Senate says revise extracurricular rule

AUSTIN (AP) — A State Board of Education committee says it will wait to hear from the House before it acts on a Senate resolution demanding that the no-pass, no-play eligibility rule be revised.

The full 15-member state board will review the action of its Student Committee on Saturday.

The five-member committee agreed on a reply to a Senate resolution passed 24-5 Thursday, but was sharply divided on whether to revise the controversial rule.

"Some injustices are being done," Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said of the board's ruling that bars students with a failing grade in one course from taking part in athletics or other extracurricular activities for at least six weeks.

Upset parents, coaches and school administrators protested at a Senate committee hearing Wednesday that school teams were being broken up, students were dropping out of school and at least one boy considered suicide because of the rule.

"This rule has caused a great deal of confusion and heartbreak in Texas schools," Katherine Raines of Cleburne said Thursday. She favors week-by-week checking of students' grades to determine if they are eligible for athletics and other extracurricular activities.

"Parents did not take us seriously when we passed a no-pass, no-play rule," said Houston attorney Volly Bastine. "Now it's hit the fan... Somebody has to be the sacrificial lamb. If a student can't play baseball, he can always study."

Committee chairman Jack Strong of Longview was authorized to write a letter to Parker, author of the Senate resolution which directed the state board to revise the rule.

"The letter will express our deep concern of the Legislature's interest and let the Senate know when we get strong directions from both houses we will give it immediate consideration," Strong said.

He said he made his suggestion for the letter after talking with Jon Brumley of Fort Worth, chairman of the state board.

Strong said he also talked with House Speaker Gib Lewis after the Senate resolution was passed 24-5 Thursday.

"The speaker said the issue (no-pass, no-play rule) was hotly contested in the House and he did not know the outcome," Strong said. "I think without any House action we would be remiss to take any action now."

He said Brumley has talked with Parker and assured the senator that if any emergency was indicated in the future, Brumley could call an emergency session of the state board.

Committee member Charles Duncan of Houston said he was a strong proponent of the six-weeks rule.

"This is a time to be more concerned about students failing than playing," Duncan said. "I think we need to stick to our guns."

Strong had tried earlier to get the six-week suspension changed to a week's suspension but failed when it first came before the board.

But on Wednesday, Strong told the Senate Nominations Committee that since the board had agreed to the no-pass, no-play rule on first reading in December, it should not be changed for a while to see its effects.

The rule would become permanent if it is approved a third and final time by the state board Saturday.

Gov. Mark White, who appoints members of the state board, told a news conference that he did not favor weakening the school reform bill passed by the summer special session, except maybe to shorten the grade period involved in the rule.

"Some have suggested as little as a week," White said. "That may be too short. That doesn't give the incentive that I think we need. Three weeks might be better than one."

Unemployment edges down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment nationwide edged down to 7.3 percent in February as continuing economic strength created nearly 300,000 new jobs, the government said today.

The number of unemployed Americans, however, remained about the same, with 8.4 million people listed as out of work, down just 85,000 from January.

Moreover, the jobless rate for black workers rose by 1.4 percentage points to 16.3 percent, largely as a result of increased joblessness among adult black men. The rate for whites, meanwhile, was off, from 6.4 percent to 6.2 percent.

The number of Americans holding jobs rose to a record 106.7 million, the Labor Department reported. The bulk of the employment gain came in industries providing services rather than in those manufacturing products.

Indeed, testifying before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Janet L. Norwood, the commissioner of labor statistics, said, "Large over-the-month gains in the service-producing sector (255,000) were partly offset by declines in the goods-producing sector, particularly in manufacturing." Goods-producing jobs fell 137,000. Meanwhile, the length of the average workweek for production workers fell 36 minutes to 40.0 hours on a seasonally adjusted basis.

Overall, the unemployment rate was off 0.1 percentage point from January's 7.4 percent, continuing the up-and-down oscillations that have characterized unemployment since mid-1984.

Civilian joblessness has been moving in a narrow range of 7.1 percent to 7.5 percent since last May. Analysts predict it will drop to 7 percent or even lower this summer, but then edge upward later in the year.

The rate, which reached a post-Depression peak of 10.7 percent in November 1982, dropped to 7.2 percent last June, then headed up again before falling to 7.1 percent in November, the lowest rate since the 1981-82 recession.

Among specific groups, the report showed these unemployment rates for February:

—Adult men, 6.3 percent, unchanged.

—Adult women, 6.7 percent, down from 6.8 percent

Texas jobless rate jumps

DALLAS (AP) — Unemployment in Texas jumped to 6.9 percent in February as many aspects of the state's economy continued to lag behind the national employment picture, a federal official said today.

Bryan Richey, regional commissioner for the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the state's job growth "is not keeping up with the increase in the labor force."

The state's jobless rate was 6.5 percent in January and 6 percent in December. Nationally, unemployment dropped from 7.4 percent in January to 7.3 percent in February, the bureau reported today.

Richey said that workers may be expecting too much too soon from the recovery.

"The job expectations of the worker are out of line with reality, particularly in Texas," he said.

Austin, San Antonio and the Bryan-College Station area remained strong in the job market during February, but other areas such as Houston and the Lower Rio Grande Valley continued to have a depressed job market, Richey said.

Cheerleader policy at Lefors changed

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

LEFORS - Trustees of the Lefors Independent School District adopted a new cheerleader policy during their regular meeting last night.

Supt. Jimmy Collins said the policy "is quite a change from anything we've had in the past."

He said the change would help to alleviate some problems that have occurred in the past with cheerleaders not performing their duties.

Cheerleader sponsor Lynna Crockett noted there had been problems with cheerleaders missing practices, lacking enthusiasm at basketball games and quitting during the year.

A major change was made in the election process. The number of cheerleaders will be dropped from seven to five, with the five consisting of four cheerleaders and one mascot.

The student body will elect these five members from the candidates, who will be chosen at large with no class distinction.

Board member Arnold Story questioned the at-large election, a change from class elections in the past. Supt. Collins noted some members in a class had been elected in the past without any opposition, becoming elected "just by coming out."

He said the new election process would give more competition in cheerleading elections.

In other changes, candidates for the squad must have two teacher recommendations and parental permission. The head cheerleader will be appointed by the sponsor.

Squad members must maintain grade eligibility with a passing grade of 70 in all classes as mandated by state law. They also can be suspended for involvement in a major disciplinary infraction, lateness and truancy, smoking, drinking, use of drugs or other inappropriate actions.

Any cheerleader who has not successfully completed a year of cheerleading may not run for re-election. Crockett said this would affect those who quit during the year and then decide later to run again for the squad.

Other requirements for cheerleaders include making all practices and games, notifying in advance if they must be absent, attending cheerleading camp and maintaining good behavior and citizenship.

"If this is what the sponsor needs, I think we ought to let her have it," Story said before the board adopted the policy.

In other matters, the principals reported on student grades at the end of the fourth sixth weeks period.

Elementary principal Jess Baker said that under new passing grade requirements, three eighth grade students and eight seventh grade students would be ineligible for participation in extracurricular activities because of failing one or more classes.

Under the old rule allowing two failing grades, only one of the eighth grade students and two of the seventh graders would have been ineligible, Baker said.

Referring to all the class grades overall in the two classes, Baker said only 5 1/2 percent of the grades were failing. He said that was good, except for those affected under the new rule.

High school principal Gene Gee said 20 of the 70 students enrolled in high school had one or more failing grades. Under the old rule, only seven would have been ineligible. Many of these had passing and even good grades in their other courses and failed a course by only two or three points, he said.

For grades overall, there were 41 percent A's, 26 percent B's and 20 percent C's. Only six percent of the grades were F's, he said.

The number of A's "far outweigh" the F's in the major subjects, he said. Nearly half of the students are maintaining overall

Mobeetie studies classroom needs

BY CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MOBEETIE — School officials here would like to be able build additional classrooms, if they could only find the money.

Mobeetie ISD trustees discussed construction funding Thursday at their regular board meeting, hoping to build a additional classrooms at the north or southeast parts of the school building.

Builder C.W. Burch attended the meeting and gave estimates on how much such construction would cost. Trustees also looked at information drafted by builder Jeff Reid, who built two teacher homes this year. More information was submitted by a Weatherford, Okla. builder.

Superintendent Bob Mickey said the school has to build additional classrooms to house new art, music and foreign language. New curriculum mandates passed by the state require the school to offer these courses.

"But it is still pretty indefinite," he said, explaining that whether or not the school even offers these courses would depend on the availability of qualified teachers.

"We would have a problem finding someone," Mickey said. "We're thinking of some kind of a co-op teacher program with Briscoe or other schools."

"We'd like to add four rooms on the north side of the building or the southeast side," he said, adding that the school should also split some of the classes at the elementary level.

Mickey said that although they'd like to get the classroom additions ready for the 1985-86 school year, the district's questionable financial situation is blocking any progress. Thanks to the state funding formula which went into effect early this year, the school district does not yet know how much money it will get from the state.

"It will also be a couple of months before we know about our mineral valuations," he added.

Mickey said he hopes to get the state figures and mineral valuation soon, "because if we're going to have something finished by next year, we really have to get on it."

Also uncertain is what days Mobeetie school students will be off next year. Trustees tabled action on approval of the 1985-86 school calendar. Because the board does not yet have final dates on stock shows next spring, the trustees are not sure when or if they should set a spring break.

Trustees also adopted all the textbooks that were recommended by the Mobeetie ISD textbook committee. The books adopted for 1985-86 were for the subjects of math, science, computers, data processing and business. The board also adopted a set of bilingual textbooks, but, because of a lack of bilingual students at Mobeetie, the school will not buy any of the books. Mickey said that if the school ever needed to get any, it is easier to get the books if the district has adopted them.

Contracts for all the teachers were renewed for next year. Contracts for Larry Bacon and Paula Bacon were not up for consideration.

 "Our students are doing a fairly decent job. I'm quite pleased with the majority of our students," Gee said.

In other business, the board set Thursday, March 28, at 7:30 p.m. as a special board meeting date for the opening of bids concerning the demolition of the old elementary school building.

The trustees also adopted the school calendar for the 1985-1986 school year. Classes will begin Sept. 3 and end May 29. Collins said state law now prohibits classes beginning before Sept. 1. Teachers and staff, however, will begin inservice and work days on Aug. 26 in preparation for the new school year.

Classes will be dismissed for spring break March 24 through March 28. Collins said if any days dismissed because of bad weather need to be made up, they will be taken out of the spring break.

The board also accepted the Textbook Committee's report. Baker said textbooks had been approved for seven courses: science for grades 1-6, mathematics for grades 1-8, computer, data processing and three biology courses.

Following an executive session to discuss personnel matters, the board voted to employ teachers at the same salary as for the current school year. That included paying $2,300 above the state minimum required salary levels for those with bachelor's degree and $2,500 for master's degrees. The salary for the coaches and shop teachers will remain the same as for the 1984-1985 school year.

The board approved a $500 salary increase for Lynna Crockett as cheerleader sponsor.

In other action, the board voted on candidates for the board of directors of the Region XVI Education Service Center: Joe H. Gidden, Canyon, Place 1; Raymond White, Hereford, Place 2; and Aubrey L. Steele, Pampa, Place 7.

The trustees also approved bills for payment.

University officials declined to discuss the specific charges against the nine students, citing laws that govern release of information about students and their records.

Gassman was disciplined for allegedly violating a rule that prohibits exercises on weekends.

Reagan says arms buildup depends on Soviet actions

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, ready to dispatch American arms negotiators to Geneva, vows the United States will continue building up its military muscle unless the Soviet Union agrees to scale down nuclear arsenals.

While declaring he seeks the reduction and eventual elimination of nuclear arms, Reagan said, "At the same time, we are not going to allow ourselves to drift into inferiority. If we can't get reductions, we will have to continue our modernization of our defense forces."

In a sendoff for his negotiators, Reagan arranged a meeting in the State Dining Room today with his bargaining team, congressional observers of the Geneva talks, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane.

Texaco closes Amarillo, Illinois refineries

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — An effort to "remain competitive" in a changing market has forced the shutdown of one of Texaco's smallest refineries, leaving 150 people jobless here by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, Gov. Mark White says an effort should be made to help the workers find new jobs.

Texaco U.S.A. officials announced Thursday that the closure will take effect by the end of the year.

No time line has been set for the shutdown, but plant operations will stop by the end of 1985, said Paul Weeditz, spokesman for the Mid-Continent Region of Texaco.

The closure is an effort, by the oil company to "remain competitive in the marketplace," Weeditz said.

White said he's concerned about the loss of jobs. "We must address the needs of these workers and their families and help them find other jobs as rapidly as possible," White said.

But Weeditz said the prospect of transferring employees to other Texaco facilities is remote because of the scarcity of jobs.

In addition to closing the Amarillo facility, Texaco also is shutting down its Lawrenceville, Ill., plant, Weeditz said. He said the changing market has forced the company to review its domestic operations and make them more efficient.

The continuing drop in demand for petroleum products and the abundant supply of distillates in the United States are major reasons the company decided to close out some operations, Weeditz said.

"This plant, as well as the industry and the company as a whole, is experiencing very difficult economic times and demand levels are substantially below peak levels of just a few years ago," he said.

Texaco regards information on refinery operation levels as "proprietary" so no figures are available for the Amarillo facility, Weeditz said.

The Amarillo refinery, built in 1918 and purchased by Texaco 10 years later, has a rated capacity of 20,000 barrels of crude oil per day, making the plant one of the firm's smallest.

Of the three Texaco refineries in Texas, only the El Paso operation, with a capacity of 17,000 barrels a day, is smaller. Weeditz said he doesn't know of plans to close the El Paso facility.

The third Texas plant, at Port Arthur, has a capacity of 200,000 barrels a day. Its capacity was cut in 1984 from 402,000 barrels a day and the work force cut from 3,000 to 1,250.

The Lawrenceville plant has a capacity of 65,000 barrels a day and employs 375 workers, Weeditz said.

White said he has asked the Texas Economic Development Commission, the Texas Department of Community Affairs and the Texas Employment Commission to help the affected employees.

"The oil and gas industry has been a mainstay of our state's economy for decades, but evidence continues to mount that underscores the need to diversify our economic base and create new jobs for Texas' rapidly expanding population," White said.

Company officials informed employees at both the Amarillo and Lawrenceville plants Thursday of the decision to cease operations, according to Weeditz.

Texaco will provide a separation program for non-union employees and union leaders will meet with company officials to work out a separation agreement for union members, Weeditz said. About 110 of the 150 Texaco employees in Amarillo are union members, Weeditz said.

Former student says Texas A&M officials snubbed her

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Texas A&M University student says she was "forced to become a focal point" on campus after filing a sex discrimination suit against the school.

Melanie Zentgraf, 26, testified in U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling's court she was snubbed by school officials after she sued to gain entry in all-male campus programs.

Ms. Zentgraf, who is now a captain in the U.S. Air Force, said then-university President Jarvis Miller "publicly humiliated" her during her 1980 graduation ceremony by refusing to shake her hand.

"There was booing and the Aggie tradition of hissing. I did not get a handshake," Ms. Zentgraf said Wednesday.

Ms. Zentgraf, who filed a class-action lawsuit against A&M during her junior year, is seeking $75,000 damages from Miller; John Koldus, the school's vice president for student services; and Robert Kamensky, a cadet colonel and commander of the Corps of Cadets in 1979; for public humiliation and sex discrimination.

After she filed the suit, Ms. Zentgraf testified, she received demerits for wearing the same style boots that male members wore and was denounced in the student newspaper.

She said she also was reprimanded for trying to recruit women to participate in the traditional bonfire before the A&M-University of Texas football game.

"I was basically forced to become a focal point," she said. "I had to step forward and do something."

In January, U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling issued a consent decree banning the exclusion of women from all-male groups such as the Texas Aggie Band and the Ross Volunteers.

Prison escapee knew it was only a matter of time

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — For nearly a year, Ronald Stephen Bridgeforth — alias Steve Grant — moved across the country, worked at health clubs, made friends and even fell in love.

But last month, everything changed — all because of an unpaid traffic ticket.

Now he's in jail in this Fort Worth suburban city fighting extradition to an Oregon prison from which he escaped a year ago. Bridgeforth says his life will now stand still while the rest of the world moves like a "merry-go-round."

In a telephone interview from the Tarrant County Jail where he waits while he fights extradition to Oregon, Bridgeforth told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram he is pragmatic about the end of the ride.

"I got caught. Now I know I'll have to face the music," Bridgeforth said. "But I was able to prove one thing to myself and the powers that be. I was able to maintain a job and not commit any crimes for an entire year. That will probably be my only defense in this matter."

"Prisons are just warehouses," said Bridgeforth, 36. "They don't give you the tools you need or the information you need to jump back on this merry-go-round."

"Have you ever tried to get on a merry-go-round when it's moving and you're standing still?"

Bridgeforth, who was known as Steve Grant during his four months in Arlington, managed the Courtside Fitness Center and fell in love with an employee of another Arlington health club.

In Arlington, he said, he was happier than he had been in 15 years.

But on Feb. 27, local authorities arrested Bridgeforth at his apartment complex after Oregon officials tracked him to Texas. His name turned up on an unpaid ticket for driving without a license.

Bridgeforth has spent seven of his last 10 years in prison on convictions for aggravated robbery and, later, for carrying a firearm — illegal for a convicted felon.

He told no one of his true identity, including the woman who planned to marry him.

"Granted, I knew it was going to end," he said. "I was aware of the fact that I couldn't stay a fugitive. That was why I couldn't marry her."

"She didn't understand. But to make her understand I would have had to tell her about my past. I couldn't. That was my way of protecting her," he said. "She would have been harboring a fugitive and that would have put her in great jeopardy. You don't do that to people you care about."

A good candidate, but.....

I have a friend running for Congress down in East Texas and I have mixed emotions about it.

His name is Edd Hargett and he'll probably win a special election in the First District, even though he's running as a Republican in an area that has almost invariably voted solidly Democratic except last year.

Edd grew up in my hometown, Linden. He was an all-around athlete and went off to Texas A&M to play quarterback for the Aggies. He started for three years, and after Gene Stallings was finally dragged into the 20th century and conceded it might be okay to throw the football a little bit if you have a quarterback who can throw it well, Edd led the Aggies to the Southwest Conference championship and a victory over Alabama in the Cotton Bowl.

He played a few years in the pros, but kept his roots in Linden, leaving his family there while on the road and returning during the off-season and involving himself in the community.

After an unspectacular pro career of several years, he spurned what were most likely attractive business opportunities in the big cities and returned to his hometown, bought a farm and went to work as an electrical engineer at a rural electric cooperative.

Edd will be an exceptional political candidate. In addition to the glamor of his athletic background and very probably the all-out support of every avid Aggie in East Texas, he is handsome and articulate. He had three older brothers who were also outstanding athletes and they were never impressed by his accomplishments. Usually, they asked him why he didn't do better. So his modesty is not faked; it is real. It is difficult to get a swelled head when you have three older brothers telling you that you're not so hot.

His parents were salt-of-the-earth farmers who instilled in most of their sons a dedication to hard work and devotion to the church.

Edd is a devoted Christian. He doesn't flaunt his religion, but isn't hesitant to give Christian testimony to church groups and organizations such as the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

His intelligence is beyond question. He was an honor student throughout his high school and college years.

In short, Edd Hargett is about as good a political candidate as you could find anywhere.

But after I learned he was entering politics, I keep remembering one incident involving Edd.

I was publishing a weekly newspaper in Linden and Edd had been appointed chairman of a committee trying to get a school bond election passed. During one of the meetings when it was announced that there was considerable opposition to the bond issue, he made a remark which, in effect, implied that no one had a right to oppose the bond issue "because we're doing it for their kids."

Ever since Edd entered the congressional race, I have reflected that here is a person I consider one of the best candidates either of the established political parties could possibly offer; yet even he believes the state has the right to decide for parents what is best for their kids, then make the parents pay for it.

And that's why I don't vote any more.

General Dynamics employees in crossfire

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — General Dynamics Corp. employees here say they are outraged that their employer may have charged the government millions of dollars for travel and entertainment.

"I'm a little bit upset because I work for this company and it makes me look like a crook," said Keith Gilbert, an assembly line worker "I didn't have anything to do with it."

"The whole attitude of people is that they're sick of GD because of all the shenanigans that are going on," he said.

The Pentagon announced Tuesday that it would halt about $40 million per month in overhead payments to St. Louis based-General Dynamics until auditors can determine whether the company's pending bills are legitimate.

Audits released by the Pentagon question $2.1 million in public relations bills that GD's Fort Worth division wanted the military to pay in 1982. They include $149,231 for a 40th anniversary party, $15,705 for golf caps and shirts and $128,898 for entertainment.

General Dynamics is Tarrant County's largest employer with 17,000 workers and manufactures the F-16 fighter aircraft for the U.S. Air Force. The only other company plant in Texas is a machine shop in Abilene employing about 500 people, a company spokesman said.

Many workers at the Fort Worth plant said they first feared losing their jobs after hearing the accusations. But when that concern appeared unfounded, they said they began to question how the company had gotten into the controversy.

"All the people I know (at General Dynamics) work for a living. They have a house payment, a car payment. We're not getting rich," said Pat Porter, an inspector at the Fort Worth plant.

"Then we hear about these people spending half a million dollars for a party. It blows our minds," she told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The company has said it can satisfy defense department concerns about the validity of its bills.

"About 99 percent of the people I talked to were scared to death they were going to be sent home" and out of a job, Ms. Porter said. Later they realized the problem was with expenses, not the accountants, said he couldn't afford another layoff so soon after the November IAM strike.

"That strike was three weeks long, and I still haven't recovered from it financially," Lee said.

Several employees said they thought General Dynamics was becoming a scapegoat in a government warning to all defense contractors.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Zoning restricts American Dream

Burger King and McDonald's may be changing their images to attract upscale customers and ferns may be thriving in their windows, but would you want one on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills? Worth Avenue in Palm Beach? Fifth Avenue in New York City?

Goodness, Dahling, don't those upstarts know their place?

Apparently not on Fifth Avenue where McDonald's has located across from the empire State Building, Godfather's Pizza has staked out territory across from the public library, and — heavens! — a Roy Rogers has moved in just three blocks from Saks.

Whatever will the good folks who shop at Saks, Gucci, Cartier, Bergdorf-Goodman and Tiffany think? Well, the Fifth Avenue Association, comprised of representatives of these tony stores and others, is worried. Surely the infiltration of fast food marks the end of civilization on the avenue, they say.

Well, the association isn't one to sit back and let the infidels in without a fight. It has petitioned the Department of City Planning to ban all street-level food sales on Fifth Avenue between 32nd and 59th streets. City Hall is listening. "It's a sensitive issue," says the planning director.

Thank goodness for the power of government, Dahling. Money can't buy class, you know, and if you let people move in just because they can afford the lease and the landlord is willing, well, who knows that you'll end up with.

Indeed, there was a time when Fifth Avenue was nothing but an expensive residential address, home to the Vanderbilts and the like. The howls of protest were loud in 1906 when the first store opened, but to no avail. Other upstarts marched in and soon scores of homes were torn down to make way for stores or were converted in the stores.

Lo and behold, the merchants became the new Fifth Avenue gentry and in the ensuing years they have fought off intrusions by bootblacks, banks, airline ticket offices, etc. Now there's — ugh — fast food.

Will they be dispatched to less prestigious locations, leaving Fifth Avenue a haven for civilization as defined by the association and city officials? Or will the mink-coated minions learn to settle for a burger between Bergdorf's and Saks?

The American Dream has been one of individual freedom and liberty, where even a Burger King can grow up one day to live next to Bergdorf's. Has that dream been zoned out of existence?

Liberals fight wrong war

The war - the big one - ended just forty years ago. How splendid: one more incentive for television to churn out movies about the Nazis.

A month and a half into February 1985, CBS and NBC ventured out on the first two such historical expeditions - respectively, "Kojak: The Belarus File" and "Hitler's SS: Portrait in Evil."

There will be many more such before the year is ended; also books, articles, etc., etc., about the evils of the Third Reich.

Let me predict what there will NOT be in 1985: movies, books, articles, etc., etc., about the evils of the Soviet Union, either during World War II or since.

For example: There will be no movie about the Warsaw uprising, relating how the Soviet induced Polish freedom-fighters to rise against the Nazis; whereupon the Soviet army halted in its tracks until said Nazis had obligingly annihilated said freedom-fighters; whereupon the Soviets ran the Nazis out and annihilated free Poland.

There will be no movie depicting the Katyn Forest massacre, wherein the Soviets murdered 4,000 captured Polish officers, subsequently blaming the deed on the (for once) innocent Nazis.

Should we look for network moviemakers to advertise how the Soviet "liberators" raped and slaughtered their way through eastern Germany in 1945? I think not.

An equally grim tale would repay retelling: how the Allies repatriated Cossacks and White (i.e., anti-Communist) Russians who had helped the Nazis against the Soviets. Various of the prisoners attempted suicide, rather than return to Mother Russia. A sound impulse, because all were liquidated or sent to the Gulag.

The story, nevertheless, will not get told. The viewers want Nazis, not Reds. That is, according to our public taste-makers they do.

On television the Nazi menace stretches to eternity. Let the West not relax - not for an instant! In some dripping South American jungle, 91-year-old former SS officers, crouched in wheelchairs, arthritic hands fingering their Lugers, may be planning a Fourth Reich.

Somewhere, for aught we know, a shriveled Teuton with an inch-wide mustache and a shock of white hair plastered across his forehead sits plotting, the thud of a thousand goose-stepping boots echoing in his mind's ear. Zis time zey vill not betray me.

Well, all right - ridiculous. Hardly more so, though, than Western culture's continuing obsession with the Nazis, forty years after the Gotterdammerung.

There is, of course, not the slightest doubt of Hitlerism's Satanic qualities. Here is the trouble, though: Hitlerism was never unique. The Fuhrer had a brother under the skin, whose name was Stalin. For historical purposes the difference between the two men, and their evil, awful systems, is chiefly this - that Hitlerism perished in 1945, forever disgraced, while Stalinism went on from strength to strength.

It can be useful on occasion to hold Hitler up to scorn and abuse. What is not useful at all is to hold up him and him only. The evils of a dead empire are objectively of less account than the evils of an empire very much alive, very much on the move.

And very polemical on just that account, because naturally it's one thing to go after dead Nazis, quite another thing to bait live communists, however deserving. To bait the communists is to invite a response on the part of government. An evil so monstrous as communism demands eradication, just as befell the Nazi evil.

Except that, among other things, we would have to stop shipping, technology and grain to the Soviets and increase the defense budget and build "Star Wars" and go into the arms talks expecting nothing - all those things that run contrary to the received liberal wisdom, which says: Why, the Russians are just people like us, hopeful of living in peace.

The shapers of popular taste are for the most part faithful liberals. From them let us expect no movies about the Warsaw uprising - far less the rape of Afghanistan. Liberalism has met the enemy it prefers - even if we destroyed him forty years ago.

Today in History

Today is Friday, March 8, the 67th day of 1985. There are 298 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 8, 1965, the United States landed about 3,500 Marines in South Vietnam.

On this date:

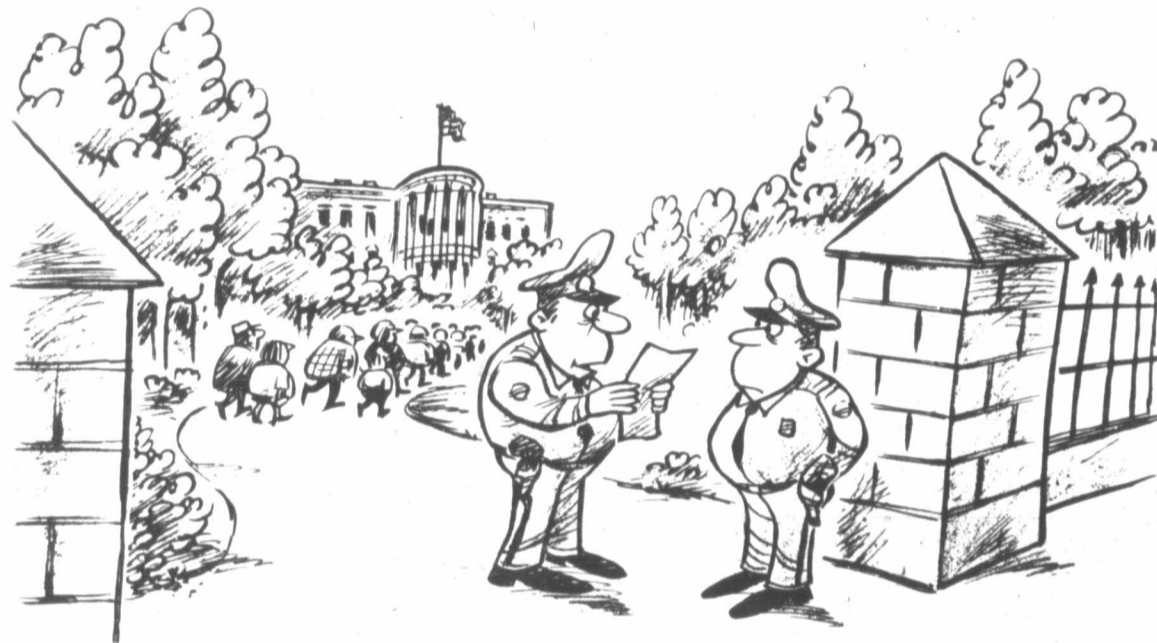

Ten years ago: Speaking to a Republican leadership conference in Washington, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan criticized President Gerald R. Ford's plea the day before to broaden the base of the GOP, saying a political party "cannot be all things to all people."

Five years ago: In Iran, a plan to transfer control of the U.S. hostages to the Revolutionary Council fell apart when the militants balked at yielding the captives.

One year ago: A Senate committee agreed to delay the vote on Edwin Meese's nomination as Attorney General.

Today's birthdays: Retired Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., is 83. Actress Claire Trevor is 76. Actress-dancer Cyd Charisse is 64.

Honest fisherman...and man

Fishing tournaments have been corrupted by cheaters, especially the high-stakes bass-fishing tournaments where prize money may run as high as a quarter-million dollars and where some have been won by thawed-out frozen fish.

The Clintonville Ice Fishing Derby in Wisconsin is on right now, a civic event and a cash-prize promotion.

Here's the way it works: Fishermen purchase $10 tickets which make them eligible for the prize catches.

You can fish day and night for nine days and nights if you like, but only the holders of tickets are eligible to win prizes.

This year's top prize fish - marked with a tiny green tag - was worth $50,000 to the lucky fisherman.

Jeff Kriese enjoys fishing, has plenty of time since retirement, so the first Saturday of the tournament he's out there in his ice shanty on Pigeon Lake along with 1,500 other fishermen who were competing that day.

He caught three crappie that morning. Jeff has his portable radio along, has just finished listening to Paul Harvey's noon news when he felt the bump on his jigging rig and lifts out onto the ice the tendermouth crappie everybody's been fishing for. I mean THE crappie, the one with the little green tag!

Let me tell you about Jeff Kriese. He can use the money. Except for the few chickens on his 15 acres near Manawa his only income is his Social Security check.

Every year he has saved enough out of that limited income to compete in the Ice Fishing Derby - until this year.

This year he just felt he could not spare the $10. So here he is...

Sitting all alone in his shanty on Pigeon Lake with a fish worth $50,000 - to an official ticket holder, which he is not.

Nobody knows. There was plenty of time for Jeff to go down to Derby Headquarters on Highway 45 and buy a $10 ticket. Then he could return to his fishing shanty and pretend to catch the fish later...

Which he did - not. The way Jeff Kriese and his brother were brought up in Manawa would be called "strict" by today's standards. Cheating was the same as stealing and stealing never went unpunished, here or hereafter.

So Jeff took his fish to derby headquarters and turned it in and explained that he had no ticket.

They were impressed with his honesty but agreed he was eligible for no prize.

When this year's derby ends Monday, Jeff and his wife Jan would like to have his tagged fish back. A taxidermist-up in Coleman has offered to mount it for him free. And they'd just like to have it around - to remember.

Shultz knows truth about Nicaragua

By Don Graff

George Shultz ought to be ashamed of himself.

He's the cool head in administration inner councils, the steady hand at the foreign policy wheel, the one who is supposed to see reality as it is — shades of gray rather than an ideological black vs. white.

So perhaps the most dismaying aspect of the escalating disinformation campaign on Nicaragua is the high-profile participation of the secretary of state.

That escalation got its biggest boost at the president's Feb. 21 press conference. Pressed by several correspondents on his objective in Nicaragua, he acknowledged that it is the removal of those now in power there.

There was much subsequent comment that this was the first time he had not justified the pressure on the Sandinistas as being necessary to halt arms supplies to the Salvadoran rebels.

But why the fuss? It has long been perfectly clear that the Salvadoran connection is peripheral to Ronald Reagan's beef with the Sandinistas. His problem has always been the Sandinistas themselves.

He was making this clear before he was elected. Even before he was nominated in 1980, he was calling for the return of the government to "the people" of Nicaragua.

Who he had in mind as "the people" was not so clear, however. Most observers at the time — even in the U.S. Embassy in Managua — generally agreed that the Sandinistas enjoyed widespread public support. In power barely a year, their revolutionary junta still represented a broad political spectrum.

Those in opposition were mostly former Somoza guard members and political cronies — the former hiding out in the Honduran jungle, the latter opening bank accounts in Miami. Scarcely the "freedom fighters" the president now extols.

To be sure, the post-revolutionary honeymoon did not last long. The Sandinistas no longer look so good to many former admirers. But that does not make the president's many fictions about Nicaragua fact.

In his version, for example, the Sandinistas were a minor element who stole the revolution from its real makers.

That's not the way it happened. The Sandinistas had been waging guerrilla war for more than a decade before Somoza's insatiable greed and indiscriminate brutality drove the business and professional community to make common cause with the rebels in the late '70s. As churlishly as the Sandinistas may have behaved toward their allies after the victory, it was their revolution first.

Nicaragua is definitely not representative democracy as we know it. Nor is it slipping behind the Iron Curtain, as his secretary of state would have it.

You can get to Managua by buying a plane ticket. Americans in most cases don't even need visas. You don't get into a real totalitarian country that easily.

And although there have been instances of Sandinista surliness, most opposition figures can enter and leave the country at will. That's not the way it is behind the real Iron Curtain — or in South Korea, the Philippines or, much closer to home, El Salvador.

The president says Congress is resisting him on Nicaragua because it does not understand the situation.

He is the one who does not understand — especially not what history teaches are the consequences of American intervention such as he now acknowledges is his objective in Nicaragua. From the last time around in that country, when the 1920-30s Marine occupation spawned the Somoza dynasty, to Guatemala in 1954 and Chile in 1973, it has only made bad situations much, much worse.

He ought to be told. But if not by cool, steady George Shultz, who?

Violin maker revives an ancient craft in North Texas

By MILES WRIGHT
Sherman Democrat

AUBREY, Texas (AP) — In a time of space-age plastics and computers, Steve Cundall and his father, Jim, adhere to ancient standards of craftsmanship in the patient production of fine hand-made musical instruments.

Their shop, east of Denton off Highway 380, is located on the rocky, mesquite-lined north shore of Lake Lewisville. To restore and produce violins and violas, for example, they use only select hardwoods, such as maple, willow and poplar.

Steve, a 1977 graduate of Denton High School, says he became interested in instrument repair and construction as an elementary school student. He built several miniature instruments out of wood, jet and ivory, and soon moved up to full-sized instrument repair. Even his earliest attempts at violin-making show remarkable dedication to quality and authenticity.

He's also an accomplished violinist, winning all-region band honors in high school for four years and attending North Texas State University as a performance major.

Before entering college, though, father and son team started the Luthier Shop, one of the few area music shops that rents stringed instruments other than guitars.

"My main desire is to promote music in the Southwest. We want to make good instruments available to students in the area," Steve said.

"There are a lot of string students in the Southwest who are playing terrible sounding instruments. Since the methods I use for restoration and creating instruments give a consistently good sound, I want to make as many instruments available to as many students as I can."

The road to becoming a craftsman was a long and arduous one. After Steve's first year at NTSU, he was accepted into the prestigious Bein & Fushi of Chicago, a producer of exceptionally fine violins and violas.

"I knew nothing about making or restoring violins. Maybe that was the best way to learn. I worked hard, 16 hours a day, and really learned their method," said Steve.

"Restorers, at one time or another, learn to replace virtually every part of the violin, so building comes rather naturally," he said.

It is not uncommon to find Steve concentrating on an instrument costing up to $100,000, or an occasional Stradivarius. His father, Jim, and wife, Cynthia, say the small shop has become a meeting place for area string players.

What makes Cundall's instruments so special is the European "interior mold" process of construction. A single instrument may require 80 hours to make and cost up to $3,700.

"I use an inside mold process. That's the traditional Italian method. The French developed the outside mold method, but it doesn't give the instruments as much character as the inside mold process. Each instrument is different using the inside mold. They're basically symmetrical, but different," he said.

The bows require special attention, too, since many can cost as much as $7,000. The white hairs used on bows come from Europe, where they are gathered from specific breeds of ponies.

While Steve spends most of his hours at the shop, Jim Cundall promotes several Suzuki schools in the area. The noted method of violin teaching focuses on letting children try to imitate what they hear instead of repeating monotonous musical scales. Recently he opened one of these schools in Denison.

Dear Abby

Coffee shop conversation
too spicy for lunchtime

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We often have lunch at a coffee shop near our office. The acoustics there are such that conversations at nearby booths or tables are very audible. More than once we have had to listen to vulgar and profane language because we could not help overhearing.

Today I heard a vulgar expression I've never heard before (Fm 58). These are not arguments, just business people discussing their office or jobs.

If you were sitting there, would you:

1. Suffer in silence. (After all, this sort of thing is not uncommon and is therefore tolerated.)

2. Ask the manager to speak to these people. (That hardly seems fair, asking him to do your dirty work, when he probably does not want to offend other regular customers.)

3. Go up to the booth or table and say something like: "Pardon me, but perhaps you are unaware that your conversation is being heard at the nearby tables."

If you print a better solution, I'll keep copies in my purse to hand out.
OFFENDED IN L.A.

DEAR OFFENDED: I would write a note saying something like:

"Your language is offensive. Please clean up your act, or keep your voices down. Thank you.—The Lunch Bunch"

Then I would either ask the waitress to deliver it to the offending table, or I'd deliver it myself.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a unique problem with no visible way to solve it without losing a friendship.

We have friends with whom we play cards at least once a week. Both my husband and I have seen Mr. X palm a wild card off the table onto his lap to be used when he needs it in order to win. We do not play for high stakes, so neither my husband nor I can comprehend why Mr. X does this.

Needless to say, Mr. X is always the big winner—the total rarely amounts to $5.

Now when we play, I am all tense, always looking to see if Mr. X is going to palm another card. We don't want to mention this to his wife or to his other friends, as we really care for them.

What should our game plan be?
CHEATED IN FLORIDA

DEAR CHEATED: Your game plan should be "truth or consequences." When you see Mr. X palm a card, call him on it in a jocular way—"I didn't know you were a sleight-of-hand artist; let's see you palm another card!" Then let him take the consequences.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is very insensitive about people who have had mastectomies, as I have had. She mentions her big bosom every chance she gets, and seems so proud of it.

Recently she lost 10 pounds, and at a party loudly stated that she was sad because she lost it all in her bosom! Then the other evening at another party, she announced that she had gained two pounds—and guess where? "In my headlights!"

This was particularly disgusting to everyone because another good friend who had had a mastectomy was present.

She then went on to say that she gets up every morning, takes a shower and goes back to bed. Someone asked, "You go back to bed? Why?" Her answer was, "Oh, I have to take care of John (not his correct name) every morning."

My husband said that she must have gained two pounds between her ears. We are all around 70 and have never heard anyone talk that way before. How should a woman like this be treated?

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: At a distance, and as infrequently as possible.

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

American troubadour comes to Pampa

"In your long-house there is an attic place
Full of dead epics and machines that rust,
And there occasionally with casual face
You come awhile to stir the sleepy dust...."

...I only bring a cup of silver air,
Yet in your casualness, receive it there."

These words of Stephen Vincent Benet perhaps best describe American troubadour Bill Schustik, who travels highways and by-ways of the United States singing songs, telling stories and accompanying himself on the guitar, banjo, harmonica and concertina.

Schustik is to bring his gifts to Pampa Saturday at 8 p.m. in M.K. Brown Auditorium in a program sponsored by the local Community Concert Association. Schustik brings to audiences his baritone voice and ability to bring American history and lore to life through ballads, sea chanties, folksongs and tales.

Raised in Lewiston, N.Y., Schustik launched his unusual career at Nantucket's Straight Wharf Theatre in September 1967. He became one of the original members of Pete Seeger's Hudson River Sloop Singers, appearing in folk festivals around the country.

In 1976 he was chosen as official chanteyman for "Operation Sail '76," performing hundreds of concerts nationwide and also recording the official album for the

Tall Ship Festivities, "Stormalong."

Schustik has authored the book and score of the classical ballet, "Off to Sea Once More," in collaboration with Edward Villella for the New Jersey Ballet and has recently authored the book and starred in his own six person cabaret show on the Civil War, titled "Many Thousand Gone," which grew into a much larger theatrical production entitled "On Shiloh Hill." This show opened April 8, 1984, in a special presentation for President Ronald Reagan, the third President for whom Schustik has performed.

With partner Zan Benham, Schustik shares in a company known as Schuzan Enterprises Inc., housed in a large loft overlooking the Hudson River in New York's West Village. Together they work on projects such as "On Shiloh Hill," and the formation of a six person troupe of musicians - singers - actors to travel and perform various Americana programs with Schustik.

His other talents include innovative costume designs, pen and ink drawings, and model ship building.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

I seldom suggest purchasing a book because I think we should use libraries and spend our money in other ways. However, if you buy only one book this year, let me suggest "The Source, A Guidebook of American Genealogy," edited by Arlene Eakle and John Cerny. This book was published in 1984 by the Ancestry Publishing Company, Salt Lake City, Utah. It is the most complete "how to" book published at this time and is thorough with its wide range of subjects. The book is divided into three parts.

Part one is Major Record Sources and includes among other listings, how to start with the sources found at home and within the family. It also tells how to find business and employment records and military and institutional records.

Have you thought about checking prison records? We have discussed mortuary records, but you might want to check county coroner reports. This section also talks about special problems with cemeteries and stones, plus church records concerning marriage and divorce.

Part two discusses Published Genealogical Sources. Often we search the same source and neglect others. For example, telephone directories are routinely checked but what about professional, religious and city directories? Many libraries have local newspapers on microfilm that date back into the 1890s and when a specific date is known, librarians will check for a particular item for a small fee. Check with the state archives to see which facilities would have newspaper files.

The last section discusses special resources. Some topics are Tracking Immigrant Origins, Native American Research, the Five Civilized Tribes, Sources in the Spanish and Mexican Southwest. Another section covers Black Ancestral Research, Asian Americans and Jewish Americans.

The last two chapters relate to computers and the genealogist. Do any of you have a computer working with the family trees? Please tell me more. Write Gena Walls, 11507 Brookledge Drive, Houston, 77099.

There's more to the Gelb picture story

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sign has come down from the wall saying Leslie Gelb's picture was removed "for cause," but the photograph has not gone back up. The world will survive the dispute between a top State Department official and the New York Times reporter, but the issue is more than just a parochial event of interest only to Washington insiders.

John T. Chain Jr., director of the bureau of politico-military affairs, affirmed his faith in "a free press" when he lifted an order to his staff not to talk to Gelb. But Chain still insisted Gelb's article on U.S. contingency plans to place nuclear weapons in Canada, Iceland, Bermuda and Puerto Rico "damaged our nation's security."

The Times disagrees, and contained in its scrap with the State Department official are the essential differences in perspective between government and press in mid-1980s Washington.

Much of the information Americans read in their newspapers and magazines, hear on the radio and see on television comes from government spokesmen: Larry Speakes at the White House, for instance, and Bernard Kalb at the State Department.

They provide the news media — and through it, the public — with a basic account of President Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz's decisions and activities.

Occasionally, the information is not flattering. But since their job is a form of public relations, they do not go out of their way to divulge sensitive or embarrassing material.

Most officials would prefer that the media depend on these statements and let it go at that.

But reporters generally want to know more than is being said publicly. They have to dig for the information. And what they find out in talking to officials, sometimes on an anonymous basis, can be touchy and, as in Gelb's case, classified.

An AP News Analysis

And officials such as Chain get upset, even though he said in his statement rescinding the ban on Gelb that he had acted "more in sorrow than in anger." Shultz, in fact, had asked the Times not to publish Gelb's story.

These officials want to stop "leaks," the unauthorized disclosure of government information. Ironically, according to the Times, the White House national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, had directed the State Department to cooperate with Gelb, a former director of Chain's bureau.

The information wasn't so much "leaked" as given to the newspaper.

Gelb and his editors at the Times deny the article damaged national security. Much of the material had appeared previously in the countries involved. The Canadian Parliament had discussed the deployment of U.S. nuclear weapons before the article appeared. The Canadian Broadcasting Co. had carried a report from Washington on the contingency plan.

Still, as far as Chain is concerned, the public should not have access to classified information.

This is not a novel idea. "I am a strong believer in a free press," Chain said. "I believe the American people deserve a higher set of standards than they sometimes get from a few people concerning national security issues."

Undoubtedly, a sizable segment of the American public agrees with him. Suspicion of the press has grown during the past few years.

Just last week, Sen. Jesse Helms, R.-N.C., said the "elite media" that produce the nation's leading newspapers and network television programs are "profoundly out of step with the ideals and goals of the American people."

Dr. George Keyworth, President Reagan's science adviser, was nearly as critical in an interview recently with the newsletter of the Scientists Institute for Public Information.

There are others who would agree with A.M. Rosenthal, the executive editor of the Times, who said Chain's ban on Gelb shows "a lack of understanding of a free press" in America.

Judges to rule on evidence-barring motions

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) — A district judge says he'll rule today on whether David Port's confessions that police say he gave freely should be admitted as evidence in the teen-ager's murder trial.

Judge I.D. McMaster on Thursday took under advisement two days of testimony and legal arguments on the issue of whether a jury should be allowed to hear the confessions in the slaying of a Houston mail carrier.

Port, 18, is accused of gunning down letter carrier Debora Sue Schatz as she was delivering mail in the affluent Houston neighborhood where Port lived.

The case drew national attention when Port's parents were jailed for refusing to testify against their son before a grand jury. The younger Port has remained free on bond.

Prosecutors spent all day Wednesday and most of Thursday calling witnesses who pieced together the events surrounding Port's arrest on June 8.

Police officer Irma Sauseda told the court Port gave her a full description of the slaying.

The teen-ager told her the woman struggled with him and fell after he'd taken her up the stairs of his house at gunpoint. He said he fired a .22-caliber pistol at her and she fell dead at the bottom of the stairs.

Port later identified the handgun for Ms. Sauseda that he allegedly used, she testified.

The defendant also gave oral confessions to officer Mike Waltmon and a partial written statement to Sgt. E.T. Yancheck, both officers testified.

But Port's attorney, Jack Zimmermann, argued the statements are inadmissible under Texas law because courts have held that "oral statements are so subject to misinterpretation that they are unallowable."

"For over 90 years Texas law has held that oral confessions taken in custody and not reduced to writing are inadmissible unless the state meets the heavy burden of showing an exception," Zimmermann said.

Assistant District Attorney Tim Taft said Port offered some of the information voluntarily and noted that Port told his story to three officers, and the stories matched detail for detail.

Actual trial testimony has not begun in the case, which began Feb. 25 with jury selection. A nine-man, three-woman jury was seated Tuesday and has been sequestered since Wednesday.

Shift to Far East 'beginning of end'

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s plan to move a larger share of its business to the Far East signals "the beginning of the end of small-car production in the United States" unless Congress intervenes, the head of the United Auto Workers union says.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca announced Thursday that Chrysler was canceling a major domestic expansion plan and asking its Japanese partner, Mitsubishi Motors Corp., to triple to 287,500 its shipments of small cars for sale here under the Dodge and Plymouth names.

The announcement came a week after President Reagan said he would not ask Japan to extend voluntary quotas on auto exports when they expire March 31, a decision that is expected to mean increased shipments by the Japanese.

United Auto Workers union President Owen Bieber, who attended the Chrysler meeting as a member of the board, called Iacocca's move Thursday "a disturbing aftershock to President Reagan's reckless and ill-advised decision."

"As the UAW predicted, opening the floodgates to Japanese imports is signaling the beginning of the end of small-car production in the United States unless Congress takes decisive action," Bieber said.

Iacocca called the move "Plan B," which was drawn up in the event that Japan lifted its import quotas.

The American market is now wide open to foreign cars and foreign components," Iacocca said. "To compete with both American and Japanese automakers, we have to go to the Far East — and fast."

Iacocca said that Chrysler had canceled plans to expand its U.S. capacity by adding a plant in Indianapolis or Morton, Ill., for assembly of its popular compact vans, and had decided not to put a

Slaying strains U.S.-Mexico relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The slaying of an American drug agent in Mexico has strained U.S.-Mexican relations, but Secretary of State George Shultz says he opposes economic sanctions to punish Mexican inaction on drug traffickers.

Testifying before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee just before U.S. authorities positively identified the body of Enrique Camarena Salazar on Thursday, Shultz said, "Our level of tolerance has been exceeded by these events."

Attorney General Edwin Meese III pledged in a separate statement that "we will follow these terrorists wherever they flee, and we will expand our efforts until they and all their conspirators are brought to justice."

Shultz said the kidnapping, murder and burial of Camarena on a ranch in Mexico, threats against other American drug agents and inaction by Mexican authorities on illegal drug production may demand some American response.

The secretary said the United States will continue to "forcefully" press the Mexicans to move against drug dealers, and he credited them with taking some tough law enforcement actions.

The Mexican government needs American tourism and so the slowdown and cursory searches of cars crossing the border are effective, Shultz said.

But when asked whether the administration would retaliate economically to force the Mexican government to crack down on drug traffickers, he replied: "I don't think it is a good idea to play around with those kind of sanctions."

In a separate statement, Shultz said he was "angered and saddened" by the killing of Camarena and his Mexican associate, Alfredo Zavala Avelar.

U.S. officials have criticized the Mexican government's response to Camarena's abduction on Feb. 7 on a street near the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara, Mexico. Acting DEA Administrator John C. Lawn has charged that the response by Mexican authorities was "too little, too late."

Meese ordered flags flown at half-staff at the Justice Department today in memorial to Camarena, whose body was to be flown aboard an Air Force C-141 cargo plane to San Diego, Calif.

The DEA announced Thursday night that Lawn would lead an agency delegation to a memorial service for Camarena, although the time was not certain.

Ambassador John Gavin said in Mexico City that the U.S. drug agency was vulnerable because it was "thinly staffed and thinly spread out."

But Gavin also said the United States was receiving "very good cooperation" from Mexican authorities.

Mexican officials have said they are doing all they can to stem drug traffic. During the search for Camarena, Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez said Mexican police were using "all the resources at their disposal" to find the missing drug agent.

Lucas confesses in Illinois

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP) — Henry Lucas, the Texas jail inmate who says he has killed at least 360 people, has confessed to the slaying of a 12-year-old Waukegan girl — one of about 30 people he says he killed in Illinois, authorities report.

Lisa Slusser was killed in 1977 while she was on an acorn-gathering expedition near her home in Waukegan. She was stabbed 19 times, her skull was fractured, and she was sexually molested.

"He didn't tell us anything about the crime that wasn't general knowledge," said Willie Smith, chief investigator for the Lake County Sheriff's Police. "We have a lot of problems with what he had to say, and a lot of questions.... We hope to get him up here."

MAKING WAY...

The drawbridge makes way for the boat to come into the city and down the canal. Dredges make canals in open waters such as the gulf to make way for ships to travel an inter-coastal waterway. Police officers and secret service men clear a path in the crowds to make way for an important foreign potentate so that he might arrive at his destination.

Church members are the ones who can clear the way, and show the right path to those who have not found the way to our Lord.

Isaiah 40:3B reads, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God."

Support your church in every way you can. Ask someone to attend church with you this week.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

REV. DAN BETZER

Revivaltime minister to speak here

Rev. Dan Betzer, radio evangelist, will be guest speaker at Sunday services at First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler. Services will begin at 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m., according to Rev. John Farina, pastor.

Betzer is speaker for "Revivaltime," international radio broadcast of the Assemblies of God. "Revivaltime" has been on a worldwide network of radio stations for more than 30 years. Currently more than 550 stations take the broadcast across the United States and into other nations.

Prior to coming to Revivaltime Media Ministries, Betzer pastored Calvary Temple at Sandusky, Ohio, a church he founded. He also began two other Ohio churches.

Having begun at age 3 as a regular on a children's radio program, Betzer has nearly four decades of experience in the media. During his high school days, he could be heard on the local radio stations in his hometown. In college he began to write and broadcast news and was a writer for the Associated Press.

Betzer spent 10 years in the business before going into the ministry. And even in the ministry, he kept active in radio and television, hosting a nightly TV show and a late Sunday night radio program.

Betzer known as a singer long before becoming a preacher. Betzer continues singing now. He has recorded 18 record albums; his latest is entitled "Nostalgia."

Jackson concert set in Shamrock

SHAMROCK - The Shamrock Ministerial Alliance will present Wanda Jackson, Leon McAuliffe and their band in concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 16.

The concert, scheduled annually as part of the St. Patrick's Day celebration, will be held at the high school auditorium in Shamrock. Jackson, a talented and versatile star of country music, has been singing and entertaining fans of country music throughout the United States and around the world since her early teens.

A native of Oklahoma, Jackson has consistently recorded best sellers for Capitol Records. She has gained popularity in Scandinavia, Germany, Japan, the Philippines, Korea and the Far East. She has been nominated twice for the Grammy award for Best Female Country Performer.

In 1971 Jackson and her husband and manager, Wendell Goodman, abandoned the night club circuit and turned their talents to the area of gospel music. Since then Jackson has appeared before countless church gatherings and has gained an even wider acclaim with her special brand of country gospel.

Tickets to the March 16 Wanda Jackson concert are available now for $5 from the Shamrock area ministers. Tickets at the door will cost $6.

Interested persons may call 256-2272 for further information.

Foursquare plans satellite programs

Foursquare Gospel Church, 712 Lefors St., has announced it is now a satellite affiliate with Word of Faith of Dallas.

The church began monthly satellite seminars this month with evangelist Norvel Hayes.

In coming months seminars will feature Jerry Savelle, Ken Copeland and Kenneth Hagin. Live concerts are also being planned; the first will be in April on the 2nd Chapter of Acts.

For September plans are being made for the church to have a daily live Word of Faith Academy and a local "Success in Life" chapter.

Pastors Ron and Sherri Branscum encourage the public to watch for posters and newspaper advertisements concerning these events.

Hard times turn farmers into activists

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
BREWSTER, Minn. (AP) — They came by bus and by pickup truck to stop the sale of Jim Langman's farm. It was a simple issue for the farmers who crowded into the Polk County courthouse. No more foreclosures; no more families forced from their land.

"What the people are quietly saying is 'enough,'" said Bobbi Polzine, a Brewster farmer who helped organize the courthouse protest last month. "It's the most patriotic, most God-fearing thing I have witnessed."

A growing rumble is coming from the nation's heartland. Farmers, facing a season of financial famine, sheriff's sales and foreclosure are breaking their silence, organizing, demonstrating and lobbying to save their way of life.

They are loosely organized under such names as "Groundswell" and "Prairiefire," but even the leaders say the growing activism has a life of its own.

"The people have taken things into their own hands," said Mrs. Polzine, who saw her group, Groundswell, grow in three months from a meeting of 40 concerned community leaders into a Statehouse rally in St. Paul that attracted 12,000 people.

Mrs. Polzine, a 49-year-old mother of two, got involved in November when she learned state officials estimated 600 to 800 families in southern Minnesota might lose their farms this year.

Groundswell is one of the more successful of the farmbelt's new movements; its demand for a moratorium on farm foreclosures is being considered by the Minnesota Legislature. But in recent weeks, other states have seen growing protests and support for the plight of farmers:

— Over 15,000 farmers from throughout the Midwest filled a basketball arena in Ames, Iowa, last week for a "National Crisis Action Rally." Speaker after speaker called for federal help and warned the crowd that the Reagan administration has declared war on the family farm.

— Some 6,000 South Dakota ranchers and farmers marched through snow to the state capital at Pierre to present $17,000, raised in $1 donations, to Gov. Bill Janklow. The money was used to send the state Legislature to Washington last week to seek federal help for family farms.

— Merchants in northwestern Iowa have placed green ribbons and signs reading "Support Your Local Farmer," in their shops. A radio station in Aurelia plays "Keep Iowa Green," a locally recorded song sung to the tune of "Tie a Yellow Ribbon Round the Old Oak Tree."

— About 700 Midwestern grain farmers, organized by the American Agriculture Movement Inc., marched on the Agriculture Department and the White House on Monday, demanding higher guaranteed prices and strict controls on production. AAM was born in the late 1970s, when grain farmers organized to protest low farm prices.

Not all the protests are peaceful. Sheriff Dean Baum was chased from a courthouse in Gove, Kan., last month when he tried to auction a farm in a foreclosure sale. An angry crowd of 100 shoved a bidder to the ground and Baum fled through a rear door of the courthouse.

"I don't think a lot of the people in the country understand the volatility in the countryside," said David Ostendorf, a United Church of Christ minister who heads the Des Moines-based Prairiefire, a non-profit coalition of farmers and church groups throughout Iowa.

Ostendorf said many farmers feel betrayed by government officials, who encouraged farmers to go into debt in the late 1970s and expand their operations. Now, squeezed by high interest rates and low crop prices, many farmers can't repay their debts and are facing bankruptcy and foreclosure.

Organizers like Ostendorf try to channel the anger into non-violent action. Prairiefire sends members to the state Legislature to lobby for a foreclosure moratorium and legislation providing spring planting funds for farmers in trouble. Groundswell is organizing "defense councils" in each Minnesota township to provide hay for cattle and shoes for farm children.

Peter Brent, a Menlow, Iowa, farmer who went broke in 1983, now handles the Prairiefire telephone hotline, advising as many as 30 callers a day on ways to keep their farms.

"You've got to understand that I'm a conservative Republican who is in with a bunch of radicals," he joked.

The farmers also are forming alliances with other groups more practiced at picket lines and protest. Members of the United Auto Workers, which have lost 9,000 jobs in Iowa's farm machinery industry, have joined with farmers to disrupt auctions of farm machinery.

The Rev. John Cain, the Roman Catholic Rural Life director for the diocese of Sioux City, Iowa, said thousands of farm families are coming to emergency meetings that once only attracted a few

'The Prodigal' to open soon at local cinema

"The Prodigal," a fast-paced contemporary drama from World Wide Pictures concerning the dilemma of a modern-day family, will open Friday, March 22, at Cinema IV in Pampa.

John Hammond, Hope Lange and John Cullum head the cast of this feature, which was filmed entirely on location in Seattle and other sites throughout the state of Washington.

Hammond, who portrays the title role of the wayward son in "The Prodigal," made his motion picture debut co-starring with Mary Steenburger in Universal's "Cross Creek" and recently starred in the hit television mini-series, "The Blue and the Gray."

Lange stars in the taut role of a confused and bewildered wife and mother. She has been an Oscar nominee for her outstanding performance in the hit film, "Peyton Place," a two-time Emmy Award winner for her title role in the popular television series, "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir," and a nominee for her emotional portrayal of the wife in the television film, "That Certain Summer."

Noted Broadway actor Cullum has been a two-time Tony Award winner for his roles in the musical "Shenandoah" and the dramatic hit "On the Twentieth Century." In "The Prodigal" he stars as a workaholic husband and father prone to the personal neglect of his family.

World Wide Pictures is the film organization of the Billy Graham Association, and the renowned evangelist makes a cameo appearance in the movie.

Also starring in the movie are Morgan Brittany, Ian Bannen, Joey Travolta, Sarah Rush, Gerry Gibson and Arliss Howard. The screenplay was written and directed by James F. Collier. Producer is Ken Wales, with William F. Brown as executive producer.

Snook shocked in semifinals

AUSTIN (AP) — A schoolboy basketball dynasty of sorts fell in the Class A state schoolboy basketball semifinals as LaRue LaPoynor upset Snook 60-52, ending Snook's bid for an eighth straight state title and a national record for the most consecutive state titles.

The upset came in one of six semifinal games played here Thursday. The finals in all classes will be played Saturday and semifinals in Class 2A and 5A were to be played today.

In semifinal games Thursday, Nazareth edged Munday in the other Class A semifinal; Brownsboro beat Seminole, 63-56, and Sweeny defeated Ingleside 58-48 in Class 3A; Bay City walloped Seagoville, 89-64, and Lamesa slipped past New Braunfels, 67-64, in Class 4A.

Semifinal games today had Grapeland meeting Temple Academy and Pilot Point vs. Morton in Class 2A while Conroe met Corpus Christi King and Fort Worth Southeast met Houston Madison in Class 5A.

Kerry Pettie scored 24 points to lead LaRue LaPoynor to the upset victory over Snook that left Snook coach Donnie Victorick "hurt."

"It doesn't shock me, but it hurts. It hurts tremendously," the coach said following the loss.

Turnovers proved to be the key in the upset victory as the winners turned 13 turnovers into points while making only seven turnovers themselves. LaPoynor also hit 18 of 26 free throw attempts.

LaPoynor, 30-6, will meet Nazareth, a 44-42 winner over Munday, in Saturday's title game. Snook ended its season 33-6.

Walter Martin had 20 points and nine rebounds for Snook.

Sophomore LaBradford Smith was 12 of 12 from the field and 5 of 5 from the free throw line for Bay City in the 4A semifinal. Hart Lee Dykes, acclaimed as one of the best schoolboy football athletes in Texas during the past season, added 18 points for the winners despite sitting out much of the second half with four fouls. John Tenison hit 12 of 21 for Seagoville for 31 points.

Bay City is now 34-1, and Seagoville bowed out with a 20-12 record.

Lamesa was led by brothers Jerry and Chris Mason, which had to overcome an eight-point halftime deficit. Jerry scored 24 points and Chris 20, and each pulled down 10 rebounds. Tilo Schmidt led New Braunfels with 22 points.

Lamesa raised its record to 28-5, while New Braunfels ended its season at 19-13.

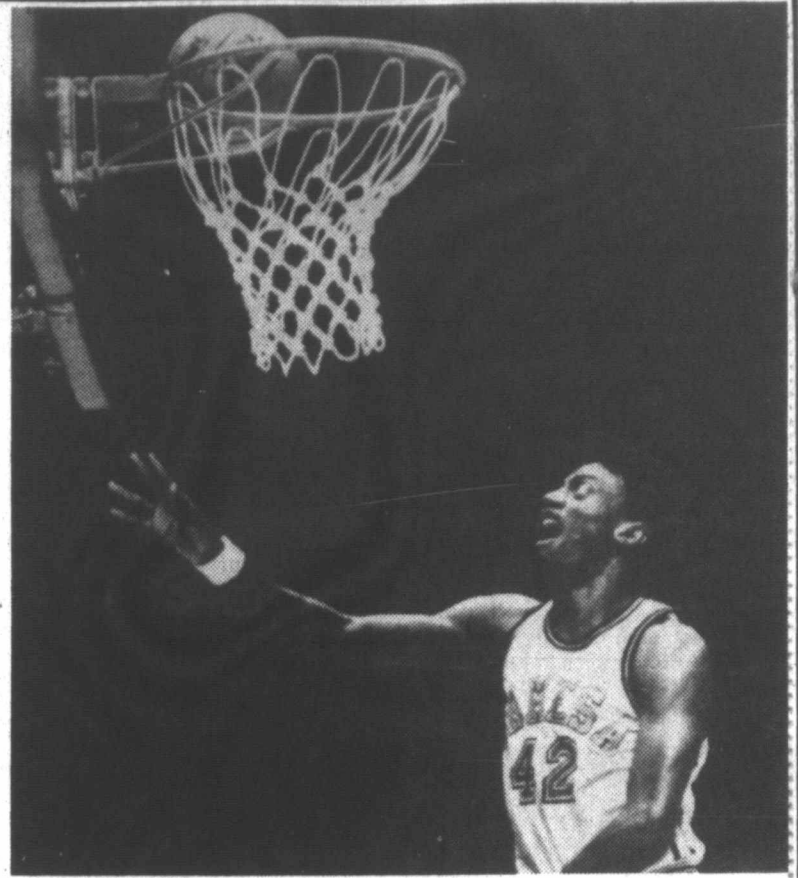

The 3A semifinal between Seminole and Brownsboro 3A game looked like a rout when Seminole built a 27-7 lead with 3:08 to go in the first half.

But the Bears came back, outscoring the Indians 45-27 in the second half of the sloppy game.

Seminole finished with 30 turnovers. Brownsboro had 24.

Terry Bailey scored 20 points for Seminole, 30-3. Jonathan Bell added 19. Bryan Bragg and Ricky Banks each had 16 for Brownsboro, 30-4.

Donald Lemons had 19 points

LaMesa's Chris Mason (42) goes high for a rebound against New Braunfels in Class 4A semi-final action.

Harvesters win over Whitefaces

Pampa rallied for five runs in the fifth inning to defeat Hereford, 7-5, Thursday in a non-district baseball game at Harvester Field. The game was called after five innings because of darkness.

"We made six errors in this game," said Pampa coach Bill Butler. "We were lucky to win it making those many errors."

Todd Hardin was Pampa's leading hitter with a single and double, while Jimmy Bridges smacked a two-run homer.

Wade Howard went all the way on the mound to collect his first win against one setback. Howard held Hereford scoreless the first three innings, but the Whitefaces bounced back to score four runs in the fourth to take a 4-1 lead.

The Harvesters will compete in a round-robin tournament at Dumas Thursday through Friday. Pampa meets Borger at 12:30 Thursday in first round action. Pampa goes against Caprock at 10 a.m. Friday, then closes out the tourney against Dumas at 3 Saturday.

The Harvesters, 3-2, host Canyon March 19 to open the District 1-4A season.

Umpires to meet

The Pampa Umpires Association will hold an organizational meeting March 11 at 6 p.m. in room 202 of City Hall.

All persons interested in becoming an umpire are urged to attend this meeting.

An Umpires Rules Clinic will be held March 14-15 in room 202 of City Hall at 6 p.m. nightly.

Donkey basketball to benefit Pampa family

It will be man against beast in the Pampa Noon Lions Club-sponsored Donkey Basketball Extravaganza Monday, March 11, at McNeely Fieldhouse.

The benefit games tip off at 7 p.m. with proceeds to benefit 7-year-old Amy Street, an Austin School first-grader who was suffering from a seizure disorder.

In the first of three games, the Pampa Police Department will play the Coaches. The Pampa Media Maulers tip off against the Lions Club Loonies in the second game.

The winners will meet in the championship game.

All the money raised will go to benefit the Street family, which has suffered financial hardships from the expensive treatment Amy has received.

Advance tickets may be purchased from any Lions Club member, or at the Chamber of Commerce, Heard-Jones Drug or Insurance Unlimited. Advance tickets are $3 for high school students and adults, and $2 for grade school students. Tickets at the door are $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for grade school students.

Amy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matt Street.

Hatalsky leads Bay City Classic

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — It was a delighted Morris Hatalsky who considered the 5-under-par 66 that staked him to the first round lead in the $500,000 Hertz Bay Hill Classic. "No complaints. I'm as pleased as I can be," Hatalsky said Thursday after he had scored an eagle-2 on his way to a two-shot lead. Hal Sutton also was pleased. He scored his second hole-in-one of the season. But he definitely had a complaint. The ace, with a 3-iron on the 17th hole at the Bay Hill Club came three days too early. The sponsors have offered a $1 million prize, $500,000 to the player and an equal amount to charity, for a hole-in-one on the 17th. But only if it comes in Sunday's final round. Sutton, who finished with a 73, was not alone in considering what might have been. Tom Watson, for example, was in position to challenge for the lead until he hit into the water and made a triple-bogey 7 on the 13th hole. He, too, finished with a 73. "But I'm more excited about playing now than I was earlier in the year. I'm more excited because I'm hitting the ball better than I have all year," Watson said. And then there was Buddy Gardner, who was 4-under-par, a single shot out of the lead, until he hit into the water on the 18th and made double bogey. "I hate to finish like that, but it's one of those things," he said after his 2-under-par 69. U.S. Open champ Fuzzy Zoeller, on the mend from major back surgery, agreed with Gardner. Fuzzy made bogey-5 on the hole. "I can sleep on a 5," he said. "But a 6 or a 7 or an 8 would be a little hard to handle." British Open champ Seve Ballesteros and Australian Greg Norman were in a large group at 71. Masters titleholder Ben Crenshaw took a 76. Host Arnold Palmer struggled to a 78.

Rose eyes challenging season

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Pete Rose was in his office, preparing for what some people view as the toughest job in baseball, player-manager. He will be 44 in five weeks, a senior citizen athlete. He is in the final countdown of his chase, 94 hits from Ty Cobb's record 4,191 base hits, and has set late August as the target time for tying Ty. All of that would seem to be enough of a burden for most men, but Rose has another one as well. He is also managing the Cincinnati Reds, a team trying to recover some of its past glories, glories he once helped weave. "I don't know if it's the toughest job," he said. "It's the most time-consuming, though. You have to stay around a lot longer." Keeping Pete Rose around the ballpark, though, is like Uncle Remus tossing Br'er Rabbit in the Briar Patch — not exactly capital punishment. The Reds' practice drills are designed to rotate groups of players through three fields so that they all eventually pass by the manager, who stays put, taking his work in one place. "Whether it's me or Sparky (Anderson) or Davey Johnson, you can only be on one field at a time. I still get my grounders and my BP. Most managers get involved hitting fungos in batting practice. I'm just involved a little more." All of this would seem a challenge if you viewed baseball as a job. Rose, however, maintains the boyish enthusiasm of a dead-end kid playing on a sandlot with an old spit ball held together by tape. He plays for fun, so how tough can it be? "The last three or four years, this team fell into a losing attitude because of the way it played,"

Rose said. "I'm trying to get the positive back from the negative. Then you start having fun. It's amazing what guys can do when they start having fun." Rose has always been able to recite statistics the way some people give their telephone numbers. He is equipped with facts that show the Reds improved dramatically after he came over from Montreal last Aug. 16 to double as player and manager.

In the year ahead you will be remarkably shrewd in figuring out ways to put your money to work for you. However, before plunging in, be sure to investigate, in depth, all investment proposals.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not let anyone make any financial commitments on your behalf today without first thoroughly discussing them with you. You may not be in agreement. The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as shows you which signs you are best suited to romantically. To get yours mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) People who have to deal with you today on a one-to-one basis might find your temperament a bit confusing. Be consistent and keep a cool head.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today your spirit could be willing but your flesh may be weak, and little or nothing will be done about your good intentions unless you take action.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Make it a point today to treat everyone with you're involved with equally. Don't play up to certain individuals just because you think they can help you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If the outside world doesn't treat you too kindly today don't bring your frustrations home and take them out on innocent members of your family.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The acid tongue of someone you dislike could cut you to the quick today if you take his remarks to heart. Consider the source and let it go.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today a shrewd promoter may try to sell you something you don't need. This individual is capable of using a lot of pressure, so be resistant.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may be saddled with a temperamental companion today who is in an argumentative frame of mind and will be looking for something to grumble about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Avoid doing things today that could put an undue strain on you physically. Your mind may be up to it, but perhaps your muscles won't.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) One of your friends might have a slight chip on his shoulder today but his bark will be worse than his bite. Don't let his comments cause you to respond.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you want others to comply with your wishes today don't frame them as demands. You'll get negative feedback if they think you're too bossy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Everyone is not going to be in total accord with your views or opinions today, so don't overreact if another expresses opposing ideas.

'Typical' homebuyer

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If you were a typical homebuyer last year you would have come from a household with an income of $35,950, bought an existing rather than new single-family house of 1,650 square feet, and paid $65,642.

You would have observed your 33rd birthday, and there was a good chance that your household relied on two incomes rather than one, especially if you were a first-time rather than repeat buyer.

Those figures, most of them medians, are from a survey just released by the National Association of Realtors, the first it has made since 1980. Among other things, it confirmed what many people already know: Buying a house isn't easy.

Almost half the households studied — 1,200 of them across the country — relied on two incomes to finance their transactions, and many of them depended on loans to help make up the down payment.

Repeat buyers, able to finance their purchase with the equity from a previous house, found it a lot easier than first-timers. Adding to their ease were bigger incomes — $39,100 vs. $30,900 for first-time buyers.

It was no surprise, therefore, that two-thirds of buyers last year were the financially better-off repeaters rather than first-timers. The repeaters also were older than the first-timers, 37 years compared to 29 years.

Forty percent of all buyers obtained a first mortgage from a savings and loan association, and the same percentage selected conventional, adjustable rate mortgages. Only one-quarter of the buyers opted for fixed-rate loans.

Surveys such as this seldom reveal any surprises, but one item does tend to stand out as unusually interesting: Near or at the top of the list of reasons for buying was the desire for homeowner tax advantages.

Those advantages — mainly deductions for interest payments and local real estate taxes — have also caught the eye of the Treasury Department, which thinks Congress should at least consider limitations on them.

That prospect already has sent the housing and home-finance industry into a furious activity aimed at combatting such thinking, and the fact that buyers rated deductions as a top attraction may now serve to intensify that activity.

PAINT BOMBING ATTEMPT—A man flies a tiny ultra-light plane over the USS Buchanan and tries to drop a paint bomb on the warship as it makes its way out of the Sydney, Australia, harbor Friday. Two yellow paint bombs missed the ship and the man was later arrested after a chase, police said. The warship's four-day visit was marred by anti-nuclear protests. (AP)

Second AIDS blood test approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has approved a second screening test for blood contaminated by AIDS following laboratory results indicating it is the most sensitive indicator of possible exposure to the deadly disease.

Electro-Nucleonics Inc. of Fairfield, N.J., was awarded the second license by the Food and Drug Administration on Thursday to market a blood test to detect possible AIDS contamination.

Laboratory tests showed the test was correct in 99.6 percent of the cases, compared with the 93 percent accuracy rate of the test licensed earlier, company and government officials said.

The company said it was prepared to ship 150,000 test kits immediately and that it planned to produce about 1 million test kits a month.

FDA approval came only five days after the first production license was granted to Abbott Laboratories of North Chicago, Ill.

Both tests operate on the same principle. A small blood or plasma sample is combined with a reagent solution. If antibodies to the virus suspected of causing AIDS are present, the solution turns color, becoming yellow.

A positive test does not necessarily mean the donor has AIDS or will get it, and health officials are asking people not to consider the test a means of making a diagnosis.

The test, however, does indicate that the donor has been exposed to the suspected AIDS virus or to a related virus, and blood carrying a positive indication will be discarded.

The test has been controversial because of the possibility of getting an erroneous reading, particularly the possibility that blood will be declared pure when it actually is contaminated.

But a National Cancer Institute scientist who helped discover the suspected AIDS virus said the test is highly accurate if used properly.

"The test works beautifully. If it's done right, it works perfectly," Dr. Robert Gallo said Thursday at the annual meeting of the American Society for Microbiology in Los Angeles. Five other top AIDS researchers at the meeting also defended the test.

The Abbott test approved last Saturday carried a 7 percent error rate in the sensitivity category. When blood from known AIDS victims was tested, the test was positive 93 percent of the time; 7 percent of the tests detected no AIDS antibodies.

When asked about that error rate, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler acknowledged the "imperfection" of the test, adding: "We do not claim 100 percent accuracy. But it's a very small margin of error, as little as could be achieved."

The new Electro-Nucleonics test showed a markedly higher sensitivity rating, however. Both the company and HHS officials said the ENI test detected known AIDS patients in 99.6 percent of the clinical trials.

AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is a viral infection that destroys the body's immune system and leaves it vulnerable to other diseases. Its principal victims have been homosexual men, drug abusers,

LONDON (AP) — Flamboyant rock star David Bowie, used to calling the shots in movies he directs, plays a hired gun in his latest big-screen foray, John Landis' "Into The Night."

Bowie, 38, said he agreed to take the bit part because "I'm a great admirer of Landis' movies. When he asked me to join some of his pals playing guest roles I was very flattered."

Landis, whose hits include "Trading Places" and "National Lampoon's Animal House," also has cast a string of fellow directors in walk-on parts in his new movie.

Sharp-eyed movie buffs may spot Roger Vadim and Paul Mazursky among Hollywood luminaries usually behind the cameras. Landis himself will make a brief appearance.

"Into The Night" stars Jeff Goldblum, who was in "The Big Chill," and Michelle Pfeiffer, who appeared in "Grease 2."

FLOOD VETERAN—Retired freelance photographer Archie Westerfield, 74, holds a photo he took during the flood of 1943 in which the Illinois River set a flood record of 28.8 feet. In the background is the town of Liverpool, Ill., as it appears today, during the current flooding of the Illinois waterway. (AP Laserphoto)

Agriculture secretary sees more endangered farmers than Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John Block says President Reagan misspoke when, vetoing a controversial farm credit bill, he said only 4 percent of American farmers are having serious cash-flow problems. Reagan did not mean what he said, Block said, adding that "the president understands the problem" confronting farmers. Asked about Reagan's remark at a briefing for farm journalists Thursday Block said: "What he was really saying is that he feels that we will probably lose about 5 percent or 4 percent, whatever the number that he said. He wasn't suggesting there aren't more than that in trouble." When he vetoed the bill Wednesday, Reagan said: "The truth of the matter is — in need of immediate help are less than 4 percent or around 4 percent at best, of all the farmers in the United States. Ninety-six percent do not have liquidity problems." "The president did misspeak," Block said Thursday under questioning by the Senate Agriculture Committee. "A much higher percentage than that are facing serious strain and stress financially," he said. According to Agriculture Department economists, approximately 178,000 "family-size commercial farms" with sales of $40,000 to $500,000 annually have debts in excess of 40 percent of their assets and are in a severe cash-flow squeeze. Those do not include other "highly leveraged" farms in larger and smaller sales categories. The 178,000 middle-size farms in a financial bind represent less than 8 percent of all the farms in the United States, but they account for nearly 18 percent of total production and are considered the cornerstone of the family farm system. They also make up 28 percent of the mid-size group. "We believe the percentage loss of farms will be heavier this year, maybe in the range of 5 percent" of the U.S. total and "it could get slightly above that," Block said. According to USDA projections for the next three to five years, the annual farm loss "probably will stay in that range or less" before starting to ease "back down to the normal range" of losses, he said. The decline in the number of American farms will continue to be mainly the result international economic conditions and other forces over which farmers have no control, Block said. But if the administration's farm bill is put in place, things should be looking up by the end of the decade "when agriculture is going to become healthy again" — and more profitable, he said.

Four killed in house fire

ROWLETT, Texas (AP) — Four persons died early today when a wind swept fire roared through their brick home in this Dallas suburb, fire officials said. Rowlett Fire Department Lt. James Cunningham said the victims included a Rowlett man, his two daughters, ages 11 and 9, and an unidentified man.

The mother of the two children and an 11-month-old infant escaped, Cunningham said. The names of the victims were being withheld pending notification of relatives, officials said. "There was a strong south wind, about 30 mph, and the fire had engulfed the house by the time we got there," Cunningham said.

Budget panel is deadlocked on Social Security freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — A politically skittish Senate Budget Committee is deadlocked over whether to cancel cost-of-living increases next year for 35.5 million Social Security recipients to help prune federal deficits. Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., said his panel will try again next week to break the impasse, predicting that some form of benefits freeze will ultimately prevail, despite strong Reagan administration objections. In a series of votes late Thursday after a stormy two-hour debate, the 22-member committee rejected, 13-8, Domenici's proposal to freeze benefits as well as a rival effort by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., to block such a freeze, by a 12-9 vote.

It also rejected, 18-3, a middle-ground proposal by Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., that would have given the cost-of-living increases only to those with earnings below the poverty line. Failure of Congress to act on the issue would allow next January's cost-of-living increase to take effect as scheduled, as the president has proposed. The proposed freeze would cut about $6 billion from the deficit in 1986. "There are two or three people who may change their vote (in favor of a freeze) if they get something else they want," Domenici said. "I still think there's pretty substantial support for a freeze." Domenici also put off until next week the related question of proposed cost-of-living freezes for a wide range of government pension and benefit programs — including those for veterans and retired federal workers. He argued these beneficiaries should be put on the same footing with Social Security recipients. Before quitting until noon on Tuesday, the committee voted to reject Reagan's proposal to terminate the Legal Services Corp. The committee voted earlier Thursday to deny both hospitals and doctors any increase in Medicare payment rates next year. It also voted 20-0 against Reagan's recommendation to raise the premiums paid by Medicare patients.
