Spending cuts pass Senate

Hospitalized senator, vice president's votes decisive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate early today approved, 50-49, a Republican package of $295 billion in spending cuts that would cancel next year's Social Security benefit increases and pare President Reagan's defense buildup — with an ailing GOP member rushed to the Capitol by ambulance to provide the winning margin.

The three-year deficit reduction package next goes to the Democratic House of Representatives, where its fate was uncertain. House Democratic leaders have generally voiced opposition to any provision limiting Social Security benefits.

Reagan, speaking in Portugal before ending his European trip, praised the package as giving him "more than 90 percent of what we have asked for in the budget." He also said he received assurance from the Senate that he can come back for more if it appears the reduction in his defense spending request is harmful.

"I have the agreement of the Senate that if this represents ... a cut in (defense) spending beyond where we should go, I will be returning for a supplemental appropriation," he said.

On Social Security, Reagan said, "I was faced with a mandate" from 79 senators who "demanded that we have some curbing" of the cost-of-living increases.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., who underwent surgery for a ruptured appendix the day before, was brought to the Capitol from nearby Bethesda Naval Hospital to vote for the package on the suspenseful, post-midnight roll call.

Wilson, wearing a bathrobe, was wheeled into the center aisle of the Senate.

"What is the question?" he asked, then voted "aye" to a standing ovation by members of both parties.

Wilson's vote brought the roll call to 49-49 in the Republican-controlled Senate. Vice President George Bush then voted to break the tie.

After the vote, Reagan, in a phone call from Lisbon, Portugal, congratulated Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., on successfully steering the compromise 1986 budget through the Senate.

"I think a $300 billion package is worth staying up all night for," said Dole, who invited reporters into his office to hear his end of the call. The final vote came after a nonstop 18-hour Senate session.

"We know you're a little disappointed on the defense (spending levels), but I think there could be some adjustments later on if there's a need," Dole said.

A House-Senate conference committee will eventually have to reconcile differences between versions of the budget passed by the two chambers.

The budget document is only a spending outline, a set of targets for congressional committees to meet. It does not go to the president for his signature or veto. Separate legislation must be passed later to make the targets binding and to release funds for federal programs.

After the vote endorsing the Republican package, Democrats made final efforts to amend the plan to block the Social Security restrictions, to restore full Medicare funding and to establish a 15 percent minimum corporate income tax. They failed on 51-47, 54-44 and 61-37 roll calls, respectively.

Then, the Senate took a final voice vote on the overall package, sending it to the House.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said the House Budget Committee will begin working on its version of the budget next week.

Dole said the plan would chop nearly $56 billion from the nation's $200 billion-plus deficit in 1986, and would meet the goal he and other GOP leaders set four months ago when they vowed to develop a plan to cut the federal deficit to less than $100 billion by 1988 — without raising taxes.

Four Republicans — Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland, Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, Alfonse D'Amato of New York and Paula Hawkins of Florida — voted against the package.

The Senate plan would freeze cost-of-living benefits for Social Security recipients and for government and military pensioners at 1985 levels, canceling an anticipated 4 percent increase next January. Reagan had originally opposed such a freeze.

And it would allow military spending to increase only with inflation in 1986, compared with a 3 percent increase in an earlier compromise and the 6 percent increase Reagan originally wanted. Still, defense spending could rise by $20 billion next year.

The plan included subsidies for Amtrak rail passenger service, which Reagan sought to eliminate, but would reduce the federal support by 12 percent in fiscal 1986, 25 percent in 1987 and 40 percent in 1988.

Other programs it would keep alive, although at reduced levels, include the Jobs Corps, the Small Business Administration and mass transit grants.

In an effort to win the support of farm-belt senators, Republican leaders and the administration agreed to restore $3.5 billion in proposed cuts to agricultural programs over the next three years and proposed a new export subsidy program.

Selection process begins

Local career ladder criteria accepted

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Plans are nearing completion for selecting teachers for the Career Ladder supplemental program in the Pampa Independent School District.

School trustees have accepted a recommendation from the Career Ladder Committee for establishing the criteria to be used locally.

The supplement, legislated by the state last summer, is designed to recognize outstanding teachers and to keep them in the classroom by rewarding them with the salary bonuses, Supt. James Trusty explained.

He said the district is now at the step where the selection process has been planned to begin choosing the teachers that will receive the supplement later this year.

Committee member Pat Farmer said most of the selection criteria has been mandated by the state. For one, the teacher must apply for the Career Ladder consideration. Qualities to be assessed for the teachers include performance, teaching skills and advance education.

Farmer said the committee decided to add three additional requirements in the district. Fifty percent of the advance education courses must relate to the classroom subject matter. The use of different teaching strategies will be considered also.

In addition, a PISD teacher must have three years of consecutive teaching experience in the district.

John English, assistant superintendent for instruction, explained the three-years requirement will permit better assessment of a teacher's performance here.

The district has been maintaining personnel records and assessments for the past three years under a program developed several years ago, he noted.

At present all school administrators have been at their respective schools for three years, allowing a continuous assessment without any changes in the administrators.

Farmer said now that the criteria have been established and approved by the board, the committee will begin making its assessments. Teachers applying for the supplement will be ranked by scores assigned to the criteria. A weighted formula will be used to make the final selections.

English, a member of the committee, said, "It's been very difficult for us" to undertake the establishment of the criteria.

The local districts have been charged with establishing criteria and selection procedures this year. The state is expected to set more specific guidelines for future years.

English said the committee has been trying to use criteria which will place the strongest teachers first on the Career Ladder supplement program.

The Career Ladder Committee was organized in March to oversee the implementation of the supplement program. The program awards salary supplements to teachers under requirements of House Bill 72 approved last summer in a special session by the state Legislature.

In March Supt. Trusty said initial criteria indicated 182 teachers could be eligible for the supplement, but funds will not permit awarding the supplement to all.

At $2,000, the maximum allowed by the state, approximately 60 teachers could be awarded the supplement. At the minimum of $1,500 permitted by the state, approximately 80 teachers could receive the additional salary this year.

Sarpalius asks public to pressure legislator

AUSTIN (AP) — An ex-cop in charge of a subcommittee reviewing a bill to ban drinking while driving is looking for a "cop-out" to kill the measure, a senator charged Thursday.

Sen. Bill Sarpalius, D-Canyon, said there are more than enough House votes to approve the Senate-passed ban on drinking while driving.

But the measure is now locked up in a three-member subcommittee of the House Liquor Regulation Committee. Victoria Rep. Kenneth Armbrister, a former Victoria policeman and chairman of the subcommittee, "is looking for any excuse possible to be against the bill," Sarpalius said.

"To sit back and just let the bill die and try to think up some kind of excuse is nothing but a cop-out," he said at a news conference.

Armbrister has said he sees potential enforcement problems with Sarpalius' measure, which bans drivers from drinking alcoholic beverages behind the wheel. Armbrister was unavailable for comment after the Sarpalius news conference.

The subcommittee met in Arlington Tuesday to review that city's local open container ban. Sarpalius said that hearing was merely a "step to delay the legislation."

"The more people that contact the man, the more I think he's going to realize Texans think drinking and driving is wrong," said Sarpalius, calling on Texans to tell Armbrister how they feel about the bill.

Lefors principal tells board test rule to have big impact

By LARRY HOLLIS

LEFORS — Discussing the latest results of the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test (TABSS), Lefors High School Principal Gene Gee warned school trustees Thursday night that the influence of the tests on students has not yet really been realized.

"Of all the changes in House Bill 72, this (the tests) has the most effect on the students," Gee said. Yet it has received the least public attention so far, he noted.

The tests have been administered for a number of years to determine students' mastery of basic skills in mathematics, reading and writing.

But under new requirements mandated by the state Legislature last summer, the skills tests will create "a do or die" situation for many students planning to receive a diploma upon graduation, Gee declared.

Supt. Jimmy Collins explained that under the new laws, students not passing the tests by the end of their senior year cannot be given a graduation diploma.

Starting next year with juniors in high school, students will have three chances to meet the mandated skills levels established by the state, he said. Students not passing the tests satisfactorily in their junior year can take the test twice more in their senior year.

Related story, Page five

But if a student has not passed after the third test, the school board cannot legally grant him or her a diploma under new rules going into effect next year, Collins stated.

Gee said not much public notice has been made of that requirement yet. He warned the trustees to expect outcries from parents when diplomas aren't awarded because students have not passed the tests.

Next year's seniors aren't affected by the new regulations, but the juniors are, Gee said. The impact of the testing requirements may be felt in the 1986-1987 school year, he said.

Gee and Lefors Elementary School Principal Jess Baker reported on the latest TABSS results involving third, fifth and ninth grade students.

Baker said there were no major problems indicated in the various skill objectives in the third grade.

But fifth grade results indicate six areas needing further improvement. These include interpreting place value and dividing whole numbers in math, identifying the main idea and predicting outcomes in reading, and punctuation and correct English usage in writing.

Baker said some of these deficiencies may result from the time of the administering of the tests. The tests were given in the third week of February. Some of the TABS objectives had not been covered in class work at that time.

He said other factors to be considered include the makeup of the small classes in the district. Some classes are just weaker than others, he said. This wouldn't have as much effect in larger districts where more students would be tested at a time, he explained.

Baker and Gee both noted there is controversy involved in the new tougher requirements established for the written composition section of the test.

The essays are judged on a scale from 0 to 4. No Lefors students received the highest grade of 4 in any of the three grades tested. Baker said he had checked with other comparable districts in the area and few if any 4's had been received by students.

Gee noted one freshman student who had received high scores in all the objective sections of the three areas. But the student had only a 1 on the essay section. He indicated other teachers and administrators he has talked with are concerned with the standards of testing being applied to the composition sections.

Baker noted that the tests,

Mobeetie trustees wrestle with construction contract

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MOBEETIE — School trustees will need a special meeting to iron out contract differences with the architect who is designing a proposed addition to the school building.

The meeting is set for 8 p.m. Tuesday at the school offices. Trustees set the special meeting Thursday at their regular meeting.

Faced with a need to increase its curriculum and staff to comply with new state requirements, school officials want to add four new classrooms to the present building. They are considering plans drawn up by Amarillo architect Tim Harris.

According to Mobeetie Superintendent Bob Mickey, the addition would consist of four classrooms and a corridor to be built along the north side of the present school building. The addition would be about 3,300 square feet and the architect estimates construction would cost about $180,000.

"We figure it will be less," Mickey said. "We're figuring on about $125,000. From contractors we talked with, we have estimates of $30 to $40 per square foot."

Harris, who has not been officially chosen as architect for the project, presented Mickey with a contract — a standardized "form" contract prepared by a professional architect's organization — that was to be discussed at the regular board meeting. But Harris did not attend the meeting and trustees were perplexed at some of the terms of the lengthy contract.

Board member Randy McCurley said he'd have to take the form home to study it.

"I think Harris has to be present to go over everything with us," board president Glen D. Hodges said.

One point of disagreement is how the architect is to be paid: the contract stipulates that he is to be paid 80 percent of 6 1/2 percent of the lowest contractor's bid. But to trustees, that does not answer the question of how they are to pay for work Harris has already rendered for the district. Although no contract has been signed, Harris has billed the school $1,000 for services rendered. The architect has already drawn preliminary plans for the addition. Trustees didn't understand if the $1,000 is part of the 80 percent stipulated in the contract. If all bids are rejected, he gets paid for services already rendered.

The trustees agreed not to pay him until they work out the terms of the contract.

"If we don't agree to some sort of contract soon, we'll have to call a special meeting to agree on something," Mickey said.

Before the meeting Tuesday, school officials will tour teacher's housing to see what improvements are needed.

In addition to new classrooms, the district will also have to hire new teachers to handle the new curriculum guidelines, one required subject is fine arts (music, art or foreign language) which Mobeetie does not now offer. Mickey said that he is working up a co-operative program with the Briscoe Independent School District with the teacher working half-time with each school district.

But the students of the different school districts seem to want different things.

"Here the kids were evenly split on art and music but in Briscoe, the biggest number want art," Mickey said. "Overall, I think we might do better with music. But the Briscoe kids expressed very little interest in music, especially music theory."

"We can't offer the subjects full-time here, there's not enough for them (the teachers) to do," McCurley said, asking how the school districts would work up the teacher's salary.

Mickey answered that salaries would be worked out later. Both schools use a seven period schedule.

Trustees also reviewed Texas Assessment of Basic Skills test scores administered to third, fifth and ninth graders. The students were tested in math, reading and basic grammar skills.

Mickey said he was "very pleased" with the way the scores turned out.

All of the six third graders who took the test mastered spelling, capitalization, reading and writing whole numbers and the order of whole numbers. The low percentages were in addition and identifying main ideas of stories.

All of the six fifth graders scored well in adding whole numbers, interpreting graphs, noticing context clues in stories and spelling. The lowest percentages were in interpreting place value and distinguishing fact from non-fact.

All three of the ninth graders scored well in fractions, decimals, following written directions, sentence structure and capitalization, among other topics. Low scores were in ratios, percentages and proportions.

Fund started for Pampa resident

A fund has been established to help pay expenses related to the terminal illness of a Pampa mother of two.

Gayle Kelley, 32, mother of two young girls and a former dental assistant here, is receiving care in the hospice program at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, according to fund organizer Pam Lambert.

Kelley, daughter of Nolan and Virginia Welborn of Pampa, suffers from cancer of the liver.

Lambert said. The organizer has established a fund for the stricken Pampa resident at Security Federal Savings & Loan.

Before her disease was diagnosed last December, Kelley was a dental assistant for Dr. Jay Johnson for about five years.

To donate to the fund, contact the financial institution. For more information, call Lambert at 665-8771.

Lefors board

required by the state, are actually prepared and graded by college students in Iowa, though they supposedly apply guidelines set by Texas.

New tests will be administered next year to include new objectives and test material, Baker said.

In other matters, the board gave general approval to a plan by the Gray County Appraisal District to pursue the option of building a new facility for the appraisal district office.

Charles Buzzard, chief GCAD appraiser, said the district is facing increasing budgets from higher office leasing costs and the use of outside help for oil and gas appraisals. The current cost of leasing will increase from $7.50 to $10 per square foot next year, Buzzard said.

The GCAD also needs more office space, he explained. "We're running out of storage space basically," he said, explaining the district is required to keep a number of records on storage. Some records are now being stacked on top of computers and cabinets, he said.

The GCAD board has been considering three options: continuing the current lease, expanding the office space in the current location in the Hughes Building at Pampa or purchasing or building a new facility.

He said the board is planning for a facility with 4,060 square feet. The current office complex has 2,226 square feet.

"We feel the best way is a new building," Buzzard said. He said he had checked current structures in Pampa, but none are available with the desired amount of space. Also, purchasing an already existing structure would still require remodeling and rewiring costs in addition to the purchase price.

Leasing costs will probably continue to increase on a yearly basis, he noted.

With the district having a building of its own, there would only be the general costs of maintenance to worry about without dealing with increasing rent costs or lease terms, he said.

Buzzard said he is approaching all the taxing entities of the GCAD on the proposal since they will have to pay for the office space. He estimated a new facility could be constructed for approximately $185,000.

That cost could exceed $300,000 on 10-year financing terms. But he said the board would like the entities to consider paying the costs in one or two years to save on the accruing interest.

Buzzard said the board will make a proposal to present to the entities in about a month.

In other business, the trustees accepted a bid of $1,500 from Ron Hadley of Pampa for the purchase of a 1977 bus from the district, approved cooperative agreements with the Region XVI Education Service Center for 1985-1985 and approved bills for payment.

In an executive session to discuss personnel matters, the trustees discussed applications for the elementary school principal and superintendent positions, both to be vacated this summer by Baker and Collins.

Collins said he had received three applications for principal and had sent four others out. Applications must be in to the district by Thursday, June 13.

Supt. Collins also reported on a discussion he had with Kenneth Laycock, Region XVI director who has been hired as a consultant to find applicants for the superintendent post. Laycock said he had received six applications to date for the post.

White against long work weeks

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to repeal the Blue Law and allow Sunday shopping needs to protect family life and shouldn't allow seven-day work weeks, Gov. Mark White says.

"That's one of the things I've been saying all along I wanted that Legislature to consider — the fact that workers have families and they should be given time with their families," White said.

The House has approved a bill to repeal the Blue Law and allow Sunday sales for all but automobile dealers. The legislation has been endorsed by the Senate State Affairs Committee and could be debated by senators next week.

Without specifically threatening a veto, White said he is studying the bill to make certain seven-day work weeks aren't allowed.

"We must make some protection for individuals to have time for their homes, their families," White told his weekly news conference Thursday.

"We don't want to do anything at the state level that would help speed up the loss of that family unit or support for our children. That's one of the biggest problems we face in Texas today, in the nation. Many of the problems we have in that prison, in schools, is the fact that we have families that are not as strong a unit as they once were."

Backers of the repeal bill say it includes provisions to allow time off for religious worship and to protect workers against having to work seven days a week.

"I like that," the governor said. "If you force somebody to work seven days a week, you have a very severe problem."

White also said he hasn't yet decided whether to sign into law a bill that would triple tuition at state colleges and universities, effective this fall.

The bill, designed to raise about $275 million more for state government over the next two years.

Anti-gun control bill is tentatively approved

AUSTIN (AP) — A self-proclaimed law-and-order senator has won tentative approval of a bill that would "make clear" that the Legislature, and not local communities, should determine whether Texans can own guns.

Sen. J.E. "Buster" Brown said his bill was filed as a result of what "has happened in other states, where cities have passed ordinances that prohibit ownership of guns."

"I think that's contrary to the Texas attitude," Brown told reporters Thursday. "This bill would make sure that if that's ever going to happen in Texas, it would have to happen right here in the Legislature."

Brown's proposal was tentatively approved 20-11 but senators balked at final passage Thursday.

Brown, R-Lake Jackson, said "several senators indicated they would vote for final passage but wanted to look at it again" before sending the measure to the House.

Senators questioned whether Brown's bill would override zoning ordinances and would leave cities at the mercy of rioters, and several amendments were added.

One by Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, spells out that cities can regulate "possession and use" of guns in emergencies "to protect the public safety."

Parmer mentioned "riots, insurrections, teen-age gang violence, racial violence," and added, "I don't want to take away any city's ability to regulate emergencies."

"We're putting police and public safety officers in even graver danger during riots or social upheaval" without a provision to control guns in emergencies, Parmer said.

An amendment by Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, would authorize cities to prohibit the discharge of firearms within city limits and would regulate "the use of property under its zoning authority."

Yet another amendment, by Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, deleted a provision that any municipal ordinance now in effect that conflicts with the bill would be void.

Without his amendment, Glasgow said, if some "right-wing crazy" was locked up for shooting dogs, "the case would be gone."

"I want cities to have the authority to regulate who shoots guns in residential areas," said Glasgow. A motion to table Glasgow's amendment failed 15-16, and the amendment was approved 18-13.

Brown said he knew of no Texas city ordinance banning the ownership of guns, but members of sportsmen's clubs had testified "they had heard councils discuss the possibility of doing it."

"We have a lot of cities and we have a lot of villages and towns in the state, and you can recognize the real difficulty ... by our not acting. This message was given to the cities that we're not going to leave questions of gun ownership to the city level," Brown said.

Brown was asked at an impromptu news conference: "A city could not pass an ordinance telling you to come down and register your weapon unless the Legislature acted?"

"That's correct," he replied.

"We only hit directly upon that subject that if a city passed an ordinance that said no one in this town can own a gun, that would be invalid," he said.

"The chief purpose of it (the bill) is to make clear that the state will be responsible for regulating — if any — the ownership of guns," Brown said.

In other action Thursday, the Senate approved and sent to the House proposals that would:

— Eliminate the sales tax on newspapers sold individually or through a subscription.

— Extend the life of the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

— Direct state agencies to establish programs to make the public aware of the benefits of cleaning up litter on Texas beaches.

— Specify that failure to renew a teacher's contract must be based on the recommendation of the school district's administrator, professional personnel and "valid" educational criteria.

— Exempt from jury duty for a year a person who has served on a jury for at least five days.

— Establish fees for misdemeanor and felony drug offense convictions, with the money going to a special fund for treating drug victims.

— Authorize the state health commissioner to close waters containing contaminated finfish to fishing.

— Allow the Polygraph Examiners Board to assess civil penalties of up to $5,000 for those who violated the Polygraph Examiners Act.

— Regulate "respiratory care practitioners," including those who monitor patients on respirators and teach breathing exercises.

— Allow regents to levy a $25 a semester recreational sports fee at the University of Texas at Austin.

The Senate also approved a House-passed resolution designating "No Place But Texas" by Dallas songwriter Alex Harvey as the official song for the Texas 1986 Sesquicentennial.

Harvey sang the song for senators, who responded with a standing ovation.

Vote still needed on right-to-die bill

AUSTIN (AP) — House members will have one more vote next week on a bill that would let relatives or friends of a terminally-ill patient stop life-sustaining machines.

The measure was temporarily approved 75-61 Thursday.

"There is great recognition now that medical technology is such it can prolong life under the most gruesome circumstances," said Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman. "The medical profession now is totally supportive of laws that give other persons the right to make the decision."

Rep. Ted Roberts, R-Corpus Christi, said present law was "a good delicate balance," and tried to table Bush's bill. His motion failed 60-74.

The measure needs a final vote before going to the Senate.

Texas' 1977 Natural Death Act allows a patient to direct in a written document that their life not be artificially prolonged if they become terminally ill.

"This act is strictly limited and mostly unworkable," Bush said.

His bill, supported by the Texas Medical Association and the Texas Hospital Association, would let a terminally-ill adult person designate another person, either in writing or verbally, to make the decision if the patient was comatose or incompetent. The directive would have to be witnessed by two persons who are not relatives, beneficiaries of any will or medical personnel.

If a patient made no directive, the decision could be made by two people — the patient's spouse and an adult child, parent or relative.

Bush stressed that no decision could be made until at least two physicians declared the patient terminally ill.

A district court would have to hold a hearing on any decision made by a minor.

The bill says life-sustaining procedures could not be withdrawn from a pregnant woman.

"This is limiting the protection we have now in the law on pulling the plug," Roberts said.

"This bill is part of an evolution," Bush said. "The situation has become more complicated. Medical technology has made it possible for a body to exist in a state of death virtually indefinitely."

In other action Thursday, the House approved on voice vote Senate's amendment made to a bill that puts intrastate telephone calls under the state sales tax and sent the measure to the governor.

The House also finally approved on voice vote and sent to the Senate a bill allowing cities that do not have a sales tax for mass transit to levy an additional local sales tax of one cent. Most larger Texas cities already have a one-cent local sales tax and some have a one-cent levy to support their mass transit systems.

Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-Killeen, said smaller cities needed the added local sales tax.

Court considers Merkt case

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel has heard a plea to reverse the conviction of Stacey Lynn Merkt, a halfway house worker facing a six-month prison sentence for transporting illegal aliens into the United States.

There was no indication when a ruling would be issued by the three-judge panel, which heard arguments from Ms. Merkt's lawyers on Thursday.

Ms. Merkt, a 30-year-old volunteer at the church-supported Casa Oscar Romero in San Benito, near Harlingen, has said that she considers helping illegal aliens into this country to be her religious obligation.

She was recently sentenced to six months in prison, plus a separate 90-day sentence for breaking probation on a similar conviction nine months earlier.

In a friend-of-the-court brief, the National Council of Churches and five other church organizations said Ms. Merkt was only following her religious beliefs, and the case set up "a confrontation between secular authority and religious obligation."

"Stacey Merkt, in assisting these Salvadoran refugees, was living her religious principles," the brief said.

Dennis Riordan, a San Francisco lawyer for Ms. Merkt, spent most of his argument on a claim that she "had a sincere belief" that the two aliens had a legal right to wade the Rio Grande River and enter the U.S., and therefore she had no intent to commit a crime.

Her intent, he said, was to assist them in filing for political asylum.

"There is no crime unless she transported them for the specific purpose of bringing them in illegally," he added.

Riordan said Ms. Merkt did not take the two San Salvador citizens to the Immigration and Naturalization Service center in Harlingen, though she passed by it.

Dan Hodges, a Houston lawyer acting for the Department of Justice, argued that no one could be allowed to choose which INS center they like best, because if the courts allow this as a defense in illegal alien prosecutions, none of the cases could be won.

Anyone caught transporting illegal aliens could simply claim they were being taken to an INS center up the road somewhere, he said.

Bankers: inflation will be less than 6 percent in 1985

HOUSTON (AP) — The inflation rate will be less than 6 percent by the end of 1985, and the prime rate charged by major bank will remain unchanged or drop, a survey of 200 Houston-area bank directors shows.

Half of the bankers polled also believe the price of oil will drop by $2 to $4 to $24-to-$26 per barrel by the end of the year, the survey showed.

The survey was done by the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. and released Thursday at a meeting of the American Institute of Banking, the educational arm of the American Bankers Association.

During the keynote address Thursday night, Texas Gov. Mark White said the state's economic future is strong. White said state would have a balanced budget without increased taxes, better educational opportunities for children, plenty of water and adequate transportation and mobility.

"My prayer is that I will live long enough to see the Gulf Freeway completed. At least I'll have a long life," White said of the main thoroughfare between Houston and Galveston. Portions of the freeway have been under construction for more than two decades.

William E. Gibson, senior vice president and chief economist for RepublicBank Corp., predicted the state's economy will grow "in line with the national economy, maybe a little faster."

Despite some problems in energy-related industries, Gibson said, the growing population and defense spending will spur economic growth.

Bank directors, however, seemed uncertain about the direction of Texas banking, the survey showed.

"Many of the results point to a level of uncertainty about what products should be offered, about the real estate market in general and about whether branch banking for Texas banks should be allowed," said Stan Martain of Peat, Marwick.

More than 65 percent of the bank directors said they receive adequate regulatory supervision, while about 12 percent think the supervision is less than adequate.

She asked wrong person

We do not publish unsigned letters. But one came in the mail this week that deserves mention.

Someone (I presume it was a woman) wrote concerning the alimony bill that was debated in the Texas Legislature recently. She wanted me to publish the names of legislators women could write in support of the bill. And, she wanted me to do what I could to help in efforts to get it passed.

Now I don't want to disillusion anyone. But asking for my help in getting a new law passed, for whatever purpose, is sort of like asking an Indian to build a statue of Gen. Custer. You are talking to the wrong fellow.

The lady did, however, make an impassioned plea: "You do realize that we (Texas) are the only state without this. Please help us. We really need this bill passed. Some women stay home and raise their children, then 15 or 20 years later the husband leaves. I'm sure you know how this goes. She, or we, all need help."

While it is impossible not to feel sympathy for an ex-wife in the situation she describes, let us reflect for a moment on what supporting such a law would mean.

It would mean that we would become a party to taking something away from one person and forcing him to give it to another. That, we think, is wrong.

It is not my business, or the business of any second party, to dictate to a husband and wife what financial arrangements they make between themselves.

If I tried to do it as an individual, I would probably get punched in the nose, and justifiably so.

But if it is wrong for me to do it as an individual, how does it become right for me to join forces with other individuals and do the same thing? Does something become right simply because enough people favor it to vote it into law? Obviously not—not from a moral standpoint.

While supporters of the alimony law can make a pretty convincing argument that an elderly woman who has spent a lifetime maintaining a home for her husband and gained no employment skills deserves some support, a law cannot be aimed at only the people in that situation. It has to apply to everybody.

There is no convincing argument that a spouse who is, say 30 years old, should be forced to support an ex-spouse of the same age for their rest of their lives.

It is true that the bill which has been discussed in the Legislature would provide alimony only after 10 years of marriage. But even that would not always justify continued support by the ex-spouse. And if that bill did get voted into law, you can bet there would be efforts to drop the 10-year provision the next time the Legislature gets together.

The lady asked me to publish the names of legislators people interested in the bill could write. Well, the people who represent this area are State Rep. Foster Whaley of Pampa and Sen. Bill Sarpalius of Canyon.

She is, of course, perfectly free to urge them to support the alimony bill. But if I urge them to do anything it will be to keep the state from intruding even more into the personal lives of citizens.

Owners holding bag after home builder abandons area

DALLAS (AP) — A Houston-based builder has been unresponsive to claims by homebuyers who were saddled with liens and bills for supplies and home repairs when the company stopped work, the homeowners say.

Several subcontractors and suppliers have filed liens against homeowners to collect money owed by Genex Homes, which stopped construction in at least three Dallas-Fort Worth neighborhoods.

Other Genex homeowners said they have had trouble getting the company to make warranty repairs. Telephones at the company's headquarters were not answered late Thursday.

"Being my first home, I thought it was going to be a real good experience, but I've been real disappointed since I moved in," homeowner Robert Benford said, adding his roof now leaks and water pipes are faulty.

Benford and other homeowners in southwest Dallas met to form a neighborhood association Wednesday. He said the group plans to send complaint forms to the Texas attorney general's office and the Federal Trade Commission.

The company has closed sales offices and pulled construction crews from new housing sites, homeowners said.

Benford, who moved into his house last June, said Genex has not reimbursed him for the plumbing work to fix his pipes.

Supreme court decision wrong

With a wink and a nod, the U.S. Supreme Court last month gave its blessing to federal bureaucrats eager to stick their long arms and fingers into the pockets of members of the Arkansas-based Alamo Foundation.

The court said that Alamo—recognized by the IRS as a religious organization—must abide by federal labor laws and that its "volunteer workers" must be paid minimum wage and overtime pay, or the equivalent in free lodging, meals, health care and other benefits. Conveniently, that ruling also means the volunteers would be subject to withholding taxes—so the government gets "its" cut first.

The case was not brought by a disgruntled "volunteer" worker, but by the federal government, unhappy that Alamo was not complying with various record-keeping requirements of the federal Fair Labor Standards Act.

The foundation receives its income from the various business it runs with "volunteer" workers. In return for working a 60-hour week or longer, the foundation had provided the 300 or so "associates" with food, clothing, shelter and medical and child care. The court said the value of that compensation was $200 per month. There were no cash salaries.

Alamo argued that the record-keeping requirements attached to cash payments would lead to "excessive government entanglement with religion," and that the federal government had no right to impose its view of adequate compensation on workers willing to settle for what Alamo offered.

In fact, volunteer after volunteer took the stand in Alamo's defense, saying they never expected monetary compensation and would be offended if money were offered. Justice Byron White, however, writing for the unanimous court, said such arguments were irrelevant.

To be sure, the Alamo setup is hardly the norm. We know few people who would accept such compensation. The specific relevant question, however, is whether Alamo's "associates" were coerced into the arrangements. The larger question is whether this is a society willing to tolerate unusual or offbeat ways people choose to lead their lives.

The case didn't turn on the question of coercion. White argued that if an exception were made for Alamo, its compensation package "would be likely to exert a downward pressure on wages in competing businesses." Thus, the court implicitly affirmed that workers have a "right" to wages greater than they might be willing to accept.

There is no such "right." Wages, like prices between competing businesses, should be of concern only to those businesses, their workers and their customers. If wages are too low, the workers will go elsewhere. If wages are too high, the business will not survive. Those choice rightfully belong to the people involved, not to the Supreme Court.

State monopoly in space

The president's "Star Wars" strategic defense initiative isn't the only controversy involving U.S. space policy.

Another dispute concerns the emerging role of the private sector in space exploration and development, and the apparent efforts of the government to thwart it.

As would be expected, the United States has created a space bureaucracy, which like all bureaucracies spends to much energy devising schemes for protecting its turf. There are no Captain James T. Kirks here. No starships "Enterprise." At least not "Free Enterprise."

The biggest hurdle facing America's growing legion of corporate and individual space entrepreneurs is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), which directed the effort to put U.S. astronauts on the moon.

NASA has an illustrious history. It has been our springboard into the dark beyond—and, according to some, into our economic future. Technology analyst Milton Copulos, for example, has estimated that space-based and space-related enterprises could add $500 billion or more to the U.S. economy in the next twenty-five years. Literally, the sky's the limit. But only if NASA loosens its grip.

NASA currently enjoys what amounts to a space monopoly. And like other government monopolies, the Postal Service for example, NASA gives ground grudgingly. Because it can use its federal subsidies to undercut competitors, private-sector firms wanting to get into the satellite launch business can't compete with the government.

NASA is supposed to adjust its prices for commercial launch services so it can realize "full cost recovery"—meaning "you pay what it costs" to have NASA put your satellite into orbit.

As a first step, the price of a commercial launch of the Space Shuttle will be hiked from the current $38 million for a full cargo load to $71 million in 1988 and $87 million by 1991. But, according to NASA's own congressional testimony, the cost of a Shuttle launch is already in the $150-million range. Private estimates place the figure higher. Little wonder private firms find it difficult to compete with NASA's Space Shuttle.

Space entrepreneurs also face another problem: there are no laws on the books extending patent protection to space-related inventions. Until such protection can be guaranteed, firms are unlikely to risk investment capital in new space-related technologies. One way to solve this problem would be to grant an inventor a patent under the laws of the nation whose flag the space laboratory is "flying"—the same way discoveries at sea are credited to the nation to whom the ship is registered.

Is there something special about the Space Shuttle? Not really. Although it is certainly a romantic venture, as Utah Sen. Jack Garn—a member of the flight crew on the most recent mission—can attest, its success rate is anything but perfect. A number of its recent satellite launches have been plagued with problems.

If the United States expects to realize the full potential of space, it's time for the government to step aside, or at least make room for the private sector. This is not to take anything away from NASA. It helped put us where we are today, and probably has a continuing role to play.

But launching commercial satellites is not its business—not when space entrepreneurs are willing to put up their own bucks to do the job. "Beam us up, Scotty." America is ready for the final frontier. "This is Feulner to Enterprise."

A salute to all mothers

So you are going to have a baby. A pair never beat a full house, they say. Into such a world you are about to bring a baby. Next month, maybe. You are not human if you have not wondered through each long night... If it is right.

Mothers have worried about that since a long time before you switched to low heels. You'll have to endure the mornings and the waiting and the dieting and the waiting and the wondering and the waiting... alone.

But in worrying, you have lots of company. When Nancy of Kentucky entered the valley of the shadow what was there for her baby? The British were shooting at us in a prelude to war...

A former candidate for president and member of the Senate was being tried for treason. Her husband was an illiterate, wandering laborer.

But in the agony of poverty, war, and public scandal... Nancy Lincoln's baby was born.

Suppose you had been Mary, a slave girl. To you, in Diamond Grove, Missouri, in 1864, it would have seemed the whole mad world was aflame.

Civil war matched the cruel weapons of Grant and Lee.

Sherman was shooting and looting his way to the sea.

Had Mary known that six weeks later she and her boy child would be kidnaped by night riders and that she would never be heard from again... it would not have changed things. She would have had her baby.

For, there were reasons George Washington Carver had to be.

There were important reasons. We were at war with Mexico when tiny Tom Edison arrived in Ohio. The day he invented the electric light... out in Indian territory... to two worried half-breed Cherokee Indians... a boy was born.

He was named Will... Rogers.

In Minnesota Edith was frightened, too. In 1898 the United States was barely struggling to its financial feet when the battleship Maine blew up and the Spanish-American War exploded with it. At the height of the storm Edith's child was born—Charles Mayo of Rochester.

It was uncertain adventure for Harry and Catherine Crosby of Tacoma, Washington.

Then, too, there was a war to be won. But more, there was a song to be sung. And Bing was born.

That is what I am trying to say. That is the whole of it... That there is an important job to do... For a teacher, preacher, mechanic... For a barber, carpenter, doctor or somebody to grub out the sewers. It is important.

Even if there are wars.

For it is the soul of man that has to be tried.

An eternity is being populated. Each must test his wings alone... Until he flies.

Then they will take this small world from us and give us the skies.

But we have to be here, first. That is why what you are about to do is so important.

For each woman there is this personal Garden of Gethsemane. She goes there for strength. I have not tried to tell you it is easy... Only that it is terribly important.

None, holding your hand, can erase the terror. Born of the lateness of the hour. And the stories of old women. Always old ones. Often childless.

Impatient, tired, you will, of course, be worried. Since long before Mary, mothers have been anxious for their offspring. But have borne them in stables and hidden them in bulrushes. Have borne them unattended in the bouncing bed of a Conestoga wagon racing to outdistance savages... In unheated frontier cabins... just as alone... amidst the antiseptic whiteness of great hospitals.

Because it is important that they do. It has ever been so!

A while of moonlight and roses... A lifetime of dishwater and diapers. Toys that will not run... noses that will not stop...

And women... back into the garden... and again...

Barefoot over broken glass...

Humming a lullaby.

The grim alternative to 'star wars'

By William A. Rusher

NEW YORK (NEA) — Critics of President Reagan's "Star Peace" proposal (for a satellite defense against nuclear missiles) are forced, more or less willy-nilly, to support the only currently viable alternative: the macabre concept of "deterrence by mutual assured destruction."

This strategic doctrine, under which each superpower supposedly feels secure because the other knows that to launch a first strike would be to invite "assured destruction" by the victim, is the basis of such peace as the world has enjoyed since the Soviet Union acquired the ability to wage nuclear war about a third of a century ago.

It was first officially formulated by that notable whiz kid, Robert McNamara, in the early 1960s, and served as the theoretical basis for the anti-ballistic missile treaty negotiated with the Russians by the Nixon administration in 1972. Under the ABM treaty, each superpower was to leave itself open to nuclear attack by the other, save in one carefully specified zone — implicitly, the Moscow and Washington areas, respectively. The rest of the population and real estate of both countries was to be deliberately exposed to nuclear attack, as hostages testifying to the benign intentions of the two governments.

Ever since, the United States has adhered meticulously to the provisions of the ABM treaty. In fact it has gone beyond them, electing to leave Washington itself unprotected by the anti-ballistic weapons the treaty allows it to deploy — evidence of the commendable determination of our leaders inside the Beltway to share the risks they have imposed on the rest of us.

What is disturbing, in the circumstances, is the fact that the Soviet Union has never by word or deed indicated that it subscribes to the concept of deterrence through mutual assured destruction. To be sure, it signed the ABM treaty (and promptly ringed Moscow with the bristling array of anti-ballistic missile weapons that treaty permits). But Soviet military commentators have never acknowledged the intention to leave any significant sector of the U.S.S.R. vulnerable to nuclear attack for so much as a second if they could help it. On the contrary, they have supervised the development of a massive system of civil defense in all of the Soviet Union's principal cities (an effort this country abandoned as hopeless nearly 20 years ago). On top of that, they have brisily violated the ABM treaty itself — most notoriously by constructing a huge phased-array radar installation at Krasnoyarsk. This facility will protect Soviet missile-launching sites far outside the zone around Moscow.

In short, the Soviet attitude toward McNamara's intricate game plan appears to be: By all means let the United States leave itself vulnerable to nuclear attack, to demonstrate the innocence of its intentions. Meanwhile we will do everything we can to render the Soviet Union capable of surviving such an attack, just in case.

That is the true state of the strategic posture of the two countries today, and the first thing you will note is that it allows the Soviet Union to enjoy the best of both worlds — a situation that probably struck the airheads in the Nixon and Carter State Departments as a net plus, because it was bound to "reassure" the Russians. Meanwhile, we are left to hope the Soviet defensive measures aren't too successful, enabling the Kremlin bosses to launch a first strike and survive our death-rattle retaliation.

That is why President Reagan is proposing to base this country's defense against nuclear missiles on a new and sturdy screen of defensive satellites — a development that would simply transcend reliance on mutual assured destruction.

Lefors joins group seeking changes in school funding

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

LEFORS - Concerned about loss of state funds and increased expenditures, Lefors Independent School District trustees voted Thursday night to join a group that says it is seeking a more equitable state school funding program.

The Texas Schools for Fair Funding has organized to work toward its version of a more equitable and permanent state funding program for all schools in Texas to offset the substantial aid losses being experienced by many districts.

Supt. Jimmy Collins told the board he had been contacted by TSFF representatives concerning Lefors' interest in associating with the new group.

The district lost an estimated $75,000 in state funding this school year. Collins estimated the district will lose about $47,000 for the next school year, or about $213 per student in state aid funds.

In addition, the Lefors schools face increased expenditures arising out of the educational reforms approved by the state last summer. These include salary increases, Career Ladder supplements, class size limitations, pre-school programs, additional courses and the hiring of at least two new teachers to implement some of the new curricula, Collins explained.

Beyond that, the district faces the usual inflationary cost hikes, purchase of supplies to implement the changes, maintenance needs, increased utilities costs and other items.

"You're looking at a lot of extra expense," Supt. Collins stated.

Collins recommended the trustees approve membership in the new organization.

"I feel it would be worthwhile to have a voice in Austin" to lobby for changes in the recently enacted state aid programs for schools, Collins said.

The group has hired former education commissioner Raymon Bynum as a consultant and former House Education Committee chairman Hamp Atkinson as a lobbyist.

TSFF is aimed mainly at fighting for the small school districts against what it calls inequities in the school reform bill.

Collins showed the board a copy of a letter from Jimmy Williams, superintendent of the Rockwall Independent School District.

"This group is concerned with the funding losses for 1985-1986, as well as the long-range financing of public schools," Williams writes.

Collins said there's probably not much that can be done for the coming school year, since it will probably be two years before the Legislature meets again.

"But a lot of lobbying can be done in two years," he said.

A brochure on the organization shown by Collins listed two goals for TSFF:

- To provide positive and responsible recommendations for fair and equitable funding for Texas public schools.

- To work with the educational and political leadership of the state of Texas in a unified effort to find the most equitable state funding for all Texas public schools.

Collins also gave the trustees copies of an Associated Press article about the new organization published Wednesday in The Pampa News.

According to the article, TSFF members indicate districts with less than 5,000 enrollment are "tremendously penalized" by the state aid formula, especially the price differential index (PDI).

The PDI is supposed to reflect geographic variations in costs that are beyond school districts' control. But the formula is so complex "only about four people in the state... actually understand the funding," claims Princeton school superintendent Bobby Aldridge in the AP article.

The index is supposedly directly connected with student population and school district wealth. It was developed to lessen the effect of House Bill 72 on the wealthier, large districts, Aldridge notes.

But in the process smaller districts face losses, with more than 600 Texas school districts to lose at least $100,000 each because of the bill, the AP article states.

The smaller districts "are not big enough to reap the benefits of the PDI," Aldridge states.

The TSFF brochure notes the mandated costs and increased teacher salaries "will necessitate a local tax increase in a large number of Texas schools."

Supt. Collins in a previous board meeting has already warned the Lefors ISD trustees of that possibility in developing the 1985-1986 school budget.

Membership dues in TSFF will be $300 a year for Lefors with its enrollment of less than 1,000 students, Collins noted. Dues will be paid in May of this year and in January of 1985 and 1986.

Board President Arnold Story said that seems like a small cost against the possibility of preventing further loss of state aid and perhaps recovering some of the funding aid.

Managed by a board of directors, TSFF is perceived to be an ad-hoc committee to be dissolved at the end of the regular 1987 session of the Legislature.

Judges praise Pampa choirs

The Pampa High School Concert Choir received high praise from the judges on their recent award-winning competition at the St. Louis, Mo., Six Flags Over Mid-America Choral Festival.

Attending the festival in late April, the Harvester choir members competed against more than 70 choirs from 14 states. They returned with three first division ratings and two "Best in Class" trophies.

The Concert Choir participated in men's choir, women's choir and mixed choir competition. All three choirs earned first division ratings from all three judges, reported Fred Mays, PHS choir director.

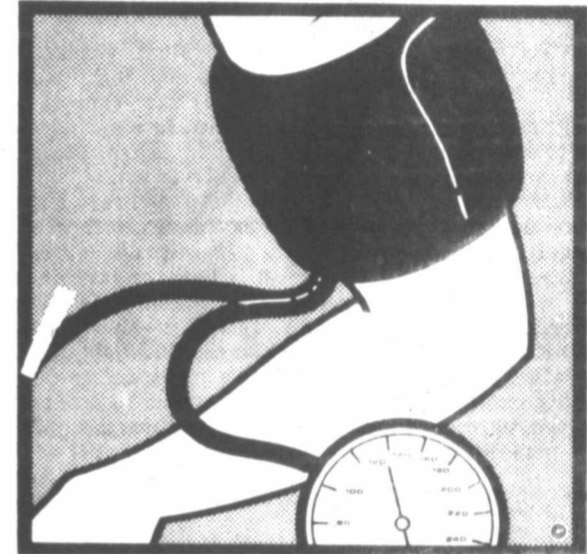

The Concert Men and Concert Women Choirs each won the "Best in Class" honors for their performances. Only three of the awards are given, with Pampa taking two of them, Mays noted.

Mays said the judges were very complimentary of the Pampa choirs, saying "they are very talented and very musical."

Of the Concert Women Choir, Dr. Brooks stated, "There is nothing to criticize... very beautifully performed."

Sponsors for the trip were Fred Mays, Dolores and Larry Cross, Bill and Daisy Bennett, Travis and Norma Bolch, Archie and June Hardin, Elena Donald, Marj Penn and Principal Paul Payne.

Accompanist for the choirs was Jennifer Scoggin.

Latin America's evolution toward democracy has costs for the US

WASHINGTON (AP) — Latin America's democratic evolution has been widely hailed by the Reagan administration but, for all their flaws, the once-dominant right-wing military dictators were far more dependable U.S. allies than the new generation of elected governments.

Never has Latin America been more democratic or less supportive of U.S. policies than it is now.

It is a source of frustration to the administration that no hemispheric government backed President Reagan's bid for renewed military aid to Nicaragua's rebels last month.

Reagan's announcement of a trade embargo against Nicaragua last week has received expressions of outspoken opposition from a number of friendly governments.

Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela — three of the four countries engaged in the Central American peace mediation process — have criticized the embargo along with Ecuador, Bolivia, Argentina and Uruguay, all relatively new democracies.

The administration has been unambiguously supportive of the restoration of democratic rule in the hemisphere, contending that this trend is consistent with U.S. values and also is the best bulwark against the emergence of leftist dictatorships.

Over the past year and a half, Secretary of State George P. Shultz has attended four presidential inaugurations in Latin America and Vice President George Bush has gone to two others.

Nowadays, democratic countries far outnumber those where electoral procedures are limited or non-existent — Chile, Cuba, Guyana, Haiti, Nicaragua and Paraguay.

For the Reagan administration, however, the democratic revolution has not been an unmixed blessing. Many Latin American countries, while vigorously condemning the Sandinistas in private, remain silent publicly.

This circumspect attitude enables these governments to placate local left-wing groups but has the side effect of leaving the Reagan administration isolated within the hemisphere. The administration often has found itself in the position of being more concerned about the security of Nicaragua's neighbors than those countries themselves.

The absence of vocal hemispheric support for Reagan's policies appears to have undermined the embargo against Nicaragua and also contributed to congressional resistance to a restoration of funding for the Contras.

Latin American governments also have been reluctant to join Reagan in demanding that the Sandinistas live up to their 1979 commitment to the Organization of American States to establish representative democracy.

Reagan has repeatedly raised that issue in his public statements but has won little or no support within the 32-member OAS. For many governments, silence is the most prudent political course.

The Reagan administration's problems with independent-minded democracies extend well beyond Latin America. At last week's seven-nation economic summit in Bonn, the leaders of France, West Germany, Britain and Canada all expressed opposition to the trade embargo.

Report cites abuse of the elderly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abuse of the elderly, a problem that remains largely hidden, is increasing nationally and may affect about 4 percent of the aged population, according to a House subcommittee.

"It represents a shocking and still largely hidden problem affecting over a million of our nation's most helpless and vulnerable citizens," Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging's subcommittee on health and long-term care, said today in releasing a panel study.

"Physical violence, including negligence, and financial abuse appear to remain the most common forms of abuse, followed by the abrogation of basic constitutional rights and psychological abuse," the subcommittee's report said.

"The average citizen would find it hard to imagine just how widespread and frequent this problem is — how it cuts across all classes of society, how it occurs in large cities and in small towns," Pepper said in prepared remarks accompanying the study.

"Out of fear of or dependence on their abuser, older victims are reluctant to admit their loved ones, their own children, abuse them," he noted.

The subcommittee sent questionnaires to all state human service departments, reviewed case histories over the past four years, conducted interviews with experts and researchers, and surveyed news accounts, he said.

It concluded that about 4 percent, or 1.1 million of the nation's elderly, may be victims of abuse each year. This would be an increase of 100,000 abuse cases annually since 1981, Pepper said.

Pope faces feuding church in Holland

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Saturday starts a five-day trip to the Netherlands, where his conservative policies have run into a wall of opposition from some of the world's most liberal Catholics.

In advance of the papal visit, posters containing death-threats and calls for riots have appeared in Amsterdam. The "Call-up for Anti-Papist Rioting" urged rioters to "get" the pope, describing him as a fascist.

"Progressive" Dutch Catholics — and their priests — question the church's bans on artificial birth control, marriage for priests and the ability of laymen to say Mass, as well as the position of women in the church and papal infallibility on doctrinal matters.

The split between "progressives" and "traditionalists" polarizes the approximately 5.6 million Dutch Roman Catholics, about 40 percent of the population.

The Vatican has acknowledged the problems facing the pope during his trip, which also includes stops in Luxembourg and Belgium.

"Today the Dutch church is in a state of crisis," the Vatican newspaper said in a front-page commentary on Wednesday. "There is talk of a difficult trip."

Monsignor Harrie Verhoeven, director of the Pontifical Missionary Aid Works in the Netherlands, said: "The problems facing the church in general are seen even more sharply in the Netherlands. I think he will offer the Dutch encouragement to practice the fundamentals of the faith."

He added that the pope's plans to speak in Dutch "will have a positive effect" on his attempts to reconcile the Dutch church.

The "progressive" positions, sparked in large part by the modernizing trends of the Second Vatican Council of the 1960s, have given rise to the terms "experimental" or "do-it-yourself" Catholicism, to signify individual decision-making rather than Vatican direction.

The Polish-born pontiff also named three new conservative bishops in 1983, despite an outcry from liberal Dutch Catholics.

Indoor pool roof collapses; 12 killed

USTER, Switzerland (AP) — A 4-inch-thick concrete and steel ceiling collapsed "like a lid" onto three indoor public swimming pools, killing at least 12 people and trapping others, police said today.

Rescue workers drained some water from the pools, then used jackhammers and their bare hands to dig at least one hole through the slab, enabling divers to enter the pool and search for survivors and bodies.

Workers at the scene said children and members of a local swim club had been among those trapped.

"It was agonizing and ghastly," said one resident of the Zurich suburb of Uster, describing the scene at the complex, which houses two large pools and a wading pool. Uster is 12 miles southeast of Zurich.

About 40 people were believed to have been in the swimming complex when the ceiling section collapsed at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday. An undetermined number escaped injury or were treated on the scene for light injuries.

Scores of rescue workers aided by six dogs worked through the night as ambulances and three evacuation helicopters stood by. A police spokesman said this morning that it appeared no more people were trapped in the pools.

The concrete and steel slab, which was attached to the roof by steel bars, measured about 105 feet by 90 feet, said a police duty officer, who declined to give his name because he is not an official spokesman.

He said the roof section that fell was about four inches thick and had a 1 1/2-inch layer of wood underneath.

Town residents, some close to tears, watched the rescue operation in horror. "How could this happen?" asked city council member Max Kolb, shaking his head. An engineer at the scene, who said he had examined the building several years earlier, said he suspected one or more of the steel posts had rusted through. He asked that his name not be used.

One survivor of the accident was the Swiss national champion in the women's 200-meter breast stroke, Fraenzi Nydegger. She was not injured, but suffered from shock, rescue workers said.

The sports complex in the 20,000-population town also houses locker rooms, a game room and a restaurant in another section that was not affected by the cave-in.

Reagan ends European trip on upbeat note

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — President Reagan ended his symbol-laden, four-nation trek through Europe today declaring "mission accomplished," and said the United States must consider whether to continue observing a nuclear arms agreement with the Soviet Union.

Reagan, questioned about continued compliance with the unratified SALT agreement with the Soviet Union, said: "There's considerable evidence now that that has been rather one-sided. If it has been, then there's no need for us to continue."

"We have tried on what seemed to be a verbal agreement between ourselves and the Soviet Union for some time that even though we have not ratified that treaty ... that we would both seek to abide by the terms," Reagan said.

Speaking to reporters before departing, Reagan said the United States will make a decision "down the road" on whether to continue observing the strategic arms limitation agreement.

When a decision is made, he said, "we'll do it openly and ... with full knowledge of the Soviet Union."

Reagan held a departure news conference in front of Queluz Palace. He stood outside on a bright, cloudless day with the palace's manicured gardens behind him.

The president viewed some of the palace's horses before boarding Air Force One for the trip back to Washington.

"We're leaving today with our Atlantic ties strengthened and we're returning home mission accomplished," he said.

"It's been a long, historic and thoroughly worthwhile trip," Reagan said.

Answering questions, Reagan noted his invitation to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and said Gorbachev's recent tough talk hasn't changed his mind about a meeting.

"I think there'd be a lot to talk about and I just happen to believe it's time we started talking to each other and not about each other," he said. As for Gorbachev's harsh talk, he said, "What's new about that?"

Reagan said "we have no confirmation yet Mr. Gorbachev is coming" to the United Nations later this year but added, "The word probable is about the best way to describe it."

He said his invitation for a meeting "still goes, so the ball is in his court."

Meanwhile, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said in an interview with The New York Times that despite the tough talk there "probably" would be a summit meeting between the two.

"These leaders are positioning themselves with their own people," Regan said. "Gorbachev recognizes he has to have the Eastern bloc behind him. He is not known as the leader of the Eastern bloc yet. He's getting there."

On Thursday, Reagan said his journey had been a long one "but one fruitful in results."

Coaches, athletic directors blamed for college ethical crisis

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — "The enemy is us," the women's athletic director at the University of Texas says, suggesting that head coaches and athletic directors are directly to blame for an ethical crisis in college athletics.

"I'm sick and tired of listening to those who'd have us believe that fanatical alumni, the NCAA system, (NCAA executive director) Walter Byers and all those things are responsible for this despicable state in which we find our so-called educational sports programs," Donna Lopiano said.

"Not so, it's us," Ms. Lopiano, in her 10th year as women's athletic director at Texas, told people attending Wednesday's Ethics and Athletics Seminar at LSU.

"There is no justification for a 20 percent graduation rate of student athletes who complete four years of eligibility. There is no justification for illiterate baccalaureate degree-holding student-athletes."

Ms. Lopiano said athletic directors and head coaches should not only be responsible for "X's and O's," but for making sure most of their students graduate and for setting high ethical standards.

"We must be required to produce winners on three courts: On the playing field, in the classroom and in the public arena," she said.

Ms. Lopiano noted that the success of women's sports and high graduation rates at Texas go hand-in-hand.

This year alone, she said, Texas has earned one NCAA championship, and finished second, ninth and 15th in three others. Five of seven head coaches were named Coach of the Year in their respective sports, she said.

Of those student athletes who have completed four years of eligibility, 96 percent have graduated, and 35 percent of all athletes have at least a B average, she said.

"So, it can be done," she said. "Ask Joe Paterno (head football coach at Penn State) and ask Notre Dame."

Ms. Lopiano said 90 percent of all the current academic problems can be solved at the institutional level.

Her three main areas of concern are: winning on the field, graduating 95 percent of all scholarship athletes and producing articulate, ethical young men and women to represent the school.

On winning, she said, "It should be a goal of every athlete and every athletic team to win. There is nothing wrong with winning. There is nothing wrong with commercial sports."

"If any coach can't achieve a .500 record he (or she) should be fired, especially since they're the ones who choose (the athletes) and the teams they want to play against."

"If we as athletic directors and coaches are given significant institutional financial resources, and we are told, 'Here are the resources to conduct a quality program,' then there is a right for expectations. Coaches and athletes should pursue excellence and should achieve excellence in their performing art."

On the 95 percent graduation rate, she said, "That is not an impossible goal. Coaches do force athletes to get out of bed and go to practice. They do force athletes to do a lot of things that they don't want to do, because (the coaches) consider those tasks to be important. They had better consider going to class important."

"If the coach tells the athlete to run 30 laps, the athlete runs 30 laps," she said. "If the coach tells the student athlete to get to study hall, the student athlete gets to study hall. A coach can get an athlete to do almost anything."

"Athletes don't listen to their academic advisors, they don't listen to their mothers, they listen to their coaches."

On setting standards of ethical behavior, she said, "The student athlete should be an articulate public speaker."

"He or she should adhere to the same ethical or behavioral standards of faculty members, administrators, anyone employed by that institution."

"They represent your institution and they are role models for young people who want to follow in their footsteps."

SPORTS SCENE

O'Grady leads Nelson Golf Classic

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Mac O'Grady invoked the name of Steve Carlton and refused to speak with the press after shooting an 8-under-par 63 that staked him to a one-shot lead in the first round of the $500,000 Byron Nelson Classic.

"He pointed out that (Philadelphia Phillies pitcher) Carlton doesn't talk to the press and nobody thinks anything about it," PGA Tour official Tom Place said Thursday after he made a vain effort to induce O'Grady to speak with reporters.

"He said he doesn't have to talk with the press and he doesn't want to," said Place, the information director for the Tour.

Place said O'Grady "apparently was upset" over a magazine article about him last year.

"He said he had been embarrassed by the press and had absolutely nothing to say to them," Place said.

O'Grady's action, while unusual in pro golf, is not without precedent.

J.C. Snead declined an invitation to a mass interview last year, but did talk with reporters on an individual basis.

Deane Beman, a former player and now commissioner of the PGA Tour, failed to appear at a press conference at the St. Louis Open in the early 1970s. He said later he was not invited.

Again in the early 1970s, Lee Trevino left the course immediately after winning a playoff for the title in the National Airlines Open in order to catch a plane.

O'Grady made no excuse. He simply refused to be interviewed after matching the tournament scoring record and fulfilling a Tom Watson prediction.

"The course is virtually defenseless with no wind," said Watson, a four-time winner of this title who had an early 67 despite some erratic putting.

"I don't think I've ever seen the course play easier. I wouldn't be surprised to see someone shoot lights out, a 63," he said.

About six hours later, O'Grady came in with that number on the Las Colinas Sports Center course.

Rookie Andy Magee, who one-putted 11 times, also had it eight under par until he bogeyed the 17th hole. He finished with a 64, one shot back and one of 62 players in the field of 156 to break par on what Watson said was "a perfect day for scoring."

Mike Holland, who missed the cut in seven of eight previous starts this season, had a career-best 65.

The group at 66, five under par, included Peter Oosterhuis, Jodie Mudd, Mike Nicolette, John Cook and Bob Wrenn.

Watson and defending title-holder Craig Stadler were in a large group at 67. Trevino, the current PGA title-holder, shot 70 in the warm, sunny weather. Ben Crenshaw, a former Nelson winner trying to fight his way out of a slump, had a 68. Tom Kite, a winner last week in the Tournament of Champions, had a 69.

O'Grady, 34, made 17 tries at the Tour's qualifying school before gaining his playing rights.

He's now in his third season and recently matched his career-best finish with a third in the Las Vegas Invitational. He's won $84,062 for the season but has failed to finish his last four starts, missing the cut on two occasions and withdrawing from two others.

Mac O'Grady....first-round leader.

Daly tuning up for Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In auto racing, there's a big difference between fearless driving and reckless driving. No one knows that better than Derek Daly, who is easing himself back into top-flight competition after months of recuperating from serious injuries.

"At no time going around the track are you fearful," says Daly, who spent six weeks in the hospital and several months in rehabilitation following last September's crash in a race at Michigan International Speedway.

"I don't think any driver is afraid. If he was, he wouldn't be driving."

"But I do know my last race ended in a crash. I know physically and mentally I will need a couple days to get myself attuned to driving again."

Daly's first practice for the May 26 Indianapolis 500 amounted to a few shakedown laps on Wednesday. On Thursday, he said his biggest concern was getting enough time on the track to be ready for Saturday's first round of qualifying.

"I feel good now," he said. "I lost 23 pounds in the hospital, and that took a lot of my strength and stamina. But I'm back up to 168 pounds now, which is what I weighed last season, and I've had extensive training with a home gym. I still have problems with my feet and have yet to drive a car any length of time."

The 32-year-old Irishman with a background in Formula One racing suffered severe injuries to both feet and legs in the Michigan crash. He lost half of one toe, broke his left leg in four places, cracked a hip joint and broke his pelvis.

After a week in an Ann Arbor, Mich., hospital, he was transferred to Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis, where he was treated by the same doctor who attended Rick Mears. The two-time Indy 500 winner was a victim of foot and leg injuries in a crash last September in Canada.

Lakers vs. Nuggets

Riley expects high-scoring shootout

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers have raced through two rounds of the National Basketball Association playoffs, and Coach Pat Riley expects little change in the Western Conference final series against Denver.

"It's going to be a shootout, a high-scoring series," said Riley, whose club plays host to the Nuggets in the opening game of the best-of-seven series Saturday afternoon.

The winner of the Western Conference affair will move to the NBA's Championship Series against the Eastern Conference winner.

The Philadelphia 76ers earned a berth in the Eastern finals by sweeping the Milwaukee Bucks in four games. The defending NBA champion Boston Celtics, within a game of joining the 76ers, take a 3-2 edge into tonight's game against the Detroit Pistons at Detroit.

Los Angeles averaged over 130 points a game in sweeping the Phoenix Suns in three games and beating the Portland Trail Blazers in five to gain the Western Conference finals. But Denver, the regular-season scoring leader, showed some zip of its own by averaging almost 123 points in besting the San Antonio Spurs and Utah Jazz.

"Sure, we'll be the underdogs against LA," said Denver guard Mike Evans. "But we'll try to weather their storm. As far as tempo is concerned, that series is going to be as fast as a series can be."

"With Denver, you always know that (Calvin) Nett and (Alex) English will get their 20 points. What happens is that their other guys can sneak up on you and hurt you," said Laker guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who scored 34 points and collected 19 assists in a 139-120 victory on Tuesday that eliminated the Portland Trail Blazers from the playoffs.

"I think Denver has a great bunch of athletes who are able to run with any team," Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said. "They match up real well with us. They've got good athletes and like to run, the same game we play."

Added Los Angeles reserve guard Michael Cooper: "Denver will not be as physical as Portland, but it will be a real track meet. My main concern is not to run out of gas."

Riley, however, isn't worried about his team coming up short.

"Maybe the fifth game (against Portland) was a blessing in disguise because we didn't have a week off" before meeting Denver, said Riley.

The second game of the series will be played Tuesday night at the Forum, with the next two games May 17 and May 19 at Denver.

Dodger miscues hand Barber just won't act his age

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer
 The St. Louis Cardinals won ugly, thanks to two 10th-inning errors by Los Angeles first baseman Greg Brock. But after losing on three unearned runs the previous night and blowing a two-run lead in the ninth, the taste of victory was hardly sour.
 "Last night, we made the errors," said Willie McGee who scored the winning run in the Cardinals' 5-4 victory Thursday night. "They made the errors tonight. That's baseball."
 McGee led off the 10th with a single and went to third when Brock lost a pickoff throw by from loser Ken Howell, 2-2. One out and an intentional walk later, pinch-hitter Steve Braun hit a double-play grounder to short, but Brock dropped the throw to first, enabling McGee to score.

 "That's our game, running, that's how we win," McGee said. "You throw so many times over to first, it's hard not to make a mistake. I definitely planned to steal on that pitch."
 "I didn't see the error but I had my mind made up to go to third."
 The Dodgers had tied the game with a two outs in the ninth inning on a single by Pedro Guerrero off winner Neil Allen, 1-2, the third Cardinal pitcher. Ken Dayley pitched the 10th to earn his first save.
 Both National League afternoon games ended 1-0, with San Diego blanking Pittsburgh and San Francisco edging Chicago in 12 innings.
 There were no games in the American League.
Padres 1, Pirates 0

Tim Flannery got up a little early, thanks to his 11-day-old son Daniel, and capped a long day with a seventh-inning single to drive in the game's only run for NL West pacesetter Padres.
 "We got up at six o'clock and had a talk, and I told him I was going to hit one for him," Flannery said.
 That he did, stroking a two-out hit off the glove of Pittsburgh second baseman Johnny Ray to score Carmelo Martinez from second base. Martinez walked to start the inning off loser Mike Bielecki and advanced when winning pitcher Mark Thurmond sacrificed for the second out.
 Thurmond, 1-2, tossed a three-hitter for his second career shutout, striking out three, and walking none.
 The victory was San Diego's third straight. Pittsburgh has lost four in a row.

STATELINE, Nev. (NEA) — Miller Barber's flying right elbow is not a weather vane. Nor is he making a stab at skywriting.

True, his golf swing does make him look like he's getting ready to unfurl an umbrella. Or, as one teaching pro suggested, "It kinda looks like the saltwater taffy machine at the county fair."

The point is, as venerable Sam Snead once noted — from the moment before the club makes contact with the ball until he completes the loop of his follow-through, Barber's swing is as proficient as anybody's.

For "Mr. X," as he is known to his peers, it means results.
 Barber, 54, who will defend his U.S. Senior Open championship at Edgewood Tahoe in June, is one of the bona fide stars of golf's geriatric circuit.
 Over the years, he's been shortchanged on recognition because of a low profile. For his entire golf career, which stretches back to 1959, Barber is closing in on $2.5 million in prize money.

But it's his play on the Senior PGA tour that has stripped the "Mysterioso Mr. X" of the anonymity that his nickname conjures up.

The slightly rotund Texan — who hides behind sunglasses (really worn to correct astigmatism) and looks more like a retired storekeeper than a pro golfer — has always had a way of vanishing after the 18th hole.

The title of Mr. X doesn't bother him one whit.
 Says Barber: "It's given me identity different from everybody else."

He won his first PGA tournament in 1964, the Cajun Classic, and altogether captured 11 PGA regular tour victories. In 1977, when he was 46 years old, Barber earned $248,320 competing against all-comers to rank in the top 10.

Even today, he matches his skills occasionally with the kids on the regular PGA tour.

After joining the Seniors tour in 1981, however, Mr. X was the leading money winner the first two years, capturing two major events: the '81 PGA Senior and the '82 U.S. Senior Open. He won a second Senior Open last summer and jumped his prize money to a one-year personal high of $299,099 in 1984.

Barber and fellow Texan Don January, who topped the Seniors with $328,000 last year, call themselves "the Outlaws." "We've stolen all the money on the circuit," says Barber. Lee Elder, a recruit to the oldesters' entourage after he turned 50 last July, was heralded as the "Black Sheriff" — he'd catch "the Outlaws." But it hasn't happened.

X is not a man of many words. And all of them are spoken in a hurried, clipped, nasal east Texas twang. The short sentences are spiced by homely, expressions: "Good gracious! ... Look-ee there! ... Hoopee-boopee!"
 A native of Texarkana, Barber went to the University of Arkansas, where he lettered in football. But that was related to golf, too. "In our day," he reminisces, "we didn't have golf scholarships. They'd give you a football scholarship. So I played just a little ball. I mainly held for extra points."

Within his chunky body topped by a moony, jowled face and an omnipresent cap to cover his bald pate, there still resides the soul of a football player. He is a fanatic follower of the Arkansas Razorbacks and the Dallas Cowboys.
 But once he takes his square stance

 San Francisco's Manny Trillo didn't like what he saw, but after being ejected the previous night for protesting a called third strike, knew when to keep his mouth shut. And it paid off later when his two-out hit lifted the Giants over Chicago.

"I was going to swing if the pitch was anywhere close," said Trillo, whose single on an 0-2 pitch from loser Warren Brusstar gave the Giants their fourth victory in five games and dropped the Cubs to second place in the NL East. They trail the New York Mets by a half-game.

"I thought the last pitch was a ball, but I didn't say anything to the umpire (Doug Harvey)," Trillo said of his eighth-inning strikeout.

He had been ejected from Wednesday night's 1-0 loss to the Cubs after arguing with Eric Gregg.

China Spring leads 3A golf tournament

AUSTIN — China Spring shot a 305 to take a one-stroke lead over Augustine in the opening round of the Class 3A boys' golf tournament at the Lions Municipal Golf Course.

Canadian is in eighth place, 35 shots off the pace at 340. Steven Cross led the Wildcats with a 77. Steve Luck was next with an 85, followed by Donnie Anderson, 88; Kirk Morrow, 90, and Duane Clark, 107.

Don Moore of Abilene Wylie and Jeff Linnstaedter of China Spring are tied for medalist at 70.

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS

I was surprised at the various Mother's Day cards in the shops this year. Not just cards for Mother, but sister, aunt, friend, favorite person, etc., etc.

Granted, at times it seems the holidays have lost their special meaning because of the commercialism, but on the other hand it is a perfect time to say "I care."

If you are fortunate and your mother lives near you, do something special with her. The key word is WITH. Spend the day doing her favorite things or prepare her favorite dinner.

Perhaps she would enjoy a visit with you to another friend or relative. Get the camera out of the closet and take some pictures. Have someone take pictures of the two of you together. Use the house or car, the family pet or something else that your family treasures as background instead of an empty wall.

My favorite picture of my mother is the two of us standing in her rose garden. Use the picture to help establish a memory for years to come.

If you haven't visited your favorite card shop, take a few minutes today and think about that special person that would like to hear from you. Remember, the best gift is YOURSELF and only when that is not possible do you use another method. Write a note or make a call and take the opportunity to say "You're special" to someone that is special to you, especially Mother.

Often it is harder to trace the women in a family because of the custom of taking the husband's name and dropping the maiden name. Try to learn as many of your family names as possible including those relatives by marriage. Many times when you back up several generations you find cousins marrying cousins and you locate different lineage in this way.

Another clue that might suggest location or nationality is the name we call our parents, grandparents, etc. Do we use the French version or English way of addressing relatives?

Now is the time to include this type information in our family record books. Ask about nicknames. What was the reason for the nickname? Who named the child and where did the name originate? Does the name occur in each generation or skip generations? Watch for mother's maiden names to be used as a middle name for a child — usually a son. An old Welsh custom was the naming of the child by using three Christian names and then the family name thus having a total of four names.

Watch for variants of names to be used in naming a child of the opposite sex, such as daughters for fathers and sons for mothers.

Have a Happy Mother's Day and try to make it happy for someone else.

Dear Abby

Gas station 'peepholes' make this woman squawk

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: When I was a 16-year-old girl, I discovered a semi-concealed peephole in the wall of a ladies rest room at a gasoline station. The hole had been strategically drilled at a level that would afford the "viewer" on the other side of the wall a pretty good peep show.

Since then I have examined the walls of hundreds of gas station rest rooms and have found a surprising number of peepholes!

I think gas station owners who are aware of this disgusting invasion of privacy should be held accountable by law. What agency should I contact to put a stop to this? And if I can't do anything to stop it, perhaps a letter in your column will alert women to the fact that they may be inadvertently the "star" of some creep's peep show.

DISGUSTED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR DISGUSTED: Write to the consumer relations department of the oil company that owns (or leases) the gas station.

And until some action is taken to ensure privacy, men as well as women should be on the lookout for such peepholes. (A view is possible from either side of the wall.) P.S. An instant remedy: Stuff the hole with a wad of toilet tissue. Here's looking at you, lechers!

DEAR ABBY: You often advise people to talk to counselors, but let me ask you something: Can counselors help people decide whether to have children or not?

I've seen two counselors about this problem, and they were no help at all. They've seen so many kids with problems that their stock answer is: "When in doubt—don't." I could be happy with or without kids, but my husband loves kids and he would make a wonderful father. I like kids, too, but they walk all over me; I've never been able to exercise authority over anyone. Even 2-year-olds push me around.

I told this to one counselor, and he said, "If you had a kid, by the time he was 10, he'd be kicking your rear end."

What do you think, Abby? Should I take a chance and leave all the disciplining to my husband?

WEAK IN WATERLOO, IOWA

DEAR WEAK: No. Kids who have a "wait 'til your father comes home" kind of mother usually grow up hating their fathers and walking all over their mothers.

Don't take on parenthood until you've had a course in parenting and feel equal to the task. It's an 18-year commitment (minimum).

***

DEAR ABBY: I have had this friend for many years. We go out together—her husband and mine—and we even take trips together. I guess you could call us "young senior citizens."

"Molly" is a lady of good breeding and good manners, but she does something that is rude, crude and downright uncalled for. No matter if we're dining at someone's home or at a dinner at a restaurant, after she has finished her meal, Molly takes a tissue out of her purse and blows her nose at the table. And I mean she has a real blow-out! She does this every time without fail.

I asked her, after one of these "blowouts," if she had sinus trouble. She just said "No." (I guess she didn't get the hint because she still does it.)

I truly like Molly. She's kind-hearted and a wonderful friend, but this one habit drives me (and my husband) up a wall.

If you print this, you will have me for a friend for life.

ABSOLUTELY ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Hello, friend.

EXCHANGE STUDENTS HONORED - Trustees of the Pampa Independent School District gave plaques of commendation to the three foreign exchange students who have attended Pampa High School this year at Tuesday's board meeting. Board member

Students to perform in recital

Students of Bill Haley are to present two recitals at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m., Saturday, in the First Baptist Church here. Students from Wheeler, Panhandle and Pampa are to perform in both programs.

Playing at 2 p.m. will be Valerie Lee, Michael Hibler, Ellen Steele, Todd Jones, Keri Simmons, Joannie Hibler, Stacey Miller, Marcie Cates, Josh Steele, Brett Greenhouse, Allyson Thompson, Valerie Anderson, Janice Nash and Dianna Teague, Edward Dunigan and Jason Lemons.

Students set to perform at 7 p.m. include Kate Fields, Heath Kingham, Heidi Venal, Talitha Pope, Tamra Johnson, Leslie Forister, Laura Williams, Leigh Ellen Osborne, Jessica Garren, Shannon Simmons, Susan Thornton, Sameer Mohan, Barry Osborne, Connie Harris, John McGrath and Dianna Teague.

The following students are to be recognized for honors given by West Texas State University and Greater Southwest Music Festival: John McGrath, Valerie Anderson, Jason Lemons, Allyson Thompson and Tamra Johnson.

At 2 p.m., Dianna Teague is to present a classical guitar solo, "Le Petite Moulin" by the French composer, Camille Saint Saens.

STUDENTS IN RECITAL — Pictured are two of Bill Haley's students who are to be presented in recital Saturday at the First Baptist Church. At right is Laura Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Williams, who will play "Minuet in G Major" by Bach. Left is Brett Greenhouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dane Greenhouse who is to play an arrangement of "Hard Habit to Break," and "The Heat is On" for piano.

Television may be fattening for kids

BOSTON (AP) — A doctor has some advice for parents of chubby children: Turn off the television set.

His research shows that heavy doses of TV make children fat. Youngsters who spend a lot of time in front of the television in their pre-teen years often turn out to be obese adolescents.

"If there is a problem of obesity in the family or if their child is becoming overweight, they should consider reducing the amount of television time as a way of treating that problem," said Dr. William H. Dietz Jr. of New England Medical Center.

He suspects that devoted TV viewers are fatter than other youngsters because they eat more and exercise less.

Deitz's study, conducted with Dr. Steven L. Gortmaker of Harvard School of Public Health, was published in the May issue of the journal, Pediatrics.

"What was striking to us was that compared to many of the variables that have been associated with obesity in the past — such as social class, family structure and birth order — television was just about the best predictor of obesity," Gortmaker said.

The research showed that normal-size youngsters who watched a lot of television in their pre-teen years were more likely than moderate viewers to be overweight by the time they became teen-agers.

Among these adolescents, the incidence of obesity increased by about 2 percent for each additional hour that they averaged in front of the television each day.

A maverick among insurers

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Disagreeing with its industry colleagues, officials of John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. would, with some reservations, gladly accept unisex pricing of insurance policies.

Its position is unique among large insurers, and perhaps its rationale is too, since it believes there are sound, logical reasons for price differentials between male and female.

Why, therefore, its support of unisex insurance?

Because it — and, in fact, the entire insurance industry — views itself as involved in its own fight for equality. And, as John Hancock sees it, when you're in a fight you need friends — in Congress and elsewhere.

First, the gender issue. Most people in the insurance industry grew up to believe there was nothing wrong in differentiating by sex, says E. James Morton, president and chief operations officer of the big Boston insurer.

Moreover, he adds, making that distinction is neither immoral nor illegal. It is, in fact, sensible, he says, because there are significant differences in life experience and longevity between male and female.

But, says Morton, the issue has grown beyond the merely technical and is now a social and political matter. "We believe unisex legislation is inevitable," he says.

He also disagrees with the belief that insurers would be hurt by such a move, contending that "I don't understand how anyone could be hurt if everyone plays under the same rules."

However, he would ask for limitations.

He would not support any unisex legislation that would be retroactive or extraterritorial — the latter referring to a state compelling a company based therein to adhere to that state's policies when doing business elsewhere.

And he sees a potential danger in unisex attitudes being used to challenge other insurance distinctions, such as for age. In term insurance policies, for example, the price of coverage rises — logically, say actuaries — with age.

Otherwise, Morton and John Hancock are willing to concede on unisex because, Morton says, "unisex is a diversion of our political energies to an issue that, if handled properly, is not of concern to the industry."

What is of concern, he adds, are the issues of taxes and deregulation.

By maintaining "shortsighted" policies, and because of unfair regulatory policies, says Morton, life insurers are in serious danger of being excluded from the emerging financial services industry.

Existing regulatory policies, he explains, restrict life insurers from entering banking, residential real estate brokerage and other services.

And, he contends, "We continue to be restricted even as regulatory doors are being opened to banks and many other financial service providers."

Besides being patently unfair, he had said earlier in an address to the Society of American Business and Economic Writers, "that is clearly bad public policy."

He then told the writers of his inability to fathom the thinking of colleagues in other companies, many of whom direct their efforts to keeping banks and other financial institutions out of life insurance.

Life insurers, he said, "have done almost nothing to make their case to the people who hold our fate in their hands — Congress and the Federal regulatory agencies."

They cannot, he said, stop diversification. "The erosion and eventual elimination of barriers to financial services integration are inevitable," he said again.

Everyone, he observed, has heard of the diversification of Citicorp, Merrill Lynch, American Express and Sears Roebuck. And such diversification, he indicated, has helped many consumers.

Dutch family moves dairy to Texas

By ANNE SIGMAN
The Paris News

BIARDSTOWN, Texas (AP) — Two years ago, Jannes Stoker traded his dairy farm in the Netherlands for a chance to own a bigger dairy in a better climate.

He bought land near Biardstown and flew his family to Texas in April 1983. Jannes, 54, brought his wife, Henny, 52; their sons Ruurd, 12, Martin, 15 and Roel, 21; and Roel's wife Deanna, 21.

They built their new dairy from scratch. When they arrived, "only the shed was here," Roel said. Now a visitor to the Stoker Dairy can't miss it.

It looks like any Texas dairy except for the wooden shoes parked by the back door. Henny and Deanna find they work just fine in Texas mud.

They didn't bring many things, other than photos and other personal items, from the Netherlands. The one bucket they brought from their Dutch farm somehow got run over, Roel explained with a wry laugh.

Above the door to the milking barn, Roel painted a Dutch flag and the flag of their northern Dutch province, Friesland. Its emblem, Pompebleden or water lilies, recalls the cool, damp climate they left behind.

Jannes and Henny also left a son, a daughter and grandchildren in the Netherlands; another son lives in Australia. In the Stokers' new home, photos of family and their old farm remind them of the Netherlands, but on one acts homesick. "It takes only 10 hours to fly there," Roel said.

Jannes has been a dairy farmer for 30 years, and his father was a dairy farmer. Four of Jannes' five sons want to be dairy farmers. They needed more land to carry on the family tradition.

"You can't hardly fit four on the one farm in the Netherlands," Roel explained, and it is hard to lease more land in the small country. After they sold the farm, one son stayed to work on another dairy farm in the Netherlands and the other three sons came to Texas with their father.

Jannes and Henny couldn't speak a word of English when they arrived, but their sons had learned English in school. Deanna had lived in New York until she was 12. Jannes learned his English from carpenter Nate Stutzman. A neighbor recommended him, and it turned out he knew some Pennsylvania Dutch.

Stutzman and the Stokers started on the milking barn in May 1983 and finished in two months. They all worked on the building, even the youngest son.

Then they built other farm buildings and bought cattle; now they have 148 Holstein-Friesians.

(Friesian cows are named after Friesland, their home province.)

Originally, cows were sent from the Netherlands to the United States. But these days cows are sent from the United States to the Netherlands, the Stokers said.

Their new cows produce more milk, and milder winters make dairy farming easier. At the same time they've had to cope with more difficult changes, such as the first poisonous snakes they'd ever seen, and hot summers.

They have to slow down in the heat. "They told us it would be hot," Roel said. "Still, we didn't expect it to be that hot."

They chose Texas rather than dairy country in Vermont or Wisconsin because of the milder winters. In the Netherlands, "We had lots of rain, it was cold," Jannes said. "And it was so windy," Henny added.

Dairy farming is harder because of the harsh winters, Roel said. In Texas, farmers can plant wheat or rye for winter pasture. In the Netherlands, nothing grows during the winter.

The cows stay inside more, in free stalls, and farmers have to make lots of silage. There aren't enough dry days to make much hay.

A special bird, which they call a Kiviet, lays eggs in their pastures and every year people hunt for the eggs. "It's like a sport," Roel explained.

"The birds are smart, they walk 30 feet from their nest and then fly."

The search is prohibited in some places, but where it's allowed, the first person who finds eggs gets in the newspaper.

The family has found many differences between their homeland and Texas. In the Netherlands they met people on the street because everyone walks or rides a bicycle, Roel said. Jannes said when he drives to town he doesn't see anybody walking or cycling.

They were surprised at the number of churches. The family thinks the Methodist Church is similar to the one they attended in the Netherlands, and they said church members have made them feel at home.

Jannes doesn't know how long the family will stay in Texas. They are Dutch citizens and must check in yearly with immigration.

Racist harassment charged

AUSTIN (AP) — A black University of Texas student leader who was assaulted by two men on a street near the campus says the attack is part of a pattern of racist harassment and threats against him.

Randy Bowman, president of the Black Student Alliance, said the threats began in late October when he and other students were trying to persuade the university to end investments in companies doing business in South Africa.

The incidents included threatening letters, telephone calls and two burglaries in which his apartment was vandalized, Bowman said.

"I am at a loss about who it might be, but they appear to have a set plan, and they intend to abide by it," said Bowman, 21, a senior from Dallas.

"No one knows who these people are. It may be a white supremacist organization. But it's someone with good information-gathering ability, and with a lot of time and energy to spend. Everyone is convinced it's more than a student prank," he said.

The assault occurred about 9:30 p.m. May 1, as Bowman was walking to a friend's house near campus.

Bowman said two men jumped from the bushes along the street. One hit him on the forehead with a large beer bottle. The other hit him on the side of the head with a metal pipe, he said.

Bowman said he was knocked out in the attack. He said he could only tell police that the two men were white.

David Woodruff, editor of the student newspaper Daily Texan, said that just before the assault, "a gravelly voiced man" called the paper and predicted the attack.

Woodruff said the caller told him, "I'm going to tear the heart out of the Black Student Alliance. I'm going to tear the heart out of Randy Bowman. You've been writing about Bowman on every other page of your newspaper. Now you're going to be writing about him on the obituary page."

Ronald Brown, vice president for student affairs at UT, said a call threatening Bowman was made to his office last fall. He said information about the call was given to university police. UT police refused to discuss any investigation related to the threats.

Leisure under sun said causing epidemic of skin cancer

EDITOR'S NOTE — The conventioners in Ballroom D were in overwhelming agreement: An estimated 500,000 Americans will develop skin cancer this year and the culprit is the sun. But mankind has always lived in the sun. Why, now, an epidemic? Blame leisure, they say. Blame the jet. Islands in the sun are only hours away. Blame the migration to the Sun Belt. Blame the bikini.

By SID MOODY.
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When not tending the store, Americans attend conventions.

This is a nation of name tags: "Hi! I'm..."
It is Wednesday on the convention floor of a large commercial hotel in Manhattan. It is booked solid.

In Ballroom D, a surprisingly flawless slide projector flips on a stomach-churning closeup of a victim of this nation's No. 1 cancer, that of the skin. This is the Second World Conference on Cancers of the Skin, sponsored by the Skin Cancer Foundation. Yet another convention.

Superficially, Ballroom D looks like any other convention. A folding table by the door where you register, pick up a free SCF tote bag packed with handouts, swap horror stories about making connections at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport, then take a seat inside. Inside is quintessential convention: cut glass chandeliers, ruby velvet walls, podium with hotel name inescapably prominent to trap photographers. In time, as at any convention, Ballroom D will see egos cosseted, old boy networks renewed, conventional wisdom proclaimed, flesh pressed, drinks drunk.

For three days, however, Ballroom D will also be a focus of research where all the bush telegraphs of the skin cancer world will be wired into one place, where many voices will talk shop.

There will be talk of dendritic interleukins and epidermal thermocytes. And references to the wisdom of the Talmud and the irony of Luigi Pirandello, the Italian playwright. Old ideas will be buried, new ones born. Blind alleys closed off, new pathways opened. Far from the isolation of their labs, free from the gridlock of the scientific explosion where it can take two years to get an article published in the prestigious New England Journal of Medicine, the researchers will do what the technical world sorely needs but rarely allows, do what conventions uniquely allow: communicate. At breakfast, in panel discussions, during breaks, after hours.

Shop talk.
The 200-plus doctors and researchers in Ballroom D are dermatologists, photobiologists, pathologists, surgeons plastic and otherwise. They believe they are dealing with an epidemic.

This year an estimated 500,000 Americans will develop skin cancer. It will kill 5,000, disfigure many more. Twenty-two thousand will develop skin cancer's deadly cousin, melanoma, which kills far more people than AIDS. Melanoma has increased 900 per cent in the last 50 years in the United States. At its present rate one American in 100 will get it by the year 2000. In Australia 60 per cent of the population will have skin cancer by the time they are 60.

The cause of this, by overwhelming agreement in Ballroom D, is that giver of all life, the sun. But mankind has always lived in the sun. Why, now, an epidemic? That is why there is a convention in Ballroom D.

On Wednesday there is a preliminary session for the media.

There is rarely a convention that doesn't want to tell the world about itself. And one of the foundation's major goals is educating a sun-worshipping public. Blame leisure, says the speaker. Saturday has become a second day of rest, doubling time at the beach. Blame the jet. Islands in the sun are only hours away. Blame the migration to the aptly named Sun Belt. Blame a whole vacation industry selling beautiful tans. Blame the bikini. Less is more. It is, say the doctors. More cancer.

"That's my secretary," says Dr. Thomas Fitzpatrick of Harvard, showing a slide of a lady's buttock badly burned in a sun test. "I didn't take the picture."

The reporters laugh. Dr. Perry Robbins, president of SCF, hopes they will go back to their offices and put in a bad word for the sun.

Shop talk for the professionals begins the next day. The sun is again under attack.

"I have the pleasure this morning of compressing seven years' work into 15 minutes," begins Dr. Paul Bergstresser of the University of Texas. "Embarassingly enough, it can be done."

His experiments radiating mice with ultraviolet light, a component of sunlight, indicate a lowering of their immune system's ability to fight tumors. A researcher from Australia gives supporting weight that sun exposure somehow affects immunology. Patients who have had kidney transplants take drugs to suppress the body's immune system and frustrate its rejection of the new organ. They also have a higher rate of skin cancer.

Another panelist, Dr. Daniel Sauder, a Dustin Hoffman look-alike from Canada, fields a question from the floor. He says later: "That question gave me an idea to research. Why do I come to these meetings? You just saw why."

Shop talk.

Conventions are also places where axes come to be ground if not buried genteely in the backs of opponents. During a break, Dr. Frederick Urbach, a 63-year-old photobiologist from Temple University, is vigorously unloading the wisdom of his years on a young Turk from the Environmental Protection Agency. EPA's man has impressive charts of extrapolated melanoma rates for the whole world. In a torrent of cigarette smoke and heavy middle European accents, Urbach dismisses the statistics as meaningless.

"You need facts, not extrapolations," he insists, "and no one knows the worldwide rates of melanoma." EPA retreats to find a more yielding audience.

Urbach's hallway seminar attracts another listener. "Skin cancer is caused by the sun. Ergo propter hoc melanoma is caused by the sun. But it's different. We don't know why. In Israel the natives have more melanoma than the immigrants. In Hawaii it's the other way around. Why? In Finland they did a very nice study. ("Very nice" is a superlative among scientists, the equivalent of "Wow!" among teeny boppers). Farmers, fishermen, people out in the sun all day, get skin cancer but not melanoma. City people, who only go out weekends, they get the melanoma. Why?"

The hallway has no answer. Class dismissed.

There are in medical research, as there are in hairdos and tail fins, fashions that come and go. As the sessions in Ballroom D proceed, a new "fashion" emerges: dysplastic nevi, moles of a particular sort that are increasingly and recently thought to be precursors of skin cancer and melanoma.

"Two years ago at the last (and first) skin cancer conference they were hardly mentioned at all," notes Dr. Darrell Rigel, a skin cancer specialist at New York University. Speaker after speaker cite them in reports of their research. They are this year's hot item in Ballroom D.

"In six months that all may change," cautions Urbach. His six months measure how rapidly modern science proceeds. They also suggest why convention shop talk can be a seed bed compared to the stately and lengthy process of publication in journals, sometimes more of a coronation than a conception.

There is another side, however. A convention is people, and where there are people, there are egos. And where they are egos, there is politics.

At one session, Dr. Alfred Kopf of NYU, chairman of the program in Ballroom D, is asked if a study he did with some other leading specialists is still valid. Kopf gives a long, hedging reply. Ultimately, he says the data didn't hold up worldwide. This leaves Bernie Ackerman fuming.

Every serious convention should have at least one Bernard Ackerman. "Maybe no more than one," laughs Dr. John Conley, a distinguished-looking older surgeon from New York, as he buys Ackerman lunch.

Ackerman, 48, is a pathologist at NYU, a staunch and outspoken defender of the tweed double-breasted suit and a staunch and outspoken attacker of conventional wisdom, inexact terminology — he calls them "Gaza Strip words, those whose meaning is contested and ambiguous" — and convention politics. A colleague says he is a genius.

Ackerman is upset with Kopf because he took five minutes to answer a question "that should have been answered yes or no. Kopf didn't want to offend people who had done the original study. But this is no presidential debate. We're not trying to snow the audience. There really is no straight go at things at conventions like this. You get one point of view, that of the people who organize it. They get big names, holy cows, for window dressing to attract attendance."

Blitzing through a bowl of gazpacho, Ackerman brandishes his spoon at the egos at medical conventions. "Ego won't let you say you were wrong. Of course we doctors have the same foibles as other people. But we, as doctors, have to say that when we missed something, we missed it. Ptolmey was wrong about the universe for centuries until Copernicus proved him wrong. But people kept on defending Ptolmey. I'm not sympathetic with the political games of these conventions."

Given his druthers, Bernie Ackerman would turn Ballroom D into a School of Athens: skin cancer specialists Socratically challenging assumptions, questioning, questioning, questioning. "If my students think the same way I do in 10 years, I'll be disappointed," he says.

His experience, he says, tends to discount the role of dysplastic nevi in melanoma. It is an implied challenge to the researchers to prove him wrong.

A doctor at NYU reports on early results of a possible vaccine against melanoma. (Too soon to say). A researcher from Duke University gives the results of years of inoculating melanoma sufferers with their own tumors to build resistance. (Some encouragement here). Dr. Henry Lynch of Creighton University in Omaha urges the audience to remember basic genetics when treating melanoma. His research tells him the disease follows family blood lines.

Ballroom D is also a teaching seminar for practicing physicians, how to recognize the enemy and how best to treat it. How to counsel patients. Panelists discuss the hazards of tanning parlors. Dr. Peter Hersey from Australia says studies there indicate "a cause for worry, but it's too early yet to condemn them." Bergstresser, on the other hand, declares: "Ultraviolet B lamps in solarium cause skin cancer, period. It's up to them (the owners) to prove otherwise."

Far from the ivory tower the doctors discuss the mundane world of skin lotions, several manufacturers of which have displays in the coffee break room adjacent to Ballroom D. Conventions are also for selling.

"One sunscreen whose name I forget produced more tumors in mice than in the irradiated control group which got no sunscreen," Hersey says.

Again and again the doctors are told to warn their patients that too much sun is a dangerous thing. Dr. Rex Amonette of the University of Tennessee shows some particularly stark slides of what the sun can do to human skin. They are enough to make a layman hide in the basement from sunup to sundown and grow mushrooms.

Little fragments accumulate within and without Ballroom D. During a coffee break among the sunscreen displays — the foundation says some of them work — Rigel cites a study from Queensland, Australia. Young women who wear bikinis have four times the chances of getting skin cancer. For nude sunbathers the risk is 50 fold. Later Kopf reports women over 40 have less skin cancer than their younger sisters. The inference: they wear one-piece bathing suits.

There are geography lessons to be filed away in the memory.

Urbach notes that County Galway in Ireland has one of the highest skin cancer rates in the world. Genetically Celts are fair haired, fair skinned and have difficulty tanning. Rigel reports that skin cancers are showing up at disproportionate rates in World War II veterans who served in the South Pacific.

This comes as no surprise in Ballroom D. Conventional wisdom postulates the lower the latitude on Earth, the higher the incidence of skin cancer. The sunlight is more intense. What is new in Rigel's study is the suggestion that skin cancer can lie latent for 40 years. Another item for the files. And Anglo-Saxons, particularly those who have difficulty tanning, should, unlike the old British saying, stay out of the noon sun.

Another item for the memory bank: Urbach, out in the corridor again, says blacks rarely get skin cancer, but they do get melanoma.

Clinic focuses on problems of performers

By STEPHANIE NANO
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) - A stiff shoulder, sore elbow or laryngitis, nuisances to most people, can end the career of musicians, singers or actors.

One Cleveland hospital is offering performers treatment by medical professionals who have more than a physician's sympathy for their problems. Practitioners in the Medical Center for Performing Artists at Cleveland Clinic include 25 physicians and health care professionals who have a personal interest in music or other arts.

"Almost everybody in our group has some personal interest in music - either they play an instrument or, at the very least, they are more than casually interested in music," said neurologist Richard J. Lederman, a leader in setting up the center.

Lederman plays the violin; Dr. Richard Nodar, an audiologist, sings and plays the banjo; and Dr. Howard Levine, an ear, nose and throat specialist, plays the trumpet. Such backgrounds might be helpful to this specialty but it isn't necessary, Lederman said.

He says there's nothing unusual about the aches and pains of violinists, vocalists or other performers, but that interest in them as occupational disorders has recently surfaced.

Nodules on the vocal cords of singers may be caused by overuse. Hearing losses can be devastating to a performer. Pianists tend to have more problems with their right hand, which carries the melody. Violinists develop hand and arm problems because of the way they hold their instruments.

The publicized medical problems of American pianists Leon Fleisher and Gary Graffman stirred new interest in the field, Lederman said.

"(They) were stricken by right-hand disorders more or less at the same time, in both cases, ending their performing careers - at least their two-handed careers," he said.

At one point, two separate groups at the clinic worked independently on medical problems of performers. Their merger led to creation of the center.

"One of the reasons for getting together was that when we tried to find out something about this area ... we would come up with a blank," said Lederman. "There's almost nothing available (in medical literature)."

Levine encountered such a void while treating a 16-year-old trumpet player. When the youth played, his neck would greatly expand.

"I went off to the medical literature and couldn't find anything like this," said Levine, who deals primarily with wind instrument players and vocalists. "As physicians, we know almost nothing about music problems."

Lederman said about 60 percent of the Cleveland area musicians who responded to a survey indicated they had had medical problems which interfered with their practice or performance. Some 20-30 percent said they had lost performance time because of occupation-related problems.

Levine said opera singers were more willing than other vocalists to seek medical treatment. Formation of nodules on the vocal cords of a singer or actor is a common result of overuse, he said.

"Opera singers seem to be the most sensitive and knowledgeable and will come to a physician early," Levine said.

Hearing losses can be as devastating to performers as an injury, Nodar said, and musicians not only have to hear sound but distinguish tone. That's why it's important to guard against exposure to loud noises.

"I speak the language," said Lederman. "If a musician tells me that he or she is having problems with arpeggios or playing the octaves ... or it's up near the frog (on a violin) that they are having problems, I don't shake my head and say 'Could you help me with that?'"

"They may be more willing to share their experiences with someone who speaks their language and, in fact, are very relieved often to know that they don't have to translate what they are saying."

The center has incorporated an existing program for dancers, and includes specialists such as ophthalmologists, dentists and physical and occupational therapists, as well as psychologists and psychiatrists.

"Musicians are the first to tell us, 'You people are missing the boat unless you look at the emotional factors because we're under great stress,'" Lederman said.

Common complaints from musicians include pain, stiffness, tightness or soreness in their hands, wrist or forearm, as well as the upper back or shoulders.

Old home recalls the Phony Express days

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Kansas City's newly restored Alexander Majors home was the centerpiece in the 1850s of an 800-acre farm surrounded by gardens, grape arbor, apple orchard and smokehouse, with a commanding view of the prairie that spread to the West.

Majors, a founder of the Pony Express, made it headquarters for his freighting business, which is regarded as having played a significant role in opening up the West.

And today, tour guide Paula Smith tells visitors of the "eight wagon trains of 25 wagons each, pulled by six teams of oxen that would arrive and depart from the house every day."

Mrs. Smith knows her history well; she is Majors' great-great-granddaughter.

Majors, who built his reputation developing freighting routes westward from the Missouri River, formed the partnership of Russell, Majors and Waddell in the 1850s. Their Central Overland California and Pikes Peak Express became the route for the famous Pony Express and later for the railroads.

Majors was also Kansas City's first millionaire, whose wealth was apparent in his vast home. Glass was transported from the East for its 43 windows, says Mrs. Smith, one of many volunteer guides. With its architectural origins in the South, the double portico antebellum home is unusual in the Kansas City area.

Now restored to its original splendor, the house is furnished with both family heirlooms and donated period pieces, such as the rosewood grand piano, a wool-looped rug, kitchen implements including an apple press and candle mold, and a now-rare "bride's basket" of cranberry glass and coin silver, a popular gift of the day. There is also Majors' dispatcher's desk in the south parlor.

"He was a deeply religious man," Mrs. Smith says of her forefather. "He gave his drivers Colt revolvers as a defense against Indians and snakes, and a Bible against moral contamination," she says as she points to a Bible still clearly embossed with "Presented by Russell, Majors and Waddell, 1859."

Nearby is a copy of Majors' "Seventy Years on the Frontier," which he wrote as an old man at the urging of Buffalo Bill, a lifelong friend and Pony Express rider. On the wall is a map showing the stations of those daring and adventurous rides across the West.

Up the staircase, which Mrs. Smith says is steep and narrow to make walking upstairs in long dresses possible, is the "keeping room," a kind of family room of 100 years ago where children could play. The bedrooms have large clothing closets, an unusual feature for the time.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

"Teach me thy way, O LORD, and LEAD ME IN A PLAIN PATH..."

How beautiful are the paths and wagon trails. The gate is open and the pathway clearly marked. Many such trails are rapidly becoming memories as super highways take their place. It is good to know that God's way is still the same and will never change... for "God's word will endure forever." His love is clearly defined and his ways are well marked. Depend on the Lord to direct you each day. Attend church each Sunday and worship the Lord in his holy temple.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

"Hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footsteps slip not."

BILLY G. ROY

JANICE F. ROY

Married couple to get master's degrees in divinity

FORT WORTH - A Pampa resident and his wife will both receive master of divinity degrees from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth in commencement exercises today.

Billy G. and Janice F. Roy are among 468 spring graduates of the world's largest theological school receiving degrees from President Russell H. Dilday.

Roy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommie Roy of Pampa. Mrs. Roy is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Brendinger of Cassville, Mo.

Southwestern is one of six seminaries supported by the Southern Baptist Convention. Now in its 78th year, Southwestern trains men and women for Christian ministry in schools of theology, religious education and church music.

Local church plans concert

Foursquare Gospel Church, 712 Lefors, will present the contemporary gospel sounds of United Flight live in concert at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Coming from the Oregon area, United Flight features Rick Ellis, his wife and their daughters. Their sound features guitars and drums in their presentation of the ministry in song.

Pastor Ron Branscum said the group shares "the uncompromised Word of God, sharing the love, power and deliverance of the Spirit of God."

United Flight "is as fine a contemporary gospel group as there is around today," Rev. Branscum said.

Foursquare Gospel Church is a family worship center with youth and children's activities included. A nursery is also provided.

For more information, call 669-2203.

Religion Roundup

NEW YORK (AP) - The "dhimmi" - the Christians and Jews living under Islamic law - are regarded as having only "conditional rights" that can be revoked, says an Egyptian-born woman Jewish scholar.

In a book newly exploring that field, "The Dhimmi - Jews and Christians Under Islam," published by Farleigh Dickenson University Press, Bat Ye'or says they are classified in Islamic law as "protected people."

But that status often becomes "the formal expression of legalized persecution" since their rights are considered a conditional grant that can be abolished when regarded as "in the interest of Islam."

Consequently, the "dhimmi" have borne the role of "victim... despised and persecuted over the centuries," she told a consultation sponsored by the American Jewish Committee and the Associated University Presses.

French Protestant scholar Jacques Ellul says that because of the condition of non-Muslims under Islamic law, the Middle East conflict can't be solved by creating a federation of Israel with Moslem states. He writes in a foreword that such a state is a "fantasy and an illusion" since Islamic law demands putting non-Muslims in a subordinate status.

Gospel artist to present concert here

Ken Medema, well-known singer, composer and pianist, will be at Pampa's First United Methodist Church, Foster and Ballard, today through Sunday.

The weekend's activities featuring the unsighted artist will culminate in an area-wide concert Sunday evening at 6:30 p.m.

The public is invited to attend the admission-free concert.

Medema, who has been writing and singing his own songs since 1970, will be meeting with youth groups and church choirs today and Saturday.

Today at 7:30 p.m. he will perform in a private home for the high school Fellowship of Christian Musicians.

Saturday he will be conducting workshops with the choirs of the church. At 10 a.m. he will meet with the children's choirs. He will then meet with the youth choir at 11 a.m.; after that workshop, the youths will take him to lunch.

Medema then will conduct a workshop with the adult choir at 1:30 p.m. He will perform at the adult choir banquet at 6:30 p.m. He will present a concert Sunday morning during the regular 10:30 a.m. worship service.

Ken McDonald, minister of music, said, "We hope people will come to see him (Sunday evening). He is really a special guy."

Medema began composing his own material in 1970 for his work as a music therapist in a psychiatric hospital. He soon found himself writing music reflective of his experience as a Christian and of his understanding of the nature of Christian commitment.

He is now involved in a fulltime singing endeavor, with his performances having taken him across the North American continent, Europe, Africa and Australia.

A native of Grand Rapids, Mich., and the son of Christian parents, Medema studied music at Michigan State University, where he met his wife Jane.

"It was because of her Christian life that I was able to bring a lot of things together — my early training, my desire for freedom, my insistence on asking questions — and to realize that all of that could be a part of being a Christian," Medema has stated. "She pointed the way for me, and I followed."

The two were married after Medema's graduation and have managed the difficult task of wedding their work as well as the rest of their lives.

His wife possesses a master's degree in music education, has taught public school music and has worked as a music therapist and a director of activity therapy training programs. She also has done theological study at Union Seminary in New York.

In the present team effort she is the resource person who does the major share of the Biblical and theological study which forms the basis of Medema's music.

Medema's undergraduate and graduate university study was in the field of music therapy, although he concentrated heavily on performance skills in piano and voice.

"It's astounding how much the work of Providence is perceived by hindsight," he says.

Over the years Medema has recorded a number of albums, including "Sonshiny Day," "People of the Son," "Story Tellin' Man," "Just Us Kids," "Through the Eyes of Love," "Looking Back," "Sunday Afternoon Stories" and "Kingdom in the Streets."

A number of his works are also available in printed music, including song books, choral hymn settings, choral music, scripture stories for choir and integrated worship services.

For more information, call McDonald at 669-7411.

PEGGY AND DAVE DISNEY

Baptist church plans revival

Dave and Peggy Disney, who have served as missionaries in Chile, will be leading revival services Sunday through Friday, May 12-17, at the Fellowship Baptist Church, 622 E. Francis.

The revival will feature Bible preaching, special singing and congregational singing, according to Pastor E.D. Maddux.

The special services will begin at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, with nightly services through Friday also at 7:30 p.m. Morning classes will be held daily from 10 to 11 a.m.

A nursery will be provided. Pastor Maddux invited the public to attend the revival series.

Religion in the news

PETERBOROUGH, England (AP) — With the permission of retired Anglican Bishop Douglas Feaver, once described as the rudest man in the Church of England, a booklet has been published about his rapier wit, including these thrusts:

Of a fellow bishop — "He'd believe anything provided it's not in Holy Scripture."

To a woman about her husband — "Where did you find him — in a blackout?"

On being asked if there was anything he still would like to do — "To bury a few I haven't managed yet."

The booklet of the bishop's "purple prose" was collected by John Kelly, the diocesan communications officer, with sales to benefit the church's Children Society.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Physician Richard Goodgame, a medical missionary to Uganda, told a conference of Christian college students that American Christians "don't know what to be afraid of." He said they fear guns, foreign opponents and governmental confusion but "the things that can kill your spiritual life are apathy, greed, selfishness and security."

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The ecumenical movement is coming out of a "period of gloom and total pessimism," and getting back some confidence, says the Rev. Paul A. Crow jr., ecumenical officer of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede oso!

May 11, 1985

An ambitious objective that you have been secretly harboring has an excellent chance of being realized in the year ahead. Don't give up your dreams under any condition.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today your pride and ego may be extremely vulnerable. Make it a point not to take yourself too seriously. Are you going with the right person who can make you happy? The Matchmaker wheel can help you answer the question. Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There's a chance that the frustrations you encounter today will be of your own making. Think your moves through so that you aren't painted into a corner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An influential contact who is usually rather helpful will resent being imposed upon today. Try not to burden others with your demands.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Strive to be flexible when dealing with others today. If you take an unyielding position, you may cross swords with someone more stubborn than yourself.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Guard against tendencies today to make undesirable tasks even more unpleasant than they need be. There's no reason to punish yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Usually you're not a demanding or possessive person, but today you might step out of character and create incidents that can be avoided.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If there are domestic rumbles at home today, do not involve outsiders. You could put a pal in an embarrassing position where he has to take sides.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extremely tactful when dealing with co-workers today. If you come on as too strong or bossy, it may provoke something unpleasant.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Usually you're very adept at getting proper mileage out of the dollars you spend, but today could be an exception where you deflate your own purchasing power.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Matters that you and your mate disagree on should not be aired in the presence of others today. Each could look bad by saying things he shouldn't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A positive attitude is imperative today. If your outlook is negative, it will lead you to take a course of action that will produce undesirable results.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is one of those days where friends could make unreasonable demands on you. Be careful that you don't impulsively get yourself into something expensive.

Names in News

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Filmmaker Mervyn LeRoy, whose nearly 80 films include "The Wizard of Oz," was hospitalized briefly after becoming ill at a reception for the wife of Vice President George Bush.

LeRoy, 84, appeared to be having difficulty breathing Thursday while waiting to greet Barbara Bush at the Century Plaza Hotel, where she received the 21st annual Woman of the World Award from Childhelp USA, a non-profit group working against child abuse.

He taken to the Beverly Hills Medical Center for examination, then released in good health an hour later, said Dr. Stephen C. Acosta, the emergency room physician.

LeRoy, whose screen credits also include "Little Caesar," "Little Women," "The Bad Seed" and "The Green Berets," was awarded a special Academy Award in 1945 for his contribution to the film industry.

especially one who enjoyed a dip of snuff while spinning yarns.

"When she was in good form (she) could drop a lightning bug at six yards," said Haley, 64, who was honored Thursday by the state Legislature with a resolution to convert his family home in rural Henning into a museum.

The author of "Roots" said his great-aunts enjoyed a dip of snuff during storytelling time on the porch of the home, which he has agreed to sell to the state for $1.

The House Finance Committee on Thursday approved a $182,250 appropriation for the conversion.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Actor Jack Nicholson was set to begin shooting of a film sequel to "Chinatown," in which he played the Los Angeles private eye Jake Gittes, when Paramount Pictures pulled the plug on the production.

The company had already spent $1.5 million in preproduction costs on the film, "Two Jakes," starring Nicholson, 48, and with a screenplay by Robert Towne, who won an Academy Award for his script for "Chinatown."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)— Pulitzer Prize-winning author Alex Haley said he learned a thing or two about storytelling from his great-aunts.

JERUSALEM (AP)—The works of exiled Czechoslovakian novelist Milan Kundera have "given expression to the struggle of the individual for his freedom," said a panel that selected him for the Jerusalem Prize for the Freedom of Man in Israel's annual book fair.

Mayor Teddy Kolek on Wednesday presented the prize, worth $5,000, to Kundera, whose books were banned in his homeland.

Mexican-Americans attack pesticide bill

AUSTIN (AP)— A plan to turn over pesticide regulation to a three-member committee is being opposed by Mexican-American lawmakers who said it would water down safety rules already in place.

Members of the Mexican-American Legislative Caucus said Thursday they will fight the bill by Rep. Robert Saunders, D-Columbus, chairman of the House Agriculture and Livestock Committee.

Saunders' proposal is unnecessary and a political attack on Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, who was the first state official willing to confront problems of agricultural chemical hazards, caucus members said.

"It's a ridiculous bill," said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen. "It's clear to me it's just a way of trying to attack Hightower and humiliate Hightower."

Earlier this year, the Texas Department of Agriculture under Hightower's direction imposed safety regulations governing use of farm pesticides. The rules require posting of treated fields and re-entry periods before farm workers can return to fields that have been sprayed.

Some groups, primarily the Texas Farm Bureau and the chemical industry, have opposed the rules as an unnecessary expense for farmers.

The Senate in March approved a compromise bill to make some changes on notification rules but keep most of the health and safety regulations. Farm and chemical interests agreed to the compromise, lawmakers said.

But on Wednesday, Saunders' committee voted 8-1 for the chairman's plan to take pesticide regulation authority away from the agriculture commissioner.

Instead, Saunders proposes giving power to a three-member committee made up of the agriculture commissioner, the state health commissioner and the head of the agricultural extension service. The health commissioner is an appointed post and the extension director is a state employee.

Two men questioned in slaying

AUSTIN (AP)— Austin police questioned two men today in connection with the slaying of an Asian man and the wounding of three others.

The men were taken into custody late Thursday at the apartment complex where the shooting took place Wednesday, Charles Peters, a police spokesman said.

Questioning of the men posed problems for Austin officers, Peters said.

"We have a little bit of a communications barrier. They don't speak English. We don't speak Vietnamese," he said.

Investigators would continue questioning the suspects to determine if they were those wanted, he added. If they were found to be the suspects, they would be held without bond, he said.

Warrants charged capital murder naming Canh Nguyen, also known as Johnny Nguyen, no age available, and a man going by the alias Hoang Doai, 23, whose real first name was Tuan but whose last name was unknown were issued by Municipal Court Judge Wilfred Aguilar.

The judge said the third warrant was for a man in his early 20s whose identity was unknown.

A squabble about unpaid rent probably triggered the slayings, police say, one Vietnamese man and injuries to three others, police say.

"It looks as if the suspects had lived there with the victims but were thrown out for not paying their share of the rent," said homicide Lt. Jim Baker.

The victims included six people who were in the North Austin apartment Wednesday night when a gunman forced his way into the second-story unit.

The suspects were three Oriental men who apparently fled in a car owned by one of the apartment occupants, according to police spokesman C.F. Adams. The car turned up in the apartment complex parking lot Thursday morning.

Police happened on three rifles wrapped in a bedsheet after an Oriental man drove out of the lot Thursday. The guns, believed to have been owned by the victims, were found in the spot where the car driven by the unidentified man had been parked.

Austin police identified the dead man as Ba Ngoc Bui, 29, who died at Brackenridge Hospital of gunshot wounds. He was found in the apartment with his hands taped behind him and a sock stuffed in his mouth.

The assailants were armed with guns and knives, police said.

Two other people who were in the apartment — Danh Lee, 21, and Tuan Nguyen, 20 — were listed in serious condition at the hospital.

Another victim, Tan Nguyen, 19, was treated and released.
