Pampans escape from assailants

BY JEFF LANGLEY

Senior Staff Writer A Pampa man whose former girlfriend allegedly shot him in the groin shortly before 7:30 p.m. Wednesday escaped by hopping onto a passing vehicle.

About an hour later, in an unrelated incident, a Pampa woman beaten to a bloody pulp by a man who broke into her home, escaped by clawing her way out of the front door and screaming for help.

The two incidents resulted in the arrest of two people by local police Wednesday night.

One of the victims, Michael McGee, 25, 1068 Varnon Dr., was listed in stable condition this morning at Coronado Community Hospital after being shot once in the groin Wednesday evening by a woman scorned, police said.

The victim's former girlfriend, Judy Hill, 25, 504 N. Zimmers, was arraigned this morning on a charge of aggravated assault with a firearm. Justice of the Peace David Potter set bond on the charge at $5,000.

The other victim, Clarice June Carei, 45, 511 N. Cuyler, was listed in stable condition this morning at the Pampa hospital after being severely beaten by a pint-sized assailant about 8:10 p.m. Wednesday

Martin Gonzalez, 19, address unavailable, was arrainged this morning on a charge of burglary in connection with that incident. Potter set bond on the charge at $10,000

In the first assault, police received a call about 7:25 p.m. "that a woman was chasing a man down the road in the 500 block of North Zimmers,' reports said.

A second caller said the woman had shot the fleeing man. When officers arrived, witnesses told police that the wounded man had escaped the female assailant by jumping onto the hood of a passing car.

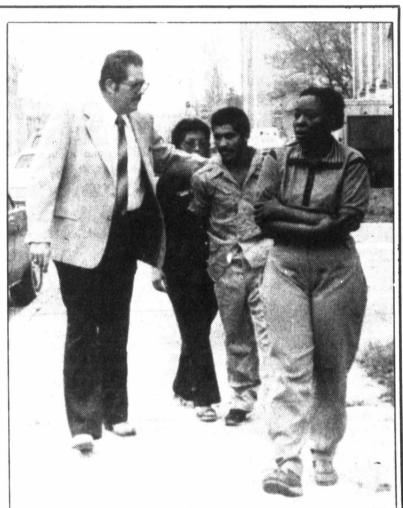

The woman with the gun since had gone into her home in the 500 block of North Zimmers, police said.

"As officers started toward the house, the woman came out and had a .25 - caliber semi-automatic pistol in her possession," reports said.

Hill was arrested and booked on the charge of aggravated

Police then called the hospital and were told that the shooting victim had just arrived.

Reagan lashes at Nicaraguan, Soviet leaders

LISBON. Portugal (AP) -President Reagan, lashing out at Soviet and Nicaraguan leaders, declared today that Western nations must remain militarily strong "so that never again would we be forced...to resort to violence" to safeguard liberty.

Warning of threats of Soviet aggression that have persisted since the end of World War II, Reagan rejected criticism from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and accused Nicaragua of "interfering with democracy in the Americas.

About 40 Communist Party delegates to Portugal's Assembly of the Republic walked out of the chamber before Reagan delivered the final major speech of his 10-day European tour, after he conferred with Prime Minister Mario Soares.

The president began his speech at a rostrum overflowing with red, white and blue carnations by ad-libbing to the remaining delegates, "I'm sorry that some of the chairs on the left seem to be uncomfortable.

At another point in his address, which was warmly applauded by the 250-member Assembly, Reagan interjected that the meaning of democracy included "the right to peak, to assemble, to publish and to vote, even to walk out.

Shortly before Reagan entered the chamber, a sergeant-at-arms in blue swallowtail coat trimmed in gold ceremoniously removed a caged dove from the desk of Green Party deputy Antonio Gonzales and carried it outside, to loud boos from Communist members who then stalked out

The president congratulated Portugal for turning away from 42 years of dictatorial rule to embrace democracy, and criticized communist societies.

He said it is in "the collectivist world that economies stagnate, that technology is lagging and that people are oppressed and unhappy with their lives.

Speaking indirectly to the new Soviet leadership, Reagan said the free West has learned after World War II it is a mistake to believe that "it is enough only to wish for peace.

"Instead, we accepted reality; we took seriously those who threatened to end the independence of our nations and our peoples. And we did what peoples who value their freedom must do. We joined together in a great alliance. And we rearmed

"But we did so only so that never again would we be forced — under the weight of our betrayed illusions - to resort to violence," Reagan

Arriving at Sao Bento Palace for talks with Soares, the president had harsh words for Gorbachev. At a Kremlin rally Wednesday marking the 40th anniversary of the defeat of Nazi Germany, the Soviet leader called the United States "the forward edge of the war menace to mankind.

Asked what he thought of Gorbachev's speech, Reagan replied, "What I usually think of him." When a reporter said Gorbachev had called him a menace to mankind, the president snapped: "Who is he to talk?"

Reagan also lashed out at Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega. Told that Ortega, who is touring Eastern Europe, had called for an end to U.S. interference in Nicaragua, Reagan replied: "We are not interfering. They're interfering with democracy in the Americas.

Reagan was ending his European trip with a durable ally in Portugal, a staunch supporter of the NATO alliance which provides untroubled U.S. access to Lajes Air Base in the Azores and serves as a mediator in efforts to reduce Cuban military strength in Angola, the former Portuguese colony in southern

Leaf rust threatens area wheat crop

Prospects for a bumper wheat crop are being threatened by a massive invasion of leaf rust. warns Gray County Extension Agent Joe VanZandt said soil moisture conditions have been above normal for the winter and spring time, giving farmers a bright outlook for a good wheat crop

However, reports from downstate have mentioned heavy rust infestations for several weeks, the county agent said.

"Rust normally travels north from deep South Texas in the springtime," he explained. "This year it has apparently overwintered much further north and, so, has heavily infested wheat at an earlier time in all wheat growing areas of Texas.

In the Gray County area, farmers need to study each wheat field to decide really soon if a fungicide treatment is justified. VanZandt

"To me, it looks like our level of rust infestation is about to explode," he warned.

"We have had the right environmental conditions the last two weeks for rust levels to build up all across the area," he said, referring to the rainstorms which have swept over the region in that period.

VanZandt said it is safe to assume that every field has some degree of rust infection.

The right environmental conditions that breed rust are moisture on the leaf surface, temperatures between 60 to 80 degrees Farenheit, rust spores and a susceptible host such as wheat, VanZandt explained

He noted that Dr. Bob Berry, extension plant pathologist, says it takes four hours at 70 degrees with moisture on the leaf surface for infection to occur. It takes eight hours at 60

A generation of rust takes 12 to 14 days when temperatures are in the 60 to 80 degree range

Dr. Berry states "We are about one month away from having our grain in the heads fairly well filled, VanZandt said. "It is a close race against time to have enough leaf area to properly fill the

Dr. Berry says the top (the flag) leaf will fill 40 percent of the head, while the second leaf down will fill another 40 percent of the head.

"It is difficult to say how much of the grain in a head will be filled by only a green stem after all of the leaf area has been destroyed by leaf rust," VanZandt said.

"This can and will happen," he warned

"I have already seen wheat plants where rust has already destroyed all but the top leaf,' the county agent said. "And the top leaf is heavily infested with rust to the point that only about 20 percent of it has any green color left. That field is being cut for hay, and it looked like it had the potential for 30 to 40 bushels (of grain) "Farmers have a tough decision to make,"

he stated. VanZandt said a systemic fungicide can give 21 days protection, with a cost in the $16 to $20 per acre range. After the 21 days, it would take another 12 days for a new infection to occur.

"The systemic fungicide is supposed to stop new infections," he explained. "However, older infections, close to the end of their developmental stage, will probably go ahead and develop into rust pustules.

It takes approximately 10 days before farmers can see any difference between treated and untreated areas, so there is not an immediate visual difference, he said

"Consideration has to be given for yield potential, hail insurance, harvest expense and, above all, cash flow," VanZandt stated. "Whether to treat or not is a most difficult

Vote on changing definition of casinghead gas not taken

AUSTIN-A scheduled vote in a Senate committee on a bill that would redefine casinghead gas was not taken Wednesday as planned.

State Rep. Foster Whaley of Pampa said he understood the bill's sponsor didn't call for the vote because he was still one short of the majority needed to get the proposal out of committee

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, would establish the definition of casinghead gas as all gas produced from a well classified by the Texas Railroad Commission as an oil

The current definition accepted by the RRC is "any gas and-or vapor indigenous to an oil stratum and produced from such stratum

Independent producers and royalty owners support the bill, and over 150 Panhandle residents were in Austin earlier this week lobbying for its passage.

Supporters hope that passage of the bill would head off a possible unfavorable Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ruling concerning casinghead gas. A FERC administrative judge has rejected the contention that all gas produced from a well that also produces oil is casinghead gas. The full commission's ruling on the judge's recommendation is pending.

Rep. Whaley said Sen Santiesteban will not call for a committe vote on his bill unless he is sure it will be approved. Even if he is successful in getting it out of committee, Whaley said, 21 senators will still have to vote in favor of allowing it to be considered by the full Senate.

Contrary to remarks by Sen. Ted Lvon, D-Mesquite, that if the bill fails it will be partly the fault of former congressman Kent Hance, who works for the Independents, for switching to the Republican Whaley said he understands that no member of the Senate committee has changed positions on the bill because of that switch. But, by the same token, supporters of the measure have been unable to change the mind of the lone opponent whose vote is needed to get it out of committee.

Panhandle officers participate in search for Oklahoma suspect

WOODWARD, Okla. (AP) -Sheriff's officers from four Panhandle counties attended roadblocks along the Texas-Oklahoma border late Wednesday night during a search for a man wanted in connection with the shooting death of an Oklahoma narcotics agent

But the suspect, Marshall Ellis, 24 of Woodward, never made it to Texas. He was apprehended about 11:50 p.m. Wednesday several blocks from the restaurant parking lot where the shooting took place. The agent, William R. Stewart, 41 of the Enid district of the State Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, was killed and a Woodward police officer was wounded in a shootout that began when the detectives made a drug buy and identified themselves,

Hemphill County Sheriff Bill

Bowen said that his deputies were called to set up roadblocks near the Oklahoma border at about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday. Deputies from Lipscomb, Hemphill, Roberts and Wheeler Counties stood by until about 12:30 to 1 a.m., he said, admitting that he was not at the time clear what the suspects were wanted for

"There was so much traffic on the radio, we just heard that two officers were shot," he said.

Assaults reported

Authorities said the McGee and Hill "had been living together, and the shooting was a result of a domestic disturbance

Police said at least two shots were fired at the victim, but just one bullet struck him

Before police could finish their investigation of McGee's assault, they received a call that a badly -bleeding woman had collapsed on the front lawn of a residence in the 500 block of North Cuyler. When officers arrived at 511 N

Cuyler, they found Carei nearly unconscious and "bleeding profusely from the facial area,' reports said.

Witnesses told police that the woman was screaming for help she when staggered through her front door and collapsed.

Wheat crop Continued from Page one

VanZandt said another

consideration is the situation of the tennant - landlord relationship for those renting land.

"As I see it, the cost of a fungicide treatment should be a shared expense," he advised. "My reasoning is most definitely that the income can be directly influenced by whether a field is treated or not.

VanZandt provided some pointers for checking wheat for the presence of rust.

"Look at each leaf with the leaf held up to the light," he said. "I find a very good way is to squat down in the field in the late afternoon and look towards the sun at the top of the wheat field. The little, yellow, pin-point size spots you see are rust infection sites.

VanZandt reminded farmers the rust generation is a 10 to 14 day cycle from the time of infection until the rust postules appear on the leaf's surface. "Each of the tiny yellow spots will develop into a rust postule," he

Farmers having any questions on wheat rust and its treatment may contact the Gray County agriculture extension office at

Police said Carei, who lives alone, was lying on a couch in her living room, when a man yanked open the back screen door, ripping out its latch.

The assailant immediately pounced on the middle-aged woman and pounded her with his fists, police said. The battering continued until the woman escaped, police said. A short time later, Lt. Jess Wallace saw a man walking in an alley in the 200 block Houston. The man matched a witness's description of the assailant, police said. As Wallace approached the man, the suspect ran and managed to briefly escape, police said.

Minutes later, police spotted the man on the roof of Sparks Cleaners, 320 E. Francis, police

The trustees of the Pampa Independent School District approved Tuesday the summer school plan for elementary through high school students, including two new programs.

Remedial math and reading courses will be offered for elementary students in grades 1 through 5 during the current school Classes will be offered at Baker Elementary School from 8:30 to 10 a.m. and from 10:15 to 11:45 a.m. Monday through Friday. Tuition will be $50 for one subject and $75 for two subjects.

The five-week term will begin June 3 and conclude July 5, with July 4 as a holiday.

Responding to a question by board member Joe Van Zandt, Asst. Supt. John English said the courses will not guarantee a student's promotion. He said no guarantee is being given to parents that the remedial courses will enable a failing student to be promoted to the next grade.

English explained promotion is dependent on satisfactory mastery of course elements as established by the state. Some students who have been promoted attend the summer classes to acquire stronger mastery of skills before they move on to a higher grade.

Students failing the math and English classes and attending the mastery of skills at the completion of the summer term. Determination of whether the student will be promoted will be made at that time, he said.

The district also will be offering a course in English as a second language and a bilingual pre-school program. The program is designed to serve students with limited ability to speak English who are eligible to be enrolled in kindergarten or the first grade in the 1985-1986 school year, English explained.

The course will concentrate on intensive language development to prepare students for kindergarten or the first grade, he added.

The eight-week course, also to be held at Baker, will begin June 24 and conclude Aug. 16, with July 4 as a holiday. Classes will be held from 8:30 to 11:15 a.m., with no tuition charged for the state mandated course.

Though the ESL class is mandated by the state, parents have the option whether to enroll their students.

The elementary summer programs, which began in the district last summer, are rotated among the elementary schools. Baker Principal John Welborn will serve as administrator for the elementary summer term.

Remedial English and math courses also will be offered at Pampa Middle School for students administrator. Seventeen courses will be offered during the summer term at Pampa High School.

Enrollment will be conducted June 3 from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. in the PHS library, with classes beginning June 4. The last day of summer school will be July 20, with July 4 as a holiday.

Due to state time requirements for credit in a course, classes will be held Monday through Saturday for high school students, English English and math courses at the high school level will be generally remedial in nature, English explained. The other courses may be taken by students who want "to get some basics out of the way' and allow for more course offerings during the regular year.

Students must follow the regular sequence of courses, English said. For example, a student must have completed English II classes before taking English III.

Summer English courses will include first and second semester English I. II and III. Math courses will include second semester Introductory Algebra, first semester Consumer Math and second semester Algebra I.

Other courses include both semesters of American and world history and Texas history, world geography, government, physical education, health, sociology and economics (with emphasis on free enterprise)

Also to be offered are driver education and clothing and

Tuition will be $60 per semester course, except for driver education ($145) and clothing and textiles (no tuition charge).

English explained the district no longer has state funding for the driver education program as in the Rogers received a $1,000

"We don't need to pass a tuition bill today. We need to get the two houses together in the true spirit of compromise," said Bay City Rep. Tom Uher.

But the House voted 85-60 Wednesday to scrap its plan to double tuition and go along with the Senate plan to raise the semester hour cost for resident students from the current $4 to $12 in the fall. The measure now goes to Gov. Mark White, who has indicated that he approves of the tuition Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin and sponsor of the House tuition plan, called on the House to agree put as much money in colleges and universities as we have in the past," Mrs. Delco said. The 1986-87 appropriations bill approved by the House cuts college spending by about 4 percent. The tuition hike would help fend off a 26 percent higher education spending cut recommended by legislative budget aides. "This is reasonable, fair and affordable," Mrs.

with the Senate version. The colleges need the $275 million the hike would raise over the next two years,

"Without a tax bill we cannot afford to continue to Delco said of the Senate version, which apparently will become the first tuition hike in Texas since 1957.

The hand of leadership was clear on the House floor. In a rare move, Speaker Gib Lewis voted to agree with the Senate version.

Even with the increase, Texas college tuition would be among the nation's cheapest.

The bill would raise tuition from the current $4 per semester hour to $12 in the fall. It would increase to $16 per hour for the next three years and then go up $2 a year every two years until it reached $24 in 1995.

The House tuition bill scrapped in favor of the Senate plan would have raised in-state tuition to $8 per hour this fall and in gradual increments to $20 by

Uher said some his "well-to-do" constituents complained about the proposed hikes, saying it called for "too much money too fast."

"Many of the young people are going to be knocked out" of a college education by the increase,

"Compromise is a dialogue," Uher said in calling; for a House-Senate conference committee to work on the tuition bill. "We have been handed down our marching orders from the Senate.

Mrs. Delco said there were sufficient grants, emergency loans and installment payment plans to guarantee that no student would be denied a college education because of lack of money.

Tuition for out-of-state students would rise from the current $40 to $120 per semester hour in the fall. Resident medical student tuition would go from $400 a year to $800 a year in the fall. It would increase to $1,219 the next year.

Law school tuition for Texas residents would rise from $4 per hour to $24 this fall and to $36 in 1986

Hikes in local sales taxes gain approval in the House

AUSTIN (AP) — The House has voted to let most Texas cities add another penny to their local sales tax, a move that could raise that tax to 6.125 percent in some areas. Under Killeen Rep. Stan Schlueter's bill, cities that do not collect a sales tax for transit could either tack on the added penny for transit or use it to reduce local

The increased sales tax could virtually eliminate city property taxes in some areas. Lufkin, for example, could replace 95 percent of its property taxes by adding another penny to its current

The state sales tax is now 4 125 percent. Most cities collect a one-cent local sales tax, and several of the largest cities collect up to another penny for mass

Under the Schlueter plan, cities with a population of 50,000 or more could collect the additional penny for transit. Any city could collect it for property tax relief

'The people would vote to put this on themselves," Schlueter said of the sales tax hike, which would require a local vote.

The bill drew criticism, however. Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, argued that the state might someday need the penny that Schlueter wants to give to cities. When the sales tax well is dry, the next step could be a personal or corporate income tax, he said.

'It's going to leave less room for the state," said Whaley. "We're that much closer to a state income

Short trip cures boredom

"What are you working on?" Jeff asked me one slow afternoon. 'Uh, nothing. What about you?'

"Nothing, either," he replied.

"Then that hot story on perversion among rabbit breeders didn't We sat across the table from each other, ruffling through the afternoon newspaper for the third time, shuffing through small piles of accumulated notes and drumming our fingers.

"I'm bored." I said "Yeah. So am I. I wish something would break."

"Anything on the police scanner?"

"No. Just something about sending a patrolman out to check on a dead cat in the alley.

Oh. Why didn't they call Clean Pampa?

"I don't know. I'll check with Jo on it tomorrow." We continued to sit, waiting for the phone to ring with some hot tip

"Let's get out of the office for awhile," I suggested. "Maybe we can come across some adventurous happenings about town."

"Sounds good to me.

We went outside and got into my car. And the adventure began "Hey, watch out!" Jeff shouted as I began to back out of the I looked up and saw some big-wheeled pickup blazing into the parking lot, wheels screaming as the driver turned off Atchison 'Whew, that was close," I said. I neared the street, getting ready to pull out onto Atchison. I slammed on the brakes again to avoid losing the front end to some panel truck heading east, apparently thinking this was the Amarillo I started to turn right. My feet crammed against the brakes again. "Why didn't that &?X$! lady look around before she backed that station wagon out?" Jeff growled. The wagon finally moved on, and we turned left down Somerville, stopping at the intersection. We waited there a couple of minutes, waiting for the blur of traffic to open up a spot so we could turn right

A spot opened up and I edged out. Watch out!" Jeff exclaimed.

Again the brakes. Some camper across the intersection was turning left across our path, apparently oblivious that we were there. Or ignorant of the laws of right of way.

We finally managed the right turn, and I drove east on Foster. Jeff's arm shot out to the dash. Recognizing the signal, I pushed the brakes again to avoid the late model Ford edging out from the fire station intersection. I swerved around it, only to hit the brakes again as some old man pulled out into the street from the City Hall

"?&!(X" I muttered.

"What was that?" Jeff questioned.

"Nothing.

We headed toward the Cuyler traffic lights, which turned yellow and then red as we neared it. 'Will you look at that?'' Jeff said.

"Yeah, I know. Some people think this street has three lanes." Two cars were stopped ahead of us. The first was smack in the center of the road. The other behind it was slightly to the right. And I was on the left, against the dividing line.

The light turned. The front car turned right, the second went straight ahead

"Aren't you going to drive by the Post Office?" Jeff asked. "Hey, no way," I said. "I don't live that dangerously," turning on the left turn signal as I waited for the oncoming traffic to pass by from its staggered routes. The route cleared, I started my turn - and smacked on the brakes again to avoid hitting a group of teenage girls running across the street as the traffic light turned yellow. "That does it," I said. I drove down to Kingsmill, turned left and drove back to the office, pulling back into the parking spot. "That's enough adventurous happenings," I said as Jeff and I opened the doors and headed back into the office.

Back at our desks in a few minutes, Jeff asked, "Are you working "No," I answered.

A few more moments of silence "I'm bored," Jeff muttered.

"Yeah, so am I. But I feel much safer." Jeff opened the afternoon Amarillo newspaper and I picked up an old Chamber of Commerce release.

'There has been overwhelmingly public response to efforts to repeal the Blue Law,' said Farabee, "but we have not had that from the automobile dealers, so that is why they are exempted from the bill." The bill contains a provision that any automobile dealer who does open on both Saturday and Sunday could be fined up to $500.

The current law says 42 items ranging from hardware to clothing cannot be sold on both Saturday and Sunday. At the time it was passed ini 1961, legislators were told the measure was needed to balance competition between downtown stores and discount

Supporters say it affects Texas economy by shutting down many businesses at least once a week. Opponents said it would interrupt the House bill that passed 58-25. "I'm very concerned," White said. "My concern is that there be no business pressure placed on

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Foes of change are with us always

Students of history realize that some things never change. Opposition to economic change and progress have been with us for centuries, probably since the day man began to cook his dinner.

Today the critics of change mourn the decline of the American steel, mining and shipbuilding industries. They wring their hands over the rising productivity of farms and the resulting need for fewer farmers. They worry that high-technology manufacturing will make us all either computer wizards or floor sweepers. They can't stand the thought of heavily-subsidized Amtrak succumbing to economic reality.

The inevitable change of a growing and dynamic economy has always disturbed a portion of society. In the 1840s, many were predicting disaster because the world's supply of whale oil was dwindling. At the turn of the century, the U.S. government predicted oil reserves would run dry in 20 years. Some environmentalists warn that unless we abandon our modern industrial society and return to a simpler way of life, the whole world will become one sooty sea of asphalt.

Modern lamentations of this sort are nothing new Hillsdale College in Michigan recently published the following letter from the governor of New York to the president of the United States written 156 years ago. The governor was deadly serious at the time, but his words sound like a parody of his modern counterparts.

"To: President Jackson

"The canal system of this country is being threatend by the spread of a new form of transportation known as 'railroads.' The federal government must preserve the canals for the following reasons:

One, if canal boats as supplanted by railroads, serious unemployment will result. Captains, cooks, drivers, hostlers, repairmen and lock tenders will be left without means of livelihood, not to mention the numerous farmers now employed in growing hav for horses.

"Two, boat builders would suffer and towline, whip and harness makers would be left destitue.

Three, canal boats are absolutely essential to the defense of the United States. In the vent of the expected trouble with England, the Erie Canal would be the only means by which we could ever move the supplies so vital to waging modern war.

"For the above-mentioned reasons, the government should create an Interstate Commerce Commission to protect the American people from the evils of railroads and to preserve the canals for posterity.

"As you may well know, Mr. President, railroad carriages are pulled at the enormous speed of 15 miles per hour by 'engines' which, in addition to endangering life and limb of passengers, roar and snort their way through the countryside, setting fire to crops, scaring the livestock and frightening women and children. The Almighty certainly never intended that people should travel at such breakneck speed.

MARTIN VAN BUREN Governor of New York"

Now the Almighty presides over Boeing 747s and the space shuttle. The modern-day Van Burens should be reminded that the decline of certain industries and ways of life is the inevitable byproduct of freedom and the progress it promotes.

Can't tell 'em by their hats'

NEW YORK (NEA) - If you think the world is simply a stage on which the Good Guys (conveniently wearing white hats) contend against the Bad Guys (black hats), you haven't been studying the situation in Mozambique. For sheer cussed complexity and a near-random distribution of merits and demerits, few corners of the globe these days can equal it.

For some people, of course — including some notable conservatives - the situation in Mozambique represents simplicity itself. President Samora Machel's government is communist, right? And his domestic foes, called "Renamo" for short, are waging a guerrilla war that not only has Machel's regime on the ropes in a number of provinces but regularly knocks out the electric power in Maputo, the capital. So we're for the "freedom fighters," right?

Well, not exactly, because nothing in this situation is quite what it seems. Machel is no lily, but neither is he one of the really hard-line leftists in the Maputo regime. A year ago he agreed to, and did, stop anti-South African guerrillas from using Mozambique as a base, in return for South Africa's promise to quit helping Renamo. Recently he has begun moving away from Marxist domestic nostrums toward free-enterprise solutions, especially in the vital agricultural sector of the economy a process which, if it continues and succeeds, will tilt Mozambique away from Moscow. For that very reason, the hard-line leftists devoutly hope it will fail.

And those "freedom fighters" in Renamo are a pretty mixed bag, too. Quite apart from their right to wear white hats, however, there is a very serious question as to just how ready they are to provide political leader-ship to a post-Machel Mozambique. It would do the West precious little good to connive at the downfall of Machel, if the net effect was to create a power vacuum into which Moscow could rush agents and forces far more subservient to its will.

So the Reagan administration has • adopted a cautious policy of encouraging Machel's slow but perceptible drift toward genuine non-alignment, even to the extent of approving "nonlethal" aid of various sorts - mostly agricultural — to his regime. Taken in combination with what some hard-right conservatives regard as the administration's squishy-soft policies toward Angola and Namibia (South West Africa), this has enraged them beyond the bounds of common sense. An advertisement in several key newspapers recently demanded, in big black letters, "WHY IS CHES-TER CROCKER TRYING TO SELL 20 MILLION BLACK AFRICANS INTO COMMUNIST SLAVERY?"

Now, Chester Crocker is President Reagan's assistant secretary of state for African affairs — a gentle ex-professor at Georgetown who has been the chief author and exponent of Mr. Reagan's much-execrated policy of 'constructive engagement' with South Africa. Chet Crocker may be mistaken in urging the administration to put a few of its chips on Machel, but he certainly isn't "trying" to sell 20 million Africans into communist Significantly, the South African government — which nobody would accuse of being even the palest shade of pink - clearly doesn't think so. Its technicians have been propping up the Machel regime's ports, railroads and general economic infrastructure for years, and its only reservation, in response to a recent request for military action against Renamo, was that it would first require a lifting of the Western embargo on arms sales to South Africa, since the operation would risk depleting (for example) its supply of helicopter gunships.

The point is not that Chester Crocker is right about Machel - or even that his critics are wrong about Renamo. The point is that this is a murky, unsatisfactory situation, with very few pure white hats to be seen and quite a lot of black-and-white stripes and polka-dot styles around. # Sunny situation in Florida

MIAMI, Fla. - The boom taking place in this region is one of the most exciting economic developments on the American scene today. New construction is everywhere in sight in the coastal zone between Miami and Palm Beach. Indeed almost all of Florida is doing exceptionally well.

While many states in the old industrial and Mid - Western farm areas are encountering economic difficulty, Florida's prospects are outstanding.

There are several elements in this happy situation. Florida benefits from the rapid movement of people into the state. This boosts income, consumer spending and construction. Florida's retirement income outranks that of any other state in the region. Tourism, though sensitive to the country's overall well - being, is a $15 billion a year business

Florida also is doing well in terms of industry. The state's manufacturing employment grew faster than that of the nation for the first nine months of 1984. Defense contracts represent a very strong economic factor in the state's prosperity. In 1983, Florida ranked among the top three states in the value of Dept. of Defense prime contracts awards for missile and space systems and aircraft engines. Florida, with 400 defense related businesses, will receive almost $6 billion in defense expenditures in 1985.

True, not everything is perfect in Florida. Citrus canker has destroyed mile after mile of productive orange groves in Polk County. That country traditionally produces almost as many oranges as the entire State of California. The sugar industry, which represents a $1 billion investment, also faces severe problems. The world price of sugar has dropped to four cents a pound. Foreign sugar growers are heavily subsidized by their governments, and many countries, such as Cuba, dump millions of tons on world markets. Incidentally, the European

Soviet missiles significance is argued WASHINGTON (AP) -

Pentagon officials say President Reagan is justified in singling out a new Soviet missile as a major threat to the nuclear balance, but critics charge the Soviet weapon is less of a threat to America than the MX missile is to the Russians.

"The MX is obviously much more of a first-strike weapon than the SS-X-24, in part because it's more accurate," said John D. Steinbruner, director of foreign policy studies at the Brookings Institution.

"And you can't call their missile a first-strike weapon and not say the same about the MX," added William Arkin, the director of nuclear weapons research at the Institute for Policy Studies, a private think tank that has often criticized Pentagon policies.

The question of the threat posed by the 10-warhead SS-X-24, which the Pentagon expects the Soviets to begin deploying next year, arose Wednesday after it was singled out by President Reagan as an example of Russia's emphasis on weapons "clearly designed to strike first."

Addressing the European Parliament in Strasbourg, France, Reagan asserted the Soviet Union does not "share our view of what constitutes a stable nuclear balance." He added the SS-X-24, which can be transported and launched from rail cars, has the potential "to avoid detection, monitoring or arms control verification

The president said such developments underline the need to pursue his "Star Wars" research effort to find a defense against

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blaming everyone from actress Jane Fonda to government safety regulators for the slow growth of nuclear power, Energy Secretary John Herrington is promising a Cabinet-level examination of the industry's future.

"Many consumers perceive that nuclear power is unsafe, unworkable and too expensive ... thanks to Hanoi Jane," Herrington said Wednesday, referring to Miss Fonda's visit to Hanoi during the Vietnam War and her role in "The China Syndrome," a movie about an atomic plant accident.

However, he said the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission is more to blame than anti-nuclear activists for eroding the public's acceptance of atomic power.

'Unfortunately, federal regulation has probably been more responsible for undermining confidence in nuclear power than have avowed nuclear opponents," he said. "In decision after decision, the government has delayed plant construction and sent the price of nuclear power soaring."

Herrington said there have been 114 nuclear power plant cancellations and no orders for new reactors in the past seven years.

"To the best of my knowledge, no utility company, public or private, is even considering the nuclear option for future generation needs," he said. "If government is part of the problem, then it is the (Reagan) administration's policy to make government a part of the

Dear Abby

Basically, you know, our speech needs some work

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Basically, this letter is about people who basically overuse a particular word, or groups of words. Basically, the worst offenders are people who say "you know" four and five times in one sentencebasically speaking, you know.

You know how overworked those basic words can seem after basically a short period of time. You know, I find such repetitions basically nauseating, really.

Based on my aversion, you know. I'm considering taking drastic action to basically draw attention to this basic speech fault by taping the offenders' mouths shut, you know.

I'm basically a fan of yours, you know, so would you see if there are many others out there who, you know, have basically the same reaction?

GAIL H., SHOREWOOD, WIS.

DEAR GAIL: You know basically I can understand your irritation because I do know that such sloppy speech habits are formed by people with basically limited vocabularies. But don't go away; here's a companion piece to your letter from Scottsdale, Ariz.: DEAR ABBY: One of the most annoying habits I find among people, especially teen-agers and young adults, is ending every sentence with "OK?"

The sentence can be a simple statement, such as, "I went to the store," but there's that superfluous "OK?" tacked onto it as if it were a question.

The "OK" habit is a sign of insecurity, and is used by people who need constant approval for everything they say.

It makes one wonder how people can go through school with such an irritating habit without having it corrected by teachers or associates. TIRED OF "OK" IN ARIZONA

DEAR ABBY: What can I do about an old high school classmate who has been after me to resume our friendship after 18 years? We no

DEAR ABBY: I am 21 years old and planning my wedding. I picked out a beautiful satin and lace wedding gown, but here's the problem: My mother wants me to wear the wedding gown she wore when she got married.

I hate to hurt her feelings, Abby, but I tried it on, and I don't care for it at all. Maybe it just doesn't look good on me, but I really hate to think of wearing it on my wedding day. It looked good on my mother in her day, but there is no way I could feel beautiful in that wedding gown.

Please, please help me get out of wearing it, Abby. Or should I wear it and keep my mouth shut? My fiance saw the gown I want to buy (we picked it out together), and he says I should ask you. I would be paying for it with my own money.

Country music an aid to education?

By JOE EDWARDS

Associated Press Writer NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - An education professor says country music's "cry in your beer" lyrics can help students learn about love, life and even geography.

"You don't need a Ph.D. in analytical poetry to understand country music. It's short, simple and to the point," says Dr. James Akenson, associate professor of education at Tennessee Tech in Cookeville.

A country wailer like 'Kaw-Liga,'' for example, can help first-graders think more clearly because its tale of a storefront wooden Indian who fell in love with a maiden at another store is easy to follow, Akenson

Akenson, an admitted country music fan, teaches a graduate-level course on how country music can be a valuable instructional tool. He cites country music lyrics as a way high school and elementary school instructors can supplement their teaching of sociology, geography and other subjects. Akenson says a "cry in your beer" honky-tonk song like the late

Ernest Tubb's "I'm Walkin' the Floor Over You" can teach students about human relationships. "Those songs reflect that many times relationships are fragile,' the 41-year-old professor said in an interview. "If they are not well thought out, you can end up sleeping single in a double bed. These songs help high school students be more analytical in studying their own relationships." He said "Sleeping Single in a Double Bed," a hit country song by Barbara Mandrell, "reinforces traditional values. She realizes she's sorry for mistakes."

Akenson, who has his doctorate in curriculum and instruction from the University of Wisconsin at Madison, said "Kaw-Liga." recorded by both Hank Williams and Hank Williams Jr., can be studied by first-graders to develop listening skills and other functions. "In 'Kaw-Liga,' you have a very nice story. It has time lines, and then you can plot and put words on it and so forth. Here are events in a story, in sequence and then you can draw conclusions."

He says Hank Williams Jr.'s "Dixie on My Mind" can be used as a geography lesson for young students because the song mentions Alabama.

Mason-Dixon line, Houston, Spartanburg, S.C., and Jack Daniels whiskey in Tennessee.

"The map work you can do with that is interesting," said Akenson, a native of Minneapolis. He says Loretta Lynn's signature song, "Coal Miner's Daughter," is a vivid description of a strong family relationship, and John Anderson's amusing "Swingin" typifies traditional values with its references to fried chicken and daddy in the back yard.

Similarly, Akenson says teachers can play John Conlee's "Back Side of 30" in the classroom to portray a conventional relationship that's been broken.

"It's a beautiful song about a man who has been married, it's broken up and there's remorse. This person is not a teenybopper. He's an ordinary human being, over 35. who has seen an important relationship crumble. Now he's dealing with that. It's about traditional relationships, which are valued in country music.

'Mammas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys, by Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson, focuses on tension in a culture, he says.

"Cowboys are their own persons not locked into a regimented lifestyle. But in terms of security, maybe it's best to let them have a professional career.

"We don't just memorize; we go for a higher order of thinking skills, not just reading and reciting," he said. "We are active with data sources to make children have skills and have concepts and do higher-order thinking.'

The warranty information and other consumer warnings are to be included in window stickers, required under new Federal Trade Commission regulations for the estimated 10.5 million used cars sold annually by dealers.

The regulation forces dealers to disclose the most important information needed by a used-car buyer - who has to pay for any needed repairs - said Carol T. Crawford, director of the commission's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

And the warranties may well prove a good guide to the quality of cars being sold, since a dealer is likely to offer more protection on cars in which he has more confidence, added deputy director Amanda Petersen.

The FTC rule covers sales of used light trucks as well as used cars by dealers who sell at least six vehicles a year. The roughly 7 million people a year who sell their own used vehicles privately are not covered by the rule

Detailed information on the new regulation was mailed to every used-car dealer in the nation two weeks ago, Ms. Petersen added, in order to give them tine to comply.

"Consumers should look for the stickers starting (today), and we want to hear from them if they're not seeing them," she told a news conference Wednesday.

Dealers who fail to comply could face fines of up to $10,000 per day per violation, although Ms. Petersen indicated the agency will be tolerant of some missing stickers in the early going.

Ms. Crawford said a decade-long study of the used-car business found the biggest problem was dealers selling cars "as is," but verbally promising customers that they would fix any problems that came up. Promises that are not in writing cannot be enforced, she pointed out.

"For the first time, buyers will be able to walk into a used car lot and know up front, in writing, what warranty coverage is being offered," she said.

Conviction upheld

AUSTIN (AP) - The 3rd Court of Appeals on Wednesday affirmed the Lampasas County murder conviction of Vincent Durante in the death of Durante's 16-month-old son.

Durante said at his trial that the child, in response to a spanking, held his breath passed out and never regained consciousness.

According to court records, Durante and his wife brought the child to the Lampasas hospital on Oct. 9, 1983, and the child was not breathing. He was pronounced dead, and an examination showed four abrasions and 21 bruises on the child's body, including a %-inch bruise and 1/2-inch abrasion on the child's forehead.

The appeals court said a forensic pathologist testified at the trial that a person cannot commit suicide by holding his or her breath.

The court affirmed the life sentence assessed Durante.

Crime, punishment mingle in pasta palaces

EDITOR'S NOTE - It's not on the menu, though it's usually reflected in the tab: a restaurant's 'ambiance." There are all sorts of ambiances and one of them is mayhem - a place where an underworld figure met an untimely death. Here's a guided and witty tour of places that enjoy the distinction

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) - These days in New York's Little Italy it is hard to tell the YUPPIES, the young urban professionals with the U.S. Attorney's office, from the YUMMIES, the young upwardly mobile mob mouthpieces.

Both dress in dark business suits set off by regimental ties and linger long over their linguini and lambrusco, savoring tasty points of criminal law in the big government crackdown on organized crime that is on the menu at the federal court house in Foley Square just a few blocks away.

Crime and punishment, like the ever present aroma of garlic and olive oil, mingle so tantalizingly in the pasta palaces along Mulberry Street that it is even difficult to determine at the moment whether Umberto's Clam House, the most storied of them all, is being run by U.S. Attorney for Manhattan Rudolph Giuliani or by Matthew

"Matty the Horse" Ianiello. Matty was at the cash register the night Joey "Crazy Joe" Gallo was snuffed midway through his second order of Umberto's famous shrimp and scungilli salad. The proprietor dove into the kitchen and lay on the tile floor with his hands over his eyes as soon as Sonny Pinto and two out-of-town torpedoes known only as Cisco and Benny came in the side door blasting. The next thing he knew, Pete "The Greek" Diopoulis, a Gallo bodyguard, was pushing a gun in his face and pulling the trigger, but only clicks came out because it had been emptied trying to save Joey.

As far as Umberto's future was concerned, it was touch and go there for a minute. Joey, with two slugs in his spine and another in the main artery leading to his brain, staggered out the Hester Street door and almost died in front of a rival restaurant that might have caught on with tourists who have this strange compulsion to dine at the scene of underworld mayhem

In the narrow streets of Little Italy, where the outsized limousines of gangsters, politicians and lawyers alike meet in democratic gridlock, nothing succeeds like excess.

And Matty, who is under indictment on charges of skimming millions of dollars in profits from his restaurant holdings, went into U.S. District Court the other day with a battery of 14 lawyers, some of them his best customers, to complain about excessive government control of Umberto's Clam House. The feds, working under provisions of RICO, the 1970 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, had tied up the assets of Umberto's and other alleged mob holdings so tightly that, as Matty's lawyers told Judge Edward Weinfeld, the banks would not honor checks to pay the sales tax and even the salaries of the

An agreement was reached in Weinfeld's court unfreezing enough funds to pay essential bills and keep Umberto's going.

A reputed underboss in the crime family of Vito Genovese, which was listed in the recent mass indictments accusing a "commissione" or commission of ruling New York crime, Matty has lent a tourist aura to a number of restaurants.

He owned the Broadway Pub when Bobby Darrow, a Gallo hitman, wasted the night manager, mistaking him for Matty. Ianiello also had a piece of the Peppermint Lounge, the birthplace of "the Twist," a dance craze that was not inspired by Abe "Kid Twist" Reles, who fell or was pushed to his death from a sixth floor room in the Half Moon Hotel in Coney Island while under police protection as a key witness against Murder Incorporated.

The Half Moon never caught on with the tourist trade the way nearby Scarpato's did when Giuseppe "Joe the Boss" Masseria was invited to a last supper that was also attended by Charles "Lucky" Luciano and Vito Genovese, who repaired to the men's room just before the shooting started.

Joe and Mary's in Brooklyn had a vogue among voyeurs of violence after Carmine Galante, a rising don with a terminal case of the twofers - too far, too fast - was separated from his insalata mista and his head (with teeth still clenching a cigar) by a shotgun blast while lunching on the back patio. Then the neighborhood deteriorated and became unsafe after dark, unlike Lower Manhattan's Godfather country, which is a quiet, low crime area save for occasional gangland percussion sounds.

The action moved over to .. Monte's on Carroll Street, much frequented by the flower and power of Brooklyn's judiciary and political bosses, as well as by Carmine "The Snake" Persico, the Brooklyn racketeer convicted after informer Joe Valachi testified before a U.S. Senate investigating subcommittee.

LaStella, on Queens Boulevard, became the "in" eatery, and so remains, after 13 lunching businessmen, among them Joe Colombo, Carlo Gambino, Tommy Eboli and Carlos Marcello, looked up from their linguini with white clam sauce to behold uninvited guests from the D.A.'s office, who charged them with the unsociable sin of consorting with known criminals, namely each other. The diners were hustled out the door so fast nobody paid the check.

In recent years Chinatown has been overflowing into Mulberry Street, and the King Wah restaurant for a time was heavily patronized by dudes in wide lapels and alligator shoes seeking a change of menu if not venue. This is where Sonny Pinto and Phil "Fat Funghi" Gambino were squeezing chopsticks with the two out-of-town hit men when word came that Joey Gallo had just entered Umberto's up the street. After Crazy Joe was blown away, the King Wah suddenly closed because owner Domenici Pallatto and his Chinese wife, Mona, mysteriously disappeared, allegedly in the bottoms of those two-tiered coffins that Joe "Bananas" Bonanno, a steady customer and former Brooklyn funeral director, is credited with inventing for the disposal of unwanted bodies.

Actually Joe Gallo had planned to celebrate his 43rd and last, as it turned out, birthday at the Luna, the hangout of Westside waterfront boss Anthony Stroll, alias Tony Bender, but it was closed so he opted for the just opened Connoisseurs of crimeland cuisine used to go all the way to Newark to sop up the ambiance at the Palace Chophouse, where Dutch Schultz had his final meal amid gangland fireworks ... that became a standard scene in James Cagney flicks.

At least twice a week Frank Costello was good for three tables at Toots Shor's, one for himself with his back to the wall and two in opposite corners for his bodyguards, always booked under his real name of Francesco Castiglia.

Sometimes mistakes are made, and a haunt of hoodlums loses its charisma, as when four midwest meat-packers in town for a convention were gunned down at the Neapolitan Noodle on the upper East Side under the mistaken impression that Joe Colombo had booked the table. Villa Capri on Long Island's south shore gained prestige when its cloakroom boasted wide-brimmed fedoras and camel hair topcoats belonging to Carlo Gambino, Thomas "Three Finger Brown" Lucchese and Joe Colombo, all listed as godfather figures of traditional New York crime families in the recent massive indictments.

Celebrities from both sides of the law are welcomed with equal grace and panache at Little Italy's older, tonier restaurants, like the Villa Pensa, Paolucci's and Angelos, where President Reagan four years ago dined under a seascape of the Amalfi coast that has since been replaced by his own picture and where a few weeks ago U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato was summoned to the phone to take a call from the White House enlisting his support for the MX missile.

If anything, the maitres d' and waiters hover a bit more attentively over the tables of known perpetrators rather than upholders of the law. Customers who can raise $1.75 million in bail never flash credit cards or write personal checks, invariably leave a nice tip and often know their way around an Italian menu. They can be depended on to order the lobster fra diavolo special, the thickest bistecca alla Florentina and the finest wines. Spaghetti and meatballs are sneered at as "cop food." And they rarely show up packing hardware, unless it's a businessman's lunch at which one of the guests will be hit with more than the check.

The photo gallery of celebrities that is standard decor in Little Italy's fancier restaurants almost never features a mob personality, no matter how intimately he was associated with the place in life or death. The padrone is usually

Former Brazoria sheriff recalls law enforcement years

"Oh, lordy, we had some fun back then," he says, remembering old times in Brazoria County. It's been about 20 years since he was sheriff, but he did it so well and so long that everybody who knows him including Sheriff Joe King calls him sheriff to this day.

Marshall began his law enforcement career as a youngster in September 1938, when he went to work for former Sheriff L.R. Johnson.

There were no investigators in the department then, just deputies like Marshall "and we did it all,"

"All I had ever done was run wild cattle and build fence. I didn't know the difference between a warrant and a citation," Marshall said of his early days as a lawman. "I'd go in to the sheriff and say what do I do? "Enforce the law, boy,' is all he'd say. I had me a time, I'll tell

"It didn't take me long to catch on, though. I'd get me a bunch of papers and I'd run over there to the district clerk's office and find out what to do, and boy, I'd get on it." Marshall said he never gave a thought to being sheriff in those first years.

"But I stayed so long and got so involved, and of course, being young, you have ambitions ... God knows you've got to be cut out to be a police officer at all.

"Actually, how come me to run against Mr. Johnson, we had a gentleman's agreement between ourselves," he reflected.

When a friend working in security at Phillips Petroleum was ready to retire, Marshall said he was offered the job, which paid twice what he made as a sheriff's

"So I went back and told Johnson. I wanted to give him 30-days notice, you know and dadgum if he didn't talk me out of

"Don't go over there, stay here," he told me, 'I'm not going to run again, and I want you to have this sheriff's office.

"And lo and behold, when the time came, that old stinker filed. That made me so confounded mad, I said 'I'm going to soak my shoes and run against him." Marshall stops and laughs.

"Different ones kept telling me I better pull out, he was going to beat me, and I'd just say 'well, let's wait and see.

There were six contestants in that first election, and Marshall and Johnson found themselves in a runoff election 30 days later.

"The night of the runoff, Mr. Johnson had me by 13 votes, and the Sweeny box was still out. We waited and waited, and when the Sweeny box came in, I beat him by 240 votes," Marshall said.

Marshall said Johnson's answer to the defeat was "Mm, that boy sure must have stomped down lots of briar patches out there."

He took office in 1947 and held it for 18 years, although Marshall said he "never got a free ride they ran me to death come every election ... and I beat the socks off

Thinking about why he stayed so long, Marshall smiled and said, "after I got in there I guess you could say I got so poor I had to

Marshall and his wife, Cora Belle, lived in the jail, located then on the top floor of what's now known as the "old courthouse."

'Me and that old woman, we had some times up there," he said. 'She was the jailer, the dispatcher and the cook most of the time. Of course, it was different then."

Enforcing the law was different then, too, and simpler, he said. "You had to use a little common horse sense and your good judgment.

What I especially liked about it back then was if you caught someone in a bind, a good officer could help them more than a preacher, or a lawyer or a judge." He recalls a youngster who stole a new piece of rice farming equipment from another man and sold it for scrap in Houston.

When Marshall caught him, he sent the boy to Houston to buy the equipment back, then supervised while he took it back to the farmer and welded it back together again.

Then he talked to the farmer and the district attorney, and the charges against the boy were

"We had done our job, you see, but we hadn't ruined him. We kept him from getting that number (Marshall gestures across his chest with a finger indicating the place where a prison number appears in police photographs of convicts), "and saved the taxpayers money. Marshall said he saw that boy again not long ago. He has a family and a good job. "He told me who he was and I said, 'well, you scoundrel," he said, laughing.

Marshall said his policy toward the criminals he dealt with was "if they'd come clean with me, I'd come clean with them.

"I'd tell them 'I caught you one time and I can catch you a dozen times. You just let your conscience be your guide and if you can outsmart me, the sky's the limit."

As a result of his handling of criminals, he said he can only recall one real battle in his career, at the old Star Cafe in downtown

"He'd have made two of me," Marshall said of the culprit. "He'd already whipped the girls that worked there and tore the place down. I stepped in that door and boy, the party was on.

"He hit me ..." Marshall shakes his head, smiling. "I sailed right up on top of one of those tables, and my feet went up in the air.

'He made a dive at me and I rolled out from under him and tore my coat off. He thought I was going for my pistol, but I came out with that black jack.

"Every time that guy blinked, I'd hit him with that blackjack, and in a little bit, he'd had enough. "I gave him his rights, and I took mine. He didn't pay any attention to my rights, so I took them. 'There's too much federalism in law enforcement now," he said, adding that officers can't do their jobs well when they're constantly worried about violating someone's civil rights in some way without meaning to.

'Where's the officer's rights? And where's the public's rights?" he asked. "Every tub ought to sit on its own bottom.

"Of course, time brings on changes, and now you've got every kind of person in the world wanting to be a lawman.'

When Marshall was sheriff, training and education requirements for officers were almost nonexistent. He relied on his intuition to pick good men for the job, and was usually right.

'You can send a man to school till doomsday and not make an officer out of him. I can spot the makings of a good officer a mile

"When I broke an officer in, I'd tell him one time, 'as long as you're right, I'm going to stay with you until hell freezes over, and when you get wrong, I'll quit you like a dirty shirt."

Many of the men Marshall trained went on to become some of the top law officers in the county and the state.

In return for Marshall's guidance, those men who worked with him revere Jack Marshall

"He covered every bit of the ground he stood on," Lake Jackson police officer Jack Wood said. 'He's a great man.''

Wood, a former chief deputy with the Sheriff's Department, spent about six of his many years there working with Marshall.

"He demanded certain things of his men, but never anything he hadn't done before or wouldn't do. "And if you did something you thought he didn't know about, you were wrong," he finished,

Billy McCoy, now vice president of Win-Way Inc., worked with Marshall for several years in the Sheriff's Department.

"He was the type of person that you'd sit down and have a cup of coffee with in the morning, and when you got up, you'd know exactly what he wanted done that day and how he wanted you to do it. 'He believed in enforcing the law the way you'd want it enforced if you were in the other man's shoes. without any kind of underhandedness," McCoy said.

"He's a good man, and he was a good sheriff," said Capt. Gene Smith, chief of investigation for the Sheriff's Department.

'Many a night I'd run into him up on the north end," Smith said of the years when Marshall was

"He'd get tired of sitting around the jail, and he'd get in a patrol car and take out to see what was going

"He called me 'boy!' 'Boy,' he'd say, 'what's going on?'''

But Smith said Marshall always knew what was going on. He had one of the best information networks around, and would often give his officers leads they hadn't been able to find.

Jimmy Jones, now the chief investigator for the District Attorney's office, worked for Marshall when he began his career in law enforcement, and said "he's a hell of a man."

Jones said the men who worked under Marshall worked hard, but didn't mind it then.

Cecil Wingo, now chief investigator for the Harris County Medical Examiner's Office, recalls two things Marshall told him when he was a young law enforcement officer.

"Always be right," he told us, and 'when someone goes crazy, go crazy with them.' He knew what he was talking about, too."

Houston plans park, museum for birthday

HOUSTON (AP) - Plans to mark Houston's birthday and the state's 150th independence anniversary will include construction of a park and museum for an estimated cost of $34.4 million, city officials announced.

The tentative projects announced Tuesday include the revitalization of downtown's Buffalo Bayou to include Sesquicentennial Park, which will feature a series of towers to commemorate 150 years of history, water falls and formal gardens at an estimated $17.7 million, said Robert Sakowitz, chairman of the Houston-Harris County Sesquicentennial Committee.

The city's Capital Improvements Program has allocated $4.9 million for the project, the rest will come from donations, Sakowitz said.

Plans also call for the creation of the Texas History and Technology Museum in downtown's Sam Houston Park. The museum will sit on land already leased by the city, Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire

"The park is one of the most significant events to be built since Texas' centennial in 1936;" said William Griggs of the Harris County Heritage Society.

He said the 200,000-square-foot museum will be the only one in the state that tells the history of Texas in its entirety. The museum is expected to attract about 400,000 visitors annually, Griggs said.

EDITOR'S NOTE - The obsession began at age 5. Ever since, Mary Monroe has been pouring out words - writing as though her life depended on it, as in a sense, it did. Relatives and friends ridiculed her mania. Now, with a published novel after years of rejections, Mary Monroe feels vindicated.

By NANCY SHULINS AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Mary Monroe's mother came up with a stock answer long ago for the relatives, friends, and fellow cotton pickers in Alabama who wanted to know why her little girl was so

She said somebody'd dropped Mary on the head when she was a baby. How else could she account for Mary's "writing madness," a bizarre malady that drove her under the family's shanty to scribble "stories" on the backs of hymn books. She was 5 years old, already a veteran field hand in Choctaw County in the rural Black Belt of western Alabama.

At 7, Mary spent the summer writing a 400-page biography. The bump on the head story no longer held water with the neighbors, who told Mary's mother she ought to have the girl's head looked into.

Mary's family gave serious thought to sending her to an asylum. Little black girls don't write books, they told her

Mary Monroe kept on writing. Through 12 summers and autumns picking cotton, potatoes, stringbeans and apples; through the births of two daughters by the time she was 18; through marriage to a man who tore her neatly typed pages into tiny pieces; through jobs at a car wash, a hot dog stand, and no jobs at all, she kept writing.

She kept writing through years of secretarial work and ridicule from relatives and friends, through rejections from every literary agency listed in Writer's Digest, through so many rejections from publishers that the letters spilled out of her mailbox and into the street in front of her Oakland, Calif., apartment.

This year, 33 years after she was born and almost three decaafter the onset of her "madness," Mary Monroe's first novel, "The Upper Room," is for sale at the very same bookstores as the works of her idol, William Faulkner.

And if her mother put it down after a few pages because it had "too many cuss words." and if her sister's only comment concerned the purchase price of the blouse she is wearing in the jacket photo, so be

"The main thing is, I feel sunglasses to reveal shining brown eyes. "I feel like a real writer. It's been a nightmare that has ended in a good dream.

'The Upper Room," set in a migrant labor camp near Miami, is the story of Mama Ruby, a huge black woman of superhuman strength and voracious appetite who lays healing hands on friends and wields a switchblade against enemies, a "Godzilla in a half-slip" who considers herself both 'in the Lord's fold and the devil's walking stick.'

Into her life comes Maureen, a best friend's stillborn baby whose life Mama Ruby appears to save with her healing powers. Mama Ruby absconds with Maureen, whom she considers a gift from God, and installs her in the sanctified upper room of a house far away from her natural mother. where Ruby hopes to keep her forever safe, both from the devil and from would-be male suitors.

"Magnificant, coarse, funny and terrifying," wrote the San Francisco Chronicle. "It marks the debut of a remarkable talent possibly a great one," said the Chicago Sun-Times.

Ms. Monroe remembers scribbling on scrap paper at 4, before she knew how to read or write. A school teacher who belonged to her church saw Mary trying to write and taught her how to print the alphabet and sound out simple words.

She kept writing into adulthood largely out of anger. "I had to succeed. I could not be defeated. I could not succumb to madness, lest I have to listen to my family say, We always said the girl crazv.

To keep herself in writing paper and to finance an occasional candy binge, she wrote for confession magazines, making her first sale at 15. The story was called "I Married a Hairy Old Beast," and it earned

The family moved to Ohio, where Ms. Monroe graduated from high school, an event accompanied by escalating pressure for her to find a husband. She found one without ever leaving her front porch.

"He used to pass by my house on his way to and from work at the steel mill, and I sat out on the porch reading. One day he asked me if I

Locke's attorney, Grady James, said his client is still suing Kay McCoy, who wrote the letter.

Drugs a popular theme for Mexico's 'corrido' singers

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) -Long before the name of accused drug baron Rafael Caro Quintero became a household word throughout Mexico, popular bands were making hits with songs describing the adventures of narcotics traffickers.

Today, "The Tigers of the North" from Sinaloa state, the Linares Cadets and other musical groups that play corridos polka style ballads with comp'-pa-pa beats and sing-song lyrics that are especially popular in northern Mexico — are enjoying a renewed interest in their songs. "They say they came from the south In a colored car They carried 100 kilograms of cocaine They were on the road to Chicago..." begins the song "The Red Car Band.

Caro Quintero, a prime suspect in the kidnap-slaying of American drug agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, has triggered a countrywide scandal with his allegations of massive police corruption. Stories of Camarena's Feb. 7 abduction in Guadalajara, the discovery of his body March 5. Caro Quintero's capture in Costa Rica and his accusations that tied Jalisco state policemen to drug-trafficking bribes have dominated newspaper and broadcast coverage.

Nearly 40 people, including Caro Quintero and Ernesto Fonseco, the reputed head of Mexico's underworld drug empire, have been ordered to stand trial as part of the investigation into Camarena's slaying. None has been charged with murder.

And spreading rumors about Caro Quintero's life has become a popular pastime.

The daily Mexico City newspaper La Jornada published a letter from one of its readers which said Caro Quintero was present at a wedding March 2 during which a slaying took place. Caro Quintero is a native of the Pacific coast state of Sinaloa, long known as a center of drug trafficking and perhaps where the topic is most embedded in popular folklore. The letter said music by the Tigers and the Cadets was played at the wedding later "to get the party going."

Today, in cantinas, around campfires and at fiestas, people are listening once again to the message of the corrido.

The drug missions of the songs often end in death — at the hands of the "rinches de Texas." the Texas Rangers, or by traitors within the smugglers' own ring.

Such is the story of poor Emilio Varela, shot to death by his companion, Camelia the Texan.

Nine members of the Pampa High girls' track squad embark today for Austin in hopes of bringing back the Class 4A state championship track trophy.

"I think most of them are more excited about the plane ride than the state meet," laughed assistant coach Mike Lopez. "It will be the first time some of them have been on a plane."

However, the Lady Harvesters have been flying low since the track season first started. The Pampa girls have won every meet - nine to be exact they've been in, including the district and regional titles.

Pampa's victories include the Pampa Invitational, Amarillo Relays Amarillo Invitational Dalhart Relays, Borger Relays, Perryton Invitational and the Liberal Relays. The Lady Harvesters won every meet by a wide margin.

"To have a chance of winning state, both of our relays have to win." said head coach Gary Cornelsen. "We've improved in almost every meet we've been in, so there's always a chance." Pampa's 1600-relay (Sandee Greenway, Beverly Paine, Linda Ammons and Tanya Lidy) and 880-relay teams (Beverly Paine, Courtney Brown, Katrina Jackson and Jackie Oglesby) placed second at the Region 1-4A meet last weekend and set school records in both events.

Also qualifying for state were Tanya Lidy in the 200, Andrea Hopkins in the discus and Kristi Hughes in the long jump. All three won their respective

For Lidy, who is just a freshman, one wonders what she will do for an encore in the next three years? She seems to set a school record every time she steps on the track. Her 24.4 time at regionals in the 200 broke the school record of 24.6 she set just two weeks previous at the district

"She's a powerful runner and I don't feel she's ran her fastest time yet this season." said Cornelsen.

Miss Lidy has won the 200 seven times and the 400 twice this

Miss Lidy will be going up against three-time defending champion Lisa Ford of Fort Worth. Next to Miss Ford, Miss Lidy will have the fastest time in the 200 going into the meet. Miss Hughes, the team's only senior, has been hampered by a groin injury for more than a month, but she still came through to set a school record in the long jump with an 18-21/2 leap at regionals. Miss Hughes has been to the regional meet three times, but this will be her first trip to

"Kristi needs to improve her jump by over a foot to have a chance of winning," Cornelsen

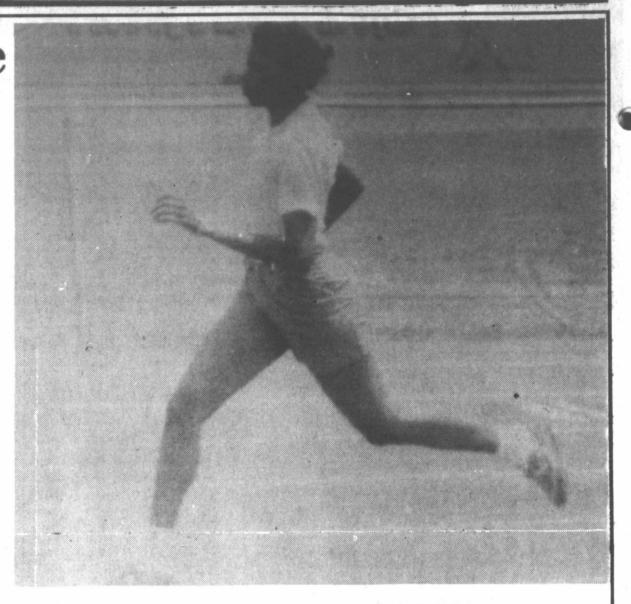

Miss Hopkins, just a sophomore, is another trackster with a bright future. She threw the discus 126-11, her best toss of the season at regionals.

"I think Andrea may just be starting to peak," Cornelsen said. "She had her best throw of the season by 10 feet on

Miss Hopkins finished second to talented freshman teammate Sandra Farrah in both the discus and shot at the district meet. Miss Farrah placed third in the discus at regionals.

Going into the regionals, Miss Hopkins had won the discus event

Preliminaries are scheduled for Friday while the finals are set for Saturday in the state meet.

Crenshaw hopes to pull out Ryan boosts strikeout mark, of slump in Nelson Classic but Astros lose to Expos

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Ben Crenshaw, standing on the putting green at the Las Colinas Sports Center, rolled a 20-footer at the

The ball fell off to the low side, grazed the lip of the cup and spun

"That's the trouble, right there," said Crenshaw, who then missed a putt on the high side. A third caught the lip and fell in. 'See, even when I make it, it's on the edge," Crenshaw said.

The problem, common enough to golf's touring pros, is an unusual one to Crenshaw, long noted by his peers as one of the finest putters in

But the putter, the short stick that was so instrumental in his Masters victory a year ago, has betrayed Crenshaw this season. He is averaging 30.47 putts per round and ranks, incredibly, 152nd on the Tour in putting.

"I've been working on it pretty hard for the last month or so, Crenshaw said before teeing off today in the first round of the $500,000 Byron Nelson Classic.

"Really, I'm not playing all that bad. I'm not striking the ball any worse than usual. But I can't get the ball in the hole. I'm not scoring. I'm just not making enough birdies to offset the bogeys," Crenshaw

It is only the most recent of a devastating series of problems that have waylaid Crenshaw, who reached the high point of his career with the 1984 triumph at Augusta, Ga., only to slump.

"From the high point of my life, I went to the low point," said Crenshaw, who admits he had a difficult time trying to handle the emotional aftermath of a divorce last vear "I wanted to be by myself, and try to think things out," he said. He could not concentrate on golf. He lost weight, brooded, played infrequently — and not well.

"I wasn't ready for it when the season started this year," he said.

The record shows it. He has missed the cut more often than he's made it this season. He hasn't been a factor in any event. His stroke average is 74.1. He is 130th in money-winnings with $13,540.

"I'm trying to come out of it, not worry about it, just play my way out." Crenshaw said. "My attitude is better. I just need to get some momentum, have a couple of good rounds, a good tournament.

"This would be a good place to start it," said Crenshaw, who won this title two years ago and was sixth last season

He faces a field of 156 that is led by defending title-holder Craig Stadler, who has had three runner-up finishes this year; Tom Watson, a four-time winner of this event; and Tom Kite, a winner last veek in the Tournament of Champions.

Other leading figures in the chase for a $90,000 first prize are Lanny Wadkins, David Graham, PGA title-holder Lee Trevino and former Nelson winner Bruce Lietzke.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Beating strikeout king Nolan Ryan at his own game is a new experience Montreal's Joe Hesketh won't soon forget.

But it took an old bugaboo - one Ryan would just as soon forget - to make the 26-year-old Expos hurler a winner

"I wasn't trying for strikeouts," Hesketh insisted Wednesday night after fanning an even dozen Houston hitters en route to a 1-0 victory built on a rare spell of wildness by Ryan.

"That one bad inning cost me," said Ryan, who walked three Montreal hitters and hit a fourth in the decisive second. reminiscent of the earlier years of his career when he led the league in walks eight times.

"I've gotten myself into problems like that before, but I usually dig myself out.'

And he did just that in predictable Ryan fashion, striking out the side with the bases loaded. But he had started by walking Dan Driessen, hitting Hubie Brooks with a pitch and walking Tim Wallach and Herm Winningham to force in the game's only run and ruin a two-hit, 10-strikeout

The 38-year-old Ryan left after seven innings with his all-time major league strikeout total at 3,922 - 39 more than Philadelphia's Steve Carlton.

But the night belonged to Hesketh, 4-1, whose career high in strikeouts left him 3,854 behind He limited the Astros to four hits

Sanchez hits Tigers past Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) -Despite his homerun-smacking performance. Detroit parttime designated hitter Alex Sanchez won't be an everyday major leaguer this year with the Tigers, manager Sparky Anderson says.

The Dominican Republic native went three-for-four with two home runs to lead the Tigers to a 4-1 win and a sweep of a two-game series with the Texas Rangers Wednesday night. But "like I've said before, this is a better club (than last year's world championship team) personnel-wise." Anderson said. "I don't know if Sanchez can contribute on an everyday basis. I've got (Larry) Herndon, (Chet) Lemmon and (Kirk) Gibson in the outfield. Where am I going to put

"I DH him against left-handed pitching and Nelson Simmons against righthanders. They're both playing well, so that's the way it will stay

Dan Petry, 5-2, got the win with last-out relief help from Willie Hernandez

Petry went 8 2-3 innings, walking one and striking out four. He ran into trouble in the ninth with two outs when Bobby Jones doubled off the wall in right-center and Don Slaught hit a run-scoring single Hernandez came on and got Wayne Tolleson to ground out, first to pitcher, to earn his sixth save of the year.

'You're a real good manager if you've got Hernandez," Anderson said. "It takes a lot of brains to walk out there and point to the left Mike Mason, 2-4, gave up all four Detroit runs in six innings. He walked one and struck out four.

The Tigers broke the ice in the second inning. Sanchez led off with a single to center. He advanced to second on Barbaro Garbey's single to right and scored on Lou Whitaker's single to center.

third. Lance Parrish led off with his fourth home run of the year. After two were out. Sanchez hit his second round tripper of the season, a solo shot to center field.

Detroit added two runs in the

On the next pitch Mason hit Garbey. Garbey dropped his bat and charged the mound, causing both benches to empty.

"I've been hit before, once in the face," Garbey said. "When he (Mason) threw it all I saw was a fastball headed for my face. I had no chance to get out of the way and suddenly I'm on the ground and I'm thinking 'Hey, he just threw at me.' Then I did what I did."

Celtics down Pistons

BOSTON (AP) — His team had been gunned down twice in a row and Dennis Johnson couldn't wait to get another crack at the enemy. His marksmanship was sure but he didn't tally the toll until the battle was over.

"I really don't pay attention to points," said Boston's sharpshooter for a day. "I try to do what keeps us up, so I don't worry about the number...As long as we're ahead by one, that's what counts."

Johnson, the worst shooter among the Celtics' starters, hit 13 of 16 field-goal attempts and piled up a season-high 30 points as Boston fought off the determined Detroit Pistons 130-123 Wednesday night.

Boston, which had lost the previous two games of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal playoff in Detroit, took a 3-2 lead and can wrap up the National Basketball Association series Friday night on the road.

If the Celtics win, they'll play host to Philadelphia Sunday in the opener of the conference finals. If they lose, they'll return home to face Detroit that day in a decisive seventh game.

In the Western Conference, the Denver Nuggets open the best-of-seven finals Saturday afternoon on the road against the Los Angeles Lakers.

Larry Bird overcame two mediocre games with a career playoff high 43 points, including 17 in the fourth quarter, but he shared the raves with Johnson.

"That's the best I've seen DJ shoot," said Boston forward Kevin McHale

"The big key was Dennis," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "It was a backbreaking effort.'

The guard broke Detroit's back but it was his own back that had his coach worried. He missed Tuesday's practice with back spasms and received treatment Wednesday night before the game.

"That gave me cause for concern," said Jones. "But he wanted to play and he scored 22 points in the first half."

"They played one of their better games and they had to go down to the wire to win," said Detroit's Kelly Tripucka, who scored 20 points. "Even with Bird playing his best, they couldn't put us away.

A big reason for that was Vinnie Johnson. The substitute guard, who had 22 points in the fourth quarter of the Pistons' 102-99 fourth-game victory, poured in 30 Wednesday night on 11-for-16 shooting.

Boston has won 17 of its last 18 playoff games here and stretched its home winning streak over Detroit to nine games.

"We know what they can do on their home court and we know what we can do on our home court," said Tripucka. "This series will go seven games.

Miami's Lisenby in state meet

Miami High junior Lanece Lisepby returns to the Class 1A state track meet in Austin this weekend for a second try at a first-place medal that eluded her a year ago.

Miss Lisenby won the long jump with a 17-3% leap at the Region 1-1A meet. She will also be competing in the 400 after a second-place finish at regionals.

As a sophomore, Miss Lisenby finished far down in the standings at the state meet. But the experience helped.

'Lanece was a little nervous last year, but she knows what to expect now," said her coach, Carol Vincent. "I look for her to do pretty well.'

Miss Lisenby's regional jump was her best of the year, which placed her ninth among the Amarillo area's top long jumpers. She was the district champion in both the long jump and the 400 this season. She was also the defending regional champion in the long jump.

Miss Lisenby is the daughter of Clayton Lisenby.

Michelle Friemel of Groom will also be competing at state in the triple jump. She jumped 35 to win that event at the R 1-1A meet.

In the boys' division, Bruce Thornton and Jeff Britten of Groom qualified for the state meet. Thornton placed second in the 3200 (10:42.82) and Britten was second in the 400 (50.97) at regionals.

Duncan moves closer to champions' title

NEW YORK (AP) - Lawson Duncan is playing on his favorite surface - clay. And as far as Duncan is concerned, everyone else should worry about him.

Ranked 68th in the world, Duncan moved into the third round of the $617,000 Tournament of Champions at the West Side Tennis Club by upsetting fifth-seeded Johan Kriek. The problem is that Duncan doesn't consider it an

"I've been waiting a long time to play these clay court tournaments," Duncan said after his 6-3, 6-3 victory over Kriek, a two-time Australian Open champion who is ranked 13th in the world on the Hewlett-Packard-ATP computer.

Duncan began playing tennis when he was 10 years old.

"There was a girl in my class I liked a little bit," he explained after Wednesday's victory. "I had a little crush on her.'

So he took up tennis where he could "play around, look at her and hit a few balls."

"I haven't seen her in 15 years," he noted wistfully. Duncan qualified for this champions-only event at the famed Forest Hills club by capturing a $10,000 U.S. Tennis Association satellite tournament in Monroe, La. - "A clay court tournament," he quickly adds.

Against Kriek, Duncan ran up a 2-0 lead in the first set and a 3-0 margin in the second.

"This was one of my biggest victories," admitted the right-hander, who reached the finals in Bari, Italy, and Marbella,

UIL disqualifies relay team

AUSTIN (AP) — The University Interscholastic League state executive committee has disqualified Stafford Dulles' 1,600-meter boys' relay team for weekend.

Dulles ran a Region 4-5A record time of 3:16.33 in San Antonio last Saturday but was disqualified because one of the runners was ineligible under the no-pass no-play rule. Rosenberg Lamar Consolidated replaced Dulles as the regional winner and third-place San Antonio Wheatley was elevated to runner-up and a berth in the state meet.

Deer Perk pole vaulter James Halstead, second in Region 3-5A also was disqualified under the rule that says an athlete must pass every course to compete. He will be replaced by third-place finisher Ronald Gaines of Dickinson.

UIL director general Bailey Marshall told the executive committee Wednesday the Class 5A 1,600 relay and pole vault could be delayed or canceled if additional legal action is taken in behalf of the athletes involved.

Austin Johnston girls soccer coach Rick Hoff was suspended for heard allegations that Hoff had used an ineligible player under the name of a player no longer on the Johnston squad in a district match.

Judge gives stiff sentence in Thayer case

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal judge, saying he was sending a message to Wall Street and brokerage houses across the nation, imposed a stiff prison sentence on Paul Thayer, former deputy secretary of defense, for lying to authorities investigating his insider stock-trading schemes.

U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey on Wednesday sentenced Thayer and his friend, Dallas stockbroker Billy Bob Harris, to four-year prison terms on the one charge of obstruction of justice to which they had pleaded guilty.

Richey also fined Thayer and

Harris $5,000 and ordered them to surrender to the U.S. Bureau of Prisons in Texas by 1 p.m. on Thayer and Harris faced a maximum prison term of five years in prison for giving false testimony to Securities and Exchange Commission investigators.

Government prosecutors said Thayer, Harris and their associates netted $3 million in illegal profits from three separate insider-trading schemes between September 1981 and September

Prosecutors said Thayer illegally disclosed merger plans involving Allied Corp. and Anheuser-Busch Cos. Inc. while serving as a director of those companies. He was chairman of

LTV Corp. in Dallas at the time. After hearing lawyers for the two plead for probation and community service for their clients, Richey said the sentence must carry a deterrent to warn others who might want to commit white-collar

"In office buildings on Wall Street, you can hear all kinds of rumors of takeovers and mergers discussing this information, this inside information," he told the crowded courtroom. "And people take advantage of it.

In the Thayer-Harris case, Richey said, "there has been a breach of trust, false statements, injurious statements, obstruction of justice you have engaged in."

He said the false statements made to the SEC officials prolonged the investigation and resolution of the case by some three years.

"Based on deterrence - and the element of deterrence must be emphasized — and to maintain the integrity of the system of justice in the United States," he said he would impose the stiff sentence.

Although technically Thayer and Harris will become eligible for parole in 60 days, government prosecutors believe they will serve at least a year, maybe more.

Before Richey announced the sentence, the 65-year-old Thayer, who resigned from the Pentagon in January 1984, told the judge: "It is an understatement to say that I am sorry and very remorseful for violating the law. I have destroyed a lifetime of achievement. The last two years have been a living nightmare. I don't like myself as much as I used to."

Harris, 45, told Richey he was 'embarrassed for all the troubles I have caused everybody. I take full responsibility for what I have done.

U.S. Attorney Joseph E. diGenova and Assistant U.S. Attorney Charles H. Roistacher. echoed Richey's remarks, saying the prison sentence will "serve as a strong signal of deterrence to brokerage houses, Wall Street and the business community all over

House and Senate approve state water plan

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Legislature, frustrated in previous attempts to win voter backing for statewide water plans, has approved a $1.2 billion package for a ballot review in November. "Frankly we've got to pass this constitutional amendment in November in my opinion to retain the quality of life that we've known in the past," Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, told colleagues Wednesday

The water plan worked out by House-Senate conferees was approved 127-15 by the House and 30-0 by the Senate Wednesday. The proposed constitutional amendment needed to set up the program now goes to the Nov. 5

In previous years, voters have turned down water plans devised by the Legislature. East Texans have feared the plans might send their water to West Texas. Many voters were confused by complicated proposals.

"This is an opportunity for the people of Texas to deal with the very serious question of water and to make sure we have adequate supplies," Gov. Mark White told the House after it voted to send the program to the voters.

The proposal includes: - $980 million in state bonds. including $190 million for water quality projects, $190 million for water supply projects, $200 million for flood control and $400 million for water storage acquisitions.

- $200 million in bonds for loans to farmers who buy water-saving irrigation equipment. - A $250 million state fund to

- Local elections to create groundwater control districts.

Mandatory conservation plans

- Programs to show farmers how to save water. - Limits on the water flow from reservoirs to coastal wetlands. "That was probably the most important vote you made all session," Speaker Gib Lewis told the House.

Montford, chairman of the Senate conferees, was called to the Senate podium by Lt. Gov. Bill proposal. The biggest battle in the conference committee concerned protection of bays and estuaries - viewed as a fight between West Texans and coastal interests. Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, said the proposal wound up

"less protective of bays and estuaries" than the Senate version was. He said he had "very serious" reservations" about that section of the proposal. He said the House conferees included four West Texans "who either don't understand or don't appreciate the importance of bays and estuaries.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland and chairman of the House conferees, assured the House that the program "does have protections in there for bays and

House panel approves primaries compromise

AUSTIN (AP) - Republican House election committee members clashed with Democratic colleagues and ended up losing a battle over a change in the Texas primary system.

In a 5-3 vote, the House Committee on Elections approved a compromise bill on Wednesday that would move presidential and general state primaries to the second Tuesday in March during presidential election years and allow general primaries to remain in May during non-presidential election years.

The measure was proposed by

Rep. Sam Russell, D-Mount Pleasant, who had stalled action on a Senate version of the bill because he was opposed to a provision that would prevent a person from cross-voting in one party's presidential primary in March and another party's general state primary in May.

Republican committee members Rep. Chip Staniswallis, Amarillo, and Rep. James Horn, Denton, requested discussion of the compromise, but were outvoiced by committee chairman Rep. Clint Hackney.

Staniswallis, Horn and Rep. Bill

Carter, R-Fort Worth, voted against the compromise.

Russell said the compromise had the backing of Gov. Mark White, House Speaker Gib Lewis and U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Russell said the compromise bill will save the state $10 million which he said would have been the cost of split primaries, help conservative Democrats whose constituents may vote Republican in presidential primaries and eliminate voter confusion.

"I hope this will help the Democratic party," Russell said. Chet Edwards, D-Ducanville said he expects the compromise to be "well received" in the Senate, which passed an early primary bill in April.

"The compromise, as passed by the House is excellent," Edwards said. He said the language of the bill was the same as that Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, tried to add to the bill in the Senate.

Edwards said lawmakers reaction to the compromise should indicate "whether they have been playing party politics." He said the compromise addresses Republicans' main objections.

"I have a great many thoughts about music on television, and ... I think it helps the identification of orchestra and conductor a great deal." said Previn.

"If, by a flick of the switch, they can see a great orchestra playing great music, that is not popularizing it; that is simply making it accessible.

Previn has lived in England since 1968, when he took command of the London Philharmonic, a post he resigned in 1979.

FALMOUTH, Maine (AP) - Actor Gary Merrill, in a one-man demonstration near his home here, protested claims made in a scathing new book written by a daughter of his former wife Bette Davis.

"This book is like an Ivory soap ad, only reversed," Merrill said of the "My Mother's Keeper," by Barbara Hyman. "Instead of being 99 percent pure, this book is one percent pure. ...

Merrill picketed a bookstore in Falmouth, carrying a handmade sign that read "Please Boycott 'My Mother's Keeper'.''

The book portrays the 78-year-old Ms. Davis as an abusive alcoholic who urged Mrs. Hyman to have sex at age 13 and frequently called her other daughter a 'moron'' because she was retarded.

Merrill, 69, was Mrs. Hyman's adoptive father during a stormy 1950-1960 marriage to Ms. Davis. In her book, Mrs. Hyman accuses Merrill of beating both Ms. Davis and her daughter, as well as drinking incessantly.

PEORIA, III. (AP) -Comedian Richard Pryor came back to the city where he spent his first 22 years to take his initial steps as a movie director, shooting semi-autobiographical film "Jo Jo Dancer, Your Life Is Calling.

Republicans take offensive on Nicaraguan Contra aid

By MIKE SHANAHAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - With a congressional replay of the fight over aid to the rebels in Nicaragua close at hand, President Reagan and his Republican allies have turned the tables on House Democrats and taken the offensive on the touchiest foreign policy issue facing the 99th Congress.

Little more than two weeks ago, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and other Democratic leaders appeared to have handed the president a significant defeat by rejecting not only a request for $14 million in military assistance for the rightist Contras, but watered-down proposals for non-lethal help as well.

Momentarily, it seemed to matter little that the House also defeated a Democratic alternative to provide aid to refugees outside Nicaragua to be delivered by the United Nations and the International Red Cross, and to finance a peace-keeping force once a truce was reached in Nicaragua. But since those votes April 24 and 25, the political sentiment has shifted so dramatically that Reagan is almost certain to get his way, despite broad public opposition to the idea of sending aid to the rebels seeking to overthrow the Sandinista leadership.

How did the Democrats suddenly find themselves scrambling to regain the momentum in a way that will allow them to appear to be concerned about the spread of communism in Central America, yet resistant to indirect U.S. involvement in Nicaragua?

The first reason is a political strategy that backfired. House Democrats initially approved their ewn Nicaraguan aid proposal aimed mainly at getting the United States back into the middle of peace negotiations between Nicaragua and its Central and Latin American neighbors.

But under the rules, a second vote on the plan was required at the end of a long legislative day. And having defeated every Republican Contra aid initiative, many Democrats decided on the second vote to reverse themselves, and kill their own proposal.

The effect was to eliminate the need for any negotiations with the Republican-controlled Senate, and with it any chance that the Reagan plan might be revived.

But the strategy went awry by the next day because it appeared the vote by Democrat-led House had left the country without a policy toward Nicaragua.

"There were a lot of red faces around here on the day after the vote," said a senior staff member on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which had responsibility for the Nicaragua issue. The staff member spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Secondly, on the day after the final vote, Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega was captured by network television cameras

Dotson is seeking clemency

CHICAGO (AP) - Gary Dotson and the young housewife who says she lied when she accused him of rape take their efforts to free Dotson after six years in prison to Gov. James R. Thompson.

Dotson, 28, and Cathleen Crowell Webb were among 18 people listed as witnesses at an emergency hearing today to consider clemency - considered the showdown in a seesaw two-month legal struggle to free Dotson.

Thompson, who called the special session, took an unprecedented step in announcing he would join the 10-member Illinois Prisoner Review Board at Both Dotson and Mrs. Webb were armed with results of recent lie detector tests - evidence not allowed in court - they hoped would bolster their case.

The tests were administered by the same examiner, who said he believed Mrs. Webb and Dotson were truthful. Dotson's test was taken Monday night.

County prosecutors, who oppose efforts to free Dotson, and Mrs. Webb's foster parents, who say they have serious doubts about her new story, also indicated they would testify before the panel.

The review board would make its recommendation to Thompson after the hearing, which officials said could last two days. The governor has promised to act within days after receiving the recommendation, which he is not bound to follow.

Dotson can be freed in four ways: by a general pardon that doesn't proclaim his innocence; a pardon based on innocence that would clear his record; a pardon that could set conditions he would be required to meet to gain freedom; or by a commutation of his sentence.

On Wednesday Thompson, celebrating his 49th birthday at a small gathering in his Capitol office in Springfield, was given a T-shirt from staff lawyers. On one side of the white shirt were the words, "Go to jail, do not pass go." On the back, the shirt said, "Get out of jail free."

David Fields, Thompson's deputy press secretary, said the gift "was meant as a private joke."
