Passing rule's effect shocks Texas schools

By KEN HERMAN Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) - Thirty opponents could not stop Fort Worth Southwest's march toward a Texas high school basketball title. Report cards did.

As a result of the state's new "no-pass, no-play" rule barring extracurricular activities for students failing one class, three Rebels became ineligible when report cards came out - the same day as their state semifinal game against Houston Madison

End of season, 75-47. Across the state, students and coaches are moaning about the rigid rule that has thinned the ranks this spring of everything from choirs to track teams.

Gov. Mark White, hoping to dull the roar, is launching his own advertising campaign in support of the rule. 'It has been a traumatic experience for a kid to get kicked off the school team or not be allowed to be a cheerleader because they flunked one course.' said state Sen. Bob Glasgow D-Stephenville.

The kids are upset. The parents are upset and school board members are upset.

get-tough, public school reform bill, pushed by White and Dallas electronics magnate H. Ross Perot, chairman of a special committee that looked at public education

As of Jan. 1, students had to pass every course in order to participate in extracurricular activities. The shock wave hit six weeks later when report cards came out

Fort Worth Southwest Coach James Wood remains a supporter. despite being left short at state tournement time.

They are referred to as student-athletes. Student always comes first. I am a teacher-coach not a coach. As a coach, naturally I was disappointed. As a teacher and parent I think it's neccesary. said Wood

The feeling is clearly not unanimous in the state.

'The rule has pretty well decimated our athletic program." said Jim Marcus, principal of Crane High School in West Texas.

Our athletic programs are depleted.

The Senate recently directed the State Board of Education to revise the rule so that suspensions would last for one week instead of the full six-week grading period. The House has not acted, and apparently will not.

White is riled by efforts to weaken the new law.

'One thing I learned in the Army is never retreat. If you don't retreat you don't have to retake the same ground," the governor said.

White is spending $200,000 of his campaign money for radio ads asking Texans to stick with him on the new rule. Education is important to White because he has made a major effort at bringing high-tech industries to the state. He wants the schools to produce students who can fill high-tech

'We in Texas don't tell our students it's OK to flunk one course." White says on a radio ad. We're going to put winners on the playing field. We're going to put winners in the classroom. That's going to make Texas the big

The rigid rule has been blessed by U.S. Secretary of Education William Bennett, who called it "a very clear statement

"Implicit in it is the notion that school is a place where you learn first. When people are satisfied that you have learned, (students) See RULE, Page two

Oil-gas dispute far from over

Both sides have won battles, but war still undecided

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a series of articles on the rulings of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the Texas Railroad Commission in regard to oil and gas rights disputes between majors and independents.

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

It's been three and a half years since the battle between major and independent petroleum producers began over oil and gas rights in the Panhandle fields.

And any final decision may yet be months, even years away. While both sides can claim victories, the independents have lost the most battles and face the severest impact economically if

federal and state

recommendations are accepted. But the majors cannot claim complete victory yet, nor can they look forward to any great economic boost initially. Others not directly involved in the fight have already experienced some economic fall-out from the conflicts, and others may yet experience such problems.

Dorchester Gas Producing Co. won a state court victory against The Harlow Corporation and others last August in Lubbock. The jury ruled for Dorchester in its claims that Harlow had been wrongfully pumping gas belonging to Dorchester

But in late December 100th District Judge Robert Montgomery vacated the judgment of more than $900,000 against Harlow after the Amarillo-based firm had filed for bankruptcy

In another state court case in December of 1982, a Carson County jury ruled in favor of independent firm Energy-Agri against Amarillo Oil, another suit over gas rights in the Panhandle Field.

Numerous other court cases are pending in state and federal courts between the majors and independents. And royalty owners have initiated suits against Dorchester to recover royalties they claim Dorchester owes them. The count isn't yet in on those

But in the biggest hearings. before the Texas Railroad Commission (RRC) and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), the independents have lost the initial rounds, with both proposed recommendations going against them. Those recommendations have been explored in this series of

Even in those hearings, both sides won and lost on differing points with the final decisions yet

The FERC commissioners were to rule on its recommendation last week, but the agency delayed its action after the RRC filed a petition claiming state jurisdiction had precedence over the federal agency's decision

The Railroad Commission. among other things, asked the federal agency not to make its decision until after the RRC has taken action on its recommendation.

FERC gave the parties 15 days to respond to the RRC's petition and asked the RRC to present a status report within 45 days.

Representatives of the independents claim the delay as a victory for them, since it proffers the hope of keeping the matter

within the state under states rights claims

The major petroleum firms can point to the agencies' upholding their major claims.

At the federal level, the agency has tentatively ruled the independents were wrongfully producing from their oil wells gas that had been dedicated interstate commerce. As such, the gas is subject to federal pricing controls, with the independents facing having to pay back excess price charges above the maximum permitted under the federal regulations.

That amount could reach substantial sums, since the independents have been selling the gas at about $3 per 1,000 cubic feet (Mcf.), six times the amount allowed for dedicated, so-called old

The independents also face payment of punishment penalties. In the RRC hearings, the examiners have found the independents have wrongfully been using the liquids extracted from gas by low temperature separation equipment (LTX units) and

Planner claims limited jail space sets criminals free

BY JEFF LANGLEY Senior Staff Writer

The Gray County Jail, built in 1929, can legally hold just 14 prisoners, a limitation that frustrates local law enforcement officials and forces them to free criminals to roam the streets, a jail builder told county commissioners.

Gray County Commissioners began serious discussion about building a new county jail in their regular meeting Friday The commissioners heard a presentation representatives of Jail Planners Inc., a Corsicana - based firm that designs and builds jails and nothing else President Bob Frisby and Vice President John Geyer, one of the firm's architects, said projections on its population indicate that Gray County needs a jail with a capacity for 53 to 76 inmates to fill its need for the next 20 years.

The old jail on the fourth floor of the courthouse is allowed to operate only because of variances granted by the Texas Jail Standards Commission and because an inmate hasn't successfully sued the county in federal court, the representatives said.

The lack of space also creates the "hold - back syndrome." among local law officers and court officials, Frisby said. Having no place to put prisoners mandates that only the most dangerous felons stay in the county jail, he said. The need to release all but the worst offenders results in a lack of law enforcement. Frisby said. When police and prosecutors have no place to put them, the authorities may not go to the trouble of making a case against some minor criminals, he claimed. The time to plan and build a new jail is now, before the county is forced to build one by the state commission or the federal courts. Frisby said. A "cop - wise" inmate who won a lawsuit against the county would force hurried decisions in jail planning, he said. And variances granted to the old jail by the state are about to come to an end because of cases pending in federal court, the builder said. He said the jail's variances on overcrowding and

 An 18-year-old Houston man convicted of killing a female postal carrier after forcing her into his home was sentenced Saturday to 75 years in prison.

A state district court jury also ordered David Port to pay a $10,000 fine for his murder conviction in the June 7 slaying of Debora Sue Schatz, 23. Prosecutors said she was ambushed while making her rounds in the affluent west Houston neighborhood where Port lived.

The jury deliberated 2½ hours Friday before finding Port guilty of

The case attracted national attention after Port's father and stepmother, Bernard and Odette Port, refused to testify against him before a grand jury, claiming the same protections applied as those afforded by law to spouses.

The Ports were jailed while their son was free on a $20,000 bond, but were later released. The Ports, who were not subpoenaed for the trial that began Feb. 25, did not arrive at the courthouse until Saturday afternoon after the jury began its deliberations on punishment

Contacted at her home in

"I still feel like he should have gotten more than just 75 years. She was my baby girl and we had a very close relationship," Mrs. Schatz said. "This still doesn't take away the hurt and the pain of losing a daughter but I will accept it.

"This has dragged on and on and it's taken years and years off my life. It's going to be very hard to go on without her but I've told my children we have no other choice. Mrs. Schatz said Darlene Sanderson, Ms. Schatz's sister, who also watched the trial, said she was "relieved. I've been waiting a long time.'

Port showed no emotion when the punishment recommendation was made by the jury, or when State District Judge I.D. McMaster pronounced formal sentence moments later. Prosecutors said he will have to serve at least 20 years before becoming eligible for

Following the meeting, David Port was led to the Comal County Jail in handcuffs. His stepmother was crying as she left the judge's chambers.

Before the jury returned the verdict Saturday, defense attorney Jack Zimmermann said he feared the Ports would have been subpoenaed and subjected to another possible jail term if they attended the trial.

Since last Friday, this case has been tried for appellate reasons," Zimmermann said. "If they were in the courtroom, they could have been subpoenaed and could have been sentenced to six months in jail

Although Zimmermann said the Ports wanted to testify, he didn't call them Saturday because he was not sure their testimony could have been limited to the punishment

Don't get me wrong, please. I really like farmers and teachers, but not so much that I want to open my wallet and let them help themselves to more of its contents.

Besides, I just checked, and nothing was left. My wallet and pockets had been picked clean empty. You've heard of the plight of our teachers. The poor overworked and underpaid Rodney Dangerfields of society just aren't appreciated. Teachers get no respect!

It just doesn't pay to be a teacher these days. The pay's crummy, and the work's back-breaking and unrewarding. Why, those most qualified to teach often quit the business, and others who may have considered it won't work for the slave wages paid in public schools.

That seems to be the message repeated by the teachers' groups, which constantly lobby the government to confiscate more money from us working slobs and redistribute it to them. Remember, nothing is too good for our children. Higher pay for teachers surely guarantees an improvement in their education.

Frankly, the fairy tale about how bad off the teachers are has worn In my book, the teachers enjoy a lifestyle that most of us could never hope for (at least until those of us with a good retirement plan How would you like an eight-to-five job with weekends off and what amounts to nearly three months of vacation each year? And the pay isn't all that bad, either.

While we cry for the teachers who want a few more dollars from each of us, consider this:

Pampa teachers work 183 days per year. They're off 182 (not counting sick days).

For those 183 days of work, beginning teachers in the local school district start at about $17,000 per year.

For each working day, starting teachers here make about $92! That's $11.60 an hour, based on an eight - hour day.

Remember, we're talking about beginners, possibly 23 - year - old college grads hired for the first real job in their lives.

A chart prepared by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce lists "average wage rates for selected occupations." It lists "entry, median and high" hourly wages for the different local jobs. The only wage on the list that tops the starting teacher's $11.60 per hour is the $13 "high" hourly wage for chemical plant operators at

An electrician here gets a median wage of $9.35 per hour. Experienced machine operators, truck drivers and welders get about $7. An experienced secretary gets about $6.10; an office clerk pulls down a median wage of $5.67.

The list could go on and on, but the point is that these are the people being asked to fund another raise for the "underpaid" schoolteacher. Teachers with more experience or education get higher pay than the beginner. And what about those coaches? They make even more. Now, the teachers also have what they call a career step ladder More time on the job moves a teacher up the ladder by about $2,000 per rung. I really don't understand or care to understand how it works. I only know that the ladder is on my back, and I groan with each step up You want a job with travel? Get into public education. Pampa's teachers and administrators are constantly hopping jetliners to Austin, San Antonio, Houston, Dallas — you name it — even to Aspen, Colo. The travel always seems to involve some sort of seminar with alphabet - soup initials understood only by educators. The best hotels and meals also comfort the weary traveler.

The belly-aching teachers' groups usually cite their "low" annual pay when they demand another raise. They always fail to mention that the "annual" salary is for about half a year's work, which leaves plenty of time to find another job in the "off season."

But let's use that argument and go back to our beginning Pampa teacher's pay. When spread out over a full 12 months, the local starting teacher's pay still amounts to $1,417 per month. The annual income paid to local teachers for those 183 days on the job still tops most of the chamber list's workers, even though the peons' annual salaries are based on showing up for work every day for an entire

What about retirement? Yes, those of us destined to retire on a meager social security check and eat dog food in our old age are helping to pay for a generous pension plan for teachers.

Few of the above points are discussed when the underpaid teachers and their sponsored politicians get together to take more money from all of us high-living taxpayers. We didn't hear the arguments from Governor Mark White when he paid his debt to the teachers associations that helped put his snout into the middle of the public trough. Governor White and friends paid off these organized public employees - who more and more can influence elections - with the biggest tax increase in the state's history. But the nearly $5 billion in new state taxes now funding the teachers' latest pay raise weren't nearly enough, according to the teachers groups

The Texas State Teachers Association, the state's largest, is already lobbying in Austin for another raise. "If nothing is done in the salary arena for the next two years, we are moving toward another traumatic, expensive need to catch up again in the near future," Charles Beard, the association's president-elect, told the Senate Education Committee last week. 'If nothing is done for another two years, we are once again telling the public and teachers that education is not a top priority. I submit we cannot afford to wait," Beard told the committee I submit that Mr. Beard and the other Texas teachers who feel the same could spare me and themselves the "trauma" by finding

Besides, he may not be suited for his-new position. The association president-elect's plea for another raise wasn't too convincing: He forgot to remind the senators that nothing's too good for our children. Langley is senior staff writer of The Pampa News.

THE DESIGN OF THE GOSPEL

'For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven and returneth no thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring froth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater: so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it."
(Isaiah 55:8-11.) The gospel, like all of God's Word, is designed to do what He wants it to do. It will not return unto Him fruitless but will accomplish that which He designed it to accomplish.

The gospel is designed to save the soul of man eternally (Romans 1:16-17; I Corinthians 1:18-31; Acts 20:32; James 1:21.) People who obey the gospel of Christ will be better people, morally, but morality is a by-product of the gospel and not the prime objective. An obedient believer will be a better citizen as a result of his obedience to the gospel, but better citizenship is not the prime objective but simply a by-product. So it is re garding being better parents, chil

While many may look upon the religion of Jesus Christ as just one of the many good things of our society, and, therefore, on a par with government, schools, etc., still the only guarantee the gospel makes is the salvation of the soul. The truth is that you cannot measure up to God's standard, the gospel, without exceeding the best standard the world has to offer. One cannot please God without being the best member of any society. This is because of the exacting demands of Moral standards change, governments change, societies change, but the gospel of Christ remains the same. Because it is unchangeable, the be liever has the same responsibilities regardless of the kind of world he lives in or the kind of government he lives under. It remains God's power to save

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment

Open meetings benefit public

Some public officials in Texas like to bend, or even break, the rules of the state's Open Meetings Act. Is it a matter that only the media should worry about?

Not exactly Every Texan has a right to know how his or her taxes are being spent and why. Are the commissioners hiding a good ol' buddy deal; is the council sliding a good deal to Joe Slippery in return for free fishing vacations; is a fancy administration building going up with hardly anyone knowing until it's too late to stop? These are fictional ideas, we hope, but they point to the public's need—not just right—to know

Newspaper, radio and television reporters try to dig out that information, but it would do them precious little good to find out what's going on unless they had someone to receive the knowledge—the people of Texas. Remember, it isn't the media itself that shortcut-taking politicians fear. It's an informed public that helps keep them under control. The Open Meetings Act of Texas contains a few loopholes, and some elected officials take advantage of them. News-gathering organizations and individuals have tried for years with limited success to tighten the rules applying to government meetings. They're trying again this legislative session. Rep. Tommy Adkisson, D-San Antonio, has authoried a bill in the House

"They are merely commonsense approcaches to improvement enforcement of the act. Adkisson says. and adds that none is meant to be burdensome.

The public has the right to know all the acts of elected and appointed officials, and laws preserving that right are among the few this newspaper support. We hope Adkisson's bill gains favorable attention in the House

Experts or common man?

Those 45 or over probably remember elementary school drills where we had to write continuous letter 'O's that just touched the top and bottom lines of our note pads. The real challenge was when it had to be done not by a ball - point, but with an inkwell - dipped pen. And talking in class resulted in a recess or after - school period spent writing, "I will not talk in class" over and over and over. The greatest personal trauma for me was to make an 'r' so, according to the teacher, the rain would roll off the roof.

Then came the '50s. Experts, led by Dr. Benjamin Spock, said all this was oppressive. Tight discipline didn't allow kids the freedom to "express themselves." Keeping kids after school was cruel and inhumane punishment. The result: while the experts take on other missions, young people can't write legibly much less construct sentences that begin with capitals and maintain a subject, verb, and object. What's more the kids now are quite capable of expressing themselves: they tell their teachers to go to hell. Sometimes a teacher may object to such heady behavior, and this too - often results in assault or even murder.

Back in 1913 another bunch of experts had decided - to help manage the nation's money supply. They established the Federal Reserve Bank (FRB). Thanks to their help the nation suffered the worst depression in its history and the greatest number of bank failures. And for good measure they helped us attain a level of price instability unknown to pre - FRB America.

Now comes a new breed of experts doling out "innovative" advice. The Washington D.C., government has just issued a proposal that such crimes as burglary, weapons offenses, and drug use not be punished by jail sentences. According to the Washington Post, Mark Cunniff, executive director of the National Association of Criminal Justice Planners, said, "Given the resource crunch people are experiencing, most are falling over themselves figuring out what they can do short of sending people to prison.'

"Increasingly the issue of overcrowding and the cost of confinement is driving policymakers to rethink the issue of imprisonment," added Dale Parent, deputy director of the National Institute for Sentencing Alternatives at Brandeis

These experts would have us "rehabilitate" criminals by leaving them on the streets to prey on law - abiding citizens. Rehabilitation hasn't worked in prison, and it won't work on the streets. The experts tell us that, because of overcrowding, prisons are not safe. So they have to keep criminals out of jail; well, the reason the prisons

Years ago prison wardens came from the ranks of the prison guards. Prisoners thought thrice before they assaulted guards. Inmates didn't have access to loads of contraband. Furthermore, you didn't have the frequent escapes and riots that plague us today. Prison wardens today are college graduates, in their words, experts. With the help of the courts they've seen to it that prisoners have all kinds of "rights": the right to rape, riot, murder, and escape. We don't need money and studies for our prisons; we need to get rid of the experts and start applying some plain old fashioned common sense!

If the D.C. government proposal comes into practice, and burglary and weapons - carrying become non - jailable offenses, we should all start carrying guns. Meanwhile, I propose that we not listen to the "experts"; they've done a fine job of ruining the country. The common man is more to be trusted than any expert. The expert THINKS he know's it all; but the common citizen realizes the folly of that misconception. And the common man has a greater sense of fairness.

William F. Buckley once remarked that if he were on trial for his life, he'd rather the jury be selected at random from the Manhattan telephone directory than from the Harvard faculty list.

Makes sense to me.

Why Pittsburgh moved up

Let me see if I have this straight: Rand McNally and Company has published its latest edition of "Places Rated Alamanac," and it lists Pittsburgh as the country's most livable city?

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania? The Pittsburgh with all the unemployed steel workers? The Pittsburgh with all the cold and snow? Who did the research for this report, two guys from Gary, Indiana?

I've only been to Pittsburgh once. I was on a train between Washington and Chicago. We went through Pittsburgh at night, and we stayed just long enough to pick up a few refugees from the city who were moving west.

Pittsburgh's not the worst city in America, of course. Newark, N.J., and good ol' Gary are tied

But Pittsburgh is better than San Francisco? San Diego? Snarknavel, Utah? Atlanta, where I live, last year's No. 1 that slipped to No. 11 on the latest Rand McNally list?

I called a lady who moved to Atlanta several years ago from Pittsburgh. Her name is Mary Sheeley. I asked Mary if she thought Pittsburgh was the most livable place in the United States, and she said, "That's the bigget joke I've ever

I am a fair man, an open - minded man, however, so I decided to call somebody who lives in Pittsburgh now and ask for their opinion.

I called Peter Leo, a columnist for the Pittsburgh Post - Gazette.

"I'm demanding a recount," is what he said of the Rand McNally findings.

"I think what's going to happen now," Mr. Leo yuppie invasion. The like to shop for cities with the same precision as they shop for racquetball shoes. Pittsburgh was much happier when we were No.

One of the reasons given for Atlanta's drop was its terrible zoo. I asked Leo about Pittsburgh's

"It's often confused with the city council," he said.

And Pittsburgh's weather? "No nude sunbathing today, but the sun is out and it's over 50 degrees. Usually it's gray and 40 in March. We thank God for small favors, like 10 degrees Unemployment?

"Much higher than other cities." But you have three nice rivers running through "The Monongahela, the Allegheny and the Ohio People fish off the piers, but nobody eats the fish." What about traffic?

'Everything is accessible and convenient continued, "is we are going to have a tremendous despite the lousy streets and the potholes and the creaky bus system. It's easy to do things, like go to see baseball games. In fact, it's so easy, nobody goes. The Pirates were last in attendance last

> I had to ask Mr. Leo one more question: What, sir, do you think caused Pittsburgh to be named the nation's most livable city?

"All I can figure," he said, "is we're a lot classier in Pittsburgh now. We don't take a six pack to the symphony anymore.' (c) 1985 Cowles Syndicate. Inc

What happened to Reagan's self-rule?

BY ROBERT LEFEVRE

As I recall, one of the principle arguments summoned repeatedly in support of democratic government is the one relating to what is called "self - rule." The theory is that when democracy is practiced, the people themselves determine who their rulers will be.

There appears to be the supposition that, if given the opportunity, people in general will be wise and prudent and elect the "best" people who will then proceed to take power over them.

It would have been entirely predictable, at the beginning of our own American flirtation with the democratic process, to anticipate that politicians would appear on the scene and make every effort to convince voters as to the sterling virtues of each hopeful standing for office. The public, in general, has been about as gullible as any con man could wish. Vaccilation from a belief in magic elixers to snake - oil remedies, then to get - rich - quick schemes, and on to diving intercession by the angelic host, does not indicate wisdom or prudence. It indicates continued trust in the unlikely and a propensity toward progressive ignorance.

As I read the papers it has seemed to me that Mr. Reagan, our 'popular" president, is among those who has publicly favored "self - rule." By no stretch of the imagination has this been intended to mean that he will leave you. alone to rule or manage your own affairs. "Self - rule" in political practice means that after you have voted you no longer rule yourself or your affairs; rather a surrogate will stand in for you and make an enormous number of decisions on your behalf.

What is troubling about the Reagan stance is that it not only applies in the fifty states over which he now raises taxes, but it appears to apply over such remote places as Nicaragua. I have not been able to find a single piece of evidence supporting the notion that people in that Central American country surrendered their "self rule" to Mr. Reagan.

There is no question about the nature of the problem they have in Nicaragua. There are two factions. the "INS" and the "OUTS." Those who are now OUT of power want IN. Those who are IN are fearful of finding themselves OUT.

Now, which of these two competing groups is actually wanted by the electorate? I have no

Since the IN group is unquestionably Marxist it is inconceivable to an anti - Marxist like Mr. Reagan, that any of the electorate would vote for such a government if they knew the truth about it. He is correct on that point. The Marxist state is bad news. But Marxist regimes have often surged to power because of popular support. So those who support the INS at the present time will be adjudged by Mr. Reagan to be the victims of a confidence racket. He'd be right about that, too.

This is where the problem really takes shape. What about the group which is now OUT? Well, it was in power not too long ago and had little support that it got kicked So, it wasn't popular. As a matter of fact, it, too, came to power because it tried to con the electorate. The con didn't take well. So what's new?"

Mr. Reagan says the OUTS wear white hats and deserve American tax dollars in support. But I am impressed at this point by a note of candor. Mr. Reagan stops talking about the democratic process and the virtue of "self - rule." Instead he comes out flat - footed with the statement that he doesn't like the Poor Mr. Langley seems to have problems these days. A few weeks ago, he just got us convinced that he was not a radical and now he has all the farmers after his hide. I know the feeling Langley.

The farmer wants the boys of big brother to bail him out of a tight that he and big brother got him in. The farmer will tell you in tear-wretching dialogue about his plight. I can tolerate that. He needs to let people know what he is going through and more important why things are in the state that they are on the old family place. I think that if the farmer can get big brother to pay his bills with other peoples' money, then the next time the rent is due the government should pay mine.

The danger in this whole scheme is not that the farmer is using mine and Langleys' money to save the old homestead. The danger lies in the fact that big brother will be getting his hand in another slice of our economy and society. A very important part. Your food.

Do you know why the food prices in grocery stores in some European countries are all the same? The government controls them. The government now has too big of a voice in the food chain. Let's not give it any more.

If improper political values are in the seats of power, then it is the proper business of other politically criminal lunatics to address the impropriety. It is not the proper business of normal and decent members of society (the farmers) to try, and fail, in the jungle of politics.

A barbaric practice

I would like to make some comments about the article entitled "People Still Can't Resist That Touch of Mink" (February 28, 1985).

I for one can resist mink or any other luxury fur for that matter

Over 13 million furbearers are caught in the steel jaw leghold trap in the U.S. each year. This barbaric device snaps shut on the animal's paw causing much suffering. The animal is also exposed to the elements without food and water for several days and some even chew off their paws to escape.

There are no laws to protect ranch - raised fur animals (such as mink) from an inhumane death. They are usually subject to animal husbandry methods which cause mutations, confined in tiny cages and killed by poison, electrocution, or

It is well known that quilted parkas (or even fake furs) are just as warm as fur coats; and besides, we are not eskimos, we live inside warm, central heated houses. People only buy them because they believe they are a sign of affluence of because they think they look good on them. Personally, I believe they looked better on the original owner.

I truly want to believe that if everyone knew the suffering behind luxury fur garments, they would

Outdated traffic laws

I was recently involved in an accident on North Hobart Street. I was backing from a parking space in front of Sammons Communications. Both southbound lanes were free of traffic. A vehicle in the northbound lane turned across the street to park just as I was backing out. I backed into him. I was given a citation for unsafe backing.

I did not feel that I was at fault, so I took my case to the Municipal Court. Here I learned how out dated our city laws are. Within two blocks of the downtown area, it is illegal to make a U - turn or pull across a street to park. But every place else in town, this is "legal". On Hobart Street, the busiest street to pull acros park or make U - turns!

I could not believe this! Imagine how many accidents there would be if every driver took advantage of these "laws". It would be disastrous. When the city ordinances were written, the "downtown area" had all the business; thus all the traffic. Now Hobart Street has it.

I sincerely believe our law - makers need to review some of these laws, and make some changes to comply with the growth of the city before there are more accidents, more serious than mine

High gasoline prices

Having read several letters concerning the high cost of gasoline in Pampa prompts me to respond with my comments.

When I moved to Pampa 20 years ago, I traveled 800 miles and in Pampa, gasoline was 10 cents a gallon higher than I paid anywhere on the 800 mile trip. It has been that way since

The jobbers say they aren't making the big profit and the retailers say it's not them and I sure haven't seen any retail people that live as though they were getting rich retailing gasoline.

Let's examine the high cost of getting the gasoline delivered to Pampa. If that's the case, it makes me wonder. I have a ranch 356 miles southeast of Pampa and I buy Diamond Shamrock unleaded gasoline 15 cents a gallon cheaper than the price in Pampa, and Pampa is right under the nose of Shamrock's refinery.

Compared to 356 miles away, I say to the people of Pampa, buy just what you have to in Pampa because if you are going to Amarillo, for instance, you can save about three dollars on a 20-gallon fillup by waiting until you get there and I think you can save money on fillups any direction you are traveling

If they are so proud of their gasoline, let them keep

Wants investigation

I would like to know why we have not had an investigation on (DPS trooper) Johnny Carter, who killed Candice Ruth Smith during a high - speed chase in rush - hour traffic.

To all concerned, I didn't know Mrs. Smith and don't know trooper Carter, and I have no fuss with the Texas Department of Public Safety

I stay on the road about 360 days a year and have driven over a million miles.

I think any vehicle improperly lighted could cause this to happen. I think all patrol cars should have roof lights and be marked, so there is no chance of not knowing what they are. I feel trooper Carter should be suspended until expert reports are made and properly processed. I also think the DPS should have to pay damages if found guilty. I will conclude by stating that I have never been stopped by a state trooper in any state, when it was

I definitely do not want to be stopped as Mrs. Smith was stopped by a vehicle that I couldn't see. P.S. I think there would have been many more letters on this if people were not afraid of reprisals. NAME WITHHELD government in Nicaragua and his Chief of State echoes the sentiment and hints that we might even send troops there to help overthrow the present INS. Well, that takes off the mask. Mr. Reagan doesn't really care about the idea of "self - rule. In Central America, Reagan says he will not tolerate any Marxist regime getting started. That's clear enough. But what about democracy and the voting electorate, Mr. President? The answer seems to be: "I will support a popular government in Nicaragua as long as I favor the kind of government

That is not the statement of anyone favoring democracy. That is the statement of a war - lord and is merely an echo out of the past. This is a question that should be asked of everyone who favored Reagan in the recent contest: Do you want the government of this country to intrude into countries demanding that they love us and hate those we have chosen as our enemies? If you do favor that procedure then I must presume that you are getting ready to send a congratulatory letter to the Kremlin for doing the "right" thing in Afghanistan

I don't think we can have it both ways. I don't think we can continue to claim that we favor the freedom of people to choose their own rulers and in the same breath insist that if a choice is made which we don't like, we'll send in the troops until someone we like can be elected.

Negotiators setting stage for drawn-out arms talks

American and Russian negotiators have set the stage for what is expected to be lengthy and complex bargaining on nuclear and space arms

The eventual aim of the talks is ending the nuclear arms race on earth and preventing its extension to outer space.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who was a member of a senate observer group at the opening of the talks last week, summed up the prospects for an accord when he told a reporter "It will be a long, long, long haul."

The U.S. spokesman, Joseph

Lehman, took a similar line when he said, "I think it's going to take quite a few more negotiating sessions for us to make an assessment of whether or not we are near agreement or not."
The chief Soviet negotiator,

Victor P. Karpov, on the other hand, sounded a more hopeful note when he told reporters in the Soviet mission that if both sides want an "vou can do that on the kitchen floor, here or somewhare

The past week has seen the usual routine of delegation arrival statements, and a first full-scale meeting at which opening positions were put on the table by Karpov and by the chief U.S. delegate, Max M. Kampelman.

Nothing of substance has slipped the two sides reached at their get-acquainted meeting Tuesday in the Soviet mission, a modernistic structure behind a black steel

On Thursday came the first full-scale meeting of the three negotiators on each side who will head working groups on long-range and medium-range nuclear missiles and on space and defensive weapons systems.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday in the Soviet mission. Further sessions will go on probably until late April, when both delegations will return to their capitals for consultation, then come back to Geneva. Each side has fielded a delegation of about 80 people. While a news blackout on substantive matters has masked what the delegations are talking about, public statements by both sides prior to the conference left little doubt about the main issue.

It is President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, more commonly known as "Star Wars," a $26 billion research program to determine the feasibility of a space-based shield against nuclear missiles.

But the Soviet Union — which some Western officials believe began its own space defense research program as far back as 1977 — has assailed Reagan's project, saying it will lead to the militarization of space. The Soviets appear to link progress on reducing nuclear missiles to abandonment of Star Wars its release a government agency was immediately established to look into the industry

Abuses were found, federal guidelines were established, and one of the first of many government agencies was established. This was in early 1900 -I need not make any comment on the number of government agencies in operation today.

The Social Security agency was created because people began to feel the job of the government was to take care of the people. But, in recent years, we have begun to see government cannot afford the task. Around the world we see governments in other countries having an even more difficult time trying to take care of its people. So, whether a republic or a dictatorship, democracy, or communistic society, governments do very poorly when it comes to caring for needs people should be providing themselves

One of the major problems of this "government - will - take - care - of - me" attitude has surfaced in the retirement area. What about Social Security systems? Will it be around when you retire?

Better minds than mine have pondered that same question and have come up with conflicting answers. I'll not be so presumptuous to attempt to answer that question even now, but government statistics do indicate a vast majority will depend upon Social Security alone to support them in their retirement years.

Social Security is an insurance we've been sold by the federal government. We don't have a choice in the purchase - we're required to buy it if we work. (If you don't believe it look at your next paycheck and see what your monthly premium is. Double it because your employer is matching your contribution.)

If you become disabled and qualify for disability, or you die and your widow and - or orphans collect assistance, or if you live and at some future time are able to collect monthly benefits, no one is giving you anything - Social Security is something you've payed for as part of your financial future.

It's part of your financial plan. But the question is, is it enough?

There is scant evidence in the economic news of anything like a serious recession on the horizon.

But by the time standards of recent history, the present recovery is no longer youthful. As just about every expert will readily acknowledge, no one has yet found a way to abolish the business cycle.

Aviation industry having tough time

NEW YORK (AP) - U.S. builders of airplanes for business and private use see little chance their industry will enjoy a sharp climb in 1985.

There is hope for at least a gradual, steady recovery from four years of declining sales. But demand remains sluggish, forcing the general aviation industry to further consolidate and cut costs. Case in point: Gulfstream Aerospace Corp., which this past week said it was suspending research and development on a $1.6 million business jet called the Peregrine.

Gulfstream had hailed the plane as the world's first single-engine business jet. But for now, the company said it could not justify the plane's startup costs.

"The market just isn't strong enough to absorb the number of aircraft you would have to sell to recover your investment," about 10 planes a month, said James L. Bradbury, Gulfstream's chief financial officer.

Two months ago, Savannah, Ga-based Gulfstream also discontinued its line of Commander Jetprop planes "due to the decline in the turboprop market. The cutbacks go beyond headquarters to save money.

Gulfstream. Consider: -Piper Aircraft Corp., a unit of Lear Siegler Inc., is consolidating production at its Vero Beach, Fla.,

— Cessna Aircraft Co. is combining its two manufacturing divisions to reduce costs and improve efficiency. Cessna Chairman Russell E. Meyer told reporters this past week the company is "barely" making an operating profit despite improved sales of business jets

-Beech Aircraft Corp., a unit of Raytheon Corp., has imposed a cost-reduction program.

-Gates Learjet Corp. laid off 800 workers in September and suspended basic production of two business-jet lines. Last month, however, it announced plans to resume production of one model.

The various companies have unique problems depending on what models they build. And conversely there are pockets of strength in certain lines. But executives say one problem appears to cut across all product lines - too many used aircraft are on the market.

"This is the biggest problem facing the industry as a whole," said Gates Learjet spokesman James Greenwood. "Until that supply is exhausted, we're not going to see a large upturn in new airplane sales. But we are encouraged that the supply is diminishing.

In other developments this past week:

-Retail sales jumped 1.4 percent in February, their strongest advance since November, the Commerce Department said.

-Wholesale prices dipped 0.1 percent in February despite sharp increases in fresh fruit and vegetable prices caused by January's freeze in Florida, the Labor Department said.

Less • Wai-Mart Sells for Less • Wai-Mart Sells

Within the Kremlin's towering old walls, a new man has taken charge, a young Communist Party general secretary who last week sat down to a desk piled high with problems accumulated over a generation.

After years of inaction under a parade of elderly, sickly party bosses, the stale Soviet system demands reform, a firm shakeup. And the new boss, Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 54, sounds like a reformer.

Last Monday, when he was named to succeed the late General Secretary Konstantin U. Chernenko, he spoke of a "decisive turn," of finding a "creative way" to end the Soviet Union's economic stagnation.

Gorbachev looks like a reformer, too.
Unlike the stolid, gray and secretive men who preceded him, this lively lawyer with the stylish wife, two university degrees and personal familiarity with a dozen foreign countries seems capable of leading his huge nation in imaginative directions.

"Gorbachev is easily the best-educated and most sophisticated Soviet leader since Lenin," journalist-historian Thomas G. Butson notes in a biography of new Kremlin chief.

But the specialists who closely follow Moscow politics question whether the new man can indeed overcome the inertia of the heavily centralized Soviet system — and whether he truly wants to

"He is a classical party 'apparatchik,' '' said Cornell University "Kremlinologist" Myron Rush, using the Russian word for a career party functionary.

Rush, who has made a career of studying the Soviet succession process, pointed out in a telephone interview that Gorbachev did not fight his way up, but was pulled up the Communist ladder by such men as the late President Yuri V. Andropov.

An AP news analysis

The economy and society he inherits are not unrelentingly bleak.

The Soviet Union is still the world's greatest the Soviet Union is still the world's greatest storehouse of natural resources. Last year it completed two gargantuan projects — a natural gas pipeline and new railroad — that will help it tap its Siberian riches.

Trade and living standards advance steadily: Net energy exports to the non-Communist world rose 9 percent last year, domestic sales of color televisions 35 percent.

The society appears stable. Last week's Kremlin shuffle went smoothly. And, five years after Solidarity sprang to life in Poland, Soviet workers still show little restiveness.

The system's shortcomings, however, are obvious and severe:

— Food is rationed in some cities. Meat is scarce, vegetables poor. Last year's 170 million tons of grain fell 70 million short of the target, the sixth poor harvest in a row.

Housing remains short. One-fifth of Muscovites still share toilet or kitchen facilities with other families.
 Infant mortality is twice the U.S. rate.

Alcoholism is epidemic. Male life expectancy dropped from 66 years to 62 in the past two decades.

- The Soviet economy grew in 1984 by 2.6

percent, the second slowest year since World War II.

In 1959, one of Gorbachev's predecessors, Nikita S. Khrushchev, vowed the Soviet economy would overtake the American by 1980. Today, on a per-capita basis, the U.S. gross national product is twice the Soviet. And in the critical new arena, high technology, the Soviets are slipping desperately behind.

Gorbachev's Kremlin 'godfather,' Andropov, made a start down the reform road in his brief 1982-84 turn at the top. But it was regarded as a limited first step, a bid to clean corruption out of the system, not to try out a new system. Could Gorbachev, another faithful party insider do more?

But, over and over, analysts underscore a single point — Gorbachev and his thinking remain largely a mystery.

"We do not know what Mr. Gorbachev might or might not do," Harvard's Adam Ulam said simply

The Soviet specialists make another point, too:

Gorbachev was a child during the 1930s, without first-hand knowledge of the bloodiest excesses of Josef Stalin's dictatorial regime, knowledge that weighed heavily on Kremlin leaders of the '50s, '60s and '70s. Analysts long have warned that the younger generation, once it finally came to power, might drift back toward Stalinist ideals of discipline and single-mindedness.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Charles J. Hanley, based in New York, specializes in foreign affairs for The Associated Press.

U.S. Senate evenly split on MX issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents and supporters of spending $1.5 billion for 21 additional MX nuclear missiles each hold 42 votes in a poll of senators, leaving the outcome of President Reagan's first big congressional test of the year with

An Associated Press survey indicates an extremely close battle this week when the MX debate moves to the Senate floor, where there remain undecided senators in both parties.

The AP count was similar to one taken by Assistant Democratic leader Sen. Alan Cranston of California, who said he found a 46-46 tie with eight senators undecided.

"It's going to be extremely tight." predicted Fred Werthheimer, president of Common Cause, who has been lob by in g against the multiple-warhead nuclear weapon. Reagan has been doing lobbying of his own, inviting undecided senators to the White House and calling others on the telephone.

Among the key undecided votes in the Senate are Arlen Specter, R-Pa.; Daniel Evans, R-Wash.; Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H.; Russell Long, D-La.; Charles McC Mathias Jr., R-Md.; and Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va.

A critical unknown is how Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, will vote. Goldwater said early this year that he had decided the MX could never be made invulnerable to attack by Soviet intercontinental missiles, and so would oppose it.

More recently, he has been saying to kill the MX now would be sign of weakening national will during the arms control negotiations now opening in Geneva

There will be two Senate votes, one on Tuesday and the second on Thursday. If either goes against the MX, the fight is over and the 21 MXs won't be installed, as planned, in some existing Minuteman missile silos.

If the Senate approves the money, the issue moves to the House where two additional votes are scheduled tentatively for the next Tuesday.

ompany maps future on Texas past

By KIRK LADENDORF Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Sesquicentennial could make John Davis and his partners well off or broke.

The 33-year-old Austin history buff and former textbook salesman has spent the past three years researching and planning historical maps and a datebook to be marketed in conjunction with the 150th anniversary of Texas' revolution from Mexico.

Now, with the sesquicentennial drawing near, Davis has some products completed and ready to sell, while others are awaiting financing or finishing touches on production work. The celebration officially starts Jan. 1, 1986.

"It could be rags to riches," Davis says. "But it could also be rags to rags.

Promotion companies will be flooding Texas with tons of inexpensive trinkets with sesquicentennial emblems everything from plastic beer cups to bumper stickers and pennants.

But Davis is counting on a strong demand for more expensive works - large wall maps that range from $40 to well over $1,000 and a thick art-filled datebook that will trace

the 15 months of the Texas revolution

The datebook was to be the first project, but it might become the last product to be available for sale, because of the expected $500,000 production costs. Davis and business partners are hunting for financing for that project and for a proposed Texas puzzle-map.

Davis says he conceived the project while driving the immense lonely distances of West Texas headed toward El Paso. He quickly became immersed in the researching and chronicling the events of each day in the revolution that started so badly and ended so

Davis soon realized he needed a map to tell the story of what happened in the revolution, charting the sites of early battles. the long retreat and the final victory by Sam Houston at San Jacinto.

enlisted Не archeologist-cartographer Richard Hubbard to draw the state in a style that is both geographically correct, and artfully styled after maps produced 100 years ago. And on that map Davis plotted the battles and events of the Texas revolution. Hubbard takes modern topographic maps and translates them into a historic visual style, with the limestone cliffs of the Edwards Plateau standing out against the plains of the Eastern part of the state.

"I'm like a fossil in my own time," Hubbard says. "I draw like the people drew 100 years ago."

The result is art - a correct modern wall map with the feel of antiquity. The first special editions were printed on an antique press in Colorado Springs. Later editions were run off at Tracor's Austin printing plant.

The map met with a warm reception last year from buyers with a special feeling for Texas. History buffs and map collectors love the map and many women buy the map as a distinctive gift for their husbands or sons. One buyer called in an order for a map after he tried unsuccessfully to charge a $1,100 version of the map in an expensive frame to his hotel bill

Six framed copies of the map were donated to the president of Mexico and one of them is expected to hang in the presidential palace in Mexico City.

Davis' company, Texas Sesquicentennial Press, reported nearly $30,000 in sales in the final four months of last year. He estimates his business investment so far at $100,000. Virtually all the sales revenue has been plowed back into the heavy printing costs.

The company has also printed thousands of postcards with reduced versions of the map printed. They will sell for $1 apiece, appealing to those who don't want to pay for the more expensive

The next map in the three-map series is the 1986 map to be followed this summer by the Republic of Texas map. The maps and datebook have been designated the official commemorative maps by the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission.

Davis is confident the maps and the datebook will continue to appeal to buyers long after the sesquicentennial is over.

"It has an infinite shelf life," he says. "They'll be selling it at the (Texas) bicentennial.

Treasure hunter looks ahead to adventure

READING, Pa. (AP) — At 42, Burt D. Webber Jr. remains the adventurer's adventurer.

He is the man who, in 1978. recovered $13.8 million in treasure and relics from the sunken Spanish galleon La Nuestra Senora de la Concepcion in the Silver Shoals, 80 miles north of the Dominican

But after a career that has included a brush with a Cuban gunboat, a scrape with an angry mob on Grand Cayman Island, the wear and tear of work beneath the sea, and the boom or bust of hunting shipwrecks, Webber is a man smart enough to know when it is time to give up

"I don't think I'll ever lose the adventure lust," he said. But, he also feels he has, more or less, used up his nine lives

'I'm the kind of person who has tremendous problems on crews," Webber said "I can't discipline myself to stay out of the action, that's where it gets kind of dangerous

During recent explorations of the waters off Cape Hatteras, N.C., where powerful currents tug in opposite directions and predators hunt, Webber said, he began to feel

But he is not going to quit before he takes on two more operations

One is a search for the remains of the Jesus Maria de la Limpia Concepcion, which went down off Punta Santa Elena, Ecuador, in

Though partially salvaged by the Spanish soon after she foundered on a coral reef, the Limpia Concepcion is still believed to contain a booty worth $15 to $16 million

Webber said he had already obtained a salvage lease from the Ecuadorian government; and his associates have located what they believe is the remains of a camp the Spaniards used when they recovered part of the Limpia Concepcion treasure in colonial

The galleon, the flagship of a fleet, struck the Chanduy Reef as it was bound for Panama with precious metals from points in

According to Webber, the wreckage lies in 40 feet of cold. murky water. However, with the help of instruments, he believes the salvage job should be "relatively Webber's second project is an attempt to recover the rich cargo of the steamship Central America. which sank off Cape Hatteras in 1857.

counting the liquids as crude petroleum oil for well classification

The independents allegedly have been counting the extracted liquids to maintain their oil well status under the gas-oil ratios of the RRC rules and regulations. But most of their money reportedly has been made from the sale of the gas taken from their oil wells, not from oil

Still, the independents did receive minor victories in the recommendations

Despite Dorchester's claims, the FERC recommendation upholds the independents' rights to produce casinghead gas. Such gas is not subject to the federal pricing controls, the recommendation

In the RRC ruling, the examiners reject Phillips Petroleum Co.'s request for amended field rules for the Panhandle fields. However, the examiners rule Statewide Rule 79(9) is applicable to the fields, a matter the independents had claimed otherwise.

The RRC decision does not specifically prohibit the use of the LTX units. But it does rule that the resultant liquids from such units cannot be counted as crude oil for well classification purposes.

Both rulings uphold the contracts and lease rights under which oil and gas rights were separated in parts of the Panhandle fields, further strengthening the independents' claims to ownership of casinghead gas.

But both findings indicate, directly or implicitly, that most of the gas being produced by the independents is not casinghead gas and instead has been produced from gas-bearing strata that they had allegedly perforated wrongfully.

A number of issues and concerns were not directly addressed in the rulings, but they have significant import

And the economic matters are probably the most important of

The independents, of course, face great economic straits if the decisions against them are upheld and they are required to pay back the overcharges and are assessed punishment penalties under the FERC decision. And, the independents claim, their economic problems can spread throughout the Panhandle in a rippling effect.

The paybacks and penalties could bankrupt many of the independents, causing layoffs and unemployment for a number of oilfield workers. And that could lead to layoffs and unemployment in oil-related industries, further weakening the economic strength of the area

And if that occurs, the economic distress could spread into the communities, affecting other businesses and employment, the independents say.

The independents also warn of growing federal intrusion into the petroleum industry, taking over matters better left to state rules and regulations. One matter in the FERC

On Page 32 of the FERC proposal, they note, Cabot refers to a theory which had been put forward by the FERC enforcement

"Enforcement Staff presented in its rebuttal case a new theory that any well producing above a gas-oil ratio of 2000 to 1, would indicate perforations in the free gas zone above the gas-oil contact in violation of Railroad Commission

They claim this portends problems for all oil wells throughout the United States, not just for the independents in the Panhandle Field.

Representatives for the independents have stated any of the rationale from the evidence and testimony used to formulate the ruling becomes part of the opinion and can be cited as a precedent in other rulings. If accepted, that ratio of gas to oil could threaten the current well classification system established by the RRC, they assert. And if that classification system is overthrown, it would impair the production of casinghead gas and even oil.

Under the independents interpretation of the paragraph, any gas above the 2000 to 1 ratio could be ruled as not being casinghead gas, and thus any gas above that ratio could considered dedicated to interstate commerce in any area where such dedication is in effect.

The federal agency could use that ruling to increase its control over gas and oil production, they

Other significant matters include the 100,000 to 1 gas-oil ratio used by the RRC to classify oil wells. If that amount of casinghead gas cannot be produced from low oil producing wells, why has the RRC permitted such production ratios in the past without much questioning, some independents have asked. Such questions may not have much import in other gas and oil fields throughout the state. But in this area where oil and gas rights are commonly separated, they can have significant importance.

Still, amid the other issues, the economic matters loom as the important ones.

With the increased production of gas by the oil producers in recent years, royalty owners have seen larger checks - until cut off or held back by the pending litigation matters - and school districts and counties have seen their tax base

Those incomes would drop again, perhaps drastically, if the independents are required to decrease their operations or shut down their wells.

And the numerous other lawsuits are still pending in the courts, with other rulings yet to occur there. Matters are yet to be resolved.

Both federal and state rulings can go completely against the independents, shutting them down. As many as 10,000 of 12,000 wells in the Panhandle would have to close if the recommendations are accepted, independents claim.

Or compromises can be made, rules changed, accommodations reached on gas-oil ratios or gas production, or other solutions reached to maintain the increased economic activity resulting from the independents' oil production.

All that remains to be determined.

Man leaves oil field for world of safari

By JAN TOMAS San Angelo Standard-Times

SONORA, Texas (AP) - The first thing to notice about George Hoffman is a dollar-sized lion's tooth which hangs on a gold chain around his neck

The sharp, gold-encircled tooth is a fitting symbol for the professional big-game hunter, who conducts safaris through the Sudan, Mozambique, Rhodesia. South Africa, Tanzania and Angola or six months each year. He is one of about 10 Americans who guide hunters in Africa.

Hoffman's living room is a preservationist's nightmare. A 58-head collection of game trophies adorns the walls. A greater kudu, sprouting long, curving horns, leans three feet away from the wall. Two giant elephant tusks curve around the fireplace while a cape buffalo commands space above the mantle. A stool, made from an elephant's foot, sits in a

A complete, stuffed leopard creeps behind two couches. A lion skin, along with other animal hides, lies atop the wall-to-wall carpet.

The trophies educate a visitor. One sees the enormous size of the cape buffalo; its horns rest on its head like a dowager's hat. A black sable head is turned sideways, its neck huge and powerful, the horns gently curving backward.

The 49-year-old Hoffman "retired" five years ago from a petroleum and mining engineer's, career to conduct game safaris full-time. While employed in New Mexico and Colorado, he guided people on deer and elk hunts in his spare time. A hunter all his life, Hoffman said he dreamed of earning a living as a guide. But the hunting season in the United States was too short for that occupation.

In 1971, Hoffman visited Africa on business. Thinking this would be his only opportunity to hunt on the Dark Continent, Hoffman cashed in his life savings and borrowed money to join a three-week safari.

The safari changed Hoffman's life. "There is an old African saying. 'When you have tasted the waters of the Zambesi (river) you will return,' I fell in love with the country. There were vast spaces and great herds of animals. There was always something in sight to keep your interest.

Hoffman found himself staying awake to listen to the night sounds. "I was used to hearing coyotes. Now I heard lions, hyenas and jackals. It got to be enjoyable after

Hoffman decided, "If ever there was a way, I'd go back." He would find a way to ply his trade in

Eight years later, Hoffman set up his business. Professional Hunters, Ltd.

Hoffman had to obtain licenses to conduct safaris in the various African countries. He passed written and field tests required by governments acutely aware of game preservation and the hard currency brought in by the tourist-hunters.

In South Africa, where Hoffman became the first licensed American professional hunter, he had to pass an eight-hour written test and spend two days in the field identifying tracks of animals at water holes and proving his skills in other practical matters. He had to know the habits and habitats of 40 different animals.

One test was to identify male and female animals without using the horns, Hoffman said. "The zebra is the most difficult, but I learned from a biologist that the male has a wider black stripe at the base of his Habits must be learned as thoroughly as markings. Hunters can approach an elephant as close as 20 feet. If an elephant is alone, a client is advised to aim for the brain. However, elephants usually move in groups. If a brain-shot immediately drops an elephant, the other elephants will charge the hunter, Hoffman said. The solution is to shoot for an elephant's heart. The elephant will run in the direction it faces and the others will follow. When the wounded elephant drops, the other elephants will move on, Hoffman said.

One advantage Hoffman holds over other professional hunters is that he can track animals, a skill most hunters learn in the United States. European hunters depend on black trackers to find and follow game, he said.

An average bag for most clients is about 25 animals, Hoffman said. He added that game is so plentiful in Africa that environmentalists need not be concerned about animals being hunted to near extinction, he said. Leopards, once considered an endangered species. are often shot as vermin in several countries. Hoffman said

Hoffman's biggest concern is with countries that have been taken over by rebels. Wild game is shot to feed entire armies, Hoffman said.

About eight percent of the animals killed in Africa die from sport-hunting. The rest are killed by poachers or by people who live in the area who need food.

Government policies can also ruin an animal population, Hoffman said. For example, before Idi Amin took over Uganda, there were about 30,000 elephants there. When he was deposed, an elephant search revealed only three animals left in the country.

Concern for safety of the visitors is reflected in all countries' regulations, Hoffman said. For example, if a client wounds a cat, the guide must go into the bush alone and kill the animal, Hoffman

Wounded cats are unpredictable. Hoffman said. He recalled how a lion once jumped out of the bush in front of Hoffman and his client. Hoffman brought the jeep to a halt. the client jumped out, aimed his rifle and shot the big cat in the stomach. The cat disappeared into the bush

Before Hoffman could leave the jeep to pursue the cat, the animal emerged again from the bush and charged the client. Hoffman hurriedly placed the jeep between the lion and the client. The lion charged on, colliding head-on with the jeep. The big cat bent the grill guard and sunk his teeth twice into the hood, leaving two half-inch diameter holes. The client, about six feet away from the animal, quickly dispatched the lion.

Hoffman advises clients to bring the same rifle they use to hunt elk for plains game. For bigger and dangerous animals such as elephants, rhinos and lions, Hoffman suggests a .375-caliber Holland and Holland. For himself, Hoffman uses a rifle he designed after the obsolete 416 Rigby. The 416 Hoffman has an improved shell casing so it will fit a shorter standard American magnum action. Many of his clients "bring something they read about, bought and can't shoot," Hoffman said.

Sometimes a client needs to check his wallet before shooting. All African countries charge a fee for each animal killed. A cape buffalo can command as much as $2,000 in South Africa, but only cost $230 in Tanzania, Hoffman said. Elephants can cost as much as $10,000. A leopard costs $700 to $1,500 depending on the country. In Tanzania, a government agent stays in camp and rides along with the hunt to collect the fees, Hoffman said.

If someone signs on for a Hoffman safari, the price averages about $20.000. Photography trips cost considerably less, about $3,500. Hoffman's daughter, Cindy Hoffman, who was graduated from Angelo State University in 1983, often conducts both photography and hunting safaris. She is the first woman in South Africa to be licensed as a professional hunter, her father said.

Clients arrive at a tented camp. A staff of 15 supervised by Hoffman's wife, Mary Hoffman, cook, clean and do the laundry. Everyone awakens at 4 a.m. The staff lights fires to heat water for tea and coffee. The generator for the lights begins rumbling. At 5 a.m., tea and coffee are served in bed. Breakfast is served shortly afterwards in a mess tent on linen tablecloths and good china.

By daylight, the client leaves camp to hunt.

SMU ousted, Georgetown keeps rolling along

Loyola's Andre Moore (41) and SMU's Kevin Lewis (42) bat-

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) -Carl Golston scored 20 points, and 14th-ranked Loyola (Ill.) broke the game open with a seven-point run late in the second half as the Ramblers stretched the nation's longest winning streak to 19 games with a 70-57 NCAA tournament victory over Southern Methodist Saturday. The victory in the East regional moved the Ramblers, the 1963 NCAA champions, into the third round against top-ranked Georgetown, the defending champions. They will play Thursday night in Providence, R.I.

Trailing 56-50 with 7:28 left in the game, Southern Methodist suffered a 5:03 scoring drought while Loyola was building a 63-50 advantage with 2:40 to play.

Alfredrick Hughes, the nation's leading scorer, started the surge with a 14-foot jumper from the left. Andre Moore then hit one of two free throws. Greg Williams stole the ball and was credited with a basket on a goaltending call. Williams ended the uprising with two foul shots.

Loyola's lead never dipped below 10 points the rest of the

The Ramblers, 27-5, got 14 points from Hughes, who started the game with a 27.3-point average, 12 from Andre Battle and 10 from Williams.

Southern Methodist, 23-10 after going down to its fifth loss in its last nine games, was led by center Jon Koncak with 19 points, Larry Davis with 14 and Carl Wright with 13.

The Mustangs led from the first basket of the game, a layup by Koncak with 12 seconds gone, until late in the first half when the Ramblers reeled off six consecutive points.

Moore hit a short shot before Mike Cenar, the only substitute used by Lovola in the first half. sank a layup 3:35 before halftime to give the Ramblers a 27-26 lead. Cenar followed it with a 15-foot bank shot.

Lovola never trailed again and held a 31-30 edge at intermission.

Top-ranked Georgetown, the defending national collegiate basketball champion, continued its quest for a second straight NCAA title, beating Temple 63-46 Saturday in an East Regional second-round game at Hartford.

Michael Jackson's 14 points led a balanced offense for the Hoyas, who won their 14th consecutive game in improving their season's record to 32-2. Defensively, the Hoyas put the wraps on Temple forwards Granger Hall and Charles Rayne. The two, who had combined for an average of 31.2 points per game during the regular season, collected only 13 against the big, muscular Hoyas. Georgetown's smothering defense forced Temple to shoot mostly from outside

Reggie Williams scored 13 points for Georgetown and Patrick Ewing and David Wingate had 12 each. Nate Blackwell led Temple, 25-6, with 15 points.

The victory moved Georgetown into Thursday's round of 16 in the NCAA tournament. The Hoyas will next face No. 14 Loyola of Chicago, a 70-57 winner over Southern Methodist in the other East Regional second-round game at Hartford.

In a Southeast Regional second-round game at South Bend, Ind., seventh ranked North Carolina edged Notre Dame 60-58 on Kenny Smith's driving slam-dunk layup with three seconds remaining

And in a Midwest Regional second-round game at Tulsa, Okla., No. 8 Louisiana Tech trimmed Ohio State 79-67.

Carl Golston scored 20 points for Loyola, which extended its winning streak to 19, the longest in the nation among major colleges.

The Ramblers, 27-5, the 1963 NCAA champions, also got 14 points from Alfredrick Hughes, the nation's leading scorer with a 27.3 average.

Jon Koncak paced SMU, 23-10, with 19 points and Larry Davis scored 14.

Loyola, which took the lead for good late in the first half, took command during a 5:03 stretch late in the second half. In that span, the Ramblers scored seven points while holding SMU scoreless and built their lead from 56-50 to 63-50.

Smith's winning basket for North Carolina, 26-8, came on a lead pass from Curtis Hunter.

Hunter had grabbed a loose ball that kicked off the left knee of Notre Dame's David Rivers after the Irish had run down the clock for more than a minute in hopes of getting the final shot with the score 58-58.

Smith finished with 12 points, while teammate Brad Daugherty led all scorers with 18.

Redmen edge Razorbacks

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Chris Mullin scored 26 points and third-ranked St. John's held off a determined Arkansas comeback bid to defeat the Razorbacks 68-65 Saturday in NCAA West sub-regional basketball tournament action.

St. John's, 29-3 and the top seed in the West, advances to the West regional in Denver, where they will face on next Friday the winner of the Nevada-Las Vegas-Kentucky game played later Saturday.

The Redmen led by as many as eight points throughout the game, the last time on a pair of Mullin free throws at 60-52 with 4:23 left in the game. Arkansas center Joe Kleine scored six points during a two-minute stretch to draw the Razorbacks to within 62-61 with 1:32 remaining.

But six St. John's free throws and three fine defensive plays helped protect the lead. Guard Mike Moses canned two free throws to pad the Redmens' lead to 64-61, and St. John's center Bill Wennington then blocked a William Mills shot. Mullin followed with two free throws to make it 66-61 with 36 seconds left, and Wennington subsequently stole a pass.

After Kleine's turn-around jumper made it 66-63, Moses stole an Arkansas pass, was fouled and made both foul shots to help secure the victory

St. John's scored eight straight points early in the game, capped by Mullin's two free throws following a technical foul assessed against Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton, to go ahead 14-7. The Razorbacks pulled within two points, but two straight baskets by Mullin made it 30-2 late in the half and the Redmen carried a 32-26 lead at intermission. Mullin had 14 points in the half.

St. John's defensive plan was to sag inside on Kleine, tempting Arkansas to take the outside jumper. Although Kleine was held to seven points in the first half, he finished with 23. But Mills and Allie Freeman were unable to capitalize sufficiently from the outside, finishing with 12 and 11 points, respectively.

Lamar upsets Cougars

Lamar Coach Pat Foster found a way to thank his Cardinals for their upset victory over Houston in first-round National Invitational Tournament play.

"I am no longer a candidate for the job at Auburn," he said after Lamar's 78-71 homecourt victory Friday night. He had earlier had his name in the running for Auburr University's top coaching spot.

"I'm excited about coaching these young players another year. I think we're going to have an outstanding basketball team." Foster said. "That overshadows everything else.

The win was only the second time the Cardinals have beaten Houston in 21 games. The first time was in 1969, when most of Friday's players were barely out of diapers. The Cardinals out-rebounded the Cougars, 38-36, and Houston shot only 43.6 percent from the field, including 35.1 percent in the second

"The difference was, we missed too many shots," said Cougars

For Foster, however, it was the crowd that made the difference.

"For about 28 minutes there, we were just hanging on. We got that run in the second half and then the crowd got into the game," he said 'That made the difference for us."

The Cardinals, 20-11, will play Tennessee-Chattanooga in Beaumont in the second round of NIT play Wednesday night. Houston ends it season at 16-14, its most losses in five years.

"This win gives us some credibility," Foster said. "It continues our streak of big wins over big-name schools in post-season play.

In 1979, Lamar beat Weaver State and Oregon in the NCAA. Then in 1980, it overcame Missouri in the NCAA tournment. And in 1982, it won over Alabama in the NCAA and went on to lose by only two points to Villanova

"I am convinced we have a bright future," Foster said in explaining his decision to take his name out of the running at Auburn. The cooperative spirit is here. The facility is a tremendous plus and the development of our young players is another plus.'

Foster had been at Lamar since 1980 and it was his first head coaching job

Sources at Lamar say he and university officials reached an agreement on the terms of a new contract this week. The sources said Foster will make around $170,000 in salary and fringe benefits next year, more than triple what he was making his first year at Lamar.

Lamar came from 10 points behind on the sharp shooting of Puntus Wilson to defeat Houston. Anthony Todd led the Cardinals with 23 points, while Wilson hit 19, James Gulley 12 and Jerry Everett

The Cougars were led by Greg Anderson's 25 points, 12 rebounds and four assists.

Navy pulls off shocker

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer

Although Navy hasn't had much of a basketball tradition, the Middies are making waves in the NCAA tournament.

'They totally dominated us." said a deflated Dale Brown-after his 20th-ranked Louisiana State team was bounced out of the NCAA playoffs Friday by the unheralded Midshipmen, making their first NCAA tournament appearance since 1960.

Getting 20 points from Vernon Butler, Navy pulled off the shocker of first-round play with the surprisingly easy 78-55 victory over LSU in the Southeast Regionals at Dayton, Ohio.

'It wasn't a fluke," Brown said. 'The points are almost incredible. You have moments of embarrassment. That's what it is.'

In improving their record to 26-5, the Middies advanced to the Southeast's second round Sunday against Maryland, which edged Miami of Ohio 69-68 in overtime in Friday's action. In other action in the Southeast Regionals, Michigan survived a scare from Fairleigh Dickinson 59-55 and Villanova nipped Dayton 51-49.

In the East Regional at Atlanta, 12 Illinois defeated Northeastern 76-57, 19th-ranked Georgia beat Wichita State 67-59, No. 15 Syracuse beat DePaul 70-65 and No. 6 Georgia Tech defeated Mercer 65-58.

In the Midwest at Houston, No. 5 Memphis State defeated Pennsylvania 67-55. Alabama-Birmingham beat Michigan State 70-68, Boston College edged No. 17 Texas Tech 55-53 and No. 10 Duke trimmed Pepperdine 75-62. North Carolina State topped Nevada-Reno 65-56, Texas-El Paso whipped Tulsa 79-75, Virginia Commonwealth crushed Marshall 81-65 and Alabama beat Arizona 50-41 in the West at Albuquerque, N.M.

The NCAA tourney continues today with second round action. In the East Regional at Hartford, Conn., it's No. 1 Georgetown against Temple and Southern Methodist against Loyola, Ill. Notre Dame plays North Carolina and Auburn meets Kansas in the Southeast at South Bend, Ind. In the Midwest at Tulsa, Okla., it's Louisiana Tech against Ohio State and Oklahoma vs. Illinois State.

meeting Arkansas and Kentucky against Nevada-Las Vegas.

Butler's 20 points included 10 in a row from the foul line, and Navy's 3-foot-11 center, David Robinson, had 18 points as well as neutralizing LSU's inside game. Navy, winner of the ECAC South tournament, broke open a close game in the second half, running up leads as large as 16 points over the Tigers. And, when LSU was forced to foul, Navy was nearly flawless from the line, converting 24-of-29 attempts for the game.

Jeff Adkins tipped in a rebound with 14 seconds left in overtime as Maryland survived a Miami rally. Adkins' winning shot came after a missed shot by Adrian Branch.

Leslie Rockymore and Robert Henderson rallied second-ranked Michigan from a 10-point second-half deficit to a tense victory over Fairleigh Dickinson. The victory improved the Wolverines' school-record winning streak to 17 games.

Harold Jensen's driving basket with 1:11 left earned Villanova a tight victory over Dayton. The game was tied for the third time in the second half, the last at 49 on Ed Pinckney's layup with 3:35 to go. The Wildcats then controlled the ball until Jensen, a 6-foot-5 reserve sophomore, saw the opening and went in uncontested. East

Illinois used a 23-point performance from Ken Norman and a tough defense to beat Northeastern. Illinois led by 12 points at halftime and stretched that advantage to as many as 29 in the second half.

Georgia went on a 16-2 run, with Cedric Henderson and Joe Ward scoring six points apiece, to take a 47-33 lead that put Wichita State away with 10:08 to play. The teams were tied at 31 when Henderson started the six-minute burst.

Dwayne "Pearl" Washington scored 15 of his 23 points from the free throw line as 15th-ranked Syracuse trimmed DePaul. Syracuse won the game at the free throw line, hitting 20 of 24 attempts in the second half, with Washington leading the way with 10 in a row after intermission and 15 of 16 for

Georgia Tech got 19 points from Yvon Joseph and survived a second-half scare to down Mercer. The Atlantic Coast Conference champions surged to an 18-point lead in the first half and-led by that many 21/2 minutes into the second six points with 95 seconds remaining Midwest Andre Turner took over for Keith Lee when the All-America forward got into foul trouble, leading Memphis State over Penn. Lee played only 61 seconds of the second half before drawing his fourth foul as Penn built a lead of 31-26. The lead changed hands 17 times before Turner, who scored 16 points, helped Memphis State run off nine straight points.

Steve Mitchell and Jerome Mincy scored 18 points apiece, and Alabama-Birmingham held on to beat Michigan State, which got 32 points from Sam Vincent. A late surge by Vincent and a basket by Scott Skiles at the buzzer cut the final margin to two after UAB had led 59-51 with 6:26 to play.

Michael Adams' 25-foot jumper with five seconds to play carried Boston College over Texas Tech. Adams, who scored 17 points, got the ball with 13 seconds to play after a timeout, dribbled to the top of the key, and let fly with a perfect shot. Boston College had stalled the final 1:31 off the clock before the game-winner.

David Henderson scored 22 points and Johnny Dawkins had 21 to lead Duke over Pepperdine. The Blue Devils surged from a 34-32 halftime lead to a 61-46 bulge midway in the second half with Dawkins and Henderson providing the sock. West Lorenzo Charles returned to the scene of his greatest triumph by scoring 22 points and grabbing 12 rebounds in North Carolina State's victory over Nevada-Reno. Charles' last-second basket two years ago gave the Wolfpack the NCAA title with a victory over Houston at the University of New Mexico Arena.

Luster Goodwin scored 23 points, and Dave Feitl hit two free throws with three seconds left to secure Texas-El Paso's upset of Tulsa. UTEP led 77-75 when Tulsa's David Moss missed a 10-footer that could have tied the score with four seconds left. Feitl got the rebound and was fouled, making both ends of the one-and-one.

Bobby Lee Hurt scored 14 points and teamed with power forward Buck Johnson to take charge of the inside game as the Crimson Tide beat Arizona. Hurt and Johnson took control of a lackluster contest that saw Arizona score only two field goals in the opening 10 minutes and make only 14 of 48 shots from the field in the contest.

The Pampa Harvesters were on a roll when the 1984-85 basketball season came to an abrupt end. But for the first time in five years and the first time in coach Garland Nichols' reign, the Harvesters' final game wasn't a playoff loss, but a regular season victory. And that last game happened to be a 63-61 win over Lubbock Dunbar, the team that beat out Pampa for the runnerup spot in the playoffs.

'We came so close to being in the playoffs," lamented Nichols, who still logged his fifth consecutive 20th- victory season (20-9) in six seasons as Harvester head coach.

Garland Nichols

"I can't help but think if the district schedule had been reversed and we had been playing those last games at home we would have made it. We were really tough down the stretch. I know the kids feel like the season was just getting started when it ended.

Golfers or bowlers who are also Harvester basketball fans can understand how Nichols feels.

Have you ever played 15 tortuous holes out of the rough and then finally straightened out that hook or slice just as darkness fell? Or have you ever found that strike target in the final game after throwing the ball everywhere except the pocket the first two

That just about describes the way Nichols and his Harvesters felt when that final buzzer sounded against Dunbar. However, the Harvesters never really hooked, sliced, or gutterballed that much during the season. There were just a few of those temporary lapses that cost them a playoff spot.

Take, for instance, Pampa's heartbreaking 61-60 loss to Borger on Feb. 5 at McNeely Fieldhouse. Pampa was up by 13 points going into the final quarter, but the Bulldogs applied a fullcourt press the Harvesters couldn't handle. Pampa had seven turnovers in that final eight minutes. "That Borger game plus those two away games at Lubbock really hurt us," Nichols said. "We blew 10-point leads against Dunbar and

The Harvesters won nine of their last 10 games, bouncing back to defeat Amarillo High, Lubbock Estacado and Lubbock Dunbar after those three schools had whipped Pampa the first half of the season. But in the end, the Harvesters finished one slim game out of the playoffs.

Enough about what might have been. How about what's in store for the 1985-86 season?

"We'll have two returning starters back (Petey Davis and Donovan Lewis), plus some people who played a lot," said Nichols. "We'll have more experience than most of the teams. Borger has two standouts back, but the others will lose most of their starting lineup."

Davis, a 6-3½ junior, will carry the bulk of the scoring and rebounding on his broad shoulders. Davis was the second leading scorer for the Harvesters this season, averaging 11.8 ppg overall, but 16.5 in district play. Davis, who also averaged around 9 rebounds per game, was an second-team, all-district pick.

"Petey can be as good as he wants to be," Nichols added.
Lewis is a 6-3 junior who averaged around 8 points per game

"Donivan is developing into a fine all-around player," Nichols said. "He's a good defensive player, but he needs to work more on his offense." on his offense.

Nichols said the Harvesters would be smaller, but quicker next

'We're going to have to work hard on positioning, but we'll be able to go back to our running game more next season," Nichols said. "We'll be pressing more because we'll have a little more quickness and we're definitely going back to a delay game. If we get any kind of a lead in the fourth quarter, we just might go into a four-corner offense.

Another likely starter is Mike

Lynn, a rugged 6-21/2 junior who was brought up from the junior varsity when district competition began. "Mike needs to work on his foot speed, but he came on strong for us," Nichols said.

Another varsity player, 5-10 unior Paul Simpson, will try and hold off 5-8 junior Mario Scott and 5-6 junior Micheal Glover for the point guard position.

"I'm really expecting a lot out of Paul next season. Mario and Micheal could push him for point," Nichols said.'

Shooting guards abound in 5-10 sophomore Clyde Steele, 6-3 junior Matt Martindale, 6-3 junior Dierk Milum, and 5-10 junior Terry Jeffrey. Steele saw some action with the varsity while the other three were junior varsity players.

Jay Snow, a 6-51/2 junior, will be the tallest player on the squad. Nichols is high on 6-3 junior forward Vibert Ryan, who also played some with the A team.

Vibrant improved tremendously since the start of the season," Nichols said.

Pampa's 1985-86 non-district schedule will remain about the same, rugged as ever. The Harvesters play Amarillo High and Palo Duro again and will also return to the Fort Worth Lions Tournament

'Our schedule is what made us tough down the stretch. I wouldn't want to change it," Nichols said.

Received an interesting newspaper clipping from Mrs. Eunice Ashford of Pampa.

Mrs. Ashford's brother, Dr Charles Kay, is a dean at the University of Alaska. He sent Mrs. Ashford a clipping from the Fairbank Daily News-Miner on the "Second Annual Bering Sea Ice Classic," which she passed onto

Now, at first, that may sound like some iceskating competition or perhaps a dogsled race. Maybe an iceberg pulling contest between trained polar bears. Be a great Trivia Pursuit question, huh? What is the Second Annual Bering Sea Ice Classic?

Well, it's none of the above. It fact, it's not even close. Would you believe a golf tournament? Tournament organizer John

Kreilkamp explained in the Associated Press article just how the tournament works

The course consists of six holes some 200 feet apart, each of them a coffee can sunk into two feet of sea

The "greens" on the course, are sprinkled with green jello. The golf balls are painted fluorescent orange and each hole is equipped with a flag.

The par 41 course "can be challenging," Krielkamp says.

"A putt is liable to go 100 yards on the ice. It's kind of like watching a pinball make its way to the hole, Krielkamp said the pinball effect is the main reason woods are seldom used. Most golfers stick with 7 and 9 irons.

The tournament is sponsored by the Bering Sea Lions Club and attracted about 20 players last year, according to the article. The tourney is played at Nome, a town of about 3,600 about 600 miles northwest of Anchorage.

The winner receives $200 and the remainer of the entry fees go to Lions Club projects.

Krielkamp said tournament temperatures will be around 25 below, requiring golfers to wear cumbersome boots and bulky clothing.

And golfers here thank they've got it tough battling those panhandle winds.

PAMPA'S GOODYEAR DISTRIBUTER SINCE 1948

Firm's fall hurts banks, cities, communities

MIAMI (AP) — Ohio's governor has declared a three-day emergency bank holiday. A Texas city has stopped hiring while considering a workweek cut. A rural community in Washington state is wondering how it will pay for a new hospital wing.

These are among the casualties of the March 4 collapse of ESM Government Securities Inc., an obscure, unregulated securities dealer accused of bilking at least 68 investors, including 16 cities and some mid-size financial institutions, of more than

'The far reaching effects are enormous,' said Michael Wolensky, a regional administrator for the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is suing the Fort Lauder dale company.

The agency alleges ESM misled its investors with false financial reports, while hiding about $200 million in losses over nine years in a paper company called ESM Financial Group.

said it took him less than an hour to unravel the alleged fraud.

Thomas Tew, ESM's court-appointed receiver,

As a government securities dealer, ESM bought and sold government-backed mortgage notes and Treasury bills. It also engaged in transactions known as repurchase agreements or "repos.

Repos are a popular way of investing surplus cash held by government agencies. The money can be invested until it is needed to pay bills - perhaps only overnight - and the securities dealer puts up federally backed securities as collateral. Dealers also offer "reverse repos," making loans to institutions, such as savings and loan associations, which put up their securities as collateral.

The savvy professional investors who avoided getting burned never gave ESM money without taking physical possession of securities in return. However, friends of ESM officers and less sophisticated money managers, especially those in smaller cities, trusted the dealer to hold their securities, Tew said.

When the music stopped, the only people who had chairs were the people who perfected (claimed) their securities," he said.

Those who did not stake their claim, such as the now-closed Home State Savings Association in Cincinnati and government entities like Beaumont, Texas, and Washington's Clallam County, are not likely to recover their losses in what is shaping up to be the largest failure of a government securities trader, Tew said. He said he has recovered about $23 million in frozen assets so far.

Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped Saturday morning in west Beirut by armed men who forced him inside a car and sped off.

Late Saturday, Anderson's whereabouts remained unknown. No group claimed responsibility immediately.

AP photographer Donald Mell saw the abduction. He said three men, two of them armed with pistols, shoved Anderson, 38, into a green Mercedes Benz sedan with no license plates and drove off.

"I suppose the wholething took 20 seconds from the time they got out of the car to the time they sped away,'' away,'' said Mell, 22, of Wilmington, Del. "None of them said anything.

Schroeder misses wedding, but equals survival record

JASPER, Ind. (AP) - William Schroeder missed his son's wedding Saturday, but it was a historic and happy day for the second artificial heart recipient, who equaled the 112 days' survival of his predecessor

"He's in really good spirits day," said Larry Hastings, today," clinical director at Humana Hospital Audubon in Louisville, Ky., where Schroeder remained Saturday.

Doctors had decided the 90-mile trip to Jasper for his son Terry's wedding would have been too much stress for him. Instead, the hospital took the wedding party to Louisville on Friday for a dress rehearsal and dinner which Schroeder attended.

'That was real special for him,' Hastings said.

No mention of Schroeder was made at Terry Schroeder's wedding to Julie Schnarr, 22, at St. Joseph Roman Catholic Church.

But before leaving for a reception after the wedding, the newlywed said his father "really enjoyed the dress rehearsal. I think last night was just as special as today." The reception, at a nearby community center, was closed to the news media.

The wedding, which was performed by William Schroeder's uncle, the Rev. Sylvester Schroeder, marked only the second return to Jasper for Schroeder's wife, Margaret, since the implant Nov. 25. She has remained by his Robert Jarvik, inventor of the plastic-and-metal pump sustaining Schroeder's life, flew from his Salt Lake City home for the wedding.

Jarvik said it was the effects of Schroeder's strokes, suffered Dec. 13, that kept him from the wedding and not the artificial heart.

He noted that it had been Schroeder's goal since the operation to attend the wedding and that he had been deeply disappointed when told he couldn't

But Jarvik said the event was still a "happy milestone for the patient.

Dr. William DeVries, who performed the implant, stayed in Louisville to monitor Schroeder and his other implant recipient, Murray Haydon.

Schroeder's predecessor, dentist Barney Clark, lived 112 days with a Jarvik-7 heart before his death in 1983, and DeVries discouraged comparison between his patients. 'It is not a race. Each patient is an individual," he said Saturday.

Latchkey pilot project proves successful so far what's so Funny? — Jeremy Elliott, 7, giggles at the photographer while Latchkey pilot project director Glenda Cates looks over his homework. Cates helps Latchkey children get their homework done first before going on to playtime activities such as games, puzzles and arts and crafts.

Latchkey originated about a year ago in the minds of a few Pampans concerned about the growing number of children who return home from school each day to an empty house.

These people — ministers, school teachers, housewives, retirees, and working mothers and fathers — joined forces to determine whether it was possible to stop the problem of 'latchkey' children. They be came the 'Latchkey' committee of the Family Living Committee of the Gray County Extension Service.

"Latchkey" is a name that's been coined to describe children who go home or elsewhere after school to an unsupervised environment because the parents work.

Finally, in late December 1984, after months of effort by the committee members, the Latchkey Pilot Project was approved by the Pampa Independent School District board of directors.

The project began in late January at Woodrow Wilson Elementary School with five students. Enrollment has now escalated to 20 students with an average of 12 to 14 participating each day. The project meets in the Wilson School cafeteria and gymnasium, or on the playground if weather permits.

Glenda Cates directs the pilot project. She has a long history of working with children, including spending six years at Pampa Middle School as a reading aide. She also helped set up the volunteer reading program at Stephen F. Austin Elementary school and served as the PTA president for the school. She has also worked as a volunteer for the Brownies and Cub Scouts in various capacities.

Cates has developed a program that begins with helping the students with their homework. Once that is done, the students have a variety of activities they can do such as playing board games, puzzles, arts and crafts when they are in the cafeteria. When they go to the gym or outside, the students play different types of ball games, jump rope, run races and other more active games.

On Monday, when The Pampa

News visited the program, the students were making kites, drawing designs on the kite and coloring them in. "We hope to fly them later," Cates confides.

Nutritious snacks are provided each day. "No junk foods!" she adds. Snacks include a fruit juice and "something nutritional," Cates explains. On Monday they had grape juice and peanut butter and crackers.

Without direct cooperation with the school system, the Latchkey Project would be impossible for the school provides the room and facilities for the program at no charge.

"From my perspective, and I told this to Mrs. (Mary) Braswell (president of the school board) yesterday, things are going very smoothly (with the Latchkey Project), comments Ray Thornton, principal of Wilson Elementary

"As I understand it, we did not have as many participants at first as we hand anticipated, but it has since gained momentum," he says. "We've communicated closely with (the Latchkey) people. We have occasionally gotten calls asking about the project, but we have telephone numbers to refer (the callers) to, so it has not taken much of our time.

"I have not received any negative feedback, so things must be going well," Thornton adds. "And some of the parents have indicated (the project) has been of help to them."

Madella Adams, a single mother to Dawnette Adams, age 6, claims the Latchkey Project "has been a lifesaver for us!"

In fact, Adams says her daughter enjoys the program so much she doesn't always want to go home.

Adams says Dawnette especially enjoys the continuing story Cates reads to the students — currently "The Wizard of Oz." "Apparently (Cates) reads will feeling. It makes Dawnette feel like the characters are really talking. Now Dawnette is going home and trying to read her own books with more feeling." Adams says.

"Latchkey is just terrific. It's so much better than coming home and plopping down in front of the television or going outside and playing on the dumpsters."

Cates helping with Dawnette's homework has been a boost to the Adamses, also, Adams says. As a working mother, she and Dawnette both arrive home about a quarter til six, then they fix supper and spend some time together telling about each others day. "That leaves only an hour and a half before Dawnette's bedtime, and if an hour is taken out for homework, that's not much time left to do things together—like right now, we're remodeling the house."

Although the concept and implementation of Latchkey are working out well, the program continues to struggle financially.

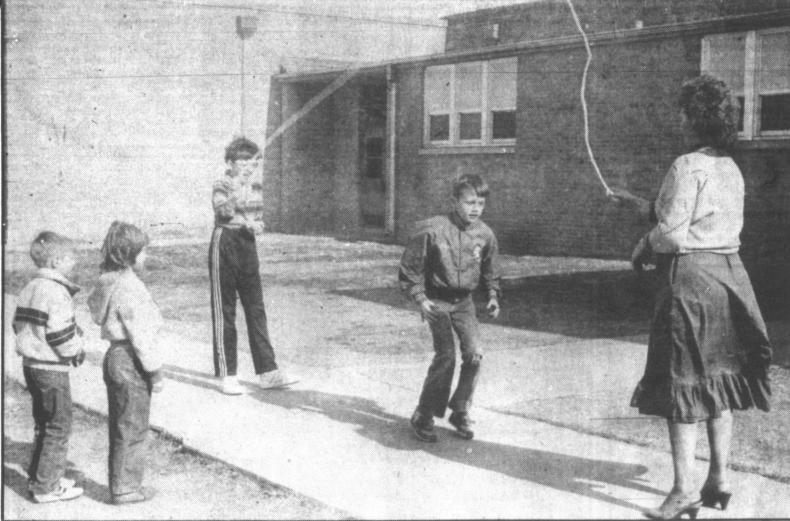

The project's basic precept is to provide free or inexpensive childcare to students of working parents, in school or in some assistance - related program. In order to do that, much of the money to keep the project going and pay its director comes from outside sources. A generous grant and donations at the beginning has paid for the project thus far, however, Donna Brauchi, chairman of the project's advisory board, says the project will run out of funds by mid April if more donations are not received.

Also, because of the increasing enrollment, an assistant is needed who is willing to work for two hours a day at minimum wage. Anyone interested in applying for this part-time job, may contact Cates at the Community Day Care Center, 665-0735 or in the evenings at 665-7985.

The Latchkey Project could use volunteers, sponsors and donations. Contact Cate at the telephone numbers mentioned above for more information about any of the ways the community can help the Project. The success of this pilot project will determine whether Latchkey programs will become available in other Pampa schools in the future.

A five to 10 minute slide program, presented by a member of the Latchkey Advisory Board, is available to local clubs and civic groups. For more information about the slide presentation, call Donna Brauchi at 669-7429.

Behrman's is to host a public trunk showing of clothing designs by Anko March 28 and 29 from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at its fashion center, 123 N. Cuyler.

Anko, trademark name of designer Anneke Dekker-Olthof, says the individual is back; fads are fleeting; quality, style and expressive clothing is in demand by the consumer. This Chicago designer's mainstays are always loose and relaxed, with strong shoulders and exciting detail. "Today's fashions are soft and drapable, often textured, and, of course, should always be comfortable, easy to wear and pack," she says. Anko prefers to use soft jerseys in muted impressionist colors and the always black and creme. "My extravagant handwoven fabrics," Anko says. "I design for the confident woman who is not afraid to make a fashion statement.

Anko, 44, made her debut into the fashion industry when she moved from her native Holland to Johannesberg, South Africa at 24. She began designing with beaded and leather jewelry, then evolved into designing leather clothing

The need for volunteers to help care for the elderly and disabled in a variety of ways continues, says Beth Otsuka of Amarillo, volunteer coordinator for this area's Department of Human Resources (DHR).

Here are some of the ways volunteers can help the DHR social worker for the elderly and handicapped, according to Otsuka:

Assisting the client with the completion of forms and in obtaining proof of income or resources.

Monitoring the client's condition and the services the client receives.

Providing frequent and regular contacts with a client who is socially isolated.

Helping a client follow through with referrals.

Providing transportation for a client or making minor home repairs.

Helping the client find housing and move in or finding funds to pay a client's utility bills, rent, etc. And helping a client manage finances. Assisting a client in obtaining necessary medical equipment or supplies.

Providing counseling for a client who is unstable.

Assisting a client with clothing purchase or repair, helping with the client's mail

Helping the client fill out food stamp or other assistance forms. Organize and find funding for special activities for clients such as a Christmas party, summer social, birthday party and similar occasions.

Local DHR social worker for the elderly, Phyllis Berg, has a caseload of 90 regular clients spread out over a five county area which spreads from Higgins to Darrouzette, Otsuka said.

"So what happens is we're doing

"So what happens is we're doing the bare minimum of what we have to," she said. "Because of this overload to the caseworkers, our services only go so far down the line. Using volunteers is the only way we've found to give the services (to the elderly and handicapped) they deserve."

Through the efforts of local Department of Human Resources personnel, the state legislature has allowed the Panhandle area DHR offices to begin a pilot program using volunteers to fill in the many services the DHR clients need, Otsuka said. A regional advisory county boards to head the local volunteer activities. The county boards are made up from people in the communities they serve.

In Gray County, advisory board members were appointed by Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy. Local Human Resources Advisory Council members are Margie Holland, chairman; Mickey St. Aubyn, Timothy Gikas, Phyllis Jeffers, Jimmie Ivy, Bob Hart and Ann Loter.

"We want to remind volunteers that we do train them," Otsuka said. "We don't send them out without knowing what they are doing." Volunteers go through two training sessions before they begin their volunteer work. First they receive a two - hour overview of the DHR, explaining what the department does and giving the volunteers an insight as to where to refer people. A four hour session provides specific training for what the volunteer will actually be doing. Later training sessions will be provided as needed.

Many people are unaware of the abuse of the elderly in the community. Many old people have been either physically, financially or emotionally abused. Social workers provide the initial investigation and set up a service plan to help these victims.

"It's the caseworker's responsibility to carry out this service plan," Otsuka added. "And here's where we can really use volunteers." Volunteers can monitor the client's condition and make sure the offense is not repeated. They can go into the clients home and make sure the client's basic needs are met, such as food, shelter, medicine and clothing. If the volunteer sees that financial or other needs are not being met, he will report it to his supervisor who will again investigate.

This volunteer job can help the volunteer learn new skills, help the helpless and become involved in the community.

For more information on how to become a volunteer for the DHR, call Phyllis Berg at 665-1863.

Warming weather garden tips

By JOE VanZANDT County Extension Agent

Due to some recent warm weather, I have noticed that some warm season lawn grasses bermuda and buffalo are starting to green - up on the south side of

Homeowners planning on using Roundup to kill henbit and winter annual grasses that are currently green need to inspect turf areas losely. If you determine that your bermuda or buffalo is starting to grow, then you should not spray that area with Roundup. Damage ean occur to any turf grasses that are starting or showing green growth. Roundup works on any green - growing vegetation that it is sprayed on

ADD ORGANIC MATTER TO

Adding plenty of organic matter to your soil is one of the keys to a successful garden.

Organic matter improves the drainage and aeration of clay soils and helps sandy soils hold water

Spread a 2 - to 4 - inch layer of peat moss, hay, compost, leaves, manure or even shredded newspapers over the garden surface and work it into a depth of 6 to 8 inches. Before working in the compost, add the recommended rate of fertilizer so that it will become part of the soil mix.

Many gardeners prefer using a shovel or spading fork when working up the ground, but others like using rototillers.

The following tips are suggested to make the tilling job easier:

Till when soil is fairly dry and friable. Tilling wet soil leaves behind large clods and causes mud to cling to tiller blades, thus upsetting the tiller's balance.

Leave an untilled row between passes since wide turns are easier to make than "about faces". This

BRING NATURE INSIDE With residential lots getting smaller and apartment and condominium dwelling on the upswing more and more people are searching for new ways to bring nature indoors

High on the list of favorites is bonsai - the growing miniature trees in pots.

The practice of growing bonsai requires both patience and time but can be rewarding when you see an old, well - trained specimen. Some bonsai trees can be over 200

Bonsai, the art of dwarfing plants, originated in China, but was developed by the Japanese. In the 13th Century, the Japanese collected and potted wild trees that had been dwarfed by nature. These naturally formed miniatures were the first bonsai. Today gardeners the world over are caught up in this unique gardening form.

Not all plants are effective as bonsai. For best results, select types that have small leaves or needles; short intermodes or distances between leaves: attractive bark or roots; and branching characteristics for good twig form

All parts of the ideal bonsai, including trunk, branches, twigs. leaves, flowers, fruits, buds, and roots, should be kept in perfect scale with the size of the tree. Plants such as avocado, with overly large leaves, will look out of proportion if chosen for bonsai.

Plants suitable for bonsai can come from nursery stock or the wilds. Included are holly, pine (including Japanese black pine), cedar, flowering quince, pyracantha species, cotoneaster, juniper, some forms of oaks and many more.

Ideal selections have attractive bark with the trunks bearing the illusion of maturity. The trunk should also have girth, but remain in proportion to the entire tree. tapering gradually toward the top of the tree. Occasionally, one or two of the main branches are shortened to emphasize the vertical line of the trunk, giving the trunk a balanced look.

The upper one - third of the root structure of a mature bonsai is often left exposed, giving the appearance of age. Twisted and gnarled roots should be straightened before potting or repotting to achieve an aged appearance.

Bonsai can be classified into five basic styles: formal upright - in which the growth represents an upright specimen tree; informal upright - representing a gnarled 'old' tree; slanting - the main trunk slants at a 45 degree angle, showing the effects of the elements; semi - cascading - the tree slants to a horizontal position and full - cascade - representing a plant hanging over a cliff. When creating any of these forms, it's important to maintain a "natural growth" look

Some points to remember when pruning are: Make all cuts above a bud, a side branch, or a main fork of the tree. Remove all buds except those on the outside of the trunk to force the growth outward and upward. Leave stubs flush with stem; long stubs serve as an entry for insects. Avoid cutting back so far that you weaken the main Jackie, a graduate of PHS and West Texas State University, taught at Lamar and coached the high school swim team as well as the Dolphins before joining the U.S. Navy in late 1983. Jackie was one of the original Dolphins. Her first naval assignment was teaching recruits to swim in Florida. She's in Iceland by choice because of high grades. Already a third class petty officer in highly classified work, Jackie was recently elected Sailor of the Quarter, a distinct honor. According to Jackie, Iceland is a beautiful country full of beautiful people. Her brother Andy lives in Fritch and Cliff in Dallas.

DEAR ABBY: As a member of the clergy, I am asking you to print this on behalf of those of us who are asked to officiate at weddings.

I have been told that it is customary for pastors to attend both the rehearsal dinner and the reception. Others have told me that they invite the pastor only because they think they have to. I've been told by some folks that they would prefer that the pastor didn't attend the rehearsal dinner.

I am aware of the expense involved in having a wedding. I'm also aware that some folks feel awkward around clergy, so I am calling upon you, Dear Abby, to tell couples to be straightforward about their expectations.

I enjoy wedding festivities, but I would like to know in advance whether I'm invited. I am not married, and I often end up attending alone when I would have enjoyed bringing a friend.

My married clergy friends say they never know whether their wives or husbands are invited to the rehearsal dinner and wedding

So, Abby, the questions many clergy would like to have answered

1. Do you want me to be present at the rehearsal dinner?

2. Do you want me to be present at your wedding reception?

3. May I bring my spouse or a friend?

Abby, I cannot count the number of times I am half out the door following a wedding rehearsal when the bride runs after me saying, "Aren't you staying for the dinner?" (I wasn't invited.) Any advice you can give us would be appreciated.

CONFUSED CLERGYPERSON

DEAR CONFUSED: Let's clear up the confusion here and now. To those of you who are planning wedding: When you ask a clergyperson to officiate, your request does not automatically include invitations to the wedding festivities. If you want to include the clergyperson-and spouse or friend-extend an invitation.

Many couples have told me that they want their clergyperson to attend the festivities, but they're afraid if they send a formal invitation the recipients will feel obligated to send a gift. which would be a financial burden considering the number of weddings they attend.

I advise them to extend the invitation by telephone.

Another centenarian, closer to home, is Claire Roane, oldest living member of Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ. She quietly celebrated her 100th birthday last Sunday with a party of family and friends in the home of her daughter Mabel Torvie with Louise (Mrs. Harold) Miller, another daughter, as co-hostess. Emotional abuse leaves invisible scars

Verbal assault such as name calling, harsh tones, and sarcastic putdowns are other forms of emotional abuse. The psychological "beatings" young people suffer from the most are those given by the people they trust and depend on. Verbal abuse crushes their self - esteem and makes them feel humiliated, worthless or unlovable.

Psychologists find that people tend to live up to other people's expectations of them. So after being called "stupid", "lazy", or "rotten" long enough, a person may indeed begin to behave that way. Verbal abuse cuts across all social and economic groups, but is more common in upper - income families.

Extreme pressure is a subtle form of emotional abuse that many child development experts say is becoming a modern - day epidemic. Some parents seem to be more concerned about a child's intellectual prowess than his or her emotional well - being. The price we pay for this extreme pressure is an increase in stress - related illnesses and teenage suicides. If teens don't feel cared about, they can't care about anybody else - not even themselves. According to one leading psychologist, the final outcome is children who are emotional misfits. The long - term problems that may result from emotional abuse are criminal behavior, alcoholism, drug abuse, running away, fighting, or self - destructive sexual activity. Whatever their symptoms, it's crucial to reach and

Parents who are concerned about becoming more emotionally supportive of their children can use the following guidelines: Seek help from professionals when your child seems overly troubled. Convey respect for your child: show that he or she is a person worthy for respect. Boost your child's self -image. Verbalize what you like about him

Try to be consistent. Mood swings are confusing when you seem to like the child and then to dislike him or her.

Have realistic expectations. Don't expect a child to become something you could not be.

Procrastination can be cured

when you can do it

Says Ms. Burka: "When you put something off to the last minute, the final result is a reflection of your skill

at brinksmanship, not of your best

NEW YORK (NEA) - Everyone's and now self-doubts keep you from here but Fred, but that's nothing new attempting anything until the last and, as usual, it's galling. Everyone minute always gets held up because Fred always arrives late, leaves late and never finishes anything he starts. He just goes along carefree. Lazy. Undis-

And probably under more duress than those he keeps waiting.

"There can be pretty severe consequences for procrastinators," says Jane Burka, Ph.D, a psychologist in private practice in Berkeley, Calif., who for six years has been holding procrastination workshops for the general public, students and organizations. "On the one hand, you miss a deadline for a job or school application, or the car breaks down because you didn't take care of that grinding

'Then there's the anxiety as the deadline approaches and you're not sure you have enough time to make it, and the guilt afterward that you have not done as well as you could have. And, while you're almost compelled to put things off to the last minute, ironically, you can't enjoy anything else because you're thinking about what you should be doing."

All the while, your behavior may be turning your marriage into a war zone, your career into a catastrophe, and your insides into a stew.

Of course, all you have to do is pull yourself together and start doing things on time, people say. But you already know that. In fact, every time you spend a sleepless night finishing something due three days before, or scurry around Macy's at 10 p.m. on Christmas Eve, you vow never to go through this again.

The fact is, though, you don't know why you behave as you do, so you can hardly be expected to change. Ms. Burka, however, knows both why and how and covers it all in "Procrastination: Why You Do It, What to Do About It" (Addison Wesley, $8.95), which she co-authored with Lenora M. Yuen, Ph.D.

"Procrastination has complex psychological roots tied to family issues and ways of thinking about your work," she says. In some cases, for instance, fear of success causes people to put things off. "Sometimes, the only college graduate in the family may allow procrastination to interfere with achievement because he's afraid his success will further distance him from the rest of the family. Or maybe your father was a successful workaholic and you decide, 'that road is too costly.' Also, parents sometimes resent offspring who do better so you get the message, 'do well, but not better than I.'

Conversely, maybe you got the feeling you weren't worth much to begin with. No matter what you did, it wasn't good enough for your parents

Clove cigarettes' fragrance is now pervading Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — If a "smoking is hazardous to health" a country can boast a unique national fragrance, Indonesia's would be the aromatic smell of burning cloves. The smell is accompanied by a soft snap and crackle as smokers puff on kreteks cigarettes laced with cloves.

Sweet and spicy cigarette smoke greets visitors shortly they clear immigration and customs; the sometimes-cloying smell seems to permeate the entire country.

Kreteks take their name from the faint crackling sound made when volatile clove oil is released from the spice within while the cigarette burns

They are uniquely Indonesian, a booming domestic industry with glowing export prospects, at least until U.S. authorities recently raised questions about possible health hazards.

Dr. Frederick Schechter, a surgeon at the University of California at Irvine, said he compiled four cases in which teen-agers who smoked kreteks subsequently came down with severe pneumonia-like illnesses. Two of the victims died.

Dr. Sue Binder, a medical epidemiologist at the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, said people can develop allergies to eugenol, the active ingredient in cloves. Eugenol inhibits the synthesis of certain substances in the human body called prostaglandins which affect blood pressure and the action of some hormones and muscles, she

In strictly economic terms, kreteks seem to be an almost ideal industry in a heavily populated developing country. Tobacco and clove farmers prosper, tens of thousands of unskilled jobs are created and the exports earn foreign exchange.

Tobacco taxes earned the state $5.7 million last year compared to $5.4 million in 1983, according to Finance Ministry figures.

The Jakarta Post recently estimated that more than 7 million of Indonesia's 166 million people depend directly or indirectly on the cultivation of tobacco or cloves and the manufacture and distribution of cigarettes.

PENTOXIPYLLINE

A new drug has been introduced to the market that is designed to treat the arm and leg pains associated with hardening of the arteries. Pentoxifylline apparently works by increasing the flexbility of red blood cells so that blood can flow more easly to the extremities. When arteries harden, the flow of blood to the leg and arm muscles is restricted. Pain occurs because this restriction causes a restriction of oxygen. The short distances painful. In clinical terms of the drug, some patients suf-fered nausea, dizziness and headaches. However, the Food and Drug Administration has indicated that the side effects appear to be re-lated only to the size of the dose.

By anticipating the drug and medicinal needs of folks in this area the pharmacists at B&B PHAR-MACY keep in stock hundreds of drugs and medications for im-mediate availability. One-horned Indian rhino to be radio-collared for study KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — The Washington-based Smithsonian Institution has launched a unique project in the dense tropical forest of southern Nepal to study, for the first time, the habits and habitat of the one-horned Indian rhinoceros.

Plans are under way to use dart shotguns to knock out 15 rhinos which will then be collared with radio transmitters to track them through the thick jungles of Chitwan, said Hemant Mishara, a leading Nepalese conservationist.

The project is funded by the Smithsonian Institution in collaboration with the Nepalese government and the King Mahendra trust for nature conservation in Nepal.

The one-horned rhino, long on the world list of endangered species, is found only in two places in Asia. An estimated 800 survive in Kaziranga in Assam, India, and another 350 in

The two-horned rhino, a species cousin which is also endangered, is found in Africa and, in rare instances, in the tropics of Indonesia.

For the century between 1846 and 1950, when the Rana family prime ministers were de facto rulers of the country, Chitwan was a private hunting reserve maintained exclusively for the privileged classes. Penalties for poaching were severe - capital punishment for killing a rhino - giving the wildlife in the area a certain measure of protection.

However, when the Ranas invited European royalty or Indian princes for great hunts, large numbers of animals were butchered, upsetting the ecological

King George V of England shot 18 rhinos and many other animals in 1911 within a span of 11 days. The Prince of Wales together with Lord Linlitgow. the then Viceroy of India, broke all previous records in 1939 by shooting 38 rhinos.

Every part of the rhino's body was believed to have strong medicinal properties in Oriental medicine.

Among the ruling class and nobles of Nepal, it was believed that last rite ceremonies performed from the inside of a slaughtered rhino's belly would provide deliverance to the departed soul.

The rhino population of Nepal dropped alarmingly from estimates of more than a 1,000 at its peak to just over 90 in 1965, park

Farm crisis report held weeks before public distribution

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The information in a controversial report on the financial hardship among farmers was available to administration insiders weeks before President Reagan vetoed a credit package passed by Congress, according to Agriculture Department officials.

When Reagan vetoed the bill on March 6, he said that only about 4 percent of the nation's farmers are in need of immediate help.

The next day Agriculture Secretary John R. Block told the Senate Agriculture Committee that Reagan "did misspeak" and that "a much higher percentage than that are facing serious financial strain and stress financially."

Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., had asked Block about Reagan's veto comment and referred to an unreleased USDA report that showed much darker economic

For example, the report included an estimate that in January 1985 some 93,000 mid-size farms, holding $47 billion in debt, were technically insolvent or on the verge of going broke, a 45 percent increase over a year earlier.

The report referred to by Zorinsky was circulated on Capitol Hill late last week, after Reagan vetoed the farm credit bill. Copies were obtained by The Associated Press, which carried stories based on the new report.

Meanwhile, pressure grew on USDA to release the report that had surfaced on Capitol Hill, including a call from the National Farmers Organization's president, DeVon Woodland, to "take the wraps off" the document.

According to USDA employees, the report - which was prepared by the department's Economic Research Service - was put in the pipeline for final approval and publication on Jan. 25, more than a month before Reagan was faced with the legislation that he vetoed.

The department's Office of Governmental and Public Affairs, which has the responsibility for receiving printed reports from various agencies and seeing that those are distributed to the news media, was sent copies of the report on March 8. Block's office and Congress also got official printed copies on that date, according to records of the Economics Management Staff.

But the box of reports that went to the department's main press office sat unopened until the following Tuesday, March 12, four days - counting the weekend after it was delivered.

John McClung, USDA director of information, acknowledged the foul-up by his press office as just that, not a purposeful delay in getting the report to the public.

Further, McClung said Thursday

RUST EPIDEMIC IMPENDING IN HIGH PLAINS WHEAT The threat of a devastating outbreak of leaf rust in Texas High Plains wheat fields is the greatest

it has been in more than two decades, according to Robert

Berry, extension plant pathologist, located in Lubbock. "In 22 years in this area, I've never seen such active rust infections at this time of year."

said Dr. Berry Berry issued the warning to producers following a survey Feb. 28 of fields in Hale County with Danny Nusser, assistant Hale County Extension agent. They found extremely active rust spore production in southern and western parts of the county.

The disease requires moisture on the plant leaf and suitable temperatures, such as have occured across the Plains in recent weeks, Berry said. "At 70 degrees, infection can occur in four hours and the complete cycle, producing spores which then repeat the infection of other leaves, takes 10 to 12 days," the Extension specialist explained. At 60 degrees, the cycle takes twice as long, he said.

A fungus, the rust appears as small, round orange spots or pustules. They appear right at the groundline on the oldest leaves of the plant. Rust spores are carried by our winds and can be spread rapidly under ideal conditions.

If the infection is heavy enough, it will defoliate the plant. "Even light rust will interfere with development of the grain," Barry warned

"Many fields which we saw in our survey have high weed populations. Many also have thin strands. These conditions don't a high yield potential, Barry noted. He suggested that dryland producers who have thin strands and poor yield outlook may want to consider grazing out their fields if hit by rust.

"If an irrigated crop with good potential develops rust, the producer might want to consider a fungicide application at the jointing stage," he said.

"It is generally thought that, economically, fungicide should only be applied to wheat that has a potential for a yield in the 80 - 100 bushel range," he said. He noted that new fungicides, such as Bayleton, are very effective, but are rather expensive.

SWINE PSEUDORABIES ALERT Texas swine producers should guard against pseudorabies infection of their herds from hogs originating in Oklahoma.

As the result of pseudorabies detected in pigs from registered sale Jan. 26 in Clinton, Okla., and possible exposure of pigs in a separate sale at the same location, all Oklahoma swine herds were quarantined effective Feb. 23.

The Texas Animal Health Commission had indicated that five Texas herds in the South and Rolling Plains areas are quarantined because they received animals from this registered swine sale. Twenty - six additional Texas herds are under a "precautionary quarantine" until Oklahoma animal health officials determine the extent of infection.

Anyone purchasing hogs should keep animals isolated for 60 days and then have a veterinarian test them negative before adding them to their herds. This is a practical preventive procedure to keep pseudorabies out of a herd, and its importance cannot be overemphasized.

Pseudorabies can affect domestic animals, wild animals and household pets, but not humans. It is transmitted through the air, by direct contact, or by animals eating contaminated carcasses.

Pseudorabies can cause fever, loss of appetite, lack of coordination and death. Sows may abort their litters or farrow stillborn pigs. However, many affected pigs show no obvious signs of sickness and blood testing is the only method of detecting infection. Pseudorabies cannot be treated. but can be controlled by quarantine, test and slaughter of reactors, and burying or burning all dead animals. In addition, swine should be separated from all other domestic animals and pets. Movement of wildlife in the area should be controlled as a precautionary measure. Swine producers should maintain closed herds and restrict vehicle, animal, and human movement on the farm to prevent any possible pseudorabies infection from spreading.

NATIONAL AGRICULTURE DAV IS MARCH 20

National Agriculture Day will be March 20, the first day of spring. It highlights National Agriculture Week which is March 17 - 23.

Agriculture Day has been authorized as an official national observance every year since 1981 by a joint resolution of Congress and a presidential proclamation. It was first celebrated in 1973 and since has grown to include thousands of events at the local, state and national level.

Theme of this year's observance is "The Business of Food and Fiber.

State agriculture leaders and commodity groups are emphasizing agriculture as the nation's largest industry, in terms of gross national product, employment and personal spending during this 13th annual observance of Ag. Day.

Agriculture Day is set aside as a special time to focus on the achievements of the 23 million men and women in U.S. agriculture.

This is one - fifth of the work force. for suppliers of goods and services on through the food and fiber chain to retail food, clothing and horticultural workers. Altogether, they are responsible for more than 20 percent of the gross national product.

In Texas, one out of every 35 persons is a farmer or rancher, yet about 25 percent of the state's retail trade business is directly associated with agricultural production and selling of food and fiber products.

Consumers are enjoying quality food and natural fiber apparel at a low cost. The farm value of the retail food dollar amounts to about 30 cents, with the average American spending less than 18 percent of income on foods.

Because of advancements in productivity, the same number of acres required in 1910 to feed 80 million Americans produced enough to meet needs of 200 million Americans in 1970. One farmer in this country can now feed 80 people, compared to 26 people in

Television actress has short career

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Geena Davis, who stands 6 feet tall, has had a short career as an actress and says she almost lost the starring role in a new NBC series because she was too offbeat.

It all began with her first professional job as the young soap opera actress who shared a dressing room with Dorothy Michaels (Dustin Hoffman) in "Tootsie." On the set she became friendly with Dabney Coleman, who played the TV director.

Coleman told her about his upcoming series for NBC, "Buffalo Bill," and offered her the role of Wendy.

She made several guest appearances on "Family Ties" and the producers, Gary David Goldbert and Ruth Bennett, selected her (but not immediately) for their next series, NBC's "Sara" She stars as Sara McKeena, a young and single attorney who works in a San Francisco legal assistance office.

When Meredith Baxter Birney was out of 'Family Ties' pregnant they made up a list of funny people," Miss Davis says. "I was on the list. I appeared as a housekeeper on several episodes. So when this came up I was asked to read. I thought they had written it for me because it fit so well.'

But she didn't get the part. "They decided to go with an actress who played the part more straight," Miss Davis says. "But after three or four days they called

"I like to think that I do comedy well. I think they were afraid of having a character who was too offbeat, and I am offbeat. They started telling me to be less funny when I was auditioning. They wanted me to be more lawyer-like. Now, they just tell me to do what I do best. It's being offbeat that gets Sara into trouble.

Miss Davis grew up in Wareham. Mass., where her father was with the Corps of Engineers working on the Cape Cod Canal and her mother was a teacher's aide. She studied acting at Boston University.

GM secret project bigger than Saturn

DETROIT (AP) -While America gets caught up in the hoopla of General Motors Corp.'s Saturn car, plans for a more expensive and immediate GM project are moving nearly unnoticed in the background.

The project is code-named the W-car, and its product could be in dealer showrooms a year or more before Saturn Corp. produces its first car late in the decade.

The W-car project is so big and technologically advanced that its assembly lines could produce more cars than all the plants of Chrysler Corp., the No. 3 automaker.

"It's been way overshadowed by the Saturn project," said John Hammond, an automotive industry analyst at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

The W-car lacks the flash of Saturn because no new assembly plants are involved and no publicity-seeking public officials have come to Detroit to court it.

Instead of creating a new facility to build W-cars, GM plans to retool at least five existing U.S. plants, according to GM sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The plants will be fitted with futuristic equipment such as robots that can 'see.'' Their camera eyes and computer brains will check nuts, bolts, door panels and the alignment of parts that are placed on the cars by other robots.

GM has several such systems in operation now. but the W-car plants will use robots and vision machines by the thousands, sources say.

The plants will employ 3,000 robots, compared with 4,000 in use today in the entire 32-plant GM system, says the steel industry weekly Metalworking News, which keeps close track of Detroit's tooling orders.

Metalworking News said plants making the cars will be at Arlington, Texas; Doraville and Lakewood, Ga.; Fairfax, Kan.; Oklahoma City; and Oshawa, Ontario. GM officials would not confirm the list. The $5 billion Saturn project is the company's most important in the long term, GM says, because the traditional assembly line will be scrapped in favor of automated work stations where prefabricated car
