

Government: economic growth sluggish

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy is growing at a surprisingly sluggish rate of 2.1 percent so far this year, down sharply from the pace set in 1984, the government estimated today.

The Commerce Department put growth in the gross national product — the broadest measure of economic health — at its slowest rate since a weak 1.6 percent pace turned in from July through September last year.

In other bad news, the report said inflation is heating up.

A measure of prices tied to the GNP — the implicit price deflator — is rising at an annual rate of 5.4 percent in the still-unfinished first quarter, the fastest clip since a 5.6 percent pace in the second quarter of 1982.

The new report caught analysts by surprise. Most had been predicting the economy was growing at an annualized rate of around 4 percent this year, about the rate they expect for the entire year.

While that pace would be below the 6.8 percent growth turned in during 1984, it would still be a healthy rate for the third year of an economic recovery.

Most economists believe the economy must expand at a pace of at least 3 percent to create enough new jobs to keep unemployment falling.

The third quarter slump in activity last year had brought on worries of an impending recession. Those fears were eased when growth rebounded in the final three months of last year.

Today's report, however, revised the extent of that rebound from an earlier reported 4.9 percent rate to a slightly smaller 4.3 percent pace.

The Commerce Department's "flash" estimate of growth is made before a quarter is over. Today's report contains complete data only for January with estimates for February and March. The quarterly estimate is subject to several rounds of revisions later in the year.

Much of the deterioration in growth stemmed from the jump in the inflation rate.

Before inflation was taken into account, the economy was calculated as expanding at an annual rate of 7.6 percent in the first quarter, actually up from the 7.1 percent rate of the fourth quarter last year.

However, inflation, as measured by the price deflator, picked up from 2.8 percent in the final three months of the year to 5.4 percent in the January-March quarter. This dragged the growth of the inflation-adjusted GNP down to 2.1 percent.

The report also put blame for the sluggish growth on the country's poor performance in foreign trade.

City prosecutor is continuing effort to silence Rover

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A city prosecutor may be barking up the wrong tree in trying to prosecute a charge that isn't even on the books as a violation, a local lawyer indicated.

The prosecutor has charged another Pampa woman with violating a city ordinance for having a barking dog.

Suzi Reed, 1105 Juniper, was charged with "allowing an offensive condition to exist by allowing dogs to bark and disturb the neighborhood in violation of Ordinance 969 (the city's animal control laws)." The charge against Reed, who operates a kennel in her backyard, was based on a formal complaint filed by her next-door neighbor, Veal Ferguson. The complaint was accepted for action by city prosecutor Rick Harris.

The dog breeder intends to plead not guilty and demand a jury trial in municipal court. She hired Pampa attorney Mark Buzzard to battle the complaint. The woman has received a tentative trial date for 9 a.m. March 27.

The city's animal control laws under which Reed was charged make no mention of barking dogs.

Buzzard said the ordinance's omission of any reference to canine yapping creates a general, vague charge against his client. The lawyer said he may challenge whether the charge is constitutional and ask Municipal Judge Phil Vanderpool to dismiss it. He said even the "intent" of the ordinance doesn't appear to cover barking dogs.

"How can you hold an owner liable for something over which he has no control?" Buzzard wondered.

"It's kind of like outlawing breathing," he said. "Dogs naturally bark."

The kennel owner is the second Pampa resident charged under the ordinance on a specific complaint of harboring a noisy pooch.

Diane Williams, 717 E. 16th, was arrested Feb. 13, giving her the dubious honor as the first charged for having a raucous Rover. No trial date has been announced for that precedent-setting case, according to a municipal court clerk.

Williams has called her pending charge "a bunch of hogwash."

Though the ordinance doesn't specifically list barking as a violation, it does make an owner responsible for a mutt's causing a "nuisance."

"A dog or a cat shall be considered a nuisance if it causes offensive conditions," say the terms in the ordinance that Harris has claimed allow the prosecution of a barking dog's owner.

Each violation of the ordinance constitutes a separate offense, each subject to a maximum $200 fine.

"You can only fine them for a violation. You can't put a muzzle on the dog," Harris has said.

The revised animal control ordinance received final passage in Feb. 1984. In discussing the new ordinance, proponents of the stricter animal control laws asked that they include rules against barking dogs. City Attorney Don Lane, the author of the ordinance, said then that the specific language about barking animals wasn't included because it would be tough to enforce.

For the past 11 years, Reed has operated Suzi's World of Poodles from her home in northwest Pampa. She presently has about 30 dogs in her backyard but usually has about 20. She breeds and sells the small, but valuable dogs — AKC-registered toy poodles and Yorkshire Terriers — in a profitable business. She also grooms dogs in her home.

Reed said the dogs are put up in their cages inside a large dog house from about 4 p.m. until 9 a.m. the next day. The house has heating and air conditioning. It also has stereo music, which is played to keep the dogs from hearing noise that would set off a round of barking at night, she said.

Reed said she keeps the premises clean and picks up droppings once and sometimes twice a day. She dips the animals and sprays the yard for fleas and ticks, she said. The dogs get the veterinary care they need, and Reed does her best to comply with the city's animal control laws, the kennel operator said.

"The city inspects me twice a day, but can't find anything wrong," Reed said.

She said animal control officers drive down the alley past her backyard and look over the fence. The officers also have come into the yard to inspect the facilities and found no violations.

"If the city was really on me, I'd give up the dogs. But they have no complaints. I follow all the laws," Reed said.

City Manager Bob Hart

confirmed that the city has found no violations in connection with the residential kennel. He said Reed's case is based on Harris's prosecution of citizens' complaints.

March primary considered by House elections panel

AUSTIN (AP) — State chairmen of the Texas Democratic and Republican parties agree that a proposed presidential primary bill is non-partisan, but they split on supporting the measure.

"There's nothing that draws people to the polls like a presidential election," said Democratic chairman Bob Slagle, who wants an early presidential primary in March to give Texas a louder voice in selecting the next president.

"The system we have now has been working well. If it ain't broke, don't fix it," State Republican Chairman George Strake told the House Elections Committee.

The measure, which calls for a vote on announced presidential candidates in March that would bind voters to a party for the rest of the year, was left as pending business. A similar measure is pending in the Senate.

Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston and committee chairman, said a vote on the House measure probably would be taken next week.

Texas Republicans have been holding a presidential primary for several years at the same time as the May party elections for state and local officials.

Democrats have a say in selecting the presidential nominees through delegates selected in caucuses for the party's national convention.

"We want it flexible so the Republicans can do what they want to do and we can do what we want to do," Slagle said after explaining the proposal arose from a Democratic study committee after widespread criticism of the party's caucus system last summer.

Slagle said the governing body of Texas Democrats had agreed to hold some sort of binding presidential primary in 1988 whether the pending bill is passed or not.

"We think it important that Texas, the third largest state, have an early say on presidential candidates. We are 36th now in the line of caucuses and primaries," Slagle said.

"The reasons for our opposition to the early primary deal with both money and manpower, the taxpayers' money and volunteer manpower," said Strake.

He said the latest estimate by the secretary of state's office was that a separate presidential primary would cost $10 million.

"With a March presidential primary, the effective date for the start of the political season in Texas would be the summer of 1987," Strake said. "When you add the March primary, the May primary, the June runoff, June district and state conventions and the November general election, you get a political season lasting more than a year."

Strake also said he believed lengthening the election process would decrease voter turnout.

Miami wants to do it right

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — If school officials are going to have to choose a successor to retiring superintendent Bill Vestal, they want to be sure to do it right.

Vestal, who has been with the Miami Independent School District for five years, is retiring in June after 28 years as a school superintendent. At a special meeting Tuesday, school officials discussed the process of getting a new one.

Trustees agreed to take applications until May 13 and to send a printed description of the job, the qualifications and the school to prospects. According to Vestal, this sheet will also instruct applicants on the procedure of filing for the job: include service record, transcripts and state certificates.

Applicants are requested not to contact the board until they are contacted for interviews.

"After May 13, we'll want to start screening applications, spend a little time," Vestal said. "That's when you want to stop taking applications and start doing the hiring."

Although trustees expressed a desire to have Vestal help with the selection, the outgoing superintendent declined.

"The decision is supposed to be yours," he told the trustees.

Board member Vernon Cook said that he would not want to hire a consultant.

"You'll get a lot of applications," Vestal said, anticipating 40 - 45.

"You'll get some from other superintendents, applications from principals who want to move up or down."

Although it is "a little early yet," Vestal said he has already had a number of inquiries into the superintendent's job. He added that there are plenty such jobs to go around this time of year. Among the schools due new superintendents are Panhandle, Follett, Sunray and Wheeler.

In another personnel matter, trustees discussed what legal steps they would have to take if a teacher chooses to appeal his dismissal. At their regular meeting earlier this month, trustees voted not to renew the contract of science teacher Bob Dungan.

Vestal told trustees that Dungan plans to appeal his dismissal. According to Vestal, Dungan wants more specific reasons on why he was dismissed.

Board members agreed to meet with an attorney and to set April 2 as a hearing date on the possible dismissal appeal.

Under state law, the board must include in a teacher's notice of nonrenewal all the reasons why the contract will be terminated. The dismissed teacher has 10 days (in this case until late March) to appeal the decision. The board must provide a hearing within 15 days after that.

If, after the hearing, the teacher still disagrees with the board's vote, he may appeal to the State Commissioner of Education. The commissioner cannot overrule the board's decision unless the board's decision is ruled unlawful or not based on substantial evidence.

Economist: FERC ruling could cause economic troubles

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

A Texas A&M University economist predicts the loss of half the non-agricultural related jobs in the Pampa and Borger area if a federal agency decision results in the shut down of thousands of oil and gas wells.

A study of the economic impact of the pending Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) decision was announced Wednesday at the Borger offices of TEAM for the Survival of the Panhandle. The report was prepared by Texas A&M economist Timothy J. Gronberg, who was hired by TEAM.

TEAM claims to be a coalition of community leaders, royalty owners, producers and contractors formed to increase community awareness and adhesiveness regarding the potential adverse impact of the FERC decision upon the Panhandle region, particularly the counties of Gray, Hutchinson, Carson and Moore.

Gronberg based his study on an examination of the preliminary effort by FERC which allegedly would result in closing 8,000 to 10,000 wells drilled in recent years to increase domestic energy supplies.

Don Boucher, executive director of TEAM, said, "We knew FERC's decision could be bad, but we did not know how bad. Thus, we hired an outside expert to examine it. We gave him complete freedom for his analysis. His study clearly and conclusively shows that if FERC prevails, the Panhandle's economy will be devastated."

The study claims 12,120 of the 30,721 non-agricultural jobs in the four-county area would be lost. School districts would be particularly impacted, with some losing as much as 60 percent of their revenue per pupil. Gronberg claims, in addition, the state would lose, in one year, $27,347,000 in severance taxes.

"I think this clearly indicates that if FERC wins, we lose to the tune of about every third person becoming unemployed," Boucher stated. "Our area can unite to oppose FERC, or we can become a region of ghost towns reminiscent of dust bowl days."

TEAM has been especially active in organizing meetings in Borger to pronounce their claims of devastating economic doom for the region. The organization recently opened an office in Pampa.

The coalition has been asking merchants and individuals to make cash contributions for spreading its warning of doom to the area counties and arousing public support in opposition to FERC's pending decision.

Administrative Law Judge Brenda Murray issued her proposed recommendations in January against the so-called independent oil producers, ruling they had illegally been diverting to the intrastate market gas which had been dedicated to interstate commerce.

The judge also indicated the independents had been selling the gas above maximum price levels established under federal pricing controls.

The TEAM organization claims it isn't taking sides in the disputes between the majors and the independents. But its warnings are mainly aimed at informing the public of the possible economic disaster facing the counties if the FERC ruling goes against the independents.

The FERC commissioners were to rule on Judge Murray's recommendations last week, but they delayed any decision for at least 45 days after a request from the Texas Railroad Commission (TRC) was filed.

The TRC has asked FERC to delay its final action until after the TRC has ruled on its proposed decision, also going against the independents. The TRC also has claimed the state agency has priority jurisdiction in the matters.

Siblings hope to save the brother they never knew

CHICAGO (AP) — A reunion of siblings who have never met could save the life of one of them in need of a bone marrow transplant.

Steven Akin, 24, a leukemia patient at M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, was to meet today with his brother and sister adopted more than 20 years ago.

The brother — John Davis, 23, of west suburban Schiller Park, and his sister, Barbara Davis, 28, of Green Bay, Wis., were to fly to Houston this morning and undergo tests Friday to determine if they can provide compatible bone marrow for Akin.

"The first thing I want to do is give Steven a big hug," said Ms. Davis at a news conference. "This is a moment I've been waiting for all my life."

Davis said it was "very inspirational that we've managed to reach each other after all these years."

He added, however, that he regrets the reunion isn't taking place under better circumstances. "I wish we could have got together a few years ago, when Steven had his health."

The Davises said they were not apprehensive about the bone marrow tests.

"He's our flesh and blood," said Ms. Davis. "We both agree that we'll do anything possible to help our brother."

Akin was diagnosed as having leukemia in 1983. Doctors say his chances of survival are small without a marrow transplant from a sibling.

Truth Seekers in Adoption, a non-profit Chicago-based group that specializes in reuniting families separated by adoption, announced Tuesday that the Davises were believed to be Akin's long-lost brother and sister.

Accident injures Pampa woman

A Pampa businesswoman was seriously injured in a three-vehicle accident Wednesday afternoon in Amarillo.

Glendora Gindorf, 67, owner of Las Pampas Galleries, an art gallery in the Coronado Center, was badly injured in the accident, which happened about 2 p.m. at the intersection of Nueches and North Grand.

Mrs. Gindorf, of 2530 Aspen, was a passenger in a car driven by her daughter-in-law, Cynthia Gindorf, 31, 2339 Cherokee. Both were taken by ambulance to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

Glendora Gindorf was initially listed in critical condition, but she had improved and was listed in serious condition today, according to a hospital spokeswoman. Cynthia Gindorf sustained only minor injuries, according to Amarillo police.

The Gindorf vehicle was northbound on North Grand, when two other vehicles collided at the intersection of the two streets, police reported. The second vehicle involved in that initial collision was knocked in front of the moving Gindorf vehicle, Amarillo police said.

The Pampa residents' vehicle was nearly "totaled" by the impact of the collision with the second vehicle involved, police said.

A department spokeswoman said the initial collision happened when the driver of the first vehicle failed to yield the right of way and turned in front of the vehicle that was pushed into the path of the Gindorf vehicle.

Ronald Maul scholarship fund established

The Gray-Roberts County Farm Bureau has set up a scholarship fund in memory of Ronald Maul, 39, a Pampa man who died Tuesday in a one-vehicle accident.

The memorial scholarship will be for seniors involved through the Top o' Texas Livestock Show. The deserving student awarded the scholarship may use the money for either college or trade school, according to bureau officials.

Maul, a lifelong Pampa resident, had been an area farmer and a director of the Top o' Texas Rodeo Association. In high school he had been active in Future Farmers of America and various related activities.

Maul died Tuesday morning after a 1985 Toyota pickup truck left the road past a sharp turn in a dirt road about seven miles southwest of Pampa and rolled over twice.

Donations to the Maul Memorial Scholarship Fund can be made with Pat Young at Citizens Bank and Trust, 665-2341, or made directly to the bank.

Israelis kill 20, blow up houses

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops in tanks and armored personnel carriers today stormed Shiite Moslem villages outside the occupation zone in south Lebanon, and the military command in Tel Aviv said 20 guerrillas were killed.

The command said soldiers seized large quantities of arms, including mortars, rocket-propelled grenades, and explosives, in raids on the villages of Houmine al-Tahta and Jbaa. One Israeli soldier was slightly injured during the search-and-arrest operation.

Most of the dead identified as guerrillas were armed, according to the statement. Arrests also were made but the command gave no numbers.

The fresh Israeli thrust came as government troops and Christian militiamen battled with artillery and tank cannons for the fourth straight day in south Lebanon's port city of Sidon and then declared a midmorning cease-fire.

A Lebanese military source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said nine Shiite villages were raided in the Israeli sweep that stopped on the fringe of Christian-controlled territory seven miles southeast of Sidon.

The source said about 60 tanks and armored personnel carriers moved through the town of Arab Salim and raided the villages of Houmine al-Tahta, Sarba, Jal el-Arab, Roukine, Roumine, Ankoun, Jbaa, Kfar Fila and Kfar Melki in a two-pronged thrust.

The report from the Israeli military command apparently referred to only one prong of the attack. There was no explanation for why it did not mention other raids.

Reporters from Sidon traveled to within a half mile of the Israeli operation. They said they heard the sound of gunfire and explosions from the direction of the raided villages.

"She's got a permit for a kennel. She's operating a business in a residential area that was apparently grandfathered in," Hart said.

The dog breeder said she never had any problem in the neighborhood until Ferguson bought the house next door about five months ago.

She said she put up an inner fence along the neighbor's side of the house to keep the dogs far away from him. And she tacked black plastic sheeting on the fence to keep them out of his view.

Still, she said the neighbor complains that the dogs' barking keeps his wife and baby awake when they try to nap during the day.

She said Ferguson claims that he presently can't sell his house because of the dogs. Reed has a signed statement from the former owner saying that the neighbor was aware of the kennel operation when he bought the home.

"Whatever I do, I can't please him," Reed said. "I said, 'You knew the dogs were there when you bought the house,' and he got mad instantly. I've never been ugly to him. I've never cursed him or raised my voice," Reed said.

The woman has gathered statements from several neighbors saying the dogs haven't caused problems. A counter-petition opposing the kennel also has been circulated in the neighborhood.

Ferguson's complaint is one of just four that neighbors have filed against the kennel operation.

House takes school discipline action stand

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that would give school administrators authority to suspend students who present a danger in the school gained tentative approval from the House.

The House on Wednesday also approved and sent to the Senate a bill by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, that would double college tuition for Texans at state-financed colleges this fall. Other tuition also would increase.

The suspension bill by Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, would give local school districts authority to suspend a student for up to six days a semester if the student presents a danger in the school.

The education reform package passed last year called for alternative education programs for students, rather than suspension or expulsion, whenever possible.

The bill, which has Gov. Mark White's seal of approval, would provide school districts with an option rather than requiring them to seek other educational programs for the troubled students.

White said the bill, "recognizes the need to address those disruptive individuals who interfere with that environment, while maintaining the appropriate emphasis on providing alternatives in instances of lesser misbehavior."

The bill provides for students to be removed from a classroom if they assault a teacher or other individual, sell, give or possess marijuana or alcoholic beverages or possesses a firearm.

Another vote is needed before the bill goes to the Senate.

"Alternative programs can be and should be put into place. Suspension will be used as a drastic measure when needed," said Haley, chairman of the House Public Education Committee.

Haley said Texas schools are incurring a $9 million price tag for alternative education programs under the current system.

Several attempts by Rep. Al Granoff, D-Dallas, to amend the bill failed.

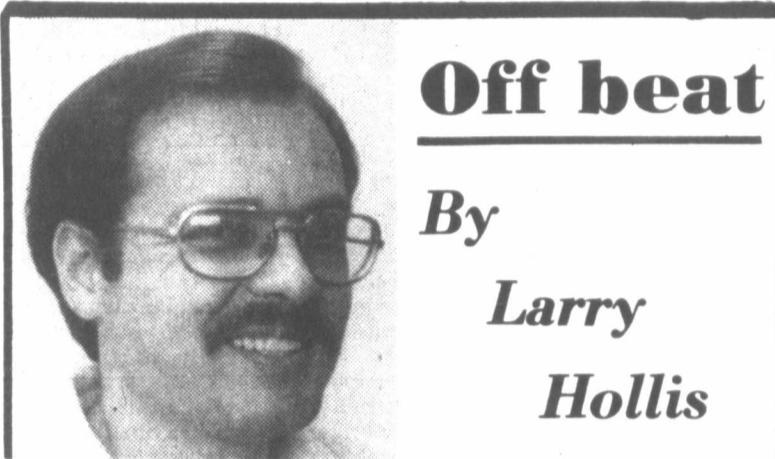

"This is going to affect thousands of felonies in the state of Texas," Granoff said. He said the suspensions would put the troubled students on the streets, leading to additional problems.

An amendment by Rep. Gregory Luna, D-San Antonio, would allow the student to receive partial credit for homework the student makes up as a result of his or her suspension.

Granoff said, "The bill open doors to allow school administrators to expel a student for two minor infractions."

In other action the House approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would raise the price of a marriage license from $7.50 to $15.

No pass, no play - c'mon!

I've generally supported the on-going educational reforms in public school education in the state.

While teaching college freshman English students at a university in Utah, I was amazed at the lack of writing and reading skills many of these college students displayed.

I can't say they were illiterate, but I found myself angered at times that some school systems had passed these students on to college when they couldn't write an organized paragraph, much less an entire coherent theme. Spelling was deficient in many instances, grammar seemed a lost cause for some and critical reading skills were nearly non-existent.

I found myself having to teach some of these students basic materials again just to maintain an intelligible level of instructional conversation. I was distressed at the number of blank faces I observed when I dared to mention such terms as "subject," "verb," "adjective" and "participle phrase."

After the first several weeks of the first semester I taught, I was ready to go out and hunt down the teachers who had dared to let these students pass through the system when they were so obviously unprepared to handle all the writing and reading they would encounter in a college setting.

So I'm a firm supporter of a return to more basic instruction in reading, writing, math and the other academic courses. A college freshman instructor shouldn't have to waste time re-teaching materials that should have been acquired in high school or even in junior high.

But I admit I have to take exception with at least one of the new rules being imposed on secondary school students. And that's the severe limitations on activities being imposed under the so-called "no pass, no play" rule.

At the risk of exposing some of my past failings, I'll cite myself as a personal example of how the rule would have affected my activities as a high school student.

As a junior student in dear ole Pampa High School back in 1963-1964, I was fairly involved in student extracurricular activities. Not concerned with any athletic fields - I was a so-called "brain" - I nevertheless was a member of seven different student groups.

These included Tri-Sci (the science club), Future Teachers, Key Club, Junior Classical League (Latin), Quill and Scroll (journalism), Junior Red Cross and National Honor Society. And in my junior year (and again my senior year), I was an officer in four of those organizations.

Accordingly, I was rather busy with these student activities: meetings every week before or after school, banquets, work projects, record keeping, contests and those wonderful, enjoyable school trips. (I have figured I must have gone on at least 26 school trips during my four years in high school, lasting anywhere from one day to a week.)

And I enjoyed it all. I had fun, made a lot of friends, learned much, won a few awards in contests, gained leadership experience and extended myself beyond my usually shy, reserved personality. And, in general, I kept my grades up, eventually graduating with honors, that gold tassel hanging from my graduation cap and that gold symbol on my diploma.

Yet I would have missed out on a lot during my junior year if the current "no pass, no play" rule had been in effect the second semester of my junior year.

Despite my usual academic accomplishments, that semester I achieved something quite out of character for me - flunking grades. In the fifth six-weeks I failed Algebra II and honors chemistry. And I flunked Algebra II again the final six-weeks, though earlier grades and a fair semester test score allowed me to pass the semester.

But those failing grades had nothing to do with all the time spent on extracurricular activities. With or without the activities, I would probably not have spent much extra time on the homework - and we had a lot of that back then.

I would waste time on watching television, riding around the drag or even going to a movie before I buckled down to homework, in spite of my mother's constant reminders that homework had priority. I was a crammer, so I could usually speed through my assignments without much trouble.

I flunked those courses in those six-weeks periods for reasons having nothing to do with outside activities. I had the misfortune of taking Algebra II when, for reasons still beyond me, the school district decided to impose so-called modern math techniques throughout the entire system all at once instead of gradually introducing it. Not having had those skills in previous math classes, I just found myself floundering in the second semester, eventually just losing interest in the course.

And I flunked chemistry the one six weeks because I just couldn't comprehend the material. And the teacher was out running around the state and nation as an officer in a national science teachers' association during that period, unable to give me the instruction I had been accustomed to receiving. Again, I just lost interest.

But I kept up with all the student activities and appreciated them. As president of two clubs at the time, vice president of another and treasurer of still another, I presided over a number of events. Plus I was busy with Latin and journalism contests in that period, winning some state honors.

And I would have had to sit out on all of that under the current limitations. And if that had resulted, I would have been rather upset and probably would have lost even more interest in school. That's a rebellious period for youth, and I would have resented the restrictions.

As it was, I didn't suffer any setbacks. I just buckled down more the next year and maintained my A's in all courses my senior year. My grade point average dropped some, but what the heck. I had fun and found school an enjoyable experience, the activities as rewarding and maybe even more rewarding than any gold tassel.

So, H. Ross Perot, don't expect my support on your extracurricular limitations.

And what makes you think every student or even most students want to participate in your high-tech society goals, anyway? There is life beyond computers - and even without computers.

Diverse farm groups join for rally

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The politicians lined up to tell the farmers and ranchers what they wanted to hear — Texas agriculture is not getting a fair deal.

"I know what it's like to milk a cow and have the cow step in the milk bucket," Lubbock County Judge Rod Shaw said at the Wednesday rally. "Someone is still stepping in our bucket."

About 600 people were at the Lubbock Civic Center for what many said was an unprecedented gathering of producers of a variety of crops.

The Agriculture Day rally also brought together officials from two long-feuding groups — the Texas Farmers Union and Texas Farm Bureau.

Gov. Mark White likened it to a meeting of officials from the rival cities of Midland and Odessa. White surveyed the head table and joked that he was surprised that the different groups were "in the same room at the same time and nobody's gotten hurt."

Rice growers, cotton producers, wheat farmers and corn producers lined up to offer echoing messages.

Farm life is difficult in 1985. You can't survive by raising crops that sell for less than the price of production.

"This is not a farm problem," White said. "This is an American problem."

"In times of crisis organizations can put aside petty differences and unite for the big fight we cannot afford to lose," said Mike Moeller of the farmers union.

White and Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower blamed the farm woes on the Reagan administration. They said the president's farm policies have done nothing to bring farmers the one thing that can help — a fair price.

"America's countryside is in a death struggle with Washington," said Hightower. "You can still make a small fortune in farming. The problem is you have to start with a large fortune."

The Reagan plan, he said, will replace family farms with corporate agriculture.

"Purely and simply what we are in is a power struggle to determine who is going to deliver our dinner," he said.

Carl King of Dimmitt, representing corn producers, said all farmers have been hurt by "cheap food policies." He said Texas farmers are looking to White for help in pushing a favorable farm bill through Congress.

"I'm aware he's not everybody's cup of tea. But right now we're with you 100 percent," King told White.

J.B. Cooper of the Texas Grain Sorghum Producers Association told the crowd, "The agriculture industry is not dead."

Panel OK's pesticide control bill

AUSTIN (AP) — A pesticide regulation bill that State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower says is fair to all has been approved by a Senate committee.

The bill approved without objection Wednesday by the Natural Resources Committee appeared to strike a balance among farm workers, commercial chemical and farm interests and Hightower.

Hightower was not present for the committee meeting, but a message from him described the bill as "something all of us can support because it's fair to farmers, farm workers, and rural residents — and that's been our goal all along."

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, the bill sponsor, said pesticide regulations recently adopted by the Texas agriculture department had "caused some concern among the agricultural community."

A major obstacle to pesticide regulation was cleared, according to a department employee, when language was inserted in the bill that removed a requirement that farmers notify certain neighbors before they spray their fields.

Now, if neighbors asked to be notified, the farmer can call the department, and it may notify the neighbors.

"The prior notice burden is not on the farmer but on the Texas Department of Agriculture," said Brown, R-Lake Jackson.

Regulations covering when a worker may re-enter a field after pesticides have been applied remain substantially the same, Brown said, although the commissioner may extend the re-entry time from that set out by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. Fields treated with pesticides would be posted.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, added an amendment that schools, hospitals and nursing homes near fields to be sprayed with pesticide would automatically be notified.

The bill also would authorize the department to set up advisory committees to study issues such as pesticide drift.

Brown said a loophole was filled with a provision that unlicensed pesticide applicators could be prosecuted.

Chairman Tati Santiesteban of the Natural Resources Committee told the department's general counsel, Sam Biscoe, "I hope you realize the great responsibility the department is assuming. If something goes wrong, the buck is going to stop right here."

"Yes sir," replied Biscoe.

Campaigns cost taxpayer plenty

Campaigning for the presidency is a full-time job. That's the view of Howard Baker, the former majority leader in the U.S. Senate, who left that job to follow his timetable for a presidential campaign.

Baker won't come right out and tell you he's running for the presidency, but he will tell you he's right on schedule if he were.

Campaigning for the presidency is a full-time job. That's also the view of former South Dakota Sen. George McGovern, who recently was ordered to refund $25,104 to the Federal Election Commission, including $13,549 in federal matching funds that went toward a $50,000 salary McGovern received from his campaign committee during the six months he spent on the stump last year.

McGovern says that's not fair. He points out that several candidates in the Democratic field were U.S. senators, drawing their regular salary - $72,600 - while they were out in the field hustling votes. McGovern, who earns his keep these days as a lecturer, was prevented from collecting his usual lecture fees. As a candidate, the payments had to be considered "campaign" contributions.

Poor George. After all these years, he still sees only half the truth. McGovern is outraged that his fellow vote-hustlers would draw their salary from the taxpayers, but he sees nothing wrong with forcing them to contribute to his. For shame.

To be sure, the FEC missed the point as well. It said there was nothing wrong with the McGovern campaign - or any campaign, for that matter - paying George a salary. It simply ruled that the taxpayers shouldn't be forced to help. But what are the taxpayers doing, if not picking up the tab for a senator or other public official who spends most of his or her time out of the office hustling votes? Furthermore, when taxpayers put up "matching funds," even if that money is not used directly for a candidate's salary, it releases other money that could be so used.

Two of Howard Baker's likely opponents for the Republican nomination will be on the public payroll during their campaigns. If they run, Baker's successor as Senate majority leader, Robert Dole, and Vice President George Bush will be supported by the taxpayers.

Baker, to his credit, left office and will draw a salary from his law firm. And, until he officially announces his candidacy, he can make a killing on the lecture circuit as well. Those noble acts, however, will leave him on the higher moral ground in the coming campaign only if his campaign committee also refuses to accept matching federal funds.

How education should be

The education news is dreary indeed. That is: if "education" is what schools do - a tricky assumption these days.

Texas legislators, parents, and educators are locked in combat over new state rules requiring athletes to pass all courses or pass the playing field. The rule is condemned as unfair, because, as everyone knows, schools exist for the sake of the team sports they sponsor, academics being incidental.

Very incidental, one supposes, because over half of Dallas' middle and high school students failed at least one course last semester. Thirty percent of these failed because of five or more unexcused absences.

The mind reels. Would someone mind opening a window? In quest of fresh air, I point the car southward, away from downtown Dallas. Off to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue - St. Philip's Episcopal School.

Why is the air so fresh and clean at St. Philip's? For one basic reason: the school, according to the received wisdom of the 1980s, should not work at all. It does work, though. It works handsomely.

St. Philip's, though bright and immaculately maintained, has no physical plant to brag on: little more than an unprepossessing cluster of prefab buildings in a dingy South Dallas neighborhood.

Nor do the school's 113 pupils (three-year-olds through third grade) spring from a middle-class environment, far less a social-register one - the environments that supposedly produce effortless academic achievement.

St. Philip's, owned by the Episcopal Diocese of Dallas, is one of two all-black Episcopal schools in the United States. It exists, proudly and frankly, to serve the black ghetto. Some of the parents are AFDC recipients; most hold modest-paying jobs. Tuition is $950 a year, an amount representing 13 percent of the average household income at St. Philip's (and less than half the true per-student cost of a St. Philip's education).

Only about half the St. Philip's parents are financially able to pay the whole amount; the others pay on a sliding scale. At all events, parental involvement is near-total. Parent-teacher meetings are well-patronized, homework is supervised and returned.

The visitor's eye can deceive itself, but St. Philip's pupils look well-scrubbed, well-behaved, and enthusiastic, eager (against the spirit of the age) to be learning.

St. Philip's receives no direct federal subsidies, nor do its teachers belong to powerful nationwide unions. There is, to be sure, a chaplain. The pupils do a thing forbidden in the public schools by U.S. Supreme Court decree: They pray everyday to God. OUT LOUD, for heaven's sake!

For neighborhood children in the Dallas Independent School District, fifth grade and up, there is an evening tutoring and study program: the private sector lending the public sector a much-needed hand.

And what is the upshot of all this nonconformity to the spirit of the age? A highly encouraging upshot. St. Philip's pupils do not yet score at the national norm on the Iowa Test of Basic Skills (which lumps all students together, advantaged and disadvantaged as well). But scores, under a vigorous new administration, are riding a steadily ascending curve.

The whole school, including three- and four-year olds, is learning the use of computers.

St. Philip's executive director, Gwen Chance, and its principal, Terry Flowers, resist facile comparisons between their school and the public schools. This is reasonable. St. Philip's, untrammelled by electoral politics and federal-court orders, unburdened by bureaucracy, can do pretty much what it wants: with the hearty support, moreover, of parents. This gives St. Philip's a leg up.

On the other hand, St. Philip's succeeds despite underfunding. Whereas it spends $2,000 a year per pupil, even Texas' poorest districts spend $2,478. This says something about the overestimation of money as an educational cure-all.

A few more gulps of fresh air, then back into the car for the return trip downtown. Behind lies St. Philip's - yet only physically so. The feeling grows: In the ways that count, the ways that have to do with character and discipline and honest-to-gosh book-learning, St. Philip's - and all schools like it, public or private - are ahead of the game.

No self-pitying apologies for lack of funds or for parental disadvantages, just love...and work...and hope - so it goes at St. Philip's. So, with profit, all today's schools might go.

Today in History

Today is Thursday, March 21, the 80th day of 1985. There are 285 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Three hundred years ago - on March 21, 1685 - composer Johann Sebastian Bach was born in Eisenach, Germany.

On this date: Ten years ago: The U.S. Senate began an all-day session to work on a tax-cut measure.

Five years ago: Speaking to a group of nearly 100 athletes at the White House, President Jimmy Carter asked them to support his decision not to send the U.S. to the Moscow Summer Olympic games because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

One year ago: The White House said President Reagan had decided to cancel the sale of Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan and Saudi Arabia.

A sad silence on Sunday

I grew up on gospel music, and Sunday mornings have never been the same since there is no more gospel music on the radio to dress for church by.

I'm talking about Hovie Lister's kind of gospel music. And Leroy Abernathy and Shorty Bradford - "The Happy Two" - and a group my daddy loved, The Le Fevres.

You put somebody at a piano, and the sound that emerges is almost rinky-tink. The tall fellow in the back sings a deep, hollow bass, and his short, cherubic friend on the end takes over the high parts.

Gospel music now, I gather, has gone big-time and rhinestone, and send $10.95 for a framed picture of The Last Supper that glows in the dark.

I remember when I found the obituary in the back pages of the paper. I supposed a two-column headline on an obit says the deceased achieved at least some notoriety during his lifetime, but to send Urias Le Fevre away without even a picture seemed an oversight.

He was 69 and he had died of cancer. He spent 54 years of his life singing gospel music. And there was even more to him than that.

I remember talking to one of the Le Fevres' neighbors before the funeral. "He was a good man, a good father to his children and a good husband to Eva Mae."

What memories I have. It is Sunday afternoon and the dishes have been cleared away, and supper will be what chicken wasn't eaten and a cold biscuit, if you're lucky. It is the early days of television.

We watched westerns and we watched wrestling matches. And Sunday afternoons we watched and listened to The Le Fevres - Eva Mae at the piano, Urias and his brother Alphas in perfect harmony.

Only the deaf could resist tapping a toe. "Marvelous," my father would say, as only he could say it, "absolutely marvelous."

I can even remember the commercials. God bless Martha White Flour for bringing the music of the Le Fevres to my childhood.

Theirs was one of the most successful gospel-singing television shows ever. The show was live for years, but videotape later made it possible for The Le Fevres to syndicate to 65 other stations across the nation.

It all began for brothers Urias and Alphas before their teens when they would sing about the Lord with their sister Maude back home in Tennessee.

Urias Le Fevre's obituary said the group turned down many offers to leave gospel music and go into the more lucrative field of country-western music. The Le Fevres weren't interested; they saw their musical talent as a "Christian calling."

The senior members of the Le Fevre group, Urias, Alphas and Eva Mae, retired a couple of years ago. They had a million miles and a million songs behind them. The younger members of the family are continuing, and one son, Mylon, sings rock 'n' roll.

The Le Fevres' neighbor brought me out of my reverie with a question: "Want to hear something pretty?"

I didn't have an answer. He already had the record in his hand, and he placed it on the turntable. It was The Le Fevres, and they were singing "He Pilots My Ship."

We listened, and when it was over, I never hesitated with my reaction:

"Marvelous," I brought back from a long time ago, "absolutely marvelous."

Indexing of taxes won't be painless

By Don Graff

Another April 15 is just around the corner, but hold on - help is finally on the way.

Income-tax indexing is to begin this year. That was decided by Congress back in 1981, under pressure of double-digit inflation and rising public protest at its effect on tax rates.

What it means is that the inflation rate will be factored into the tax rate, so that the effort to keep up with rising prices through larger paychecks will not move wage-earners into ever higher tax brackets.

In short, it means the end of bracket creep.

So far so good, but not necessarily all to the good in the longer view, according to a study by the Conference Board, an industry-supported research organization located in New York. To get a reading on the likely impact of indexing on federal finances, it surveyed 15 countries and 10 states that have tried it.

Indexing of state personal income taxes began in some of the states as far back as 1977 and in others as recently as last year. Results have been largely as expected. In the report's language:

"It has eliminated the bulk of inflation-induced increases in income tax collections; reduced average effective income tax rates; and provided the largest relative reduction...to low-income taxpayers."

However - and it is a big one - benefits have been offset by "substantial cumulative revenue losses that aggravated fiscal strains."

California's tax take, for a prime example, dropped a total of $4.5 billion in the 1978-82 period, and an additional $3.9 billion the next year alone.

The states have survived, but the report foresees a significant financial threat to many if inflation should pick up and economic growth slow down.

The experiences of the 15 indexed countries are variations on a similar theme. They include many of the major industrial democracies - Britain, France, Canada - and indexing frequently was adopted following prolonged bouts with inflation.

In Australia, the result was such a large shortfall in government revenues that indexing was suspended in 1981.

Canada, where it has been in effect for 12 years, dealt with a similar problem by capping indexing at less than the inflation rate for 1983 and '84, which meant the son of bracket creep was back in business. To some, that may be fine-tuning. To others, copping out.

Applying its findings to federal financing, the Conference Board foresees significant revenue losses ahead - $5 billion to $6 billion the first year and a possible cumulative total of $50 billion to $60 billion through 1988. Even more if inflation exceeds the projected 5.5 percent annual rate and real economic growth falls below 3.5 percent.

That would mean increased strain on financial markets and the budget process - i.e., an even larger deficit. And consequent increased pressure for tax increases.

The irony, as the Conference Board report sees it, is that indexing was adopted while inflation was up and growth down. It is taking effect in the opposite situation.

No turning back, however, is foreseen.

As the report puts it, "As long as indexing keeps its widespread popular backing, including strong support from President Reagan, Congress is likely to retain it in one form or another."

That can probably be taken as an understatement.

Organized labor praises appointment of labor secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — William E. Brock, President Reagan's choice as new labor secretary, is being welcomed by organized labor to a post that has drawn the wrath of most union leaders over the past four years.

Brock was nominated Wednesday to succeed Raymond Donovan, whose relations with AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland were non-existent after Donovan angered the labor federation's chief early in the Reagan administration.

Donovan resigned last week after being ordered to stand trial on 137 counts of grand larceny and fraud.

Tipped off to the appointment by

Brock himself just before Reagan's announcement, Kirkland issued a statement saying, "We look forward to a new and constructive relationship with the Labor Department."

Teamsters President Jackie Presser said the union is "delighted with the appointment."

Brock said his primary job "is to do whatever I can to create as many jobs as I can."

Betty Southard Murphy, a Republican and former chairwoman of the National Labor Relations Board, said Brock will be able "to build bridges" to organized labor on the issue of foreign trade.

In his current post as the administration's trade representative, Brock has grappled with soaring U.S. trade deficits, which totaled $123.3 billion last year.

That's a problem of vital importance to union leaders representing American workers who have been laid off because of increasing imports. The foreign countries, in many cases, have erected strong barriers to keep out U.S. exports.

"We feel Brock is receptive to different views in the trade area and he tried to open up Japanese markets to U.S. telecommunications firms," noted Glenn Watts, president of the Communications Workers of America.

Confirmation hearings and action on Brock's nomination by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee are expected to take place in the next three to four weeks, said Ed Darrell, press secretary to the panel's Republican majority.

"It's a pretty good appointment," said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, ranking Democrat on the Senate labor subcommittee.

Metzenbaum said Brock "is going to have a number of questions to answer" at confirmation hearings concerning "the administration's failure to extend" the federal supplemental unemployment benefits program, which expires March 31.

The 18,000-employee Labor Department, which is charged with enforcing dozens of laws affecting wages, hours, health and safety in the nation's workplaces, is about to be headed by a man who received a 91 percent approval rating from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce while he was in Congress.

TEAM claims FERC's ruling could have catastrophic results against the wells of both the majors and the independents, adding they don't want any wells to close down.

But the word "if" is important to TEAM's claims, since the FERC ruling is still pending. Also, their main fears seem to center around a claim that the FERC ruling would impose a new gas to oil ratio (GOR).

TEAM and other representatives for the independents have referred to a specific passage from Judge Murray's recommendation which they cite as support for fears that most wells would be adversely affected by the federal ruling, if accepted later by the FERC commissioners.

The passage is found on Page 32 of the proposal:

"(FERC) Enforcement Staff presented in its rebuttal case a new theory that any well producing above a gas-oil ratio of 2000 to 1, would indicate perforations in the free gas zone above the gas-oil contact in violation of Railroad Commission rules."

The independents have claimed this could be a justification for placing all gas from oil wells above the 2,000 cubic feet (Mcf.) range under federal regulations and subject to federal pricing controls, whether casinghead gas (not subject to federal price controls) or other natural gas.

The gas also could be dedicated to interstate commerce if the field from which the gas is produced contains other dedicated gas.

Such standards could have serious impact on most oil wells also producing gas, the independents claim. Nearly all oil wells produce gas in amounts more than 2,000 Mcf., they say. The federal interpretation would severely hamper gas production from oil wells if FERC accepts the staff's theory.

But the judge's recommendation does not specifically address the 2000 to 1 GOR theory, instead ruling mainly on claims of the gas being sold illegally under federal pricing regulations.

However, the independents claim any of the evidence or testimony forming a rationale for the judge's decision could be cited as a precedent in future rulings. And if that happens, the federal agency could redefine the GOR for well classification despite the RRC's current standards, they fear.

The RRC presently allows a GOR of 100,000 Mcf. of gas to one barrel of oil for classifying a producing well as an oil well.

FERC has not made a final decision on the judge's proposal. They can accept it in toto without any changes, or they could make further recommendations or changes after further study. Thus, the new GOR may or may not become part of the final ruling.

Gronberg's findings are subject to the correctness of his assumptions.

Noting his data has been compiled "from a variety of general published sources," Gronberg acknowledges the constraint of utilizing published data "necessitates the adoption of a number of strong working assumptions in order to derive our results."

Production reports, also obtained from previously published materials, give data that provides "the foundation for our assumptions concerning the possible production impact of the FERC decision."

Using his assumptions based on available data, Gronberg states the growth pattern of gas production in the Panhandle region in recent years could be severely depressed IF FERC decides to redefine the allowable gas to oil ratio in classifying an oil well.

Citing tables of production, the A&M professor notes "the average GOR for the first six fields listed (located among the four counties, involving wells producing casinghead gas) would be greater than the proposed legal maximum."

Further, "If we make the strong assumption that the GOR is uniform across wells within the field, the entire oil and casinghead production of those six fields would be lost."

The Community Concert Membership Drive for 1985-86 continues at the drive headquarters in the Coronado Inn lobby from 9 a.m. to 5:15 p.m., today and Friday.

"We are now waiting for our workers to turn in their membership cards as soon as possible so we can see where we stand," says Mrs. H.J. Johnson, membership chairman. All sales need to be turned in by Friday. Headquarters phone number is 665-6290.

Four concerts are scheduled for the Pampa Community Concert Association 1985-86 season: Guy Lombardo and the Royal Canadians; Escosa and Rado, duo harpists; the Gordons, duo-pianists, and the Tulsa Ballet Theatre.

In addition to these concerts, members may attend 12 concerts in area towns. Shamrock's Community Concert Association is to host the New Christy Minstrels, Flamenco Dancers, baritone Edmund Karlsrud, and Men of Song.

Concerts available in Dumas are to be the American Boys Choir, tenor John Gary and Friends, the Defalla Trio and James Dick and Hanani, a cellist and pianist team.

Borger's concerts include the Ronnie Whyte Trio, the DeFalla Guitar Trio, Nevada Dance Theatre and the American Boys Choir.

Following is more information about the Tulsa Ballet Theatre which is to perform in Pampa next season.

A classical company in the Ballet Russe tradition, Tulsa Ballet Theatre boasts directors Roman Jasinski, former premier dancer with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, and Moscelyne Larkin, one of Oklahoma's famed Indian ballerinas.

The Ballet Russe, begun when Serge Diaghilev launched the company's historic world-wide tours in 1909, transformed ballet from an entertainment of Russian royalty into a popular, cosmopolitan art form for the public. From its beginning the Ballet Russe has always been associated with a level of technical excellence on par with the Russian Imperial Ballet, an entertaining program combining traditional classics with contemporary ballets in the classical style, and beautiful sets and costumes to complement the music and choreography of its dances.

Tulsa Ballet Theatre's extensive repertoire of more than 60 ballets permits it to revive the glamour, action and exuberance of the Ballet Russe in ballets such as "Gaité Parisienne" and "Firebird," and also to apply its talents to ethnic ballets such as the rare Indian ballet "The Four Moons," the powerful "Rhythmtron: Ritual of the Winds" in Indian motif, and the Japanese fairy tale ballet "The Bamboo Princess." In addition, Tulsa Ballet Theatre performances feature contemporary works from choreographers such as George Balanchine, Roman Jasinski, Frederic Franklin, John Taras, Ruth Page, Arthur Mitchell, Alun Jones and Loyce Houlton.

Tulsa Ballet Theatre was founded in December 1956 by Jasinski and his wife Moscelyne Larkin when, from their Tulsa School of Ballet, the two developed a fledgling corps of advanced students and ballet teachers. This company developed into Ballet Arts Inc., for annual performances with proceeds being donated to underprivileged children. By 1962 it evolved into Tulsa Civic Ballet, with a board of directors managing the company's finances.

Today Tulsa Ballet Theatre is a full-fledged company of 28 dancers. Each year in Tulsa the company presents a subscription series of performances as well as annual holiday performances of "The Nutcracker."

Bike-a-thon to benefit St. Jude's hospital

Jackie Connell of Lefors is to chair the 1985 St. Bike-A-Thon May 4 in Lefors, announced officials from St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

The cost of treatment, equipment, drugs, and research programs at the children's hospital is met primarily by contributions from private individuals through programs such as bike-a-thons, said Clifford Damstrom, southwest regional director of the hospital.

The impact of St. Jude's research work is felt in every community where cancer and other killer diseases strike. More than 10,000 children will be stricken with cancer during this year alone. Next to accidents, cancer is the leading killer of children in the United States. St. Jude is the world's largest cancer research center in terms of treatment success and is the only institution of its kind dedicated solely to research and the care of children stricken with catastrophic illnesses.

"It is gratifying that every year in towns all across the country, volunteer leaders organize bike-a-thons to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. This would not be possible without the help and support of dedicated chairmen," Damstrom said. Danny Thomas, founder of St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, gives the hospital's purpose: "to wipe catastrophic diseases of children from the face of the earth."

Those interested in assisting with or participating in the bike-a-thon can get more information by contacting Connell at 835-2887 after 6 p.m.

Details of the ride will be announced later.

Dear Abby

Girl fears her loss of virginity may make her lose a husband

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 (nearly 18) and am going with a very special guy whom I like very much. I know he feels the same way about me. We seem to be getting closer and closer and may be heading for a serious relationship.

The problem goes back to when I was 15. I lost my virginity to my first boyfriend. At the time, I thought I was going to marry him, but it didn't work out that way, and we drifted apart.

The guy I'm going with now knows nothing about my not being a virgin. I am a Catholic, and all Catholic girls are supposed to keep their virginity until the day they marry. Since I am no longer a virgin, how can I explain it to him? How can I explain it to any guy who asks me to marry him?

I feel so ashamed. Many times I burst into tears because I don't know how I will ever be able to tell the man I marry. Please help me.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: When you marry, are you going to ask your husband if he's a virgin? And if he is not, do you think you have the right to question him concerning his past sexual experiences? Of course not. It's none of your business.

The same is true concerning you. Your past is none of his business. What's done is done. Don't dwell on it.

DEAR ABBY: My parents have been divorced since I was 14. I'm 20 now and have a good relationship with both my parents, but my mother resents my father for several things he has done to her as well as to me and my sister. I've learned to put things in the past and leave them there. I love my father as much as I love my mother, but Mother doesn't understand that. She doesn't expect me to hate my father, but she doesn't like it when I talk about the trips he takes with his new wife or anything he does, so I don't mention it.

I am engaged to be married and I want both parents to give me away. My mother wants to give me away and says if I insist that my father share in that honor, she will not attend my wedding. We had a long talk about it and I cried for two days. I then decided to let my mother give me away, but she knows I'm not happy about it.

Have you any suggestions?
WORRIED SICK

DEAR WORRIED: In such situations I urge parents to give their marrying child the gift of happiness on his or her wedding day, and put their own feelings aside. Your mother is wrong to punish you in her determination to punish your father. Since you love them equally, make it both or none—and ask a favorite relative or dear friend to "give you away."

***

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Just Woke Up in California" moved me to tears. The writer, who had always given his elderly mother expensive gifts, vowed to give her a gift of himself—to spend more time with her and to tell her in so many words that he loved her while he still had time.

My 90-year-old mother lived with me until she died a year ago. For 20 years I had been her shopper, chauffeur, confidant, mainstay, etc., and I'm sure she knew from my actions that I loved her very much, but only once since I was a grown man did I say, "I love you, Mother"—and that was on her deathbed.

So, I also just woke up, and have promised myself that when I marry, I shall verbally convey such loving feelings to my wife—something I failed to do for my mother.

Thanks for listening. And thank you, Abby, for teaching good people how to be better.

IMPROVING WITH AGE

DEAR ABBY: The letters in your column from "Formerly Flat," who recommended breast augmentation, reminded me of a friend of mine. She was flat-chested until she had breast implants (at age 40). She was so thrilled with the result, she sent her surgeon an orchid plant with a card that read, "Thanks for the mammeries!"

Woman's quilt brings her artistic acclaim

VAN ALSTYNE, Texas (AP) — Fannie Shaw's claim to quilting fame dates back to 1929. That's the year the talented Van Alstyne artist designed and made a story quilt about the Great Depression — a quilt that has since gained national recognition among quilters.

"I didn't set out to make a quilt about the depression," explained Mrs. Shaw, who says her hobby is painting, not quilting. "What was in my mind was to paint a picture about those bad times. I wanted it to show all kinds of people strugglin' to pay bills and others not being able to get jobs."

"Well, I just kept studyin' about the way the picture should look, but I just couldn't see any way to get in all the people I wanted to show. Finally one night when I couldn't sleep, I kept ponderin' about that painting and it just popped into my mind that it ought to be a quilt!"

The quilt — a graphic depiction of former President Herbert Hoover's "Prosperity is just around the corner" speech — has been shown in national quilt shows from California to Michigan and has been photographed for such publications as McCall's Needlework and Crafts magazine and World of Quilts.

"Last year, I was invited to bring my quilt to the Michigan National Exhibit and Quilt Show in Rochester. At first, I wasn't sure I wanted to get so far away from home," the 91-year-old Van Alstyne resident said recently. "But my granddaughter Nancy went with me and we had a wonderful time! It was my biggest thrill, and I've gotten letters (about the quilt) from 46 states."

The granddaughter, Nancy Hawkins of Richardson, was responsible for getting the 1929 quilt into the limelight.

That was in 1977 when she saw a notice of a quilt show and contest to be held in Richardson. "I just signed her up for it," Mrs. Hawkins recalled. "I didn't tell her I was entering her name. I just knew she had made a lot of quilts and I felt sure she had one that she could send." Mrs. Hawkins explained. "I didn't know this quilt existed. I had never seen it till Grandmother got it out for me to take."

The quilt, which shows people from all walks of life looking around corners for better times, was two years in the making, Mrs. Shaw said. "Some of the blocks have more than 25 separate pieces in them and cutting out all those pieces and then putting them together took a long time."

Each block features one person — a butcher, groceryman, plumber, teacher, housewife, clerk, cowboy and others — some based on Van Alstyne residents of that time. The center block depicts a farmer plowing his field, whistling to keep up his courage.

"I pictured my husband and his team of horses in that one," she explained. The bottom corner block shows Uncle Sam coming around the corner, bringing farm relief and gold.

Mary Grunbaun, owner of the Great American Cover Up in Plano and a leading authority on folk art quilts of the South, saw the quilt at the Richardson show and contacted McCall's magazine about it. The quilt was featured in the Spring 1978 edition of McCall's Needlework and Crafts magazine.

Since that time, the quilt has been shown in Bonham where it won its creator the 1978 Outstanding Older Texan award, at North Texas State University at Denton and the Mill Valley Quilt Authority and Quilter's Journal national show in 1979 at San Francisco as well as the invitational Michigan show.

"It's the only story quilt I ever made," Mrs. Shaw said. "I learned to quilt when I was 10 years old. All the girls did. It was something we were expected to do. When I married, I had 14 quilts I had made, but those and others I've made were for family use."

Kiwanis sponsor art soiree

Expect a lot of social activities in the year ahead because you're going to broaden your range of interests and acquaintances. New friends will introduce you to new things.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) New ideas or concepts you formulate today will be sound, so it's important you do more with them than merely mull them over. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as shows you which signs you are best suited to romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be an attentive listener today when others are talking about confidential subjects that interest you. Something said can be used advantageously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Get out and circulate today where you can meet new people. There's a possibility you'll encounter someone who can introduce you to a fun group.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Unusual career opportunities will be prevalent today. If you spot some unique signals, get ready to swing into action.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A good day to look a bit ahead and make your entertainment plans for the weekend. Contact those you want to spend time with now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be on the lookout today for something you might be able to buy that will appreciate with time. The present owner doesn't recognize its value.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Today you are likely to fare better if you do things with a partner, rather than attempting them on your own. Team up with one who is assertive and positive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be extra industrious today because you can reap material and personal rewards for work well-done. Both have their merit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Lady Luck is in your corner today and she is apt to treat you favorably through friends, especially those who are members of the opposite gender.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll be quite creative today in ways that can enhance the beauty of your surroundings. A good day to rearrange the furniture or put up new drapes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A new friendship is about to blossom with someone you now know casually. Soon you'll discover how much you have in common.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Unusual financial conditions continue to exist. Be alert for beneficial strings that could contribute to your material well-being.

NIT tournament

Tennessee advances, Cardinals eliminated in overtime

BY KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
With Tennessee down by five points with 19 seconds to go, no one would have given a deflated basketball for the Volunteers' chances against Southwestern Louisiana.

Tony White was pumped up, though.
"Tony White was absolutely magnificent," Tennessee Coach

Don DeVoe enthused after watching his 6-foot-2 sophomore guard lead a thrilling comeback that gave the Volunteers a 73-72 victory Wednesday night in a second-round game of the National Invitation Tournament.

"Tony wanted the ball and he was hot," DeVoe said of White, who had a field goal and two free throws in the last 19 seconds as the Volunteers pulled off what DeVoe called "one of the best comebacks I've ever had a team make" and advanced to Saturday's quarterfinals.

Louisville and Tennessee-Chattanooga also won second-round tests Wednesday night to complete the quarterfinal field for this weekend. Louisville defeated South Florida 68-61 and Tennessee-Chattanooga tripped Lamar 85-84 in overtime.

On Saturday, it will be Virginia at Tennessee and Fresno State at UCLA. On Sunday, Marquette will play at Indiana and Tennessee-Chattanooga will play at Louisville. The semifinals and finals will be played at New York on March 27 and March 29.

The Volunteers were losing 72-67 with 19 seconds remaining when White scored to pull them within three points. Tennessee called a timeout and came back with White deliberately fouling 6-4 Cajun guard George Almones.

Almones missed his free throw, and Vol guard Fred Jenkins raced down the court to score on a 15-footer, pulling Tennessee to within 72-71 with 10 seconds to go. Tennessee got the ball back immediately when the Cajuns couldn't get it inbound, and Cajun forward Randal Smith fouled, setting up White's free throws.

"Every loss is very disappointing, but certainly in a tournament situation, it adds to it because you don't get to continue playing," Southwestern Louisiana Coach Bobby Paschal said.

Manuel Forrest scored 21 points, including three baskets as Louisville erupted for the first 14 points of the second half, to lead the Cardinals past South Florida.

Louisville led by just 34-31 when Forrest started the game-breaking run with a jumper from the baseline. Louisville held a commanding 48-31 advantage by the time Mike Abram scored the last basket of the streak with 15:10 remaining.

The victory in Louisville improved the Cardinals' record to 18-16 and guaranteed that they will have a winning season for the 41st consecutive year.

Louisville Coach Denny Crum credited the victory to a change of defensive strategy that kept the ball away from South Florida's Charlie Bradley in the second half after he had scored 11 in the first.

James Hunter scored on a baseline drive with nine seconds left in overtime to lead Tennessee-Chattanooga to a heart-stopping road victory over Lamar.

The Moccasins, who trailed by seven points with 1:19 left in regulation, forced the overtime when guard Gerald Wilkins scored at the buzzer to tie the game at 77.

Wilkins, younger brother of Atlanta Hawks' star Dominique Wilkins, played 44 minutes and led all scorers with 27 points. Center James Gulley paced Lamar with 23 points.

In NCAA East

Georgia Tech faces Illinois, Georgetown takes on Loyola

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — He's 27 years old, has warts on his feet and five years ago he couldn't speak English.

He's Yvon Joseph, otherwise known as the Haitian Sensation or the Haitian Creation.

Now a senior mechanical engineering student and the starting center for sixth-ranked Georgia Tech's basketball team, Joseph will be trying to help the Yellow Jackets beat No. 12 Illinois in tonight's NCAA East Regional semifinal.

The contest starts at 6:38 p.m. EST, and will be followed, starting at 9:10, by the other semi between defending NCAA champion Georgetown, 32-2, the nation's top-ranked team, and Loyola of Chicago, 27-5.

CBS will televise the Georgetown-Loyola game live, followed by a delayed tape of the Tech-Illinois contest.

Yellow Jackets' coach Bobby Cremins, who has brought the Tech program from the pits to the penthouse in the Atlantic Coast Conference, recalled Wednesday that he first heard about Joseph from his friend, Bill Orheim, the coach at Miami Dade Junior College.

"Bill brought him from Haiti where he had been a 6-10 volleyball player.

"As a freshman he stunk," said Cremins in a true Bronx cheer. "He obviously didn't know the game."

Cremins came out of the Bronx, N.Y., to play at South Carolina and coach at Appalachian State for six years before taking over at Tech four years ago.

After Cremins recruited him, Joseph sat out year because of a back injury.

As a junior and senior he has averaged more than 11 points and seven rebounds, which has pleased Cremins.

The coach has been able to put another 7-footer, John "Spider" Salley at forward.

Midland advances in JUCO tournament

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) — Leroy Parnell and Alan Eaton combined for 16 points each as Kankakee, Ill., dominated Ferrum, Va., for an 87-70 victory Wednesday night in the second round of the National Junior College Athletic Association men's basketball tournament.

Also posting a second-round win was Moberly, Mo., which beat Highland Park, Mich., 83-78, to move into quarterfinal play.

In first round games Wednesday, Allegany, Md., rolled over Hinds, Miss., 85-60 and Midland, Texas, upended Westark, Ark., 70-61. Kaskaskia, Ill., routed Westchester, N.Y., 105-73 in a loser's bracket game.

The Illinois team led from start to finish, holding a 41-30 advantage at the half. Both teams scored 29 field goals, but Kankakee won at the free throw line, shooting 29 of 42.

In the nightcap, Bernard Day poured in 21 points to lead the Moberly Greyhounds over Highland Park.

It was the first loss of the season for Highland Park, which dropped to 39-1 for the season. Mike Milling rounded out the scoring for Moberly, 34-4, with 18 points.

Darrin Mosley scored 21 points, including 15 in the second half, and J.P. Warner added 20 as Allegany defeated Hinds.

Allegany led by only three at halftime, 36-33, but pulled away from the Eagles in the second half. Ernie Glover snared 14 rebounds for the Trojans, who moved into a quarterfinal game with a 32-3 record.

Robert Bendolph tossed in 28 points for Hinds, 25-7.

Pevin Binns scored 15 points to lead five Midland players.

Sooners favored over La. Tech

DALLAS (AP) — Underdog Louisiana Tech figures it owes the Oklahoma Sooners something in tonight's NCAA Basketball Midwest Regional semi-final game at Reunion Arena.

"It was pretty humiliating the way they beat us (84-72) earlier in the year," said Louisiana Tech Coach Andy Russo. "(All-America) Wayman Tisdale had a bad game and they still beat us by 12. There's a lot of talent in those other kids on his team."

He said the Bulldogs hoped they'd get a second shot at the Sooners.

"After that loss, all our people were saying maybe we'd get a chance to play them again," Russo said. "Here it is a reality and we're looking very much forward to it."

Oklahoma, fourth ranked in the final Associated Press Poll, and the No. 8 rated Bulldogs play at 5:35 p.m.

Fifth-rated Memphis State and Cinderella Boston College clash at 8:08 p.m. in the second game at Reunion Arena.

The winners play at 1 p.m. on Saturday. The Midwest regional champion takes on the Southwest Regional winner in The Final Four in Lexington, Ky.

Boston College (20-10) advanced by beating Texas Tech and Duke. Memphis State (29-3) took out Pennsylvania and Alabama-Birmingham. Oklahoma (30-5) bounced North Carolina A&T and Illinois State, and Louisiana Tech (29-2) knocked off Pittsburgh and Ohio State in the sub-regionals.

"I think the Midwest region is the toughest region in the nation," said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs. "I know we're the only region with three teams from the AP Top Ten. And us and Louisiana Tech are the only two teams that have to face another Top Ten team."

Whiz kids of tennis get top points

LA QUINTA, Calif. (NEA) — Can you imagine an unseeded player, ranked 44th in the world last year, winning the men's division of the world's richest ($1.8 million) tennis tournament?

Or how about this? A wild-card entry, barely in on a last minute pass, enriches himself by $51,000 — more than he earned the entire previous year — for finishing first in a tournament here in the desert near Palm Springs.

Is world-class tennis in the throes of a palace revolt?

Never has there been such a rush of young talent to cash in on the bonanza offered by the sport — the Grand Prix circuit alone, which embraces play in 25 countries, now offers $23 million in prize money.

And that doesn't include WCT and Grand Slam events.

Tim Mayotte won the rich Delray Beach, Fla., competition by defeating 22-year-old Scott Davis, ranked 48th in the world last year. Mayotte's victory was worth $112,500, more than he made all of 1984.

It was his first Grand Prix triumph ever.

In that same tournament, Ivan Lendl, ranked second in the world, lost in straight sets to a 19-year-old Swede, Stefan Edberg.

None of the top eight seeds got past the quarter-final round.

At the La Quinta tournament, Larry Stefanki triumphed. Ranked 143rd in the world, he had never been in the top 100 during five years as a pro. He conquered a field that included the great Jimmy Connors (No. 3) and two others in the top 10 — Henrik Sundstrom and Aaron Krickstein.

The runner-up to Stefanki, David Pate, collected the biggest payday of his career, $25,500. But it isn't the money that's startling.

Connors was upset by a double-fisted banger named Greg Holmes, who has never won a pro tournament. Holmes was playing Junior Davis Cup tennis just two years ago.

No wonder strong and supple kids are coming out of the woodwork to challenge the reigning elite.

Krickstein, a 17-year-old from Grosse Pointe, Mich., who is still pursuing high school studies, made almost $200,000 last year.

The new wave of Swedes, led by 20-year-old Mats Wilander (No. 4 in the world), has been well documented. The other Swedes currently in the top 10 are Sundstrom, Anders Jarryd and Edberg, with Joakim Nyström just a step behind. They are all products of a cohesive club system in their native land which nurtures talented youngsters.

Be aware also of a French wave that still has Yannick Noah at the head — joined by such tall, impressive sluggers as Henri LeConte and Guy Forget.

LeConte is slam-banging left-hander who sent Bjorn Borg into retirement and then beat him in an abortive comeback attempt.

The French group comes out of a national federation that ferrets out prospects in the provinces. For instance: Thierry Tulasne, who left home at the age of 13 to attend a special Paris tennis school that prepared him for a pro career.

The Czechs have also mobilized their best tennis players, male and female, in a national program.

There's nothing like it in America. But still the United States isn't lagging with the emergence of such players as Krickstein, Jimmy Arias, Pate, Holmes and Davis.

Tommy Tucker, a U.S. teaching pro, doesn't favor the nationalizing influence. He says, "I like it that we don't. If I see the genius in a kid, I'll subsidize him myself. The American free-enterprise system still works."

Tucker worked with Stefanki, who can't be considered part of the "nouvelle vague" because he is 27, almost middle-aged by tennis standards.

Tucker considers Larry's recent victory over an elite field one of the astounding upsets in big-time tennis history.

Stefanki, who is a touring pro based at La Quinta, only got into the tournament because a couple of the Swedes, Wilander and Edberg, spurned invitations. Once in, his consummate serve-and-volley game was buttressed by suddenly stable ground strokes that enabled him to sweep through the field.

The home-court advantage, which meant a friendly crowd (including his father-in-law, former quarterback John Brodie), didn't hurt either.

The result was one of those heart-warming little tableaux of sports, the longshot unknown prevailing against all odds.

It should be remembered, however, that all of these upsets were accomplished in the absence of one John McEnroe, who chooses to abstain from playing outdoors this time of year.

When he shows up, any notion of a palace revolt may quickly dissolve.

Only three National League clubs have won back-to-back World Series. The 1907-08 Chicago Cubs, the 1923-22 New York Giants and the 1975-76 Cincinnati Reds are the teams that did it.

WNIT tournament tips off today

The 17th Women's National Invitational Basketball Tournament tips off today at the Amarillo Civic Center Coliseum.

First-round match-ups pit Florida and Montana at 2 p.m., LSU and West Virginia at 4 p.m., West Texas State and Drake at 7 p.m., and Texas Tech and Cal State-Fullerton at 9 p.m.

Tickets are available at the WTSU ticket office, Civic Center box office and the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce office.

Texas Tech, with a 22-1 record, is the top-seeded team in the tournament. The Lady Raiders are led by 6-2 junior Tricia Clay, who averages 16.2 points per game and 9.0 rebounds. Sharon Cain, a 5-7 junior, carries a 12.1 ppg average.

Texas Tech finished second in the Southwest Conference behind No. 1-ranked Texas.

West Texas State, seeded No. 6, has a 25-4 record. Mabelle Whitehead, a 6-2 junior, leads the team in scoring at 16.3 ppg.

The Lady Buffs won the Oil Country Athletic Conference championship with a 10-1 record.

Florida is the No. 2 seed with a 20-8 record. Tammy Jackson, a 6-3 senior, leads the Lady Gators in scoring with a 14.7 average.

The tournament lasts through Saturday.

Martina wins, Lloyd loses in first round of Virginia Slims

NEW YORK (AP) — With her new eyeglasses, Martina Navratilova says she can see just fine now. But she refuses to look past her quarterfinal match in the $500,000 Virginia Slims Tennis Championships.

That's when the defending champion and No. 1 seed faces her doubles partner Pam Shriver.

Navratilova successfully negotiated the first round of this 16-player, season-ending event Wednesday night with an easy 6-1, 6-1 demolishing of Lisa Bonder. Shriver had a much more difficult time before eliminating sixth-seeded Bulgarian Manuela Maleeva 6-4, 0-6, 6-4. No. 7 Zina Garrison escaped the string of upsets that have knocked out four seeded players by stopping West German Sylvia Hanika 6-3, 4-6, 6-2.

Chris Evert Lloyd, seeded second to Navratilova in the chase for the $125,000 winner's share, fell in the first round, as did No. 4 Wendy Turnbull of Australia and No. 8 Carling Bassett of Canada.

"I didn't even watch the whole game because I thought she was going to win," Navratilova said of Lloyd's 6-2, 1-6, 6-2 loss Tuesday night to Kathy Jordan. "I was really surprised and I didn't find out about it until this morning when I read about it in the paper."

With so many seeds already fallen, Navratilova is considered almost a cinch to reach the best-of-five-sets title match, unique in women's tennis. She, though, wasn't a no-brainer jump to such a conclusion.

"First I have to get up there," she said, in response to a question. "I'm not looking ahead."

Asked about playing her doubles partner, with whom she teamed Wednesday night to down Kathleen Horvath and Romania's Virginia Ruzici 6-3, 6-1 in a first-round match, Navratilova said:

"Her arm has gotten a lot stronger. She has an ice pack on her shoulder, elbow and groin, but she's feeling good and hitting the ball well. She seems excited about playing."

"Last year, she just didn't want to be out there. Now she does, and it makes a world of difference."

Shriver, a mass of sore muscles and injuries, took 2½ months off following the Australian Open, returning to tennis only two weeks ago.

"My arm was tired. I was tired," Shriver said. "I wasn't enjoying it."

"During the break I was able to do a lot of different things. It was a neat time and I was a little worried I would not be that eager to come back."

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — "It's kind of like we're starting all over again," says Steve Lukather, guitarist with the Grammy Award-winning rock band Toto, which is embarking on its first U.S. tour in three years.

The Los Angeles-based group, which won six Grammys in 1983 for its multi-million-record-selling "Toto IV" album, opened a 50-city tour Tuesday at Arizona State University.

The group had been away from the American stage since October 1982.

LONDON (AP) — Boy George, who became a star as a singer by appearing in outrageous dresses and tresses, says he'll never marry, become a father or settle down because he's too "eccentric."

"All those reports about me wanting to get married and have children are rubbish," the singer told Woman's World magazine. "It just isn't me to get married. I'm not saying marriage is wrong... but I'd find it too restricting."

The 23-year-old British rocker, who heads the group Culture Club, said his days of non-stop partying and heavy drinking are over. "Being successful has made me a more responsible person," he said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An appeals court says "there's no way" the country music group Alabama breached its contract when it left its manager in 1981, and reversed a 2-year-old lower court ruling.

The state Court of Appeals on Wednesday reversed a $1.8 million judgment against the group, voted entertainer of the year the past three years by the Country Music Association.

The trial court ruled in April 1983 that the band, famous for hits like "Mountain Music," "Roll On" and "There's No Way," breached its exclusive contract with Intuitive Contract with Dale Morris and Associates Inc. in June 1981.

ELBE REUNION—As bartender Danny Coleman reads an old newspaper from World War II, four of the first American soldiers to link up with Soviet troops at the Elbe River, dooming Nazi Germany to final defeat, were reunited at a bar in Washington Wednesday to recall the day they made history nearly 40 years ago. From left are: Paul Staub of Levittown, N.Y.; James McDonnell of Peabody, Mass.; William Robertson of Culver City, Calif.; and Frank Huff of Flint Hill, Va. (AP Laserphoto)

First Yanks to meet Soviet troops are Elbe reunited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The four men rushed toward each other's arms at the oaken bar, grabbed huge glasses of draft lager or soda water, and began reliving that day — April 25, 1945 — when they met the Russians on the sunlit banks of the Elbe at Tornau, a village about 75 miles south of Berlin.

The first American soldiers to link up with Soviet troops at the Elbe River, dooming Nazi Germany to final defeat, met for the first time in nearly 40 years on Wednesday — to laugh, compare waistlines and recall the day they made history with a bedsheet flag.

A British television crew brought the quartet of wartime buddies together at the Dubliner, an Irish pub at the foot of Capitol Hill, to film their reminiscences for a documentary on the end of World War II in Europe.

There was no script, and none was needed.

The guy in heavy horn-rim glasses was William D. Robertson, 61, a retired neurosurgeon from Culver City, Calif. Back then, he was a young Army second lieutenant leading a reconnaissance patrol 20 miles ahead of the 273rd Regiment of the 69th Infantry Division.

His companions were Cpl. James J. McDonnell, now 62 and the deputy fire chief of Peabody, Mass.; Pfc. Frank Huff, now a retired mechanic, aged 63, who lives in rural Flint Hill, Va., and Pfc. Paul Staub, who at 59 is a clothing store manager from Levittown, N.Y.

"We're all more handsome, we're all more mature, and we're all smarter not to do it again," Robertson said. McDonnell slung an arm around Robertson's shoulder and said, "You're still my lieutenant." Staub, squinting at a fading wartime photo of the group, told McDonnell: "You were the only one who looked like a soldier. The rest of us looked like a bunch of deadbeats."

As the comrades in arms entered Tornau that spring day in 1945, they came under intense Russian sniper fire from across the river.

"Once they recognized us, we were all buddies," McDonnell said. "We couldn't speak Russian, and they couldn't speak English, but the hugs and the handshakes said it all."

Two charged in woman's kidnapping

HOUSTON (AP) — Two men have been charged in the kidnapping of a woman who was abducted from her apartment, locked in a closet for 12 days and repeatedly sexually assaulted, authorities said.

Clarence D. Odom, 40, and Michael A. Harland, 25, were charged Wednesday with aggravated kidnapping and aggravated sexual assault, the Harris County district attorney's office said.

Bond was set at $2 million for Odom and at $100,000 for Harland.

Police Lt. Chuck Lofland said authorities also were searching for a woman in connection with the abduction.

Investigators said three people barged into the 22-year-old victim's apartment in southwest Houston on Feb. 22 as she was getting ready for work.

The victim, a secretary whose name was withheld, was bound with tape, handcuffed and taken to a "shed-like structure" in the Kemah area, officers said. Two days later she was moved to a nearby mobile home.

She was sexually assaulted "three or four times" during her captivity and was "shoved around and slapped," Lofland said. She was locked in a closet, except when she was allowed to eat and bathe, Lofland said.

The woman was not gagged but she never screamed because she "had no idea whether she was under guard or alone. She was scared," Lofland said. "There was no demand for money or anything."

She was released March 5 outside a convenience store in Porter, about 25 miles north of Houston, police said.
