Replaced local priest won't criticize decision

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A Pampa priest won't quarrel with a man "annointed" by God. Father Joseph Stabile — who will be replaced as priest for St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church at the request of Amarillo Bishop L. T. Matthiesen — won't knock the decision from the administrative and spiritual head of the area diocese. "The bishop is the ultimate pastor of every church in his diocese. We are here to work for him," Stabile said. "We have tried to serve him." "I respect him as the bishop of the diocese, and I believe he is annointed to be bishop by God," the priest said. Matthiesen announced earlier this week that Stabile will leave the Pampa church on June 1. He will be replaced by a priest from the diocese. The bishop said he wants the change because Stabile and his Catholic order don't support the church-run school. Both Stabile and the bishop objected to the words, "order, demand and feud," that were used to describe the scheduled change in priests in a report in Tuesday's Pampa News. Catholic priests and bishops don't have feuds, Stabile said. Differences of opinion, perhaps, but not feuds, he said. "I didn't order his removal," Matthiesen said. "I did ask for a change there." "We worked out the transition in a friendly, amicable way. We have a professional difference of opinion about the day school. There was no demand on my part. I simply asked for a change," Matthiesen said today. But when bishops talk, Catholic clergy listen. And after Matthiesen made the request of Stabile's superior, the head of the Catholic order that has overseen the Pampa church for the past 45 years announced that the order will cease service here. The Vincentians, a worldwide order of priests established in 1625 by French peasant Saint Vincent de Paul, also said they will pull out of the Sacred Heart Church at Canadian. "The reason for this transition from the Vincentians to the diocesan priests revolves around convictions about the parish school. The Bishop has decided to continue the school and wishes to have someone as pastor who will share his convictions," Father Dennis Martin of Houston said in a joint statement with the bishop. Martin, provincial of the Southern Province of the Congregation of the Mission (Vincentians), asked for the local congregation's prayers and for its support of the new priest to be named by the bishop. Church members and the Catholic clergy admit that the decision has "split" the Pampa congregation. Tuesday's story reported that one church member said about 90 percent of the Pampa parishioners support Father Stabile. Nearly a dozen church members called the newspaper to dispute that figure. They said about half approve of the scheduled change in priests, and half don't like it. "It became a center of controversy. It split the parish," Bishop Matthiesen said. "Nobody has done a complete survey, but the majority probably support Father Stabile." "We just have a professional difference of conviction about the school. There is no personal conflict," the bishop added. As he did in his earlier prepared statement, the bishop praised the Pampa priest's service to the church. Stabile, 37, isn't sure of his plans. He said he will be reassigned by his order. The priest sits on the five-member governing body of the order's Southern Province and will help decide his next assignment. "My main concern throughout all of this has been for the people in my parish, whom I've had the joy of pastoring for the last three years," Stabile said. "By and large, the majority of the parishioners have supported the Vincentians and the direction of the church," he said. "I am totally at peace...The hand

GE barred from new contracts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Electric Co. hit with a criminal fraud indictment and asked to refund the government $168 million in "unreasonable profits," has been barred indefinitely from obtaining any new Pentagon contracts. The suspension order against the nation's fourth largest defense contractor was announced Thursday by Air Force Secretary Verne Orr and applies to "future contracting with any agency in the Department of Defense." Orr also disclosed he has asked GE to voluntarily refund roughly $168 million in "unreasonable profits" that Pentagon auditors assert were earned on spare parts contracts between 1978 and 1983. Orr said a similar request involving about $38 million had been made of the Pratt & Whitney Division of the United Technologies Corp.

Both GE and United Technologies disputed the auditors' conclusion that they had earned excessive profits. GE, in a prepared statement, also called its suspension from receiving new contracts "highly unusual."

Citing improvements made since the 1980 incidents that gave rise to the indictment, the company added it was confident it could convince Orr to lift the suspension order "promptly, and on that basis, there should be no significant impact on the company's financial results."

GE was charged on Tuesday by a federal grand jury in Philadelphia with defrauding the government of about $800,000 while performing work on a nuclear warhead missile system. The indictment alleges employee time cards were altered and costs shifted improperly between contracts, and that an employee and former employee lied to the grand jury.

The company has denied any criminal wrongdoing while acknowledging that "charging errors" might have occurred. It has offered to reimburse the government for any improper charges.

According to Jim Turner, a Pentagon spokesman, GE is the largest defense contractor ever to face a suspension on all new contracts. Pentagon officials said earlier this week that GE is also believed to be the largest defense contractor ever charged in a criminal indictment.

Congress steps up pressure for 'trade war' with Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sounding the battle cry for a "trade war" with Japan, Congress is stepping up pressure on the Reagan administration to retaliate unless Tokyo opens new markets for American products. "Unless you get tough, they're not going to respect anything else," Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., said Thursday as the Senate approved 92-0 a non-binding measure urging President Reagan to strike back with tariffs and quotas if Japan doesn't lower trade barriers to U.S. products. Bentsen said the nation was waging a trade war, "and we're losing."

With the wave of get-tough sentiment spreading to the House, the measure's prospects there appeared good, said Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill. "We've got to move ahead," Michel said, adding that tough measures would prompt the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo to "start communicating that the natives are restless." The Senate acted as the Tokyo government announced a 25 percent stepup in auto exports to the U.S. market starting Monday. Industry and labor officials said it could cost 100,000 American jobs and widen Japan's trade surplus over the United States — $37 billion in 1984 — by perhaps $4 billion.

Lefors principal accepts Grandview-Hopkins post

LEFORS - Trustees of the Lefors Independent School District accepted the resignation of elementary school principal Jess Baker during a special meeting Thursday night. Baker has accepted the position of superintendent for the Grandview-Hopkins Independent School District, effective July 1. Baker has been employed with the LISD for 16 years as elementary principal and part-time math teacher. His new position won't require his moving very far, he noted. "I won't move too far," he said, adding his roots are in the Panhandle, where he has lived for more than 50 years. Supt. Jimmy Collins said, "We wish him the best of luck, but we really hate to see him go." The school board also accepted the resignation of Clovis McCrary, coach and teacher. In his letter of resignation, McCrary said he was seeking employment elsewhere. The trustees also approved a job description for the elementary school principal position and approved an administrative application and questionnaire for the principal's position. Supt. Collins said applications for the post will be taken through June 13. In other business at the special called meeting, the board awarded a bid of $6,190 to Hrometz Salvage Co. of Amarillo for the demolition of the old elementary building. Other bidders included Whitney Backhoe Service of Pampa and T. E. Sharp of Amarillo.

Healthy gain for economy now indicated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge gained a healthy 0.7 percent in February, leading the Reagan administration and some private forecasters to predict an upturn in economic activity in the months ahead. The Commerce Department said the February gain in the Index of Leading Indicators followed an even stronger January increase of 1.5 percent, the biggest rise in almost two years. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the new report offered encouragement that current slower growth "will be followed by better performances in the period ahead."

Baldrige said he was "particularly encouraged" by a 48 percent rebound in orders for new plant and equipment during February. He said this was a "sign that capital spending this year will again be a driving force in the economic expansion."

Baldrige said increases in the leading index of 0.5 percent a month would be consistent with the administration's forecast of 4 percent economic growth this year. The index has increased only 0.3 percent on average in each of the last six months.

Michael Evans, head of Evans Economics, a private forecasting firm, said the two healthy gains in the index could be indicating that the slowdown in activity that started last July may have ended in February. "When the March numbers (measuring business activity) start coming out, I think we are going to see some major strength across the board," he said. "We won't get a run-away boom, but we are going to see renewed strength."

The index fell 0.5 percent in December, its fourth decline since last June, when it dropped 0.9 percent, breaking a string of 21 consecutive advances as the economy recovered from the steep 1981-82 recession.

Analysts believe the economy should enjoy generally moderate growth this year, but nothing like the 6.8 percent gain in the gross national product recorded in 1984.

Recurrences prevented

Cancer vaccine encouraging

NEW YORK (AP) — A four-year study of a cancer vaccine made of living tumor cells has shown that it can significantly reduce the recurrence and severity of colorectal cancer, the second leading cancer killer, a new study shows. The vaccine, made from the patient's own tumor cells, is not intended to prevent the cancer, but to reduce the likelihood that it will recur once the principal tumor has been surgically removed, said Dr. Herbert C. Hoover, one of the vaccine's developers. The aim of the vaccine is to energize the body's immune system to seek and destroy bits of tumor that might have broken off and become lodged elsewhere in the body. Hoover, chief of surgical oncology at the State University of New York in Stony Brook, said in a telephone interview Thursday. In the new study, reported in the current issue of the journal Cancer, 20 patients were given the vaccine. Four of them have had recurrences two to four years later, but none have died, Hoover said. In a comparable group of 20 patients not given the vaccine, nine had recurrences and four died. "We're very excited about it," he said, quickly adding that "we need further study." "We don't want people to get the idea we've got a cure for cancer." Encouraged by the results of this study, Hoover and researchers at six other institutions have begun a much larger study under the auspices of what is called the Eastern Cooperative Oncology Group. The scientists hope to study 400 to 500 patients for a period of four or five years to determine with more certainty whether or not the vaccine is helpful, Hoover said. The American Cancer Society estimates that 138,000 Americans will get cancer of the colon or rectum in 1985, and 60,000 will die from the diseases. Dr. Philip Livingston of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, who is working on a vaccine for the skin cancer melanoma, said this is the third study to show some benefit of cancer vaccines. Two previous studies by other researchers showed some success with melanoma vaccines, Livingston said. "These three papers represent a clue that vaccines might have something to offer." Hoover and his principal collaborator, Michael Hanna of the Litton Institute of Applied Biotechnology in Rockville, Md., credit their success, in part, to studying vaccines for eight years in guinea pigs before beginning research with human patients.

of the Lord is in this. I have a tremendous sense of peace and the presence of the Lord. I feel it daily. It has flowed over into the parish," Stable said.

The priest said one good work he has noticed in the Pampa church is the members' turning to God when trouble comes. He said when he came to Pampa, the initial reaction to a controversy often was, "Let's get a petition."

Now, the response is, "Let's get together and pray," he said.

About 200 members did just that Sunday, when the decision was announced.

"To me, that is the best testimony that I have seen in the last three years. They don't need to give me a going-away present. That was present enough," Stable said.

Before starting his interview with a reporter Thursday, the priest prayed for, among other things, truth in what the reporter would write.

"I don't think the congregation is split, but you have differences of opinion. Religion is personal, and people don't like to be challenged for change or growth," Stable said.

The priest came to Pampa to replace Father Francis Hynes, who had served the church on two different assignments for a total of 12 years.

The departing priest said the order's decision to leave Pampa has hurt Father Hynes and the others who have served the church here for 45 years.

But Stable said the parish will continue to prosper under the diocese.

"I'm sure it will all die down, and life will continue as normal. They've changed priests before," he said. "It is the largest parish in

Weather forecast includes chance of snowfall tonight

By The Associated Press

Light rain fell over North Texas early today, while fog and drizzle shrouded central sections of the state and the Golden Triangle area of the Gulf Coast, and much cooler temperatures were expected, with rain turning to snow in the Panhandle.

The forecast called for the possible accumulation of from one to two inches on snow in the Pampa area beginning after midnight tonight.

A polar air mass entered Northwest Texas, shifting winds to the northeast at 10 to 15 mph and lowering temperatures to 49 degrees at Amarillo.

Fog lowered visibility to between 3 and 5 miles from the Balcones Escarpment into the Golden Triangle. Rain fell from Wichita Falls to the Dallas-Fort Worth area, and light showers occurred west of Abilene and San Angelo and north of Pecos.

Home sales show gains in February

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sales of single-family homes climbed 6.2 percent in February following a slight drop the month before, the government reported today.

The increase put sales at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 638,000 in February, compared to a rate of 601,000 in January.

The report by the Commerce Department and the Department of Housing and Urban Development represented a downward revision for sales in January. Originally, the government said sales that month had increased 2.6 percent.

The housing industry experienced a sharp slowdown last spring as interest rates began climbing. Rates peaked in July and have fallen for seven consecutive months, leading to a pickup in home sales.

Fixed-rate conventional mortgages averaged 13.47 percent in early February, down from a high of 15.2 percent in July.

The sales report said the biggest gain last month came in the South, where sales increased 15 percent. Sales were up 1.1 percent in the Northeast and 0 percent in the West.

Sales dropped a sharp 10 percent in the Midwest.

The average price of a home climbed above $100,000 again, hitting $101,300 in February, compared to $97,900 in January.

The median price of a home was $83,100 in February compared to $82,600 in January.

Former mobster ran brothel from a Texas prison cell

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Grand jurors indicted a former New Jersey mobster on charges of organizing and running a Montgomery County house of prostitution from his cell in a Texas prison, authorities said.

Raymond Carl Freda, already sentenced to life in prison for an attempted arson conviction, was served with two indictments Thursday accusing him of engaging in organized criminal activities, sheriff Joe Corley said. Bond was set at $150,000.

Six other people, including Freda's wife, his brother-in-law and a former prison guard, also were named Wednesday in 11 sealed indictments, Corley said.

Freda, also known as Raymond G. Conti, was moved to Houston in the early 1970s under the federal Witness Protection Program after testifying about his ties to the late crime boss Carlo Gambino.

His exploits as an "enforcer" in the Gambino crime family were detailed in the book, "Marked to Die." In the book, he said killing was "the easiest thing in the world to get away with" and likened it to "going to work in the morning or slapping your wife in the mouth when she needs it."

Freda, 51, was linked to an arson ring that Houston authorities believed was responsible for about a dozen fires.

He was indicted as a habitual criminal, convicted of attempted arson at a Houston restaurant and received a life sentence in 1980.

But his criminal activities apparently never stopped, authorities said.

An informant tipped investigators in January that the prostitution house had opened in the area, Corley said.

Freda allegedly operated Foxy Lady Mini Movies through contacts he made with employees at the Texas Department of Corrections' Eastham Unit, about 60 miles north of Conroe, Corley said.

The operation, located about 10 miles north of the Southeast Texas community, was recently renamed Hot Tub No. 1.

District Attorney James Keeshan said investigators allege that Freda helped select the site for the brothel and provided advice on its activities. However, Keeshan said, authorities were uncertain whether Freda benefitted financially from the operation.

Among the suspects arrested was Francisco Olivas, a 23-year-old former prison guard from Trinity alleged to be responsible for the day-to-day operation of Foxy Lady. Olivas was fired in December after prison officials found drugs in his dormitory room.

Freda's wife, Delores Conti, 41; and her brother, Tony Rubino, 35, both of Spring, also were arrested.

White praises PUC official

AUSTIN (AP) — Public Utility Commissioner Peggy Rosson is doing a good job, Gov. Mark White says, denying that he offered any apology for criticism he allegedly directed at her.

"I would be surprised that anybody would believe that I would criticize the finest public utilities commission in the whole United States and certainly not the first housewife to serve on one," White said Thursday.

"That's just ludicrous," he said, responding to allegations from former Texas A&M regents chairman H.R. "Bum" Bright.

Bright has indicated that White criticized Mrs. Rosson during a private meeting in which Bright had complained about White's appointment of "that bomb-throwing woman" to the utility regulating board.

Bright quoted White as replying, "Bum, don't worry about her. I've got her outvoted 2-to-1."

A newspaper Thursday reported that White "sent her a telegram Wednesday apologizing for the incident."

At his weekly news conference, White refused to deny telling Bright that Mrs. Rosson is outvoted by White's two other appointees, but he strongly denied making any apology.

"There's no apology. There's no reason for an apology," he said. "She's doing a good job. I'm very proud of her work."

The governor said he did send a telegram to Mrs. Rosson, describing it as a good-natured message.

"Re: Bum Bright's comments.

As of today, I can probably get the A&M regents to offer you a position in the corps teaching officer candidates how to throw bombs that are always right on target, like you've been doing at the PUC. You do good work. Keep the Bums squirming," the telegram said.

Asked about Bright's version of their meeting, White said, "That's not the way it happened. That was not the circumstances."

On other subjects, White:

— said he won't back down from the no-pass, no-play rule that suspends high school students for extracurricular activities for six weeks if they are failing a course.

"I think the six weeks rule is working well. I think we ought to let the rule work," he said.

— said he could back a congressional proposal to allow states to raise the 55 mph speed limit on some highways.

"I've said all along the 55 mph speed limit has been very burdensome to Texas particularly. The difference between the 55 mph speed limit in New York State is relatively insignificant in (travel) time. When you go out in West Texas, the 55 mph speed limit is significant in the time to journey from one of those towns to the next."

Media aids the politicians

Hardly a day goes by that you don't hear some politician complaining that the news media is attempting to tear down the government of these United States.

Those charges are incredibly stupid.

Almost all of the media in this country are on the government's side.

The politicians, I am sorry to say, could not do the things they do to us without help from newspapers and television.

I was reminded of this again last week.

First, I had the opportunity to read a number of downstate newspapers.

The first one I picked up carried an editorial praising a Texas Senate committee for approving a law that would make it illegal to drive an automobile in Texas without wearing a seat belt.

The second had an editorial saying the open container law was a great thing, but that it should not be aimed only at the drivers of automobiles; passengers should also be prevented from carrying open containers of alcoholic beverages while riding in cars.

The editor of a large newspaper in Texas stood up in an open meeting and berated U.S. Senator Phil Gramm for opposing tax increases.

In The Associated Press newspaper competition, one newspaper won a community service award for helping a school district convince "reluctant voters" to approve a bond issue. Another was recognized for putting pressure on the state to build a road.

And, each night on the evening news, you hear Dan Rather and his crew tut-tutting the Reagan administration for spending too much on defense and not enough to help the poor.

It has never occurred to these media folks that the only person who could be hurt by not wearing a seat belt is the driver, himself, that a passenger in an automobile can't hurt anyone else no matter how many open containers he has in his hand; that reducing spending is, beyond doubt, a more moral approach to cutting deficits than raising taxes; that helping pass a school bond issue might have been a ripoff of taxpayers rather than a community service; and that taking money from others to help the poor is no more moral than taking it for national defense.

The news media, in general, criticizes politicians' actions only when it disagrees with the effectiveness of that action in producing certain results or in benefiting certain elements of society. If the action benefits groups favored by the media, it is usually applauded. If not, it is criticized.

Conservative members of the media generally cheer actions favoring the military or big business and laws restricting personal behavior which they find objectionable.

Liberal members of the media are delighted when government takes money from one segment of society and gives it to people who have less, or when politicians pass laws restricting the activities of businessmen.

But with the exception of Freedom Newspapers, I know of no member of the media that opposes all these examples of government theft and tyranny on strictly moral grounds. Expedience, not morality, is the basis for approval or disapproval by the traditional press.

Indeed, those members of the media who use their muscle for such things as getting bond issues approved or lobbying for restrictive laws are willing participants in that theft and tyranny. It does not bother them, in the first instance, that they help a group wanting a certain thing done to force people who don't want it, nevertheless, to help pay for it. And in the second instance, they are not bothered a bit by forcing their personal views of morality on others.

The traditional media, in fact, are actually an integral part of government and have played a large role in promoting its dominance over citizens.

The implicit acceptance by the media of the use of raw government power as the unquestionably proper way of doing things has helped spawn a docile population that sometimes mutters soft protests, then resignedly accepts as inevitable whatever the politicians decide to do to them, making it most unlikely that citizens of this country will ever be truly free, or even come close to regaining the freedoms we once enjoyed.

Yes, Mr. Politician. It is a bit stupid for you to criticize the media. Without it lending an air of legitimacy to government's power to curtail freedom, you'd probably be out of business.

Kidnapping nets pair life sentences

CLEBURNE, Texas (AP) — Two men are on their way to life terms in prison for abducting a 13-year-old Alvarado girl, but three other people still face aggravated kidnappin charges in the case.

A jury deliberated 2½ hours Thursday before sentencing Michael Lynn Mills and Jame Wesley Foote to life in prison for their role in the 2½-day ordeal that ended in a dramatic chase across several East Texas counties. Foote was also bined $10,000.

Those same jurors took only 20 minutes to convict the pair

Wednesday, and three more people are to stand trial in the abduction of Amy McNeil. Miss McNeil was kidnapped Jan. 11, and the culprits demanded $90,000 ransom from her father.

After three days of waiting, her kidappers fled across East Texas with Miss McNeil in tow, exchanging gunfire with pursuing police.

During the trial, Miss McNeil described how Foote pushed her up against the back window of a car during the running gun battle.

"I tried to get down on the floorboard, but James Foote said that if they saw me, they might stop shooting," Miss McNeil said. "He tried to put me up into the back window."

After a chase of speeds reaching 100 mph, the shootout ended in East Texas with a Texas Ranger and a deputy sheriff racing through a hail of gunfire to rescue the girl.

Miss McNeil told jurors how her kidappers took drugs, stole cars and talked about fleeing to Hawaii with the ransom money. They discussed taking more hostages during their final flight from authorities, she added.

Johnson County District Attorney Dan Boulware said both Foote, 34, of Arlington and Mills, 28, of Dallas have prior felony convictions. Still awaiting trial in the case are Daniel Walter Necke Jr., 21, of Mesquite; George Thomas Barnes, 21, of Dallas; and Lisa Anne Bouvier, 19, of Balch Springs.

All five defendants face additional charges of attempted capital murder in Hopkins County, where they were arrested at the end of the gunfight, and in Titus County.

Two pesticide dealers charged in federal investigation

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Two pesticide dealers and a rice growers' cooperative have been charged with selling farmers restricted pesticides, including one considered as harmful as DDT, officials say.

The charges, filed Thursday, are the first stemming from a federal investigation that began a year ago into illegal pesticide use throughout the rice growing region of Southeast Texas, Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul E. Naman said.

The American Rice Growers Cooperative Association-Anahuac Division allegedly sold Furadan 4F to farmers in April 1984 in violation of federal pesticide regulations, Naman told the Beaumont Enterprise.

The misdemeanor charge claims the co-op sold the compound, originally developed as a nerve gas, so rice farmers could kill birds feeding on their rice seed.

Federal regulations prohibit that use and provide for a maximum $25,000 fine.

Naman also said M&J Fertilizer & Chemical Co., general manager Joe Eddleman of Winnie; and Raymond Hensgens, owner of G and H Seed Co. of Crowley, La., sold the heavily-restricted pesticide aldrin to rice farmers.

The charges said that each sold aldrin for use as a bird killer in violation of federal pesticide laws. Aldrin, banned for all agricultural uses since the late 1970s and similar in structure to DDT, has been called a serious threat to human health and the environment.

A conviction for illegal sale carries a maximum penalty of one year in prison and a $25,000 fine on each count.

Naman, who has supervised the investigation, says a grand jury may consider charges against other pesticide dealers or any rice farmers or if federal officials have found areas contaminated by aldrin.

U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service investigators have said the Southeast Texas probe is a spinoff of a similar, three-year-long investigation in Louisiana that ended last year with the conviction of 10 pesticide dealers.

During that investigation, federal authorities granted several rice farmers immunity from prosecution in return for their testimony.

Environmental Protection Agency spokeswoman Karen Brown has said the evidence of aldrin's threat to human health "was so clear" by late 1974 that the agency banned its production.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The real effect of drug-use laws

Reading a story about crime in Baltimore recently, we were reminded of the popular test to determine whether you are a pessimist or an optimist.

You know how it goes: The pessimist sees a partially-filled glass and says it is half-empty; the optimist sees the identical glass and calls it half-full.

The point is that a single set of facts can yield opposing conclusions, depending on how you look at it.

The story about crime in Baltimore concerned the results of a Temple University study of 354 heroin addicts in Baltimore who in a nine-year period committed and incredible total of 775,000 crimes—about 2,200 crimes each.

U.S. Sen. Paul Hawkins of Florida, listening to the result of the study during a Senate drug-abuse subcommittee hearing, accurately described the addicts as "walking crime machines."

The most frequently-committed crime among the 354 addicts was theft—40 percent of the total. Sale of illegal drugs accounted for 27 percent. Violent crimes were less than 10 percent of the total.

What conclusions can be drawn? Many will find evidence of the evils of drugs and argue for a tougher policy of arresting and punishing drug users.

But is it not equally logical to look at those same startling numbers and find evidence of the evils of drug laws and conclude that we ought to stop making criminals of drug users?

The total amount of crimes committed by those 354 Baltimore addicts would be reduced by 27 percent simply by making drug sales legal.

We could cut heavily into another 40 percent of those crimes by taking drugs off the black market, which would bring down their cost and reduce the user's need for larger amounts of money for a fix.

Legalizing drugs would not, of course, eliminate their potentially tragic effects on individual users.

But if the goal of drug laws is to reduce the amount of drug-related crime—the personal and property crimes committed by users and dealers against non-users and non-dealers—the Baltimore study seems to offer strong evidence that just the opposite is occurring.

Of course, that depends on how you look at it.

The realist looks at the Baltimore study and sees that government's war against individual drug use has created "walking crime machines" that victimize the public. The idealist sees the same results of counterproductive laws and calls for more of the same.

William Rusher

Blunder by conservatives

NEW YORK (NEA) — Three of the ablest young Republican conservatives in the House of Representatives are, with the best of intentions, making a serious mistake in their effort to shape U.S. policy toward South Africa. It is tempting to say they ought to know better, but it would be hard to explain why. None of the three has ever set foot in that complex and fascinating country, and their remedy for its ills is much better designed to score debater's points off Tip O'Neill than to do anything very useful for South Africa's blacks.

This year's big liberal push against South Africa is enshrined in HR1460, a destructive blunderbuss of a bill promoted by liberal Democratic Reps. Stephen Solarz, William Gray and Howard Wolpe. Cosponsored by 105 members of the House, this grotesque mess would ban the sale of Kruggerands, bar American loans and technology sales (including computers) to South Africa, require all American businesses operating there to abide by the "Sullivan principles" (of which more below), compel U.N.

supervised elections in Namibia (South-West Africa), etc. Not surprisingly, Teddy Kennedy and William Proxmire are sponsoring similar legislation in the Senate.

Enter Reps. Robert Walker (Pa.), Newt Gingrich (Ga.) and Vin Weber (Minn.) — three youthful conservatives who have earned a considerable name for themselves making House Speaker Tip O'Neill wish he had retired several years ago. Correctly perceiving that the basic liberal strategy in regard to South Africa is to depict all conservatives as closet racists, they decided to fight that smear by introducing legislation that would prove they were no such thing. HR1460, they declared, went too far, but in its place they offered a bill of their own.

As described in the Washington Post, this measure is a foxy combination of provisions calculated to make liberals wobble back and forth like the poor cat in the adage. It would, for example, direct the U.S. representative on the International Monetary Fund to oppose IMF loans to any country that has an official segregation policy (South Africa — great! think the liberals!) or is involved in international terrorism (the Soviet Union? — well...) or illegal drug trafficking (Cuba? — er...). It would strengthen a ban on importing products made with slave labor (Russia again), and prohibit economic or military assistance to nations that vote against the United States in the United Nations more than 85 percent of the time. Specifically with regard to South Africa, it would deny federal contracts or economic assistance to any U.S. company doing business there that refused to abide by the Sullivan principles.

Now, the Sullivan principles are a basically praiseworthy set of guidelines, first laid down by a black Philadelphia clergyman named Leon Sullivan, under which cooperating American businesses in South Africa promise to provide equal pay and working conditions for their black employees, permit the organization of black unions, and provide housing subsidies and other such amenities for black workers. Despite a recent tendency to bureaucratize too rigidly the enforcement of these requirements, the Sullivan principles have undoubtedly advanced the welfare of black workers in South Africa.

But there are exceptions to every rule (e.g. the John Deere case, in which a tractor company wanted to spend money on retaining black workers on the payroll during a slack period, but could only acquire "points" under the Sullivan principles by laying them off and spending the money on workers' housing instead), and the Walker-Gingrich-Weber bill allows no exceptions whatever.

That's the trouble, gentlemen, with barging into remote and unfamiliar situations. Sitting there inside the Beltway, how can you hope to prescribe detailed remedies for the problems of a social milieu that has baffled lifelong students 8,000 miles closer to its complexities? You simply look foolish; and, worse yet, you are wrong.

City hangs on to its sky

I was so proud of Phoenix, Arizonans early this month!

They were offered $400 million for a piece of their sky and they said no.

Some of us who try to sojourn in Arizona without intruding have watched the population of the Phoenix - Scottsdale metropolplex with trepidation.

Once - lazy Camelback Road, widened to accommodate rush - hour traffic, has become noisier, busier and lined with condos and business buildings where citrus was.

On a windless day the Valley of the Sun is layered with a brown cloud of exhaust - pipe regurgitation.

The bulldozers of developers gouge ugly scars on the steep slopes of local landmark mountains even unto their summits.

And then last year out of the east came a developer named J. Fife Symington III, announcing plans to build an enormous skyscraper at the already busy intersection of Camelback and 24th Street.

He sought zoning for a $400 million hotel, office and residential skyscraper - eight buildings - some as high as 20 stories!

This time local media, local people and local politicians said "no!"

So Mr. Symington sent forth into the community agents promising thousands of jobs if homefolks would sign his petitions.

With a six - month media blitz he spent hundreds of thousands of dollars seeking to convince Phoenixians that more and bigger is better.

Hours before the city council vote, the developer announced that his Esplanade would include a magnificent Ritz - Carlton hotel. That bait had to be tempting to a city that loves lovely hotels.

The campaign culminated in a five - hour telecast debate ventilating the pro and con for all to hear.

And when it was over the mayor and the city council voted - and voted unanimously - "no!"

This time Phoenix said enough is enough.

They told the developer that he can if he wants build at that intersection up to the six - story height of other area architecture - but no more.

The beautiful, fragile Sonoran desert cities will not hold back the dawn, but one city has ceased, at least for now, to profane it.

Always one step behind

Some people say they go through life a dollar short and an hour late. Well — I go through life a victim of obsolescence.

I'm the kind of person who buys my first crock pot six months before all crock-pot manufacturers come out with easy-wash, removable liners.

I may be the last woman in the country still struggling to keep the heating element out of the dishwasher. Yesterday's model works just fine, so I seem unable to pitch it.

Years ago, I began a blue-and-gold color scheme in chairs, sofa and rugs. Every now and then, something needs to be replaced. I once spent weeks looking for a blue chair.

"Oh, heavens no," said a furniture salesperson with obvious scorn. "We haven't had anything in blue for years."

I had a similar experience trying to add to a set of blue-and-white dishes I love. "Oh, my no," I was told, "that pattern came out at least 10 years ago and is long gone."

"But I still have seven plates and six cups," I wailed. Eventually, I found a pattern close enough to mix and match both sets.

I've accused my bed sheets of shrinking ever since we replaced the mattresses several years ago.

None of the fitted bottom sheets fit right anymore. They inch off the corners in the night or start tearing as week after week, I pull and tug to stretch them into place.

Now, at last, the truth has been disclosed. It's not the sheets that are shrinking. It's the mattresses that are growing.

Mattress manufacturers now admit they've been gradually making them thicker. Malcolm Shults, president of the sheet and bedroom-accessory division of J.P. Stevens & Co., has confessed that mattresses today are "beefier and fuller."

In this case, I'm not the only victim stuck with skimpy sheets. Some women are adding elastic bands to the corners to get the needed expansion and others, I have read, apply hair spray to the mattress to keep sheets from slipping while they sleep.

It'll be spring before the sheet makers come out with sheets to fit fat mattresses.

Now it's General Electric that has done me in. When we replaced the mattresses, we also bought an avocado-green refrigerator to match the dishwasher and oven that came with the house.

Unfortunately, the dishwasher is leaking and must be replaced. I thought it would be a simple matter to get the matching color, but oh no, I'm told, GE eliminated avocado from the line four years ago. (I must have bought the last one.)

Standard colors now are almond, sand and black. So, we must pay extra to have the front panel spray-painted to match the rest of the avocado kitchen.

Well — we're thinking of buying our first microwave oven. It'll be just my luck that as soon as I do, there will be some fantastic breakthrough and all food will come table-ready.

Food will be already cooked — just like my goose.

Soccer mascot is being criticized

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Comedian Mario Moreno, better known as "Cantinflas," has offered to resign as mascot of the Mexican national soccer team after his selection sparked criticism, but sports officials here declined to accept his resignation.

"I resign because I don't want my character to be the topic for debate, when what is needed in this moment prior to a great event is that we all should be united," he told reporters.

On March 15, a caricature of Cantinflas was unveiled to great fanfare here as the soccer team's mascot. Since then, criticism has surfaced that the choice presents abroad an outdated image of Mexico and was improper for an athletic team.

Mexico will be the host team for the 1986 World Cup soccer tournament, one of the most intensely watched of any international sports event.

The morning newspaper Excelsior printed an interview recently with sociologist Jacqueline Auramow saying, "Cantinflas is an image of backwardness, represents the underdeveloped classes and it is shameful and degrading that he has been chosen as a symbol for the team."

The Cantinflas character has a trademark pencil-thin moustache. The mascot caricature shows him in the red-green-white uniform of the national team in a kicking stance in front of an oversized soccer ball.

At the unveiling ceremony, leaders of the Mexican Soccer Federation presented the new mascot by saying it was "a character identified with all Mexicans, who represents the struggle and the innocence and the effort with which one reaches triumph."

Moreno said this week, "I understand there are persons who are not in agreement with the choice but I don't agree that it should reach the stage of insult."

However, he also said, "Resigning as the official mascot of the team does not deprive me of my right, as a Mexican, as a friend and as a fan to support and stimulate the members of the team."

In an effort to quiet the criticism, soccer federation President Rafael del Castillo said, "The federation does not accept the resignation because Cantinflas does not belong to Mario Moreno, but rather to Mexico, and we want him to represent soccer here."

For years, Moreno has been a top box office draw throughout Mexico and Latin America in his comic character as Cantinflas, which has been compared to Charlie Chaplin's "Little Tramp" character.

He is best known outside of Latin America for his role as "Spartout, loyal valet to David Niven's Phineas Fogg in "Around the World in 80 Days."

The spat about the mascot developed amid growing attention to the World Cup and preparations for it. The only other team sure of a spot in the 1986 tournament is defending champion Italy from the 1982 World Cup held in Spain.

"Pique," announced last year as the official mascot for the World Cup, received similar criticism when it was unveiled but now appears to be completely accepted by Mexican fans.

Senate gives nod to compromise pesticide bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A compromise bill containing tighter pesticide restrictions, but easing the burden on farmers to personally notify neighbors when they are applying pest control chemicals, has been approved by the Texas Senate.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown said his bill, which was approved Thursday by voice vote and now goes to the House, is intended to ease the notification requirements ordered by Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

Hightower in January enacted pesticide rules requiring personal notification of all neighbors. The Texas Chemical Council and some farmers bitterly opposed the Hightower rules.

Brown's bill calls for three options for notification — through the Texas Department of Agriculture, through private subcontractors hired by the department or personal notification.

An amendment by Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, called for the department to do all prior notification and not allow subcontracting. He said if the department set up the regulations it should do all the enforcing.

But Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said, "Subcontractors are a big pressure relief valve to save the state a lot of money."

The amendment failed 22-7. Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said it was not his objective to relieve Hightower of pressure he has received from farm groups for setting up the regulations.

"The general intent is for the department to work out a program that's not a burden for farmers," he said.

In a written statement, Hightower said, "The bill is the product of meticulous negotiations conducted by Sen. Brown and involving everyone from the Chemical Council to farm workers. The resulting compromise is good public policy, and it will be good for Texas if ultimately approved."

Sarpalius, who has indicated he might run for Hightower's job next year, complained, calling the notification requirements "ridiculous" but said Brown's bill was a "giant step in the right direction."

In other action, the Senate: — Approved, 29-0, and sent to the House, a bill that would establish an optional retirement program for certain employees of institutions of higher education.

— Approved, 29-0, and sent to the House, a bill that would bar cities from prohibiting manufactured homes within the city limits.

House delays vote on day-care bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The chairman of the appropriations committee has persuaded the House to delay action on a bill that would set up a fund aimed at improving the quality of day care.

Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, told the House on Thursday that he did not want to kill the bill, just stall it until after a state budget is written.

"I am not against the bill," said Rudd. "I am against the handling of the money."

Pasadena Rep. Erwin Barton's bill, tentatively approved Wednesday, sets up license fees for day-care centers. Registered family homes would pay $15 a year. Day-care centers would pay $40 per year, plus $1 per child, up to a total of $150.

Rudd wants the money put into the state's general revenue, rather than a dedicated fund.

"We do not have control of it," he said of dedicated funds.

MX approval doesn't mean full deployment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The four decisive votes that rescued the MX missile system for the White House may mark the high-water level for the long-range nuclear weapon and lead to deployment of a far smaller MX force than President Reagan seeks, lawmakers said.

Less than an hour after the House voted 217-210 on Thursday to cement congressional approval of $1.5 billion to buy a second installment of 21 MX missiles, a band of influential Democratic senators proposed to limit deployed, ready-to-fire MXs to no more than 40.

President Reagan proposes a force of 100 MXs, each armed with 10 warheads and backed by 123 spare and test missiles.

A 40-missile fleet would aim 400 nuclear warheads at Soviet targets, a destructive punch large enough to keep the attention of Soviet negotiators at arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, but small enough to avoid setting the nuclear balance on a hair trigger, the senators said.

The size of the force could be adjusted according to progress at the Geneva talks or because of Soviet strategic developments, said Sen. Sam Nunn, leader of a group of Senate Democrats that voted for MX spending when it was approved in two identical 55-45 roll calls last week.

The House voted 219-213 on Tuesday to authorize funds for the 21 MXs. Thursday's vote was to release the money.

The next stage in the controversial 12-year history that has marked MX development will come sometime this summer when Congress decides how to deal with Reagan's request in his military budget for fiscal 1986 for $4 billion to build another 48 MXs.

But many House and Senate leaders said they believe there is no way the total 48 will be approved, especially in a time of high budget deficits.

House Republican Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi said he believes the House "probably will not be prepared at this time to go forward with the full 48."

"I feel very strongly you're not going to get a heck of a lot of money for these MX missiles; they shot their wad today," said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., the ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee.

Gramm TV show creates flap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Freshman Republican Sen. Phil Gramm thought he had found an inexpensive way to communicate with the folks back home, by producing a taped news conference and beaming by satellite to Texas television stations.

But after only one episode, the "Phil Gramm Show" may already be in trouble.

Gramm press secretary Larry Neal asked Washington reporters for Texas news organizations to participate in the first taping, on March 15 in the Senate recording studio. Three agreed to do it.

The cost of the production — $328 — was paid out of Gramm's office expense account, Neal said, considerably less than the cost of the most popular method of "constituent communications" — mass mailings of newsletters.

The office account usually is made up of taxpayer money, but the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee also contributes to Republican senators' office accounts.

This week two Texas newspapers ran stories questioning the ethics of reporters participating in what could be construed as a political promotion for Gramm.

Who pays is apparently the question dogging the reporters. Anytime a senator has a news conference, it can be construed as self-promotion, and most sessions are held in the senator's office, on his "turf." But no political or public funds are used to get the news conference or portions to the television stations back home.

Cragg Hines, the Houston Chronicle's Washington bureau chief, said in a story that ran Thursday that the Chronicle had a policy of not participating in such shows. He quoted Houston Post Washington bureau chief Kathy Lewis, who did have a reporter on the show, as saying the paper might not participate in the future because of concerns about who is paying for the production.

Neal said the participants were assured that the "spontaneous, unrehearsed" and unedited show "would go on, warts and all." He said it was fed to about 25 television stations, plus cable outlets. He said he did not yet know how many used the show.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram

reporter Dave Montgomery said he was "a little balky at first," but was assured by his home office that the paper had no problem with his appearance on the show. He said reporters were able to ask anything they wanted and that he got a good news story out Gramm during the session.

"It was a regular interview show," Montgomery said. "The only thing is it was Gramm's show."

Jack DeVore, press secretary to Texas Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, said Bentsen tried the "canned" press conference many years ago but dropped it soon after because pre-satellite production costs were too great. Bentsen still sends Texas television stations "video press releases," wherein DeVore asks a question and Bentsen answers on tape.

Court reverses ruling lemon car law illegal

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The judge who struck down the Texas "lemon law" covering disputes over poorly made new cars that develop expensive flaws has been reversed by a federal appeals court.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' ruling Thursday gave new life to a law similar to one also adopted by 29 other states to ease the settlement of warranty claims.

Chrysler Corp. in this case challenged the lemon law as unfair because new car dealers would form a majority on commissions set up to resolve disputes, and the interests of dealers conflict with those of a manufacturer.

The three-judge panel said in the ruling:

"We conclude that Chrysler's challenges to the Texas lemon law ought to be directed to the legislature rather than the courts. The statute violates no constitutional rights of automobile manufacturers and is not preempted by federal law."

The Texas Motor Vehicle Commission filed the appeal after U.S. District Judge James R. Nowlin of Austin decided that the lemon law violated the Constitution by denying manufacturers due process.

The name of the law stems from the slang term for a car that rapidly develops serious mechanical problems — a lemon. Passed in 1983, it created a commission, empowered to enforce warranties, for settling complaints by angry owners.

Chrysler argued that dealers have so much financial interest in the outcome of the disputes the result was to deny due process.

Who really pays those federal income taxes?

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — People pay taxes, corporations don't.

The illusion is pervasive, however, appearing even in the Treasury's tax proposals, which superficially would lower personal taxes by about 7 percent while raising business bills 30 percent.

But, Murray Weidenbaum points out, no matter how politically attractive is the notion, the Treasury might have paid more attention to the boss, Ronald Reagan, who observed that business doesn't pay taxes — it collects them.

Business, that is, tends to pass on taxes in its pricing. People are where the buck stops, so to speak, since they do not have the ability, as business or government do, to pass on to others their higher costs.

Well-run companies do it. Poorly run companies do it to an even greater extent, since they have more difficulty in absorbing higher costs of any sort, taxes included, through productivity increases.

The pass-on affect operates more subtly too, according to Weidenbaum, who once served as chairman of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers and who now heads the Center For The Study of American Business.

From his study at the center, based at Washington University in St. Louis, Weidenbaum recently released a paper entitled, of all things, "The Case Against Tax Reform in 1985."

Most people, he agrees, are for tax reform, and that to be against such a popular issue is like making a case against democracy and justice. But, he says, there is a case and it should be presented.

To overburden business in order to lower personal income taxes, he suggests, is to burden the mechanism that makes the jobs and the incomes that keep the economy going, thus making it possible to pay for government.

The Treasury's proposals, he contends, would reduce the incentives for new investment, which is the fuel line to new businesses and more jobs. Among other things, they would lessen the amount of venture capital available.

They would, he continues, substantially raise the tax burden on smaller companies in relation to larger corporate entities. (True, the tax cost might be passed on, but small business would be more disadvantaged relative to big firms).

The proposals also would create uncertainty among business and private investors as to the future tax ground rules for new ventures, contributing in this way also to reduced economic growth and higher unemployment.

In his estimation, the Treasury proposals also would damage the financial position of states and municipalities, and of private non-profit institutions as well.

In short, the proposals might reduce growth and in various ways weaken the economy. And when the economy is weakened, so of course is the ability to raise taxes to pay for the all the things that people want to buy with them.

'Punk' band leads to demonstration

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A demonstration by 300 junior high students protesting a ban on spiked hair, studded bracelets, tattoos, gaudy makeup and shower caps turned into "anarchy" when police moved in and arrested four students.

Susan B. Anthony Junior High School officials agreed late Thursday to meet Monday with student representatives to discuss the ban on "punk" dress that led to the protest that spilled into the street earlier in the day.

Students began with a sit-down demonstration inside the school. Then they moved outside, where many sat in the street, some chanting. "We don't need no dress code."

Police didn't plan to make arrests until some students began blocking the street, banging on school windows, jumping on cars and causing minor damage to property, said juvenile division Lt. Ron Findorff.

"It became a riot and anarchy," said Scott Campbell, an eighth-grader. "We should have just sat."

When police arrived, many youths began screaming and hugging each other or running away. No injuries were reported. About half the students returned to class and the others went "home, to the corner malt shop or wherever," Findorff said.

In letters to parents of the school's 900 students last Friday, principal Rachel Leonard said the administration was banning "dress that is overly conspicuous or overly distracting." Violators faced suspension.

Cited in the letters as examples of inappropriate "punk" or "breaker" dress were spiked hair, studded bracelets and belts, exposed underwear, ripped and torn clothing, tattooed or marked skin, gaudy makeup and shower caps.

In an interview Tuesday, Ms. Leonard said, "The kinds of conversations you can have on this can go on for an hour or two. First Amendment rights and all this. But there's no way I accept that."

"I'll accept one thing, that school is a place to learn and not disrupt the educational process. And that's what I've got to consider."

The two girls and two boys who were arrested were taken to Hennepin County Juvenile Detention Center and released to their parents until authorities could file disorderly conduct charges, Findorff said. Three of those arrested were students at the school; the fourth was from another junior high school.

One of the four, who was using crutches due to an injured foot, said he stumbled and fell to the ground as three police officers subdued and handcuffed him. With his cheek pressed into the ground, the student said, he yelled, "You can't do this."

The boy said he was bruised and scratched as police slammed his face into the ground several times and hit him, according to Jim Gilbert, his attorney.

Minneapolis Police Chief Tony Bouza said his department is investigating allegations of overreaction and police brutality. "Any time you make an arrest with a guy on crutches who doesn't want to be arrested, anything we do we're not going to look professional," Findorff said.

Ms. Leonard blamed the news media for exciting the students.

"Thanks so much for your help," she said sarcastically to reporters. "You have just been beautiful to us. You've fanned this immensely. . . You encouraged students to come out."

Protection for 5 judges is ordered

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The legislature voted early Friday to remove from office five Supreme Court judges for alleged corruption, and President Roberto Suazo Cordova ordered the armed forces commander to protect the judges.

Speaking to the nation on television, the president called the vote "a rupture of the constitutional order" and a "technical coup d'etat."

He said he ordered Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes, the head of the armed forces, to protect the Supreme Court building and the judges, who are chosen by the legislature.

Earlier, rumors of a coup swept the capital, as they have frequently during the past six months.

On Thursday night, Suazo Cordova held an emergency Cabinet meeting. A government minister, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said that the president had discussed with his ministers the possibility of imposing a state of siege within the next few days.

Hijacks airliner - surrenders

LONDON (AP) — A lone hijacker who commandeered a Lufthansa jetliner by claiming to have a gun surrendered to police today after a one-hour siege at Heathrow airport, Scotland Yard and police sources said.

The plane, on a flight from Hamburg, West Germany, to London, was surrounded by police when it arrived in London.

Scotland Yard spokeswoman Frances Walker told The Associated Press that the hijacker "appeared to be mentally ill and did not seem to have any terrorist motive."

None of the 108 passengers aboard the plane were harmed and all were allowed to leave the aircraft after the surrender, officials at Lufthansa's London office said.

She said the man, who was not identified, was not armed. She reported that the hijacker was "a deportee, but we have further information on that at this time or where he may have been deported from."

She said the hijacker was taken off the plane by armed police officers who had ringed the Boeing 737 when it touched down at Heathrow at 9:03 a.m. (4:03 a.m. EST).

NCAA Final Four

Tigers, Wildcats becoming "forgotten two"

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Memphis State and Villanova are rapidly becoming the Forgotten Two of the Final Four.

"Hey, there's two other teams here," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino blurted out Thursday as most of media centered on Saturday's St. John's-Georgetown game.

That one is being talked about as the championship game before the real championship, as though the winner will — as if by divine right — also win the national championship on Monday night.

The experts have said things like that before — for the past two years, in fact. They haven't always been right.

Two years ago in Albuquerque,

N.M., the Houston-Louisville semifinal game was all but conceded to be for the title as well. North Carolina State-Georgia? Well, the winner in that one would be sacrificed to the Cougars or the Cardinals two nights hence.

It didn't work out that way. N.C. State, on Lorenzo Charles' oft-replayed last-second dunk, stunned Houston 54-52.

One year ago in Seattle, Houston beat Virginia in the Saturday night semis and was projected as little more than fodder for Georgetown, which demolished Kentucky in the other semifinal.

It did work out that way. The Hoyas took apart the Cougars 84-75.

Now it's Villanova-Memphis State, given second-class status to the game between Coach Lou Carnesecca's Redmen and John Thompson's defending champion Hoyas.

Massimino's Wildcats, the only unranked team to survive the regionals, weren't even supposed to be here. And, with a 23-10 record, they've got two more losses than the three other Final Four entries combined.

Now the experts figure they won't get past the Tigers. But Massimino gave himself the momentary luxury Thursday of looking ahead to the championship game.

"We played Georgetown great twice," he said of the 52-50 and 57-50 losses. "We played St. John's great twice," losing 76-71 and 70-68. We could beat both of them.

All-Americans featured in NCAA women's final four

AUSTIN (AP) — Four of the 10 Kodak All-American players in women's basketball will display their talents in the NCAA Final Four semifinals tonight.

The Kodak All-American Division I team was announced Thursday, and included three-time choices Cheryl Miller of Southern California and Janet Harris of Georgia.

Harris' teammate, Olympic gold medalist Teresa Edwards, Medina Dixon of Old Dominion, and Eun Jung Lee of Northeast Louisiana are the other All-Americans in the NCAA women's basketball tournament.

Also making the All-America team were Anucha Browne, Northwestern; Sheila Collins, Tennessee; Kirsten Cummings, California State-Long Beach; Pam Gant, Louisiana Tech; and Kamie Ethridge, Texas.

The all-star squad was selected by a committee of nine coaches from the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

Miller, a 6-foot-2 junior, averaged 27 points and 17 rebounds a game this season, but this is the first year she has not led her team to the national championship.

The 6-3 Harris is the all-time scoring leader for Georgia — male or female — with 2,616 career points. Edwards holds the school record for career assists with 470 in three years.

Dixon, who led her team in eight offensive categories, is considered the most complete player at Old Dominion since Nancy Lieberman. She is one of 14 children, and her brother Zachary, is a running back for the Seattle Seahawks.

As a teen-ager, Dixon played pickup games with boys, including 7-0 Patrick Ewing of Georgetown.

Lee, 5-foot-6, is from Seoul, Korea, and Northeast Louisiana Coach Linda Harper said she tells her other players to "just run, run, run and look for the ball. Because, without a doubt, E.J. is one of the best fast-break guards in women's basketball."

Coach Marianne Stanley of No. 5 Old Dominion, which plays No. 2-ranked Northeast Louisiana in the semifinals, said of Lee, "One-on-one, in an open court, she's going to make you look silly."

The WBCA said Ethridge, the shortest Kodak All-American at 5-5, is known as "The Brat" because of "all-out, no-nonsense, hard-nosed approach to the game."

Ethridge's Texas team was ranked No. 1 in women's basketball when it was upset by Western Kentucky 92-90 in regionals last week.

Western Kentucky, No. 14, will play eighth-ranked Georgia in the second semifinal game tonight. The championship game is Sunday.

Here is an alphabetical list of the Kodak All-American women's basketball players, with classification, school and hometown:

Anucha Browne, Sr., Northwestern, Brooklyn, N.Y.
Sheila Collins, Sr., Tennessee, Colbert, Ga.
Kirsten Cummings, Sr., California State-Long Beach, San Diego, Calif.
Medina Dixon, Sr., Old Dominion, Boston, Mass.
Teresa Edwards, Jr., Georgia, Cairo, Ga.
Kamie Ethridge, Jr., Texas, Lubbock, Texas.
Pam Gant, Sr., Louisiana Tech, Joliet, Ill.
Janet Harris, Sr., Georgia, Chicago, Ill.
Eun Jung Lee, Jr., Northeast Louisiana, Seoul, South Korea.
Cheryl Miller, Jr., Southern California, Riverside, Calif.

Baseball roundup

Mets picked to win NL East title

By Murray Olderman

The magic wand switches in the National League East this season from Wrigley Field to Shea Stadium.

NEW YORK (90-72 in '84), which lost in the stretch last fall, has added just enough artillery to let the Mets slip past the Chicago Cubs this time.

"Just enough" means Gary Carter, the highest-paid catcher in baseball — a superstar who plugs what had been this young club's major weakness. Besides handling the youngest, strongest pitching staff in the game, he's a mighty contributor at bat, always good for at least 30 home runs and 100 RBIs.

He complements a slugging crew of Keith Hernandez and young Darryl Strawberry from the left side and aging George Foster on the right. If Ray Knight recovers his long ball proclivity, the Mets could terrorize pitching.

Speaking of pitchers, they have merely the most spectacular young hurler in baseball, strikeout king Dwight Gooden. Ron Darling, another sophomore, has shown he can win, as will Sid Fernandez if he can control his appetite. Another impressive fireballer is Bruce Berenyi, the antique of the staff at 30. The bullpen is manned by a fine lefty-righty combo of Jesse Orosco and Doug Sisk.

CHICAGO (96-65) can repeat as NL East champs if Rick Sutcliffe and Ryne Sandberg show that last year's performance was the norm. Sutcliffe, 16-1, won the Cy Young Award; Sandberg was the National League's MVP.

The heavy batting artillery comes from first baseman Leon Durham, third baseman Ron Cey and catcher Jody Davis. Gary Matthews had an off year, but supplied leadership. The big change may be at shortstop, where Shawon Dunston, a touted rookie, gets a chance to displace 39-year-old Larry Bowa.

PITTSBURGH (75-87) is my choice for a surprise challenge because the Bucs have solid pitching and have made some alterations in their offense.

Examine that pitching: a terrific right-left tandem of Rick Rhoden and John Candelaria; Larry McWilliams, coming off a strong '84 finish; and Jose DeLeon, who has sensational stuff if he can get it under control. The bullpen needs a return to form by Kent Tekulve.

The Pirates imported veteran outfielders George Hendrick, Steve Kemp and Sixto Lezcano. Two of them will surround whipper-quick center fielder Marvell Wynne.

The right side of the infield is A-OK — with long-ball hitting Jason Thompson at first and Johnny Ray, who had a big year (.312) at second. The left side is chaos unless Bill Madlock, who slumped to .253 with shoulder and elbow miseries, regains his touch.

ST. LOUIS (84-78) also made a major move in the outfield by getting Jack Clark from San Francisco. He's usually good for 100 RBIs (tops on the team last year was 69 by the departed Hendrick).

But what's Cardinals skipper Whitey Herzog going to do about the defection via free agency of Bruce Sutter, who alone saved 45 games last year? Neil Allen, the former Met, has to take up the slack. The quality of starters drops off drastically after Joaquin Andujar, who came back impressively in '84 to win 20 games, and newcomer John Tudor.

PHILADELPHIA (81-81) has been turned over to manager John Felske, a Phillies organization product. He faces several unsettled situations: at first, at shortstop (young Steve Jeltz gets a shot), and in the outfield, where somebody must team with Jeff Stone and improving Von Hayes.

Ossie Virgil is the definite catching choice over Bo Diaz. Juan Samuel was unbelievable running and hitting as a rookie, but his glove is in tatters.

Of course, Mike Schmidt, even at 35, has no peers at third base or hitting home runs (he tied again for the league lead).

The bloom is off the Expos in MONTREAL (78-83). New field leader Buck Rodgers finds himself with a major rebuilding job. Who can imagine a Montreal team without effervescent Gary Carter behind the plate?

Other big names remain, but except for Tim Lincecum, who became a million-dollar salary earner, they're flamed. Andre Dawson can no longer play center because of bad knees,

Showboats take on Bandits

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Coach Pepper Rodgers of the USFL's Memphis Showboats has plenty to worry about as his team goes up against the Tampa Bay Bandits.

First there's the matter of the Showboats' punter's big toe.

Then there's Bandits' quarterback John Reaves. And there's the problem of the Bandits' running back Gary Anderson.

And if he wants to, Rodgers could chew his nails over Tampa Bay's wide receiver, Eric Truvillion.

The Showboats, 3-2, after two straight losses, took a look at former New Jersey punter Bob Grupp on Thursday.

If Rodgers liked what he saw, Grupp could be in a Memphis uniform tonight, replacing Jim Miller.

Miller has a swollen big toe on his right (kicking) foot after jamming his toe on an opposing lineman's helmet during a hurried punt in Sunday's 31-19 loss to Oakland.

That was only one of the negative things that happened Sunday.

"Of all the games we've played this year, I can't ever remember us playing any worse than we did against Oakland," Rodgers said this week. "We didn't make anything happen on offense or defense."

Among other things, the Showboats' special teams have been working on kickoff returns this week.

Rodgers, who failed to show much excitement when the Showboats opened their second USFL season with three straight victories, isn't expecting an easy time of it when the Bandits arrive in Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium for the nationally televised (ESPN) game.

The Bandits, who also have a 3-2 record, lost to New Jersey 28-24 last week.

"We blew a 10-point lead with less than seven minutes remaining in that game," Bandit Coach Steve Spurrier said. "I would like to think that won't happen in Memphis."

Rodgers is looking for trouble from the Bandits' Reaves, who was 20-39 for 410 yards and a touchdown last week against New Jersey.

Anderson, a former Arkansas player, leads the Eastern Conference with 451 yards and a 5.1 yards-per-carry average. He has also scored seven touchdowns.

And the Tampa Bay passing attack relies on Truvillion, who has caught 28 passes for 439 yards and a 15.7-yards-per-catch average.

In Saturday night's games, Jacksonville visits Birmingham and New Jersey is at Arizona. On Sunday, it's Baltimore at Houston, Orlando at Denver and Oakland at Los Angeles. San Antonio plays at Portland Monday night.

Both Jacksonville, 2-3, and Birmingham, 4-1, are coming off close victories.

Basketball scouting

How the NBA rates top college stars

ATLANTA (NEA) — Marty Blake is the ultimate basketball expert. Professional football is replete with scouting combines. Bird dogs for each of the 26 major-league baseball teams fan out all over the country.

In the National Basketball Association, one man acts as the conduit of information for the entire game. That's Marty. He provides the NBA with scouting reports that go to all 24 teams in the league.

A national sports magazine, naming the most influential men in sports, once wrote, "If Marty Blake doesn't like you, you better sell your shorts."

If Marty never heard of you in uniform, you just don't exist.

He operates out of a four-room suite in an sprawling office park in Atlanta. It's called Marty Blake and Associates — and it is in the direct employ of the NBA. The "Associates" is one other guy.

In his other basketball life, when Marty was general manager for the St. Louis Hawks, he picked as the third man in the 1962 NBA draft a center named Zelmo Beatty. "Nobody ever heard of him," says Marty, "or his school, Prairie View A&M." Zelmo was a productive pro for more than a decade.

More recently, Marty, in his current life as a super-scout, recommended a 6-foot-11 center from a little school called Illinois Wesleyan. And Seattle now pays Jack Sikma a million-plus dollars a year.

Currently, Blake reports on each NCAA Division I college basketball school — there are 282 of them — listing all the prospects, including underclassmen. The players are graded. During the season, a rating sheet is issued twice monthly on the top seniors.

"Then we have our 40 sub-scouts, or stringers, try to eliminate players on the master list," explains Marty.

"so that the clubs don't waste a lot of time going to some remote place to see some kid we're not sure of."

In addition to charts and personnel files on college teams, he puts out a 150-page book at the end of the season, providing a breakdown of the top players. He also scouts the Continental Basketball Association and foreign teams.

Marty doesn't do this sitting in an office.

"I personally see all the good players," says Marty. "And I'm involved in the selection process for most of the post-season tournaments. I select the players for the Basketball Hall of Fame game in Indianapolis April 27. This year, Bob Knight (Indiana) and Dean Smith (North Carolina) are the coaches."

Marty came to pro basketball as a promotional dynamo out of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., more than 30 years ago. As a 12-year-old kid, he used to hitchhike to keep score for a semi-pro team called the Wilkes-Barre Barons. He later did promotion for Sugar Ray Robinson, worked for the New York Giants (baseball) and promoted boxing in the Wilkes-Barre area.

He got his real start with Bill Vecek and the Cleveland Indians as a "go-for" and lasted five years. When Vecek sold the Indians, Marty went back to finish college.

Next he started an independent minor-league baseball team in Wilkes-Barre. To boost attendance, he brought in the Harlem Globetrotters one night and attracted 12,000 fans to a stadium that sat 8,000. Ben Kerner, the owner of the Milwaukee Hawks of the NBA happened to be there. So was Mendy Rudolph, an NBA referee who was Marty's hometown buddy. He introduced Blake to Kerner, who hired him for the Hawks.

This was in August 1954. His first day on the job, Marty met Red Holzman, who was the coach. "I'd like to meet the rest of the staff," he said to had ever scouted. I was the first one to come up with card files and reports on players.

"There is no such thing as a bad draft. It's a bad draft only if you don't have a first-rounder. It's a good draft this year for anybody that gets the first pick."

— Marty Blake

Red Holzman took him to a mirror. "Look," said Red. "You are the staff."

Blake moved with the Hawks to St. Louis as GM — and ultimately to Atlanta. He quit in 1970. He explains, "They wouldn't upgrade the salaries for other players after we made a deal for Pete Maravich."

Marty became president of Pittsburgh of the ABA, which was expecting to merge with the NBA. The merger fell through. Marty refused to cut expenses and was fired.

He returned to Atlanta and started his own consulting office, which evolved into the present scouting service.

"When I first joined the Hawks in '54," he recalls, "I found that nobody

"The first time I ever went scouting, I took a bus to Fort Leonard Wood in Missouri to see Al Bianchi and Sam Jones play when they were in the service." (Jones, who progressed to stardom with the Boston Celtics, landed in the Hall of Fame.)

Now scouts for the individual teams in the NBA go to see the players that Blake designates.

"There is no such thing as a bad draft," says Marty. "It's a bad draft only if you don't have a first-rounder. It's a good draft this year for anybody that gets the first pick."

That will be Patrick Ewing of Georgetown, whom Marty Blake calls "the only impact player" in the class of '85.

Cavaliers clobber Bulls

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer
The Cleveland Cavaliers, who haven't seen postseason action since 1978, already are feeling playoff pressure with less than 10 games left in the regular season.

"I want to play after April 14 and I don't care who it is," Coach George Karl said Thursday night after Cleveland beat the Chicago Bulls 122-114 in a National Basketball Association game.

"This was a big game and it seems now like they're all playoff games," said John Bagley, who hit 8-of-10 shots and had 18 points and 12 assists for the Cavaliers. "This will help us get used to the pressure when we get there."

The victory gave Cleveland, which was 2-19 early in the season, a 30-43 record, one game ahead of the Atlanta Hawks in the battle for the Eastern Conference's final playoff berth.

World B. Free scored 23 of his 32 points for Cleveland in the second half and helped hold rookie Michael Jordan to 2-of-11 shooting in the last two periods. Jordan, who was 9-for-14 in the first half, finished with 35 points.

In other NBA games, Milwaukee tripped New York 121-116. Denver bombed Kansas City 133-115 and the Los Angeles Clippers beat Phoenix 116-110.

Nuggets 133, Kings 115
Denver extended its Midwest Division lead to five games over Houston as Calvin Natt and Alex English scored 32 points each against Kansas City.

The Nuggets, who won their 19th straight home game, led 68-56 at halftime, but the Kings cut the deficit to 107-101 midway through the fourth period. But consecutive baskets by English helped Denver rebuild its advantage to 116-105.

Kansas City was led by Reggie

Theus with 32 points and LaSalle Thompson with 20 points and 17 rebounds.

Bucks 121, Knicks 116
Milwaukee, which already has clinched the Central Division, got 25 points on 11-of-12 shooting from Paul Pressey and strong reserve performances to take up the slack for five injured teammates.

Paul Mokeski scored a career-high 21 points and Randy Breuer 17.

Best picks in the Class of '85

FORWARDS: "You have Keith Lee (Memphis State), who eventually could be an 'impact' player; Lorenzo Charles (North Carolina State), and Detlef Schrempf, an excellent player from Washington."

GUARDS: Sam Vincent of Michigan State ("probably the best small guard"); Joe Dumars of McNeese State ("the potential to be another Andrew Toney"); Charley Bradley, Marty Blake, the one-man scouting combine for the NBA, picks the following collegians as the prize seniors in the 1985 draft:

CENTERS: Patrick Ewing, Georgetown; Bill Wennington, St. John's; Jon Koncak, SMU; Joe Kleine, Arkansas; Uwe Blab, Indiana. "They will all go in the first round. Maybe Nick Vanos, a 7-2 center for Santa Clara, too."

South Florida; Gerald Wilkins, Tennessee-Chattanooga; Adrian Branch, Maryland. "Branch, Wilkins and Bradley can play two positions. I also like Ed Pinckney of Villanova and A.C. Green of Oregon State at forward. And there's Alfredrick Hughes of Loyola. He has great potential. They call him Friedrich the Great." It is noted that such as Chris Mullin of St. John's and Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale are not included. "Oh," says Marty, "Mullin is automatic behind Ewing. Tisdale is an undergraduate. I don't discuss undergraduates."

His '85 All-America center? Says Marty: "Ewing at center. Mullin at one guard. Joe Dumars of McNeese State at the other guard. Tisdale at one forward. Keith Lee at the other."

Tulane players testify; another player arrested

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The testimony of two Tulane basketball players before an Orleans Parish grand jury "amplified" his investigation of possible game fixing, says District Attorney Harry Connick.

But after the first day of the grand jury session Thursday, Connick said his investigators have not yet determined the scope of the gambling allegations.

"We don't have that yet," Connick said. "But it's naive not to conclude that somebody's betting on those games, and when you have gambling involved you have out-of-town folks involved. So that could be the case."

Clyde Eads, 22, a starting senior from Tampa, Fla., and Jon Johnson, 22, a starting senior from Columbus, Ga., testified Thursday for about one hour each.

The Times-Picayune, the States-Item quoted sources as saying the two had been given immunity in exchange for their testimony.

Since Tuesday night, Connick's investigators have arrested three Tulane basketball players and two students who are not team members.

Coach Ned Fowler and eight other players were at the courthouse, but they did not testify.

The eight teammates, under subpoena, were told to return next Thursday. Fowler's lawyer said the coach was told he will be rescheduled for a later appearance.

The only members of the team not at the courthouse Thursday were the three players booked on gambling law violations earlier this week.

Mark Olensky, 21, a senior from Fair Lawn, N.J., who is not a member of the team, surrendered Thursday and was booked on two counts of bribery of sports participants, Connick's office said.

Olensky also was booked on charges of conspiracy to bribe and conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Green Wave star John Williams, 23, a 6-foot-10 all-conference center, was arrested Tuesday night at his Sorrento home. He has denied any wrongdoing.

On Wednesday, sophomore swingman David Dominique of New Iberia, La., and senior guard Bobby Thompson of New Orleans surrendered to officers.

Williams, Thompson and Dominique are accused of shaving points — either winning by a lower margin or losing by a larger margin than the established "line" on the game.

Official wins lawsuit

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Big Ten Conference referee Jim Bain feels a verdict that his privacy had been invaded by a T-shirt showing him with a rope around his neck was a victory for basketball referees everywhere. Bain's lawyer said.

"He (Bain) feels especially good about the impact of this verdict as far as officials are concerned. It (the verdict) says officials do have rights and people in Johnson County recognized those rights and felt they should be safeguarded," Bain's lawyer, David Dutton, said Thursday afternoon.

A Johnson County District Court jury deliberated for 11 hours before finding Iowa City T-shirt printer John Gillispie guilty of invading Bain's privacy by appropriating his name and likeness and by publicly displaying him in a false light.

The three-man, five-woman panel awarded Bain $12,300 in damages, including $1,230 for profits from the T-shirts, $1,000 for loss of privacy, $5,000 for emotional distress and $5,000 in punitive damages.

Jury Foreman Howard Mayer said the jurors found Gillispie innocent on a separate charge of libel because they did not believe Gillispie showed malice when he created the T-shirts showing a sweating, red-faced Bain blowing a whistle and wearing what appeared to be a noose around his neck.

Bain himself was en route to a speaking engagement Thursday afternoon, when the verdict came in and was not available for comment.

Gillispie also was out of town when the verdict came in, but his lawyer, Jay Honohan, said he was "disappointed" with the verdict.

Flamingo race this weekend

Chief's Crown, who has been living off his 1984 reputation, and Proud Truth, who has built a reputation this year, will clash in the $265,000-guaranteed Flamingo at Hialeah, which is a major stepping stone to the Kentucky Derby.

Six other 3-year-olds, including Stephan's Odyssey, were entered Thursday for the 1-8-mile Flamingo. Chief's Crown, Proud Truth and Stephan's Odyssey, 122 pounds each, and Alfred and Now I Can, 118 apiece, are nominated for the 1 1/4-mile Derby May 4 at Churchill Downs.

There will be three other rich Derby Preps over the weekend — the 1-16-mile, $100,000-added Rebel at Oaklawn Park Saturday and the 1 1/4-mile, $200,000-guaranteed Louisiana Derby at the New Orleans Fair Grounds and 1 1/4-mile, $300,000-added Jim Beam at Latonia. Entries for these races were to be taken today.

Star Crown Stable's Chief's Crown, the 1984 2-year-old champion, who is trained by Roger Laurin, has raced only once this year, winning the seven-furlong Swale at Gulfstream Park March 2, the day Proud Truth won the 1 1/4-mile Florida Derby.

Defending yourself depends on circumstances, and law

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

A "Lone Ranger" in Los Angeles broke up a robbery and killed an armed thug. A plumber in Chicago, confronted by youths with a knife and a gun, drew his own gun. A New Yorker shot four people on a subway train.

Each claims he acted in self-defense. It doesn't always hold up.

If you started the fight, if you're where you have no right to be, if you could back away, or if you could protect yourself with less than deadly force — then your right to shoot someone else may depend on what state you live in.

Ultimately, it may depend on the sympathies of a jury.

In general, according to Frederic and Joan Baum in their book "Law of Self-Defense," a person claiming to act in self-defense:

- Must not have started the fight or continued it after the attacker was ready to give up.
- Must honestly believe that he or she is in imminent danger of death, serious injury or some serious crime such as rape or arson, and must honestly believe that nothing less than deadly force is sufficient.

— Must have a reasonable basis for that belief.

In some states, you must retreat as far as you safely can before firing.

In short, it can get very complicated. The Baums, however, also note this observation in a Supreme Court opinion by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes: "Detached reflection cannot be demanded in the presence of an uplifted knife."

Juries in New York state are often instructed to consider what they would have done if they had been the defendant.

In the case of Bernhard Goetz, New York's "subway gunman" who was indicted Wednesday on four counts of attempted murder, a crucial question is whether he reasonably believed four youths were about to attack him.

Three other men who claimed self-defense gained national attention at about the same time as the Goetz case, but quickly dropped from the headlines.

— Cornell Smith, 69, of Los Angeles, was sitting in his truck at Tam's hamburger stand on Dec. 9 when he saw two men robbing a customer. Smith grabbed his pistol and yelled, "Don't do it," said LAPD Detective Tony Sanchez. "One of the men turned and it looked like he was going to shoot, so Smith shot him."

Smith disappeared "like the Lone Ranger," police said, but he surrendered several days later. He was not charged.

"He was stopping a robbery," said Deputy District Attorney Robert Lord.

In California that justified using deadly force, Lord said, because robbery is "an inherently dangerous felony."

— Harold Brown, 66, was toting his groceries on a Chicago street on Jan. 17 when he was confronted by two youths. One showed him a knife, the other put a gun in his ear. Brown pulled his own gun and fatally wounded 18-year-old Detrick Wallace.

"I didn't have any choice," Brown said after turning himself in three days after the incident. The police agreed.

— Thomas Korshak, 81, and his wife were confronted by a robber in an elevator in Beverly Hills on New Year's Eve. The robber kept his hand in a jacket pocket, as if he had a gun. Korshak pulled a .38-caliber revolver and shot the man three times. The robber did not have a gun, but that made no difference. Korshak was only charged with a misdemeanor for carrying a loaded firearm in public and was placed on probation.

A New Jersey case illustrates that shooting back is only a temporary right.

Manuel Marin was charged with two felony counts of aggravated assault for shooting at two burglars on Dec. 8, 1981. He found the burglars in his kitchen, and they ran as Marin fired one shot. Marin moved to a window and fired two more rounds as the screaming burglars ran for their car.

"I can appreciate the public's reaction: 'My home is my castle and I can do what I want,'" county Prosecutor Kenneth Pagliughi said in defending the grand jury indictment.

Authorities said, however, that Marin had no right to fire the last two shots, when the burglars represented no further threat to him or his home.

Marin was placed in a special program for first offenders, in which he admitted no guilt and did not go to trial.

The limits of self-defense became an issue in Nebraska in 1969, with the enactment of a sweeping law which permitted residents to use any degree of force to protect themselves, their family and their property. Critics called it the "shoot your neighbor" law.

In January 1971, the Nebraska Supreme Court invalidated the law, saying it surrendered the state's power of punishment to anyone who happened to have a weapon.

Tuition hike said to reduce foreign students numbers

AUSTIN (AP) — Tuition increases being considered by the Legislature would force many foreign students to return home and reduce the cultural diversity of the University of Texas, a campus rally was told.

The speakers Wednesday urged the Legislature to approve a more gradual increase than now being considered, or include a "grandfather clause" to exempt current students.

"We do not oppose tuition increases as such. We oppose this outrageous and sudden increase," said Peter Mo of the Hong Kong Students Association.

Nineteen international student groups at UT sponsored the rally, which UT police said was attended by 500 people.

A bill passed last week by the Texas House would increase out-of-state tuition at state universities from $40 an hour to $120 next fall and to $180 an hour in 1986-87.

The bill would increase tuition for Texas residents from $4 to $8 next fall and $14 in 1986-87, with further increases of $2 a year.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

NEW HAMPSHIRE seems to have another "resting" place for many of our ancestors. It was easy to travel the Connecticut River rather than try to cut roads through the wilderness and many settlers decided to move in that direction.

New Hampshire, in its early period, was settled primarily by the English with many of the people landing in Massachusetts first. Copies of all the vital records, some dating back to 1640 have been made and can be searched for a fee at the office of the Registrar of Vital Statistics, State House, Concord, N.H., 03303.

Almost all of the towns have town histories as well as the county histories for each of the 10 counties. Towns have cemetery superintendents and many have excellent cemetery records. By combining the histories with the probate records and cemetery data, one can often get an accurate picture of the first families in that area.

Along with the federal census, New Hampshire has colony census for 1732 and 1776 and various resident census covering 1633-1699.

Boundary disputes, especially with Massachusetts and New York, were common until 1764. For this reason, it is necessary to check those states when a border county might be the home of the ancestor. Essex County, Mass., has numerous records pertaining to residents of Rockingham County, N.H.

Remember, now is the time to advertise your family reunion scheduled for the summer. Send the information to me and as with queries, it will be included free in a future column. Gena Walls, 11507 Brookledge Dr., Houston, 77099.

Dear Abby

Mom tells son: motel's bath towels don't belong at home

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My 17-year-old son and several of his buddies went on a skiing trip, after which I found two bath towels with the name of a motel on them.

I told him I couldn't believe that he would steal. He said he didn't consider that stealing—the owners of the motel were thieves because of the prices they charged.

I told him that nobody forced him to stay there, and in my eyes he was guilty of stealing.

Please print your opinion, Abby. He reads you faithfully.

OLD-FASHIONED MOM

DEAR MOM: Your son's rationalization for stealing bath towels from a motel doesn't wash.

Don't throw in the towels. Insist that your son send them back with an apology. (That's what my twin and I had to do when our father found some hotel "souvenirs," acquired after a football excursion to Sioux Falls, S.D., circa 1935.)

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for 14 years. This is the second marriage for both of us.

My husband lies awake nights yearning for another woman. He actually tells me this! Although he told me that he went to bed with her only once, he won't tell me who she is. He says I know her. My hunch is that it's a woman at our club who boasts that she and her husband have an open marriage. I did not agree to an open marriage when I married this man.

When I found out my first husband was the town stud, I divorced him.

My present husband insists that he wants to keep our marriage intact. He can't have it both ways. What do you think?

NOT WILLING TO SHARE

DEAR NOT WILLING: Your husband really knows how to hurt a woman. Why are you holding still for his abuse? You say he can't have it both ways. I say, apparently he can. And has.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have retired to a wonderful community in a warm climate. We love people and have always been able to get along with our neighbors, but there is one couple who are making our lives miserable. He is very crude, swears, hogs the conversation and is an insufferable braggart! His wife is a non-stop talker and a terrible gossip. We have lied to them in order to get out of going to their house, but we cannot keep them from coming to ours.

When we have company, they see the cars in our driveway and come over to join us and our guests. When they are around, no one can get a word in—he takes over the conversation in a loud voice, bragging about what he has, what he does and what he spends. Everything he has is better than anyone else's, and he gets into noisy arguments with our guests.

We have never met anyone like this couple. What can we do? We hate to insult them, but how else can we get these people out of our lives? They know who they are, but don't mention our name or town.

OUT OF PATIENCE

DEAR OUT: The next time they appear at the door while you're entertaining, say, "I'm sorry I can't invite you in now; we have company." And if they never speak to you again, what have you lost? Two overbearing, intrusive, obnoxious, insensitive neighbors.

Photography show begins today

Eleven area photographers will be exhibiting their art at the annual photography show in the Pampa Mall today and Saturday.

The exhibits, sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, will be on display in the mall until 9 p.m. today and from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. tomorrow.

"Last year's show was a tremendous success and we look forward to an equally good show this year," said Dan Snider, show chairman.

"Photography is one of those arts that is fast gaining acceptance through the U.S., and Pampa has many fine artists involved in this media whose works we are very pleased to present this weekend," Snider stated.

Snider said he hopes more people will develop an interest in photography and contact the PFAA so their works can be displayed in next year's show.

The photographers participating in this year's show represent a variety of backgrounds.

Frank Anderson, a photography and math teacher at Pampa Middle School, uses photography as a hobby and as a second job, since he specializes in weddings, anniversaries, banquets and proms. This is his third year with the PFAA show.

Don Case, a salesman for Frito Lay, specializes in outdoor and wildlife shots. He is back in the show after a year's absence, Snider noted.

Tom Dout is a newcomer to the photography show. He works for Ingersoll-Rand and relaxes with photography.

James W. Edminster is another newcomer. Retired from Cabot

Research and Development, Edminster can now pursue photography as a fulltime hobby. His main interest is in outdoor photography: mountains, woods, seashores, deserts and wildlife.

Michael G. Hartsock, a criminal investigator, developed his interest in photography through his work. His interests lie in portraiture.

Darlene Holmes, another newcomer, has been interested in photography for eight years and likes to capture nature's beauty on film. She is also an accomplished oil and water color painter.

Vickie Moose and her son Perry Lee Moose are back with the show again. They have both had several years of photographic experience and like action shots. Perry has photographed and produced two statewide public service commercials.

Heidi Rapstine is back again in the show this year. She has only had her camera for two years but has definitely been bitten by the photography bug, Snider said. Her interest in photography is in capturing concepts of time as infinity and contrived visual imagery.

Also a newcomer this year is Mike Shannon, another Ingersoll-Rand employee who enjoys photography as a hobby. His photographic interests are in landscapes.

Displaying in the show for the second year, Ivan Stone works for the Ethridge Claims Service and uses photography a lot in his work. Snider said. This year he plans to exhibit some European scenes.

Snider urged the public to come out this weekend to see the works of the 11 talented photographers.

Story-song approach teaches

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Move over, Paul Revere. Sybil Ludington is charging through.

The 16-year-old Ludington is one of the historical figures featured in an educational reading-listening series called "Women of Courage" being produced by the Eclectic Co. in St. Paul.

The series, aimed at giving children a better perspective of women's contributions to history, is beginning its second year atop a wave of success that has far exceeded anybody's expectations.

"When we started this series, we planned for regional distribution," said Jeanne Junge, executive director of the non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of folk arts. "But we sent a preview issue to Ms. magazine, a small article ran and — wham! — we had a national market."

Each "Women of Courage" issue consists of a record and a booklet.

Geologists report new data on plants

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Two Arizona State University geologists say they have proof that land plants flourished near Phoenix 1.2 billion years ago, possibly challenging theories of climatic changes and evolution.

Rock samples collected by ASU geologists Paul Knauth and Mark Beeunas in the Sierra Ancha Mountains about 100 miles east of Phoenix have confirmed the existence of the land plants.

Scientists have maintained that marine algae formed in oceans 3.5 billion years ago, but land plants did not appear for another 3 billion years.

"No one has ever denied there may have been some scummy form of land-plant life before then," said Knauth. "It's just that no one has found any evidence of it older than 400 millions years."

The two geologists made their find about three years ago in a "miniature Grand Canyon," at the Pendleton Mesa near Cherry Creek.

"We wanted to find an old exposure of a land surface to see if we could find any evidence of plants," Knauth said. "This was one of the few examples of ancient land surface preserved in the rock record that we could put our hands on."

More than 100 tests on the samples confirmed the presence of certain carbon isotopes that could have come only from land plants exhaling carbon dioxide into the soil as part of the photosynthesis process, he said.

The plants may have been nothing more than green slime, he noted.

"We feel this has profound implications for our whole view of the Earth," he said. "We think it's just our first glimpse of what really was going on."

Inroads are being made on alcoholism

EDITOR'S NOTE — It has been 50 years since the founding of Alcoholics Anonymous. Its ranks are still increasing, bespeaking the pervasiveness of a national problem whose statistical dimensions — and psychic toll — remain staggering. At the same time, research and signs of changing attitudes are beginning to make inroads.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Mel liked to drink in college and he had an enormous capacity. He was the one usually deemed sober enough to drive the others home. He advanced rapidly in his career in advertising and soon was on the two-or-more martini lunch circuit. As the years rolled on, Mel occasionally worried about his drinking.

He noted he couldn't sleep without a few stiff nightcaps and every now and then his hands shook so much in the morning he took a sip of vodka to steady them before he went to work.

His wife complained about his drinking, but he assured her his high stress job made it necessary. He occasionally couldn't remember the content of a telephone call after a particularly liquid lunch, but he laughed it off. Some of his colleagues joked about the same thing happening to them.

Is Mel an alcoholic? What will happen to him if he keeps drinking like this? Can he just cut back on his drinking and stop the telephone blackouts? Will he develop cirrhosis of the liver? Or end up in a mental institution as a "wet brain"?

The problem with alcoholism — the second most prevalent disease in the United States and the fourth most fatal — is that nobody really knows the answers to those questions about this individual.

Statistically, an expert could say that Mel is probably an alcoholic, that he probably won't be able to curtail his drinking for a long period and that total abstinence may be the only answer. But he may be one of the exceptions.

"We really believe that alcoholism can be prevented," says George Marcelle, spokesman for the National Council on Alcoholism. "It will be within today's lifetime that we will be able to prevent it from developing."

There is also an enormous number of recovered alcoholics in our midst, many of whom are members of Alcoholics Anonymous, the granddaddy of all self-help groups. AA celebrates its 50th anniversary this June and its membership is on the increase.

"The two hottest items in alcoholism today are biology and public policy," says Dr. Sheila Blume, psychiatrist and international consultant on alcoholism.

The biologic research eventually may provide an early warning to individuals at high risk of turning alcoholic. A strong public policy would foster much greater wariness of alcohol, the most widely abused drug in the United States.

"Our attitudes on drinking are not very sound," Marcelle says. "We believe we're a social drinking society and we're not."

He is supported by evidence that 10 percent of the alcohol consumers drink 50 percent of the product.

"The good news is that public awareness is increasing dramatically," Marcelle says. "Many more doctors detect it earlier, even though it is still not taught in medical schools. It's harder and harder for doctors to be completely ignorant of the disease."

At one time, it was widely believed that an alcoholic couldn't be helped until he hit bottom. Today, there is stress on getting people into treatment before they have lost jobs, spouses and suffered physical injury.

Intervention centers sprang up about 10 years ago, aimed at getting an alcoholic to admit he or she needed help. Typically, a wife would go to a center such as the Freedom Institute in Manhattan and a counselor would guide the family and maybe the man's boss on how best to deal with the alcoholic.

"We have coached the family so that they say things with love, but recite the hard facts of what the person's drinking is doing to them," says Connie Murray, executive director of the Freedom Institute.

The alcoholic is asked to a meeting in the morning, when he's more likely to be sober. As the session goes on, he may suffer withdrawal symptoms that make him readier to admit the need for help.

Eight out of 10 of the alcoholics thus confronted do agree to seek treatment. If his boss or the company is involved, that goes up to 10 out of 10, Mrs. Murray says.

Some people, including physicians, dispute that alcoholism is a disease. Others consider it such, but a disease that takes as many forms as there are alcoholics. Dr. E.M. Jellinek, a pioneer of alcoholism research in the 1940s, divided alcoholics into five categories, two of which are diseases. However, a recent study which followed individuals for 40 years found that alcoholics moved back and forth in these pigeonholes during their drinking careers.

A Gallup poll in 1982 showed that 79 percent of Americans considered alcoholism a disease. But it retains a stigma. Alcoholism still conjures up visions of Skid Row derelicts, although only 5 percent of alcoholics inhabit those depths.

That image is slowly changing. When Betty Ford, a former First Lady, publicly admitted her chemical dependency and later founded a clinic to help others, it directed attention to a different view of alcoholism. Elizabeth Taylor, Mary Tyler Moore and Tony Curtis made headlines when they checked in. Sammy Davis Jr. talked at length on "The Tonight Show" about his first alcohol-free year.

An estimated 10 million adults and 3.3 million teen-agers in America are alcoholics. Through alcohol-related car accidents, alcohol is the leading killer of young people aged 15 to 24. It is the third-leading cause of mental retardation due to birth defects. It is estimated to be responsible for the deaths of 100,000 Americans a year.

The economic cost is $120 billion a year, second only to the cost of heart and vascular disease.

The ravages of alcoholism are documented in study after study. Some samples:

—On any given day, up to 33 percent of adult patients in America's hospitals are likely to have problems related to alcohol.

—Alcoholism is diagnosed in 20 to 30 percent of first admissions in state mental hospitals.

—More than 30 percent of suicide victims had been drinking at the time.

—Half of all arrests in this country are alcohol related.

—Alcohol is involved in 50 to 80 percent of all homicides, 70 percent of serious assaults, 50 percent of forcible rapes and 72 percent of robberies.

—Alcohol is involved in half of the family dispute cases police handle.

—Each year, 25,000 Americans are killed and an additional 74,000 injured in the more than one million alcohol-related car accidents.

The statistics don't begin to tell the stories of the men and women who lead painful lives and, like Mel, don't know that alcohol is not relieving the pain. It is causing it.

When does heavy drinking cross over into alcoholism?

Some say when physical dependence sets in, when stopping abruptly brings withdrawal symptoms — edginess, the shakes, ultimately DT. A more embracing definition favored by many experts is that alcoholism has set in when drinking interferes seriously with any aspect of the person's life.

Some promising research is under way on possible detection of alcoholism before drinking begins, but there is no way now to predict who will become an alcoholic.

It is known that one out of 10 people who drink will become an alcoholic and that children of alcoholics are likelier to become alcoholics than children of non-alcoholics.

Research has also shown that the predisposition is genetic as well as environmental. Children of alcoholics who were adopted and raised by non-alcoholics had a greater chance of becoming alcoholic than children of non-alcoholics who were adopted by non-alcoholics.

Dr. George Vaillant offered much new information when he published the results of a study that followed 600 people for more than 40 years, beginning his observations before the onset of drinking problems. Vaillant effectively put to rest theories that said alcoholics had personality problems and instability before they drank.

Treatment and rehabilitation apart, efforts to change the social attitudes toward drinking are growing.

A RUN TO DEPOSIT—Poles line up to deposit U.S. dollars and other "hard" currencies at a Warsaw bank in a rush to beat new government regulations which take effect Sunday. Until then, Poles can deposit their western currencies without having to prove they were acquired

Tractors help family pull together

SAGINAW, Texas (AP) — Last July 4, Tracy Troxell hit a streak of good luck.

A 300-pound man fell on his father's leg and broke it.

It isn't that Tracy Troxell enjoys the misfortunes of his father, Earl Troxell. It's just that what he really likes is racing a souped-up, polished chrome, powerful-pulling tractor, and the accident put him in the driver's seat.

Until Earl Troxell busted a leg, Tracy Troxell shared the driving with his father.

The younger Troxell said his dad and another tractor-pull contestant got together that fateful day.

"They were wrestling around," he said. "He weighed about 300 pounds. He tripped and fell on him and broke his ankle all to pieces."

"I've got to drive since then. I drove before that, but not full time. We had to switch out. We'll start switching back out, now that he can start driving again."

The Troxell tractor is not one of those simple, dirt-moving farm implements that came in when one-mule-power farming faded years ago. It is a long, red, rakish machine powered by two 550-cubic-inch Chevrolet engines that generate 3,000 horsepower. As the name implies, the championship matches such high-performance tractors to see which has the most pulling power.

The Troxell family of Saginaw pulls together. Everyone participates in the hobby.

It can get expensive, Tracy Troxell said.

He guessed the tractor is worth $40,000. To put it on a trailer and add tools, fuel and the other items necessary for a pull, figure $70,000, he said.

Joan Troxell — Earl's wife, Tracy's mother — wouldn't know about that. She said no one tells her exactly what the hobby costs, but "what I know makes me stay awake at night."

"It's a novelty, just an expensive novelty," Joan Troxell said. "It is very expensive."

"You just have to give up things, like money and groceries."

But the hobby has benefits, she said. She knows where her son and daughter, Tarina, are on pulling weekends.

"There are a lot of worse places to be on the weekend than a tractor pull," she said.

"She (Tarina) just loves it" — especially as a place to meet the opposite sex, said Joan Troxell. "We have a little problem with that."

"He (Tracy) wants to be a professional tractor puller. We keep telling him we're poor people."

Tracy Troxell said it's not impossible to be a professional puller. The Troxells are in the trailer manufacturing business.

"I wish this was my business," he said. "There are a few of them that are doing it. Sold their farms and went to doing this."

"This old tractor pulling, it's getting bigger and bigger every year."

Still, he admitted the money isn't too good. He started driving last May in Longview and has taken top money at one pull, in De Leon.

"I believe it was $250 and a box of peanuts," he said.

"We don't hardly ever get out of Texas. Texas is getting better prize money this year ... a whole lot better than it used to be."

The Troxells became interested in tractor pulls when Tracy was about 10 years old.

"We started going in '76 or '77. This is the pull we always watched, right at the Tarrant County Convention Center."

"I believe my dad and uncle started in '81. We didn't know anything about this stuff. We just bought a tractor up in Oklahoma. We won at Fort Worth, my dad."

Since then, the uncle has given up competition, and the Troxells have bought the tractor. They went through a couple of other engines, including an airline engine, before having the present power system built in San Antonio by Jerry Janke. The tractor is not your average farm vehicle, Troxell said. The differential and axle are John Deere parts, he said, but the rest of the machine is built for competition.

Pulling the tractor on a trailer en route to a meet causes some comment, he said.

"You go down the road, and that's all those truck drivers say: 'I bet you could plow a field with that,' or 'What a garden tractor.'"

The Troxell tractor is entered in the 7,200-pound class. Weights are added — or subtracted — to make each tractor in the class conform. Moving the weights is one of the hardest jobs in tractor pulling, Troxell said.

During competition, pullers may modify their machines — for instance, by changing the rear end to get a better gear ratio. Troxell said he and his father do that type of job, but Janke does the major engine work.

Getting ready for competition

Police can start beards on own time

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Policemen may sport beards now, but they still cannot start them on city time, according to an order that takes effect today.

In a reversal of 1982 grooming standards, Chief Penny E.

Harrington, the first woman to head the department, signed an order allowing facial hair if it is neatly trimmed and less than a half-inch thick.

But beginning a beard on duty still will not be allowed.

Former police officers indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted two former Houston police officers on charges they deprived a motorist of what U.S. Attorney Dan Hedges called "a rather basic civil right not to be shot unjustifiably by the police."

Grand jurors returned a three-count indictment on Wednesday against former patrolman Kendall R. Patterson and former Sgt. William L. Brasher in the Oct. 14, 1983, shooting of William Pressey, a 33-year-old landscaper who suffered permanent brain damage. "When I heard about it, I was very happy," Pressey said of the indictment.

Patterson, 22, was charged with one misdemeanor count of violating Pressey's civil rights by shooting him without justification and with one felony count of conspiring to cover up what happened by shifting the blame to the victim, Hedges said.

Brasher, 34, was charged with conspiring to violate Pressey's civil rights and with making false statements to police and to the grand jury, Hedges said.

Both men were fired after the shooting from the Houston police department.

Patterson's attorney, Mike Ramsey, said he will seek to have the indictment dismissed because state authorities have already tried to convict his client.

Patterson could face up to 11 years in prison and an $11,000 fine if convicted on the charges. Brasher could receive a maximum 10-year term and a $10,500 fine.

Labour... is honorable

"For thou shalt eat the labour of thine hands: happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee."

It is God's command that man must work and he has promised much to those who labour.

"... to rejoice in his labour; this is the gift of God." "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Enter the Lord's house at the beginning of each week, receive spiritual comfort to carry you through another week of labour.

EVERYONE IN THE CHURCH
THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Local church plans crusade

First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, will hold a Faith Lifting Crusade featuring the F. R. McAdams evangelistic team Sunday through Wednesday.

Sunday services will be held at 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m., with weeknight services beginning at 7 p.m.

A special feature of the crusade will be a Morning Bible Seminar at 10 a.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.

"The McAdams bring a vital, positive message of faith," said Pastor John Farina. "Over 20 years of traveling ministry enables them to speak to the needs of the people, encouraging them to believe God for great things. Anyone needing a spiritual lift is encouraged to come, for they will not be disappointed."

Prior to their evangelism ministry, Rev. and Mrs. McAdams pastored churches in West Virginia, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Kansas. They have also conducted missionary crusades in Mexico, Chile, Guyana, South America and South Africa.

Witnesses plan memorial service on Jesus' death

Local Jehovah's Witnesses attended an area meeting recently in Amarillo and returned to make plans for an annual memorial observance on the death of Jesus Christ.

An attendance of more than 2,000 was recorded last Sunday at the Circuit Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses at the Amarillo Civic Center, reported Douglas Cullins, local minister for the Jehovah's Witnesses.

Cullins said the assembly had the theme "Our Position in an Unstable World." He said one highlight of the area meeting was the baptism of 26 persons in symbol of their dedication to God.

Robert L. Hartman, assembly overseer, delivered the principal address, "Basis for Faith in an Unbelieving World." He pointed out that "persons' doubts and skepticism today often result from a materialistic outlook and scientists and clergymen who question the existence of God and criticize the Bible and its moral standards," Cullins said.

"Due to the urgency of our times, all who love righteousness must act quickly to take their stand on God's side," Hartman said.

Cullins said the Witnesses offer free home Bible studies "to aid honest-hearted persons searching for faith in an unbelieving world."

In other matters, the local Witnesses congregation will memorialize the death of Jesus at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 4, at the Kingdom Hall, 1701 Coffee, with Frank Rivera presiding.

The service corresponds with Nisan 14 on the Bible's lunar calendar. More than seven million people worldwide will assemble with Witnesses at the annual event, the only celebration observed by the denomination, said member Andy Wilson.

Wilson noted the words of Christ: "Keep doing this in remembrance of me," found in Luke 22:19. The words were spoken at the time Jesus initiated the memorial of his death, Witnesses claim.

"It is Jesus' death that opened to humankind the prospect of attaining everlasting life in paradise conditions," Wilson said. "So his death is something we must remember."

Religion Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders urged Congress not to approve further production and deployment of the MX missile, but the measure went through this week, as advocated by President Reagan.

United Methodist bishops, in a statement sent to legislators, had cited the "first-strike" capability of the MX and said it would "further heighten tension and increase the likelihood of nuclear war."

Catholic women air troubles

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
In more ways than one, the Roman Catholic Church is having a woman trouble.
A growing number of Catholic women "feel they're being stepped on" by the church, says Catholic Scripture scholar Pheme Perkins of Jesuit-run Boston College.

Strains over women threaded a current Vatican-ordered investigation of U.S. religious communities, an attempt by U.S.

bishops to draft a document on women, special pressures on some nuns and driving out of two for holding public office.
"Ominous signs are in the air," writes Sister Ann Patrick Ware. In a new book on updated styles of American nuns, "Midwives of the Future," she says indicated papal moves could "undo the work of renewal" by women's orders.

"legitimate Catholic position," and urging discussion of the matter.

One of the signers, Sister Judith Vaughan, already has felt reprisal. She runs a shelter, the House of Ruth, for homeless, pregnant women and their children in Los Angeles, and the archdiocesan social services director has ordered no more clients referred to the shelter.

She said the archdiocese, which previously provided a small part of the shelter's budget, "is punishing the very women the pro-life people say they are for and are trying to help."

Meanwhile, a Vatican-initiated investigation of religious orders, including nuns, is going on.

Rare 'disowning' case rends Jewish family

By SUSAN YELLIN
Canadian Press Writer
WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — On the same hot and muggy summer day that Shawna Yaffe, born a Jew, celebrated what should have been one of the happiest days of her life, her parents went into mourning.

On Aug. 23, 1984, Shawna married a gentile. A few days later, her parents placed their daughter's obituary in the weekly Jewish Post newspaper, requesting that "no condolences be sent or memorials be made."

The Yaffes had disowned their daughter.

For most North American Jews, about all they've heard of "disownment" — whereby parents consider their child dead and observe the traditional seven days of mourning — probably comes from the popular stage and film musical, "Fiddler on the Roof." In it, an anguished Tevye acts as if his youngest daughter has died when she marries a non-Jew.

"But even in Fiddler on the Roof, when they were leaving, he turned around and said something to her before they left," says Shawna, whose real name appeared in the obituary but who now asks that it be kept confidential.

The religious background to the now rare action rests in the Old Testament, Deuteronomy 7:3, in which God instructs the Jews, before they cross the Jordan River, not to marry non-Jewish inhabitants to avoid being swayed to serve other gods.

"I think the philosophy behind it (disowning) is a way of or a method of impressing upon our young adults the importance of keeping the Jewish faith alive and furthering the Jewish faith in its cause," says Orthodox Rabbi Ephraim Bryks of Winnipeg.

Bryks, who acted as mediator between Shawna and her parents before Shawna was married, points out the case is unusual — that "it may happen only once" in every 100, or even 1,000, cases of intermarriage.

"But it does happen in the rare case where the family is very, very committed to the furtherance of their Jewish values and where they feel they've been betrayed by one of their own children," he said in an interview.

However, two other Winnipeg rabbis, who conceded they had no personal knowledge of Shawna's case, said placing the obituary was inexcusable.

"They shamed themselves," said Rabbi Eugene Wernick of a Conservative synagogue, "and they shamed the Jewish faith, because that's not what Judaism is all about."

Rabbi Tracy Klires of a Reform congregation said she opposes intermarriage and refuses to marry a Jew to a non-Jew, but she strongly disapproved the parents' action.

Religion in the news

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptist membership increased by 164,203 in 1984 to a total of 14,185,454 in that largest of U.S. Protestant denominations. The number of congregations increased 209 to a total of 36,740, the new statistics show.

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Department of Education has expressed "regrets" that a departmental official in Denver had distributed a speech terming America a "Christian nation" that must return to a "Christian system of values."

In a reply to a letter of protest from Henry Siegman, executive director of the American Jewish Congress, the department's deputy assistant secretary for public affairs, Thomas G. Moore, said it regretted the speech caused offense.

It showed "insensitivity to the very real and legitimate concerns which have been expressed," Moore wrote.

Ferguson said the public is invited to attend the special service "for a time to lift up Christ and be uplifted by the Holy Spirit."

Texas briefs

DALLAS (AP) — Morganna "The Kissing Bandit" Roberts was all smiles after being cleared of a public lewdness charge Thursday.

Ms. Roberts, 33, a buxom blonde who is best known for smooching athletes at sporting events, was cleared of charges that she hit a customer on the head with her breast in a Dallas topless nightclub on Aug. 2, 1984.

The customer, Kenneth C. Crowder of Garland, also was arrested for participating in what Ms. Roberts said was a birthday greeting that she has used as part of her stage act for 20 years.

Ms. Roberts' attorney, Peter Lesser, contended that his client was not guilty of any crime because the Texas penal code does not make it an offense for a woman to allow someone to touch her breasts.

Although Assistant District Attorney Toby Shook argued that Ms. Roberts initiated the contact and that it was not the Legislature's intent to allow such conduct, Judge John Orvis agreed with Lesser and dismissed the charge.

"I'm still legal," she told reporters after the court hearing.

Ms. Roberts said afterward that she was not bitter about her arrest, which she attributed to "a little bit of overreaction" by police because the Republican National Convention was in town in August.

WACO, Texas (AP) — Fishermen Thursday found the body of a 20-year-old Waco man who was indicted last week for aggravated sexual assault of a child, authorities said.

Larry DeWayne Walker was declared dead about 1:45 p.m. by County Court-at-Law Judge David Hodges, and officials said the body was apparently in the Brazos River for several days.

Hodges said drowning probably was the cause of death, and that no autopsy would be ordered. He quoted family members as saying Walker told them he planned to commit suicide.

A McLennan County grand jury indicted Walker March 21 for aggravated sexual assault of a child.

Waco policeman Bud Thurman said Walker's mother described Walker as being "depondent" after the indictment. He was last seen Saturday night, and his mother filed a missing person report on Sunday.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Newborn twin boys who were joined at the abdomen were listed in serious condition today after separation surgery at Wilford Hall Medical Center, an Air Force spokesman says.

The twins, who were born at the military medical facility about 5:15 p.m. Wednesday, were joined at the abdomen and shared a common liver, said Airman Stanley Bass, a medical center spokesman.

Two surgical teams separated the boys during a 2½-hour operation that was completed about 11:30 p.m., Bass said.

Both were listed in serious but stable condition early today.

AMIDST WHALE HUNTING DISPUTE—Seated in front of a beached Cuviers Beaked Whale, Buddhist priest Shympo Amari officiates at the rites as American Michael Bailey, left, prays for the repose of the dead whale's soul with local fishermen and schoolchildren on the beach of Odawara, south of Tokyo. Bailey, director of the Honolulu-based conservation group Earth Trust, is currently in Japan to present tokens of appreciation to Odawara fishermen for saving a whale captured in a net one month ago.

15 charged with false statements

DALLAS (AP) — Federal charges have been lodged against 15 people following an investigation into questionable loans for condominium developments in eastern Dallas County and the failure of a savings and loan.

Seven of the defendants were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury on charges of filing false financial statements in order to secure loans from four Texas savings associations — including the failed Empire Savings & Loan Association of Mesquite.

Eight others were named in criminal bills of information. The indictments were the first returned in an 18-month investigation of more than $500 million in loans that fueled a glut of condominium construction near Lake Ray Hubbard in Garland, Mesquite and Rowlett from early 1982 until late 1983.

"It's a highly active and continuing grand jury investigation," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Williamson, who declined comment on what further action the grand jury might take.

Federal investigators have said they have identified at least 200 investors whose loan applications for condominium projects are under scrutiny.

All 15 charged Wednesday were investors who guaranteed loans for condominium developments or assisted other investors in preparing loan applications, according to federal court documents.

Filing false statements to acquire loans from a federally insured lending institution carries a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Duncan Lawrence McKellar, a Dallas physician, was named in a 21-count indictment alleging false loan applications. Raymond George, a Dallas carpet dealer, was indicted on six counts of filing false statements to obtain loans. John F. McGrath was indicted on six counts of making false applications.

Joint forces participate in war games

By JUDY GIANNETTINO
Associated Press Writer
FORT BLISS, Texas (AP) — A war broke out at this Army post Wednesday. The U.S. military was battling itself.

The conflict — simulated "force-to-force" combat — was part of a $30 million war games operation dubbed "Border Star '85." The operation is designed to test the preparedness of the nation's military and to teach coordination between different military branches.

More than 15,000 Army, Air Force and Marine units, as well as a Canadian Forces Airborne battalion, are participating in the five-day field maneuvers, which are described by military officials as "fundamental" to a strong U.S. defense.

Gen. Wallace H. Nutting, commander of Border Star '85, said that because it is unlikely any future war in which the United States would engage would involve just one branch of the military, joint preparedness is "fundamental to the operation of our system."

Nutting, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Readiness Command and director of the Joint Deployment Agency at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., said the mock war at Fort Bliss and on land at the White Sands Missile Range, N.M., would allow troops to "improve individual and collective skills."

In addition to the fighting troops, 15,000 other military personnel have participated in earlier phases of the month-long Border Star operation, including deployment and map exercises for commanders and staff.

Almost 200 aircraft, and about 3,000 military vehicles were brought to Fort Bliss for the exercises.

One primary goal would be to determine how well the Army's new "fast-attack" vehicle fares in desert terrain, Nutting said.

The dune-buggy-like machines sit low to the ground and with a 1,600-cubic centimeter Volkswagen engine, can go from 0 to 60 mph in 6.2 seconds.

The $35,000 vehicles are armed with either a Mark 19 grenade machine gun that can fire up to 300 rounds per minute, a Tow Missile or an M-60 machine gun, said Maj. Bob Perceval of the Army's 3rd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Eighty-five of the brigade's 125 fast-attack vehicles were brought in for Border Star, Perceval said.

The lightly armed, highly mobile 9th Infantry Division was designated the "friendly" force for Border Star and was pitted against the somewhat slower, but heavily armed 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment of Fort Bliss and an attached Canadian Airborne unit.

Nutting said Fort Bliss and White Sands Missile Range were selected for the war games because the area is "one of the few places in the United States where we can adequately deploy joint forces" and because of its dry, desert terrain.

Couple operates same station for 50 years

By MIKE ELSWICK
Longview Journal
GLADEWATER, Texas (AP) — When Herbert and Nona Money opened their service station on U.S. 80 in Gladewater 50 years ago, they purchased their gas from a wholesaler in 5- and 10-gallon milk cans.

In those early years of business, they sold gas for as little as 10-cents a gallon.

But one of the biggest changes the couple has noted in the five decades since opening their white frame station has been in the attitude of customers.

"We used to be expected to sweep out the floor boards, raise the hood and check everything," said Money. "Now if we start to raise the hood they just fuss at you so we don't even bother unless we're asked to."

Although Money is 72 and has been pumping gas and serving customers on U.S. 80 for half a century he said he has no plans to retire.

"When I die, that's when I'll retire," Money said. "I don't plan to retire any time soon. I'm going to try it a few more years."

In all the years of operation Money's station has been a strictly family operation. Money, his wife, and for several years until they grew up and left home, their two children.

"It's always been just me and my wife. We've never hired help," Money said. "If we can't take care of all the business, we just let them drive off."

But for those customers who do get waited on, and that in actuality is most of them, he said, they still get old-fashioned, courteous service.

"We operate one of the few stations around that aren't self service," he said. He has no plans to change that aspect of the business either.

After all, Money said, that is what helps make it all worthwhile.

"I like to talk to people, most of them are my friends," Money said. "I'd retire before I'd go to self-service."

Even before getting into the service station business Money had become familiar with the area within view of the station. In his younger days he chopped cotton in a field across the highway from his station.

As he entered adulthood Money joined the hub of activity in the East Texas Oil Fields working as a roustabout.

"We used to work from daylight to dark for $4 a day," he said.

"That was good money back in those days."

But it was an injury that forced him out of the oil field work and into the service station business. Money said he and a brother originally went into the business together, but his brother got out after two or three months.

The business has been good to the couple overall, they said.

They were a family torn apart by temptation... kept apart by pride... but brought together by a miracle!
