

Discover blows right inside tire

Blowout no problem in Discovery landing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts, their homcoming delayed 98 minutes by rain, glided safely back to Earth today at the end of a bittersweet journey that astronaut Sen. Jake Garn hailed as proof that "man is needed in space."

The 103-ton space plane blew one of its six tires as it rolled to a stop, but the astronauts were not aware of it and the rupture did not divert the craft from its center-line touchdown.

Fifty-five minutes after the landing, the crew left the shuttle for medical exams and showers. Garn walked unsteadily down the stairs, and waved and smiled weakly as he was helped into the astronauts' van.

Discovery, its final dash across central Florida heralded by sonic booms, dropped out of a clear sky and onto a 15,000-foot runway three miles from the launch pad it left a week ago and where shuttle Challenger is perched, 10 days from liftoff. Like the landing, Discovery's launch was delayed by rain.

With commander Karol Bobko at the controls, the shuttle touched down at 8:54 a.m. EST, swooping in from the south after making a series of wide circles above this spaceport. The ship had traveled 2.5 million miles.

"The Swat Team is home," said Mission Control, referring to the makeshift, flyswatter-like tools the astronauts used in an unsuccessful attempt to repair a satellite.

As the shuttle neared the end of its rollout, Mission Control told the astronauts, "I think you blew a right-hand outboard tire." Inspection later showed that it was an inboard tire that had blown, and television pictures showed it to be frayed.

Thousands of spectators at the landing strip and along nearby rivers and highways viewed the landing, the fifth here in 16 shuttle flights and fourth in succession.

An hour before touchdown, Bobko and pilot Don Williams fired braking rockets more than 200 miles above the Indian Ocean to slow the shuttle's speed and start it on a supersonic dive through the atmosphere.

The landing had originally been set for 7:16 a.m. But Mission Control had delayed the landing just 19 minutes before Bobko and pilot Don Williams were to have fired the braking rockets.

They were told to make one more circuit of the globe and try again.

During seven days in space the crew of six men and one woman logged many accomplishments and one big disappointment: the failure, through no fault of their own, to revive the $85 million Syncom communications satellite.

President Reagan and Garn, who is aboard as a congressional observer, had high praise Thursday for the astronauts' efforts.

Reagan, speaking to Discovery from the White House, told the crew it had "demonstrated a lot of ingenuity" in constructing makeshift tools, taking an unplanned space walk and flying to a rendezvous to try saving the powerless satellite launched from the ship's cargo bay Saturday.

Syncom could not be fixed because a switch which ground engineers thought was in the wrong position was not at fault.

Local woman tied to fence, raped

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

A 32-year-old Pampa woman was abducted at knifepoint from a northwest Pampa convenience store early this morning and taken to a rural area west of town where she was tied to a chain link fence and raped, police reported.

The victim was getting into her car on the parking lot of the store about 1:15 a.m. today when a lanky white man walked up from behind, authorities said.

The man pulled out a knife and ordered the woman to get into the car on the passenger's side in the front seat, police said. The suspect climbed into the car and tied the woman's hands with rope, the victim told police.

The suspect got behind the wheel of her car and drove the bound victim along 23rd Avenue to a spot two miles west of town, police said. He parked on the dirt road near a well pumping unit, according to reports.

The armed assailant yanked the woman from the car and pulled her to a chain link fence near the road, Chief J.J. Ryzman said. The suspect tied the woman to the fence, he said. She was partially stripped and then sexually assaulted, Ryzman said.

While the man assaulted the woman tied to the fence, a pickup truck going west on the road went past, police reported. The pickup stopped, turned around, and again drove past the ongoing assault, Ryzman said.

"If anyone knows this possible witness to the incident, please call police as soon as possible," the chief said.

After finishing the sexual assault, the man freed the woman from the fence and keeping her hands bound with the rope, ordered the victim back into the car, police said.

The man drove around with the woman, but finally returned to the area near the convenience store, Ryzman said. He untied her hands, left the keys in the car, and took off, according to reports.

Composite from victim's description

The man may have left the area in a pickup truck, police said.

The woman called police, and she was taken to Coronado Community Hospital for a rape examination.

Police have released a composite picture of the suspect (see reproduction this page). The woman described the white man as being in his late 20s. She said he was 6' to 6'2" tall and weighed about 160 pounds. He reportedly had a dark complexion, dark brown, neatly-trimmed hair and a dark mustache. He reportedly wore a camouflage-type cap, blue jeans and a plaid brown shirt.

Ryzman asked anyone with information about the assault to call the police department at 669-7407.

Approval of zoning changes recommended by panel

BY LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Members of the Planning and Zoning Commission held two public hearings, reviewed a plat and annexation request and discussed zoning matters during their regular meeting Thursday afternoon.

The first public hearing dealt with a request for a zoning change from Single Family 3 District to Specific Use Permit for an area in the Wilcox Addition in the east section of the city.

The area requested for the permit is lots 22 through 26 in Block 8 of the addition, located at the corner of Campbell and Talley.

Sherman Cowan, owner of the lots, said he wants to turn a residence at the location into a day-care center. He said there's currently no center in that area, and the center would help residents in the area who work to have a place for their children without having to drive to other parts of the city.

Cowan said he had talked to surrounding neighbors and had received no objections.

Forrest Cloyd, technician with the city Engineering Department, said one protest had been received by letter, but the property owner doesn't live in the area proposed for the permit.

Cowan said state personnel have already checked the site and found it in compliance with requirements. He said the residence could handle 35 children for the day-care operations.

Leo Braswell, commission member, said, "Frankly, I'm glad to see something in that part of town" and expressed his approval of the plan.

No one at the meeting spoke in opposition to the permit request, and the commission approved recommending the request to the city commission.

The other public hearing concerned a request for a zoning change from Office District to Retail District for all of Lot 3, Block 1, of the NBC Plaza Addition, the offices located behind the National Bank of Commerce building.

Jim Gardner said some tenants have expressed interest in stores and businesses for the office complex. Gardner said the stores would not necessarily be retail, but they would be stores permitted under the retail classification and not under the office designation.

No one at the meeting expressed any objections to the change, and the commission approved recommending the zoning change to the city commission.

The commission took action on three items relating to the Morgan Addition, located north of Coronado Community Hospital and west of Hwy. 70.

The commission members approved the preliminary plat, subject to a modification of a south entrance in relation to probable future extension of Duncan St.

In the other two items relating to the addition, the commission approved recommending annexation of the addition and the nearby Forrest Hills property and providing a zoning change from Agriculture to Retail District for the Morgan Addition.

In other business, the commission set May 16 as a date for a public hearing on a request for a Specific Use Permit in the northwest quarter of Section 115, Block 3, I&G RRC Survey, to permit drilling and production of oil and gas.

The property is located between Gwendolen and Kentucky and east of Price Road in the Tumbleweed Addition.

Joe Curtis of Triple J Oil Co. said his firm plans to drill two wells in the area, located within the city limits. He said there are other producing wells in the area, but they lie outside the city limits.

Cloyd said city ordinances permit drilling within the city limits under the Specific Use Permit designation.

Triple J has mineral rights in the area, while JR Development, Inc., owns the surface rights, with plans to build trailer parks in the area.

Commission member Ralph Milliron said the mineral rights were existent prior to the annexation of the land into the city.

Commission members noted there might be a need to find accommodation between the rights of the mineral owners and the property owners, but said such matters could be discussed at the public hearing.

Inmate follows his brother to death in electric chair

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — James D. Briley led the nation's largest death-row escape and fellow inmates staged a bloody uprising to block his execution, but the convicted murderer of a pregnant woman and her young son died in the electric chair last occupied by his brother.

Briley, who got married in a prison wedding three weeks ago, had no final statement and smiled. He asked the witnesses twice, "Are you happy?" He told the chaplain "I love you," said Kathi King, operations officer for the State Penitentiary.

He was pronounced dead at 11:07 p.m. Thursday, Ms. King said.

Earlier in the day inmates at the prison rioted to try to block the electrocution, injuring nine guards and a prisoner. The disturbance prompted an indefinite lockdown at the 800-inmate institution.

Briley was the 42nd person executed in the United States since the Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976 and the third person in Virginia. The last execution in the state was that of Linwood Briley, on Oct. 12.

Medal recipient urges Reagan to cancel visit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel, accepting a Congressional Gold Medal from President Reagan today, implored Reagan not to go through with his plan to visit a Germany military cemetery next month where Nazi SS troops are buried.

Praising Reagan as "a friend of the Jewish people," Wiesel told Reagan he was compelled "to speak truth to power" and did so with respect and admiration.

"I wouldn't be the person I am, and you wouldn't respect me for what I am if I were not to tell you also of the sadness that is in my heart" over Reagan's plan to lay a wreath at the Bitburg military cemetery during a visit to West Germany next month.

Saying he was convinced Reagan didn't know at the time he made the decision to go to Bitburg that members of the SS were buried there, Wiesel said, "May I, Mr. President, implore you to do something else, to find another way, to find another site. That is not your place."

Reagan, sitting behind Wiesel

after presenting the medal honoring the survivor's work in keeping the memory of the Holocaust alive, listened intently and appeared close to tears.

The president, who already had paid tribute to Wiesel without mentioning the storm of controversy swirling about the cemetery visit, did not respond when Wiesel finished, except to stand and shake hands with the honoree.

Reagan, speaking to editors and broadcasters at a White House luncheon Thursday, said he had no plans to cancel the visit to the small military cemetery in the southwestern German town of Bitburg.

"I think that it would be very hurtful and all it would do is leave me looking as if I caved in in the face of some unfavorable attention," the president said.

He conceded that some of the 2,000 or so graves in the cemetery are those of SS troops — "the villains, as we know, that conducted the persecutions and all."

Tax hike or not, it'll cost more to call

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says it's not a tax hike. Rep. Bruce Gibson says it's not a tax hike. Some House members are not convinced.

Nevertheless, the House on Thursday gave voice vote final approval to Gibson's rewrite of the state's 1907 telecommunications tax law. The bill would add the sales tax to intrastate long distance calls and enhanced phone services, such as call forwarding.

Under the current law, phone companies pay gross receipts tax on those services. Those costs are passed on to consumers. The Gibson bill removes that tax.

San Antonio Rep. Kae Patrick wasn't so sure.

"Are we voting for a tax increase?" he asked Gibson, searching for the often-elusive one-word answer.

Gibson, D-Cleburne, replied, "The primary purpose is to equalize taxes. It has the effect of increasing revenues. So, the answer is, well..."

That's as far as he went.

Gibson's telecommunications tax bill eventually would bring the state about $4.5 million a year in added revenue.

Gov. Mark White, a no-new-taxes cheerleader this year, is persuaded. "I'm assured it is not going to be an increase in taxes, and in a great many ways it can be shown it will be a reduction," he said.

The House Appropriations Committee took another look at its proposed $101.6 million fee hike bill. It had been scheduled for House debate Wednesday, but was postponed because of technical errors.

The errors were ironed out by the committee Thursday, and the bill should be on the floor Monday. In addition to making the changes, the committee added Houston Rep. Mike Toomey's amendment that could complicate the already tricky appropriations process.

The fee hike package includes a $2 hike in the cost of a four-year drivers' license.

ACT I's 'Blythe Spirit' an evening of top entertainment

By LINDA HAYNES
Guest Reviewer

The urbane and witty Noel Coward dazzled British audiences of the '30s with his sparkling repartee and sophistication, and the Pampa audience should be no less impressed by the drawing room comedy "Blithe Spirit," produced by ACT I, on stage at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Pampa Middle School. Although American audiences of the '80s may have some difficulty adjusting to the leisurely pace of the play, it will certainly provide an evening of fine entertainment.

After a slow first scene, when Coward's writing is more wordy than witty, the play's lively characters grab the imagination and provide several moments of sheer fun.

The play concerns the dilemma of Charles Condomine, who, with his wife and some friends, invites a "medium" to conduct a seance as a mild diversion for an evening's fun. However, the parlor game invokes the first Mrs. Condomine who had died several years before in the very room "from a fit of laughter caused by a program on the BBC."

Although seen only by her late husband, the late Mrs. Condomine or Elvira, the "blithe spirit," proceeds to disrupt the life of the entire household.

With the smooth blocking and professional directing of director Rochelle Lacy, the scenes involving Condomine, his wife, and the ghost of his first wife are fast paced and elegant. The play even has a surprise ending to delight the audience.

The local actors do a creditable job with the ultra-sophisticated Coward characters. Gus Shaver as Ruth, the second Mrs. Condomine, settles comfortably into her British accent, and by the second act makes us believe she is the frustrated second wife trying to deal with a ghostly rival. Richard Crosswhite as Charles Condomine, the "astral bigamist" as his wife calls him, even has the looks of the typical Coward hero with his cool blonde hair, sedate mustache, and unflappable demeanor.

Dr. and Mrs. Bradman, played by Rob Martin and Rhonda McGuire, are the subtly bickering couple who get to witness the strange happenings at the Condomine household.

The ensemble as a group is strong, but three of the actresses are the real jewels in this crown. Kayla Richerson as Edith turns a very small role into an enticing cameo with a perfect costume, and every action, every piece of business timed perfectly to portray the hyperactive, somewhat dense maid Edith. Leah Gilbert as Elvira, again in perfect costume for the period, is marvelously graceful and fluid, with a just-right touch of pouting demureness and whimsey as the blithe spirit herself.

Both women show the professionalism and ease produced by much experience on the stage, and their characters certainly shine for it.

My favorite character is Madame Arcati, portrayed by Cathy Spaulding. Arcati, the medium who finally succeeds in producing a "materialization," is the type of character Coward did so well, and Spaulding plays it to the hilt. Her Eleanor Roosevelt-type voice, her eccentric clothes, the exotic jewelry, even the feather pen which she draws from her purse with a flourish, are all priceless. Spaulding has the sparkle of a natural-born character actress, and we can expect to see her back on stage in future productions.

The play concludes ACT I's second season as Pampa's community theatre. Although the production suffers some inconsistencies (some costuming is inappropriate for the period, some parts of the stage setting are also out of sync), it certainly provides the theatre-goer with an evening of fun, and a look at a world almost forgotten by our television-bred generation.

Inmate tells about brothel operation

CONROE, Texas (AP) - A Texas prison inmate is telling investigators how he ran a brothel from his prison cell under the condition that prosecutors seek to have his wife's bond reduced, authorities say.

Raymond Carl Freda Sr., 51, was indicted last month on charges he ran a prostitution ring called the Hot Tub Club using his prison connections.

Freda is currently serving a life sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections' Eastham Unit near Lovelady, but was transferred to Montgomery County Jail after he was indicted.

Benefit dinner slated at Skellytown

SKELLYTOWN - Skellytown residents will give a benefit dinner for Lee Roby, 27, from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Sunday at Norma's Corner Cafe.

All proceeds from the dinner will go to pay medical expenses related to Mrs. Roby's treatments for cancer.

The woman's husband, Loren Roby, is presently unemployed, and the couple has no medical insurance, organizers said. The couple has two small children, a boy, 8, and a girl, 2.

Lee Roby is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lovell Kennard of Skellytown.

She must go to Amarillo for the cancer treatments.

Tickets for the benefit dinner are $5 for adults and $2.50 for children ages six through 12, with children under age six admitted free. The dinner will feature ham and fried chicken and all of the trimmings.

Skellytown residents have donated the meats and vegetables. Those who attend the dinner are asked to make a salad and/or dessert and bring them to the cafe Saturday or Sunday morning.

Residents may get advance tickets and more information from Mrs. Freida Sturgill by calling 848-2287 or at the cafe. They may also be purchased at the door on Sunday.

Lucas' companion to face questioning by grand jury

WACO, Texas (AP) - Ottis Ellwood Toole, traveling companion of self-proclaimed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas, will be brought to this Central Texas city to help a grand jury determine the truth behind Lucas' confessions, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

"You can't investigate Henry without investigating Ottis," said Mattox.

The McLennan County grand jury today will probably set a date to continue its Lucas investigation, said District Attorney Vic Feazell. Lucas testified for more than eight hours Thursday before the panel.

Feazell said the grand jury will probably reconvene in two weeks. The panel had recessed at about 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

"Henry is being consistent in what he is telling us," said Mattox. "That is not necessarily consistent with what he has said in the past. But he is being consistent with what he's told us since we've been talking with him."

He said he wants a complete investigation of all of Lucas' confessions, including interviewing Toole, who remains in a Florida jail under a death penalty. Lucas, 48, had claimed responsibility for as many as 600 killings nationwide but the Dallas Times Herald reported this week that he now claims responsibility for just three.

The grand jury inquiry was spurred by Lucas' confession to the 1981 murder of Dorothy Collins, 25, at a time when officers believed another suspect was on the verge of confessing, authorities said.

Mattox, saying he believes he can convince Gov. Mark White to provide necessary funds for a continuing investigation of Lucas, added, "I'm going to visit with (White) next week to talk about the matter."

"We've already invested a substantial amount of state funds in this task force, and I think it's reasonable now for us to invest additional state funds to try to clear up questions or problems that may have developed either as a result of the (Texas Ranger Homicide) Task Force's activity or as a result of local activities," said Mattox.

GOP solon eyes run for governor

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republican Congressman Tom Loeffler says he is "seriously considering" running for governor in 1986.

Loeffler, 39, has been in Congress since 1979 after winning the seat vacated by Bob Krueger, who ran unsuccessfully for the U.S. Senate.

"I have been contacted by numerous individuals urging me to run for governor in 1986," Loeffler said in a statement issued by his office. "I am giving that race very serious consideration and will make a decision in the near future."

Loeffler's executive assistant, Mac Thornberry, said Friday that rumors began flying at the state Capitol on Thursday that Loeffler was about to resign and announce his candidacy.

"That is not true," Thornberry said.

The list of rumored possible GOP challengers to Democratic Gov. Mark White is long. It includes:

- Gov. Bill Clements, who reportedly met with State Republican Chairman George Strake and top GOP leaders in Dallas last Sunday;
- Former Speaker Bill Clayton, who has strong urgings from the GOP to switch parties in hopes of attracting conservative Democrats;
- Kent Hance, former Democratic congressman and Senate candidate, who said last week he has made no decision;
- Republican state Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown, Lake Jackson, who says he is considering a gubernatorial or attorney general race; and
- Former state Sens. Bill Meier of Euless and Mike Richards of Houston.

Senate okays 'workshare' plan and judicial redistricting

AUSTIN (AP) — Proposals to close the gap between supply and demand for human organs for transplant have been approved by the Senate.

The Senate also voted Thursday to create a "workshare" program and to reapportion judicial districts for the first time in more than a century.

Senators tentatively approved a bill to reduce the state's share paid into state employee and teacher retirement systems, which would save nearly $110 million in 1986-87.

The House-approved "workshare" bill was sent to the governor on a 31-0 vote without debate but would, according to House sponsor Lloyd Criss, "save thousands of jobs for Texas workers and millions of dollars for Texas employers in hard economic times."

Worksharing allows employers to put employees on a reduced work-week when faced with the need to cut back. The concept involves reducing everyone's hours, rather than laying off some employees altogether.

"In addition to the very obvious advantage of keeping his job, a worker usually retains 94-96 percent of his normal take-home pay, plus insurance and pension benefits," said Criss, D-La Marque.

A bill by Sen. Kent Caperton would create a board of judges, lawyers and legislators to reapportion judicial districts, if the voters approve a proposed constitutional amendment in November 1986. There has been no judicial redistricting in Texas since 1876, according to a printed bill analysis.

Caperton, D-Bryan, said certain courts are "over-burdened" and others are "under-burdened," and reapportioning judicial districts every 10 years could equalize court dockets.

"This is nothing any judge should be fearful of," said Caperton.

The Legislature would have final authority to approve a reapportionment order.

Four bills designed to make more organs available for transplant were approved and sent to the House.

One would establish an office within the state health department to coordinate the procurement of human tissue and organs.

A second bill would require hospitals to set up a system for identifying suitable organ and tissue donors, as well as making an effort to inform families when organs might be donated.

Another measure would authorize justices of the peace or medical examiners to permit the removal of organs such as kidneys and hearts if there is no objection. Yet another bill would require notifying the next-of-kin that he or she can object to the removal of corneal tissue from a deceased individual.

Tentatively approved was Sen. Grant Jones' bill to reduce the state's contribution to the Employees Retirement System from 8 percent to 7.4 percent of the employee's salary. The bill would reduce from 8.5 percent to 8 percent the state's contribution to the Teacher Retirement System.

Jones, D-Abilene, failed 12-16 in his attempt to suspend the rules and finally approve the measure, so another vote is needed to send the bill to the House.

Another Jones bill approved by the Senate would require gross premium taxes paid under protest to be paid directly to the general revenue fund, which would make an additional $110 million available for the state budget in 1986-87.

Other Senate bills approved and sent to the House would:

— Protect sand dunes on mainland beaches in Brazoria, Chambers, Matagorda and Jefferson counties.

— Require elected officials to file financial disclosure statements.

— Allow judges to raise monthly probation fees from $15 to $25.

Aides of Johnson say his poverty program worked

AUSTIN (AP) — Millions of Americans gained from the Great Society, and Lyndon Johnson's anti-poverty programs have gotten a bum rap recently from conservative critics, several former LBJ aides say.

"What Lyndon Johnson did to his great, I think imperishable, credit was to get the majority to discriminate on behalf of the minority," said R. Sargent Shriver, one-time Johnson aide and 1972 Democratic vice presidential candidate.

"The minority were human beings just like the majority, and this country can only prevail when we're united — rich and poor. He stood for that, Lyndon Johnson did," Shriver said.

Shriver and other Johnson assistants Thursday began a two-day symposium critiquing the Great Society 20 years later. The sessions are sponsored by the University of Texas and its Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs.

Participants are examining the War on Poverty and the civil rights, education and health legislation passed during Johnson's administration, some of which now is being criticized as costly and ineffective.

Shriver, also Peace Corp director in the 1960s, said today's "Reagan Revolution" is different from the social change wrought under Johnson's leadership because Reagan's policies help the majority of Americans.

"What President Reagan is doing is catering to the majority, who are well-to-do, at the expense of the minority who are poor," he said.

"We have had the largest increase in the poverty population of America since 1979 that we've ever sustained since they collected records on poverty. The number has increased by 9 million," Shriver said.

For that trend to reverse, many people must be convinced that the rugged individualist doesn't have all the answers, he said.

"I think that we've got, somehow or other, to convince Americans that John Wayne and individualism are not the only symbols of our society," Shriver said.

"I think our country was founded by people who had a great sense of the United States being a ... new community of people, all of whom had a sense of civic responsibility for one another.

"A sense of community has been lost. A sense of caring has been. Nobody cares about anybody else," Shriver said.

While some conservative critics now say the Great Society cost too much and did too little, proof of its success easily can be found in the achievements of young people who were helped by the programs, former U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan said.

"These programs were not mere words, friends; there are flesh-and-blood examples of what these programs meant. The legacy of Lyndon Johnson continues to enrich our lives," Ms. Jordan said.

"He saw the enemy, and the enemy was not government. The enemy was ignorance, poverty, disease, ugliness, injustice, discrimination. He believed that it was the duty of government to defeat the enemy."

The Great Society was the benchmark of Johnson's presidency, Ms. Jordan said, adding that Head Start, for preschoolers, and the Job Corps training programs were sparking high points.

"Even though the Job Corps right now is being threatened by the budget ax, we cannot ignore that many who otherwise would not have been helped were helped," she said.

Texas Guard troops say Honduran mission a success

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas National Guard troops made some lasting friends for the United States while on a training exercise in Honduras, the reservists say.

"This task force has done more to bond the Honduran military and civilian populace to Americans than anything else," said Lt. Col. Federico Lopez, task force commander.

Lopez made the remarks in a brief speech late Thursday after the first plane load of about 150 men landed at Kelly Air Force Base.

About 400 guardsmen left Honduras Thursday, returning to the United States after a three-week Big Pine III training exercise with the U.S. Army and Honduran troops.

Officials said the purpose of the mission was to train the Hondurans in tank warfare.

But Lopez said the soldiers were able to offer medical care and dig wells for three villages.

"Those people learned to respect us," he said.

The soldiers appeared tired and solemn as they trailed from the cargo plane to a hangar. They deposited their luggage outside the hangar, where a U.S. Customs Service dog sniffed their belongings for narcotics.

The inspection is routine in customs screening, said Phebe Brown of the base public affairs office.

"They certainly don't expect to find anything. But it has to be done," she said.

Morale among the troops was high throughout the exercise, said Aroldo De Leon, 45, of Pharr.

"We had a good time. We enjoyed it," he said. "The weather was hot and dusty, but we got accustomed to it after a few days."

Temperatures simmered as high as 128 degrees during the mission, officials said.

The training exercise was fairly routine, said Sgt. Ramon Gomez, 50, of Alamo.

"I'm very glad to be back. I had fun. It was a great experience," he said.

Only one soldier suffered any health problems during the mission, said Maj. David Cottom, guard spokesman.

The soldier suffered a blood disorder or hepatitis, Cottom said, and was separated from the rest of the troops. He, too, was sent home Thursday.

Lt. Col. Danny Kohler, joint task force commander, described the training exercise as "quite a training accomplishment."

"It was a mobilization exercise we don't normally get to perform. We were in a more realistic situation and we benefited from that," he said.

Texas Gov. Mark White visited the troops last week, putting on a barbecue feast for the soldiers.

How to serve a community

You could have knocked me over with a feather when The Pampa News won the West Texas Chamber of Commerce's Community Service Award during the Panhandle Press Association Convention last week.

The reason? Freedom Newspapers don't win a lot of community service awards because the people who usually give such awards don't agree with us on what constitutes community service.

Our award came from extensive coverage of a project. Editorial endorsement is usually required.

But we don't editorially support projects that usually lead to community service awards — things like bond issues, obtaining government grants, the passage of restrictive laws, and increasing taxes as a means of financing community projects.

There are some people out there (usually those involved in government) who think Freedom Newspapers' refusal to endorse such activities actually hinders the progress of communities. They see us as obstacles in the path of progress, and and we would not rank very high on their lists of newspapers that should receive community service awards.

But we don't see it that way. In fact, we believe that if we engaged in such activities we would harm our community, not help it. We think that doing what we can to defend the rights of citizens is the most important contribution we can make to any community.

Why is there such basic disagreement between the philosophy of Freedom Newspapers and many of those who are described as "community leaders?"

There are two reasons.

1. They don't think progress is possible unless some are empowered to give orders and others are compelled to obey. We do not think that is a necessary pre-condition. We think real progress can come only from people voluntarily working together in their own self-interest.

2. How to "achieve progress" is their main objective in community affairs. How to achieve a society in which citizens are free to keep what they earn and live as they please is our main objective.

For example, most "community leaders" would view a bond issue as a proper method of obtaining a facility beneficial to the community. But we would see it as an effort by one group of citizens to force others to pay for something they didn't want.

We can usually make a pretty good argument that there is a better way to obtain that facility. But even if the alternative was not having that facility, we wouldn't support any activity that would empower the majority to forcibly seize the property of the minority.

When government finds a way to allow those who want something to pay for it without compelling those who don't want it to do the same, then our support will be forthcoming.

In the meantime, we are grateful to the folks at the West Texas Chamber of Commerce for feeling that we have been a positive force and choosing us for their community service award. We probably won't get many more like that.

Tandy Corp. earnings drop

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Tandy Corp. reported Thursday that its third quarter earnings dropped 65 percent, in part because of a writedown of $18.25 million on computer hardware and software.

The computer and electronics firm, which markets products through its Radio Shack chain of stores, posted earnings of $21.9 million, or 25 cents per share, for the quarter ended March 31. That compares with earnings of $62.57 million, or 60 cents per share, for the same period of 1984.

Sales for the period were $670.5 million, up 2 percent from $656.1 million for the third quarter of fiscal 1984.

For the nine-month period ending March 31, sales were up slightly, from nearly $2.138 billion to more than $2.160 billion.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Their belts don't ever get tightened

One of the hottest topics in Congress these days is what to do about the federal deficit. How do you save the sacred cows while improving the cash flow on the farm? So far the options have ranged from tax increases to "revenue enhancements," and a few brave souls have even mentioned cutting the defense budget.

It's hard slogging, this government work, but the rewards...

Here's one of them: five federally-financed lodges, supported by the taxpayers, charging budget rates for first-class accommodations. Run by the National Park Service, the luxurious hideaways are open only to congressmen, high-ranking administration officials, Supreme Court Justices and former presidents.

Interior Department officials say it is difficult to estimate just how large a subsidy these bigwigs are getting. Translation: if the poor taxpayers knew what they were being asked to pay for, they'd be very upset—and we don't want that, do we? Suffice to say none of the resorts are as much as breaking even. Here's why:

Camp Hoover was built—and paid for—by President Hoover, who wanted a reliable fishing resort only 100 miles from Washington. There are commercial resorts in the area. Big Meadows Lodge, just down the road from Camp Hoover, charges $47 per night for a single room. Government bigwigs pay $22 per person per night at Camp Hoover.

They pay almost half that for a stay at the former park superintendent's house on Cape Hatteras—$25 per night for two. A stay in the Grand Tetons is most expensive, but you get Brinkerhoff House, a four-bedroom log cabin 50 yards from Jackson Lake with a perfect view of 12,605 foot Mt. Moran and the rest of the Teton range. The cost? Just $65 per day, for two.

Lest we forget, there's Little Cinnamon Bay House in the Virgin Islands. That's where Jimmy Carter plans to vacation this year. His cost, including Rosalyn and Amy, is just $65 per day. Non-government tourists can expect to pay nearly twice that amount for just a hotel room. But, of course, they don't have the taxpayers to make up the difference between actual cost of operating the facilities and the amount the bigwigs pay.

The next time you read about congressional and presidential concerns over the deficits—about how taxes must be increased just to keep "essential" government programs in place—think about Carter's Caribbean vacation or the planned stay at Camp Hoover by Sen. Sam Nunn and deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

Don't you wonder why the belt-tightening never affects the belt-tighteners?

'Go-go' banking is risky

The recent action of the Ohio State government in temporarily closing 70 savings and loan associations has caused concern far beyond the borders of that state or of the United States. Among other things, it triggered a sell-off of dollars on the international money markets, thereby arresting the giddy rise in the value of the U.S. dollar.

Americans weren't as alarmed about the closures as the Europeans because they understood that the Ohio problem was a special situation. Only five states have private or state insurance plans for deposits in thrift institutions. Similar institutions in other states are covered by federal deposit insurance which is backed by the full faith and credit of the United States.

Nevertheless, the U.S. public is far from unconcerned. The media attention focused on the Ohio closings has reminded Americans that those who seek above normal returns on their money may be exposed to an above normal degree of risk. Indeed the Ohio situation is a reminder of the need for individual and public prudence with respect to financial institutions.

The last couple of years have seen some disturbing situations with respect to financial institutions, notably the mess at the Continental Illinois Bank which necessitated a huge federal bailout. In Tennessee, the collapse of the butcher banking empire exposed manipulation of banking institutions and the weakness of state bank examination procedures.

Since the early 1970s, U.S. financial institutions have been in process of extraordinary change.

Banks and thrift institutions have encountered a host of new competitors. A technological revolution, which makes possible international money transfers in a few minutes, introduced not only new opportunities but a new degree of vulnerability to shifts in funds. The deregulation fever has been strong in the financial community as it has been in other industries. Indeed "deregulation" has become a catchword and panacea. Some elements in the banking community have insisted that banks should get into a variety of associated businesses, some of them with high-risk characteristics.

The Ohio situation, while marginally important, is a reminder of the need for prudence in the operation of all financial institutions. The first requirement for a bank or thrift institution must be the safety of the deposits. A bank has a fiduciary responsibility, meaning it holds something in trust for another. That responsibility comes ahead of its role as a money-making machine.

This was well-understood by the generation of Americans who lived through the Great Depression and saw the door of America's banks closed shut in 1933. However, people who lived through that era are only a small proportion of the U.S. population now. A new generation was brought up on go-go banking. A measure of prudence has been lost and must be regained.

Financial institutions need to review and tighten their procedures. Bank examination must be more thorough. The public, for its part, should not expect exceptional returns without considerable risk.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, April 19, the 109th day of 1985. There are 256 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On April 19, 1775, the American Revolutionary War began with the Battles of Lexington and Concord.

On this date:

Ten years ago: India announced it had launched its first satellite, from the Soviet Union atop a Soviet rocket.

Five years ago: Japan — Iran's biggest oil customer — announced it would not pay a higher price demanded by Tehran.

One year ago: With the standoff at the Libyan Embassy in London continuing, Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy demanded that Britain end the siege.

Today's birthdays: Actor Don Adams is 58. Actor Hugh O'Brian is 55. Actor Dick Sargent is 52. Actor-comedian Dudley Moore is 50. Actress Elinor Donahue is 48. Tennis player Sue Barker is 29.

People who live longer

Somewhere in the world are people exposed to an environment similar to ours, yet they are living 6.2 years longer. And their secret is no longer secret.

These "special people" have less large bowel cancer, less colon cancer, less heart disease, less bladder cancer, less prostate cancer, less lung cancer.

These extraordinarily healthy people would have been all over the headlines a long time ago except that they are characteristically conservative, careful, determined that their own statistics be credible.

These people who have somehow managed to improve both the quality and quantity of their lives are our own nation's Seventh Day Adventists.

Their religion since its beginnings has emphasized self-discipline.

Complicating statistical studies are these variables: Only about half of Adventists are vegetarians and the vegetarians are divided into three categories.

Adventists do not smoke, do not drink alcohol, and most do not drink coffee.

Despite inconsistencies among Adventists, the evidence I have examined affirms that their life expectancy exceeds the average by 6.2 years.

One study narrowed to the consumption of coffee only and covering a period of 20 years revealed an increased incidence of fatal colon and bladder cancer among individuals who consume two or more cups of coffee per day.

Vegetarian Adventists, generally, have lower blood pressure, lower cholesterol levels.

It may be argued that Adventists behave themselves otherwise. That their religion tends to reduce debilitating emotional stress as well.

We can't prove that yet. This we can prove: Adventist women with breast cancer are less likely to die from it.

The risk of death due to ischemic heart disease among Adventists, male and female, is half what it is for the general population.

In essence — and at the risk of oversimplifying — the diet proved best for Adventists is "less fat, more fiber."

How, in an era of fast-food restaurants, does one manage a "low-fat" diet?

Adventists have been known to order a cheeseburger "and hold the burger."

Some restaurants accommodate vegetarians with "stuffed baked potatoes" and a salad bar.

America's 631,000 Adventists have now supplied us with nearly as much evidence about "diet" as we had about cigarettes when your government first sounded that alert.

Yet most of us, including some Adventists, know better than we do.

Understandably — and statistically — lifelong Adventists have a head start toward longer life. But parallel studies reveal proportionate health benefits to the "late starters."

Doing your homework

When I first started to write from home, a free-lancer suggested we get together with two other journalists and rent an office. "We can share expenses and companionship," she said.

I quickly turned down the idea. I had been working in noisy, cluttered, ugly, windowless newspaper offices for years. I was looking forward to an at-home office with pictures and plants, windows and carpeting.

Now, four years later, I can see that working in unrelieved isolation has its problems and requires a tremendous adjustment. It also requires self-discipline, self-direction and resilience from the depression of solitary confinement.

I still haven't totally adapted, but, in this, I'm not alone. The advent of computers has ushered in the electronic cottage industry and the number of home-based workers is increasing weekly, particularly among banking, insurance and telephone companies.

One recent survey reports 450 companies employ about 100,000 "telecommuters" who work from home and are linked to the office with a computer terminal.

A futurist predicts that by the year 2000, 10 percent of the work force, or more than 10 million people, will be telecommuting. Add to that the consultants, writers and artists already working at home — plus the boom in at-home businesses, mostly run by women — and you begin to get the picture.

Working at home certainly has its pluses. Quiet is one. It's a bonus to be able to shut out the world and really concentrate. This may be why one study by a New York consulting firm showed productivity of at-home telecommuters increased 30 percent.

And those of us working at home get to dress any way we want. I've made phone calls to New York in my nightgown. Others prefer to get dressed every day just as though they were going to the office. One businesswoman says she even carries a purse down the hall from her bedroom to her office and starts work promptly at 9 a.m.

I like not having to go to staff meetings, not having to play the game of office politics. I don't miss the tension-racked drive during rush hour. When I'm germinating an idea, I can also water the plants, throw in a load of wash or walk the dog around the block.

Many women appreciate working at home and being able to keep an eye on young children or to be home when older kids return from school.

But despite the advantages, many homebodies miss the office camaraderie — the togetherness of sharing lives and gripes that author Studs Terkel called "schmoozing." There's something about saying "good morning" to a lot of people that starts a day off right — and something therapeutic about laughs at lunch with a colleague.

When I worked in an office, I seldom took work home. Now, I find myself working into the evening or taking a Saturday morning to clear up the clutter in my office. One telecommuter said, "There's always something to do, and as soon as you think about it, there's no reason not to do it."

Easy access to the refrigerator is perhaps the biggest danger to at-home employees. Some have even asked to return to the office when they became alarmed about weight gains.

Because of our increasing numbers, housebound workers are beginning to swap methods of offsetting the disadvantages. Some recommend lunches out, evening classes and joining professional organizations to keep up contacts and fight off cabin fever. Being in an office, we're finding, isn't the only way to get a sense of belonging.

The 1990s is going to be a different world in many ways. Neighborhoods will no longer be streets of empty houses by day — but a community of people working at home.

More violence in South Africa; white man set afire

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A black mob entered a white suburb of Port Elizabeth and set a white man afire, seriously injuring him, and five blacks were killed in unrest near the city — two burned by blacks and three shot by police, police said.

The Thursday evening attack on the white man, Erasmus Jacobs, was the first on a white in a white area during the current agitation against apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation.

It was the second attack by blacks against whites in nine months of violence that has left more than 300 blacks dead.

Jacobs was in a parked car waiting for a friend in the suburb Uitenhage who was in a cafe to buy a loaf of bread when he was dragged from the car and set alight, The Port Elizabeth Evening Post said.

The paper quoted Jacobs' companion, Carel van der Mescht, as saying that when he emerged from the shop, Jacobs was in flames on the sidewalk and shouted, "Go away, you can't help, there are too many of them."

Van der Mescht said he fled in his car as the mob threw bricks at him. A police patrol rescued Jacobs before Van der Mescht returned 10 minutes later, police said.

Dr. Leon Cilliers, chief superintendent of Port Elizabeth Provincial Hospital, said Jacobs had second-degree burns over more than 80 percent of his body. He said Jacobs was in stable condition today, but his life was in danger. Cilliers said Jacobs told him the crowd poured kerosene on him and set him on fire.

Such attacks by black mobs have become common in recent weeks, but the targets have always been other blacks regarded as collaborators with the white-minority government. The only other white victim of the unrest, a 3-week-old boy, was killed in October when blacks stoned a car traveling through a black township.

Police shot dead three blacks in Despatch, near Uitenhage, a white suburb of Port Elizabeth, in a clash with rioters Thursday night and a black crowd burned two black men, ages 17 and 22, to death in Kwazakhele township near Port Elizabeth, a police spokesman said.

In a rare comment on the unrest across the country, police headquarters said today: "Anarchists and radicals continued their attempts to cause the breakdown of law and order. ... It would appear that negotiation with these people is impossible, as they continue to commit acts of senseless violence against all and sundry."

In Cape Town, President P.W. Botha told Parliament there was "a drastic escalation of the revolutionary climate in our country." He repeated his appeal for an informal forum of black leaders to consult on a future constitutional system giving the voteless black majority of 22 million some political voice. The idea has been largely rejected by blacks as a hollow gesture that offers no real prospect of shared power. There are 5 million blacks in South Africa.

Governor is pleased with legislature progress

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says he is still convinced the 69th Legislature will take care of most of its pressing issues without any new taxes.

"The Legislature this session has performed exceptionally well," White told his Thursday news conference. "They have undertaken their responsibilities and moved quickly to resolve many issues."

White noted a bill providing unemployment compensation for farm workers had passed both houses.

"And the water plan should be forthcoming soon, in several days or weeks," White said of the statewide proposal in a House-Senate committee.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis met privately Wednesday in an effort to speed up the stalled compromise talks.

"I think we will have a budget that will be tighter than in the past and it will be passed without any requirement for new taxes," White said.

White repeated that he thought about $125 million a year could be found to finance increased indigent health care without imposing a "sick tax" on private and public hospitals.

White said his proposal for funding indigent health care included a $5 per case increase in filing fees for minor misdemeanor court cases; levying a state cigarette tax to take over the eight cents federal tax due to be repealed; and getting help from public medical schools to treat indigents.

"I don't think there is any need to increase a tax so long as we have this available source of revenue," White said.

He said he had talked with House and Senate leaders about a state college tuition increase plan to be debated next week by the Senate. Tuition rates would triple for resident students in 1986, with even higher raises for non-resident and foreign students, for an increase in state revenue of more than $280 million.

"I think it is a thoughtful plan that meets those plans I was concerned about," White said, referring to his insistence that any tuition increase include provisions for needy students who cannot pay the fees.

"I would sign it unless there is something in there other than I have described," White said.

On other issues at the news conference, White said:

— He did not think Attorney General Jim Mattox needed any more state money to carry on his investigation of Henry Lucas, who confessed to hundreds of murders then recanted many of them. "Certainly the attorney general has the authority in his own office to investigate, and that is a decision he has to make," White said. "I do not disagree with him. I just don't think there is any need for additional funding."

— He does not consider the House-passed telecommunications tax any increase in taxes, "and in a great many ways it can be shown it will be a reduction." He said he was working with the Public Utility Commission to determine the exact impact the fees on new telephone service companies would have on telephone customers.

— "There will be no early releases" from state prisons despite figures showing the prison population is at 93.7 percent of capacity.

"A lot of homeowners are pleased at what they can save with State Farm insurance."

Former executive fuels investigation into defense contractor's activities

DALLAS (AP) — A former General Dynamics Corp. executive now living as a fugitive in Greece says he has given the Justice Department documents concerning $1.25 million the company allegedly used to bribe South Korean officials.

General Dynamics, one of the United States' largest defense contractors, is under investigation for allegedly giving a South Korean consultant the money to bribe government officials to buy the firm's F-16 combat aircraft.

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act makes it illegal for a company to pay foreign officials.

But P. Takis Veliotis, a former executive vice president of General Dynamics, told The Dallas Morning News that he has given the Justice Department notes concerning a Feb. 25, 1982, meeting where the consultant told executives he "could not go back to Korea" without money for officials.

Veliotis said General Dynamics

later arranged to make the payments.

Justice Department officials refused to discuss the information given to them by Veliotis, the newspaper reported.

Veliotis himself was indicted in 1983 on kickback charges in the awarding of contracts while at General Dynamics. He had resigned a 18 months earlier over undisclosed differences and returned to his native Greece.

Since last summer, he has fired a string of charges at General Dynamics — including accusations the company falsified documents about cost overruns and paid bribes.

General Dynamics officials say investigators and reporters are being hoodwinked by Veliotis.

But the News reported that officials conducting a grand jury investigation of General Dynamics in New Haven, Conn., are known to be examining Veliotis' charge that the company made bribe payments to E.Y. Yoon, a retired South Korean air force general and president of Buyeon Consulting Limited in Seoul, South Korea.

Responding to a request from the newspaper for an interview with General Dynamics Chairman David S. Lewis, a spokesman issued a statement.

"This is another of Veliotis' malicious lies. This company has never made an improper foreign payment nor paid a consultant to do so," the statement said.

The newspaper, however, quoted an unnamed source close to a House committee investigating General Dynamics as saying other people besides Veliotis have made allegations about payments to Yoon.

Veliotis, interviewed at his home, said Yoon met with him, Lewis and other General Dynamics executives on separate occasions in late 1981 and early 1982 at the firm's St. Louis headquarters. Yoon asked for $5 million to $6 million, Veliotis said.

At a Feb. 25, 1982, meeting, Yoon said he needed the funds in part to pay South Korean officials "their share" on the $931.1 million sale of 36 F-16s, according to Veliotis.

"Gen. Yoon was very open about it," said Veliotis, who at the time was in charge of international sales for General Dynamics.

Veliotis said he and Lewis agreed they could not pay Yoon a lump sum of several million dollars but would instead boost his annual retainer "considerably" so that over a period of years Yoon would get a satisfactory amount of money.

Lewis told a House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations on March 25 that he could "absolutely deny" that General Dynamics bribed anyone in its sale of the Fort Worth-built planes to South Korea.

"I think our record is outstanding," Lewis testified, "and we have a great deal of international business, and we've had ample opportunity to engage in all kinds of bribes and stuff and I will tell you we haven't done it."

Lewis was asked about Yoon because a Pentagon audit challenged the company's request for reimbursement for payments to Yoon's firm.

Yoon could not be reached by telephone, but his company replied to a telex from the News on Veliotis' allegations with a telex stating only: "No comment. Buyeon."

Yoon became a consultant to General Dynamics in 1976.

Texas TI plants facing tough times

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc.'s home-state operations, hit harder than others in layoffs announced last year, will get their belts tightened and staffs pared some more along with their brethren, TI officials said Thursday.

In his report to shareholders at TI's annual meeting, President J. Fred Bucy announced 1,000 more layoffs as a result of dismal earnings that reflect sagging semiconductor and energy industries.

TI, which employs more than 83,000 people worldwide, announced in December that it was cutting 2,000 jobs, about 1,300 of those coming at semiconductor plants in Lubbock, Houston and Dallas.

"The magnitude of this thing is deeper than it appeared to be in December," TI spokesman Norman Neureiter said. "I'm sorry, but I've got no details at this time at all on where those (layoffs) might be."

One place they haven't already come is in Midland, according to William Sick, president of TI's semiconductor group.

Unlike TI's other three semiconductor plants, the operation in Midland handles mostly military contracts and has been operating at record levels.

Athens florist keeps going with dialysis technology help

By MARY HUNTER
Athens Daily Review

ATHENS, Texas (AP) — Fred Thomas never thought about dying until last November.

Even though he lost both kidneys and his spleen, had a kidney transplant, rejected the kidney five years later, and has been on dialysis off and on since 1970, he keeps a good outlook on life.

"I never hurt so bad," he said with a grimace as he described the agony of peritonitis. "They had given me so much medication for pain. Then it got so bad I did not have any relief for about a week."

Thomas had returned to a Dallas hospital last November as doctors tried to find the source of his continuing infection. His wife, LaVonne, had gone home when he had a seizure. He called his dad and told him, "I don't think I'm going to make it."

"I had never felt that way before. I always just did what I had to do and went on."

When he slipped into a coma on a Tuesday following the seizure, Thomas stayed alive with the aid of a respirator. By the following Monday morning, his doctor told his family there was "no hope at all." About an hour later, he said, he "came to."

As he regained consciousness and the doctors discovered the source of the infection, his life was in his grasp once again. Thomas was soon on the road to recovery, and he continues to heal.

"I could have done without 1984," he said lightly. "It was a bad year. Early in the year, I slipped and fell on the bottom step at home as I was coming downstairs. My arm was broken between the elbow and shoulder. The break was almost healed when I got sick."

It is ironic that the very thing that had been his most successful treatment nearly cost him his life. In August of 1980, his doctor had implanted the Continuous Ambulatory Peritoneal Dialysis (CAPD) device. This required a surgical procedure to insert a flexible catheter about 18 inches long through the abdominal wall into the peritoneal cavity.

This breakthrough gave Thomas freedom he had not had in several years.

By draining 2,000 cc. of fluid in the peritoneal cavity, the impurities were cleansed by osmosis. Osmosis is the diffusion of fluid through a porous partition into another fluid. This process produces the same results as a kidney or a dialysis machine. The fluid was changed four times a day.

"This worked better than anything for me," Thomas said. "For three years, I had no trouble with it."

"Last year, my doctor tried a new experimental catheter and I was the first patient in Texas to use it. It is a catheter, the same as before, except a surgical procedure was used to put in a plastic tunnel in which the catheter was inserted.

"This way surgery is not needed to insert the catheter. The plastic tunnel stayed there permanently and the catheter could be put in and taken out without surgery."

Although his first catheter never became clogged, it is possible and requires surgery for each replacement when a tunnel is not used.

Thomas and his doctor did not know that an intestine had been punctured when the catheter was inserted. At the onset of fever, Thomas was given antibiotics. The medication continued off and on. He improved while taking the medicine, but each time it was discontinued, he would get worse about a week later.

From February through November of 1984, Thomas was in the hospital six times. On two of these occasions LaVonne was hospitalized at the same time.

By November, Thomas was in extreme pain and the doctor decided to remove the catheter because he thought the system did not work.

When it was removed, the doctor discovered the punctured intestine responsible for the peritonitis.

After all he has been through, Thomas is quick to say he will have another CAPD inserted. "Oh, yeah, I'm going to try it again just as soon as they think it is OK."

"On the machine (dialysis) I have now, it only takes three hours to complete the process. But I can't control my blood pressure, can't rebuild blood normally, and I lose some blood each time I am on the machine."

Following the loss of the transplanted kidney in 1976, Thomas was back on the dialysis machine until the CAPD was used in 1980. This machine was an improvement over the first machine he used before his transplant in 1971, he says.

In 1976 he was back on the machine three times a week, but this time it only took the machine four hours to purify the blood.

"For about six months," he recalled, "I drove to Dallas three times a week and was put on the machine at midnight. When I was through at 4 a.m. I would drive back home and go to work at 8 a.m."

"It was not too bad, though," he said with a chuckle, "because I could go by the wholesale place and pick up flowers for the shop."

Thomas worked as a mortician for Foster & Hassell when he first became ill in 1969. After his kidney transplant, he went into the florist business.

"All the time I was sick and not working or was only working part of the time, I never missed a paycheck. Joe Foster, who owned the funeral home at that time, kept me going.

"I felt that I had to be fair to him — that if I worked for a man, I wanted to give him a day's work. So I was looking for a way to support my family when I bought the shop."

The large doses of steroids Thomas received during treatment have given him some problems. The treatment affected his bones. Thomas broke his back, pulled ribs loose and his hip joints became so sore he could hardly walk.

The treatment also caused him to retain fluids, sending his weight up over 200 pounds at one time. "But," he said, "it kept me alive."

"I look forward to the CAPD," he said. "The hardest thing about the dialysis machine is how it affects you mentally rather than the physical discomfort. You just have to sit for three hours and it limits what you can do."

"That is what makes the CAPD so wonderful. It not only frees you from dependency on a machine, but it also makes you feel mentally free. When I was first on the machine about 1970, it was four-foot square and took six hours. Now the machine is only about 18 inches wide, eight inches deep and four feet high and takes only half as much time. Plus it is more efficient.

"But you just can't get away from it. You have to get on it every Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday."

As Thomas goes about the job of living and working in his shop, he adheres to the frame of mind that has worked so well for him through all the trials of the past 15 years. When the going gets rough, he said, "I keep pluggin'."

Dear Abby

Pre-nuptial skirmish could become major wedding battle

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm getting married next month to a man who's in the Navy. Three months ago "Charlie" sent me a letter he had received from his mother in which she bad-mouthed my mother something terrible! Our families are worlds apart, and I think Charlie's mother feels inferior and insecure, and has a chip on her shoulder.

I was so shaken when I read that awful letter downgrading my mother, I read it to my parents. Now my mother says that she will not attend my wedding unless Charlie's mother apologizes to her. Charlie's mother says no apology is necessary because she didn't say anything to my mother's face.

I got along fine with Charlie's mother before this happened. Whose fault was it? And what should I do?

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: If you're looking for someone else to blame, start with Charlie's mother who wrote the letter downgrading your mother. Then blame Charlie for his poor judgment in sending that letter to you. Next blame yourself for reading it to your parents. What should you do? Try to get this family feud resolved so that at the sound of the (church) bell, everybody doesn't come out swinging.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is a fine-looking woman with an outstanding figure. She has never owned a bra and probably never will. She says bras are uncomfortable, she's proud of her figure, and she has nothing to hide. In fact, she wears as little as possible.

I am proud of the way she looks, but my family is not. They have called her a "loose" woman. Well, she is not loose. I like the way she dresses and have personally bought her blouses and sweaters that show off her full figure because I think a little jiggle and bounce under her clothes looks nice.

Tell me the truth, do you think a woman who wears no bra is loose—or is it just my family?

PROUD OF MY WIFE

Stress without distress topic of Monday meeting

PANHANDLE — Monday could mark a new beginning for you, your family and - or your business. "Stress Without Distress" is the topic of a workshop set Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the War Memorial Building of Panhandle Dorothy Taylor. Texas family life specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will present this program.

Changes that place special stresses on today's families will be discussed as well as identification of personal stresses, balancing work, family and self, the body's response to stress, burn out, time management, broken relationships and stress and turning negative stress into positive stress for a healthier life.

The program is designed for adults, children, singles, couples, divorced persons, step - families, business people, elderly persons, young people, middle - aged people — basically anyone who lives and breathes.

DEAR PROUD: A "loose" woman is one who is lacking in moral restraint. One who flaunts her full figure is merely lacking in judgment.

You obviously care what your family thinks or you wouldn't have written, so to minimize family criticism, minimize the "jiggle and bounce" in the presence of family.

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago I was very much in love with a man who didn't like my youngest son, so I stopped seeing him. Now I have met another man I like very much. He is good to my child, and we have a lot in common.

My problem now is that my older son joined the Navy and left me with Attila, his Great Dane. I live in a small apartment with no fenced yard. Since this Great Dane is little more than a puppy, he can be quite irritating. He's too strong and undisciplined for me to take for walks. My new friend dislikes dogs.

It's almost impossible to find a home for Attila—one who wants such a big animal. Having him put to sleep would make me feel guilty; he's a very sweet-tempered animal.

What on earth should I do? Shall I just wait until my son returns on leave, and let him remove the dog as he sees fit? If I keep him, it will be the end of my romance.

WORRIED SICK IN SUBURBIA

DEAR WORRIED: Check with your vet about obedience classes for Attila (he's old enough). And try to persuade your friend to go along. Observing how he handles frustration could give you valuable insight into what kind of husband he'll be.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

By GENA WALLS
Convenient packaging, frozen foods and preservatives are the reasons for the loss of many family traditional recipes.

Bread Day, the day each week that the homemaker made the bread for the family is a thing of the past. Occasionally, we make yeast rolls or wheat bread or even the sourdough bread that was a favorite in the West. But can you imagine making 10, 15 or 20 loaves of bread on a wood stove without an electric mixer!

Do you prepare foods the way your mother did? And this is just one generation apart. It's hard to imagine how women prepared meals seven and eight generations ago. The old recipes give us some indication of what was served and how it was prepared.

Now is the time to write your family recipes. You know, the ones that use a "pinch of this and a pinch of that," so that the next generation will be able to carry on the tradition.

Here is a recipe you might like to try. It was published in Dallas County, Mo., on Saturday, Aug. 28, 1869.

CORN BEER

Boil a pint of corn until it is soft. Add to it, one pint of molasses and one gallon of water. Shake them together in a jug and sit it in a warm place. In 24 hours a nice beer will be produced. When this is gone, add more molasses and water. The corn will answer for several weeks. A little ear occasionally forwards fermentation.

A special thank you to Mrs. Lena Housley for sharing the recipe and suggesting this column. Do you have an old recipe to share?

If any of you know how to make a sweet potato cobbler, I would like the recipe. My mother made these for our family and they were a favorite. It was like a blackberry cobbler, not a custard, with a lot of sugar and cinnamon. I watched her make it many times but never wrote down the procedure.

Please send your favorite family recipe or your suggestion for a future column to me, Gena Walls, 11507 Brookledge Dr., Houston, 77099.

Final preparations made for luncheon

WTSU — Final preparations are being made for the 10th annual Texas Panhandle Women's Distinguished Service Awards Luncheon, Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the East Dining Hall on the West Texas State University campus in Canyon.

Women from 22 panhandle cities have been nominated for the awards on the basis of their leadership and community service. The 1985 award selections will be announced at the luncheon.

Nominees from Pampa include Nadine Arney, Helen Dimmier, Esther Ruth Gipson and Helene Hogan. Proxie Warminski of White Deer was nominated, as was Tria Godwin and Al' Louise Ramp, both of Canadian.

This year, as part of WTSU's 75th anniversary celebration, eight of the past years' winners have been selected to a special Women's Hall of Fame. They are Sybil Harrington, Jo Stewart Randel, Mary Lou Hazelrigg, Margaret Harper, Ruth Lowes, Mary Bubliss, Katherine Wilson and Virginia Browder.

WTSU's president, Dr. Ed Roach, will present the Hall of Fame awards. Carol Autry and Annette Renner will present the Distinguished Service Awards. Music will be provided by WTSU's New Day Singers.

Tickets are available through WTSU's Returning Student Office or at the door.

Make a Mother's Day wreath

By STEVIE BALDWIN
Over the years I have given enough Mother's Day gifts of perfume and candy to stock (and re-stock) the largest department store. This year, I decided to do something a little different. It isn't fattening, it won't spill, and it's just the right size.

I designed a grapevine Mother's Day wreath. In the center is a delicate cross-stitched pillow trimmed in lace and ribbons. The wreath measures 14 inches in diameter. The pillow measures about six inches square, and is embroidered in red and blue. After Mother's Day, the wreath continues to bring a touch of warm hospitality to your home through its message, "Enter with a happy heart."

You can make your own Mother's Day wreath using our fully illustrated plans. They include a complete materials list, easy-to-follow step-by-step instructions, detailed cutting and assembly diagrams, a cross-stitch chart, and a tips and techniques section. The plans also include a large photograph of the finished project, and special notes to help you avoid common mistakes.

If you would like to order the plans, please specify Project No. 433-2 and send $4.95 (includes postage and handling). We are also offering plans for our Mother's Day pillow, Project No. 425-2, which features three beautiful needlecraft designs: lemons, floral bouquet, and daffodils.
If you would like to order both plans, please specify both project numbers and send $8.90. If you would like a copy of our color catalog which features hundreds of additional fabric and wooden projects for you to make and enjoy, please include $2.95.

Mail your order to: Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.
To make the Mother's Day wreath, you will need a 14-inch grapevine wreath form (you can purchase one at a craft store or make your own). You will also need a 5 1/2 x 6-inch piece of aida cloth for the pillow, cotton print fabric of the same size for the backing, a 20-inch length of lace trim, ribbon, polyester fiberfill, and embroidery floss in red and blue.

Use the blue embroidery floss, and cross-stitch the words "Enter with a happy heart" on the aida cloth. The words should be centered on the cloth and measure seven cross-stitches tall. Embroider the word "Enter" on the first line, "with a" on the second line, and "happy heart" on the third. Add two cross-stitched red hearts in the center of the fourth line, and fill in the rest of that line (on both sides of the hearts) with a double row of small off-set checks.

Place the aida cloth right side up on a flat surface. Pin the lace trim around the edges, and place the cotton fabric backing right down on top of the stack. (When you turn it right side out, the lace should be on the outside.) Stitch around the outer edges, leaving an opening large enough for turning. Turn the assembly right side out, stuff with fiberfill, and whipstitch the opening edges together.

Cut the ribbon in half, and tack one ribbon to each top corner of the pillow. Adjust the length of the ribbon so the pillow will hang evenly in the center of the wreath, and then tie the ribbons in a gib bow. Add a ribbon hanger on the back, and you're ready to proudly display your beautiful new wreath.

Local home economists to meet here Tuesday

A meeting of all local home economists is being planned for Tuesday at 4:30 p.m. in the Gray County Annex. Hosting the meeting are Gray County extension agents, Donna Brauchi and Tanya Morris.

Through the meeting, home economists can become better acquainted with each other, share programming ideas, learn about various educational opportunities and join hands in an effort to strengthen home economics support and funding on a state and national level.

All persons with a home economics or related degree are invited to attend. For more information, contact the Gray County Extension Office.

"I DON'T SEE ANYTHING"

THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY TO SEE THROUGH A CAMERA

Did you ever try to look through a camera from the front side? Yes, most of us have . . . out of curiosity . . . but we would not even consider trying to take a picture in such a manner. There are many though, who go through life never giving themselves a chance to really see God. In order to see God, one must look at him through faith. Attend church regularly, seek God where others can help direct you in your search for God.

"So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Local church sets week of revival series

Central Baptist Church, corner of Starkweather and Browning, will begin its "Alive in Christ" revival Sunday, with services continuing through Friday, April 26.

Leading the revival services will be Don Jopling of Fort Worth as evangelist and Bob Allen of Weatherford, Okla., as music director.

Services will be held at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday, with a special lunch service at 11:45 a.m.

The Sunday and weekday night services will feature special emphasis on various groups, Pastor Norman Rushing noted.

Sunday has been designated as "Bring a Friend Day." Monday is Sunday School Night, Tuesday is Youth Night, Wednesday is Children's Night, Thursday is Neighbor Night and Friday is Speed Limit Night (senior adult emphasis), Rushing explained.

Jopling has been in the evangelism field for 15 years and has preached more than 500 crusades throughout the United States and in India.

Allen, former minister of music at the First Baptist Church of Weatherford, now is in fulltime music evangelism and will be leading the worship music at the revival services.

Pastor Rushing invited the public to attend the revival series.

Revival plans announced by local church

The Highland Baptist Church, corner of Banks and Kentucky, will be in revival services beginning this Sunday and continuing through Sunday, April 28.

Evangelist will be Rev. Joe Norris of Mesquite, with David Nail of Pampa as singer.

Sunday services will be at 10:55 a.m. and 7 p.m., with weekday services daily at 7 p.m.

Rev. Norris is the pastor of the Hickory Tree Baptist Church at Mesquite. He has also pastored in other churches in Texas, Oklahoma and Ohio. He is a graduate of Dallas Baptist College and the Criswell Center of Biblical Studies at the First Baptist Church of Dallas.

Nail, a member of the Pampa First Baptist Church, has been a part of The Living Water Gospel Band of Pampa for a time.

Rev. Joe Wortham, pastor, issued "a very special invitation" to the public to attend the revival services.

"This will be a great time of listening to the exciting ministry of Rev. Norris as he preaches from the Bible," Rev. Wortham said. There also will be "much special music," he added. "You will be blessed by attending these services."

CLEVELAND (AP) — Calling families an "endangered species," a rabbi has urged formation of a national interfaith council on family life for cooperation of Protestants, Jews and Catholics in combatting erosion of families.

Rabbi Irwin Groner of Southfield, Mich., domestic affairs chairman of the Synagogue Council of America, told an interfaith consultation that America may "find itself running out of families not long after we run out of oil."

Falwell's scaring liberals again

By George R. Plagenz

Jerry Falwell is doing what he does best — touring the country, raising money and scaring the liberals. He has already visited close to 50 of the 280 cities on his agenda this year.

At these "Jerry Falwell Friendship Meetings," the founder of Moral Majority gathers several hundred of his local supporters around him and gives them an "update on his ministry in Lynchburg, Va.," his home base.

Mostly he tells them what he is doing and what more he would like to do at Liberty Baptist College, a coed institution he founded in Lynchburg in 1971. The college has an enrollment of 4,600 and Falwell sees a campus of 50,000 students by the next century.

What Falwell tells his followers is good news to them. "There is not a liberal on our faculty," he trumpets. There is applause because hasn't it been the permissive liberals who have brought us to the moral brink in this country?

There is no drug or alcohol problem on the Liberty Baptist campus, Falwell says, because there are no drugs or alcohol. There are no coed dorms. When a student meets a faculty member, he or she calls him "sir."

When Falwell passes out pledge cards and asks, "Who will contribute $1,000, $500 or $100 to Liberty Baptist's expansion program?" hands go up all over the room. Falwell says he has collected between $25,000 and $40,000 at each of his stops so far. Multiply that by 280 and you have the $8 million he wants for Liberty Baptist.

Falwell also tells of Moral Majority's success in getting pornography out of retail stores. Only one chain — 7-11 — is holding out and Falwell warns of a boycott "unless they face up to their social responsibility."

It is not hard to see why Falwell is as popular as he is today. Who can hate a man who is trying to bring back a semblance of decency, refinement and good taste to our society?

If there is not a crisis in morals in the country, there is a crisis in manners and taste, which is not unrelated to some of the things Moral Majority has aimed its guns at — like the dirty sound tracks of today's movies and the way in which TV depicts infidelity, mocks marriage and makes light of divorce.

We all breathe the air of the culture in which we live. If we do not set standards of excellence for that air, the pollution affects us all, no matter how hard we try to maintain high standards. Moral Majority is raising some very important questions about the cultural air we are being forced to breathe.

The danger with Moral Majority is that the followers of Falwell will get heady with their successes and go too far. It happened before to Anthony Comstock, who lived around the turn of the century.

Comstock was a moral reformer who felt the Lord had sent him on a mission to wipe out pornography, obscenity and every other form of vice. But Comstock didn't know when to stop. He became an object of widespread ridicule.

One paper published a cartoon in which the mutton-chopped reformer was seen dragging a new mother in her nightie into court and telling the judge, "Your honor, this woman gave birth to a naked child."

That is the danger of ignoring the Moral Majority and letting "Falwell's Followers" go on their way unchecked. The danger, on the other hand, of scuttling the Moral Majority is that we will stay in the moral mess we are now in.

But there is another alternative. The answer is for those of us who see that something is happening to the quality of life today — but who don't want to go back to the days when it was illegal for men to go topless on the beaches — to join forces with Moral Majority in those causes that deserve the support of right-thinking people.

Religion Roundup

CHICAGO (AP) — A new wave of unsigned anti-Catholic posters is showing up on buildings and in editors' mailboxes across the country, accusing the Vatican of Nazi crimes and violent schemes to rule the world.

The vilifying material has been spotted on walls in numerous cities and more than 40 editors of Catholic diocesan newspapers say they have received such material, reports one of them, the Chicago Catholic.

Headed in big, black letters, "WARNING!" one poster lists major television networks, magazines, news media, the United Nations and various U.S. government agencies as secretly controlled by the Vatican, and says:

"The Vatican uses these organizations and publications to exalt and exonerate themselves from crimes that they have done and are currently doing."

No group acknowledged responsibility for the posters but Michael Schwartz of the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights says circumstantial postmark evidence pointed to the Tony and Susan Alamo Foundation of Alma, Ark.

Its head, Tony Alamo, was quoted as saying he agreed with the contents of the material but as denying circulating it, although adding that if he did he would not say so because "the Vatican doesn't admit to things."

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) —

"It is only when we are the most authentically black that we make our best contribution to Methodism," the Rev. Zan W. Holmes told a meeting.

Holmes, professor of preaching at the Perkins School of Theology in Dallas, said the "black churches that are growing and appealing to the masses are those that have gone back to their roots."

Steps taken to reach settlement with nuns

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Steps are being taken to resolve a tense stand-off between the Vatican and 26 American nuns who had been ordered to retract publicly a statement about abortion or be expelled.

The "either-or" alternatives have been averted for nearly four months, and quiet, delicate negotiations are reported moving ahead to end the stalemate without depreciating either side.

"A solution is in process," says a spokeswoman for one of the communities of sisters involved, asking that she not be identified. "We think it will satisfy the Vatican."

Some of those involved say the basic settlement in sight avoids compromising positions, requiring only that the nuns formally declare that they accept the church's teaching authority.

Several are reported to have already done so, either verbally or in writing, in sessions at their motherhouses with the superior and council or president and executives of their orders.

"It was not a retraction," said one of the nuns. "It's a peaceful way out of the problem for all concerned."

While some assume the procedure will be sufficient, others say they doubt it and voice reservations themselves, but the pope's representative, Archbishop Pio Laghi of Washington, has been part of talks seeking to resolve the impasse.

Sister Marian MacAvoy of Denver, president of the Sisters of Loretto, six of whose members signed the statement, says the reported pattern of solution "is not exactly how it will happen" in the different communities.

"Each approach may be a little different," she said. She declined "making any kind of statement" about it herself, but added, "It is in process. After it is resolved, there will be some kind of statement."

The case has generated keen, widespread concern, not only among nuns but in the church at large, including worried comments of some bishops and others, urging conciliation.

Calling the confrontation "a tragedy," the national Catholic weekly, America, says the nuns showed "faulty judgment" but the Vatican "stirred inquisitorial fantasies" with its "threats of dire penalties."

"For the signers to recant under pressure would be seen as intellectual coercion."

The crisis has simmered since last Nov. 30 when a letter from Archbishop Jerome Hamer of the Vatican's Congregation for Religious and Secular Institutes directed that the nuns involved either recant or be dismissed.

They had been among 97 signers of a statement appearing as a New York Times ad Oct. 7 in the midst of the presidential campaign, saying a "diversity of opinion regarding abortion exists among committed Catholics."

It is a "mistaken belief" that blanket condemnation of abortion "in all instances" is "the only legitimate Catholic position," the statement said, urging candid, respectful church dialogue about it.

Switching genes could control sex of babies

EDITOR'S NOTE — If a theory that a gene, or a group of genes, acts as a sort of gender on-off switch proves correct, scientists one day may be able to control the sex of babies. That also might open the way for selecting the sex of farm animals. For instance, beef producers want male livestock, but dairy farmers and egg producers want females.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Genetically speaking, one of every 20,000 men is mostly female.

They look like men, and they act like men. Certainly they think of themselves as men. Yet, under a microscope their cells carry two X chromosomes, the most basic hallmark of femininity.

These people are called XX males. And to a small group of scientists, they are far more interesting than simply another example of nature's talent for tricks and goofs.

They may be the key to discovering the sex trigger: just one gene out of the 100,000 or so of humanity's blueprints, a gene that makes a man a man. It is — if it exists at all — gender's on-off switch.

Compared with many notions in genetics, this one is beguilingly simple.

In the beginning, goes this reasoning, every embryo growing within its mother's womb has all the biological machinery it needs to be a male or a female. Everything depends on one critical gene, the sex switch. If it has the gene, it becomes a boy. If it doesn't, it becomes a girl.

So deep within the biochemical library of human heredity lies an inequality of the sexes. There is a gene for masculinity but not for femininity. Instead, the origin of femininity is the absence of a gene.

The very existence of the sex trigger is still a theory. No one has ever seen it.

In fact, scientists have no clear idea of what this powerful gene looks like or how it does what it does. There is even a chance, they say, that it is actually a group of genes, clumped together. But they do believe they've narrowed down the genetic terrain where it — or they — lurk. And with luck and work, maybe they will find it.

Scientists in the United States and Europe are searching for the gene. Among them is Dr. David C. Page, a physician at the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research, an independent lab affiliated with Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"This gene is obviously a master regulator," Page says. "It has dramatic effects. It's capable of completely switching the pattern of development of an organism. It can shut down the formation of ovaries and, indirectly, of all female characteristics. And it can, at the same time, turn on differentiation of testes and, indirectly, of all male characteristics."

Everyone, male or female, has 23 pairs of chromosomes. These are strings of genes, and one of each pair is inherited from the mother and one from the father.

Two of these are called sex chromosomes, and they are known as X and Y. Everybody gets an X chromosome from his or her mother. The father's contribution to this pair of chromosomes can be either an X or a Y. If their child has two X chromosomes, it's female; an X and a Y, and it's male.

In 1964, Dr. Albert de la Chapelle of the University of Helsinki in Finland discovered a strange exception to this rule — men who had two X chromosomes. They are normal men but for one shortcoming: They are sterile.

In the years since, doctors discovered more men with this peculiarity, often when they sought fertility treatment. Experts now calculate that one of every 20,000 boys has two X chromosomes, the genes of girls.

Scientists dreamed up many theories to explain how XX males could exist. Some thought that they might "get both of their X chromosomes from their mothers."

Another idea was called the X-Y interchange. It suggests that during the formation of sperm, a small piece of a Y chromosome jumps over to an X chromosome. If a sperm containing this mongrel X chromosome wins the race to a female egg and fertilizes it, the result would be an embryo with two XX chromosomes. But one of its X's holds a few genes from a male Y chromosome — including the very gene that triggers male development.

Recent work by Page and his collaborators — de la Chapelle and Dr. Jean Weissenbach of the Pasteur Institute in Paris — supports the X-Y interchange theory.

They have shown that XX males get an X chromosome from each parent. And in most of them, they are able to find genetic material that ordinarily is unique to the Y chromosome. The next goal is to figure out which of these hitchhiking Y genes is the sex trigger. If they knew which gene makes an XX male a man, then they would know what gene makes all men men.

This knowledge might allow geneticists to select the sex of offspring. Scientists are working out techniques for inserting genes into embryos. But Page says it's doubtful that anyone would want to try this in people, because inserting the sex trigger into a human embryo would result in an XX male, a sterile man.

However, once the human sex gene is located, it should be relatively easy to find the sex trigger for other animals. And this might open the way for controlling sex ratios in farm animals. For instance, beef producers want male livestock, but dairy farmers and egg producers want females.

Finding the gene should also help scientists delve into the complex biology of sexual development. They will at least know the first step.

"There's a tremendous amount of very interesting biology hiding in there," says Page.

The gene probably detonates an explosion of genetic chain reactions. One gene turns on another and then another, on and on, until the embryo develops ovaries or testes. The presence of the sex trigger activates one of these pathways and the absence of the gene another.

"There has to be some sort of very complicated set of events that are progressing simultaneously and are, directly or indirectly, all set in motion by the function of one or perhaps a small number of genes," Page says.

The researchers believe they know roughly where on the Y chromosome the sex trigger is located. The hard part is pinning it down.

Even the cliché of looking for a needle in a haystack doesn't convey the difficulty of their search.

"We're looking for an object in a haystack," says Page. "It's not necessarily a needle."

Pampa track squads enter district meet Saturday

Both Pampa High boys and girls compete in the District 1-4A track meet Saturday in Plainview. Preliminaries begin at 9:30 a.m. with the finals set for 2 p.m. at Wayland Baptist University.

The unbeaten Lady Harvesters are heavy favorites to win the girls' title and advance to the regional meet. Berger, Lubbock Estacado and Lubbock Dunbar are expected to battle it out for second place behind Pampa, which is unbeaten in seven meets this year.

Pampa has established its unblemished record with only one senior, Kristi Hughes, on a squad filled with depth in almost every event. Miss Hughes had advanced to the regionals three consecutive years, twice in the high jump and once in the long jump. But the star attraction this year has been freshman sprinter Tanya Lidy. Miss Lidy has won the 200-meter run five times this year and set a school and meet record in the event at the Liberal Relays last weekend.

Her record-breaking time of 25.16 has been the best in the panhandle area this year. Miss Lidy has also won the 400 twice. Miss Hughes, however, hasn't been exactly overshadowed. She's won the high jump in three meets, the long jump once, and the 100 hurdles twice.

An example of Pampa's depth was in last weekend's Liberal Relays when the Lady Harvesters won only two events, but still won the meet by a comfortable margin of 34 points. It was just a typical meet for the Lady Harvesters, who have never really been threatened this season.

Linda Ammons and Courtney Brown are a couple of other sprinters figuring to make it to regional competition. Miss Ammons, a sophomore, has won the 400 twice while Miss Brown has captured the 100 once. Both are members of swift relay teams, which may be Pampa's strongest event. Other relay team members are Miss Lidy, Miss Hughes, Beverly Paine, Jackie Oglesby, Sandee Greenway and Katrina Jackson. The 800-meter relay team of Paine, Brown, Lidy and Greenway set a school and meet record in the Liberal Relays with a time of 1:43.66.

Andrea Hopkins and Sandra Farrah give a Pampa a potent combination in the shot put and discus. Miss Hopkins has won the discus four times and the shot once.

Pampa boys weren't expected to be a district contender when the season first started, but they've made rapid progress and could be a darkhorse in Saturday's meet. The Harvesters won the Bulldog Relays in the varsity division and finished third in the 12-team Liberal Relays meet last weekend.

Key performers for Pampa include Marvin Jackson, long jump and 200; Lyle Vanbuskirk, discus and Lance Ripple, 100. The 400-meter, 3200 and 1600-meter relay teams could also bring in some points for the Harvesters.

Wadkins has Heritage lead

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — It hasn't happened yet. Not in 11 long years following the PGA Tour around the country. But Bobby Wadkins said his time is coming.

"I really believe that sometime in the next two months, I'm going to win a golf tournament," Wadkins said after a 6-under-par 65 had given him a one-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the $400,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

Bobby, who has played his career in the shadow of older brother Lanny, has won only twice in a career that started in 1975. And both those victories were abroad, in the European Open in 1978, in Japan in 1979.

"That word 'potential,' it's been the killer of a lot of players. I'm tired of hearing it," Wadkins said.

So, some six weeks ago, he sought the help of Peter Kostis, a teaching pro who has worked with a large number of touring pros.

"I was needing more consistency," he said. "Peter worked with me on making some swing changes that will help me improve. It still feels kind of mechanical, but I'm sure it will help."

Playing as the first man off the tee in the calm conditions of early morning, he missed only two of the very small greens on the Harbour Town Golf Links and did not make a bogey in establishing a one-shot advantage over Paul Azinger, alone in second with a 66.

"A moderately successful venture into the unknown," said Irwin, who was tied with Jim Thorpe, Bobby Clampett, Mike Donald and former U.S. Open and PGA champion Larry Nelson.

Bernhard Langer, the West German who last Sunday won the Masters in Augusta, Ga., shot a 68 despite bogeys on two of his last four holes.

Celtics hold off Cavaliers

On a night of National Basketball Association playoff romps, it figured that the defending champion Boston Celtics would be one of the rompers. But the scrappy Cleveland Cavaliers had other ideas.

Boston rolled to a 70-58 halftime lead, but Cleveland rallied to take a 121-117 edge late in the fourth period. Boston's experience — and the scoring of Kevin McHale — saved the day as the Celtics held on for a 126-123 victory in the opening game of a best-of-five first-round series.

In other games, Los Angeles buried injury-riddled Phoenix 142-114; Denver ripped San Antonio 141-111; and Detroit clobbered New Jersey 125-105. In the other tight match, Dallas needed two overtimes to get past Portland 139-131.

"I'll tell you one thing, we can play with them," Cleveland guard World B. Free said. "We didn't win the game, but we played a hard game, not the way they thought it would be."

"They know how to play down the stretch. We're just learning," added Cleveland Coach George Karl, whose Cavaliers brought a 36-46 record into the playoffs against the NBA's winningest team. "I thought we had a good chance to beat them, and I know we can beat them."

Larry Bird scored 40 points for Boston.

Lakers 142, Suns 114
Los Angeles scored a playoff-record 45 points in building a 21-point first-period lead and coasted home. Mike McGee led the Lakers with 22 points and guard Earvin Johnson added 18 points and 19 assists.

Phoenix tied the Lakers 20-20 after 6½ minutes, but Los Angeles went on a 25-2 spurt and it was only a question of margin the rest of the way.

Nuggets 141, Spurs 111
Alex English scored 33 points and Calvin Natt 25 for Denver, which took advantage of George Gervin's first-half foul trouble.

Eagles victorious over Harvesters, 9-5

CANYON — Canyon combined 11 hits with eight Pampa errors to take a 9-5 win over the Harvesters in a District 1-4A baseball game Thursday.

The loss dropped Pampa to 2-6 in league play and 6-10 overall. Canyon is now 4-3 and 14-8 overall.

The score was tied 5-5 when Canyon plated five runs in the fifth inning on four Canyon hits and a Harvester error.

Brent Cryer was the losing pitcher, striking out five and walking two. Only four of the runs he surrendered were earned. It was only Cryer's second loss compared to four victories.

King Hopson battled control problems to hold the Harvesters scoreless the last three innings to pick up the mound win. Hopson allowing eight hits while striking out six and walking nine.

Senior centerfielder Dwayne Roberts was Pampa's leading hitter with a pair of singles in five trips to the plate. Wade Howard, Juan Soto, Trace Robbins, Mike Lopez, Todd Hardin and Brent Cryer had one hit each. Cryer's double knocked in two Pampa runs in the second inning.

Jim Bagley and B.J. Head led Canyon with two hits apiece. Canyon played errorless ball while both teams turned in a double play.

Pampa dropped an 8-7 verdict to Canyon earlier in the season.

The Harvesters host league-leading Lubbock Estacado at 1 p.m. Saturday at Harvester Field. Berger and Lubbock Dunbar are tied for second with a 5-2 records. Canyon is tied for third with Dumas and Pampa is all alone in sixth place. Both of Pampa's district wins have been over Levelland.

The trip to Canyon ended Pampa's road games for the season. Their three remaining games after Estacado are all at Harvester Field — April 23, Berger; April 30, Dumas; May 4, Lubbock Dunbar.

RELEASED FAMILY—The Luis Antonio Linarte family gathers together after five were released from the Immigration and Naturalization Service detention facility. The family fled Nicaragua in a shrimp boat and applied for political asylum before they were detained by the INS and nearly deported. Left to right, Connie, 14; Luis, 17; Luis Antonio, father; Sophio Antonia, mother; Yencia, 12; Hector, 25; and Juan, 19. (AP Laserphoto)

A Nicaraguan family gets reprieve from deportation

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Nicaraguan family that includes a teen-age honors student will be able to stay in the United States a few days longer after a judge extended a restraining order preventing their deportation.

U.S. District Judge Ricardo Hinojosa, who on Thursday granted the extension, today is scheduled to decide whether to hear a motion on a writ of habeas corpus, the family's attorney said Thursday.

Ray Cantu said the writ is the last legal alternative the family has to remain in the United States.

"It is ironic that as the president of the United States rails against the Sandinista government that the INS is attempting to deport a family back there," Cantu said.

Connie Linarte, a junior high honors student who didn't speak English when she arrived from Nicaragua four years ago, says she and her family will be killed if they are deported.

"I am so scared we will be sent back because I am sure they will put us in jail," she said Thursday.

Two weeks ago, Miss Linarte, her parents, three brothers and a sister, were less than an hour from being deported when Hinojosa granted a restraining order preventing immigration officials from deporting them.

Their applications for political asylum had been denied.

"This is the only relief that they have left after the exhaustion of administrative procedures," Cantu said of the writ of habeas corpus.

Until Thursday, the family members had been separated since the judge granted the restraining order and Cantu said the family would look for a home where they would be able to spend some time together.

Miss Linarte's mother, Sophia Linarte, said the family also would attend church after being released.

"I prayed to God that they wouldn't send us back," she said.

Cantu said a hearing on the writ of habeas corpus would be next week. He said the judge can deny the writ. If he grants it, however, he can grant total asylum or grant the right to a new hearing before an administrative law judge.

Cantu said the lives of family members are in danger because of conditions in Nicaragua. The family is opposed to the Sandinista government which rules Nicaragua, Miss Linarte has said.

She said one of her brothers, Israel, now 21, had joined the Sandinista government and her father did not want that for his other children.

Big wheat crop is expected in Texas

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Wheat harvesting in Texas is expected to reach record levels in the next three months and production is expected to rise 33 percent, agricultural reports predict.

A 200-million bushel crop is expected, which would be 9 percent higher than the record set in 1981, according to the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

"Wheat's looking good all over Texas, yield-wise," said Ed Smith, grain marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in College Station.

Timely rains in virtually all main wheat-growing counties are credited with the bumper crop.

Based on April 1 conditions, production will rise 33 percent.

Scientists considered plan of poisoning enemy in war

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Scientists considered using radioactive food to poison 500,000 of the enemy during World War II, according to a newly declassified letter from J. Robert Oppenheimer to Dr. Enrico Fermi, two pioneers of the atomic bomb.

The proposal, which apparently was never fully developed, was disclosed in an article in the May-June issue of Technology Review, a magazine published by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Oppenheimer, who directed the building of the atom bomb in the Los Alamos laboratory in New Mexico, suggested in the letter dated May 25, 1943, that a plan to contaminate food be delayed until there was enough radioactive poison to kill a half million people, the article said.

The letter, sent from Oppenheimer in Santa Fe, N.M., to Fermi in Chicago, did not say how the poison would be administered or indicate the enemy against which the poison would be directed.

Fermi, an Italian-born physicist who produced the first nuclear chain reaction in 1942, worked with Oppenheimer on the Manhattan Project that built the bomb. A winner of the Nobel Prize in physics in 1938, he died in 1954. Oppenheimer died in 1967.

The author of the article, Stanford University history professor Barton J. Bernstein, wrote that he found the letter in the Library of Congress. He said the project "probably foundered on substantial technical problems and the reluctance of top military personnel to divert resources from the A-bomb."

"It illustrates an important fact: amid the horror of World War II, including German concentration camps and the mass killing of Jews, many U.S. scientists, like rank-and-file civilians, were willing to devise new ways to kill the enemy by the thousands and even hundreds of thousands," Bernstein wrote.

The atomic bomb was first successfully tested in July 1945 and was dropped on Japan twice in August of that year.

"I think we should not attempt a plan," Oppenheimer wrote, according to the letter reproduced in the magazine, "unless we can poison food sufficient to kill a half a million men, since there is no doubt that the actual amount will, because of non-uniform distribution, be much smaller than this."

Mentioned in the Oppenheimer letter as being aware of the plan were Edward Teller, known as father of the hydrogen bomb; James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard University and chairman of the National Defense Research Committee during World War II; Gen. Leslie Groves, commander of the Manhattan Project; Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; and Dr. Joseph Hamilton, a physician and associate professor of medicine at the University of California at Berkeley's Radiation Laboratory.

Names in News

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singers Barbara Mandrell, Ricky Skaggs and Lee Greenwood led finalists for individual honors in four categories each in the 19th annual Music City News awards chosen by fans across the country.

The veteran quartet the Statlers is a finalist in seven categories, while Alabama and the Oak Ridge Boys received four nominations each.

Finalists and winners are chosen by subscribers to The Music City News, a monthly country music publication based in Nashville.

The winners will be announced on a syndicated television special June 10 at the Grand Ole Opry House. Show officials say the program is the only fan-voted nationally televised presentation of its kind.

NEW YORK (AP) — Kentucky Gov. Martha Layne Collins, the state's first female chief executive, gave credit where it was due when she received her award as a "role model American mother."

"Without them, I couldn't have made it," said Mrs. Collins, 48, of her son, Steve, 24, and daughter, Marla, 21. "They started traveling with me at ages 6 and 9."

Mrs. Collins was among eight women honored Thursday by the non-profit National Mother's Day Committee, most of whom also were successful in a career.

They included soap opera star Susan Lucci, who plays Erica Kane on "All My Children," mezzo-soprano Frederica Von State of the Metropolitan Opera, and astronaut Anna Fisher, who in November became the first American woman to walk in space.

Also receiving awards were Louisa Kennedy, wife of an American who was held hostage in Iran; Sarah Palfrey, former world-class tennis player; Midge Sinclair, TV actress on "Trapper John, M.D.," and Clara Hale, who runs a home for children of drug-addicted mothers.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Longtime Grand Ole Opry stars Minnie Pearl and Roy Acuff will help toast the Opry's 60th birthday on a two-hour nationally televised special.

The prime-time CBS special will be taped at the Opry House on Nov. 21 and will be broadcast late this year or in early 1986. Tom Griscam, senior vice president of broadcasting at the Opryland USA theme park, said Thursday.

Miss Pearl and Acuff, who joined Griscam at a news conference on the Opry stage, have agreed to perform, Griscam said.

The taping of the special, which will examine the Opry's history as well as the radio show, comes one week before the Opry's 60th birthday on Nov. 28.

A bad week for Reagan, from trip planning to dance floor

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan, who always seems to be able to make things go his way, has had a perfectly awful series of gaffes, miscues and slip-ups in the last week that rekindle memories of Jimmy Carter's bad luck and Jerry Ford's bad balance.

Outstripping all the others, of course, has been a chain reaction since the announcement that the president would lay a wreath at a German military cemetery next month.

Each of Reagan's repeated attempts at an explanation succeeded in digging him into deeper trouble with incredulous leaders of American Jewish groups and veterans' organizations that have strongly supported the president in the past.

Michael K. Deaver, Reagan's event planner and image polisher who has taken much of the heat for the Bitburg fiasco, had barely recovered himself from the embarrassing disclosure that he had used his diplomatic status on an official itinerary-mapping trip to Europe to buy himself a luxury German car at an extraordinary discount.

But the president's smiling visage was being buffeted elsewhere as he struggled to keep up with an unusually heavy schedule that combined an all-out fight for aid to Nicaraguan rebels with a tough battle for budget cuts and a steady stream of visits from foreign leaders.

On Monday, as he kicked off his rhetorical drive to discredit Nicaragua's leftist government, Reagan was photographed kissing a lovely little girl presented to him as a refugee from Nicaraguan tyranny.

She turned out to be the U.S.-born 8-year-old daughter of a family that has lived in the United States for 15 years, long before the Sandinistas gained power in Managua. Both her parents are in international banking.

Drawing whatever support he could for his campaign, however, Reagan used a visit by Colombia's President Belisario Betancur to propose a cease-fire and negotiations between the Nicaraguan government and U.S.-backed rebels, coupled with a demand for $14 million in aid to the rebels. The money would be for non-lethal supplies if the talks went forward, weapons if they didn't.

Betancur spoke warmly of Reagan's peace plan, but days later, back in his own country, the South American leader publicly rejected any proposal for outside military aid to the rebels.

Undeterred, Reagan claimed on Wednesday to have received a verbal message from Pope John Paul II supporting "all of our activities in Central America."

Later, a statement by the Apostolic Nunciature, the Vatican's embassy in Washington, stressed that the pope gave no endorsement to "any concrete plan dealing, in particular, with military aspects," such as those proposed by Reagan.

Even the light moments didn't go well for the former actor with a usually keen sense of timing.

At a state dinner Wednesday night, as American Ballet Theater star Fernando Bujones finished a spectacular dance solo, Reagan took his wife, Nancy, by the arm and stepped on stage to thank the performer.

"We haven't finished yet," a startled Bujones told the president.
