McLean board fires high school principal

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

McLEAN - Citing an "apparent lack of support from the community and a lack of discipline and positive leadership with the students," school officials Monday fired high school Principal Ron Cummings

The trustees gave Cummings notice of non-renewal of his contract Monday at their regular board meeting.

It was not a unanimous decision. Board member Darryel Herndon voted to keep Cummings, the high school principal for eight years McLean ISD superintendent Jim Rutherford said he did not know what prompted the alleged lack of community support. "I was the one that recommended him for renewal," Rutherford said, adding that he would recommend Cummings if another school wanted to hire him for a similar job.

Cummings, whose two teen-age daughters and elementary school age son spent most of their school years in McLean, felt uncomfortable about commenting on his dismissal and said he's looking at his options. One option he has would be to appeal the board's decision. A dismissed faculty member has 15 days to request an appelate hearing or may appeal to the state secretary of Education

I do appreciate the support of most of the people in the community," he said, adding that he did not know until the February board meeting that some patrons were upset with him.

"I do feel that part of (the board's decision) was not quite right," he said. "But I'm not free to Responding to allegations of a lack of discipline, Cummings said, "discipline is relative. A lot of it comes from support of the community and support of the students. I never failed to back a teacher.

Earlier that night, trustees appointed Cummings, Thomas and Rutherford as administration representatives on the school career ladder

Referring to the career ladder, Rutherford told the board that he'd like "to find a way to allow everyone who qualifies to advance to a higher level, but we can't do that.

Under guidelines for the state mandated career ladder merit pay program, a teacher with a bachelor's degree and three years teaching experience, plus nine hours of higher education course work or 135 hours of advanced training, may advance to Level 2 on the four level ladder. The teachers get a $2,000 raise each time they advance up the ladder. The teachers are selected of a committee of three administrators and two Level 2

"We're going to see if it's not in litigation," said Rutherford, who admitted that he doesn't want to serve on the selection committee

"The teachers feel there is no evaluation process that can be that selective," he said. "There are just too many variables.

In other business, board members approved a list of 34 activities and organization which the state classified as acceptable extra-curricular activities

Those are the ones which a student may miss 10 days per year for. The list included Future Homemakers of America, Future Farmers of America, 4-H Club and various vocational clubs, as well as activities which are not offered at McLean. To trustees dismay, student council was not listed as an acceptable activity Trustees also agreed to have the Junior - Senior banquet and prom at the Coronado Inn in Pampa. The district would not be responsible for students' accidents on the way to the prom. Students wanted the event at the Hilton Hotel in Amarillo, but trustees felt the distance was too far.

School business manager Shirley Johnson reported that the school has received no money from the state of Texas since January.

"If it weren't for our taxpayers, we would be in the hole," she said, reporting that the school has collected $60,000 in taxes this month.

Board members also approved the state mandated grading system, adopted textbooks for next school year and rehired all the teachers.

Wheeler vote set by board

WHEELER - Members of the Wheeler County Water District board Monday called for an April 6 election on a maintenance tax to fund WCWD operations and a hydrologist's study of county ground water supply

Although the board set the election at a meeting Feb. 28, it did not make the election notice official until the election resolution was approved at a meeting Monday in the Wheeler County Commissioners' courtroom.

Voters in the nine county precincts will go to the polls April 6 to decide whether they want to pay the maintenance tax to fund the board and the ground water study. According to the proposition, the tax would not be higher than three cents per $100 valuation

The ground water study would be conducted by the Midland research firm of Ed L. Reed & Associates. The firm will begin work upon approval of the maintenance tax and WCWD board approval of the firm's contract.

WCWD board member Kent Sims said the board was to have approved the contract at its Monday meeting, but the Reed representative did not have the contract available for review.

Sims believes that unlike past water elections, in which voters were asked to approve construction of a lake northeast of Wheeler, this election seems likely to pass. He explained that the northeast county landowners who led the opposition to the proposed lake now support the study of the ground water supply and seem to want the maintenance tax issue to Hydrologist Joe Reed with the Midland firm estimated that the initial study would cost $10,000 to $15,000 and that it would last about two to three months. This means that if voters give their approval, the hydrologist may be able to complete the study by July or August

He explained that the study will consist of reading tables and state reports as well as ifield work measuring wells throughout the

We will use our own files as well as information from the state," he said. "We will suppliment that with our own field work

Reed had hoped to get the field work done before farmers begin their spring irrigation.

Juvenile mistakenly indicted on adult charge of burglary

BY JEFF LANGLEY Senior Staff Writer

Local authorities were embarrassed by their indictment of a 14 - year - old Pampa boy on an adult charge of burglary of a

The kid was netted along with several young adults in an investigation of a rash of car burglaries last year. But instead of being referred to juvenile authorities, the boy's case, along with those of the adult teenagers. was referred to the district attorney's office for prosecution. Pampa police later notified the prosecutor's office of the youth's age and status as a juvenile

But somehow the message of warning was lost in the confusion among the dozens of felony cases handled by the local prosecutor, an office spokeswoman said

Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton presented the youth's case to the grand jury on grand jurors returned the felony indictment naming the youth, sending his relatives into a mild state of shock. Grand jurors indicted the boy and 19 adults.

Sure enough, the 31st District

The case came to light when the boy's name and the others indicted by the grand jury were published in Sunday's Pampa News (the ages and addresses of those indicted are not listed on the court documents).

The vouth's relatives were reportedly unaware of his alleged involvement in the car burglaries until the name was published (The Pampa News' policy is that the names of juvenile offenders are not knowingly published in most

"He is a juvenile. The charges will be dropped," said Debbie Ruttman, spokeswoman for the district attorney.

We've had so much paperwork," the office's secretary

Both local felony prosecutors were unavailable for comment. Hamilton is off on a week's vacation, and District Attorney Guy Hardin was out of town

Juvenile Probation officer Ed Barker had never heard of the juvenile offender until the error was pointed out Monday

"It was never referred to this office," Barker said.

He said the boy's indictment on the adult charge was "just a slip Barker pointed out that juveniles can't be charged as adults until a juvenile court certifies them as adults. He said that is only done with older juveniles involved in serious offenses such as murder.

The county's juvenile officer said the case will be referred to his office, but not until the adult charge is officially dismissed.

Barker said 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany must "quash" the indictment in order to dismiss the charge against the Pampa

Pampa to join fight against SW Bell hike

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners today approved joining with other cities to oppose proposed rate increases being sought by Southwestern Bell Telephone.

Southwestern Bell has filed a request with the Texas Public Utilities Commission asking for an approximate 30 percent rate increase

The Steering Committee of the Texas Municipal League has asked cities to join in opposing or at least limiting the proposed rate increase, City Manager Bob Hart told commissioners this morning.

Hart said the city had joined with others in similar protests in the

According to a letter to the city from Tom James, TML Steering Committee chairman, cities have joined together in the past to study the company's requests and to present evidence before the PUC regarding the proper amount of increase requested.

Such opposition has "been successful in limiting the company's increases to more reasonable levels," James said.

Mayor Calvin Whatley said the city should participate. He noted that since the breakup of AT&T. rate increases for telephone service have been offered without necessarily leading to any improvements in telephone services.

James noted a number of cities have also joined in opposing AT&T rate increases recently

The Pampa commissioners approved a resolution authorizing the city's participation in the TML opposition to Bell's rate request.

In other matters, the commission awarded three bids.

Commissioners awarded a bid of $169,746.02 to Culberson-Stowers Chevrolet of Pampa for the purchase of new city vehicles. The new vehicles will include an economy pickup, six police sedans, four full-size pickups and two trucks

Hart reported the city had budgeted $188,725 for the purchase. The bid came in about $19,000 under the amount budgeted.

The commission awarded a bid of $45,500, plus miscellaneous welding at $35 an hour, to Lupton Painting Co. of Shawnee, Okla., for painting and maintenance work of the water storage tanks at the municipal water treatment plant.

Allyn Moore, director of Community Services, said the tanks would be repainted during the shutdown of the tanks in April during the annual routine maintenance operations at the plant

He reported the city had budgeted $80,000 for the work. The low bid will result in savings there, though some of the difference will be used up for any welding of tank seams that may be needed.

J. M. Enterprises of Tulsa, Okla., was awarded a bid for the purchase of a micro-computer to be used for engineering, emergency management, recreational team management and other tasks, as well as general word processing and office operations.

The purchase bid for the computer is $8,224. Moore explained part of the cost will be covered by a Federal Emergency Management Agency grant. FEMA previously approved a grant of $4,339.50 for the purchase. But the agency may instead pay a percentage share of the cost. The local Office of Emergency Management helped to insure the computer system would be compatible with access to FEMA computer data banks. Moore said the OEM can access the FEMA systems to obtain information needed in emergency and disaster

In other business, the commission approved the appointment of Phyllis Jeffers as city secretary and Denise Rohde as deputy city secretary

Hart reported the fulltime city secretary's position had been abolished, resulting in salary savings of approximately $20,000 a year. He said the duties could be handled by part-time sharing of the duties spread among the two workers

Commissioners appointed Mayor Whatley and Commissioner Clyde Carruth to work with the city staff on contract negotiations for the operation and management of the water and waste water treatment

Jurisdiction major issue in FERC hearing

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series of articles on the rulings of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the Texas Railroad Commission in regard to oil and gas rights disputes between majors and independents

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Appearing before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) hearings in Washington, D.C., last year, representatives of independent oil producers in the Panhandle Field argued FERC had no jurisdiction over the production of gas.

Thirty-seven independent producers from the Texas Panhandle had been called to answer charges by Dorchester Gas Producing Co. that they had been taking gas allegedly belonging to Dorchester and selling the gas illegally in intrastate markets Dorchester claimed the gas being produced from the independents' wells on leases in the West Panhandle Field, located in Gray and Carson Counties, had been dedicated to interstate commerce under federal regulations.

As such, the gas was subject to federal pricing controls under the Natural Gas Act and Natural Gas Policy Act. Dorchester claimed

The dedicated gas was limited in pricing under federal regulations, with maximum rates set under Section 104 of the NGPA. The so-called "old gas" was being sold at about 50 cents per 1,000 cubic feet

The independents, claiming they were pumping only casinghead gas, not covered under dedication rules, were selling their gas to pipeline concerns at about $3 per 1,000 Mcf, saying their gas came under Section 103 pricing regulations for so-called "new hearings. Administrative Law Judge Brenda Murray ruled against the independents, saying most of the gas they were producing was dedicated gas and thus subject to the federal price controls.

In her recommendation to FERC following the

She had excluded casinghead gas from dedication rules. But she found that the evidence and testimony were persuasive that most of the independents' gas was not casinghead gas and thus had been sold at prices above the maximum allowable. (The matter of her determination regarding the composition of the disputed gas has been covered in the first two articles.)

Judge Murray thus upheld Dorchester's claims except for casinghead gas - that the gas was dedicated to interstate commerce.

In her Argument section of her proposal for FERC consideration, she notes, "(FERC) Enforcement Staff and Dorchester view this case as revealing only the tip of the iceberg or a widespread practice where parties, under the guise of drilling new oil wells, transform old (relatively cheap) dedicated natural gas into new (high cost) undedicated gas.' (FERC, Pg. 16 - all references come from the judge's report.)

Citing Dorchester's arguments, she notes, "It is undisputed that Dorchester's reserves under discussion were, at the time Dorchester acquired them, already developed and producing, and were dedicated to interstate commerce. The issue here is what was dedicated." (FERC, Pg. 16)

The issues of dedication and jurisdiction are important matters for FERC's consideration Dorchester and the independents involved in the disputes have been operating wells on the same acreage. Under unique contract provisions, the oil and the gas rights had been separated.

City logo contest continues

By BOB HART Pampa City Manager

I want to remind everyone once again that the logo contest is continuing.

We have received 87 entries to date, and entries will be accepted at City Hall until Friday, March 15. Winners will be announced at the city commission meeting on March

All entries may be submitted by dropping them off at the City Hall or by mailing them to the City Logo Contest in care of City Hall, P.O. Box 2499, Pampa, Texas 79065.

Again, entries may be submitted on any type of paper. And you do not have to be an artist to enter.

THE OFFICE of code enforcement is in the process of changing its name to the Department of Neighborhood Integrity. It will be the responsibility of the Neighborhood Integrity Department to work with citizens of Pampa in order to promote a good environment in which to live.

We have initiated a formal program to address problems that detract from neighborhood desirability. The areas of major concern are litter prone areas, abandoned vehicles or sub-standard areas.

The Department of Neighborhood Integrity will be working closely with organizations such as Clean Pampa, Inc., and individual citizens to improve neighborhood desirability in the quality of life that we all enjoy

Neighborhood Integrity also coordinates all building, electrical, plumbing and health codes in zoning enforcement procedures. Codes are adopted and enforced in order to provide residents of a community with a sense of security, that being a certain amount of minimum requirements adhered to in construction. This allows residents a certain amount of assurance that they are protected against undue fire hazards, health hazards and general safety hazards due mainly to poor workmanship and human Codes also benefit residents of a city by providing lower insurance rates on homes in helping to keep property evaluations in their proper perspective.

Building permits are required in order to ensure that the codes are adhered to. Permit fees are required in order that the burden not be placed soley on the taxpayer since the program directly benefits the citizens using the service.

The Department of Neighborhood is located on the top floor of the City Hall; they can be reached at 665-8483.

Roberts accepts elevator bid

BY CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

MIAMI - Contractor Sam Smith admitted straight out that he was in hot water with the First Christian Church after a 1983 flood, but Roberts County Commissioners still had faith and accepted his bid to install an elevator in the courthouse.

At the regular meeting Monday, the Roberts County Commissioner's Court approved the lowest and best bid of $68,000. submitted by Sam J. Smith Construction of Amarillo, to install an elevator in the three-story courthouse. Commissioners opened bids at a special meeting March 7, but waited until their Monday meeting to award the bids. Architect Pat Tunnell of Amarillo, who made plans for the elevator, used this period to compare the bids and the specifications

The elevator is not the first project the contractor has done in Miami. He also did some work in the basement of the First Christian Church, However, a flash flood two years ago damaged some of Smith's work when someone apparently left a church door open.

'The church had some flood damage, but the insurance has never settled," Smith told the commissioners. "The insurance company had a hard time figuring who was at fault."

Smith told the commissioners they could expect a wait of 14 weeks before the elevator is delivered plus eight weeks to install the elevator.

Commissioners bought the elevator last month from Dover Elevator Co. of Midland for $30,000. Smith's firm would provide the labor to install the elevator and a wheelchair ramp from the parking lot to the basement. This falls within Tunnell's estimate of "The elevator would have to be complete before the construction can be finished." Smith said.

The county must install an elevator to comply with federal regulations requiring access to handicapped people. The elevator will go from the library in the basement, through the county tax appraiser's office and end at what is now a ladies' rest room on the third floor

DAILY RECORD U.S., Soviets resume weapons control talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) -The United States and the Soviet Union made a fresh start Tuesday on nuclear weapons control, with Soviet negotiators operating from instructions approved by their new leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Signaling conciliation, Victor P. Karpov, head of the Soviet delegation, said if both sides wanted an accord, "You can do that on the kitchen floor, here or somewhere else.

The opening session, which lasted about two hours and 40 minutes, was held up for 12 minutes while the three American negotiators signed a book of condolences to mark the death of Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko on Sunday. Today's session at the Soviet mission marked the resumption of superpower arms talks following a 15-month lapse.

On the eve of the talks, Gorbachev, who became Communist Party general secretary on Monday following the death of Chernenko, urged Washington to join Moscow in reducing nuclear weapons stocks and preventing space from becoming an atomic battleground.

Vice President George Bush, departing Geneva for Chernenko's funeral, told reporters: "All mankind desires peace. Today, at this hour, those hopes focus on the commencement of arms control talks here in Geneva." Bush was in the Swiss city for a conference on

While waiting for the Americans,

Karpov told reporters that Gorbachev had presided over the meeting of the Politburo that approved his instructions last Thursday. "I will adhere to them, you can be sure of that," Karpov told reporters in an unusually lengthy interview He said there was no need to return home after Chernenko's funeral on Wednesday because there would be "no change" in the instructions on space and nuclear

"We should start now and negotiate as long as we are here to understand each other's positions," he said.

It was the first meeting between the veteran Soviet arms negotiator and Max M. Kampelman.

Roberts County learns jail costs may be considerable

By CATHY SPAULDING STAFF WRITER

MIAMI - Roberts County Commissioners discovered Monday that bringing the county jail up to state standards may cost more than what they expected.

Actually it's not a jail, it's a 72-hour holding area, said Roberts County Sheriff Eddie Brines. Because it is small, the county can keep prisoners only for 72 hours. Those jailed longer are sent to other counties.

Last year, the state ordered the county to bring this holding area up to state jail standards. According to Brines, the state wants the county to provide a booking room and a separate kitchen. The jail is now located in the back of the garage where the city-county fire trucks are kept. The sheriff's office takes up the first two rooms in the city - county office building.

Brines said the jail will still be classified as a 72-hour holding facility. He said his office has a microwave oven and an ice box for a kitchen and the state asks that the food preparation be done in a separate room. He added that the county will add a cell to the jail. although the state does not require it to do so.

Architect Pat Tunnell of Amarillo showed the commissioners two drawings of possible jail layouts. In both blueprints, the city offices, which are located in the back of the city-county building, will stay where they are. The city could even gain an extra office where the sheriff is now. Two restrooms located in the back of the building would be remodeled to accomodate handicapped people.

Tunnell's plan A leaves the two jail cells where they are now and moves the sheriff's office to an addition adjoining the present building. The addition would include an office for Brines, a dispatcher's room, waiting area, a separate cell, a waiting area, a booking room and a visiting area. This 2,340 square foot version would cost about $231,563, about $99 per square foot.

Plan B is larger and less expensive, according to Tunnell. It would put the fire department in an adjoining building and put the sheriff and jail where the fire trucks are now. This plan would feature the dispatcher's office, sheriff's office, booking room, kitchen, storage area and would cost about $198,827 for 2,556 square feet: about $77 per square feet.

Precinct 2 commissioner Ronnie Gill had doubts about the high costs of the two plans.

'We need to look at all the possibilities before we spend that kind of money," he said.

Precinct 3 commissioner Don Morrison asked "how much does this have to do with state and federal regulations?

Tunnell answered that the jail needs to adjust the cell block for access and security. "We have to make a decision this year or they'll shut us down,' County Judge Newton Cox warned.

Some commissioners asked why can't they move the city offices and extend the sheriff's office in that building. They reason that it could save money. Tunnell said he would draw up such a plan.

District Court Clerk Jackie Johnson reminded the commissioners that residents vote in meeting room at the back of the building and that it takes at least six months to go through all the federal government channels to move the voting booths.

"It can be done," she said. "But it would take a year and a half to get final clearance.

She added that the voting booths can be moved to another part of the building without having to go through the government red tape. Commissioners discussed moving the fire trucks elswhere during elections so that children accompanying their voting parents will not climb on them.

Senate delays school board's confirmation

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has signaled the State Board of Education that it is unhappy with the board's no-pass, no-play rule for extracurricular activities but the House response is uncertain.

Sen. Bob Glasgow said "hearsay" was that the House would adopt a resolution similar to a Senate resolution that directed the board to change the rule The rule states that if a student fails a single course, he or she is ineligible for extracurricular activities, such as sports, for six weeks. The Senate on Thursday said it wanted a weekly review so that eligibility could be quickly restored once a student raised a grade to 70 or above. The Board of Education said Saturday it would wait and see what the House did, and Speaker Gib Lewis stated Monday, "Let's just say I think the 70 and above pass rule is a good provision of the Lewis commented after the Senate voted 20-11 Monday to postpone for one week the confirmation of members of the Board of Education.

Sen. Ed Howard, who asked for the delay, said, "It wasn't a big thing," but he added that "maybe the fact" that Gov. Mark White's appointments to the board "didn't just go flying out of here this morning will let them (board members) know there may be a little concern on the part of some

Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, described the Senate action postponing confirmation as Sports and band and all those clubs are nice things for kids to be able to do but it is not the purpose of the educational system," said Parmer. "We sent exactly the wrong signal by backing down and passing that resolution the other day.

Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said he thought the no-pass, no-play provision "is abusive on children. I think it's punitive.

"Even when we put people in the Youth Council (facilities), we have provisions where they get good time, pardon and parole, and they can work themselves out. We passed an education law where regardless of what a kid does he can't redeem himself in any way, and he's just punished for six

'When you get into the trauma that's been created by this bill, I think it merits some immediate action," said Glasgow. "A high school superintendent told me last week that he thought some kids in his school district were actually suicidal" because of pressure brought on by the

Asked if White should indicate to the board that it should change the rule, Glasgow said "anybody that's running for election next year, I think, needs to be concerned with House Bill 72, because that is the biggest issue I've seen since we tried to tax food

Actually, the Senate voted 15-14 in 1969 to place food under the state sales tax, but such a statewide storm of protest was raised that the House defeated the proposal 147-0

White has said he supports the no-pass, no-play rule, but he added that three weeks of ineligibility might be enough.

"Some have suggested as little as a week. That may be too short," White said last week. "That doesn't give the incentive that I think we need. Three weeks might be a better one. Glasgow was asked if the confirmation of board members would be endangered if the board refused to go along with legislative directions to change the rule, and he replied: "I'm obviously not going to speak for members of the Senate, but it would cause me some problems

Lewis said, "I think the whole House knows my stand and that is opposition to any change in House Bill 72 that has not had the blessing of the education

No plans to block execution

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) -An attorney for a convicted killer will not try to block his client's execution, scheduled after midnight tonight, a spokeswoman for the lawyer said.

Attorney Peter Torres will comply with a request by convict Stephen Peter Morin's request that no motions be filed to stop the execution, Elonda Navarro, a spokeswoman for Torres, said

'There will be no legal action taken to get a stay," Ms. Navarro said

Torres was unavailable for comment.

Morin, 37, is scheduled to die by poisonous injection between midnight and dawn Wednesday for the December 1981 murder of Carrie Marie Scott, 21, of San Antonio. The conviction was upheld in an automatic appeal to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, but the convicted killer stopped any further appeal.

State District Judge David Berchelmann says that when Morin appeared before him last month at a hearing to set the execution date, "He said verbally, he told me, 'I don't want anybody to do anything on my behalf. I want to die on the date you set for me."

Morin followed up the court appearance with a letter to Berchelmann two weeks ago 'specifically pointing out he wanted all his attorneys and all work on his behalf to cease and desist," the judge said.

If the execution is carried out,

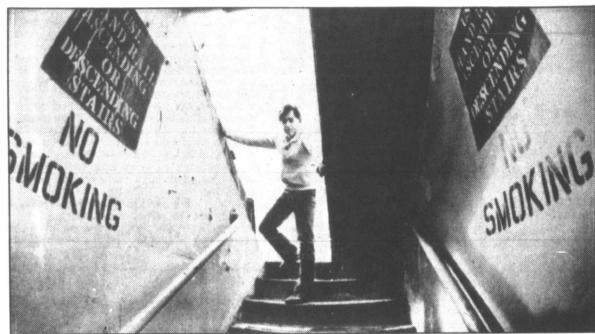

Morin will become the second Texas inmate to be put to death this year and the sixth since the state resumed executions in 1982.

Carrie Scott's killing outside Maggie's Restaurant in San Antonio in December 1981 drew so much publicity that Morin's trial had to be moved 300 miles away to Beaumont.

Morin stunned prosecutors by becoming only the second person ever in Texas to plead guilty to a charge of capital murder.

Morin routinely has refused interviews from his cell on Death Row, his home since April 16, 1982. One of his attorneys, J. Keith Alaniz of San Antonio, said Morin has "made amends with his maker and whatever will happen will

As a result, your's truly, a city chick who has no idea of what sets a Hamp piggy apart from a Hamp sheep, must venture out to the Clyde Carruth Pavillion and try to figure out which animals I'm supposed to take a picture of. I'm used to it, though. I've been taking pictures of stock shows for about three years. My first encounter with pigs, cows and sheep was at the Logan County Free Fair in Guthrie, Okla. When my mother, and asked if I shouldn't start looking for a job more worthy of my I thought I knew a lot about sheep until then. Mr. Ram meets Miss Ewe and after the proper nuptials, they make lambs. They get shorn, who spent her formative years in Chicago, New York and Boston, found out what I was doing for the Guthrie paper, she nearly shreiked follow little girls to school and then they get eaten But my experience in Logan County taught me much more. I learned - and quickly forgot - the differences among the Hampshire, Shropshire, Suffolk and other breeds. I learned that sheep stick out their tongues when they baa and that they usually don't like judges poking around their hind quarters. It was an education of a lifetime. I also discovered what must be a tradition at stock shows. After months of getting their livestock ready, getting out of school and parading their pets in front of proud Mommys and Daddys, the winners don't seem to register any pleasure when they get their Grand Champion pictures made Almost all the winners pictures I've taken have the same theme: "Hi. My name is Trampas Wayne Anderson of the Logan County 4-H Club. This is my sheep and I will not smile.

The only three Grand Champion winners who have ever smiled for me without being asked, implored or threatened were a youngster from McLean and two guys from Pampa. They all showed pigs. Why the pig people seem happier than the sheep people, I don't know. Maybe they're relieved after all the effort they have to go through in showing their animals. With sheep and cows, all that's apparently needed is to get a good hold on the animal (or on the harness), keep the beast under control and the rest is easy as pot pie. Pigs, however, are allowed to scurry about the arena like a child at a Christmas toy sale or a Pampa Fine Arts patron at Chatauqua. The owners must follow their entries about the arena, backs bent, swattting the swine with long sticks. As they do this, they must keep an eye on the judge to make sure he sees them at their best. My prejudice may be showing, but I like Oklahoma stock shows better than Texas stock shows. In Oklahoma, the 4-Hers and FFA folks show a larger variety of animals, ranging from rabbits to poultry to dairy goats. The stock shows there are also usually part of a county fair, which means what I can look at all the clothing, craft and food (especially food) booths while I wait for the results. I can ride the midway rides while the judges are making their preliminary

I may not yet have cow hide in my blood, but I'm learning. I even know what sets a Hampshire pig apart from a Hampshire

Hart's proposal ridiculous idea

EDITOR'S NOTE—A previously published editorial was inadvertently used in this space under the above headline Monday. The following is really what we think about a proposal by Sen. Gary Hart.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado wants the federal government to study the idea of a "national service." with young adults serving a manadatory one or two years either in the military or a civilian government program. The senator's idea rests on a faulty premise and would prove to be an expensive disservice to the country. Instead of Orwell's Big Brother, we would have Hart's

To begin his plan. Hart wants Congress to spend $3.1 million studying the concept of a universal draft. Hart envisions "national service" for every 18-year-old American who meets "reasonable standards physically and mentally

The problems with this scheme are many, both moral and practical

The program would be terribly expensive. With about 3 million Americans reaching the age of 18 every year and federal speding approaching $1 trillion a year, we cannot afford to put all these young people on the government payroll. If we assume that Uncle Sam would spend just $15,000 a year on each, the total cost would be $45 billion. This amount would increase the deficit by about a fourth of what it is now

And there would be a hidden cost. A young adult who performed "national service" duties while 19, would then graduate from college a year later. Instead of working and paving taxes at age 23, he or she would still be going to college, most likely at the expense of taxpayers.

Hart's plan has a deeper flaw, however. It rests on the totally false assumption that only Americans in the military or in programs such as the Peace Corpts are serving the nation.

The small business man who employs other people and provides a useful product or service is without question serving his country. So are parents who raise their children to be responsible citizens. So is anyone who earns an honest living.

The beauty of America's relatively free society is that each of us contributes to the general welfare as we pursue personal dreams. For an individual to prosper in the free market, he must offer goods and services wanted by others, and in doing so, he enchances the well-being of those in his community as he improves his own lot.

The notion of a universal and compulsory "national service" holds special appeal to those who want a centralized authority to dictate how people use their lives. Not content with the decentralized workings of free individuals making voluntary choices, they want to mobilize an "army" to tackle the projects they deem

The elements of coercion run deeply through Hart's proposal. As one young woman responded. "You can't force people to be patriotic.

Tip plays political games congressman from the Sixth District of Texas had nothing better to do with his time. The distraction at hand is a matter of principle - the principle of no taxation - without - representation, the principle of thou - shalt - not - steal - elections.

This is why Rep. Joe Barton of Ennis, Texas, busies himself in behalf of a 29 - year - old Indiana attorney, Rick McIntyre. So do lots of others - in Congress and out - busy themselves in McIntyre's cause. Maybe the cause will yet get somewhere.

McIntyre, a Republican, defeated one - term incumbent Democratic Congressman Francis X. McCloskey in the November 6, 1984, elections. It was a narrow victory - 34 votes. There was understandably a recount. McIntyre this time came out 418 votes ahead. Indiana's secretary of state certified him the winner.

But what happened when McIntyre went to Washington? The U.S. House of Representatives told him please to wait in the lobby. The House's Democratic majority wanted to do some counting of its own. The job won't be finished before late April. McCloskey, the certified loser, is out. Therefore the 8th District of Indiana, which includes Evansville and part of the university city of Bloomington, has no congressman, no representation, no voice in the nation's affairs. Sorry about that, folks, that's politics - at its most degrading.

Nothing quite like the McIntyre affair has ever been seen in Washington, perhaps in any democratic venue. Never has a certified winner been denied his seat in Congress, whether pending

Among those wroth about it is Congressman Barton, a mover and shaker in the growing movement to seat McIntyre. "It really radicalizes someone like me," says Barton, "who goes to Congress believing it's going to take bipartisan action to solve the deficit problem and this is the first thing they (the Democrats) do.

Interestingly enough, McCloskey hasn't even challenged the election under the Federal Contested Elections Act. No fraud is alleged Indeed, as McIntyre's supporters point out, if all ballots questioned in the recount were thrown out, McIntyre STILL would win. Likewise he would win if all ballots contested were disallowed.

McIntyre has filed suit against Mr. Speaker Tip O'Neill (D. - Mass.) and the Democrats who voted not to seat him. Republican congressmen speak out on the matter whenever possible. Republican offices sport posters with an empty chair and the message "Seat McIntyre" superimposed on the text of the Constitution. The Washington Post. seldom mistaken for a Republican rag, says flatly: "Mr. McIntyre ought to be seated.

There plainly are bigger things than the McIntyre case going on in the world - the budget, the farm crisis, tax simplification, Nicaragua. The case matters for two reasons - first, as a question of justice; second, as indicative of the House Democratic party's ever more petulant,

His corpulence - the speaker of the House - surveys the changed mood of America. Disbelief wars inside his mind with disgust. The speaker misses the good old days, when to propose a spending program was to pass it. The speaker's ancient eyes soften with nostalgia. Would that the old days might come again!

Meanwhile, darned if the speaker is going to lift a finger to help Ronald Reagan or any other so and - soing Republican. Far rather had he stick out a foot to trip them all. The rest of the Democratic leadership, if otherwise persuaded, seldom shows it.

Such an attitude goes far to explain why the House will not now seat Rick McIntyre - any more than (so far) it will cooperate with Reagan to reduce the deficit or to protect U.S. interests in Central America, or calmly to resolve the farm

The Democratic House leaders are like unto the post - revolutionary French Bourbons: They have forgotten nothing and learned nothing. The same is less true of the rank and file. Younger congressmen like Dick Gephardt of Missouri and Jim Jones of Oklahoma, though they still must cooperate with the leadership, are broader and more flexible in their dealings with Republicans. Ironically, therefore, they post a larger long term danger to Republicans than does the obstructionist Tip. Gephardt and Jones sense that the party must move back to the middle; that it must become part of the solution, not just part of the problem.

For now, though, it's Tip who leads. "Leads," did I say? Sticks out his tongue, is more like it. Shakes his fist, drags his heels, and wastes the Republic's valuable time playing political games. Rick McIntyre, if ever he gets in, can't do other than improve the moral tone of the House of Tip.

What it's like with Johnny

Since I returned from my recent appearance on "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson, people have been asking me a lot of questions.

It is Carson's popularity, I suppose, that arouses such interest, so I thought what I should do is answer as many questions as I can in this space and then take a few days off to recover from the ordeal of visiting Los Angeles and its surrounding weirdness.

Let us begin: What is Johnny Carson like?

Very nice, I think. I did not meet him before the show and afterwards he went to his dressing room and did not invite me over to his house for

He was very cordial during the interview, however, and when we broke for commercials, we made small talk. He wears a lot of makeup, incidentally.

Were you nervous?

My mouth was dry, my hands were shaking, and when the curtain opened, I considered bolting and running for the back door. The first person I saw was Tommy Newsome, the band leader, and he smiled and waved at me and that made me feel a lot more comfortable

Did you have your own dressing room? Yes, and there was a little tag with my name on it on the front door which I brought home as a It was a small room, but it was comfortable, and

Did you see Carson's car?

I saw a space with his name on it outside the studio and there was a new Corvette parked there. Who was the strange woman on just before you?

Her name is Anita Morris, and she acts and sings and dances. Her lights are on, but I'm not sure if there is anyone home. You rarely wear socks at home. Why did you wear them on "The Tonight Show?"

I asked the lady who booked me if I had to wear socks and she said she would appreciate it if I did because otherwise I would look too preppie. I didn't want to offend anybody, so I wore socks. Is Ed McMahon as friendly as he seems?

The truth about Nicaragua's regime

By Don Graff

President Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz are not telling Americans the truth about Nicara-

In their hard-sell campaign to shake out of Congress another $14 million in aid for the rebel "contras," they have indicted the Sandinista regime as - in the president's rhetor-"totalitarian, brutal, cruel."

The facts, however, challenge them on every point. True, Sandinista Nicaragua is a controlled society. The government's authority reaches everywhere, into every neighborhood through block committees that make it their business to know everything about everybody. The press is censored.

True, the Sandinistas have a heavy hand. Thousands of Indians on the remote Atlantic coast have been uprooted from their homes along the sensitive Honduran border and relocated deeper in the interior. Many have been killed - "massacred" in some versions.

And true, the country is an armed camp. Men from 18 to 30 are subject to an unpopular draft. The regular army numbers more than 60,000, with thousands more in militia units and the reserves. They are equipped with Soviet arms, including tanks. The military gets 40 percent of the government budget. But on the other side of the balance sheet, the Sandinistas have made some notable advances in a country that, until they seized power almost five years ago, had long been one of the hemisphere's most backward and misgoverned. The illiteracy rate has been reduced from one of the highest, at 50 percent, to one of the lowest, at 12 percent. Health care is now available to much of the population, especially in rural areas, for the first time in the country's history.

Land reform has benefited thousands of peasants who had been little more than serfs. Most of the land expropriated had belonged to the deposed Somozas, who by some estimates owned up to 40 percent of the country's arable acreage, and to close

Apart from their harsh treatment of the Atlantic Indians, the Sandinistas have a much better record on human rights than most of their Central American neighbors. In a current Americas Watch report, which notes a sharp decline in abuses since 1982, they compare favorably with the opposition contras.

An earlier Amnesty International report found instances of ill treatment of prisoners, but noted that complaints in most cases "have been followed by internal military and police disiplinary hearings, as well as public hearings by criminal courts and military court martials against... personnel responsible." A number have been jailed, for terms up to 30 years. That doesn't happen in El

The economy is mixed, with 60 percent or more in private hands, although owners are hampered by government controls and are wary of Sandinista intentions.

The Sandinista leadership is not monolithic. It includes hard-liners who take their Marxism very seriously and a pragmatic group inclined to be more flexible in dealing with the internal opposition and with the United States.

Doubling of college tuition in sight for Texas students

AUSTIN (AP) — The doubling of tuition for state colleges and universities drew closer to reality after a House committee approved the bill that could increase the fees as early as this autumn.

as early as this autumn.
The House Higher Education Committee on Monday approved a bill introduced by Rep Wilhelmina Delco which calls for a tuition hike from $4 to $8 per semester hour in 1985-86, to $12 in 1986-87. The bill would provide for $2 annual increases for four years thereafter.

Mrs. Delco's proposal also would increase tuition for out-of-state, foreign, medical and dental students enrolled in state-supported institutions.

"This sets a policy for tuition beyond financial constraints," said Mrs. Delco, D-Austin, chairman of the committee. If made into law, the bill would add $155 million to state revenues.

Student groups from the University of Texas at Austin, Texas A&M University, University of Houston and Texas Southern en d as ts endorsed Mrs. Delco's bill over one introduced by Rep. Gary Thompson, D-Abilene.

Thompson's bill proposes to raise tuition so it would equal 15 percent of the total cost of education. His bill also would set aside 15 percent of the revenues raised through the increase for scholarships.

The College Coordinating Board would determine the cost of education and subsequently the cost of tuition.

Meg Brooks, director of the Texas Student Lobby at UT, said her group supports Mrs. Delco's bill because it sets a fixed tuition rate, keeps tuition increases under the Legislature and contains substantial financial aid provisions.

"(Mrs.) Delco's bill doesn't place an unfair burden on students," said Chris Gavras, a member of the Legislative Study Group at Texas A&M.

Christopher Oliver, a student at Texas Southern University, said 89 percent of his school's students depend on financial assistance and therefore would support Mrs. Delco's bill over Thompson's proposal, which was shelved.

Mrs. Delco's bill would set aside 25 percent of all the revenues raised through the tuition increase for need-based scholarships. Of the 25 percent, 5 percent is earmarked for emergency loans, she said.

For out-of-state and foreign students, tuition would increase 15 times to $120 per semester hour in 1985 and $180 in 1986. After 1986 the cost would increase so these students would be paying 75 percent of the total cost, Mrs. Delco said.

"The biggest brunt of the cost ought to go to people who aren't taxpayers of Texas," Mrs. Delco said.

Under Mrs. Delco's bill, tuition for dental and medical students would also double from its current $400 to $800 per semester. Students of osteopathic medicine would watch their tuition go to $2,400 in 1985 and $3,600 in 1986.

Police say mail carrier's body found in remote area

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP)

— Slain mail carrier Debora Sue Schatz's body was found in a field near the spot where a wrecker driver pulled David Port's car out of mud, a police officer has testified in district court.

The testimony from Houston policeman L.D. Garretson came Monday in the murder trial of Port, 18, charged with killing Ms. Schatz, 23.

The woman was shot to death June 7, 1984, while she was delivering mail in the fashionable Houston neighborhood where Port lives with his family.

The case drew nationwide publicity when Port's father and stepmother refused to testify before a grand jury.

Both were jailed on contempt of court charges while their son remained free on bond.

Neither parent has been subpoenaed to testify and neither has appeared in court during the trial, now in its third week.

Garretson said authorities found Ms. Schatz's body in a clump of trees in a field northwest of Houston.

Police were called to the scene by wrecker driver Raymond Pigg, who testified earlier he helped Port pull his mired car out of mud in the same field.

Garretson said Ms. Schatz's blouse and brassiere were pulled up under her armpits and her trousers were unzipped.

The officer said he found a mail carrier's bag, a vinyl air mattress and a leather pouch near the body.

The prosecution offered the items into evidence in court Monday, along with a muddy jack and tire

In earlier testimony, Pigg said he and his son were at a gas station the morning of June 8 when they were approached by Port.

"He asked me could I help him.
He said he was stuck down the road," he said.

On the way to the car, Port said his vehicle wasn't running properly and he had pulled off the road and it had gotten stuck, Pigg said Pigg said he pulled Port's car out of the mud and then drove off.

"I told my son it just doesn't seem right. He had just pulled off the road too far for the car to be just broke down," Pigg said.

cowboys wearing their hats indoors: In more genteel times, restaurants had coatrooms, which had proper spaces for hats and someone to watch them and prevent their being

Nowadays, if a restaurant has a coatroom at all, it is "at the customer's risk" and has no place even to hang a hat. Often not even a peg exists, necessitating either wearing the hat during meals or putting it on the seat of an adjacent chair, subject to being slopped on by careless waiters, or sat upon by incoming customers!

I sometimes hang my hat on any convenient projection from the wall, be it steer horns, false beams or a bookcase. In rowdier places, I have been known to take out a knife, stick it in a wall plank and hang my hat thereupon.

Lucky (and rare) is the home nowadays that has a hall closet, much less one with room for anything but a ski cap. Throwing the coats on the bed in the spare bedroom often results in coats landing atop a hat and crushing it-sometimes the coats even have people still in them!

WILLIAM D., DEER PARK, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Your column about the cowboy hat reminded me of a story that circulated in the Houston area about the former Houston Oilers coach, Bum Phillips, now coach of the New Orleans Saints.

Bum always wore his 10-gallon hat, which made him easily identifiable on the sidelines at football games. However, he never wore his hat when the Oilers played at home in the Astrodome.

A reporter once asked Bum why he never wore his cowboy hat at a home game. As the story goes, he replied, "My mama taught me that a gentleman always removes his hat when he enters a home, and the Astrodome is home to me MARCIA B., TEXAN

Come to think of it, John Wayne always took his hat off in the presence of a lady, and so did Hopalong Cassidy, Gary Cooper and George Montgomery.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps I can provide a reasonable explanation for why cowboys wear their hats indoors. Those hats are so big, there is no place to put them. Also, each brim is shaped individually by the owner according to his personal taste. A real cowboy bends the brim of his hat to suit himself, and when he removes it, he always places it upside down on the crown with nothing touching it to keep the brim from being bent out of shape.

AFS students to arrive here Area foreign exchange students will be guests in Pampa homes Thursday through Saturday while they attend the American Field

Service (AFS) Pampa weekend

hosted by the local AFS chapter.

The students' activities include attending classes at Pampa High with their host brother or sister on Friday, presenting a program at the noon Kiwanis Club, and attending the St. Patrick's Day AFS dance Friday evening at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Early Saturday the group will be the guests at a brunch at the Wallace Birkes home, followed by a noon barbecue at the Junior Livestock Show, Saturday afternoon they will visit the White Deer Lands Museum and the Justin Wells gallery show. The Royal Ballet of Flanders will be Saturday evening entertainment. The students will return to their area homes on Sunday at noon.

AFS has hosted more than 32 students to Pampa High School since its organization in Pampa in 1950. The local chapter is one of more than 3,400 across the U.S. which coordinates exchange programs for students from 60 nations as a volunteer ambulance corps that served in both World War I and World War II. After the war, the drivers felt there was a need to strengthen the bond among nations to promote peace, and the scholarship program was begun. Today, as many U.S. students go abroad as come to this nation under the auspices of this largest and oldest international high school exchange program.

AFS was first established in 1914

The Pampa AFS student studying abroad this year is Amy Radcliff. She returns to Pampa this month. The AFS student in Pampa is Carmen Casado of Linares, Spain. She lives with the Gary Hokit family. Also attending Pampa High School is Anita Varvik from Trondheim, Norway, with the American Intercultural Student Exchange. Anita lives with the John Norris family. Kathy Thurkettle of Australia is the latest arrival. She is the Rotary exchange student living with the John Sparkman family.

Art makes its way to the floor

By BARBARA MAYER AP Newsfeatures

When was the last time a rug made you laugh? For most people, the answer would be "never." But those who have seen the "For the Floor" exhibition at the American Craft Museum in New York might come up with a different reply

The variety of funny, beautiful, serious, colorful and conceptually interesting rugs created by 48 international craftsmen in this show is likely to cause stronger than - usual reactions to floor coverings.

After its run in New York is over this spring, the exhibition will circulate to 10 American cities for two years, according to Paul Smith, director of the museum. Except for its first stop in Tacoma, Wash., a definitive list of cities has not yet been completed, he added.

Local DAR chapter meets

Las Pampas chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) met recently in the home of Mrs. J.R. Spearman.

The National Defense Report was given by Mrs. Jeff Anderson prompting a discussion on the Genocide Convention which is expected to come up soon for a vote in the U.S. Senate.
A program, "We Honor the American Flag" was presented by Mrs. Spearman. On display was a flag owned by Mrs. Spearman which had been flown over the nation's capitol. Rules for displaying the flag were read and discussed. Hostesses were Mrs. Spearman and Mrs. L.A. Barns.

Aside from their visual power, another difference between handmade and mass - produced rugs which surfaced at the show is jut how much trouble some people are willing to go to for art.

Take Carolyn S. Bowler, for example. Ms. Bowler, of Moscow, Idaho, made the wool felting for her black and white rug, which comes with 10 brightly colored felt balls to roll about and play with on the rug or to use as pillows while lounging. She dyed the balls herself. She also raised and sheared the sheep that furnished the wool. The rug's black and white pattern was inspired by the view from her window of grazing sheep,

Gloria Crouse of Olympia, Wash., invested three months of full - time effort to complete her rug. It is made with four different techniques. Weaving, hooking, an application of paint to some of the surface, and applique were employed to create the variety of surface textures which together make the rug a kind of landscape in Commercial rug designs usually emphasize repetitive patterns which are easily duplicated in the manufacturing process. In handmade rugs, variety is the rule. An artist may incorporate a number of themes in a rug. The rug may be woven and hooked and have painted images, each method from a different tradition. A design source might be a Navajo blanket, but the colors selected could be the pastels associated with an oriental kilim.

These choices are merged into a completed work through the vision of the artist. It is this originality which makes for visually exciting work as onlookers discover for themselves the many themes brought together by the artist.

While a major goal of the exhibition is to give pleasure to those who see the work, another purpose is to correct a neglect of the floor in fiber art recently, said Smith. He said handmade paper, wearable art and wall hangings all different aspects of fiber art have been illustrated in exhibitions recently, while the floor has been forgotten. That's why one requirement for works in this exhibition was that they had to be primarily for use on the floor.

Some of the rugs on display could be reproduced commercially, according to Smith, who hopes that the artists will benefit through contacts with carpet manufacturers who have been invited to see the exhibition. Consumers may also recognize the rugs as alternatives to the standard mass-produced variety. However, a number of artists at the show agreed it is often difficult for the general public to find original rugs such as these.

Retail carpet and rug outlets don't generally carry one - of - a kind rugs. Fiber artists producing them tend to work primarily on commission. Finding customers is a hit - or - miss thing for them.

However, one recourse for weavers capable of and interested in making rugs is local craft galleries found all over the country. In some areas, local arts councils maintain registries of crafts artists.

Jennifer Raphael, a weaver in New York, said weavers tended to establish networks. "If you find one weaver, chances are good that one can help you find others," she

Q. - I plan to use hardboard panels for the walls of an attic I will be finishing into two rooms. I have never used hardboard, but I have worked with plywood, also for wall paneling. I understand there are some things I should watch out for. Can you give me some advice.?

A. - There should be a solid support behind every joint, such as a stud or furring strip. Hardboard can be fastened with nails, screws, adhesive or almost any kind of fastener, but should never be attached too close to the edges. Allow from a quarter of an inch to half an inch from the edges. Always nail the center of the panel first, then the edges. When cutting hardboard with a saw, keep the face side up. Standard hardboard should be used indoors, although not where there are high humidity conditions. Tempered hardboard can be used for places where there is moisture, while heavy duty tempered hardboard is the most resistant to water and the strongest. -Q. - I want to make a round table that will accommodate six persons. I have measured the diameter of some tables in furniture stores and find that those which presumably seat six have differences of as much as 6 inches in the diameter. Is there some standard size or can one use one's judgement? A. — The diameters of tables for six run from 46 to 52 inches. Naturally, the larger the table, the more room there is at dining time. If space permits, use the larger size, even larger than 52 inches if possible. You can always seat an extra person or two, if necessary, but you can't find extra room where there is none. That's why there are tables which open up to receive inserts or leaves. -

Q. - We have an old house with plaster walls. I recently did some patching on a kitchen wall, using a spackling compound to make the repairs. A pipe burst a few days after the repair job and sent water over one of the walls. It dried out very well except where the patches were. They seem to be a different color than the rest of the wall, kind of damp-looking even though dry to the touch. Before I repatch those spots, I want to know whether it is all right to use spackling compound again?

A. — Yes, unless you are expecting another broken pipe. Most spackling compounds are not waterproof and, since they are used on interior walls, do not need to be. But if you want to play it safe - in case there is more water trouble - make sure the compound you buy specifically says it can be used either indoors or outdoors.

Texas prisons are near emergency overcrowding level.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) -The state's prisons may approach emergency overcrowding levels within a few weeks, a Texas Department of Corrections official Prison officials disclosed during a state prison board meeting Monday that the TDC's population is just 399 inmates short of 94 percent of capacity. The department is required to notify Gov. Mark White at 94 percent that TDC is near an emergency overcrowding situation.

Texas prison capacity is 40,464. TDC facilities currently house 37,637 inmates.

Carl Jeffries, assistant director for treatment and classification, said he expected the 95 percent level to be reached in two to four

"I don't think we've ever been this close before," Jeffries said. At 95 percent, according to the prison management act of 1983, parole hearing dates and release dates would be advanced by 30 days, with the early releases intended to relieve overcrowding. Jeffries insisted that any inmates granted early release would not pose a danger. "We're not talking about putting anyone on the streets who would not be out anyway," he said.

Jeffries blamed the increase on a more conservative parole board, more convicts coming in from the county courts and tougher sentences handed down by judges.

Last week, for example, 664 inmates went into the prison system which has been averaging 550 a week. About 300 were released. "Our intake is over the outgo by 100 to 150 a week," Jeffries said.

lack of prison personnel to handle the increased numbers of inmates. Prison overcrowding is the only

Jeffries said the problem is a issue remaining in a long-standing lawsuit filed against the corrections department. In 1981, a federal judge ruled that the prison system's treatment of inmates was unconstitutional and recommended remedies.

Prison board chairman Robert Gunn on Monday warned that failiure to settle the overcrowding issued could could result in a court-ordered $1 billion construction program that also could triple the corrections department budget.
"It certainly behooves us to do everything in our power to reach a negotiated settlement," Gunn said. The board chairman said the agreement must come before the court hears the case in June.

inform the Railroad Commission . .

"The essential fact, which no one has refuted successfully, is that the gas rights in all this acreage are dedicated to interstate commerce: and this dedication includes all gas except casinghead gas as previously defined," she states. (FERC, Pgs. 45-46)

In her ruling, though, she excluded two operators - Meyer Farms and J. B. Watkins - because of inconclusive evidence that they had violated federal statutes. She recommended FERC should obtain further information on their operations.

She concludes her 47-page report, excluding appendices, by recommending "that the Commission order respondents, except Meyer Farms and J. B. Watkins, to cease immediately the violations of the federal statutes detailed in the preceding section of this decision, gather additional information as to these two respondents, and issue an order setting forth a procedural schedule for phase two of this proceeding promptly after the Commission's decision becomes administratively final." (FERC, Pg. 47)

According to reports from FERC's public affairs office, her decision goes before the commission Wednesday for consideration and the setting of punishment and penalities, if her recommendation is accepted.

issue not be settled, said prison officials could be held in contempt and be fined or jailed. The court could also order population limits or reductions, forcing some institutions closed and prisoners released.

The court could also appoint a receiver for the system who then could implement the billion dollar construction. "It's an enormous cost." he said.

Monday's prison board meeting also marked the final appearances for Harry Whittington, H. Bartell Zachry and Clifford Smith, who were replaced recently by White.

Smith complained in a prepared statement that the board "often was put in a negative light" and that department employees "have to withstand so much outside slander. "What disturbs me is that the public gets the idea that the board is responsible when on many occasions we did not have the facts," Smith said. "Even the governor has questioned the integrity of the board in public and with him not having all the facts."

Whittington said that "some state leaders in Austin" are critical of the federal court settlement and question prison system improvements.

"All of this gnashing of teeth. growling at the federal court and kick-the-convict-in-the-seat attitude throws more gasoline on the fire and delays the day of reckoning," he said. "If we continue with this stubborn resistance the federal courts will be running our prisons in a much more lavish fashion than our taxpayers will want."

House Speaker Gib Lewis, who has complained about the federal court's role in Texas prisons, said in Austin he did not think Whittington was talking about him.

"I don't think he is taking a shot at me. He didn't mention my name. There are a lot of elected officials over here," Lewis said when told of Whittington's remarks.

the leases; the independents have the oil rights. But the independents have been pumping gas from the oil wells under Texas Railroad Commission (RRC) regulations which classify a well as an oil well if no more than 100,000 Mcf. of gas is pumped for each barrel of oil recovered.

The gas-oil ratios used in assigning well classifications have significance. Under RRC rules, only one gas well is permitted per section or 640 acres; however, one oil well is permitted for every 10 acres, up to 64 in a section.

Dorchester, as sustained by Judge Murray, had claimed the independents' oil wells had been perforated into the brown dolomite formation - the stratum from which Dorchester is pumping its gas. Such widespread pumping of the natural gas was depleting its reserves, Dorchester alleged.

In an effort to prevent the judge's decision against them, the Panhandle Independent Producers Group (representing the independents) tried to prove FERC had no jurisdiction over the matter.

They noted leases and contracts separating the oil and gas rights had specifically excluded casinghead gas, defined as "gas indigenous to an oil stratum and produced from that stratum with oil," from the alloting of gas rights.

Referring to the various contracts by which the gas and oil rights were assigned, Judge Murray sustained the independents in their right to pump and sell casinghead gas.

PIPG presented several arguments claiming a lack of jurisdiction by FERC

It claimed the NGA does not apply to the production or gathering of natural gas; FERC thus "has no jurisdiction to decide, determine or regulate matters involving the physical activities, properties and facilities of the production of natural gas." (FERC, Pgs. 24-25)

The independents further alleged any NGA jurisdiction given FERC over the acts and practices of the independents had been removed under Section 601(a)(1)(B) of the NGPA once Section 103 category determinations had been assigned to their wells.

PIPG also contended FERC 'should not decide issues that involve the interpretation and construction of the Texas Natural Resources Code and the interpretation and application of the rules and regulations of the Railroad Commission," instead deferring to the state for settlement of the issues. (FERC, Pg. 25)

The independents also presented evidence that all their gas should be classified as casinghead gas not subject to the price controls. As cited in the previous articles, Judge Murray denied those arguments on the composition of the gas being produced.

On the PIPG's claims for exemption from federal jurisdiction, in her Findings section Judge Murray decided "in this proceeding the Commission is not attempting to regulate respondents' production activities but is investigating whether respondents violated and are violating federal statutes" under dedication and pricing regulations. (FERC, Pg. 35)

She further ruled, "I reject respondents' position because it would lead to the absurd result that the Commission is powerless to determine whether producers are violating Federal law that Congress determined the Commission alone should enforce." (FERC, Pg. 35)

She cites previous federal decisions upholding FERC's right to have jurisdiction in such matters.

Then she considers the PIPG's argument of jurisdiction by the RRC:

"It is necessary to consider next whether the Commission should defer to the Texas state courts and the Railroad Commission in deciding certain material questions or, alternatively, to refer them to a joint board under Section 17 of the NGA. "I reject both of these proposals because the issues involve the interpretation and application of federal statutes; and the alleged violations are ongoing, so that despite the number of participants, the complicated factural situations and extensive legal argument, the Commission's mandate is clear that a decision should be issued at the earliest possible date. (FERC, Pg. 35)

Judge Murray decided in her recommendation that most of the independents' gas production is not casinghead gas and thus comes under the federal rules of natural gas dedicated to interstate commerce. In doing so, however, she knocked out Dorchester's claims that "all natural gas" in the field is dedicated, instead excluding casinghead gas as previously mentioned.

She notes that natural gas from the field had been dedicated in interstate commerce because "on June 7, 1954, the date the Commission began regulating producer gas sales in interstate commerce, gas from this acreage was being delivered" in interstate markets. (FERC, Pg. 36) Citing previous rulings and decisions on dedication of gas, the judge defines the terms of dedication in ways the independents have since voiced as portending expanding federal intrusion into the oil and gas industries.

"The commencement of deliveries of natural gas in interstate commerce is the act which, standing alone, dedicates natural gas from those properties and makes that natural gas subject to the Commission's authority. .

'Dedication, coextensive with the obligation to continue service, attaches not to an individual sale or producer, but to the gas itself . . .

"Like the ancient covenant running with the land, the duty to continue to deliver and sell flows with the gas from the moment of first delivery down to the exhaustion of the reserve, or until the Commission, on appropriate terms, permits cessation of service " (FERC, Pg. 36)

The judge also notes, "The evidence is persuasive that many respondents received Section 103 (new gas) determination based on submissions showing no perforations in the brown dolomite

Two killed in four car bizarre crash

MIDLAND, Texas (AP) — A woman who had stopped to help people injured in a multi-car pileup was killed along with another man when a car plowed into a pack of vehicles that had crashed, authorities said.

Betty May Loper, 50, of Snyder and Roberto Rubio, 20, of Pecos were pronounced dead at the scene by Midland County peace justice Charlie Sprayberry, Department of Public Safety Communications Specialist Lloyd Christmas said

The bizarre four-car accident occurred on Interstate 20 west of Midland Sunday evening.

DPS reports said a 1970 Volkswagen being driven west on the interstate attempted a U-turn across the median to an eastbound lane, but was struck by a westbound 1979 Oldsmobile

The Oldsmobile was then struck by a westbound 1978 Ford pickup, according to reports.

When a fourth car slammed into the pileup, Mes. Loper, who had stopped to assist injured passengers, and Rubio, who had been a passenger in the Oldsmobile were both killed, authorities said.

College students invade South Padre Island

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — The population in this coastal community has increased by several thousand rowdy college students looking for fun and officials say that, for the most part, they are behaving themselves. Some 50,000 people began converging on this South Texas island last weekend, trading books for fun in the sun.

"The kids are behaving pretty good," a police dispatcher, who declined to give her name, said Monday. "They're not going to go out and kill each other

"They have a little too much to drink and fall out of cars. They're a little wild but they're not bad kids," she added.

The population in this Rio Grande Valley community normally is around 1,000, but during spring break, area hotels and condominiums are filled to

Most of the approximately 50,000 temporary residents this week are college and some high school students on spring break.

The police official said daily arrest figures are not available since many other agencies also are making arrests.

'We haven't made that many arrests." she said.

Authorities said that the majority of arrests would be for public intoxication, disorderly conduct, driving while intoxicated and speeding. Officers from different agencies will be working about 12 hours per day to keep order in the area, authorities have

On Sunday, about 35,000 swimsuit-clad partygoers journeyed to Isla Blanca Beach to hear Stevie Ray Vaughan and Double Trouble, Joe King Carrasco and the Crowns.

There was some bottle- and beer can-throwing incidents, but no major injuries were reported.

Traffic was snarled for several hours after the concert as traffic was backed up on the causeway both going to and leaving South Padre Island.

Overvalued dollar hurts American worker

WASHINGTON (AP) - The overvalued dollar has cost the United States nearly 2 million jobs because of a resulting flood of foreign imports, a new study shows.

The study, scheduled for release today at a hearing of the congressional Joint Economic Subcommittee on Economic Goals, concludes the United States must reduce the federal budget deficit in order to make the nation more competitive in world markets.

An overvalued dollar makes foreign goods less expensive in this country and makes U.S. goods more expensive overseas. "Our export sales are proximately 15 percent lower and our imports 15 percent higher than would have been the case with a normal dollar value," the report dollar since 1980 has cost 2 million jobs - 1.5 million in manufacturing alone - and cut national output by 4 percent," said the study prepared for the subcommittee by Data Resources Inc., an economic research firm based in Lexington, Mass.

The report was released by the subcommittee's vice chairman, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who said, "Our trade policy is off the track, and the dollar's devastation is widespread.'

The &S. trade deficit last year was more than $120 billion, including $79 billion in the manufacturing sector.

The report says the overvalued dollar has cost 144,000 jobs California; 104,000 in New York; 97,000 in North Carolina: 92,000 in Pennsylvania; 75,000 in Michigan; 73.000 in Ohio; 69,000 in Texas and 57,000 in Illinois

The dollar has risen in value because of high interest rates, which stem from ballooning budget deficits, the report says.

The study proposes reducing the deficit by limiting growth in entitlement programs such as Social Security. The report also suggests reducing indexing of the personal income tax and limiting defense spending in areas such as suggestions include raising dollar to a competitive value

personal income taxes

The study advises against an increase in business taxes, saying that would tend to reduce formation of capital.

The study says that "to put the nation back on its optimal growth path, domestic fiscal policies must be carefully adjusted to bring down the cost of funds in the United States, thereby enhancing fixed retirement benefits. Other investment and returning the Ferry captain has best of both; day at sea, home at night

By MAX RIZLEY JR. The Galveston Daily News GALVESTON, Texas (AP) Theron Varvil is convinced he has the best of both worlds.

'Whitey," as his friends call him, is the senior captain on the Galveston-Bolivar ferry system. Since 1960, when he signed on as a relief deckhand and oiler, Varvil has been riding from Galveston to Bolivar, and from Bolivar to Galveston, day in and day out.

The job can be boring, he admitted recently, as he took the 35-year-old "Cone Johnson" around Seawolf Park and into the Galveston Channel.

Still, he said, it pays well, and allows him to stay on the water, which he loves, yet come home to his wife Jean every night. Now 57, Varvil has been at sea since age 16. He was too young to enter military service, but in 1944, "afraid the war would be over before I could get in it," quit 10th grade and entered wartime merchant marine training in Sheepshead Bay, N.Y. He shipped out 13 weeks later on a Gulf Oil tanker, the "Gulf Venezuela."

"On my first trip overseas," he said, "I spent my 17th birthday in Swansea, Wales - Feb. 4, 1945.

He saw the last months of the war from the deck of a Liberty ship. It was on the way to Europe with a full cargo of Sherman tanks,'' when Germany surrendered and his ship was sent back to New York.

"I stayed on there and was in Leghorn, Italy, on V-J Day," Varvil recalled. The ship's name? His brow furrowed as he ran down a mental "Lloyd's Register" of freighters and tankers on which he had shipped. "Let's see. The 'Claus Spreckels. No, it was the "Jacob Slote Fasset."

Between war's end and 1960. Barvil saw the world from a variety of Liberty and Victory ships, Lykes liners, and Amoco tankers. "I sailed into Galveston in 1947," he said, "and in 1948, I made it my home port.'

He stopped wandering in 1960, when he married; and signed on with the ferries. "I just wanted to spend one summer with my new wife," Varvil explained.

That summer job has lasted 241/2 years now. The trip across Bolivar Roads is almost automatic, Varvil's hands seem to steer the unwieldy ferryboat through a mind of their own as their owner passes the time of day with crew and guests in the cramped pilothouse. Just now, he is talking about his 38-foot shrimp boat, his pride and joy, the "Varvil Marvel," which he built in 1981.

'She's like a yacht down below,' he said. "I've got everything you can imagine in that boat: TV, AM-FM, radar, VHF

He likes to trawl for shrimp with Jean. "She's the captain on my shrimp boat," he said. They trawl for shrimp until Varvil leaves for work at 1 p.m. The catch is shared

All this time, the "Cone Johnson" tracks unwaveringly for the slender black light house on the Bolivar shore. Varvil looks out the window from time to time, only a brief glance, just to satisfy himself with friends.

that the hands on the wheel are doing what they have been programmed to do for a quarter-century. But that little glance takes in more than a casual observer would think. "What's the tide doin'?" he asks pilot Melton Young, seated on a cabinet behind him. "Those ships are layin' into a flood tide." On the horizon, two cargo ships are at anchor with their bows pointed seaward.

"It's funny how these old boats react," Varvil said. "You have to get used to it. I know what they're gonna do before they do it." He grabs the heavy brass handle of the motor control and swings it to "full astern." The bow propeller churns the waters ahead of the boat into white foam as the ferry noses between the metal-sheathed dolphins flanking the landing.

"These three old boats ("Cone Johnson," "E.H. Thornton" and 'R.S. Sterling) are a little tricky,' he said. "You gotta watch you P's and Q's."

As a boatload of Bolivar-Galveston cars bumpity-bumps across the loading ramp onto the deck below, Varvil says he does not regret trading a globetrotting career in the merchant marine for the more mundane world of the Bolivar crossing.

"I had spent half of my life at sea," he said. "I really didn't want to go back.

"All my old friends are first mates and skippers now, and make just about twice the salary I'm makin' "he said. "But look where they're makin' it.

But doesn't he get bored, making the same trip every day? "Yeah, it's boring," he admitted. All I think about is getting back and forth safely. It's automatic.

California high-tech museum planned

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) - See your heart pumping with an ultrasonic viewer. Beam your voice around the world via satellite and hear it bounce back a second later. Gaze billions of years into the past through a monitor to an orbiting space telescope.

Those are among dozens of imagitive exhibits planned for a new museum in the center of the West Coast's high-technology belt.

'We want to build a place full of fun and flavor, where you can have a really good time — an intellectual Disneyland," said executive director Eustace Mendis.

'It's being put together by people like me who never grew up, who still have curiosity, a sense of adventure and excitement," said Mendis, who until recently was the chief scientist at the popular Ontario Science Center in Toronto.

The idea for a high-tech center featuring the wizardry of Silicon Valley started with a housewife, caught the imagination of industry leaders and turned into a lucrative project fought over by three cities.

San Jose recently won the bidding war, competing against neighboring Mountain View and Sunnyvale, with a pledge of $33 million for construction and landscaping and $2 million a year for operations

A prestigious board of directors, headed by San Jose Mercury News publisher P. Anthony Ridder, is raising more money while studying architectural designs and exhibition ideas.

The $96 million Technology Center of Silicon Valley is expected to attract at least 1 million visitors hones to open the center by the fall of 1988, 11 years after Carol Schwartz of Menlo Park proposed the idea to her Junior League chapter.

After visiting Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry in 1977. Mrs. Schwartz suggested a similar center focusing on the computer, electronics and bioengineering breakthroughs of Silicon Valley companies and universities.

The Chicago museum, she felt, was "too industry-oriented" but was "on the right track." She wanted to combine it with the hands-on, let-me-try-that type of exhibits at San Francisco's Exploratorium — a sprawling warehouse of gizmos showing off the world of physics.

"Science plus industry equals technology," she said recently. "And that's appropriate for this

"We want to attract children because they're the future of the industry," she said. "But it also has to be a place where scientists and business people can go to have some of their questions answered. So, there will be exhibit rooms, auditoriums and lecture halls."

The Junior League still supports the development of the center, but the project's evolution is now largely in the hands of Mendis and president James L. Adams, a professor of mechanical and industrial engineering at Stanford. Adams, author of "Conceptual Blockbusting' spacecraft in the 1960s. The center will have some permanent exhibits that deal with the history of technology, but it is committed to staying on the cutting edge of innovation with an anticipated annual operating budget of $7 million.

about problem-solving, also worked on the first Venus and Mars

"We set ourselves a target of renewal of 10 percent of the exhibits a year," Mendis said.

McDaniel, Ewing head All-America team

McDaniel of Wichita State, who could become the first player to lead Division I players in both scoring and rebounding, already holds a distinction among those Wayman Tisdale, St. John's Chris Mullin and Memphis State's Keith Lee Heading into this week's NCAA tournament, McDaniel was tied for the scoring lead with Loyola automatic NCAA berth. McDaniel has shot 56 percent from the field this season.

"It's a great honor," McDaniel in Wichita, Kan. "I McDaniel missed when he was passed over on the invitation list. Their teams are top-seeded for the NCAA playoffs along with Michigan.

Ewing, an intimidating 7-foot, 240-pound senior center who no doubt will be the No. 1 choice in the National Basketball Association draft, led the defending NCAA champions to a 30-2 record, including the Big East Conference tournament. He averaged 14.6 points, 9.7 rebounds and blocked 121 shots.

He hit 64 percent of his shots from the field this season, boosting his career total to 2,096 points. He also grabbed 1,277 rebounds and blocked 479 shots in four seasons.

paced Oklahoma to a 28-5 record this season, including the Big Eight Conference regular season and tournament crowns. Despite being double- and triple-teamed, he averaged 25.5 points on 57 percent field goal shooting and a Tisdale, a 6-9 junior center,

10.2 rebound average. He became the top scorer in Big Eight history in running his career total to 2,570 points.

Whether he makes himself available for the NBA draft this year or next, Tisdale is expected to be among the top choices.

Mullin, a 6-6 senior guard, guided St. John's, the Big East regular season winner, past Georgetown 66-65 last January with his scoring and passing ability. He scored 25 points against the Hoyas in the Big East tourney title game but their defense hampered his passing game, holding him to one assist.

With a soft left-handed jump shot and accurate foul line proficiency (82 percent this season), he became the Redmen's leading career scorer this season with 2,350 points. He averaged 19.5 points with 52 percent field goal shooting and led the Redmen to a 27-3 record.

Lee became the leading scorer and rebounder in Memphis State history this season. The slender 6-10 senior averaged 20.4 points and 9.6 rebounds in leading the Tigers to the Metro Conference titles, regular season and tournament, with a 27-3 mark.

Lee, a 50 percent shooter from the field this season, has poured in 2,331 points and grabbed 1,301 rebounds in his career. Len Bias of Maryland, Kenny Walker of Kentucky, Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist. Johnny Dawkins of Duke and Mark Price of Georgia Tech were selected to the second team.

A.C. Green of Oregon State, Roy Tarpley of Michigan, Dwayne "Pearl" Washington of Syracuse, Sam Vincent of Michigan State and Hughes made up the third team.

NCAA tournament tips off Thursday

It seems to happen every year. Who will it be this time?

Which unheralded school will leap into the national limelight by upsetting some college basketball giant early in the NCAA tournament?

"I don't want to sound flip, but there's always the chance anything can happen," said Lehigh Coach Tom Schneider, whose team takes on No. 1 Georgetown in an East Regional game Thursday.

'We'll have trouble matching up," Mercer Coach Bill Bibb said, looking ahead to his team's first-round game against No. 6 Georgia Tech in the East Regional.

"I don't imagine our players know too much about Middle Tennessee State," said Dean Smith, coach of No. 7 North Carolina, preparing to face the Blue Raiders in the Southeast Regional Thursday. "Middle Tennessee is certainly capable.

Last year, Dayton provided the shock - twice. The unranked Flyers knocked off No. 7 Oklahoma and then tripped No. 15 Washington

The previous season, Utah surprised No. 7 UCLA. The year before, it was Middle Tennessee State's turn, when it toppled No. 15

But perhaps the biggest upset in recent NCAA tournament history came during the 1980-81 season.

DePaul, led by All-American Mark Aguirre and Terry Cummings, sailed through the regular season with a 27-1 record and was ranked No. 1 in the nation. The Blue Demons were favored to win the NCAA tournament going into their first game, against lightly regarded St. Joseph's, Pa.,

Navratilova, Lloyd to meet in Virginia Slims

DALLAS (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova and No. 2 seed, Chris Evert Lloyd, will play their opening matches tonight in the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Dallas tennis tournament.

In the first round of the tournament Monday, Myriam Schropp of West Germany, who got into the tournament because of a last-minute pullout, upset fourth seed Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria.

Schropp, 18, had won only one match in her four previous tournaments this year. She lost in qualifying at Dallas but was added to the field when Betsy Nagelsen withdrew because of an

Orioles down Rangers in exhibition game

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) - John Shelby's RBI single in the eighth started a three-run inning, and the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Texas Rangers 5-2 in an exhibition baseball victory

The game was tied 2-2 when Jim Traber singled off rookie righthander Jose Guzman. After Mike Young followed with a walk, Shelby rolled a single to right to score Taber and move Young to third. Young scored on a ground out and Shelby scored on Floyd Rayford's ground single to left. Reliever Odell Jones, released by Texas after last season, got the save for Baltimore

The Orioles took a 2-0 lead in the second against Burt Hoo:on, making his Ranger debut after being signed as a free agent during the offseason, when catcher A Pardo doubled in two runs.

The Rangers tied it with a single run in the fourth and another in the fifth on Pete O'Brien's solo home

The Rangers are 0-2 but have hit three home runs already this spring. In 25 exhibition games last year, Texas hit four home runs.

A new generation of Soviet leaders emerge

MOSCOW (AP) -Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the youngest man to head the Communist 'Party in six decades, stands on the verge of a career that could continue into the next century, if he masters the intrigues of Kremlin politics.

Gorbachev, at 54 the youngest member of the Politburo and a member of the ruling body less than five years, represents a new generation of Soviet leaders - a group unmarked by party service under Stalin's iron rule, well-educated and reared in the postwar years that saw major advances in Soviet living standards.

'Gorbachev seems to be a dynamic and strong person and so ... I hope we will have a chance to engage with him and to work constructively with him," Secretary of State George P Shultz said Monday. "He's a vigorous young man and we expect to be dealing with him as the future unfolds.

Watchers of the secretive Kremlin don't expect the man who succeeded deceased party

Chernenko, 73, on Monday to make any drastic changes soon.

But his Monday acceptance speech offered some hints about the directions he will pursue.

Reagan is meeting today with Mubarak

WASHINGTON (AP) -Reagan administration officials are keeping an open mind toward Egypt's new Mideast peace initiative, but question whether it is an effort to draw the United States into back-door contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

a senior official said Monday.

Hosni Mubarak planned to meet with President Reagan today to push the initiative, which Mubarak unveiled last week. Mubarak met Monday with Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

The Egyptian leader wants the Reagan administration to agree to a high-level U.S. meeting with a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation as the first step toward advancing direct Arab peace talks with Israel.

"This subject is one we've just got to hear more from Mr. Mubarak on," the senior official told reporters at a White House briefing. "We're frankly not sure how far things have moved and what is the push behind the idea of a joint Palestinian-Jordanian delegation coming to Washington.

"We're interested in getting direct (Arab-Israeli) talks started as soon as possible," he said. "We're not interested in anything that smacks of pre-negotiations of the

The official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said that if non-PLO Palestinians want to join with Jordanians for an informal exchange with the administration. "there would not be a hangup on that idea.

However, the official said Mubarak may be seeking to include the PLO, and that would not be acceptable. Mubarak will be asked to spell out what he means by "Palestinian," he said For now, the official added, "the assumption is PLO.

Mubarak has in the past encouraged direct talks between the Reagan administration, and the PLO, and has been turned down. The United States takes the position it will not talk to the PLO until it explicitly accepts Israel's right to exist as spelled out in U.N. Security Council resolutions 242 and 338. And the official said Monday "that hasn't Soviet leader can amass enough personal power to effect major changes. But they noted one major difference whereas Chernenko was. at 72, the oldest man to become party chief, Gorbachev is the youngest since Josef Stalin took power in 1924 at age 45.

"Gorbachev has a lot of time to consolidate his position," said one diplomat.

It was not known whether Gorbachev would also be made Soviet president, as Chernenko and his two predecessors were. That designation is made by the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament.

Amos A. Jordan Jr., president of the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies, said in Washington that in the immediate future, Soviet policy in arms control talks with the United States should remain unchanged.

Prof. Walter Laqueur of both Georgetown and London's Weiner Library, "There's not the said: slightest doubt that Gorbachev's priorities are in the domestic field. specifically economic.

Using foot, paralyzed writer turns out syndicated column

TEMPLE, Texas (AP) - Mike LeFan's self-described "one-man band" is rolling right along.

Calling himself the "chief writer, editor, salesman, bookkeeper and secretary," LeFan has for 10 years operated Mike LeFan Features, his one-person free lance writing and creative service firm, from his home in Temple.

In addition to having numerous articles published in such magazines as "The Lion" and 'The Rotarian' (national magazines for the two civic clubs), LeFan is also the author of "More For Your Money," a syndicated column that appears in weekly publications in six states, including California, Illinois and Florida.

LeFan contracted polio at age 8 and is paralyzed except for his neck and left foot. He spends much of his time in an iron lung and types and paints with his foot.

He graduated, with honors, from Temple High School with the help of a teacher who came to his home. He attended Temple Junior College and earned bachelor's degrees in English and sociology from the University of Mary Hardin-Baylor. Before striking out to free lance.

Soil Conservation cuts are critized

WASHINGTON (AP) - The mutterings among conservationists about the Reagan administration's budget plan to cut back on federal soil and water programs appear to be growing louder.

Under the administration's plan, the Soil Conservation Service's work force of 14,156 employees would be reduced to 8,537 in the fiscal year that will begin on Oct. 1. By 1987, barely one-third of the present number would be left.

Cutbacks in long-standing programs also would occur. including the elimination of government cost-sharing to help farmers carry out conservation projects on their land.

A leader of the opposition to Reagan's proposals is the National Association of Conservation Districts, which represents about 3.000 local units made up of farmers, government officials and others involved in land use.

Milton E. "Bud" Mekelburg, Yuma, Colo., is president of the association and says in a recent newsletter to members that farmers are having plenty of trouble staying solvent in addition to worrying about erosion taking their land.

"Whether it is 5 percent or 15 percent of farms that go under. almost every farmer and rancher in the country is under stress," Mekelburg said. "Economic survival is on all our minds.

LeFan was employed for several years by the Central Texas Council of Governments and edited twomonthly newspapers for CTCOG.

LeFan recently donned another hat - syndicator of someone else's material - for a series of articles on health maintenance organizations. The articles were written by Florida insurance professional Joseph Silverstein.

LeFan said he had recently developed an interest in HMOs because his father, who serves as minister at Western Hills Church of Christ, joined a local health plan.

"Then this came along," LeFan said, referring to Silverstein's request to syndicate his material. 'I assumed he had written several people trying to sell it, but he approached me.

This is LeFan's "first real effort" to syndicate material other than his own, and he hasn't decided whether to expand."

"It's a whole lot simpler when you're handling your own material and (this way) you only get to keep half the money," he laughed. "But I suppose if it was a good deal I would try it again.'

LeFan said he isn't sure why he started Mike LeFan Features. "I was just writing and selling what I could. It's always good if you sell one article to more than one place you make more money.

"It's also good credentials," he continued. "If you can tell an editor you have your own syndicated features, it makes you look more dependable. Although LeFan's columns and articles are written on money management and money-saving tips, he has written and had published articles on other topics as well

For example, a LeFan article titled "Managing Your Temper" appeared in the February issue of "The Rotarian." Another article he two for the longer articles. wrote, "Cars: The Number One Killer of Children," appeared in the February issue of "The Lion."

How does LeFan get ideas on such diverse topics? He is the recipient of "all kinds of different mail. Every day, the mail is just stuffed - pounds, almost. Some of it kind of sparks an idea, then if I read another article on the same subject, I think 'I can do that.

In an average month, LeFan mails 10-25 query letters on ideas he has for features and receives 'one or two go-aheads." He said his work is familiar with several magazines, which "makes them a lot nicer to work with. You're not approaching them cold - they've published you before."

LeFan writes one month's worth of "More For Your Money" in about two days (he types with his foot), but takes a day and a half or "They're roughed out in a day, then I leave them a while and go back and clean them up." LeFan is also the author of 'Shopping Texas By Mail,' a shopper's guide to shopping by mail-order catalogue. In its first

1,100 copies per month. Texas Monthly Press, the book's publishers, haven't approached him about a sequel, but LeFan said he hopes for at least an update. "I've been collecting new companies all along, so I'm ready two months, he said, the book sold when they are." LeFan has also been approached by other publishers to write books on how to order electronics by mail and how to start one's own mail-order business, but nothing definite has been set.

He usually works seven to eight hours a day, five days a week, and combines that schedule with a rare, but occasional, Saturday, But, he never works on Sunday.

"The nice thing is, if I don't have something I have to do, I don't do it," LeFan said. "I can goof off, but I don't very often.

"There's always been something that has to be done," he said. "If I don't work every day I don't get much done. It's too easy to be

At one time, LeFan attempted to write fiction, but soon stopped. "I tried my hand at mystery but I didn't even get encouragement. much less get paid for it," he laughed.

One of the first articles he remembers getting paid for was 'A Beginner's Guide To People-Watching.

"I wrote on what types of people you meet from the vantage of a wheelchair and gave them semiscientific Latin names,
