

Private firm to manage city water treatment

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Denying claims that the city is surrendering control of governmental functions, the Pampa City Commission approved a contract with a private business Tuesday to take over management of the water treatment and waste water treatment plants.

The commission authorized Mayor Calvin Whately to sign the contract with Operations Management International, Inc., to take over management of the plants effective May 1.

City Manager Bob Hart said the OMI service will result in savings to the city through better management, more efficiency of operations and lower electrical bills. In addition, residents may look forward to lower water rates with increased costs held down in future years.

Commission denies charges of 'surrendering control'

But Walter Shed objected to the city's contract with OMI. "It's a great injustice" to the city employees and people of Pampa, he claimed.

He said it's the first step toward private business taking over the water system in Pampa. Shed said he was against any individual or business taking over government operations. "We're giving away our government" and losing control of a governmental operation, he claimed.

"We're not giving it away," Hart replied. He said it's no different than hiring a custodial service to take care of cleaning up City Hall.

Hart said Shed's objections have "no valid point."

Other citizens at the Tuesday morning meeting also protested the contract with OMI.

Don Reed said he resented OMI control since "it takes away citizens' control" of the water system. Floye Christensen said, "Let's keep our money at home" instead of paying some out-of-town firm. Sherman Cowan, candidate for mayor in the May runoff election, said, "I can't understand why the city wants to do away with a business making a profit."

Hart said the city does not lose any control of the operations since OMI is answerable to the city for its management and operations of the plants. No capital expenditures or indebtedness can be made without city approval, he said.

"We're not giving up any control in the water system at all," Hart said.

He also said the system is not making as great a profit as Cowan had claimed. But with OMI's operations, the plants will operate at greater efficiency and achieve savings for the city, he added.

"To bypass an opportunity to save citizens money is one that shouldn't be passed up," Hart said. He said he had checked with all the other cities using OMI's service, and all had reported savings.

He said OMI will conduct an energy analysis at no cost to the city and find ways to contain the electrical costs for the operation of the water production facilities.

The OMI management also will free city management time that will be better spent on greater management resources to other operations in the city, such as parks, streets and sanitation needs, he stated.

Hart also said the contract will not create any injustices to city employees. Of 14 employees employed earlier, one has retired and the other had transferred to another city position. That left 12 employees at the two plants, Hart said.

OMI plans to use only nine of the employees. Hart said the employees were asked whether they wanted to stay with the city in other positions or transfer to OMI. No one wanted to stay with the city, Hart said, though one later stayed with the city because he was nearing retirement benefits and two others will be transferred to other positions in the city.

No city employees will suffer because of the changeover, Hart stated. Employees switching over to OMI will not lose sick leave or vacation time and pay. They will receive all the benefits OMI offers its employees, including opportunity for promotion within the firm, Hart said.

There will be increased training made available to the employees. In addition, they will receive

Barking dog case delayed

No ruling was made today on a motion to dismiss the charge against a Pampa kennel owner accused of violating a city ordinance for having barking dogs.

The case involving Suzi Reed, 1105 Juniper, who operates a kennel in her backyard, was scheduled for action in municipal court today.

But Judge Phil Vanderpool delayed consideration of the case at the agreement of all parties.

Reed was charged last month with "allowing an offensive condition to exist by allowing dogs to bark and disturb the neighborhood in violation of Ordinance No. 969 (the city's animal control laws)."

Reed's lawyer, attorney Mark Buzzard of Pampa, filed a motion to dismiss the charge last week, claiming the ordinance "is invalid for the reason that it fails to sufficiently describe an 'offensive condition'..."

The city ordinance doesn't specifically list dog barking as an offense. But city prosecutor Rick Harris has said the charge against the kennel operator falls in the category of a canine "nuisance" that created an "offensive condition."

The municipal judge said he would delay ruling on the motion in order to study briefs submitted to support each side's theory of the law. The next trial date for the case was set for May 29. Vanderpool said he hopes to rule on the defense motion before the next court date.

The motion to dismiss the precedent-setting prosecution said the ordinance also doesn't adequately describe the term "nuisance." The ordinance is "not definite enough to enable the accused to know that the act is or was a crime," Buzzard's pleading said. In its vague terms, the motion said, the ordinance would allow a conviction if just one person considered an act as "offensive."

Railroad Commission tells FERC of action

The Texas Railroad Commission has sent a letter to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission regarding the status of the RRC review of oil and gas issues in the Texas Panhandle.

Ray Grasshoff, RRC information specialist, said Walter Earl Lilley, special counsel, had sent a letter dated April 22 (Monday) to FERC providing a status report.

FERC had been scheduled in early March to consider an administrative judge's proposed decision regarding conflicts between the so-called major and independent oil and gas producers over natural gas production in the Panhandle Field.

But FERC deferred its consideration after the RRC requested the federal agency to wait for the Texas agency to make its decision. FERC granted the delay, but it asked the RRC to provide a status report within 45 days.

Grasshoff, in a telephone interview this morning, said the RRC letter had been sent to Kenneth Plumb, a FERC agency secretary.

In his letter, Lilley writes the letter is in furtherance of comments between the two agencies regarding the Panhandle oil and gas issues.

Lilley says the RRC conducted extensive arguments in the dispute between the majors and independents on April 12 in Austin and states the RRC is "diligently pursuing the case."

He states the RRC staff is making "a thorough study" of the record and testimony to reach its decision. Lilley tells FERC it will be advised of the decision as soon as it is reached.

Grasshoff said he doesn't know when the commission will make its decision. The letter to FERC is basically saying the matter is still under review, Grasshoff said.

Both agencies are considering proposed decisions on conflicts in the Panhandle Field. Both recommended decisions have gone against the independents.

The FERC ruling indicates the independents wrongfully produced from their oil wells natural gas belonging to Dorchester Corporation. The RRC ruling alleges the independents have been wrongfully counting liquified natural gas as crude oil for well classification purposes.

Judge Sarah Hughes dead

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Sarah T. Hughes, who swore in Lyndon B. Johnson as president after the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy, has died at the age of 88.

Mrs. Hughes, who had been appointed to the bench by Kennedy, died about 11 p.m. Tuesday at Presbyterian Hospital, said Lois Swan Jones, an aide to Mrs. Hughes.

Mrs. Hughes had not heard any cases for three years after suffering a massive stroke and entering a nursing home, Ms. Jones said. She was hospitalized in February, the aide said.

She swore in Johnson, a fellow

Texan, as president aboard Air Force One on Nov. 22, 1963, after Kennedy was pronounced dead from a sniper's bullet.

"I'm sure she'd like to be remembered for swearing in Lyndon Johnson, but she'd also like to be remembered for some of her good judicial decisions," Ms. Jones said.

She launched her political career with a successful bid for the statehouse in 1930 and was re-elected twice. In 1935, she became the first woman appointed a state district judge in Texas and was re-elected seven times before Kennedy named her to the federal bench in 1961.

Mrs. Hughes was a women's rights activist whose best argument was her own success at law and politics. Impudent lawyers, doubletalking witnesses and political opponents learned to fear and respect her.

She stood 5-foot-1 and weighed just over 100 pounds, but she was a stern jurist who ran a no-nonsense courtroom, often silencing men twice her size and half her age.

The late President Johnson and his wife, Lady Bird, were personal friends of hers, and when Kennedy was assassinated, Johnson called for her to give him the oath of office.

Panhandle Transit's permit to operate taxi delayed

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners Tuesday delayed granting a permit to Panhandle Transit for the operation of a taxi cab service in the city.

The commissioners noted that negotiations are underway between Panhandle Transit and Yellow Checker Cab for subcontracting of services and wanted to wait until the contract is finalized.

Panhandle Transit is operated by the Texas Panhandle Community Action Corporation to provide transportation mainly for the elderly, handicapped and indigent needing transportation to hospitals, medical centers and other locations.

Johnny Raymond, TPCAC executive director, said there is "a big need for (public) transportation in rural areas" of the Panhandle. Panhandle Transit was formed to meet that need, he said.

The system offers rides to medical centers in Amarillo and other places in addition to providing service within the city. Such service "is essential to the Panhandle" for people who need the transportation but are unable to pay for it, Raymond added.

But under the law the service must be available to the general public, Raymond said. Though designed mainly to aid the elderly, handicapped and indigent, Panhandle Transit cannot refuse its service to anyone else in the public, he noted.

Under its operations, persons wanting to use Panhandle Transit must call the cab service 24 hours in advance to arrange the transportation.

David Webster, owner of Yellow

Checker Cab, had protested to the city that the government-subsidized Panhandle Transit service was competing adversely with his privately owned cab service during the day. Panhandle Transit operates during the day, with no 24-hour service offered.

City officials discovered Panhandle Transit had not applied for a permit to operate within the city limits as required by city ordinances. They contacted the cab service and asked it to apply for the permit.

Raymond, who became executive director Feb. 4, said he had not been aware Panhandle Transit had not applied for the permit.

He said he also had not been aware of the competition with Yellow Checker Cab. Raymond said he had sent a letter to Webster, but apparently there had been "a breakdown in communications." Raymond said he had received no objections from Webster.

"We did have a breakdown in communications," Webster said. He said the letter from Raymond was negative in form and he did not answer it.

"I think Panhandle Transit is a good concept," Webster said, and he had no objections to its aims. But he said he felt restrictions should be placed on its operations so it won't be available to the general public. He said he couldn't compete as a private businessman with the government-subsidized service.

"I just ask for some protection," he said.

Webster and Panhandle Transit officials have been negotiating an

Former coach is indicted

A former Pampa High School girls coach and gym teacher who was arrested and arraigned on three counts of indecency with a child Tuesday was indicted on the three charges later in the day.

Gray County grand jurors returned the charges against former Lady Harvesters assistant coach Allison Ott, 26, 1129 N. Starkweather. It is alleged that Ott fondled a 15-year-old Pampa girl on March 1, March 17 and March 29. In her arraignment earlier Tuesday, Justice of the Peace David Potter set a $10,000 bond on each of the three charges. After the indictments were returned, 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhenny lowered the bond on each count to $5,000.

Ott was released on bond Tuesday afternoon.

The teacher had given her immediate resignation Thursday. School officials declined to discuss the reason that Ott and her roommate, former middle school girls coach and gym teacher Beverly Morlan, both quit without notice.

Ott was in her third year with the local school system; Morlan was in her second.

Also on Tuesday, the 31st District grand jurors completed work begun in a day-long session Friday. The grand jury and the local prosecutor had prepared 36 charges in the lengthy session, but just 21 cases were filed with the district clerk because the panel's foreman forgot to sign the second page of 15 of the indictments. The jury finished the formal signing and filing of the remaining indictments Friday. Those indicted and their charges and bonds include:

Alta Bien Teague, also known as Alta Faye Teague, forgery by passing on Jan. 8, $10,000.

Jim Iman, theft by check on Jan. 7, $7,500.

Cecil Ray Williams, unlawful possession of a firearm by a convicted felon on Feb. 23, $7,500. According to the indictment, Williams was convicted June 22, 1983 in 31st District Court on a charge of injury to a child. It said he was convicted in the same court on May 8, 1973 for burglary and on Oct. 9, 1970 for the same charge.

Glenn Jenkins Moore, also known as Evelyn D. Long, forgery by passing, six counts, on Feb. 22 and Feb. 24, bonds totaling $9,000.

greater technical support than the city can presently offer to keep the water treatment plant at required levels and to bring the waste water plant into compliance with state and federal standards, Hart explained.

Hart estimated the city will save approximately $104,000, exclusive of capital improvements needed at the facility, based on comparative figures from the present budget as opposed to the contractual cost.

Under the contract, the city will pay OMI a base fee of $595,680 for the duration of the initial 17-month contract. After that period, the fee will be negotiated as the contract is renewed.

The city will pay for capital expenditures and electrical costs. OMI will pay the salaries of the employees, taking the salaries off the city payroll, Hart noted.

Commissioner Joe Reed questioned the figures Hart presented. "I don't think this project is in the best interest" of the city, he said. Reed said he felt the city could hire a more competent engineer for the plant instead of relying on OMI services.

Hart related how his figures were obtained and disputed some of those Reed was using. OMI has had experience in water plant operations for a number of years and has greater access to experts in the field than the city could obtain presently, Hart said.

Reed moved the commission table consideration of the contract, but he received no second to his motion.

Commissioner David McDaniel then moved to authorize the contract, saying he had been "most impressed" with OMI's operations and expertise. Commissioner Clyde Carruth seconded the motion, and the commission approved the contract, with Reed voting against it.

In his remarks, Shed had implied Hart must be working for OMI and not for the city. That drew objections from McDaniel, who said he resented Shed's remarks against Hart. McDaniel said he had seen Hart at work and had no doubts he was working for the city and its best interests.

Mayor Whatley also spoke out against Shed's remarks, saying, "For a city our size, I think we have the best city manager." He said he appreciated Hart and his efforts.

"The city is moving in the right direction now because of him," Whatley said.

agreement for subcontracting services within the city limits. Raymond said the TPCAC had not planned to compete with private business.

Margo Stanley, head of the local TPCAC office, said there are persons meeting the criteria - based on income guidelines - who still need transportation within the city to grocery stores, doctor's offices, the hospital and other places.

"I have very positive feelings about the contract being proposed," Webster said.

Commissioner Joe Reed said, "I recognize there can be a desperate need for this service in Pampa." But he expressed concerns a joint contract might affect any future cab service that might come into the city.

Commissioner David McDaniel raised questions about Panhandle Transit's operations interfering with Webster's service. He suggested the commission delay action on the issuance of the permit until the contract has been settled.

City Attorney Don Lane noted Panhandle Transit is operating now under a temporary permit which could be extended until the matter is resolved.

In other matters, the commission appointed members to the Traffic Commission and the Parks and Recreation Board.

Named to the reorganized Traffic Commission are Lee Fraser, Floyd Sackett, Claude Wilson, Wallace Birkes, John McGuire, Doug Lockwood and Sarah Carmichael.

Appointed to the Parks and Recreation Board are Joel Darrington, Duane Harp, Gary Meador, Larry Hollis, Angela Sanford, Mae Williams and W. A. Morgan.

Commissioners approved two ordinances on first reading regarding zoning change requests. One involves a change from Agriculture to Single Family 2 District for a tract bounded by Lynn, Worrell and 18th Ave. The other is a change from Retail to Commercial District for a tract bounded by Hobart, Perryton Parkway and 23rd Ave.

The commission authorized Mayor Calvin Whatley to sign a contract with the architectural firm of Wagner and Kline, Inc., relative to architectural services for the renovation of City Hall.

Texas Ranger labels Lucas claims 'absurd'

By The Associated Press

Henry Lee Lucas' claims that he confessed to scores of murders he didn't commit, with the help of inside information fed him by law enforcement officers, is absurd, Texas Ranger Bob Prince says.

Prince, who headed a Texas Rangers' task force in the Lucas investigation, said Tuesday that to believe Lucas is to assume "a mass conspiracy... of officers throughout the United States to clear these cases. That's ridiculous."

The Ranger sergeant issued the denial from his office in Austin after Lucas held a news conference earlier Tuesday in Waco to publicly recant his confessions of hundreds of slayings across the country over a 10-year period.

"He's got everything in the world to gain by getting people to believe he didn't kill anyone," Prince said, calling Lucas' statement that he has killed only his mother, "absolutely absurd."

"Lucas has personally led officers back well in excess of 100 crime scenes. He has brought up information on crimes that they were totally unaware of because it is out of their jurisdiction," Prince said.

"Do you believe the word of a convicted murder and a habitual liar, or do you believe the word of law enforcement officers across the United States? Were they all duped?"

Lucas, 48, a one-eyed drifter from Virginia, said at his news conference Tuesday that he was able to provide inside information about many of the murders because investigators led him to the scenes of crimes, provided him information about the murders and even showed him photographs of the scenes.

Lucas was in Waco to testify before a McLennan County grand jury that is investigating the authenticity of his claims.

Lucas was brought to Waco on April 12, and has testified for more than 11 hours in front of the Waco grand jury, which also listened to the testimony of approximately six other witnesses. The grand jury recessed on April 18, but is scheduled to reconvene on May 3.

Over the objections of State Attorney General Jim Mattox, a federal judge ordered Lucas to be transferred to San Antonio, where he was to testify at 1 p.m. today before a federal grand jury that sought to determine whether questioning officers had violated Lucas' civil rights.

"We are convinced there are cases that Lucas has not committed despite his confessions," Mattox said. "We want to see if some of these cases were improperly closed and if necessary, reopen them. We have found two or three cases where officers had good suspects that were dismissed after Lucas confessed," Mattox said.

Lucas already has been convicted of 10 killings and faces death by injection in Texas. He is charged with slayings in Maryland, Florida, Louisiana, Georgia and Arkansas.

He previously claimed to have committed as many as 600 murders, but told the Dallas Times Herald earlier this month that he was guilty of only three and had confessed to the others to make fools out of police agencies.

On Tuesday, Lucas recanted further, saying the only person he ever killed was his mother — a crime for which he was convicted in Michigan in 1960. It was after his incarceration for that crime that he had claimed to have begun his cross-country killing spree.

"I've been aided by the Texas Rangers' Bob Prince. I've been aided by Clayton Smith of the Texas Rangers. I've been aided by other police departments in the investigations. By people they'd bring in with cases they wanted cleared," Lucas said at his news conference.

"They'll show you pictures of crimes. They'll give you all the information in the crime. They'll even take you back and point the crime out to you, and all you have to do is stand there and say, 'Yes, I did it.' They're just leaving murderers out there to do what they want to do," Lucas said.

Lucas said he decided "to tell the truth" because he doesn't want the real murderers to go free.

"I'm trying to do what I'm supposed to do. I know it's taken two years to do — to face reality. (I've) seen the hurt (I've) caused people by accepting these crimes. I've turned murderers out on streets, back out to hurt somebody else."

Senate tentatively approves bill to hike college tuitions

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has tentatively approved a tuition increase described by supporters as fair but by opponents as closing college doors to all but the rich.

The 18-11 vote set up possible final approval today. The measure originated in the House and would go back there for a vote on Senate amendments.

House sponsor Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, said she would recommend that her colleagues accept Senate changes and send the bill to the governor to be signed into law.

"It's not the best of all possible worlds, but I frankly feel that given the fiscal crisis, that's the best we can do," Ms. Delco told reporters.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, reminded the Senate that there has not been a tuition increase at state-supported colleges in Texas since 1957, and Texas ranks at the bottom among the states in tuition.

Jones, the bill sponsor, also noted that the bill sets aside $20 million for student tuition grants. A portion of the money could be used for emergency loans, including loans to cover the cost of tuition with repayment within 90 days.

Students could pay tuition in up to four installments a semester.

Sen. Carl Parker said the alternative to higher tuition would be reduced college funds, which could lead to lower enrollments.

"The opportunity of slipping back into mediocrity," said Jones.

Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, said the proposed increase could make colleges "bastions for the rich."

The Senate tuition bill would raise an estimated $279 million, or $79 million more than the proposal approved by the House. The money is being counted on to balance the two-year state budget pending in the Legislature.

"You can't put our budget squarely on the backs of students and their parents," complained Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin.

The Senate bill would triple tuition in September for Texans, to $12 per semester hour. A student carrying a normal course load of 15 hours would pay $180 a semester.

Out-of-state students also would pay three times as much, or $120 per semester hour.

The following year, tuition would go up to $16 per semester hour for residents but would remain at $120 for non-residents, a decrease of $60 in the second year from the House bill.

Barrientos said the higher tuition would put the dream of a college education "beyond the reach of a lot of people." Others voiced similar objections.

Tuition for resident medical and dental students would go up from $400 a year to $800 in the fall and to $1,219 the next year. Veterinary students would pay $600 and $800 respectively. Non-residents would pay four times as much.

These figures were much higher but were reduced by an amendment by Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, which was approved 20-10. Jones estimated the amendment trimmed $8 million out of the bill.

House, Senate conferees compromise on water plan

AUSTIN (AP) — House and Senate conferees have tentatively agreed to propose to voters in November constitutional amendments for water development bonds and for agricultural water conservation bonds.

House members said Tuesday they would agree to a Senate proposal for a $200 million agricultural bond program if senators would agree to leave the farm bonds out of a proposed

Holocaust survivor says talking to aunts a shock

DALLAS (AP) — For 42 years, Max Glauben thought he was the only member of his family who had survived the Jewish Holocaust.

His father, mother, brother and grandparents all perished in German concentration camps, and his father's two sisters had last been seen, he thought, as they were led to the gas chambers at a death camp.

But on Monday, his two aunts telephoned the Dallas businessman, now 55, from Philadelphia after finding his name in a computer data bank.

Glauben was overjoyed. "I started yippie-de-do-dahing it," he told The Dallas Morning News on Tuesday.

The sisters, both of Philadelphia, found his name in a computerized data bank maintained by the National Register of Jewish Holocaust Survivors. Computer terminals linked to the data bank, which has information on 55,000 people, were used this week at the American Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors in Philadelphia.

"I've been looking for him for 30 years," Hanna Steiman, the aunt who first telephoned Glauben, told the newspaper. "Right after liberation, somebody told me he may have made it alive. I look for him in Israel and in certain computers, but I couldn't find him. For years, I gave up."

When Glauben's name popped up during the Philadelphia computer search, Mrs. Steiman said she was uncertain whether it was her nephew. "But I ask him his mother's name and his father's name, and that's what it is. It's him," she said.

Glauben, owner of a garment supply business in Dallas, was 9 when Germans forced his family into the Warsaw ghetto, he said.

They were all taken four years later by boxcar to a concentration camp near Lublin, Poland. There, his mother and brother were sent to the gas chamber, he said. So, he thought, were his aunts.

Mothers get overloaded

This column is dedicated to women who work (inside or outside the home), have a husband and children, or are the head of the family themselves, and feel that they are thoroughly taken for granted.

I dedicate this column to them, because I know how they feel. But I don't doubt that some of these feelings apply to everyone else at some time or the other, as well.

I remember as I was growing up, I'd wake up every Saturday with the washing machine running, and a mother yelling at us to get out of bed, get dressed and clean our rooms up. We four kids felt like we were in trouble all day long until the chores were done and the house quieted down to some semblance of peace.

It was like Bill Cosby tells in his video tape "Bill Cosby, Himself." His wife's mouth would turn down and her eyes would squinch and her voice would reach a strident pitch. "I have had enough!" she would scream. That's pretty much what we faced... every Saturday. Boy! we would scurry, because we knew we were treading on shaky ground.

And every so often she would get us all together and tell us that she wasn't going to take it anymore, that we would all have to carry our share of the load and quit leaving it up to her, and quit making her scream like a banshee before anyone would get anything done. For two days it would work, then it would all go back like it was before.

I remember growing up that way and hating it. Why can't we have a decent, relaxed Saturday — you know, go out and have fun together instead of feeling like I was in boot camp. I'd think, I'll do it differently when I grow up, I thought. I won't let it be that way.

Yes, you guessed it. I've grown up and I do it, too. Although I do make a conscious effort not to do it all the time, sometimes it gets away with me.

I'm sorry, Mom. I know what you went through now. Being a mother and wife have a tremendous amount of responsibilities that go with it. Plus a lot of plain old work, like washing clothes, cleaning house, cooking, buying groceries, keeping up with the bills, making sure the children get to all their appointments, being a loving companion to husband, giving the family moral support when needed and so much more.

And in the end, you feel that all you are is a slave. So you complain about the work. "Help me with the laundry; help me with the housework; help me with cooking. Help me, help me, help me."

If you ask nicely, they agree with you, help one time and it all goes back the way it was. If you scream and yell, they look scared or disgusted, they may help you or they may not, and it all goes back the way it was.

So you go on strike. "Just let them live in this filth and see if they like it, then they'll see just how much I do," you think. And so they live in that filth for two weeks, are happy as larks and really could care less. Meanwhile, you are going crazy because you can't stand it!

If you don't get the laundry done, what do you hear? "Mom! I don't have any underwear." or "Honey, where's my socks?" "I don't have any pants to wear today, what am I going to do?"

If the last thing in the world you want to do is cook, everybody comes and looks at you like you're a freak and says "I'm hungry! What are you fixing to eat?"

Who sat down and decided that the mother had to do all these things? They certainly didn't ask my opinion on the matter when they did.

I wish I had a solution to this problem, some way to make families understand that mothers get overloaded. It seems like every time a mother tries to get something worked out they end up looking like the Wicked Witch of the West.

And I don't blame the rest of family for wanting to keep the status quo. Heck, who wants to ruin a good thing? You can't beat a free maid, cook, chauffer, companion, etc., all in one person.

All I know is everyone would be a lot happier if the whole family would try harder to shoulder the responsibilities of running a household instead of leaving it all to one person. What is too much for one person to do is relatively simple when divided up between everyone. Things get done more quickly and everyone has more free time.

Talking about it and committing yourselves to real action would be a good first step, I think.

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Government use of the big sell

The recent publication of the fourth annual Pentagon review of Soviet military achievements marks the growing use of public relations techniques by government.

Evidence of this trend is all around us, but the scale and subject of the Pentagon effort make it outstanding. The Pentagon is our biggest government agency and there is no subject of public debate in this country more important than the Soviet threat to our way of life.

Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger called a press conference to present the new brochure. The conference was televised around the world on a satellite network, and he answered questions from Brussels, Frankfurt and Tokyo. It was a big production.

The message of "Soviet Military Power" is a call for increased defense spending to match the Soviet buildup portrayed in words and pictures.

The case argued in the brochure is a good case, but it should not be presented, at taxpayers' expense, in a slanted fashion.

There used to be criticism of government press agents, whose job was to work for the greater glory and larger budget of the bureaucracy. It was felt that tax money should not be spent to promote government spending or controversial public policies.

The trouble with "Soviet Military Power" is that it makes no pretense of being objective or fair. It leaves out entirely all the facts and analyses which run counter to its thesis. It makes the Russians seem 10 feet tall.

That may be good public relations from the Pentagon's viewpoint, serving as a justification for a large defense budget. But unless it is balanced somehow by equal attention to other viewpoints, it's not the kind of approach that leads to intelligent policy.

The question that must be asked is how far should a government agency go in selling itself to the people who finance it.

Blame Fed, not Japanese

Americans should not be fooled by the posturing of prominent Senate Republicans trying to scapegoat the Japanese for trade deficits whose real source the senators have been unwilling to tackle.

Not one of these noisy Nippon-nippers has had the courage to challenge the policies of Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker which have deliberately driven the dollar to record high. That high dollar, not Japanese aggressiveness, is the chief cause of our trade deficit.

Worse, many of these Republicans have been most reluctant to accept President Reagan's deepest spending cuts that at least might be used to induce Volcker to abandon his roller-coaster monetarism (as he was temporarily forced to do in the fall of 1982) and let the U.S. economy grow, and the dollar ease back to more realistic levels.

The public should understand that the primary reason for today's excessively high real interest rates, and sluggish economic growth, is not the fear of inflation - but fear of the Fed - and the correct perception that everytime the economy shows any signs of real strength, the Fed will immediately choke off credit and allow short term rates to soar.

Then when the economy abruptly slows, the Fed suddenly turns on the gusher - leading to excessive monetary growth, followed by excessive tightening in epicycles of what one administration critic called "economic terrorism." This caused monetarist Milton Friedman to say "if this be monetarism, I am no monetarist."

This is why the U.S. bond market now perversely soars on bad economic news - and slumps when the economy shows strength. Bondholders are not just economic pessimists, they are Fed-watchers who know the Fed is operating on the weird notion that real growth is inflationary, and must be restrained.

This is also why on April 4 and 5 the dollar went UP when the money supply GREW unusually fast - a sign that should have sent the dollar DOWN on inflation fears. The speculators knew, however, that this would perversely cause the Fed to tighten.

Investors also know something which the public ignores: the Fed is, first and last, not a public institution, but a banker's bank - dedicated to the protection of big bank solvency.

Unfortunately, that solvency, at the moment, is linked directly to the ability of LDC and Third-World nations to pay off their huge debts. In turn, the higher the dollar, the easier it is for those nations to compete and sell to world markets and especially us.

In other words, most of the Fed's "owners" (big banks) have a stronger interest in a high dollar, than in domestic economic growth and commodity prices.

The 68-percent rise in the trade-weighted value of the dollar since early 1981 has meant a corresponding 68-percent rise in U.S. export costs, or a 41-percent decline in the relative costs of our competitors - and even bigger for the debtor nations.

This is why a lot of otherwise bad overseas loans are now being paid off - but at the direct expense of American farmers, industry, and workers, who have been savaged in world and domestic markets, and who otherwise would now be in "fat city."

This also explains why none of the major bank failures have come from bad overseas loans, but from heavy DOMESTIC lending on commodities, especially agriculture, and oil and gas drilling.

The same wild credit swings from loose to choke-hold tight, that have driven real interest rates to record highs, have utterly decimated the U.S. commodity markets, because investors have found they can make more money holding money and monetary instruments, than purchasing commodities, or investing in future production.

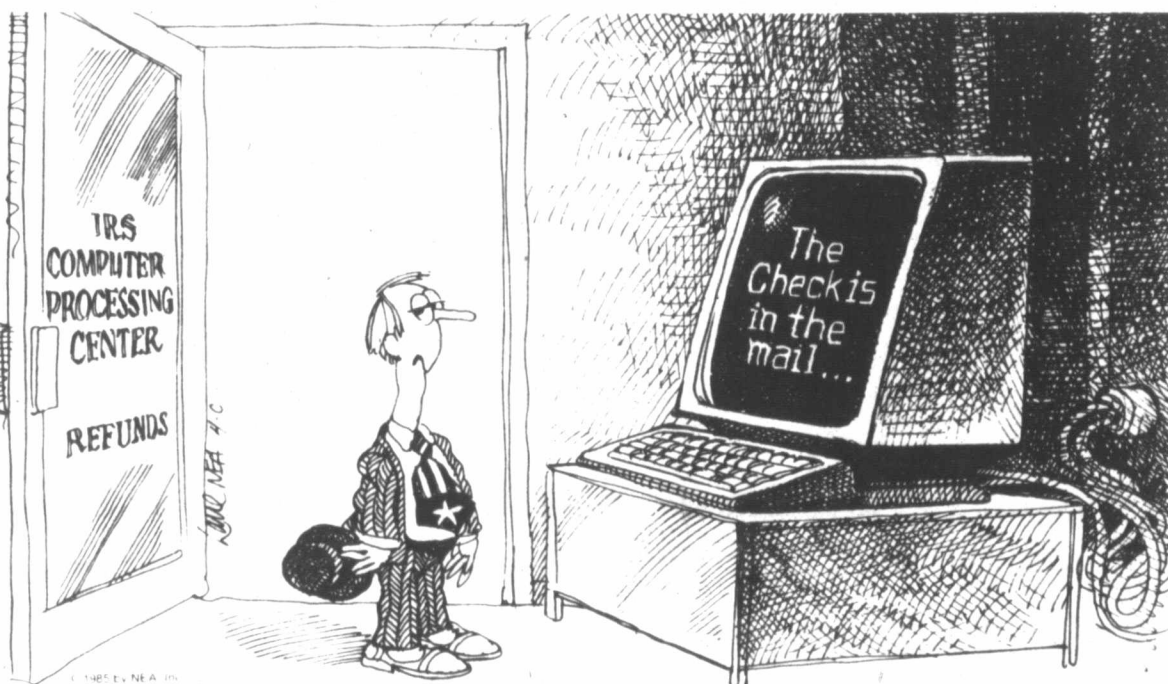

In 1983, for example, monetary growth of 17.2 percent in the first quarter was slashed to 4 percent in the third quarter, 3 percent in the fourth, then raised to 12 percent in the first quarter 1984, followed by another sickening plunge to 1.9 percent in the third quarter.

This huge fifteen-point swing in M-1 growth in the last nine quarters contrasts with a less than one-point variation in Japan's monetary growth in the same period. No wonder Japanese interest rates are four-points lower, and the yen so much cheaper than the dollar.

The Fed's wild gyrations - especially the excessive reactions on the tight money side - caused commodity prices to fall sharply in seven of the last eleven quarters, and to plunge an average of over 7 percent in 1984. And key metals, gold, silver, and copper, and farm products all lost from 12 to as much as 24 percent in value. All during an economic recovery! (Just since December commodity prices have FALLEN at a 9-percent annual rate!)

This unheard-of commodity plunge was caused mainly by the soaring dollar which the Fed's yo-yo policies had promoted, and helped make real economic growth in 1984 fall from 10 percent to 1.6 in just six months. No economy can experience normal growth under such monetary mismanagement.

Senate Republicans should forget waging trade war on Japan, and start talking tough to the Fed.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, April 24, the 114th day of 1985. There are 251 days left in the year. This is Secretaries Day.

Today's highlight in history: On April 24, 1800, Congress approved a bill establishing the Library of Congress in Washington D.C., appropriating $5,000 "for the purchase of such books as may be necessary."

On this date: Ten years ago: The U.S. House of Representatives joined the Senate in approving legislation giving President Gerald R. Ford authority to use troops to protect the evacuation of Americans and South Vietnamese from Saigon.

Five years ago: Congressman John B. Anderson, R-Ill., was withdrawing from the race for the Republican presidential nomination, and would run as an independent.

Rebates form of bribery

Let's say I have a gizmo for sale and there are already many gizmos on the market.

How do I get you to buy mine? I can make a better gizmo than my competitors. Or I can do a more effective job of advertising. Or I can entice you to buy my gizmo with a bribe on the side.

"Kickback" is an ugly word. The acceptable word for the same thing is "rebate."

When anybody offers you a "rebate" for purchasing his product, who's he fooling? That bribe has to be added to the price of the product he's peddling.

However the rebate practice may have become accepted procedure in the marketplace, it still encourages lesser products to charge higher prices so that they can afford to kickback cash.

And it encourages purchasers to ignore cash kickbacks when computing their income taxes.

What amounts to a few dollars or a few hundred at retail can amount to tens of thousands of dollars for wholesale buyers.

The Wall Street Journal recently learned of Mr. Donald G. Parker of Oklahoma City, a shoe buyer for T.G. & Y. Stores.

For favoring certain T.G. & Y. suppliers Mr. Parker is accused of collecting kickbacks which include cash and gifts worth more than half a million dollars.

Herbert Robinson, a New York lawyer specializing in white-dollar crime, says, "It's pervasive. It's all over the place. It's in the largest chains and in the smallest chains; even in the most pious ones."

Comparatively few employers prosecute, considering court proceedings too costly and time consuming. Most crooked buyers are just fired. Nonetheless some of the more flagrant kickback schemes are being ventilated in court.

Natco Industries operates 211 men's apparel shops; is accusing three former employees of collecting millions of kickbacks.

Part of the problem relates to the recent surge in imports. In many foreign countries, most all business is transacted with under-the-table cash amounting to as much as 15 percent of an order.

Graft is a way of life in many countries and their worst practices are rubbing off on us.

Some buyers accept bribes to finance their own weaknesses for drugs, adultery or gambling.

The losers are consumers and honest manufacturers.

Wal-Mart, based in Bentonville, Ark., will not allow its buyers even to accept a free lunch "because next comes dinner, then theatre tickets, then a trip to Las Vegas and, eventually cash kickbacks."

Yet, there are entirely honest and ethical merchants who are allowing themselves to try to bribe you with so-called "rebates." And the more inferior the merchandise, the more the seller can afford to "rebate."

Berry's World

"Could you spare a couple of bucks, so I can get 'We Are The World'?"

Democrats could turn to Lee Iacocca

By William A. Rusher

NEW YORK (NEA) - Of all the scenarios currently under discussion concerning the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988, easily the most intriguing is the one concerning Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca.

Let's assume that by mid-1987 the economy is doing poorly (not because that's the likeliest prospect, but simply because there's little point in discussing the Democrats' chances if it's doing well). The deficit is still out of control, foreign investors are growing cautious about sending more of their money over here, and inflation is on the rise. Housing starts are sharply down as interest rates climb under the pressure of private and governmental competition for such credit as is available. The steel and auto industries are reeling under the impact of Japanese and even South Korean imports, with other sectors of the economy not far behind. Unemployment is edging upward toward 9 percent.

Even in those circumstances, the Republican Party would be no pushover in the battle for the White House. Vice President Bush would have a formidable claim on the job, by virtue of his unparalleled experience in a whole series of governmental assignments. If a feistier, more populist touch was deemed necessary, Rep. Jack Kemp could provide it - either as an alternative to Bush or as his vice presidential running mate.

Where should the Democrats turn? Any worsening of the economy might tempt the party to raise anew the badly tattered banner of liberalism and call for Big Government to come once again to the nation's rescue. In that case the likeliest nominee would be Teddy Kennedy - or, if he is deemed unacceptable for any reason (and one can think of a couple), New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who has demonstrated a mean aptitude for the politics of envy.

But neither of these men, nor any other relatively routine choice such as Gary Hart or Bill Bradley, could effectively rid the Democrats of their current crippling image as a "coalition of the damned" (to use Jesse Jackson's vivid phrase): a gaggle of strident caucuses representing every special interest except white, middle-class America.

Let us assume that at that point Lee Iacocca starts making speeches and television appearances in the aggressive, no-nonsense style for which he is famous, denouncing the Republicans for leading the country into a quagmire and calling for various bold measures - some governmental, some in the private sector - to bail us out. Above all, he wraps himself in the flag and bastes defiance of overseas competitors like Japan. As a lifelong businessman, he is absolutely immune to charges of catering to the special interests that have infested the Democratic Party like fleas in an Army blanket. "He saved Chrysler, and he can save America."

Is it so unreasonable to assume that the quirky Democratic voters of New Hampshire might toss him their handkerchief in that state's bellwether presidential primary? If the Democratic Party, after its recent massive defeats, really wants to score in 1988, what better chance does it have than to try a long forward pass to this well-known and highly popular businessman? What other course could scotch so effectively the charge that the Democrats were caving in, once again, to the furthest-out feminists, American Indians, blacks and gays?

And for that matter, who says the American people, tiring (not for the first time) of politicians, might not turn by the millions, in November 1988, to such a savior? Stranger things have happened. It all depends on our national mood in 1988. If it is anywhere between nervous apprehension and sheer desperation, the maverick businessman with the hard-to-spell name may see, and seize, his chance.

Bits of history

In 1704, the first American newspaper printed on a regular basis, the Boston News Letter, was published for the first time.

In 1792, the French national anthem "La Marseillaise" was composed by Claude-Joseph Rouget de Lisle.

In 1877, federal troops were ordered out of New Orleans, ending the North's post-Civil War rule in the South.

Dear Abby

Children who open books also open up the world

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: As an eighth-grade English and social studies teacher, I am trying to encourage my students to establish the habit of reading.

Students tend to emulate and identify with famous people, so I am asking various celebrities to help me with this project. As you know, Abby, better educated students grow up to be more informed and responsible citizens.

Would you please write a paragraph or two, stressing the importance of reading?

Thank you for your time and help.
RAY SMYTHE,
PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR MR. SMYTHE: With pleasure. If I could give young people one piece of advice, it would be, read, read, read!

Reading will open up new worlds, real and imagined. Read for information, read for pleasure, read for inspiration. Our libraries contain a wealth of information and entertainment, and it's all yours—as much as you want—free for the taking!

The person who does not read has no advantage over the person who cannot read.

And since last week was National Library Week, I want to encourage parents to read to their very young children. This loving act will create a bond of closeness between parent and child as well as make the child aware of the buried treasures that can be found in books.

Let me share with you the closing paragraph from one of my favorite poems, "The Reading Mother" by Strickland Gillilan:

"You may have tangible wealth untold;
"Caskets of jewels and coffers of gold.

"Richer than I you can never be —
"I had a mother who read to me."

DEAR ABBY: "Waiter in Beverly Hills" was way off base when he said, "The cook is the highest paid employee in the restaurant—in fact, in the better restaurants the cook has more money than the people who eat there."

Abby, some chefs may make that kind of money, but there's a big difference between a cook and a chef. A chef is a well-trained, specially schooled, high-salaried professional for whom cooking is an art—not just a job.

In case you don't know it, the most overworked and underpaid employee in a restaurant is the busboy. Everything you touch, the busboy has washed before you got there, and he'll wash it again after you leave. He gives the cook clean plates for the food, and the waiter clean silver and clean glasses. He's the one you see balancing a tray with about 100 pounds of dishes on it. If a busboy makes a minimum wage, he's lucky. Fortunately, the waiters and waitresses do share their tips with him, but it's not much.

Don't get me wrong; everybody in the restaurant business really works hard and few get rich, but if there's an extra tip to be given, remind your readers to give it to the busboy.

SAN ANTONIO COOK

DEAR COOK: Thanks for the reminder. And may I remind you that sometimes the "busboy" is a girl.

Texas art topic of last lecture

The fourth and final lecture in the spring lecture series, "150 Years of Independence," at the Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle is set for Sunday at 2 p.m. The lecture, "20th Century Texas Art" is to be given by Ron Gleason, past director of the Wichita Falls Museum and Art Center.

A consultant to corporations and museums on art and arts programs, Gleason is currently involved in the development of TexArt 150, an association of art museums in Texas that have joined to present a statewide program of exhibitions to celebrate the state's sesquicentennial anniversary.

From 1981 until 1983 he was a consultant to the corporate art collection of Atlantic Richfield Company. He served as the director of the Tyler Museum of Art for seven years and prior to that spent four years as te director of the Wichita Falls Museum and Art Center.

He is a member of the board of trustees for the Southwest Alternate Media Project, and has served on the board of trustees of the Art Museum Association of America. He has also served on several panels for the National Endowment for the Arts and is a past member of the Visual Arts and Architecture panel of the Texas Commission on the Arts.

Gleason's lecture will examine different aspects of 20th century Texas art and will include discussion of works by artists such as Alexander Hogue, Julian Onderdonk, James Surlis and Dorothy Austin. His talk will examine connections between artistic expression and historical experience.

As this lecture will be the last in the museum's spring lecture series, it will be followed by an ice cream social at the museum for those persons attending the lecture. The series has been coordinated by Dr. Frederick Rathjen of West Texas State University and sponsored in part by the Texas Commission for the Humanities.

The lecture and ice cream will be free to the public. For more information, contact the Carson County Square House Museum at P.O. Box 276, Panhandle, or call 537-3118.

Two Americans named cardinals

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II named 28 new cardinals today including the archbishops of New York and Boston.

In an announcement at his general audience in St. Peter's Square, the pope also named two Polish prelates, including the archbishop of Wroclaw.

The pope also named as cardinals the archbishops of Santiago, Chile; Managua, Nicaragua; Cebu, Philippines; Lyon, France; Utrecht, Netherlands; Madrid, Spain; Addis Ababa, Ethiopia; and Quebec.

The new cardinals also include the leader of the Ukrainian Catholic Church, who is based in Rome, and a Rome-based Czech prelate.

The new cardinals will be formally elevated in a consistory at the Vatican May 25.

With the promotions, the pope said he was bringing the number of cardinals under the age of 80, and therefore eligible to vote for a future pope, to 120—the maximum possible under present church rules.

In addition, the Polish-born pontiff has never revealed the name of a cardinal he chose "in pectore" — in his heart — in 1979. There has always been speculation the prelate came from a Communist country.

In the announcement to the crowd, the pope noted the new cardinals come from 19 countries. He said this reflects the "universality" of the church.

John Paul said others deserved to be promoted but he did not want to go over the limit of 120 set by Pope Paul VI.

In New York, Cardinal-elect

John J. O'Connor's office issued a statement saying:

"I am deeply grateful to the Holy Father for the extraordinary honor extended to me. I consider this a mark of his affection for the people of all New York, of all religious persuasions.

"At the same time, I am humbled by the awareness that many other bishops of the Roman Catholic hierarchy of the United States are far more personally deserving of the honor. I know, however, they will recognize the Holy Father's actions as a special tribute to the people of New York."

He said it was "a source of great personal joy" that his friend, Bernard F. Law, the archbishop of Boston, also had been appointed.

Israelis begin withdrawal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli forces today withdrew from positions in the Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon where they have faced the Syrian army since Israel's 1982 invasion, the Lebanese army command reported.

The military said the pullout began at 7 a.m., with convoys of tanks, armored vehicles and trucks carrying men, weapons and equipment heading south.

By early afternoon, the Israelis had moved south about 12 miles to the bottom of the valley, said a military spokesman who declined to be identified.

Israeli helicopters crisscrossed the Bekaa, apparently covering the pullback, and unidentified jets flew over Beirut.

The spokesman said Israeli warplanes flew over the valley dropping leaflets warning the Lebanese not to cooperate with Shiite Moslem fighters waging hit-and-run attacks on Israeli forces.

The army command declined to say whether the unidentified jets flying over the capital were Israeli. But in the past, Israeli jets have flown over Beirut during Israeli operations.

The Lebanese army's Syrian-trained 1st Brigade started moving in to take over Israeli positions as they were abandoned.

There was no sign the Syrians planned to move out of the zone they have controlled in central and northern Lebanon since 1976.

Israeli deputy chief of staff Gen. Dan Shomron warned the Syrians not to advance, saying any such move would bring an Israeli response.

Body of missing professor found in ravine in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The remains of a University of Colorado professor who disappeared while driving to a teaching job in northwest Mexico nearly three years ago have been found in a ravine in that area, officials said.

The remains, found Sunday by woodcutters, were identified as those of Nicholas W. Schrock by Mexican dentist Judith Torres, who compared them to Schrock's dental records, U.S. Embassy spokesman Lee Johnson said Tuesday.

Johnson said American-made tennis shoes, red arch supports and a Timex watch found with the remains also matched what Schrock was wearing when he vanished while driving to a teaching job in Guadalajara.

He said consular officials in Sinaloa state had been in touch with Schrock's wife, Ruth, in Boulder, Colo., and that she said her husband had used red arch supports.

Schrock disappeared May 31, 1982, while driving on Mexico's Pacific Coast Highway 15. He was 42. An intensive search was begun after his pickup truck was located. During the search, several graves were exhumed and Mexican authorities sent one body to Colorado, but Mrs. Schrock hired a team of pathologists who determined the body was not Schrock's. The dead man turned out to be an elderly Mexican.

"I will be requesting and obtaining a forensic pathologist's report," Mrs. Schrock said Tuesday night. "At no time has the American government indicated an interest in this being done. They would have been very happy for me to have accepted that first false body as that of Nicholas Schrock."

Seven policemen from San Ignacio, including the police chief, were arrested in June 1982 after Schrock's truck was found in the town.

The seven were charged with murder in Schrock's death but charges were dismissed because of lack of evidence.

The policemen, who testified they had found Schrock's truck along the highway, were tried and convicted on charges of robbery.

When the murder charges were dismissed, Sinaloa State Attorney General Jorge Chavez Castro said authorities would be free to refile murder charges if evidence materialized.

"Castro apparently said the murder charges were dropped against the suspects because there was no body itself," Mrs. Schrock said. "Now there is a body and it is permissible to reopen the murder charges."

Johnson said the cause of death had not been determined and that might be difficult because of the state of decomposition of the remains.

Accused presumed guilty in Chinese courts

EDITOR'S NOTE — A legal system is slowly being resurrected in China, where the accused are presumed guilty and judges generally dislike lawyers who are paid about the same as factory workers.

By RICK GLADSTONE
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — Gao Weing, 21, accused of picking the pockets of foreigners on a bus, stood before a panel of three judges in the courtroom of the Intermediate People's Court with its soiled window curtains and smudged linoleum.

"Tell us about your crimes," said a stern, middle-aged woman behind a desk labeled "Shen Pan Zhang" — chief judge — and wearing a blue uniform with red epaulets and a military cap.

The defendant, fumbling, recounted the confession he gave police, saying he stole the wallets of a Pakistani and a Swiss student.

"You have committed grave offenses," intoned the judge. After a few minutes of deliberation the panel returned the verdict: Guilty. Two years in prison.

Another case was closed in a court system where the accused are presumed guilty, judges dislike dogged defense lawyers and there is one attorney for every 57,000 people.

Destroyed by the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, China's legal framework has been resurrected and now hears more than 700,000 civil cases and 120,000 criminal cases a year.

The government has promulgated a new constitution, criminal code, civil and criminal procedure law, and more than 300 economic laws, of which one-third are designed to encourage foreign investment.

But courts are fraught with growing pains, contradictions, the ideological shackles of two millennia of authoritarianism and four decades of see-saw communist policies. Rule of law in the western sense is a new concept for China's 1.03 billion people.

Though trials are supposed to be open, as guaranteed by the constitution, many are closed and court buildings are fenced and guarded.

An untold number of criminal cases never reach court, since police have the power to punish suspected light offenders with up to three years of "lao jiao" — education through labor.

Foreign human rights groups have expressed concern over an anti-crime campaign in which an estimated 5,000 to 10,000 people have been summarily sentenced to death.

In civil cases, the government encourages out-of-court settlements and recently began charging $18 for divorce suits, about half the average worker's monthly wage.

In Gao's case, which the court permitted a foreign reporter to watch, the two uniformed prosecutors presented no witnesses, no details of Gao's arrest and no explanation of how he confessed.

Gao was not permitted to sit beside his court-appointed defense attorney, a young man who yawned through much of the proceedings and read a prepared statement asking the judges to be merciful because Gao had admitted guilt.

Asked after the trial why he did not question how Gao's confession was obtained, the attorney replied that his job is to mitigate the punishment.

"Our legal system is different than in the West," he said without further explanation.

The case reflects the restrictions on Chinese lawyers, whose status and pay are low.

During the Cultural Revolution, lawyers were denounced as criminal co-conspirators. They were not allowed to resume practicing until 1978.

Two years later the government enacted regulations that state that lawyers "are subject to no interference by any organization or individual." But many still question their function.

The Communist Party newspaper People's Daily (Renmin Ribao) recounted a case in which a Shaanxi Province judge ordered a robbery suspect's attorney thrown out of court for finding glaring faults in the prosecution's evidence.

In another case reported last December, a lawyer on southern China's Hainan Island was jailed on charges of "conspiring with the accused" because of his staunch defense. Colleagues protested and the lawyer was released.

Justice Minister Zou Yu complained earlier this year at a conference: "Some people distrust lawyers as the mouthpiece of judges, and others believe they are politically unreliable because they defend criminals."

Peking is attempting to justify the rule of law with propaganda about the value of legal rights, once dismissed as the babble of bourgeois reactionaries.

"It is necessary to switch from doing things according to policies to doing things both according to policies and in line with law," says Peng Zhen, the senior Politburo member entrusted with creating China's new body of law.

The biweekly journal China Legal System (Zhongguo Fazhi Bao) has soared from a circulation of 100,000 in 1980 to 1.41 million today. The country now has 69 legal journals and newspapers and a new encyclopedia, "Science of Law."

More than 140,000 judges serve in the Supreme People's Court, 29 Higher People's Courts, 300 Intermediate People's Courts and 3,000 Basic People's Courts.

China has 18,000 lawyers, compared with 2,000 in 1980. Five specialized law schools and 31 universities with law departments have opened in the past six years.

About 100 lawyers practice in Peking, a city of more than 9 million, says He Jindi, an attorney attached to the Peking Lawyer's Office, one of five firms in the capital.

ts. School children rarely see sun at home

By DON ROBINSON
San Angelo Standard-Times
Some Texas students rarely see the sun rise above their homes. They wake at 4 a.m., catch the bus at 5 a.m. and travel more than 80 miles to school. They spend eight hours at school, then it's back on the bus for another 1½-hour ride home in the red-orange rays of a setting sun. In rain or shine, this daily routine occurs 180 days a year for students in many West Texas school districts and especially in Alpine and Van Horn. For more than five years, teen-age residents from Terlingua and Lajitas have traveled about 170 miles a day, five days a week, to attend high school in Alpine. Many of the students from Lajitas travel 30 miles every morning to catch the bus on the eastern outskirts of Terlingua. The car-bus combination adds up to more than 230 miles a day some of those students travel for education. "We've been doing this about six years, and it's something all schools around here face," said Alpine School Superintendent Richard Souter. "We're all isolated around here."

Souter said the high school students commute back and forth because there is no high school in the Terlingua-Lajitas area. The only school in the area houses kindergarten through eighth grade.

"The kids seem to be adapted to it and know what they're doing," Souter said. "But it's still tough on them. I would hate to do it myself."

Sixth- through 12th-grade students in the Guadalupe National Park area wake up before the rooster crows to catch the bus to Van Horn.

There's no morning cartoons for these students. They have to have their hair combed, teeth brushed and breakfast eaten before the 4:45 a.m. bus departs for the 75-mile trip to Van Horn.

"It's just a way of life," said Van Horn School Superintendent Lewis Rogers. "We also have students from Kent, in the eastern part of our county (Culberson), who travel 42 miles one way for class."

In one week, students who travel to the Alpine and Van Horn districts accumulate enough mileage to make two trips from Texoma to Brownsville, the northern and southern tips of Texas.

B.J. Edwards, director of transportation for the Texas Education Agency, said many students have to travel long routes because they live in isolated areas that are far from the nearest school.

He said the Alpine and Van Horn routes are the greatest distances students in the state have to travel for class.

"It's regrettable they have to do this, but when there's no other school in the area, they have to go the nearest one," he said.

Edwards said he traveled the Terlingua-Alpine route once for observation purposes. He said the trip is very long.

"It's not much you can do about that route," he said. "There's no other school between Terlingua and Alpine, and that's just something we have to do."

Beginning in the fall semester, there will be an additional number of students added to the list of those awakening before the sun rises.

The Marfa Independent School District board decided Feb. 12 to bus students from Redford to Marfa.

Redford's elementary- and high school-age students will travel about 76 miles to attend classes in Marfa.

Marfa School Superintendent Carl Robinson said the decision was made because of the new state requirement of the "one-room, one-teacher" stipulation.

"In the Redford school, there are sixth-, seventh- and eighth-grade students in the same class with the same teacher," Robinson said, "and there are also kindergartners, first- and second-graders together in the same class."

"When they transfer here, each student will be in a class with students of the same grade and with one teacher," he said.

Robinson said although the board made the decision, it is still open to any advice to help resolve the situation.

"We're trying everything we can to provide the best for the students in our district," Robinson said.

"We will have an informal meeting next week with the trustees in Presidio to discuss each district's problems and come to an understanding of each others' problems and try to help each other out."

Presidio, only 16 miles from Redford, is the first stop between Redford and Marfa. It would have been the first choice for the Redford students, but the Presidio district is already overcrowded and unable to handle added students.

Students on each of these long-distance routes seem to adjust to their situations, the superintendents said.

Rogers said there is a period of adjustment students go through when they first encounter the long trips to and from school.

But he said most of them adapt. "We haven't seen their grades suffer, and there's been no substantial decrease in their work," Rogers said. "Why, the valedictorians the last two years from our school were from the (Guadalupe) mountain area."

Souter said the traveling hasn't hindered many of the students from participating in extracurricular activities at Van Horn.

He said there are some students participating in agriculture shows, band and basketball. They make the sacrifice, Souter said, and so far there have been few problems.

"There's no decline in the students' work as far as our records show," Souter said. "The students are adapting to it, and they are making the sacrifice work."

'DECLINE TO COMMENT'—Teamsters President Jackie Presser is sworn in Tuesday at a hearing of the President's Commission on Organized Crime in Chicago. Crew takes pride in shuttle mission

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Senator Jake Garn, who flew on the space shuttle Discovery last week, said the professional manner of the astronauts trying to repair a satellite brought tears to his eyes.

"It was a magnificent job, and there are no words to describe what a success this mission was and how proud I am of these people," Garn, 52, said Tuesday.

Garn, chairman of the Senate subcommittee that control's NASA's budget, flew on the mission as a congressional observer. The Utah Republican made the remarks at a news conference with his six crewmates at the Johnson Space Center.

The Discovery crew successfully launched two satellites during the seven-day mission, but was unable to turn on the Syncom satellite using makeshift fly swatter-like tools.

Astronaut Rhea Seddon, who operated Discovery's mechanical arm and attempted to turn on Syncom's switch with the fly-swatter tool, said she hit the switch at least three times but it failed to activate the craft.

The $85 million-Syncom remains in orbit, but is useless.

Garn, who had volunteered to perform a series of medical experiments on space sickness, said he quickly became ill after Discovery was launched.

"I was very sick after about nine hours in flight," Garn said. "It was sort of like the stomach flu. On the second day, I was still nauseated. On the third day, it was all gone."

"I did not expect to go from feeling so bad to feeling so wonderful," he said. "The next five days were the most fantastic of my life."

Garn said his experience of training for the mission and spending seven days in orbit will enable him to recommend changes at NASA. "I'm hopeful that we'll be able to change some of the procurement practices and save some money," Garn said.

Mission Commander Karol Bobko said the crew was unaware of damage the shuttle sustained during the mission, and that the craft never experienced any "disturbance in controllability."

A post-mission inspection showed the Discovery suffered structural damage to the flap on the left wing. The craft also blew a tire and had brake failure upon landing at the Kennedy Space Center last Friday.

NASA officials say that neither problem will affect plans to launch Discovery again in June.

Astronauts David Griggs and Jeff Hoffman conducted a space walk during the mission to install the fly-swatter tools on the mechanical arm.

The seventh crewman was pilot Don Williams.

Charles Walker, a McDonnell Douglas engineer, said a drug-making machine worked well in orbit and that he was able to produce the secret hormone that his company had planned. The drug has been described as a hormone that will have important applications in medicine.

The engineer said that if a similar amount is produced in an August mission, tests will start on the drug in laboratories on Earth.

Discovery was launched April 12 on what was to be a five-day mission. Two days were added to the flight to enable the astronauts to try the Syncom repair. They manufactured the fly-swatter tools on board following instructions from the ground, installed them on the arm, and then attempted the repair.

Officials of Hughes Communications Inc., owner of the satellite, said the Syncom was launched properly and apparently some element within the device was broken, making repair in space impossible.

House ready for appropriations debate

AUSTIN (AP) — The House went to work today on a $36.4 billion two-year state budget proposal that would end funds for state universities in Odessa and Galveston.

Speaker Gib Lewis says he "can't find any opposition" to the spending plan crafted by the Appropriations Committee. The budget would balance without tax hikes, assuming legislative approval of state fee hikes, college tuition increases and several minor revenue bills.

"From what I pick up from members, very few amendments have been drafted," said Lewis. "I think everyone realizes what we have to do."

He predicted "very little, if any, debate."

The proposed budget would phase out the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and Texas

A&M University at Galveston. In previous weeks, key lawmakers agreed that money would be put back into the budget on the House floor.

But Lewis said Tuesday he's not sure. "Those will be two proposals that will be brought up. As far as predicting what will happen, I really don't know," said the speaker, adding that he opposes closing any state colleges without a full study.

Also today, the House planned a final vote on a bill that would require cities to compensate owners of billboards that are ordered removed as a result of city ordinances aimed at controlling such signs.

"This is a bill that protects the individual's right to own and maintain property against overreaching government," said bill sponsor Bill Messer, D-Belton. Messer won 82-61 approval for the bill in a preliminary vote Tuesday.

The billboard measure also gives the state the power to regulate billboards in unincorporated areas.

Messer complained that city ordinances against billboards amount to unfair confiscation of existing billboards. In lieu of compensation, some cities allow illegal billboards to remain up for several years so the owner can continue to make money.

That does not go far enough, said Messer, who wants compensation in the form of cash payments, tax abatements or other benefits.

In 1983, Gov. Mark White vetoed a similar bill approved by the House and Senate. Messer told the House that White told him he "will make his decision when it gets there" this year.

The lengthy floor debate included a series of amendments, most of which were killed. The debate on state regulation in unregulated areas boiled down to a discussion of the relative merits of billboards.

"I don't like driving along looking at billboards. I'd rather look at wildflowers," said Messer. "But it is property."

Rep. Jim McWilliams, D-Marshall, said, "I'd rather look at billboards than wide-open spaces, particularly in West Texas. I enjoy driving through the countryside, but I'd rather see billboards."

Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, failed with an amendment that would have allowed counties to regulate billboards. He complained about billboards sprouting up along scenic drives in Austin.

Seven children found hungry, alone in house

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Seven children — ranging in age from 1 to 15 — were taken into protective custody after authorities found them apparently abandoned in a one-room shack in Corpus Christi, officials said.

Some of the children were eating bird seed off the floor because there was no food in the house and the 15-year-old had been left in a shed behind the house, authorities confirmed Tuesday.

"It was real bad. It was just a little shack," Helen Reeves, nursing director of the City-County Health Department, told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times of the home. "Clothes were scattered on the floor, and mattresses were propped against the wall."

Ms. Reeves said Health Department officials went to the house after being contacted by a concerned school nurse.

"The story we got was that there were little children being left alone with a 15-year-old while their parents went to Mexico," Ms. Reeves said.

The children were in the custody of the Department of Human Resources, and officials there declined comment.

"I'm not at liberty to discuss anything about the situation," Betty Francis, supervisor for the child protective services of DHR, said.

Court officials said the case had not yet gone before a judge.

According to police reports, the police met Health Department officials at the small building about 3 p.m. Friday. The door was locked, but they convinced one of the children to open it, the reports said.

Three of the children were toddlers, and were eating bird seed on the floor which had dropped from two parrot cages, officials said. A police report said there was no food in the house.

"The baby had bird seed in its mouth," Ms. Reeves said. "They said the last time they ate was a hamburger on Monday, and we were there on Friday."

A 15-year-old boy, the eldest child at the residence, was found in a large metal building behind the shack after one of the children ran back and banged on the door, officials said. One child told police the boy stayed in the back shed because he does not speak English, the reports said.

The other three children were taken into protective custody when they came home from school, according to police reports.

Okie: it's all in the way you say it

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Dewey Bartlett was proud to be an Okie, and as Oklahoma governor and U.S. senator he took every opportunity to rejuvenate the word that originated as a term of endearment.

The social upheavals of the Dust Bowl and the Great Depression had threatened to damage the image of "Okies" beyond repair.

John Steinbeck used Okie as a descriptive term in his 1939 novel about migrants from Oklahoma, "The Grapes of Wrath." Dictionaries still define Okie as an itinerant farm worker from Oklahoma, or any migrant agricultural worker.

"Okie? What's that?" one of Steinbeck's characters asks.

"Well, Okie use 'ta mean you was from Oklahoma. Now it means you're . . . scum."

"Don't mean nothing itself, it's the way they say it."

The word quickly became an infuriating epithet for Oklahomans who weathered the most pervasive natural and economic disasters in

Changes burn sunbathers

AUSTIN (AP) — The natural beauty of Hippie Hollow, a Lake Travis area long favored by those who prefer to enjoy their beaches au naturel, is being spoiled by construction work, sunbathers complain.

"We come out here to get away from the asphalt," said a sunbather who asked to be identified only as Marvin. "But now you come here and see the same thing," he said while standing in the middle of a new, paved parking lot at near the nude beach area.

A grant from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission and nearly $400,000 in Travis County bond funds are being used to pave a parking lot, put in two restroom buildings with decks, build a ticket booth and grade a 4,700-foot lakeside trail. The county leases Hippie Hollow from the Lower Colorado River Authority.

It was the trail that sunbathers grumbled about most over the weekend.

"It's a highway," a man identified as Gary told the Austin American-Statesman. "It just looks like overkill. The trail is within 10 feet of the waterline at some parts."

"You used to could look up and see green trees. Now you see more rocks," Marvin complained.

The work isn't finished, said Travis County Commissioner Bob Honts, coordinator of the project. "It's going to be put back in a very natural form," he said.

The changes are designed to make Hippie Hollow cleaner and safer, Honts said. In recent years, more beer cans and bottles than sunbathers have lined the rocky banks of the hollow, officials said.

Trash has been thrown down the hill and, when it rains, it washes into the lake, said Sueann Brady, Honts' assistant.

Before the new trail was cut through Hippie Hollow, the trash had to be packed out of the park, she said. One weekend last summer, workers hauled two tons of trash out of the beach area, she added.

"You literally couldn't keep it from being a trash receptacle. We're still digging bottles out of there that have probably been there 10 years," Honts said.

The trail also will make Hippie Hollow more accessible to emergency vehicles when a swimmer is injured, Ms. Brady said.

the history of the country. After all, they argued, many of those to whom the term was applied weren't even from Oklahoma.

The Okie image began to shift in the 1940s with the exploits of Oklahoma's 45th Division during World War II. Rodgers and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma!" debuted on Broadway in 1943 and proceeded to break all records.

The musical, later to become a popular motion picture, provided a heart-swelling official song for a state eager to put the dark days of the 1930s behind it.

When the University of Oklahoma football team won 47 straight games and three national championships during the Bud Wilkinson era in the 1950s, all Oklahomans were proud to be identified as "Sooners."

But by 1968, Bartlett continued to look for a way to encourage state pride and industrial development.

There still existed the "impression that we were still going around apologizing for the Dust Bowl," said Mike McCarville, who served as Bartlett's press secretary and who wrote a 1970 book entitled "Okie."

The idea for an "Okie promotion program" was that of Robert Hought, press secretary to Bartlett's predecessor, Henry Bellmon.

In 1968, the Okie idea was unveiled by Bartlett and his staff.

"Because Steinbeck gave the world his 1939 version of an Okie, I have decided the world should also see our version of the 1968 Okie — an intelligent, hard-working, self-sustaining and inventive person with a zest for life, a respect for law and order, an understanding of his fellow man and the courage to stand four-square for progress and equality," Bartlett wrote.

In 1969, astronaut Tom Stafford from Weatherford took a bundle of "Okie" pins with him to lunar orbit on Apollo 10, the mission before the first landing on the moon.

"Every time a dignitary came to town, the governor would stick a pin on his lapel," said McCarville, now a Midwest City publisher.

As governor from 1967 to 1971 and as a U.S. senator from 1973 until just before his death in 1979, Bartlett made thousands of people honorary Okies.

Dewey Bartlett Jr., a landman for a Tulsa oil company, said his father passed out Okie certificates to dignitaries and "just regular old folks."

"He would sign every one of them," the younger Bartlett said. "When he was watching television or a football game, he would just start signing them. He always had a stack of them around."

When Bartlett died in 1979, the remaining certificates were destroyed. More than 100,000 had been distributed by McCarville's estimate.

Although Bartlett was "trying to make Okie an acceptable nickname," his son said the idea met with opposition, "especially from oldtimers" who remembered the Okies who "went to California and were treated as trash."

"There was some resistance to the idea, particularly in western Oklahoma," McCarville said. "Bartlett, being the tenacious sort he was, persisted. It became a pretty controversial program."

The Okie pin and certificate incorporated a drop of blue water in the "O" and an evergreen tree in the "I." And Okie was made to do double duty as an acronym for "Oklahoma, Key to Industrial Enterprise."

Industrial leaders seemed receptive to the idea that the Dust Bowl had made Oklahomans harder workers.

Surveillance cameras help Border Patrol nab aliens

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Surveillance cameras along the United States-Mexico border near El Paso have been such an aid in nabbing illegal aliens that the Border Patrol is considering their use elsewhere, officials say.

Since beginning the use of the cameras a year ago, the apprehension of illegal aliens in the El Paso sector has increased by as much as 60 percent, said Gustavo De La Vina, sector deputy chief patrol agent.

"They're definitely a big aid to us," De La Vina said in a recent interview. "They've been fantastic."

Eleven of the cameras, similar to those used for security in banks and office buildings, are located atop telephone poles or buildings in strategic spots along a nine-mile area of the border, De La Vina said.

"We've got them at the most frequently crossed places, at the low-level water crossings that are used by aliens a lot," he said.

Designed to help agents catch illegal aliens who otherwise would evade detection by conventional security methods, the cameras have been a big aid in nabbing people who were trying to reach the interior United States, De La Vina said.

The cameras rotate nearly 360 degrees while scanning an area up to a mile away and are equipped with zoom lenses. They project images on small television screens in a computer room at the Paso del Norte bridge in downtown El Paso.

An agent controlling the equipment can switch one of the pictures to a larger screen for added detail. Though colors cannot be seen, light- or dark-colored clothing and sex can be determined to help pinpoint the person being sought.

Once aliens are spotted, the control agent dispatches officers to the area for apprehension.

"They've really helped us to pin down aliens," De La Vina said. "They allow an agent at the control headquarters to keep an eye on the aliens while other agents are en route to pick them up. We really can monitor their (aliens') movement."

El Paso was chosen as a test site for the monitoring project early last year because of its unique location, De La Vina said.

Just across the Rio Grande from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, the area is "special because it's two cities back to back," he said.

"With the El Paso area, the distance between the river and downtown is so short you only have just a few minutes, if that long, to effect an apprehension," he said. "Unless you're right there, the aliens are going to mingle into the crowd quickly."

"The cameras give us a warning — time to get to the area before the aliens have hit downtown," he said.

De La Vina said the "success story" of the cameras in the El Paso area has prompted the Border Patrol to consider placing them in other sectors.

Language is barrier for Vietnamese even in boomtown

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Since leaving Saigon in April 1975, Dr. Dam Trung Phap has seen firsthand the successes and setbacks experienced by Southeast Asian refugees in the United States.

Two daughters are honor students at Southern Methodist University, and one was recently named to the Mortar Board, a group of the top one percent of student scholars and leaders. But not long ago, Dam saw the more disheartening side when he attended a Cambodian wedding party for two school dropouts. "The bride was 16. The groom was 17," said Dam. "They had decided just to start a family and see if the next generation could do better."

"For every success story, we have three or four failures." Some Vietnamese refugees have prospered in Dallas, like Dam, former dean of the language school at the University of Saigon and now coordinator of an "English as a Second Language" program in the Dallas public school system.

But in the shadow of the skyline of a city that has come to symbolize opportunity, many among the 35,000 or so Vietnamese continue to live in poverty. Just blocks from downtown is a 100-square-block area of east Dallas filled with dilapidated shacks, renovated houses, rundown apartment buildings and Vietnamese refugees.

Vacant lots are common, some recently cleared to attest to a burgeoning growth through new apartments and condominiums not far from the shelled-out buildings that give the appearance of the war zone the Asians left behind.

It's a high-crime area, police say, where Vietnamese fear the police and remain passive to criminals, although authorities say a younger generation is beginning to fight back, and gangs are on the rise.

To Dam, there is no secret to success — or failure — for Vietnamese, Cambodians and Laotians who have come here since the American military withdrawal from Southeast Asia. It is language.

"Even people with college degrees cannot get jobs, because they don't have the communicative skills," he said. "Speaking is the easier skill. Reading and writing are much more difficult."

In the heart of the east Dallas area are a few Vietnamese restaurants and markets, a Vietnamese pool hall two doors from an electric train trade and repair shop that has been there 20 years.

Asian children are everywhere, playing in school playgrounds, faces peering from apartment windows. Cambodian women in native sarongs watch toddlers playing in the courtyards of rundown apartments.

At the Indo-China Market, boxes of ginger root, limes and vegetables stand amid shelves stacked to the ceiling with oriental delicacies.

They Khourn was bagging bean sprouts from a box behind the counter, watching his 5-year-old son play behind a stack of 50-pound sacks of rice.

Khourn has been in the United States eight years, in Dallas for five. For the past two years, he has run the grocery, working 10 hours a day to feed his family.

Many refugees work for minimum wage or less at menial jobs, get laid off and don't know about unemployment benefits, Khourn said.

"Sometimes agencies, they don't care, because there are too many people," he said.

Families cluster together, maybe three to a two-bedroom apartment.

"One family, one bedroom, they cannot pay rent," Khourn said, adding that it can cost $400 to $500 a month for one bedroom, even in east Dallas.

Landlords and apartment managers are slow to act to repair substandard conditions, doors without locks, broken windows and faucets that run constantly, said Dallas police Cpl. Ronald Cowart, who was appointed the first official police liaison for Asian refugees in October.

Cowart, a Vietnam veteran, said outsiders will walk through apartment complexes, rattling doorknobs to see if the units are open. They will walk right into apartments and take valuables belonging to the refugees.

The refugees, Cowart said, don't know who to complain to, or they are wary of police, particularly the Cambodians.

"They carry a great deal of fear of the police with them," Cowart said.

"If you can't speak English. If you don't know the cultures. If you don't know where to go for your resources. If you don't know what hospital, what clinic to go to, this beautiful, warm city of Dallas can be a very cold, desolate place," he said.

"Especially if you're stuck in a below code, deplorable housing unit with virtually no services available whatsoever. But they are survivors. They've overcome barriers that are totally incomprehensible to other people. They don't realize what they've come through," he said.

"Even this poverty in east Dallas is a luxury to them," Cowart said.

An estimated 65,000 Vietnam refugees live now in the Houston-Galveston area, filling jobs as varied as fishermen and physicians, restaurateurs and shopping center developers.

Vietnamese occupy a crumbling public housing development and mansions on Houston's west side. They are both chauffeur and chauffeured, criminals and cops.

But nearly all, says Pauline Van Thoh of the Vietnamese Association, would like to return to their homeland.

"Any Vietnamese always have hope to return to our native land, either to visit or to live. We can visit from France, or from Canada, but not from the U.S.," she said. "They don't have the power to do it, but everybody is hoping to get country away from the Communist yoke."

"Lots of the immigrants expect to go back and retake Vietnam," said Glinda Jo, a Vietnam native. "A lot of them spend time weaving fantasies about going back."

Nguyen Van Nam, a former colonel in the army of South Vietnam, is sure one day his country will be free.

"I think there will be an armed revolution against the communist government," he said. "The resistance against is growing against the communists. They will win. The war has never ended. It goes on."

For some, this faith that they will return has affected their assimilation into American society.

"Many of them say 'why learn English' if we're going back?" said Ms. Jo.

Vietnamese fishermen collided with Texas fishermen in Galveston Bay in the late 1970s and the wounds only now are healing. The Viet fishermen, helped by government loans, bought shrimp boats and began fishing waters that already were stretched to support the American fleet of shrimpers.

Violence flared. One Viet boat was burned. The Ku Klux Klan joined the controversy and rode on some of the American boats wearing hooded robes.

A federal judge stepped in and issued a restraining order against the KKK. City officials in Seabrook and Kemah worked to calm the problem. And some fishermen left for other work.

Col. Nam was leader of the Vietnamese fishermen and remains their principal spokesman although he now operates a washateria.

"We still have individual problems, but not like the big problems in 1980, 1981," he said.

Nam's $35,000 shrimp boat was sunk by Hurricane Alicia and he sold it, while it sat on the bottom, for $3,500. But he said there is still about 200 Vietnam fishermen along the Texas coast. Many, he said, are struggling.

"Last season was a bad season," he noted.

Many of the Southeast Asians in the Dallas area, Cowart said, are basically peasants who never knew confrontation until the close of the war.

"They're very passive," he said. "That passive tradition and culture of theirs lends them to be very susceptible to crime. People come in there and find them easy pickings."

As the younger immigrants get used to system, gain confidence in the neighborhood, some are beginning to fight back, he said.

"On the negative side of that, you'll find gangs that are starting to appear," Cowart said. "After awhile, they're learning to pick up a stick. One thing we fear is somebody saying, 'I've had enough of this and now it's my turn.'"

Many of the refugees have risen above east Dallas, or were never placed there to begin with.

Khai Van Nguyen, 34, lives with his wife and 5-year-old daughter, Thao, in a small apartment in north Dallas, a giant economic leap from the slums.

He repairs electronic parts for aircraft engines and studies electronics, resuming the two years of college in Saigon that he gave up when he went into the military in 1972.

"The big problem is the language barrier," said Nguyen, who learned English in 1973 when he came to the United States for pilot training.

Many of his friends at work, Nguyen said, do a good job. "But they don't get the promotions." He asked his supervisor about it and was told they just don't have command of language to get the promotions.

"What we're trying to do over here, most people are trying to make a living, because when they come here they have no money," said Nguyen, who had a house of his own in Saigon.

Loan Le has a house of her own, in Euless, a suburb west of the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

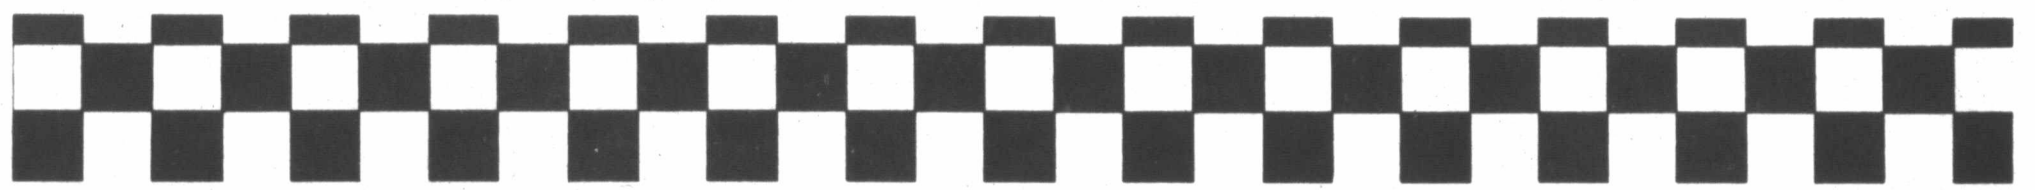

"We're building a beautiful tomorrow," says the city's slogan on a sign at the entrance to the community of grassy hills and well-kept lawns.

Ms. Le, who taught school in Saigon, is now a secretary to Lou Rudolf at Catholic Charities. She has great hope for the new generation.

"Generally, children just forget it. They can adapt easily," she said. "Children will answer the phone, go to the door, and they will act as translators."

Not far from Euless, in the city of Hurst, Yen and Dong Nguyen live with their three older brothers.

Their father, a shrimper, lives with their mother and the rest of the family in Phuoc Tinh on the coast of South Vietnam.

Mexican tourist lakes could dry up

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Zempoala Lakes, a major tourist attraction southeast of the capital, could dry up in the next 10 years because of widespread destruction of forests, an Agriculture Department official says.

The stream-fed lakes and surrounding area, almost a mile above sea level and 30 miles southeast of Mexico City, have been turned into a national park.

Delfino Gomez Pacheco, a technical supervisor of the Agriculture Department, said the area's water table is dropping because of excessive cutting of the region's timber by lumber companies and peasants clearing land for planting corn.

YOUNG SIGNS — Pampa High senior Rodney Young (center) prepares to sign a basketball letter of intent to attend Eastern New Mexico in Portales. Looking on are Harvester head coach Garland Nichols (right) and Eastern head coach Larry Riley Young, an all-district and all-regional performer, led the Harvesters in scoring this season with a 17.4 ppg average while pulling down six rebounds per game. In a dozen district games, Young averaged 18.9 points and 9-1 rebounds per game. "We lose four starters, so we face some re-construction next season," Riley said. "Rodney comes in at a good time. He should make us a good college guard. He has a good attitude and that's what we're looking for." (Staff Photo)

Nuggets turn back Spurs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio Spurs Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said all along there was nothing to the home court advantage talk surrounding the San Antonio-Denver NBA playoff series.

He was right. Tuesday night, the Nuggets bested the Spurs 115-112 in San Antonio, ending a 15-game losing streak in the Spurs arena. Last Saturday, San Antonio won 113-111 in Denver, breaking an 8-game losing stretch there.

Tuesday's victory gave the Nuggets a 2-1 advantage in the best-of-five series. The next game in the Western Conference playoff is Friday.

"I hope this takes care of that home court thinking," Fitzsimmons said after Tuesday's game. "I always said there was never a home court advantage in this series."

Denver Coach Doug Moe admitted he was concerned about his team's losing streak in San Antonio.

"But now it's over. I knew it would take a great effort to end it," he said.

The Nuggets were paced on the scoreboard by Alex English who finished with 27 points. Calvin Natt added 21.

"The Spurs played brutal, but we are used to that," English said in the locker room. "This team has a lot of heart and we are scrappy. I think we can win again Friday."

Denver led 60-51 at the half, capitalizing on 15 turnovers and a dismal 53 percent Spurs shooting average from the free-throw line.

The Spurs stayed sluggish through the third quarter, falling behind 94-79 by the end of the period.

But the home team came to life in the fourth period, scoring 20 points to the Nuggets' 6 in the first 4 minutes, 35 seconds of the stanza.

John Paxson led the charge, scoring 10 of his total 16 points in the final 12 minutes. But he failed on a 3-point bucket at the buzzer that would have thrown the game into overtime.

George Gervin led the Spurs with 30 points. Mike Mitchell and Artis Gilmore had 23 apiece.

"It's so difficult to come back after being down so many points," Gilmore said. "Denver kept their poise when we made our comeback, but remember they are the (Midwest) division champs."

Borger slips by Pampa, 3-2

A surprise squeeze play in the eighth inning gave the Borger Bulldogs a 3-2 win over the Pampa Harvesters in a District 1-4A baseball action Tuesday at Harvester Field.

Matt Robinson's winning run broke up a pitcher's duel between Pampa's Brent Cryer and Borger's Jeff Holley. It was the second time this season the Harvesters had lost a one-run decision to the Bulldogs. On March 26, Borger sneaked away with a 4-3 win.

With the score tied 2-2 all at the end of the regulation seven innings, Robinson led off the eighth with a single and moved to second on a bloop single by Don Cofer. A sacrifice bunt by Cullen Robinette moved Robinson to third. It looked like the Harvesters would get out of the inning without any damage done after Alfredo Escobar lined to second baseman Juan Soto for the second out and Cryer got two quick strikes on Oscar Hernandez. However, Hernandez faked a bunt on a pitch outside the strike zone and Robinson slid home with the go-ahead run.

In the bottom of the eighth, Dwayne Roberts singled with one out, but was thrown out trying to steal second. Wade Howard bounced out to end the game.

Borger is in third place in the district standings with a 6-3 record. Pampa is now 2-8 in district and 6-12 overall.

Borger scored runs in the first and second innings to take a 2-0 lead, but that was all Cryer allowed until the eighth.

The Harvesters tied things at 2-2 in the bottom of the fourth on an RBI groundball by Trace Robbins and a run-scoring single by Todd Hardin. Holley, however, scattered four hits the rest of the way to pick up the win. He allowed seven hits altogether while striking out eleven and walking one.

Cryer gave up 10 hits while striking out five and walking one. Ron Williams led Borger's hitting attack with two doubles and a single. Roberts had two base hits for the Harvesters.

Pampa hosts Dumas at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

Chief's Crown in running for Derby

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Chief's Crown will try to match Spectacular Bid's performance of six years ago, beginning Thursday in the Blue Grass Stakes, which will be the last major stepping stone to the Kentucky Derby May 4.

In 1979, Spectacular Bid, the 2-year-old champion of the previous year, beat three rivals in the 1 1/4-mile Blue Grass.

Chief's Crown, the 1984 2-year-old champion, will also meet only three rivals.

Blazers take series lead over Mavericks

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — More and more, the Portland Trail Blazers are getting the ball into Clyde Drexler's hands — and the 6-foot-7 leaping sensation says his team couldn't come up with a better game plan.

"That gets me involved and it gets other people involved," Drexler said Tuesday night after recording a "triple double" in the Blazers' 122-109 National Basketball Association playoff victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

"When we do get penetration, the shots are so simple," he said. "Most of them are dunks."

Drexler wound up with 20 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists as the Blazers came from behind in the second half to take a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five opening-round matchup. Portland can clinch the series and move on to meet the Los Angeles Lakers with a victory at home Thursday night.

Portland Coach Jack Ramsay is no one-on-one fan, but he has a simple explanation for spreading the court and giving the ball to Drexler: It works.

"Somebody is going to get open," Ramsay said. "And Clyde is doing an excellent job of knowing when to pass."

The Mavericks, deadly from the outside throughout most of the game, cooled off considerably in the final minutes, when Portland wrapped up the victory in the first non-overtime game of the three playoff contests.

"These teams are so well matched the team that plays the best in the last four minutes is going to win," Drexler said.

Portland's reserves outscored their Dallas counterparts 33-11.

"That definitely was a big factor," said Kiki Vandeweghe, who led the balanced Blazers with 24 points. "We've got Jim Paxson, Mychal Thompson and Steve Colter coming off the bench. They could start for just about anybody. When they come in, we don't lose anything."

Dallas' Mark Aguirre said rebounding was the difference.

"We didn't shoot that bad," he said, "but when they miss — a team as good as Portland — if you give them second shots, they'll kill you."

Dallas grabbed a 62-56 halftime lead behind hot outside shooting by Aguirre and Rolando Blackman, and the Mavericks stretched the margin to nine points on two occasions in the third quarter.

But Portland scored 12 unanswered points, including 10 straight by Carr, to take an 81-78 advantage with 4:11 to go in the period.

"We needed it," Carr said. "Somebody had to do it. Next time it will be somebody else."

The Mavericks took the lead one last time at 100-99 on a three-point play by Sam Perkins with 7:36 seconds to play. Portland scored six straight points to regain control.

Vandeweghe put the game out of reach with 10 straight Portland points, the last a 20-footer to make it 117-106 with 45 seconds to play.

Carr scored 19 for Portland, while Darnell Valentine added 16. Aguirre and Blackman scored 30 apiece for Dallas.

Aguirre had 24 at halftime. It was the first time Portland has "held" Blackman under 40 points in three playoff games.

Cubs' pitcher Rick Sutcliffe slides safely into late throw. second as Pirates' shortstop Bill Almon takes a

NL roundup

Sutcliffe, Sandberg lead Cubs past Pirates, 5-0

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

Once again, the Chicago Cubs are riding the Sutcliffe & Sandberg express. "He really looked determined before the game," Cubs Manager Jim Frey said after Sutcliffe, last year's National League Cy Young winner, scattered eight hits and blasted a long home run Tuesday night to lead Chicago past the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0.

Sandberg, the NL's Most Valuable Player last season, was batting just .143 and had not driven home a run this year before he homered in the fourth inning. "I'm glad he got a hit," Frey said. "He's in one of those streaks right now where you just have to fight your way through it."

Sutcliffe touched off a two-run third inning with a single against Mike Bielecki, 1-1, and then homered in the fourth.

Two batters after Sutcliffe homered, Sandberg unloaded. In other NL games, Montreal beat Philadelphia 5-4 in 10 innings, St. Louis trimmed New York 8-3, Houston downed Cincinnati 6-4, Atlanta tripped San Diego 4-2 and San Francisco nipped Los Angeles 2-1. Braves 4, Padres 2.

Rick Mahler, the top winner in the major leagues, raised his record to 4-0 by winning his fourth start of the season. Mahler went the first seven innings, allowing five hits, and Bruce Sutter finished up for his third save.

Dale Murphy, leading the majors in home runs and runs batted in, doubled home an Atlanta run in the first inning. That brought his RBI count to 22 in 13 games this year.

The loser, Mark Thurmond, is 0-2. Giants 2, Dodgers 1.

What does Fernando Valenzuela have to do to win?

Valenzuela has not allowed an earned run in 33 innings this season, yet saw his record slide to 2-2 when San Francisco scored twice in the fifth on a two-run error by Dodgers shortstop Dave Anderson.

It was Valenzuela's ninth loss in his last 10 decisions at Candlestick Park.

Mike Krukow, 2-0, pitched well for the Giants, scattering seven hits while striking out 10.

Astros

6, Reds 4
Kevin Bass homered for the second straight game and also singled twice, driving in four runs at the Astrodome. Bass has two home runs this season, matching his 1984 total.

Bass cracked RBI singles in the first and third innings and hit his two-run homer in the fifth off loser John Stuper, 2-1.

Houston rookie Ron Mathis won his first major-league game.

April 25, 1985

In the coming year you will explore several new areas where you have never trod before. The experience will be rewarding and add to your mental growth.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You might be tempted to judge a little when it comes to telling the truth today. Don't! The Matchmaker wheel reveals your compatibility to all signs, as well as showing you which signs you are best suited to romantically. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Friendships cannot be bought today, so don't deceive yourself into thinking this is the way to get others to like you. All you have to do is just be yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Pals will come to your aid today but you must let them do it their way and in their own good time. If you try to dictate terms, they'll exit.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Switching horses in midstream in search of greener pastures will not only get you off course, but you could lose already-covered ground.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today you could be too easily influenced by others. With the least amount of discouragement, you might lay aside workable ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not attempt to wrest control of a situation from the hands of one presently doing a competent job. Interference will gum things up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) To get desirable results in handling a complicated assignment, you must use logical procedures. Do not act upon impulse.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be careful today that you don't oversell yourself on something a wise friend thinks is of dubious value. He's apt to be right.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In your involvements with friends today, you must be extra careful not to show partiality or play favorites. Treat each pal equally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Delegating tasks you know you could take care of yourself is a precarious procedure today. Even if you get someone to do your job, he's not apt to do it properly.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Treat your prized possessions with respect today. If you must transport valuables in your care, you'd be wise to lock them in your trunk.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your responsibilities toward your family should take precedence over all personal activities today. Think of them first, not last.

A giant has fallen

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The death of former U.S. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., the "country lawyer" who presided over the Watergate hearings that led to the resignation of a president, has cost the nation a "towering historical figure" who championed the Constitution.

Ervin, 88, died of respiratory failure Tuesday at North Carolina Baptist Hospital's Bowman Gray Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Roger Rollman. Kidney failure contributed to his death, Rollman said.

A critic of the civil rights movement and a supporter of individual civil liberties during his 20 years in the Senate, Ervin was hailed by former Gov. Jim Hunt as a man who "loved the Constitution more than any man alive today."

"He protected it during its time of greatest crisis and helped write history for our state and nation," Hunt said. "He will truly be recorded as a towering historical figure and all North Carolina will be proud of him."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who called Ervin his mentor, adviser on constitutional matters and friend, said, "A giant has fallen... dedication. I've never known a more remarkable American than Sam Ervin."

U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica, who presided over trials involving the break-in at Democratic party headquarters in 1972 and the subsequent White House coverup, said: "I was very fond of him and admired his patriotism, his dedication to his work and above all, his courage."

Ervin's strict interpretation of the Constitution defied easy political classification. He sided with liberals and conservatives in becoming one of the chamber's most respected authorities on Constitutional law.

Ervin battled affirmative action proposals, the Equal Rights Amendment, surveillance of dissenters during the Vietnam War and efforts to return prayer to public schools.

For him, it was all the same battle — preserving the Constitution.

Ervin's independence made him a natural choice when Senate leaders sought a chairman for the sensitive and potentially explosive hearings on Watergate in the summer of 1973. To Ervin, the scandal that led to the resignation of President Richard Nixon was the nation's biggest tragedy since the Civil War.

"In the Civil War, there were many redeeming features of sacrifice and valor displayed on both sides," he said. "But there was no sacrifice or spirit of sacrifice, or no valor, really, displayed on the part of those responsible for the Watergate hearings, except to sacrifice their character." However, he added, "We do have this encouragement. We were able to weather the Watergate affair with all our essential institutions of government intact."

During the Watergate hearings, "Senator Sam" T-shirts and buttons sprouted across the nation. But Ervin, his bushy eyebrows telegraphing moral indignation and blue-gray eyes twinkling at the onset of a joke, insisted he was "just an old country lawyer."

Ervin was born Sept. 27, 1896, in the foothills town of Morganton, one of 10 children.

His father, Samuel J. Ervin Sr., was a self-taught lawyer who "hated the oppression of government, and I guess instilled in me the idea that, after all, the greatest threat to our liberties comes from government, not from others."

At the height of his fame and popularity in 1974, Ervin retired to his hometown. He said staying in the Senate until he was 84 would be asking too much of God and the people of North Carolina.

He wrote three books: "The Whole Truth: The Watergate Conspiracy," "Humor of a Country Lawyer" and "Preserving the Constitution: The Autobiography of Sen. Sam Ervin."

'Cosby Show' seems to be changing prime-time landscape

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Cosby Show," which brought a big smile to NBC by helping turn around its ratings fortunes, also seems to be changing the face of prime-time television for next season.

"I think you'll see more sitcoms emphasized, at the expense of action-adventure," Dave Poltrack, CBS vice president for research, said Tuesday after the A.C. Nielsen Co.'s season-ending prime-time ratings results were released, reflecting significant changes in network viewing habits.

Last season, no comedy was in the Top 10. This season, "Cosby" and NBC's "Family Ties" were Top 10 shows, while NBC's "Cheers" (12th) and "Night Court" (19th) and CBS' "Newhart" (16th) and "Kate & Allie" (17th) cracked the Top 20.

two networks, vacated the ratings cellar for the first time in a decade, leaving ABC in third for the first time since the 1974-75 season. CBS was first for the sixth consecutive season with an average rating of 16.9 to NBC's 16.2 and ABC's 15.4.

Only NBC gained audiences from a year ago, while the three-network rating dipped below 50 percent (48.5) for the first time ever. The rating measures the percentage of the nation's 84.9 million tuned to the networks.

ABC's "Dynasty" was the season's No. 1 series, with a 25.0 rating, edging its rival nighttime soap, CBS' "Dallas," which had ruled the roost three of the past four seasons. "Dallas" averaged a 24.7 rating.

"The Cosby Show," the highest rated new show since "Mork & Mindy" six seasons ago and the most popular series since January, finished the full 1984-85 season as the No. 3 show, with a 24.2 rating.

The rest of the Top 10, in descending order, were: "60 Minutes," "Family Ties," "The A-Team," "Simon & Simon," "Murder, She Wrote," "Knots Landing," and tied for 10th, "Falcon Crest" and "Crazy Like a Fox," all CBS programs except for NBC's "The A-Team."

Attorney: outbursts hurt client's case

PALO PINTO, Texas (AP) — A 25-year-old man sentenced to death by injection for the death of a Dublin minister might have received a life term if he had not made repeated courtroom outbursts, a defense attorney says.

A state district court jury took less than an hour Tuesday afternoon to condemn Robert Michael Purtell to death for killing the Rev. John H. Basham more than a year ago.

Defense attorney Ken Tarlton said he believes the outbursts "shot us. It just blew it sky-high. We had a shot on life (sentence)."

Purtell, a Lowell, Mass., native, took word of the death sentence calmly, with a nod of his head, but three times earlier made outbursts in the courtroom.

One of the outbursts was witnessed by the seven-man, five-woman jury, who convicted him of capital murder Monday, before they were hurriedly ushered out of the courtroom while Purtell carried on his tirade for 10 more minutes.

"Yeah, I know. I didn't do a damn thing," Purtell shouted, addressing special prosecutor Mac Smith, who was delivering his closing argument in the punishment phase. "Are you afraid of letting them hear about his criminal convictions and that he was capable of sexual assault?"

Purtell referred to Basham, who was killed Feb. 7, 1984 inside his camper van along Interstate 20. Purtell maintained Basham sexually assaulted him and he and a companion acted in self-defense when they killed Basham.

District Judge Jim Wright sternly warned Purtell many times to take his seat and keep quiet. Purtell sat, shaking his head and appeared on the verge of hysterics.

"These two attorneys have done you an excellent job," Wright said. "You're not doing any good for your case, sir... If you do that again, sir... I'll have you removed. 'You're going to sit here and keep your mouth shut, sir... Do you understand?'" Wright continued.

Purtell, who was restrained by Palo Pinto County Sheriff John Turpin, replied, "It's hard to..."

Tarlton, who placed his head on the defense table after the verdict was read, said he was surprised by the jury's decision and will appeal the conviction.
