair to defendants.

"It would allow prosecutors to continue to draft sloppy indictments. That's really what the problem is. If they could draft good indictments, wouldn't that solve this problem?" he asked Smith.

Smith said the problem is that convictions are now reversed in cases where prosecutors made "honest mistakes" in indictments, but did not hurt the defendant's chance for a fair trial.

Pickens to get $24.1 million bonus

DALLAS (AP) — T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum, has been granted a bonus of $24.1 million over the next four years for his part in the unsuccessful but highly profitable takeover battles with Gulf Oil and Phillips Petroleum, a Mesa Petroleum official says.

David Batchelder, chief financial officer for Mesa, said Wednesday the money will come from a compensation pool created in 1984 after Mesa realized a $500 million pretax profit from its hostile bid for Gulf Oil.

The pool will also get funds from the $89 million Mesa is expected to get in the settlement of its takeover bid for Phillips, Batchelder said.

Batchelder said the bonus pool is made up of not less than 2.5 percent nor more than 5 percent of the gain that the Mesa investor groups received on the investments.

The bonus Pickens will receive will include $18.6 million from the Gulf investment and another $5.5 million from the Phillips gains, Batchelder said.

Southwestern Bell seeks rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. filed a $323.9 million rate increase proposal today with the Public Utility Commission.

The proposed increase, according to the PUC, would raise local monthly phone bills by $1.50 to $2.

The PUC has set the first hearing on the request for April 10. It normally takes about six months for the PUC to reach a decision in a major rate case.

In 1983 Southwestern Bell filed a record-high $1.7 billion case in anticipation of the Jan. 1, 1984, break-up of the nationwide

American Telephone & Telegraph. Southwestern Bell trimmed that request to $1.3 billion, and the PUC granted increases totaling $816.7 million May 1, 1984.

In its May 1 decision, the PUC raised local phone bills by 32 cents a month but ordered long-distance companies to pay more than $700 million a year in access charges.

Official says government hasn't chosen temporary nuke dump site

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the federal nuclear waste program has assured Congress that the government hasn't chosen the site for a temporary nuclear storage dump prior to completion of a study on whether the facility is needed.

Ben C. Rusche, director of the Office of Civilian Radioactive Waste Management, Thursday told skeptical congressmen that while the site has yet to be selected, it almost certainly will be in "the area of the southeastern United States."

"We do not have a predetermined choice, we have not picked a predetermined site," Rusche told the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on energy conservation and power. "Let me assure you that any site the president selects will be the result of careful consideration and study."

Rusche's statement came in response to questions from Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., the subcommittee's chairman, and Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. The congressman said they suspect the waste management office has already picked a site in a Southern state even though a report on its necessity is unfinished.

"Isn't North Carolina on your list, Mr. Rusche? How about South Carolina? Is Tennessee on your list?" Mr. Markey asked.

Rusche replied that those states are being considered because they are in the Southeast. He said his office hopes to complete the study and identify a site in six to eight weeks.

A committee source said later Markey had information that the waste management office, which is part of the Energy Department, has narrowed its site selection to six states: Tennessee, Alabama, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, or Mississippi.

The preferred site is located in Tennessee, said the source, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Ginger King, a spokeswoman for Rusche, said the source's information was incorrect and that "as Mr. Rusche stated, no site has been selected."

Under federal law, the Energy Department must begin operating a permanent waste site for used nuclear fuel from power plants and military projects by 1998.

One killed, another injured in plane crash

GALVESTON (AP) — One man was killed and another injured when the single-engine plane in which they were flying crashed in a baseball field near Galveston's airport.

The aircraft had taken off from Scholes air field and crashed into a field in Pony-Colt Stadium about 9:20 p.m. as a crowd watched a softball game at a nearby diamond, authorities said.

Police declined to release the victims' names or say whether the passenger of pilot had died until their families could be notified.

A witness, Forester Hardt, of La Marque, said he saw the Beachcraft Sierra 2000 plane take off from the airport and head south.

"We heard his engine cut off," Hardt said. "I thought, 'This guy's playing' because he got it back on."

But Hardt said he heard the plane engine begin "sputtering" and saw the plane head back toward the airport. The craft then nose-dived and "just came straight down," he said.

"There was a pretty loud crash," said Hardt.

Police said the plane skidded about 20 feet after hitting the ground and stopped in the stadium's left field.

A sign and part of a fence were damaged in the incident.

Police Officer Susan Stubbs said one of the plane's two gas tanks was empty, but authorities were not certain what caused the crash.

One of the plane's two occupants was taken by Lifelight helicopter to Galveston's John Sealy Hospital and the other was taken by ambulance to the facility.

Hospital spokeswoman Linda MacDonald said one of the men had died and the other was still being treated late Thursday, but would not release their names.

Volcker should stay off brake

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker and a flock of economists have been warning us for the past several months that too much economic growth would be bad for the U.S. economy.

Last spring, as the American economy grew at a brisk pace, Volcker tightened the screws to credit and by August economic growth had slowed to a crawl. Fearing another recession, Volcker loosened credit, interest rates fell and the economy has now returned to a respectable annual growth rate of about 5 percent.

It was a mistake for the Fed to raise interest rates last year and it would be a mistake to raise them again. We have nothing to fear from a return to the robust economic growth of 1984 when the economy expanded at a rate of 6.9 percent, the best performance since 1951.

Volcker and others who are leery of economic growth above 4 percent a year bow to the mistaken notion that growth necessarily leads to inflation and higher interest rates. They also think, wrongly, that our economy is approaching an optimal level of production.

But the economy has a long way to go before it reaches that level. Today 8.4 million Americans are officially classified as unemployed. The unemployment rate is still 2 points higher than what it has been through most of the post-war period.

It is a myth that growth leads to inflation and higher interest rates. American has now enjoyed 27 consecutive months of expansion and inflation has shown no signs of accelerating. There is no reason to believe a higher rate of economic growth would make it worse.

Indeed, other measures of inflation indicate the beast is comatose. Around the world, the dollar has been gaining value, not losing it, as it sets records almost daily against foreign currencies. The price of raw commodities in terms of the dollar has actually dropped about 14 percent in the past year.

What these markets are trying to say is that the U.S. and world economies are demanding more dollars. They are the oxygen supply of the economy. Pump too much into the system and the economy becomes woozy with inflation; restrict the supply and it starts to gasp and sputter.

The Reagan tax cuts of 1981 have provided economic incentives for a continued expansion. It is up to Paul Volcker to loosen the reins on the money supply so that our economy can expand at a rate fast enough to put those millions of unemployed people to work.

British union leader failed

The year-long strike by British coal miners has come to an end. Arthur Scargill, the Marxist who heads the union, had to admit failure. Despite his brutal opposition, the miners were returning to work in increasing numbers day by day.

Americans may not realize how much was involved in this strike. This wasn't an ordinary dispute over wages. The union said it struck because the management of the nationalized coal mines had determined to close uneconomic pits.

The union position was that the pits virtually belonged to the coalminers, that they should be mined irrespective of profitability, and that the jobs in the mines should be kept for the children and grandchildren of the miners at work today. Obviously, neither the Coal Board nor the government could agree to perpetual operation of uneconomic coal mines.

The union and its leader, Mr. Scargill, had much more in mind, however, when the strike was called. First of all Arthur Scargill hoped to bring down the Thatcher government by creating an energy crisis. This strategy didn't work. Mrs. Thatcher was firm, the British public was behind her. There were ample supplies of coal for electric power stations.

Mr. Scargill's most important objective was to create revolutionary conditions in Britain. He is an avowed pro-communist who either sought or accepted aid from the Soviet Union and Libya and who is on record as favoring the Polish regime over the Solidarity labor movement in Poland. His goon squads used the most brutal methods on the picket line. Britain's unarmed police were mauled by strikers. The British public was appalled by the insurrectionary methods employed by the mineworkers union. They were shocked at the ferocity of the union violence.

It's hard for Americans to realize the extent to which Britons have been preoccupied with this strike. Thoughtful Britons have seen the strike leaders attempt to substitute stormtrooper tactics for democratic government. Many British observers recognize that the extreme union leftists had as their objective the establishment of a people's republic in the British Isles.

Mr. Scargill offered the most direct challenge to British democracy that has been witnessed since the general strike in the 1920s. The British Labor Party has been transformed and split in recent years by the tactics of Left militants who have ousted many of the moderates that existed in the party, that is, those who were socialists but who adhered to democratic forms. The opposition in Parliament today is far more radical than the opposition of five or ten years ago. Much must be done to revive the moderate element in the Labor Party.

Britons can draw a sigh of relief at the failure of the Scargill insurrection. His failure is cheering proof of the strength of democratic sentiment in Great Britain even in the most economically hard hit region. The need now is for the Thatcher government to do more to address the problems of the people in the depressed region of the North where old industries have collapsed.

Changing international economic conditions have brought grim times to the North of England. The British government has to provide leadership in dealing with very bad conditions. It would be disastrous to allow Mr. Scargill fresh opportunities in the future.

Today in History

Today is Friday, March 22, the 81st day of 1985. There are 284 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 22, 1765, England enacted the Stamp Act to raise money from the American colonies. The Act set off such a strong protest that it was repealed the following year.

On this date: Ten years ago: The U.S. Senate passed a tax-cut bill totaling more than $29 billion, nearly twice the amount sought by President Gerald R. Ford.

Five years ago: An estimated 30,000 people marched in Washington D.C. to protest the Carter administration's plan to revive draft registration.

One year ago: A jury in Fall River, Mass., convicted two men of aggravated rape and acquitted two others of all charges in the case of a woman who was gang-raped atop a barroom pool table. Two other defendants had also been convicted five days earlier.

Today's birthdays: Actor Karl Malden is 72. Actor Werner Klemperer is 65. Mime Marcel Marceau is 62.

Don't depend on Canada

Our unguarded, unfortified border with Canada has been a credit to both nations. Good neighbors should not need high fences.

But is Canada altogether the good neighbor she used to be?

Canadian officials have been lobbying for years - vigorously - to force United States utilities to throttle their smokestacks.

They have been highly visible around Washington, arguing that our dirty air eventuates in acid rain over Canada which is despoiling their forests, lakes and rivers.

They demand stringent emission controls in the United States, sufficiently stringent to make the manufacture of electricity from coal-fired plants prohibitively costly.

The cost of the controls they demand could total $8 billion a year.

Yet, at the same time, while these Canadian officials are seeking to throttle electric utilities south of the border...

Other Canadian officials are seeking, equally aggressively, to sell Canadian electricity to us.

It is nothing new of the United States and Canada to "exchange electricity"; we've been doing it since 1901 when the first transmission line was constructed at Niagara Falls.

What's different is that steadily, since 1968, the United States has been importing a disproportionate amount of electricity from them.

Where we imported $100 million worth in 1975, by 1983 we were importing more than a billion dollars worth.

Now, under agreements signed in recent months, New York and New England will be importing evermore Canadian electricity. By the time a proposed interconnection is expanded in 1990, British Columbia Hydro will be selling just the city of Seattle $22 million worth of electricity every year.

Canada is "banking on" increasingly profitable export sales of electricity to us - while lobbying for thwarting our own electric power industry.

We are financing their nuclear power plant expansion while they are throttling ours.

Lawmakers contemplating tougher "acid rain legislation" should weigh in the balance how much more they want to unbalance our trade deficit - and how many more American workers we can afford to displace.

As surely as we once let ourselves become dependent on foreign oil, we are fast becoming dependent on foreign electricity. Let's not make the same mistake a second time.

Inconsistent U.S. policy

WASHINGTON (NEA) - On a memorable occasion many years ago, the late Sen. Everett M. Dirksen was pressed to justify his capricious political behavior.

Paraphrasing Ralph Waldo Emerson, an indignant Dirksen proclaimed, "Consistency is the hobgoblin of small minds."

That aphorism probably provides the best available defense for this country's schizophrenic attitude toward the real and imagined communists of the world.

President Reagan surely has exacerbated an already difficult situation. Thus, we have the spectacle of a president who not long ago denounced the Soviet Union for presiding over an "evil empire" shamelessly maneuvering for an opportunity to meet with that nation's new leader.

Similarly, we have an administration that has elevated the struggle for political control of Nicaragua to a level just short of Armageddon but has been unenthusiastic about providing desperately needed assistance to those bravely resisting the Soviet Union's takeover of Afghanistan.

In Reagan's defense, however, much of this country's inconsistent policy toward communism was in place when he assumed office and he has merely perpetuated it.

Consider, for example, the strange case of Kampuchea, the Asian nation formerly known as Cambodia whose citizens suffered under the communist Pol Pot regime from April 1975 through December 1978.

During that Marxist reign of terror, there were mass executions of citizens who displayed even the slightest sign of disobedience to or dissatisfaction with the ruthless central government. The number of people murdered during Pol Pot's tenure is estimated at 100,000 to 300,000.

In early 1979, however, troops from another communist nation, Vietnam, swept across Kampuchea, overthrowing Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge government in Phnom Penh.

In the ensuing years, this country has covertly joined forces with the People's Republic of China to punish Vietnam for its takeover of Kampuchea. The beneficiaries of that effort have been three Kampuchean groups - the largest of which is communist Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge.

The alliance with China in Kampuchea is only one manifestation of this country's new-found friendship with the world's largest communist-led government.

Later last year, Amnesty International reported that China was holding tens of thousands of political prisoners in jails or "re-education" camps and had executed thousands of others.

There is no indication, however, that any of communist Peking's excesses are of concern here in Washington.

Finally, there is the strange case of Angola, a communist nation that the United States refuses to recognize diplomatically but whose economy is propped up by a consortium of this country's leading banks and oil companies.

This country is by far Angola's largest trading partner, purchasing more than half of its annual oil exports. Gulf Oil is responsible for about 90 percent of all petroleum production in Angola, while Texaco is also involved.

In addition, Angola's state-owned oil company has been the beneficiary of more than $200 million worth of loans from New York's leading banks - Chase Manhattan, Citibank, Morgan Guaranty, Bankers Trust and Manufacturers Hanover.

A substantial portion of the proceeds from the oil sales pay for the estimated 35,000 Cuban troops positioned in Angola to protect its Marxist government.

Thus, the United States is in the position of decrying the stationing of Cuban troops in Nicaragua while financing their presence in Angola. That's selective anti-communism at its best - or worst.

French vice consul abducted in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three men armed with pistols kidnapped France's vice consul this morning as he walked to work in west Beirut, and two other French embassy employees failed to report to work, the embassy and witnesses said.

Embassy spokesman Marcel L'augel said the vice consul, Marcel Fontaine, was abducted. It was the fourth kidnapping of a Westerner in mostly Moslem west Beirut in the past eight days. L'augel identified the two absent employees as Marcel Carton, 62, protocol officer, and his daughter, Mrs. Danielle Perez, 34, who worked as the secretary for the cultural section.

He said that the father and daughter had left their mid-city home together at 8:30 a.m. and that there was no news of their whereabouts six hours later.

Another French Embassy official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said: "People are panicky and because they did not show up, which is not their habit, the alarms have been sounded."

He said there was no evidence they had been kidnapped but that an investigation was under way.

A senior embassy official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Fontaine had worked at offices in both east and west Beirut since late 1982.

Fontaine was walking from his home in the Ras Beirut neighborhood to the French Embassy when three gunmen forced him into a blue BMW and sped away, said the Christian radio station Voice of Lebanon.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the kidnapping.

"We have no information whatsoever about Mr. Fontaine," said the French Embassy official. "We are making contacts for information on him." He made an appeal to the kidnapers to release the diplomat.

In Paris, the French government condemned the kidnapping as "an act of terrorism," and called on Lebanese authorities "to take all possible action" to obtain his release.

Fontaine is in his early 40s, and his wife and three children have been living in France, the official said.

A terrorist group that calls itself Islamic Holy War, which is believed to be made up of Shiite Moslems loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has claimed responsibility for the three other recent kidnappings.

Terry A. Anderson, 37, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was seized by three men last Saturday and forced into a green Mercedes. Geoffrey Nash, a 60-year-old British metallurgist, was abducted last Friday, and 59-year-old Brian Levick, a British businessman, was kidnapped a day earlier. There was no word on the whereabouts of Anderson, a native of Lorain, Ohio, or the two Britons.

Islamic Holy War has warned all Westerners to leave Beirut, saying, "We are definite that Islamic Beirut is full of agents from all sides and accordingly we are working day and night to purge our region of any subversive element."

Reagan reluctant to criticize South Africans

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan apparently is more reluctant to criticize violence at the hands of South African police and Israeli troops than brutality and human rights violations by Communist governments.

At least, that was the impression during his news conference Thursday night.

Asked about the killing of 17 South African blacks by the police when they fired on an anti-apartheid demonstration, Reagan said he saw no need to put more pressure on the white government of that country to change its ways. He declined to condemn the government and instead suggested that blame partly lay with "an element in South Africa that do not want a peaceful settlement of this — who want a violent settlement."

The president was equally reluctant to place blame on Israeli troops who fired on a CBS camera crew in South Lebanon, killing two men and critically wounding a third. He said the Israelis were returning hostile fire from people in civilian garb.

Presidents tend to react more sympathetically to the actions of allies and seize upon the misdeeds of their enemies. During his campaign against Jimmy Carter in 1980, Reagan condemned the incumbent's human rights policy for singling out violations by anti-Communist countries while ignoring those of the Soviet Union and its allies.

What Reagan demonstrated in his comments Thursday night was a reluctance to condemn brutality by governments he sees as anti-Communist with the same vigor he castigates such actions by Communist governments.

Caution may have been understandable in responding to the incident in Lebanon, which took place during combat although CBS called it "an unprovoked and deliberate attack by Israeli forces."

"I'd like to know all the details of this," Reagan said when asked about the incident in which the three men, all Lebanese, were shot.

"I'm quite sure in combat of that kind this was not a deliberate killing," he added.

The details of the incident in South Africa were clearer. About 3,000 blacks were demonstrating to mark the 25th anniversary of the Sharpeville shooting in which 69 blacks were killed. Police fired upon the marchers and 17 were killed.

South African authorities claimed the marchers were confronted by police and refused to disperse and threw rocks at the officers. Other witnesses said the shooting was unprovoked by the marchers.

The president accepted the South African government version, although earlier in the day Secretary of State George Shultz said "violence as a tactic to break demonstrations is a deplorable tactic and I am not prepared in any way to try to defend it."

Reagan said it was "significant" that "some of those enforcing the law and using the guns were also black — black policemen."

When asked if the unarmed crowd posed that much of a threat, Reagan said there has been increasing violence in South Africa, which he blamed on an element opposed to a peaceful settlement and added, "I think all of us find the system there repugnant, but we're going to keep on trying to contribute to a peaceful solution if we can."

Missing 92-year-old found safe

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — Stranded in a mu when she was rescued.

"Where's the bingo game tonight?" she asked. Fanny Payne had been the object of a countywide search Wednesday after she failed to return home Tuesday night from playing bingo at St. Mary's Catholic Church.

She told police she took a wrong turn as she headed for her home at Lake Brownwood in a heavy rainstorm about 10 p.m. Tuesday. She was found inside her car, which was mired in a muddy isolated field about a half mile behind the Brown County Jail, at 9 a.m. Thursday.

"After she'd gone a good distance down the muddy road, she realized that she was lost," explained Mrs. Payne's son-in-law, Richard Metz. "She honked her horn thinking someone would hear her, but they didn't."

Mrs. Payne spent Tuesday night in the back seat of her 1974 Chevrolet Caprice wrapped in a red blanket. At daylight Wednesday, she placed the blanket on her walking cane and periodically waved it out the window.

At one point, Metz said, Mrs. Payne got out of the car to walk for help but realized the road was too muddy to be safe for her.

"She had sense enough to stay with the car," her son said. "Her main concern was knowing how worried we would be about her."

Mrs. Payne said she napped in the car and read her Bible.

Her car was spotted Thursday morning by a passing motorist who alerted police. Reunited with her children at police headquarters, she asked, "Where's the bingo game tonight?"

"She plays every night of the week," Metz said. "Monday is the American Legion, Tuesday at St. Mary's, Wednesday at the Lions Club, Thursday at the Elks Lodge and Friday back at the American Legion."

When Mrs. Payne entered the Elks Lodge for her Thursday night game, she was greeted with a standing ovation from 150 fellow bingo players.

"These people searched with us and prayed with us for her safe return, so we brought her down here to see them," Metz said.

Retirees find searching for roots full-time job

RESEARCHING RECORDS — "Retirement" means long work days for Tex and Phyllis Knapp of Monterey, Calif., who spend most of the year traveling around the country in their motorhome, searching for family roots.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — When Tex and Phyllis Knapp left Salt Lake City, they left with 1,000 pounds of photocopied records loaded in their motorhome, and memories of long hours of work, 10 hours a day, six days a week, for two months.

They'd been tracking down the Bean family in the records of the Genealogy Library sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. For the Knapps, it's relaxing, and it keeps them young.

"Some people get the idea that retirement means you sit back and watch the world go by," said Knapp, a retired government worker pushing 70. "That isn't retirement, that's lying down and dying. When you're at the point where you've quit learning, you've quit living."

"We want our family records to be straight, not just a bunch of family stories that aren't true," added Mrs. Knapp, whose ancestors were Beans. They've been researching at the library part of every year since 1979.

Some of the true stories they've found have inspired them to dig even deeper. Family legend had it that Mrs. Knapp's ancestor, Hannah Bean, and her children had been massacred by the Indians. Not true, the Knapps discovered.

Hannah and her children lived to a ripe old age.

"We found that Curtis Bean participated in the Boston Tea Party," said Knapp. "And his town in New Hampshire paid for it! They listed the purpose of his trip as 'helping the poor of Boston.' We found that almost all the out-of-towners in the Boston Tea Party had their ways paid by hometowns."

On their visit here, through persistence, the Knapps found a treasure of 900 names not listed in indexes. They checked records where researchers would not normally check.

"I found marriages and births stuck right in the town meeting records, or in the area where they listed cattle marks," said Knapp. "We list everything we find very carefully, page by page, with records from deeds and probates and provincial records."

The Knapps are now compiling a new index for the Bean family, with the help of a computer.

"Keeping track of the records on computer means we don't have a lot of papers to sort through," he added. "You can put so much information on a disk that it's the most practical way to keep track of genealogy records."

The Knapps have spent years researching on site in New England and Canada, where their ancestors once lived. In fact, they've been home in Monterey, Calif., only eight days in the past five years.

"Last year we went across the border between Quebec and Maine 101 times," said Mrs. Knapp. "So much of what we've found over the years is now destroyed. We found one cemetery in upstate New York where there were the graves of Scottish-Irish Beans who migrated to New York in 1754. A highway had been cut through the cemetery. Now the graveyard is a parking lot."

In some areas in New England, the records are kept in private homes. "That isn't bad for the local people there, but it's hard to set up your schedule so you can make use of your time when you're from out of town," Mrs. Knapp said. The Knapps rely on help from local residents to get into records that are hard to access.

"If the town clerk tells us that records are too old and you can't even read them, we ask a local who knows the customs and can speak the language to help us."

Are the Knapps going to keep searching out their roots?

"We're in our late 60s and feel like we're about 30 or 40, because of our genealogy work," said Mrs. Knapp.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

Are you taking advantage of the free family registry with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints? Numerous family registries are charging per surname with a limited circulation. Using the church registry has the advantage of reaching other researchers all over the country and usually with results in at least one of the family lines.

To register, check with the local Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints for the required form or write: Family Registry, Genealogical Department, 50 East North Temple Street, Salt Lake City, Utah 84150. There is no limit to the number of individuals to be registered; however, it is suggested that only the lines the researcher is actively seeking be registered. Most of the mail will be people seeking assistance and by registering the researcher is indicating willingness to share information.

The form is simple to complete and is microfilmed when received. It is placed in the registry exactly as written. It is best to type the information on the form, but if that is not possible, remember to use black ink with bold clear letters.

The registrant information is for name, address and telephone number. Additional space is available for an alternate person to contact. This is especially useful if numerous lines are being researched and allows help in answering queries. In registering, the researcher agrees to answer all inquiries!

Now, include the information about the individual being researched. The researcher should go as far as possible with the individual line and then back up one generation. This helps get more names on the form and should be more helpful. Give all the vital information known. If a fact is not certain, list it and then add a question mark indicating doubt. By backing up that generation, the person and both the father and mother are listed in this section.

The last section provides spaces for marriage information. Again, be as complete as possible. If more than one marriage, list all of them and if the reason for the conclusion of the first marriage is known, list that reason.

Two important lines have often been left blank by those already registered. They are the Variant Surname Spellings and Additional Information lines. If a family is known that uses a different spelling, be sure and include that spelling. Also, if the time period or locale the spelling used by the family is known, add that after the variant.

Additional information is just that. More information. Are the names of the brothers or sisters of the individual being registered known? Perhaps the researcher knows the occupation or the migration pattern of the family. If married several times, the researcher might know the names of the children of the other marriages. Church affiliation might be a clue. The important thing is to utilize this feature and to remember that the form is actually microfilmed and made a part of the record!

If the local Mormon Church does not have the Family Registry, ask where the nearest facility would be and check it. You might be pleasantly surprised to find a new "cousin."

Some Mexican pottery contains lead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican pottery containing dangerous levels of lead in the ceramic glazing is being sold to some U.S. consumers and could be hazardous to health, the Food and Drug Administration said today.

The FDA said tests by its Seattle regional office on samples of Mexican pottery being sold there discovered some with dangerous levels of lead contamination.

Not all Mexican pottery contains lead in its glazing, and even the pottery that does is not dangerous except when used with food, the agency noted. It can be sold legally and used for display or ornamentation without harm.

But when such pottery is used with food, particularly acid foods such as fruit and vegetable juices, lead can leach into the food and be consumed.

Lead poisoning from pottery can produce a range of symptoms including constipation, diarrhea, high or low blood pressure, sleep disturbances, nausea, dizziness, muscle weakness, trembling and tiredness.

The FDA said the pottery involved apparently is produced by native craftsmen in Mexico using primitive techniques in homemade kilns. The goods usually are purchased at roadside stands and shops and urban marketplaces by tourists, but they also sometimes show up at art fairs and import shops in the United States.

There is no way for the average consumer to test pottery for lead in the glazing, FDA spokesman Mike Shaffer said.

Make a mouse house

THIS WHIMSICAL MOUSE house provides a new twist on traditional doll houses. The four-room cardboard house is home for two adorable mouse couples: Morton and Millicent are city slickers and Zeke and Maryann are their country cousins.

By APRIL BAIL
As a switch on the traditional doll house theme, I designed this four-room, cardboard mouse house. It is home and hearth for two adorable mouse couples: Morton and Millicent are sophisticated city slickers, and Maryann and Zeke are their lovely country cousins.
Each mouse couple has a two-room, appropriately decorated apartment. The city mice, of course, prefer ultra plush furnishings, while the country mice are more comfortable in their casual setting.
The house and furnishings can be made from cardboard, fabric remnants and felt, but keep in mind that Millicent would love a touch of velvet here and there. As a bonus, the entire house can be folded for easy storage.
You can make your own mouse house and residents in a couple of afternoons, using our fully illustrated plans. They include a complete materials list, step-by-step instructions, cutting and assembly diagrams, and full-size patterns for the mice, their clothing, furnishings and home decor accessories. Don't miss out on our 1985 color catalog, featuring hundreds of exciting fabric and wooden projects for you to make. It's only $2.95.

To order the plans, please specify Project No. 1236-4 and include $3.95. Mail the order to Kid's Stuff, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.
Morton is partial to his top hat and tux, made from black and white felt with black sequins. Millicent's sequined evening gown is complimented by her matching necklace. Zeke wears a calico bandanna, and Maryann is content to wear her calico apron with eyelet trim.

Even though their lifestyles are very different, each stuffed-fabric mouse is made from the same materials. I used grey fake fur for the bodies and pink felt for the ears. They have pink pompom noses, and eyes that are shiny black sequins.
Their living quarters are constructed from a four-way cardboard divider, and each couple occupies two 9 1/2 x 11 inch rooms. Each room features wallpaper and furnishings. Let your creativity run wild on the decorations and accessories, and have fun creating the mouse house.

Dear Abby

Neighbors do slow burn while firemen refuse to fight fire

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What a strange coincidence! On the same day you printed a letter signed "Grateful in Millsboro, Del.," praising the heroism of volunteer firemen, this Associated Press item appeared, datelined Salem, Ark.:

"Volunteer firefighters refused to fight a fire that destroyed Anthony Brazil's $150,000 house and killed the family dog because they said he had not paid $20 in annual dues.
"They just sat there and watched it burn. We have nothing left but the clothes on our backs and our cars," Brazil said.

"The chief of Salem's volunteer fire department, Ronnie Courtney, said, 'We've had a policy for a number of years. If you're not a member, we don't fight the fire. The fire association charges $250 to put out a fire, but the fire victim must be a member whose $20 annual dues are paid.'

"Brazil and his wife were at church when Brazil's brothers discovered the blaze Sunday morning. Courtney said flames were coming out of windows when firefighters arrived in three trucks, staying near the house to make sure the fire didn't spread.

"Neighbors offered to pay the $20 and the additional $250 if the department would fight the fire, but the firefighters refused.

"The firefighters were just standing around. As a matter of fact, they were out hosing their new fire truck down in the street to keep it clean," said Barney Taylor, a member of the church the Brazils attend."

PETER W. MANY JR., NEW ORLEANS

DEAR PETER: Thanks for sending the item. I received several from other parts of the country.

I cannot understand how any person could justify the actions of the Salem, Ark., volunteer firefighters.

If their chief, Ronnie Courtney, or any of the volunteer firefighters who stood by refusing to fight a fire that destroyed a house and killed a family dog has anything to say in their defense, please write. I will be glad to print it.

DEAR ABBY: In the hope that I may help others, I have donated my organs to the Living Bank in the event of my death, and I carry a donor card in my wallet indicating that all usable organs (eyes, kidneys, etc.) have been promised by me for that purpose to improve the quality of life for the living.

I carry my card at all times so my wishes can be carried out immediately. My doctor has this on his records.

Now for the problem: My husband says he will not carry out my wishes should I die before he does. My question: Does he have the right to stand in the way of my plans? And how can I prevent him from doing this?

LIVING IN A SMALL TOWN

DEAR LIVING: Your husband has no "right" to stand in the way of your plans—indeed he has a moral obligation to carry out your expressed wishes. How can you prevent him from doing this? You can't, if he is in charge of your remains at the time of your death. Just pray to outlive him.

DEAR ABBY: Who was the wise soul who wrote, "Any woman who will accept attention from a married man—no matter how lonely, misunderstood, henpecked, mistreated, neglected or unhappy he claims to be—is stupid, cruel, cheap, dishonest and shortsighted?"

DEAR BONNIE: I did.

Want ad offers job with twist

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joe Connor was looking for someone who could spend the wee small hours of the morning twisting away until the sun came up. Not just anyone, either. Connor wanted someone who could twist with authority, experience. Someone who could do maybe 50 twists a minute.

So he placed an ad in a South Philadelphia weekly newspaper.

Connor had hardly let out a yawn before his phone started ringing incessantly. He had to look no further than his first candidate, a middle-aged woman who could do 40 twists a minute.

"She more than cut the mustard to twist pretzel dough till dawn on the floor of Connor's soft pretzel shop here, which for more than a century, Connor says, has been the home of the Bakerite Soft Pretzel Co.

Of the dozen or so soft pretzel firms in the city, Connor, 62, believes his is the oldest and "probably the smallest." A former laundry salesman, Connor got into the operation about 15 years ago to help out his ailing father-in-law, whose father founded the business 125 years ago.

Connor says he advertises for an "experienced" extra hand or two every winter in case one of his two pretzel twisters gets bent out of shape with a cold.

State of Americans' health; 'moving in right direction'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The health of Americans continues to improve by almost every measuring stick, the government reported today, but a few disquieting exceptions prompt health professionals to say there still is work to be done.

The Department of Health and Human Services, in its annual report to the nation on the health of its people, said today that Americans, both men and women, are living longer, healthier lives.

Infant mortality continues to decline, though at a slowing pace that worries some. Life expectancy is up. Deaths from heart attack and strokes are down. And people are changing their living habits in ways that portend more improvement and still longer lives in the future.

"Progress is the word that best defines and describes the health status of the American people," said HHS Secretary Margaret M. Heckler in her introduction to the report. "There are, of course, lags and aberrations. We certainly cannot rest on our laurels."

But, she added, "It is clear from the basic health yardsticks that the United States is moving in the right direction."

The 188-page report, titled "Health, United States, 1984," notes in its statistical review:

—A child born today can expect to live 74.7 years, based on the 1983 data analyzed, more than a third longer than the 47.3 years of a person born at the turn of the century and a full year's increase since 1980. For newborn girls, life expectancy is 78.3 years; for boys, 71.0 years.

—While whites still can expect to live longer than blacks, the racial gap is narrowing because blacks are catching up. The racial difference dropped from 8.4 years in 1950 to 5.6 years in 1983.

—Americans who reached their 65th birthday in 1983 could expect to live another 16.8 years. In 1970, that figure was 15.2 years.

—Infant mortality dropped to 10.9 deaths per 1,000 live births, a decline from 11.2 in 1982 and from 16.1 in 1975.

Pending decision

The mining employment category includes those workers involved in the drilling, extraction and field services associated with oil and gas production, Gronberg explained.

"What is particularly striking about this data is the consistent relationship between movements in mining employment and movements in total employment for Gray and Hutchinson counties," Gronberg said.

For his predictions on resultant unemployment, Gronberg used the mining jobs "as the primary base growth industry for this region" to derive the percentages of unemployed which could occur from the shutdown of the wells.

Gronberg notes a basic industry is "tied to markets outside the region and thus its growth would tend to cause rather than be caused by general regional employment growth."

Under that assumption, "Growth in mining employment induced growth in employment in nonbasic sections such as retail trade and services which resulted in an expansion in total area employment greater than that occurring in the base industry," Gronberg states.

In other words, the growth of the oil and gas industry led to a growth in mining employment, which then in turn led to an increase of jobs in other areas throughout the region. And by implication, the trend would be reversed with the unemployment feared for the oil and gas industry under FERC's extensive ruling.

By his projections, Gray County could lose 5,230 jobs, Carson County 305, Hutchinson County 5,665 and Moore County 920.

Other economic adversities could result in the tax base for school districts from the loss of casinghead gas and oil production, Gronberg reported.

Gronberg states "it is obvious that a number of the school districts in this region rely very heavily upon oil and gas taxables in financing their operations."

Based on a loss of 80 percent of production value, state severance taxes could fall $27,347,000 per year, Gronberg estimated.

Gronberg reports the following percent of property value from gas, oil and minerals in various school districts in Gray and Carson Counties: Pampa, 15 percent; Lefors, 82; McLean, 44; Grandview-Hopkins, 81; Alanreed, 67; Groom, 24 percent, and White Deer, 63.

By those figures, Gronberg estimates a loss of $536,740 in such taxes for the Pampa school district, or $121 in lost revenue per pupil.

For the other schools, losses would be as follows (first figure, taxes lost; second figure, per pupil cost): Lefors, $402,937 and $1,651; McLean, $235,614 and $773; Grandview-Hopkins, $148,265 and $6,739; Alanreed, $105,601 and $6,212; Groom, $125,912 and $520; and White Deer, $1,020,863 and $1,739.

Such losses represent first-round effects only, Gronberg notes, adding the losses could have more severe effects upon other property values throughout the region and cause declines in residential property values, too.

Gronberg concludes, "The residential property values will already be falling if our employment scenario is correct. The net impact is impossible to quantify at this stage, but the qualitative picture is not encouraging."

In short, the region faces adverse economic impacts, if FERC's figures are correct and if FERC imposes the 2,000 to 1 GOR upon well production.

The FERC decision is yet to be made, however, and the federal agency may develop other alternatives to a widespread shutdown of oil and gas production.

According to a report in the Wednesday, March 20, issue of The Borger News-Herald, FERC was already considering an alternative plan, before the RRC asked the federal commission to delay its final decision.

Under its settlement proposal, FERC had drafted a plan by which independents could continue operations in the Panhandle Field and pay Dorchester Gas Producing Co. (now under a new name) money allegedly owed it from the illegally removed gas. The independents would have five years to pay the money, the Borger paper reported.

FERC then would implement a formula by which the independents could still derive income from continued oil and gas production after that time.

Las Vegas hotel owners complain that conventioners displacing the tourists

By TIM DAHLBERG
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Some hotel guests are more welcome than others.

In a city with 56,000 hotel and motel rooms, some hotel owners would prefer more guests who are tourists and fewer who are convention delegates.

The reason is simple: money. The average tourist spent an average of $1,057 gambling during a Las Vegas stay compared to $645 for an average convention delegate, according to a report commissioned by one of the city's resorts.

Over the years, millions of convention delegates, drawn by the idea of mixing a little pleasure with business, have flocked to Las Vegas, pumping billions of dollars into the local economy.

Some 1.1 million delegates visited Las Vegas in 1984, about 8.5 percent of the total number of visitors. A total of 475 conventions or trade shows were held here during the year.

But the biggest of those conventions are drawing fire from some hotel owners who complain convention delegates are disproportionately displacing the tourists.

And, in a city where the money is made at the gaming tables, not the front desk, the issue is generating heated debate.

"It's absolutely dead here in the daytime during a big convention and not much better at night," said William Bennett, chairman of the Circus Circus resort. "Our rooms are full but we have such low room rates it makes little difference. We make our money in the slot machines and on the tables."

Bennett, who says he has the support of several fellow hotel owners who are reluctant to speak out publicly against the convention business, said he particularly objects to the half-dozen or so annual conventions that draw more than 50,000 delegates.

A report commissioned by Circus Circus showed convention delegates begin displacing tourists when they occupy more than 25,000 of the town's 56,000 hotel and motel rooms.

The report, compiled by Booz-Allen & Hamilton, an international management consulting firm, came up with the average amounts spent by delegates and tourists.

"They come here and spend eight to 10 hours a day at the convention hall on their feet and all they want to do is have a drink or two and get something to eat," said Bennett.

Bennett's hotel, like a number of others in Las Vegas, offers low rates for its 1,600 rooms — often renting them for less than $20 a night — and almost giveaway food prices. Circus Circus and many other resorts count on the gamblers to make up the difference.

At the Las Vegas Hilton, which adjoins the Convention Center and offers its 3,200 rooms at much higher prices than Circus Circus, the attitude is different.

The Hilton, like the MGM Grand Hotel and Caesars Palace, depends on conventions to fill the large number of rooms it has available on a daily basis. Conventions like the Consumer Electronics Show that brings nearly 100,000 people to town in the slow month of January are welcomed with open arms.

"If you can get 90,000 people in the first week of January here and you don't go on your knees and kiss them, then there's something wrong with your mental capacity," said Henry Lewin, the Hilton's executive vice president.

Lewin said conventioners may not gamble as much as other tourists, but still need a place to sleep along with food and drink.

"Convention business is a must, convention business is good and convention business is unreplaceable," said Lewin. "That does not mean everybody has to do the same thing as the Hilton because they don't have 3,200 rooms. If I had Circus Circus, I would not have conventions either."

Tom Engelman, an MGM vice president, said a 500-room, three-day convention, booked at $50 a night and averaging $25 per person for food and beverages guarantees the hotel $150,000 in revenues and attracts 1,000 people to feed the other services, including the casino.

But Engelman admitted some conventioners are more desirable than others, with "auto people, oil people and horse people" topping the spending list and doctors and educational and religious groups at the bottom.

Frank Sain, executive director of the Las Vegas Convention Authority, which operates the huge Convention Center complex as well as a smaller convention area near downtown, said the key is to try and balance conventions so they displace as few tourists as possible.

"Conventions foster future tourism because as these convention delegates come here and have a good time and good meeting they come back," Sain argued. "It may strain us a little at times, but I feel we have adequate room to handle both."

Laotians release errant sunbather

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The government of Laos Thursday released an American tourist who was arrested after he unsuspectingly swam across the Mekong River from Thailand to Laos, a Thai immigration official said.

Jon Robert Phillips, 29, of Rumson, N.J., crossed the Mekong River back into Thailand's Nong Khai provincial town on a passenger ferry, the official said in a telephone interview.

He quoted Phillips as saying he swam in the Mekong River on March 15 and reached an island in the middle, not knowing the island belonged to Laos. He was later arrested by a group of people, Phillips told the Thai immigration official.

Lifeline

This pipe bridge spanning the water is a common sight in the gas producing areas of our great nation. This line is but one of thousands that feed the hungry furnaces of American industry. How nearly we might compare the gleaming line with the arteries that carry the precious life blood throughout our bodies. Human life and industry would not be possible without these small but important lifelines.

And so it is with the Church... for the church is the lifeline between God and man. It is where man's spiritual needs are fed, his faith and beliefs renewed. And his doubts, worries and frustrations removed. Through the church... God's Lifeline... is man able to know of the bountiful blessings of eternal life.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

GREG SHERWOOD

Area coach to speak at local church

Greg Sherwood, Plainview High School football coach and athletic director, will speak at the 10:30 a.m. service Sunday at the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ.

His subject will be "Building a Winning Spirit."

Local minister Gene Glaeser said, "We will be following our morning services with a luncheon in our Fellowship Hall and hope that everyone can stay for the meal."

Glaeser issued an invitation for all residents in the community to attend the special service and luncheon.

Coach Sherwood has completed his 25th year in the coaching profession, 20 of that as a head coach. He has compiled a head coaching record of 160 wins, 48 losses and two ties in five different schools.

In the past 12 seasons - five at Spearman and seven at Plainview - his teams have won the district championship 10 times and finished second the other two times. He has never had a losing season as a head coach.

A Panhandle High School graduate, Sherwood received his bachelor degree from the University of Texas. He received his master degree from West Texas State University.

He has been a speaker at the Texas High School Coaches Association Coaching School and coached the North All-Star Football Team to a victory in 1982 at the Astrodome in Houston.

Sherwood is a past member of the board of directors of the THSCA and is now president-elect of that association. In 1982 he was named Man of the Year by the Plainview Chamber of Commerce.

Witnesses set area meeting this weekend

Jehovah's Witnesses will have a new District Overseer assigned by the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society to oversee their coming two-day Circuit Assembly at the Amarillo Civic Center Auditorium this Saturday and Sunday.

Robert L. Hartman, now assigned to this area, has been an ordained minister of Jehovah's Witnesses since 1951 and has served fulltime since 1954.

His assignments have included more than 15 states, with 16 1/2 years spent in Alaska and the Yukon Territory of Canada. While serving there Hartman covered more than 250,000 miles to visit the congregations in all Alaska and the Yukon, an area of more than 700,000 square miles.

Elmer Reed, local minister of the Witnesses, said Hartman will be the featured speaker at the Assembly at 2 p.m. Sunday. He will speak on the subject, "Basis for Faith in an Unbelieving World."

The event is expected to attract 1,800 to 2,000 delegates from 20 congregations in parts of Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Assisting Hartman will be Ernie Morris, presently serving as Circuit Overseer in the area. Both Hartman and Morris arrived in Amarillo earlier this week to finalize the arrangements.

All sessions are open to the public, with a special invitation extended for the 2 p.m. Sunday service.

Church continuing revival services

Revival services led by the Singing Gabberrys are continuing nightly through Sunday at the First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock. Services begin at 7 p.m.

The musical and singing team composed of Doyle and Evelyn Gabberry of Norman, Okla., presents a program of gospel preaching and inspiring music. Musicians and singers of the local congregation provide additional music.

Pastor Albert Maggard invited the public to attend the special services.

Woman was slowly starving until doctors found illness

By SUZY McAULIFFE
San Angelo Standard-Times
SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — She was compared to a Cambodian refugee.

She was told she had anorexia nervosa.

She was sent to a psychiatrist who asked, "Why are you doing this to yourself?"

Alone, 25-year-old Renata Dean cried. She was starving to death, and no one — not even she — knew why.

Ms. Dean has trouble now remembering when the ordeal began. When she first felt pain after eating. When she became aware of a constant, low-grade fever. When she noticed her weight loss escalating out of control.

But the day her condition was diagnosed last summer by a San Angelo physician, Ms. Dean was near death. Crohn's disease, an ailment that hampers digestion, had infected 12 inches of her small intestine and starved her petite body of essential nutrients.

"It's really hard. People look at someone who's really thin and say, 'Anyone can gain weight,' because most people have problems losing weight," she said. "People are very cold-blooded to people who are thin. I had one person walk up to me on the street and say, 'You look like you're from Cambodia.' I went home and cried. Nobody wants to be told that any more than they want to be told they look like the Goodyear blimp."

Crohn's disease, also known as ileitis or regional enteritis, is an inflammation of the small intestine that also can affect the colon — a condition known as ulcerative colitis.

Together, the diseases are grouped under the name inflammatory bowel disease and afflict as many as 2 million people in the United States, at least 200,000 of them younger than age 16.

Victims of the disease suffer abdominal pain and chronic diarrhea. Joint pain, skin or mouth sores and recurrent fever often accompany the disease. But most often it's the drastic weight loss that finally prompts victims to seek medical help.

Ms. Dean, who has always been thin, wasn't concerned about her weight when she visited a Midland physician about a back ache in February 1984. The doctor told her the discomfort was caused by a kidney problem, but he was more worried about her weight. She weighed 90 pounds — wearing a coat and boots.

The doctor conducted tests to locate the problem, but could find no medical reason for her appearance. Meanwhile, Ms. Dean continued losing weight gradually and began shedding pounds more quickly as summer approached.

Again, she went to a doctor — a different one this time — for another health problem not related to her weight loss. Again, the doctor seemed more concerned about her low weight.

He suggested she compile a list of everything she ate for two weeks. During that time Ms. Dean realized she was eating constantly, but after 14 days she had lost two more pounds. The doctor diagnosed her condition as anorexia nervosa, told her it was a threat to her life and sent her to a psychiatrist.

"When he said I had anorexia that just broke my heart. I had a lot of people accuse me of being anorexic, but when I started keeping the calendar I noticed I was eating every hour on the hour. I wasn't eating a lot — because I couldn't — but I was eating," she said. "There's such a big thing about anorexia right now, but I had never been a destructive person. There was nothing I could do to help myself. When I ate a bunch, it would hurt. I could feel the food just run through me. Later, I would lay there and writhe like a snake."

Ms. Dean is 5 feet 3 1/2 inches tall. She weighs 93 pounds. The most she has ever weighed is 113 pounds. The least is 74 pounds.

Tears still fill her eyes when she talks about her struggle to stay alive.

"For me, the whole part was not knowing what was wrong with me, because I couldn't help myself. I told my husband, 'I feel like I'm starving to death,'" she said. "I always used to say I had a hole in my gut. That's the only way I knew how to describe it. I felt like I could stick my hand in there and feel my gut. I just felt a deterioration of my body."

A visit to her family doctor in San Angelo — her home town — finally provided the answers she had sought for so long.

Researchers can provide only educated guesses at what causes Crohn's disease, discovered in 1932 by Dr. Burrill B. Crohn and his colleagues.

Many scientists believe the interaction of an outside agent, such as a virus or bacterium, with the body's immune system may trigger the devastating disease.

Information in a pamphlet published by the National Foundation for Ileitis & Colitis Inc. states studies have shown that with inflammatory bowel disease, the body's defenses operate against substances they recognize as foreign.

These foreign substances may cause the inflammation, or stimulate the body's defenses to produce an inflammation, the pamphlet said. What starts the reaction is unknown.

"Sometimes somebody who was previously healthy will go to the doctor with a problem, and when they (surgeons) operate they discover Crohn's disease," said Dr. J.P. Darby, San Angelo internist and Ms. Dean's physician.

"This is a disease like diabetes. You can have one attack and never have any more problems. Other people may keep having obstructions and keep having portions of their small intestine taken out. And then they get malabsorption because their intestine is so small it can't absorb all the nutrients. They die of starvation," Darby said.

Darby said most food is absorbed through the small intestine.

No cure has been found for the disease, but treatment includes specialized, high-caloric diets, drug therapy and surgery. Ms. Dean has tried all three options.

In the beginning, after several tests, Darby prescribed anti-diarrheal drugs. Then she was put on cortisone, a steroid, but after two months Ms. Dean was experiencing such bad side effects and little improvement that she was taken off the drug and put into the hospital.

At her lowest point, she dropped to 74 pounds. Milkshake-type drinks rich in calories and intravenous feeding eventually pushed her weight up to 96 pounds.

Surgery, however, was inevitable for Ms. Dean's continued health. After it was all over, she had been in the hospital 38 days. She was able to eat food again, but she had lost her job and her marriage.

The department in a Midland oil and gas business where she worked was phased out while she was gone. The strain of her illness took its toll on her husband in Stanton.

"It's real hard in the first place. And then, there's the financial strain it puts on you. Our lives really changed a lot," she said. "I was in the hospital a long time. He (my husband) would have to run to the house after work, and then run down here to see me. I'm not saying me being sick is the reason we're separated, but I think it contributed."

Ms. Dean's parents, Jo Ann and Jimmie Kinney, offered to let her move back home until she was able to find a job in San Angelo. She refused, opting instead to find her own house and start over.

"I was very worried about her and, of course, I still am," Kinney said. "She doesn't complain much. She's real tough."

Kinney said he and his wife noticed their daughter's weight loss, but attributed it to her active lifestyle.

"It's just the same with most young people. I just didn't think she was eating well. We saw that she was losing weight, but we tried not to interfere," he said. "You know, you can go too far as a parent. I felt at the point she wanted me to help her, she would come to me. And she did."

Kinney, a medical laboratory technologist, said he was familiar with Crohn's disease, but never suspected his daughter had it. Now that Ms. Dean has had corrective surgery, he is optimistic about her future.

"There were a couple of times I was concerned about her making it, not because of this (Crohn's disease), but because of complications she had while she was in the hospital," he said.

"As far as this, you can't worry about it. I don't think about the other side. This is my only hope and prayer: that she can maintain and not have to have more surgery. I'm hoping she will be able to live a normal — a reasonably normal — life."

Ms. Dean now takes only vitamins — no drugs. She can eat most foods, but must avoid milk, gravy, Dr. Pepper, wine and monitor her intake of roughage and liquor.

"There at the end, I know there was no way I could've eaten enough to gain weight on my own. I ate to stay alive."

City looks for funds in wake of lost investments

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Beaumont officials are looking for ways to compensate for $20 million the city lost when a Florida securities firm collapsed as state and county authorities began investigating the loss.

The Texas attorney general's office announced on Wednesday it would consider conducting an investigation requested by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Assistant Attorney General Lou McCreary was assigned to investigate the way the city invested the money in ESM Government Securities Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., which collapsed earlier this month.

"We don't have any criminal jurisdiction, just civil jurisdiction," said spokeswoman Loretta Hendley.

Jefferson County District Attorney James McGrath has said he will present written and verbal complaints his office has received about the city's investments to a grand jury next month.

The $20 million, representing two-thirds of the city's surplus operating funds and nearly 20 percent of its $102 million annual budget, was invested in government securities by a since-resigned city finance director.

The deal was intended to provide 0.4 percent to 1 percent more interest than investments in Beaumont, officials said.

The Securities and Exchange Commission on Wednesday charged that an independent auditor for ESM securities, Jose Gomez, accepted $125,000 in private payments from the company's officers in exchange for issuing false financial statements used to lure investors to the firm.

Meanwhile, Beaumont officials were looking for ways to make up for the $20 million loss.

City officials plan to seek special legislation that would allow the city to extend the current fiscal year through Sept. 30, 1986. Texas law does not permit a city to borrow money in one fiscal year and pay it off the following year.

State Sen. Carl Parker, a Port Arthur Democrat, said there is a good chance legislation will be enacted to allow the city to borrow $2.3 million.

On Tuesday, City Council drew up a bailout plan in hopes of alleviating Beaumont's financial woes.

Expert: number of farms will decline sharply by 1990

By MICHAEL BATES
Associated Press Writer
WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Roger Booth talks of the future of farming in terms of "survival of the fittest."
The Jerseyville, Ill., farm financial management consultant helps supervise 140 farms. When the 1990s begin, he believes, there will be 20 percent to 30 percent fewer farms than today.
"The thing I think has to happen, and I don't feel like it's pleasant, is I think we've got to bury the dead," he said. "We're in a down cycle now, and while I'm not at all certain we're at the bottom of that cycle, things will get better. I firmly believe that."

Luther Tweeten, an Oklahoma State University agricultural economist, said he believed 15 percent of today's farmers would be out of business in three years. That's in addition to a normal annual attrition rate of 2 percent, he said.

Most agricultural observers agree the trend toward fewer and larger farms will continue. Booth believes farms that will make it will range from 600 to 1,200 acres. Tweeten said there would be a "dual agriculture" with commercial-size farms and small part-time farms that also have non-farm income.

Accurate predictions about farming's future are hard to make, but economists, management specialists and farmers agree agriculture will depend increasingly on technology.

"We suspect the bulk of these developments will be scale neutral," said Neil Harl, an Iowa State University agricultural economist. "By that I mean that they will not have a significant systematic advantage for the larger over the smaller farm."

Frank Dunn, 65, a Woodward, Okla., rancher with 24,000 acres of land and 4,000 head of cattle, said farmers and ranchers who use new technology properly will prevail.

Some of the technology on the horizon will save work, such as computer-guided tractors and automated irrigation systems.

In the early 1800s, before farms were mechanized, it took more than 250 hours of labor and five acres of land to produce 100 bushels of wheat. Today, it takes three or four hours' labor and less than three acres.

On the mechanical front, experts see a greater use of laser-guided land leveling equipment, more fuel-efficient tractors, automated harvesting equipment, computerized sprayers and even specialized combines that will process crops like soybeans and oilseeds in the field. Other equipment will sense moisture, ripeness and temperature.

Genetic engineering is the technology with the most promise and perhaps the least predictability. Its use in plant and animal breeding has the potential to rapidly change the seed and stock used today.

More salt-tolerant crops will be important in the Lower Colorado River Basin, the San Joaquin Valley in California and other areas with salinity problems. Drought-resistant crops will be bred for areas where rain is infrequent and irrigation impractical.

Genetic engineering will make it possible to increase milk production in dairy cows and weight gain in beef cattle, researchers say.

The practice of conservation tillage will grow, agronomists predict. This calls for less frequent plowing to help prevent erosion and save fuel and wear on machinery. Crop residues are left on the ground as a protective cover.

Competition for water will increase in the future. Irrigated acreage has tripled since 1940, with particularly marked increases in Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

But those states and four others draw water from the Ogallala Aquifer, a huge underground pool that, like other aquifers, is being drained more quickly than it can be replenished.

Farm groups loo, high food prices and a loss of stewardship for the land.

The percentage of land owned by those who farm it has risen to 50 percent in recent years. Some economists believe it could drop back to the Depression-era level of 25 percent. But Emanuel Melichar, senior economist with the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, said it was unlikely any major corporations would move soon to take over the agriculture industry.

When a farm worth $500,000 earns only $10,000 a year, investors would be better off investing elsewhere. A combination of oversupply, high interest rates, the strong dollar and increased foreign competition have made exporting farm products more difficult the past 10 years, but Melichar said the scenario had to change.

Farm Credit System analysts estimated farm debt at $465 billion by 1995, up from the current estimated $212 billion.

Nationwide search for missing girl

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — A 6-year-old Texas girl whose photo has been plastered on everything from milk cartons to movie screens has become one of the most widely publicized missing children of hundreds who disappear nationally each year.

Christi Lynn Meeks disappeared from outside her Mesquite home Jan. 19. Since then, her parents and relatives have organized extensive search efforts but still have no clues.

"I would say that no child ... (has) gotten the general publicity like Christi," said Carla Branch, hotline coordinator for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in Washington, D.C.

Christi's picture appears on billboards and buses across Texas, on milk cartons in five southwestern states, on fliers handed out in north Texas grocery stores and on posters inside 850 California supermarkets.

In more than 100 theaters in 26 states, slides of Christi flash across the screens as a reminder of what experts say has become a national epidemic.

Her story has been told on ABC's "Good Morning America" and NBC's "Childsearch," a weekly news feature produced by Los Angeles-based Find the Children to publicize child disappearances.

Officials credit the publicity surrounding Christi's disappearance to her aunt's tireless efforts and to the timing of her disappearance.

Congress appropriated $4 million last year to support organizations working to find missing children.

Christi's aunt, Teresa Rogers, says she sleeps only two or three hours a night and often is awakened with new ideas of how to publicize her niece's disappearance.

Ms. Rogers, 30, has worked only six days at her job as an insurance saleswoman since Christi disappeared, spending most of her time on the campaign.

"If everybody pulls together, I know something — good or bad — will turn up. I know some of this is going to bring her home."

WILL PUBLISH A SPECIAL PRIVATE PROPERTY WEEK EDITION

ON SUNDAY
APRIL 28, 1985

REALTORS®, real estate professionals who are members of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS®, invite you to observe Private Property Week, April 28-May 4. This weeklong observance reaffirms the rights that come with owning property. For most of us this means a home of our own.

Home ownership ensures a stronger democracy because it disperses decision-making to the individual household. Homeowners tend to put down roots, to become involved in local government processes and to care about what takes place in their community and neighborhood.

The rights that attend home ownership are precious and must never be taken for granted. Rather, they must be protected and preserved for future generations.

Please join us in this year's observance of Private Property Week.

OU, Memphis State to meet in finals

OU's David Johnson (55) and Louisiana Tech's Willie Brand have a tug of war.

DALLAS (AP) — Top-seeded Oklahoma got five good bounces to get into the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball tournament final it is favored to win.

The second-seeded Memphis State Tigers simply went back to the same old script, calling upon guard Andre Turner to hit a last-second jumper for victory.

The two will meet — just like the NCAA Selection Committee figured they would — in Saturday's 1 p.m. final in Reunion Arena.

Oklahoma All-American Wayman Tisdale's game-winning shot against Louisiana Tech Thursday night bounced off the rim five times then fell into the net with two seconds left in overtime to give Oklahoma an 86-84 victory over the Bulldogs in a run-and-gun game.

Turner hit a 17-foot jumper with one second to go for a 59-57 victory over Boston College. Turner has had plenty of practice. He did the same thing from the same distance with five seconds left to beat Alabama-Birmingham in the second round at Houston last Sunday.

Now Oklahoma and Memphis State meet for only the second time in their history. The Tigers took a 69-65 overtime victory against the Sooners last year.

Asked what he thought about Oklahoma, Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk quipped, "I think it's a beautiful song."

Getting serious, Kirk said "I'm a big fan of Wayman Tisdale and he's got some great players with him. They should be ranked where they are. We played them last year and our guys know what to expect."

Tisdale's shot had incredible hang time as it dribbled along the rim.

"It seemed like it took forever to go in," said Tisdale. "I had two men on me and tried to shoot it soft so I would get the bounce. I did a bunch of them."

Tisdale admitted "I thought I'd missed it completely. It was almost on the outside of the rim, but it still went in."

Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said with a laugh, "We designed that last play. How many times did the ball bounce?"

Tisdale scored 23 points including eight in overtime as Oklahoma, the Big Eight Conference champion and No. 1 Midwest seed, increased its record to 31-5.

Karl Malone led Louisiana Tech, 29-3, the Southland Conference champions, with 20 points and 16 rebounds.

William Bedford had a career-high 23 points for Memphis State as All-America Keith Lee got into foul trouble and had only eight points. Stu Primus led Boston College with 14 and Michael Adams added 12. The Tigers, champions of the Metro Conference, are 30-3 while Boston College, sixth place finishers in the Big East Conference, ended the season at 20-11.

"Memphis State did a good job of containing Adams," said BC Coach Gary Williams. "We were trying to get the ball to Michael and lost it. Then Turner hit his game winner."

Midland still alive in JUCO tournament

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Avarian Parrish powered Dixie College into the National Junior College Athletic Association men's basketball championship semifinal round with a 19-point performance Thursday night as the Rebels downed Erie 83-75.

In Thursday's other championship quarterfinal, Midland of Texas routed Allegany of Maryland 79-63. Meanwhile, Highland Park registered a 106-104 win over Ferrum in a game matching up two second round losers.

In Thursday's consolation games, Casper, Wyo. defeated DeKalb-South, Ga., 65-63. Shelby State of Tennessee got past Chattahoochee Valley of Alabama 96-93 and Westark of Arkansas downed Hinds of Mississippi 76-69.

Parrish scored 15 points in the second half as the Rebels, who posted a 45-37 halftime advantage, had to fight off an Erie rally. Erie of New York, 31-5, led off 13 unanswered points early in the second period to trim Dixie's lead to 52-49 with 14:43 to play.

Ricky Henry's jumper at the 2:08 mark gave Dixie a 74-72 lead and the Rebels never trailed thereafter.

Dixie, 33-1, also got 16 points apiece from Dan Bell and Brent Stephenson. Erie was led by Blaine Russell's 23 points.

Midland advanced into the semifinal round using an 11-0 spurt late in the second half to stymie an Allegany rally.

Midland, 31-4, held a slim 34-28 lead at the break and then extended that advantage to 44-30 early in the second period before Allegany trimmed the lead to seven, 61-54, with 6:25 to play.

But Midland then scored the next 11 points to put the game out of reach. The Chapparals, who shot 69 percent from the floor for the game, got 27 points from Teviin Binns.

Allegany, 32-4, was led by William Stuart's 17 points.

Highland Park's win eliminated Ferrum from the tournament.

Vernon Carr paced Highland Park, 40-1, with 33 points, including 21 in the second half when Ferrum threatened to capture the lead.

Lenith Cotton added 21 for the Panthers.

Ferrum, which ended its year 27-6, held a 57-54 halftime lead.

Peewee Barber scored 32 points for Ferrum.

Rick Domonkos hit a layup with three seconds remaining to deliver Casper, Wyo. a 65-63 victory over DeKalb-South, Ga. in a losers' including the school's first invitation to the NCAA playoffs.

Jones, 37, was an assistant coach at Rice before assuming duties at Houston Baptist.

"In my mind he (Gene) is one of the best basketball coaches in the country — and he leaves a very tough act to follow," Jones said.

Jones, a 1969 graduate of Florida State, said his first tasks would be to hire an assistant coach and return to recruiting.

who scored 18, sparked Westark's win over Hinds.

Westark, 34-4, controlled the game and held a 32-25 halftime lead and increased the margin to as many as 17 points, 58-41, with 10:35 left in the game.

Robert Bendolph scored 22 points to lead Hinds, which ended its season at 25-8.

In today's consolation games, Kaskaskia, Ill. plays Shelby, Tenn., while Casper takes on Westark. The winners will meet for seventh place Saturday afternoon.

In winners' bracket games today, Erie faces Allegany, with the winner taking on Highland Park for fifth place. Kanakee and Moberly match up in the other championship semifinal game with the winner advancing to Saturday's title game against the winner of the Dixie-Midland contest.

Rinaldi advances in Virginia Slims Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova is heavily favored to win her second consecutive $500,000 Virginia Slims Tennis Championships, but you can't blame her if she's looking at the past.

Tonight, the No. 1 seed meets her doubles partner, Pam Shriver, in one semifinal at Madison Square Garden. The other semifinal pits third-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia against No. 7 Zina Garrison.

On Thursday, No. 5 Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia and young Kathy Rinaldi grabbed the other semifinal berths, Sukova stopping Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist 6-4, 6-4, and Rinaldi ousting Kathy Jordan 6-1, 6-3.

Navratilova holds a 19-3 career record over Shriver, but two of Shriver's victories have come at the U.S. Open, the last one in 1983.

Mandlikova, who would face Navratilova in the semifinals if the seedings hold, upset the world's No. 1 player in the Virginia Slims of California in January, while Sukova, a possible foe in the title match, halted Navratilova's 74-match winning streak in the Australian Open in December.

Sukova, for one, doesn't want to look that far ahead.

"I'm not there, I'm still in the semis," she said when asked about the possibility of meeting Navratilova in the final.

Sinn leads GNA golf

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — Young Pearl Sinn saw Nancy Lopez, Jan Stephenson and Patty Sheehan headed for the tee and said to herself, "I'm really out here with them."

A few hours later, many of the golfers and the gallery at the LPGA's $250,000 GNA tournament were glancing at the leader board and asking, "Who's Pearl Sinn?"

The 17-year-old high school senior fired a 2-under-par 70 Thursday at Oakmont Country Club, carding birdies on the final two holes, to share the first-round lead with four veterans Stephenson and Barbara Moxness and Atsuko Hikiage of Japan.

Anne-Marie Palli of France and Jane Geddes carded first-round 71s over the 6,328-yard Belmont layout to finish one stroke back of the leaders.

JoAnne Carner was in a group another shot behind at 72, and Lopez was in a seven-player pack at 73.

Sinn is the No. 1 player on the golf team at Bellflower High — the "boys' team" since the school has no girls' team — and is the only amateur in the LPGA tournament.

"I was shocked," Sinn, grinning, said of her opening round in the tournament, just the second pro event she's played.

"I was hoping to go out and shoot maybe two or three above par. 'I'll be nervous tonight," she added. "I was nervous today, though not as much as last week when I qualified for the tournament."

Sinn, who has a two-handicap and is the California state junior women's champion, said her only previous LPGA appearance was in San Diego last year, and she missed the cut.

Jones replaces Iba at Houston Baptist

HOUSTON (AP) — Tommy Jones, an assistant coach at Houston Baptist University for the past six years, has been head basketball coach.

Houston Baptist University athletic director Dr. Ed Billings named Jones Thursday to replace Gene Iba, who resigned Wednesday to become head coach at Baylor University.

Iba led the Huskies of the Trans America Athletic Conference to three straight 20-win seasons,

Bulls slip by Orlando in OT

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Five yards and a cloud of dust. That what Jacksonville running back Mike Rozier did on his average run as the Bulls slipped by the winless Orlando Renegades 34-31 in overtime.

"I really had fun out there tonight," said Rozier, whose 199 yards rushing Thursday night bettered the Bulls' previous single-game record by 102.

"This is a passing offense, but we ran this time," said Rozier, who averaged 5.5 yards per carry on 38 rushes.

Rozier, who ran for three touchdowns and scored another on a 5-yard pass reception, also broke the Bulls' single-game touchdown record of two.

The Bulls acquired Rozier, the 1983 Heisman Trophy winner while at Nebraska, early this year from the now-defunct Pittsburgh Maulers.

"Mike Rozier had a great night. He showed tonight why he won the Heisman Trophy. We did a good job establishing the run, and Mike carried the offense," said Bulls Coach Lindy Infante.

Another hero of the game was kicker Brian Franco, who drilled a 29-yard field goal with 9:17 gone in overtime to give the Bulls their second victory in five games this season.

"I was happy for Brian that he had a chance to kick again," said Infante. Franco had missed a 31-yard field goal attempt with 14 seconds left in the fourth quarter that would have won the game.

Reggie Collier, in his first start at quarterback for Orlando, also ran for four touchdowns, including a 36-yard romp for a score early in the fourth quarter. Collier rushed 18 times for 171 yards and was 14 of 27 passing for 187 yards.

Collier's 15-yard romp with 55 seconds remaining in the game tied it at 31-31, setting up the overtime.

In other USFL games this weekend, Los Angeles will be at Arizona on Saturday night and there are four games scheduled for Sunday: Birmingham at Baltimore, Oakland at Memphis, Portland at Houston and Tampa Bay at New Jersey.

San Antonio is at Denver on Monday night.

The Generals-Bandits game at Giants Stadium will be televised nationally by ABC, the fourth time in five weeks the Generals and their tandem of quarterback Doug Flutie and running back Herschel Walker have been selected for the television game.

That gives Flutie a chance to redeem himself for his horrible day in a 29-9 loss to Baltimore last week on national television. It also is a chance for the Generals, at 2-2 a game behind Birmingham, Memphis and Tampa Bay in the USFL's Eastern Conference, to get back in the race.

The Generals have never beaten Tampa Bay, losing 40-14 to the Bandits last season and 32-9 in 1983, the USFL's initial year. The Bandits are coming off a 23-13 victory over the Arizona Outlaws, and have lost only to Houston 50-28.

This may be the crucial point in the season for the Oakland Invaders, whose 2-1 record puts them in second place in the West behind unbeaten Houston. The Invaders opened with four straight home games and now must go on the road for four straight weeks, starting with Sunday's game in Memphis.

Oakland won a 42-36 shootout from Jacksonville last Sunday as Bobby Hebert threw four touchdown passes.

Rangers pound Twins, 10-2

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP)

Designated hitter Cliff Johnson slugged a game-tying homer in the second inning and ignited a six-run fifth with a two-run single as the Texas Rangers downed Minnesota 10-2 in an exhibition game Thursday.
Johnson, who has limited spring action because of a pulled shoulder muscle and a family funeral, collected his first homer and first RBI as a Ranger blasting a solo shot to deep left center off Minnesota starter Ed Hodge.
Dave Engle had a bases-empty

homer off winner Burt Hooton leading off the second.

Don Slaughter's run-scoring single in the fourth gave Texas a 2-1 lead against a Twins' team of mostly reserves and rookies.

Bill Stein had a two-run homer and Jim Anderson contributed a two-run single in the fifth for the Rangers, 4-6 in exhibition.

Hooton allowed two hits in five innings. Dave Rozema pitched three shutout innings for the Rangers. The Twins, 5-9 this spring, scored their final run off Dave Stewart in the ninth.

Glasson leads Vegas Open

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - Billy Glasson has a set routine after finishing a round of golf on the PGA Tour.

"I go back to the hotel and ice down my knees for about a half hour. Then, if I can walk, I go down for dinner. If I can't walk, I order room service," Glasson said.

Those oft-injured knees, four times the objects of surgery, could be a major factor in the closing rounds of the five-day, 90-hole Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational golf tournament.

"I handle four rounds pretty well," the 24-year-old longshot said after a 68 had enabled him to retain the lead Thursday in the second round of this event that offers a total of $1,042,000 in prize money.

"But five rounds is going to be a pretty good haul for me."

Watson had a 65, 5-under-par, at the Tropicana Country Club, the shortest and easiest of the three desert courses used for this event. Glasson and Watson, who have played different courses, each is 11 under par.
