Taylor Predicts a Buying Movement

MYRON C. TAYLOR is chairman of the board of directors of the United States steel corporation. Now, the finance committee of the corporation has authorized an expenditure of $5,000,000 in an improvement to help the unemployment situation. Steel plants to be affected are in five states. Chmn. Taylor says a buying movement can not long be delayed; that the stoppage of production due to the depression, the consumption of supplies, the wear and tear on equipment and the ensuing natural obsolescence are creating a vacuum which in due course will have to be filled. Many new workers will be given employment in the improvement program. All along the corporation has been rotating its work among employes in order to keep the largest possible number on the payroll. A gloomy mind is a mind without vision. A jaundiced eye is an eye that can not take note of the signs of the time.

Enforcement - Not Repeal

SINCE LIQUOR OUTLAWED To The Herald:

Pledge signing is an old and honorable tradition in the right fight against liquor, and total abstinence is the only way known to escape the evils of liquor within one's own personal experience. Under the eighteenth Amendment pledge signing becomes patriotic. Liquor is an outlaw, it was made an outlaw after 140 years of effort by this Government to regulate or control the stuff without success.

No one can accuse a non-drinker of furnishing money for a contraband, trade fought over by hoodlum gun men. Remember that it takes two to make a bootlegger and the man who deals with bootleggers has no right to complain about hoodlum government.

Total abstinence is a keystone in the arch of prosperity. In the first ten years of prohibition America made the most remarkable progress of modern times. There was a large increase in the demand for legitimate commodities. Multitudes of families, instead of spending their earnings for liquor, bought better clothes, food, furniture, houses, radios and automobiles. As men became freer from alcohol they became more efficient and productive wages increased nearly one-fourth. Men produced more, were worth more, received more, and they spent it for things which were beneficial to the whole family and to the community. Never in history was there such a general rise in the standard of living among the masses in so short a time.

For decades before prohibition the liquor industry was characterized by economist as a parasitic industry because it lived and thrived at the expense of legitimate industries.

Notwithstanding that the consumers of liquor paid out nearly $2,500,000,000 a year for a commodity which was not only valueless but positively injurious to them, according to the census of 1910, there were only 62,920 men employed in the manufacture of liquors of all kinds.

HOW MUCH is a dollar?

Dave Harum said, "When you get hold of ten dollars get it into your or onto you as soon as you can, for there ain't no pocket in a shroud and you're a long time dead." If you had nothing but money you would be poor indeed. It is the things for which you can exchange the money you earn that set the standards of your living comforts and conveniences.

You know this. But do you know that it is you who largely determines the value of your dollars?

Many things contribute to the distance a dollar will go, but the greatest agent in "value received" is Advertising.

The advertisements in this paper tell you about the best grades of merchandise. They tell you where they can be had and for how much.

They tell you of the new things that manufacturers are producing to make your dollars of real worth to you in greater comforts, better living, more enjoyment.

Read the advertisements. Take time to save time. Take trouble to save trouble. Read to save walking. Search the ads to save searching the stores. And to make the dollar go farther!

Leg o' Mutton Sleeves, jabots, snug bodices, all the terms of dress that were common at the tea circles of her day are now the terms of dress that are common at today's birdge clubs. Of course, the new styles have all the modernized mannerisms that today's well-dressed woman demands! See the new styles in the Big Spring stores Today!

Reaching 3091 Homes In The Heart Of West Texas

for LOVE or MONEY by CORLEY

CHAPTER XXX

Mona stared at her husband. What could she tell him? Should she say that she had thought him cruel, scheming and revengeful toward his nephew? That she had believed he had married her only to torture both Harry and herself?

She reminded herself that she gave for Harry, she was not even certain that young Harry had never loved her. The admiring glances, the suave flattery might all have been part of a game, the merest flirtation. By accepting that flirtation for more than it was worth she had lost Steve's love (if she had ever had that) as well as young Harry Townsend's.

All this did not alter the fact that she loved Harry. Now, should she decide against ending this marriage, she could bring Harry into his rightful inheritance.

"Suppose," she said quietly, "that I think this over until after the holidays. Then we can make plans—either to remain here as we have been or to start on our honeymoon."

"A Mediterranean cruise," Townsend suggested eagerly.

"Would you like that?"

"I?" he paused. "Oh I've been everywhere. Suit yourself, my dear." He added tenderly, "I hope you'll see things my way. I don't want to be a bad fellow at heart, really."

She was silent again. The hot blood between her brother and the man in the cradle. Then when she stole the woman I was to marry?

"She must have been willing," Mona pointed out, "or she wouldn't have gone. After all, this wasn't Harry's fault?"

"No, Harry can hardly be blamed for that."

There was no more said on the subject nor was it raised again during the days of preparation for the holiday festivities.

Christmas came and went quietly. Mr. Townsend had planned a dinner at Twilands with Mona presiding at the table, flushed and lovely, in gleaming white satin and sequels.

Christmas morning lay gleaming white about them. Snow had fallen and the day was a veritable "Christmas card holiday" as Mr. Faxon exclaimed. At three o'clock the car arrived for Mona who was to spend the afternoon with her family. The Morans had received an invitation to Twilands. Mrs. Faxon's new material had been ordered and the neighbors were dropping in for a bit of relaxation. Mona was a-flutter with fancy, presiding at the oven, tissue paper and holly everywhere.

Dad, comfortable and smiling, wearing a new silk robe, was seated in his armchair smoking and chatting with one of the boys who had dropped in for "a bit of a laugh and a joke."

The Donahue twins, fresh in starched rompers, were dragging new fire engines up and down the hall amid shouts of glee.

Kitty, it seemed, was entertaining. Mr. Townsend had sent theater tickets and she had departed with a crowd of friends. The telephone rang and Ma answered it. Alice's voice came over the wire.

"Tell her I'll send Jackson to bring her down," Mona ordered, tossing aside her sweet smelling fur.

"You'll not mind?" her mother asked, cautiously covering the transmitter.

"Of course not. He has to wait anyhow. I want to run over to 63rd street a little later."

Mona left shortly after Alice's arrival. A new cheap blue gown hung pathetically about what once had been the "Lotto" terms, a knockout figure. All the more pathetic, because Alice herself did not realize apparently the change that had come over her. Alice had married for love. Well she had love and with it struggle and poverty and a hopeless future. Wondering if she could ever fall into that same slavery, more or less, no matter how little money she had, Mona had taken Sunny from her sister and divorced him of his wraps.

"Oh, thanks, Ma. After said you look grand. And your hands!" She glanced at her own grubby fingers. "Their broken nails and stained palms. Mine could look nice, too, but I have so little time."

"I know," Mona said thoughtfully. "You've got to be at night and do a vast lot of things."

But it is the fact that you sent for Christmas a little thingy. Ma. Alice said.

"I don't you a proper mylar! Mona promised. They were things so much alike. Ma says.

The Callahan's were said to be admired. Mrs. Casey appeared and invited them all down for ice cream. Lily Donahue, coming to collect the twins, set a lemon tart on the table.

"Oh, what fun! It is to be said," Mona thought to herself.

"What friendliness. What neighborliness. Fancy staying in 63rd street dropping in with a pig!"

A little later Mona stopped to see Lottie who had attended a Christmas Eve celebration with the latest swim and now lay blinking and looking a trifle weary, surrounded by a mass of wild flowers.

"He sent over practically the whole shop window," Lottie explained. "Now look at them!" Rising, she began arranging her hair before the mirror.

"Hear from South America?" Lottie queried.

"No. Did you?"

"Yes. Maybe you did too. This just came an hour ago. She produced a yellow cablegram in which 'love' and 'wife' rather stiffly, a merry Christmas.

"Cunningly Lottie accompanied Mona to the 63rd street house but there was no yellow envelope on the hall table."

"That scales it!" Mona thought despairingly. She doesn't love me. He would have sent a cable, at least. He could easily enough."

Her thoughts were bitter as she prepared for the night. Harry did not love her but she loved him. And it lay in her power to arrange his future. Well, she would do it. Her husband and Harry would both be happy. Only she herself would suffer by the arrangement. Suffice it that might be too strong a word. She might learn to love her husband. She could try.

It was 11 o'clock but she could not sleep. The fire had gone out earlier while she and Lottie talked, still glowing softly and sent little tongues of blue smoke among the ceiling.

It had been a happy Christmas but now she was alone. She wondered if her husband had found and liked his gift. An Italian leather case filled with two photographs of herself. Silly to give more than she had but what was she to do for such a man? A man who had everything.

Possibly he was reading now. So late as it was, a light sleeper, he should not have. He had given her jewels, but the happiness of making her family happy. She had given him—only her portrait. Suppose she were to call him now and give him, as a Christmas gift, herself? A gift in all likelihood for his last Christmas on earth?

Her mind was made up. She would make him happy. She would call him now and tell him.

Taking the little French telephone from the night table Mona spoke the Twilands number. The telephone at Twilands rang in the hall and in the butler's pantry but at night, she knew, it was switched to her husband's bedroom.

The operator repeated the ringing. "They did not answer," she droned.

"I said 9706," Mona insisted. "Are you sure you're ringing that number?"

At that instant the ringing was cut short. "Hello," said a strange voice.

"Is this Twilands?" An ominous fear overwhelmed the girl. She scarcely knew why. The voice was not familiar.

"Yes, Madame?"

"Madame! A strange voice would never, in all likelihood, have said 'Madame' if she were speaking who had recognized her."

"I wish to speak with Mr. Townsend," she said.

"There was a silence. Mona could sense rather than hear a slight rustle, as though the telephone had changed hands. She could hear quick breathing against the transmitter.

"Is that you, John?" she asked. "Then another voice spoke quickly."

"Mrs. Townsend? This is Dr. Dunn speaking. Your husband—Mr. Garrison is on his way now to tell you."

"But my husband?" Mona gasped. "Is he ill? Wait—wait, you've cut me off. Is he ill? Answer me!"

"I received the signal to disconnect the operator's voice came in a monotone. "Shall I try them again?"

"Never mind," Mona said. She replaced the receiver. Dreading slowly, she awaited the coming of her husband's lawyer. Already she knew what he was coming to tell her.

Rev. Smith Opens Revival Meeting At 18th & Austin

Rev. Woodie W. Smith, pastor of the East Fourth Street Baptist church, opened a revival meeting Monday evening at Eighteenth and Austin streets, with a discourse in which he stressed local need of a revival and used as text, Hab. 3:2, "Oh Lord, revive thy work; in wrath remember mercy."

The sermon subject for tonight is "The Wages of Sin is Death." Services will open at 8 o'clock. The music, led by an orchestra, will be a special feature.

"More people are turning to God this year than in a decade," he declared. "Preachers are going into every nook and corner this summer holding revivals. The people are coming afoot, on horse, in wagons and automobiles and in any way they can get to meeting places. More people have been saved this year than in any since the world war. The depression will prove to be a blessing in disguise. Roger W. Babson, the famed statistician and economist, well said 'People should understand that before prosperity can return there must be a renewed interest in the spiritual life by both individuals and nations. Nations must realize that the world has always possessed raw materials and labor; but has been prosperous only when the people have been actuated by a religious faith to use these resources for advancement and service. This is the law of life."

"Men everywhere now are in turmoil. They are looking for something better and there is but one answer to this call of humanity; get back to God in a world-wide revival. Men in all walks of life seek a revival, a revival that will go deeper than commerce and industry, that will cause men to return to God or go the way of all nations of the past," he declared.

Tom Holden of Denver, who has contracted to stage the auto races during four nights of the fair, has guaranteed to enter not less than 30 first class racing cars. "Mr. Holden staged the races here July 4 and they were highly successful," Rush said.

The Wortham Shows, with 350 people, have been secured for the carnival attraction.

Another night feature will be the Black Mask Players, who will offer the best of their repertoires.

On the last day of the fair association will sponsor one of the first football games of the season, Texas Tech vs. Texas A. & M.

"The depression never has made any difference with the Tri-State fair and there is no indication it will this year," declared W. F. Lampe, president. "Exhibitors' space in Merchants' Hall and the concessions are going rapidly. All the concession men want to come because it is one of the largest to be held this year."

Premium lists now are being mailed. In each department liberal premiums and ribbons are offered to Amarillo for the Tri-State Fair.

Exhibitors of dairy cattle, swine, poultry, agriculture, horticulture and pet stock will be up to standard, Lampe predicted.

Cities throughout the Tri-State fair territory will be invited to send their musical organizations.

Judge Armstrong is a logical and forceful speaker. He has written several books upon the operations of the Federal Reserve System and the money question. He was invited to Washington to make an argument as a monetary expert in support of the Patman bill. He will point out a way by which the State can establish its own currency and credit system, and thereby restore values and prosperity.

Special Fares Are Offered To Amarillo Fair

AMARILLO—Railroad fares to Amarillo will be the lowest in the Panhandle's history during the Tri-State Fair, September 19-24, inclusive.

Not only fair officials, but the railroads anticipate record crowds.

For the first two days of the fair round-trip tickets will be sold for 60 per cent of the one way charge. Excursion rates will be in effect during the remaining four days.

In anticipation of the record crowds Tri-State fair officials have spared no expense in securing the best of varied attractions ranging from a world championship with $3,300 in prizes and night auto races to the usual carnival features.

"The Tri-State Fair Rodeo this year will be in the same class with the Cheyenne Round-up and Calgary," said J. A. Rush, secretary, who declared entries already are pouring in from all sections of the country.

—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes

They are not present in Luckies . . . the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Does not this explain the world-wide acceptance and approval of Lucky Strike?
