Pampa woman indicted on charges of child sexual abuse

Gray County grand jurors have indicted 15 people, including a 31-year-old Pampa woman who is charged on four counts of sexually abusing children.

Grand jurors and Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton prepared 36 charges in a day-long session Friday, but just 21 charges were filed with the district clerk because the grand jury foreman forgot to sign the second page of 15 cases.

If his schedule permits, District Judge Grainger McIlhany may make a special trip from Wheeler to Pampa early next week for the formal signing of the remaining indictments, Hamilton said.

Gloria Dawn Killough, 31, 631 S. Ballard, also known as Gloria Dawn Vargas, was indicted in connection with four charges of sexually abusing children.

The indictments allege that the Pampa mother engaged in "deviate sexual intercourse" with both a boy and a girl on March 8. Both of the children with whom Killough allegedly had sex were under age 17, according to the indictments.

Judge McIlhany set a $3,000 bond on each of the four sex abuse charges returned against the Pampa woman Friday. Killough was free on bond Saturday.

Grand jurors also indicted Kenneth Alan Taylor, 23, of 1005 S. Dwight, on a charge of sexual assault of a child. The indictment alleges that Taylor assaulted a young boy on April 6. Judge McIlhany set a $3,000 bond for Taylor, and the suspect remained in custody in the county jail Saturday.

Randy Howard Williams, 23, of 621 Lowry, was indicted in connection with the Feb. 28 shooting of a neighbor, Steven Leo Luck, 30. Grand jurors indicted Williams on a charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Bond was set at $15,000. Williams was free on bond Saturday.

Police have said Williams blasted a retreating Luck with a shotgun twice, after a fist fight between the two men outside of their homes.

Luck survived the shooting but suffered buckshot wounds along his backside "from his head to his ankles," a hospital spokesman said at the time.

The grand jury delayed consideration of an unrelated shooting that happened the same day. Defense witnesses scheduled to testify in the shooting death of convicted rapist Loyd Dean Remy, 23, didn't show up Friday, the second time the defense has failed to produce the witnesses, Hamilton said.

Michael Eldon Marsh, 28, 532 S. Gillespie, is charged with murder in Remy's death.

Marsh and Remy had been drinking and arguing on the fatal evening, police have said. The suspect ended the dispute inside Marsh's home about 1:30 a.m. when he shot Remy once in the chest with a .22-caliber rifle, authorities have said.

When he was shot to death, Remy was free on an appeal bond posted on a Jan. 23 conviction for the rape of a teenage Pampa housewife.

Marsh has been free on bond. Grand jurors did indict a woman charged with renting videotape players and movies and then selling the rental property.

Mary Ann Whitehurst, 39, who listed a Pampa address of 515 E. Murphy, was indicted on two counts of theft by taking.

The indictments allege that on March 22 and March 23, Whitehurst rented six VCR players and 16 movie cassettes from Pampa businesses. The woman and her boyfriend then sold the rented

Tax burden in Pampa among best

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Pampa school, city and county taxes may seem high for local residents, but the tax burden here is low compared to those in Borger, Amarillo, Tulia, and many other cities in Texas.

According to a list compiled by the Texas Research League, Pampa ranks 254th out of 336 taxing entities (with more than 5,000 residents) in the amount of property tax paid per $100 of market value. This breaks the tax burden down into city, school, county, college and hospital district tax rates.

According to the list, which used a ratio of 81 percent of market value, Pampa residents pay $1.19 per $100 valuation. This breaks down into 52 cents for school tax, 52 cents for city tax and 14 cents for county tax. Pampa residents pay no hospital or college tax.

Borger residents do, though. Borger, where residents must pay $1.65 per $100 valuation, is ranked 75th on the tax burden list. Public school taxes there are 82 cents, while city taxes are 45 cents, county taxes 23 cents and the Frank Phillips College tax takes up 14 cents. There is no hospital tax.

Tulia, with a tax burden of $1.91, ranks even higher at 31st. The school tax takes up 87 cents while the city takes up 28 cents. The hospital tax rate is 10 cents while the county tax is 42 cents. Tulia residents also pay 23 cents in miscellaneous taxes. They pay no college tax.

Dumas is one area town with a lower tax burden than Pampa. Its ranking, 335th, is the second lowest on the list. Dumas residents pay a total of 73 cents per $100 valuation, with three cents for a city tax, 48 cents for the school, 19 cents for the county and a little more than one penny (1.6 cents) for the hospital. They pay no college tax.

Perryton is ranked 83rd and has a total tax burden of $1.62. This includes a 43 cent city tax, 65 cent school tax, 12 cent hospital tax and a 38 cent county tax. With a total tax rate of $1.31, Dalhart is ranked 195. Their city tax rate is 32 cents, school rate is 67 cents and county rate is 31 cents. Canyon is ranked 174, with a total tax rate of $1.37.

The city with the lowest tax burden is Brenham where residents pay a total tax rate of 70 cents. It has a 32 cent school tax, 19 cent city tax, a 15 cent college tax and a 3 1/2 penny college tax.

The highest tax burden is in Crystal City, where residents hand over $2.30 per $100 valuation. While the city has no hospital tax and only a three cent college tax, the school tax is 95 cents and the city tax is 85 cents. The county tax is 46 cents.

Police stage raid on camp of survivalists

THREE BROTHERS, Ark. (AP) — Police with camouflage clothing and blackened faces tightened their noose around the remote encampment of a band of self-styled Christian survivalists Saturday, searching some buildings and hoping to flush out their leader.

The officers moved cautiously to avoid a confrontation and out of fear the compound had been mined, an FBI agent said.

Special weapons and tactics teams moved in and secured two clusters of buildings and searched them, seizing some items, said FBI agent Ray McElhane. The buildings, small sheds and houses outside the main part of the compound, were unoccupied and the teams met no resistance, he said.

"The main compound has not been secured," the FBI agent said. He said a search warrant for the main group of buildings and an arrest warrant for James Ellison, 44, spiritual leader of the group, had not been served. "We want to execute the two warrants without any confrontation and we think we shall," he said.

He said officers were taking precautions because CSA members remained in the main buildings.

During the night, caravans of police cars had patrolled dirt roads around the rustic headquarters of the white-supremacist group known as the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord. State police crouched in the hardwood forest as officers toting automatic rifles manned roadblocks.

Ellison shed a Texas congregation in 1976 to lead a group to the woods here near the Missouri border and build a commune of scripture-quoting, gun-carrying, back-to-nature soldier-survivalists.

As police encircled the 224-acre commune, agents continued negotiations to try to persuade Ellison to surrender.

Crime rate falls, but assaults increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reported crime decreased 3 percent last year, including a 4 percent drop in murders, but rapes and aggravated assaults rose at the fastest pace since 1980, the FBI said Saturday.

The bureau's Uniform Crime Report, based on preliminary figures, said the overall decline in reported crime last year, compared to 1983, continued a downward trend that started in 1982.

But during the fourth quarter, from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31, reported crime rose 2 percent compared to the same three-month period in 1983, the FBI said. The quarterly increase was the first since 1981.

The figures are based on a compilation of crimes reported by nearly 13,000 state and local police agencies around the country.

While there was a 4 percent decrease in murders and a 5 percent decline in the number of robberies reported last year, rapes jumped by 6 percent and aggravated assaults went up by 4 percent. Thus, the net overall rate of violent crime showed no change from 1983.

The 3 percent decrease in overall crime from 1983 to 1984 followed a 7 percent drop from 1982 to 1983 and a 3 percent decline from 1981 to 1982. But forcible rapes and aggravated assaults rose at the faster pace than at any other time since 1980.

Declines in the overall Uniform Crime Index, however, were recorded by each of the nation's four geographic regions, the bureau said.

Cities with populations over 50,000 registered a 2 percent decline in overall crime last year, while those jurisdictions outside metropolitan areas reported a 5 percent decrease. The suburban and rural areas showed decreases of 3 and 5 percent respectively.

Mob of South African blacks kill woman, child

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A mob of blacks set fire to a mixed-race woman Saturday and then torched her home, killing the woman and her 3-year-old son and badly burning her two other young children, police said.

Arsonists elsewhere in the eastern Cape Province poured gasoline on a garbage truck Saturday and tried to set it on fire, but soldiers arrived and fired on the crowd, wounding one black man, a spokesman at police headquarters in Pretoria said.

The spokesman said that those were the two major incidents reported in the riot-torn black and mixed-race townships of the eastern Cape after weeks of violence arising mainly from black anger over the white-minority government's policy of apartheid, or racial segregation.

More than 300 blacks have died in nine months of unrest.

The mixed-race woman and her child were killed in Bontrug township outside the eastern Cape town of Kirkwood, the police spokesman said. A crowd of blacks came to her dwelling, which houses both black and mixed-race families, seeking a black man. When the woman said she did not know the man, the crowd attacked her, he said.

The house was then set ablaze, killing the 3-year-old and seriously injuring her two other children, ages 6 and 7, who were still inside, he said.

Assaults by blacks against other blacks considered collaborators with the white-minority government have increased in recent weeks, along with arson attacks against homes of black officials and policemen.

In Cape Town, a white man attacked by a black mob Thursday was reported in serious condition with burns over 70 percent of his body. The man, Erasmus Jacobs, 19, was transferred to Tygerberg Hospital near Cape Town on Friday night from Port Elizabeth Provincial Hospital in the eastern Cape.

Initially, police said the man was attacked in the white township of Uitenhage in the eastern Cape in the first recent reported attack against a white in a white area.

But a witness said Friday he saw a white man set afire after emerging from an illegal bar in a black township outside Uitenhage, near where police shot dead 20 black marchers a month ago.

The attack on Jacobs occurred the same day that an inquiry into the shootings of the marchers heard that 17 of the victims were shot in the back.

President P.W. Botha said Friday that black radicals are determined to make South Africa ungovernable, to pave the way for a Communist takeover. He said the United Democratic Front anti-apartheid coalition was leading the campaign on behalf of the outlawed African National Congress.

Texas' conservative trend worries ACLU

AUSTIN (AP) - State and national Civil Liberties Union leaders warned their followers Saturday there is a rising trend toward conservatism in Texas, particularly in the current Legislature.

"Everyone is waiting to see which direction the state government heads," said Wade Henderson, associate director for the American Civil Liberties Union in Washington.

"Will Texas politics become a surrogate of the national government, that is the big issue," Henderson told a legislative conference marking the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Texas Civil Liberties Union.

"There is a sense in the Legislature of the shifting political scene," said Gara LaMarche, executive director of ACLU. "We will call it the ascendancy of conservatism. It has made everybody scared, particularly the progressive, liberal forces."

"I think if there is one factor troubling this session it is the relative meekness and silences of these sources," he said.

"We need to speak up, to speak up for fundamental balances and due process," LaMarche said.

Former state Sen. Lloyd Doggett, the unsuccessful Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, said he thought civil liberties changes would be slow.

Don't challenge the storm

I'm a real coward when it comes to tornadoes. Nothing compares with the destructive forces of nature in inspiring awe and fear in my soul. People from less-volatile regions don't know about the violence and fury contained in our thunderstorms. To them, rain is something that evenly falls from gentle cloud formations on a regular basis. They don't see anything to fear in a rainstorm.

When we get a good rain in Panhandle, however, it's usually accompanied by high winds, hail and the threat of tornadoes, the most destructive force in nature.

Yes, it's that time of year again. As this is written, the area is under a tornado "watch." A watch means conditions are favorable for production of tornadoes. A warning means that a tornado has been confirmed on the ground by a reliable source.

Just remember this about tornadoes: A "watch," means "look out," and a "warning" means, "duck."

Now's the time that daytime heat and warm, moist air from the south mixes with cool air shooting down from the north to give us some truly evil storms.

Huge, ominous clouds pop up regularly in the evenings and churn up into the atmosphere to 50,000 feet. A giant Panhandle thunderstorm is an awesome sight.

I have seen the skies here turn from a clear blue one minute into a solid wall of black and darkness, the next, I have seen black, gray and even green wall clouds. The green in a thunderstorm is an indication of hail, they say.

I was in the middle of the great flood in the Canyon area several years ago. Two people died under the resulting wall of water. It reportedly rained about six inches in half an hour in Hunsley Hills in Canyon, where as luck would have it, I happened to be.

I recall the storm here several springs back. We reportedly had six tornadoes on the ground at the same time all around Pampa. Somehow, the city was spared, but the new Halliburton complex east of town was wiped out.

That was one of the most wicked-looking storms I have ever seen. While the sirens blared for about two hours and emergency teams scrambled bravely to keep us informed, I quivered in my landlord's basement and listened to reports.

I know I'm a news reporter, so I was supposed to be out and about, taking in first-hand information about the storm. I didn't see it that way. I saw no need to risk my yellow neck at the time, as nothing I could do for the next day's paper would serve to benefit anyone, myself included. It wasn't up to me to broadcast warnings to the public.

When it all passed, I did scramble out and do my duty. I hurried to the office, grabbed a camera, and set out with the rest of the staff to record the effects of that monster storm.

To my personal shame, though, I soon found out that many on the staff had been out the entire time. The other staff members had recorded four or five rare shots of different funnel clouds on the ground.

My guilt about being underground at the time was lessened a bit by the knowledge that even personnel at the radio stations, who had the job of broadcasting the warnings, had bailed out for cover.

It was my responsibility to report weather warnings to the public when I worked in broadcasting several years ago. Then, I did my duty and got out and actually chased tornadoes. Once while driving into the area of a violent storm, I got into a solid sheet of golf ball-sized hail. I couldn't see two feet in front of the car, much less see a tornado.

That daredevil duty I have gladly turned over to the broadcasters and emergency teams and Managing Editor Wally Simmons.

Wally said that if a tornado ever hits, he intends to be perched on top of The Pampa News building, taking pictures.

My hat's off to Wally, the Pampa police and other spotters who will be outside challenging the storms this year.

I'm happy to say that my family and I plan to be in a storm shelter, waiting for the storms to pass.

At least I know I'll still be around to take inventory and write about what happened.

The managing editor had told staff members that he would take pictures of the twister as it churned across the town. The victim — a battered camera still in his hand — was recovered near the Wheeler County line early this morning, about six hours after the funnel neatly sucked him off the top of the newspaper building.

Up With People family-oriented production

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

With sex, violence, drugs and disrespect for authority seemingly dominating the movies, television shows and albums aimed at the teen and youth markets, many people long for more family-oriented, cleaner programs.

Such an opportunity exists with the upcoming performance of Up With People scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the M. K. Brown Auditorium.

The two-hour musical will be presented by a cast of 130 young men and women from 20 countries, with music, songs, dances and an opportunity for audience participation in several numbers.

The program proffers a message of optimism, hope, love and harmony, exemplified in the group's theme song, "Up With People!" and a new ballad of what the cast would like to see some day, "Room for Everyone."

An advance promotional team has been in Pampa to publicize the show and to seek housing for the cast members, who will arrive in the city Tuesday afternoon.

The host families will pick up their guests at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at St. Vincent's School.

Anne Jensen, 21, of Honsinge, Denmark, reported Saturday afternoon that beds for all the cast members had been obtained, and she expressed her appreciation to the people willing to accept them into their homes.

Scott Boden, 21, of Rochester, N.Y., said the cast members' being able to stay in the homes of host families offers them a chance to experience different lifestyles, interests, cultures and even languages.

The local performance will feature one of five casts touring the United States and other nations. Youths between the ages of 18 and 25 will represent 20 different countries, including Poland, Thailand, South Africa, Nigeria, Japan, Mexico, European countries and, of course, the United States.

Jensen noted the program on Wednesday night may conflict with attendance at mid-week church meetings. "But though on a church night, the show has such great impact" with its family entertainment and message that she urged residents to attend.

"The message is one all churches can accept," she said.

The Up With People program, while entertaining millions around the world, offers an even greater educational opportunity for the youths who participate in the program and tours, Boden said.

He said he joined the group because he saw it "as a unique opportunity to get to know a whole bunch of people. I also believe in what the show says, in the message it tries to get across."

Boden, who has been a speech communication major for two and a half years at Ithaca College in Ithaca, N.Y., said he enjoys meeting others, staying with the host families and traveling. "Plus, I thought it would be a great deal of fun," he added.

Jensen said she joined the program "because of its educational aspects."

Jensen has attended "something compared to junior college in the USA" in Denmark, "though it's high school in Denmark," she explained. After her tour with Up With People, she probably will start studying international politics at a university in her homeland.

She said she is curious about other countries and lifestyles, about how others live. The program offers "more direct experience than found only in books," she explained.

"And I just like traveling," Jensen stated. "Also, one more thing, to improve my English."

The program "gives me further possibilities in life," she added.

Boden said the Up With People program offers experiential learning for the young people involved in its activities for nearly a year.

"I'm learning a lot more than I would have learned back home from books," Boden said.

The program gives the young people the opportunity to develop social skills, interaction with others, practical aspects of responsibility, he noted.

It also aids personal development, Jensen said. "You learn to sell yourself more, learn how much you can do," she said.

The present cast began its formation in January when the young men and women, selected from interviews following Up With People performances throughout the world, gathered in the headquarters at Tucson, Ariz.

There, during their five-week stay, the cast members went through an orientation program, learned about the founding of Up With People and studied business aspects of the operations. And learned the staging, music and choreography for the musical numbers, along with such technical aspects as sound and lighting.

The cast stayed with host families in the Tucson area, but the members were busy eight to 12 hours a day with their training, not always giving them much time with the hosts, Boden said.

Then they began their tour, which will take them throughout much of the United States, Mexico and Canada and overseas to such countries as Germany, Norway and Sweden before it disbands in December just before Christmas.

There are also four other casts which form during midsummer, with their tour of service going from July to June.

Along the way the cast members and staff conduct interviews after the performances with other young people interested in joining the group and present a slide show about Up With People.

The would-be members fill out an application. There are no musical auditions, but those wanting to perform in the band have to audition, Boden explained.

"You don't have to be necessarily talented to be a member," Jensen observed.

Boden said members are selected for maturity, social skills, ability to communicate, willingness to join the tour, personality, motivation - "the all-around person," he explained. But, he said, persons with physical problems which could be accelerated by the touring and work shouldn't apply.

The cast members, after the interviews, prepare an extensive write-up which is sent on to the headquarters in Tucson. The cast members make the majority of the decisions on prospects for the group, but Tucson has the final selection, Boden said.

Jensen said the organization tries for variety in the cast, based on talents, nationalities, minorities and other qualities. The members have to be between 18 and 25 when they join the cast, she stressed.

Applicants are notified within six to eight weeks whether they have been chosen for Up With People membership.

Cast members have to provide tuition of $5,800 for the program, though some scholarships are available, Jensen said. But the tuition covers only about one-third of the actual expenses involved in the training, touring and production, she said.

The worldwide activities of the group are financed from ticket and product sales, show sponsors, individual and corporate gifts, foundation grants and the tuition fees. Gifts for scholarships, endowment funds and operating expenses are tax deductible.

Up With People was founded in 1968 by its president, J. Blanton Belk, as a non-profit, apolitical, non-sectarian, educational program.

Paschal students will be charged

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Organized crime charges will be sought against nine suspected members of the Legion of Doom — a high school vigilante accused of a series of violent acts against other students, police say.

A report sent to the Tarrant County district attorney's office Friday names nine suspects and includes about 35 offenses, police spokesman Doug Clarke said.

Police said the vigilante group includes honor students and athletes at Paschal High School. An investigation began three weeks ago after a student's car was pipe-bombed and another student's car was vandalized.

Messages declaring the high school "Nazi territory" and emblazoned with red swastikas were left by members of the group at vandalized cars and homes, investigators said.

Clarke said investigators have logged more than 400 hours of overtime since the investigation began March 21.

Mistrial declared in Bandidos case

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A federal judge Saturday declared a mistrial in the drug trafficking case of four Bandidos motorcycle club members after a jury was unable to reach a verdict after 17 hours of deliberations.

The four defendants are James Lyndon Cheatham, 31; Steven Robert "Boo Boo" Barbour, 39; Patrick "Rawhide" Ledoux, 44; and Karen Brown, 31.

Cheatham was charged with one count of conspiracy to distribute methamphetamines and six counts of distribution. The others each were charged with conspiracy and two counts of distribution.

The jury, during three days of deliberations, three times sent U.S.

District Judge Hayden Head Jr., saying it was deadlock.

Head granted a motion of acquittal for Barbour, agreed to reduce his bond from $125,000 to $20,000, dismissed the conspiracy count against Ledoux and dropped of the distribution charges against Cheatham.

He also ordered Assistant U.S. Attorney Jesse Rodriguez to decide by Monday if the government was going to retry the defendants. Rodriguez said he would have to discuss the case with his superiors.

On Saturday, the nine-man, three-woman jury told Head it was unable to reach a decision and Head asked them to continue deliberations.

property at bars and other places, police said. Before her arrest in Pampa, the woman had pulled the same scam all over the state and in Oklahoma, police said.

A Pampa officer said the woman used her own valid driver's license in renting the video equipment in the many towns in the two states.

Judge McIlhenny set bonds totaling $15,000, and Whitehurst remained in custody Saturday.

The grand jury also began consideration of a case involving Department of Public Safety trooper Johnny Carter, 33, of Pampa, Hamilton said.

Carter is being investigated on a possible charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with a fatal traffic accident here last Dec. 21, the prosecutor has said.

Carter has said he was chasing two drag racers north on Hobart Street, when his speeding patrol car slammed into the passenger's side of a car carrying three Pampa residents. Candace Ruth Ketchum Smith, 35, a mother of three, died as a result of injuries sustained in the accident. Her husband William Arnold Smith, 40, and daughter Andra, 13, passengers in the car driven by Mrs. Smith, sustained serious injuries in the crash but have improved. The trooper sustained minor injuries.

The Smiths have since filed a $4.7 million lawsuit against Carter and the DPS.

The lawsuit claims that the trooper was going the wrong way in the Smiths' lane of traffic shortly before the accident in the 1700 block of North Hobart.

Carter has said the woman driver made a left turn in front of patrol unit, failing to yield the right of way to his emergency vehicle.

Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A fresh breeze blowing in India

There's a fresh breeze blowing through Indian's government these days. It may not be quite a monsoon, but it's certainly a remarkable difference from the stale air of past regimes. Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi has proposed a sweeping program to cut taxes for business and individuals and reduce government regulation of key parts of the economy.

Major elements of his plan to revitalize Indian business include removing licensing requirements in 25 major industries, lifting import duties on computers and other electronic equipment and drastically increasing the amount of assets a corporation is allowed to have before it comes under regulation as a "monopoly."

For individuals, taxes on salaried income would be lowered in several ways. The progressive income tax's top marginal rate would be lowered from 62 percent to 50 percent, and there is to be an increase in the amount of income a person may earn before paying taxes. Estate taxes are to be eliminated altogether.

The proposals bear a remarkable resemblance to "Reaganomics," the plan—or pastiche of what was political feasible—that President Reagan advanced on this country, cutting income tax rates on individuals and corporations, reducing some regulations and providing tax incentives for investment.

In India, Gandhi's proposals have caused the same whirlwind debate that "Reaganomics" started in the United States four years ago: they are attacked as "against the common man" and as beneficial only to the upper crust.

Statistics indicate the proposals in the United States have been largely beneficial: inflation has been decreased and the gross national product increased. Gandhi is counting on similar results for his country. He is projecting that the tax cuts actually will generate increased tax revenues through economic growth, sounding all for the world like a sub-continental Art Laffer.

Many businessmen in India still question whether Gandhi has the perseverance to stick to his course, a clear break from the socialist traditions of both his mother, Indira Gandhi, and grandfather, Jawaharlal Nehru. And, as we have seen in the United States for the past four years, the pressure for more, rather than less, taxation and regulation can be great.

The rewards of perseverance, however, outweigh temporary political discomfort. President Reagan and Britain's Margaret Thatcher have ended up among the most popular of modern government leaders, at least among the people. We wish Gandhi well in his bid to join this select group of leaders.

Freezing theft no answer

Congress and the White House face a real challenge. Federal government spending is at a whopping 26 percent of the Gross National Product (GNP). And if we include "off-budget" outlays, it soars to nearly 30 percent. Interest payments on the deficit totals more than 15 percent of the budget. Now, the economy is humming along nicely, but if we don't stop government growth soon we're going to have to take another dose of medicine. And the next treatment will be far worse than that of 1981-82.

In an effort to appear responsible, congressmen are calling for a spending freeze. Even the few respectable, honest federal lawmakers have fallen for the freeze idea. Maybe they're being practical. But practicality and timidity are not the true stuff of America - at least not with those who gave us such expressions as: "Give me liberty, or give me death," and "Live free or die."

Today's politicians act like concerned thieves. You confront them, saying: "I'll be damned if you're going to continue taking increasing amounts of my earnings." And the ideal fallback position for the thief is, "How about a freeze; I'll just rob you at the 1984 level?" But why should he be allowed to rob you at all?

Recently, this writer met with Sen. Robert Dole (R - Kans.) at a gathering, and asked him, "As an elected official, sworn to uphold the U.S.

Constitution, do you think it moral for the government to confiscate the property of one American and give it to another to whom it doesn't belong?" Dole said, as a senator, he could not say it was right. Unfortunately, we were interrupted before I had the opportunity for a follow-up question: then, "Why do you vote the way you do?"

Let's look at this subject more closely. Should government confiscate one American's property to help another to improve his? The U.S. Department of Agriculture does. Through its billion-dollar soil conservation program it gives farmers funds and technical assistance to prevent soil erosion and water loss. The average U.S. farm is valued at $280,000. Shouldn't the owner have an incentive to protect its value?

Congress also confiscates another billion dollars of private property and, through the Small Business Administration (SBA), gives it to a few Americans owning small businesses. Quite often, this merely postpones the business failure of those who can't convince a bank to throw money down a rat hole.

Then there's the $4 billion Congress confiscates to run the Urban Mass Transit Aid (UMTA) program, which finances 75 to 85 percent of the capital costs of city transportation systems. Freed from having to operate in the black, cities take on all kinds of foolish programs they wouldn't without the subsidy.

Moving right along, there's the little-known Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC). Congress confiscates our money so this little gem can subsidize overseas investment by U.S. firms. It protects them against losses due to war, revolution, insurrection, civil strife, currency inconvertibility, and expropriation. Shouldn't Congress tell these businessmen to go to Lloyd's of London for such offset insurance?

And should Congress confiscate $3 billion each year and give it to students in the form of guaranteed loans? The rhetorical claim is that it is to help "poor" students. That's bull. Most students who attend college are in the solid middle-class of our society.

We can debate over what to cut, but there is one FACT of government spending: government cannot give what it first does not confiscate. Of course, people need to go to college, eat, and be housed. But does that justify theft? If someone steals your money, does it become a moral act because it's for a good cause? Does it become moral when it's sanctioned by a political majority?

My recommendation to Congress is don't freeze theft; eliminate it.

This news hard to believe

We are often warned not to believe everything we read in the newspaper.

Since I work for one and understand a journalist's eternal search for truth, however, I have rarely doubted any information provided me in newsprint.

But now this:
There was a wire service article that ran the other day concerning a talking gorilla named Koko.

The story was out of something called the Gorilla Institute in Woodside, Calif., and it was all about this alleged gorilla that had a thing for cats.

The gorilla, a female, had a cat and she played with it and held it and wrapped blankets around it and apparently loved it as her own.

The cat died last Christmas, however, the story went on to say. Koko now has a new cat and has stopped grieving over the one that died.

After her cat died, Koko, according to the story, said things like "frown" and "sad" and asked for another cat by saying, "Tiger, please."

I don't have any problems with the gorilla liking the cat. Often there are instances of different kinds of animals taking up with one another. We had a chicken at home that was quite fond of our dog, for example.

Whenever I went out to play with my dog, Arnold, the chicken would join us and run after balls just like Arnold. The chicken loved Arnold, as a matter of fact, and would fly upon Arnold's back and ride with him wherever he went.

Unfortunately for both Arnold and the chicken, Arnold was always chasing cars.

One day, he caught one with the chicken on his back. I buried them side by side under the big oak tree.

But I'm getting away from the original idea here. What I doubted about the gorilla story was the report Koko could talk.

Well not really talk, as in opening her mouth and pronouncing words. But she has been reported to have a vocabulary of 500 words, which she expresses by sign language.

My problem with such reports about animals being able to communicate with people is the animals never say what you figure an animal would say if it really could talk.

I mean if Koko really can speak her mind, why doesn't she say, "Let me out of here!"

You think any sensible gorilla would really enjoy being penned up in a cage and being made to do all sorts of tiresome things like learning sign language?

Heck no. If I were a gorilla, I would want to be back in the jungle hanging out with my pals and eating bananas in a tree, and if I could talk I would say so.

And then there's the new cat they gave Koko. What does the cat have to say about all of this? You think a cat wants to be in a cage with a large gorilla who thinks it's her baby?

If I were the cat, I know what I would say. I'd say, "Hold it, Jack, I'm not being 'nursemaided' by no gorilla."

All this makes me wonder what Arnold would have said about that chicken if he could have talked.

Probably, "Get that stupid chicken off my back before I go ape."

Media can't survive in moral vacuum

BY MARVIN OLASKY

Texas tell the tale of an oldtime Dallas lawyer, Colonel R.E.L. Knight, who arrived home very late one night. When Mrs. Knight asked for an explanation Colonel Bob said he had been worrying about an old and ill woman, a friend of the family, so he had stopped in for a long chat.

"That was very thoughtful of you," said Mrs. Knight, "but the odd part of it all is that Mrs. Bishop spent the evening right here. She went home only a few minutes ago." Colonel Bob simply shook his head and remarked sadly, "That may be. Nevertheless, I think I shall stick to my story."

We are now in the midst of a decade of highly-publicized libel suits. In many cases, such as Sharon vs. Time, editors and reporters have been shown up as sloppy journalists but not provably malicious ones. In case after case, we have seen negligent newsmen and women exhibiting a prideful unwillingness to apologize. Like Colonel Bob, they stick to their stories. But then they typically go one step further; They wrap themselves in the flag by claiming that the juries have not truly understood first amendment guarantees of a free press.

It is charming in one sense to see journalists who oppose libertarianism in most economic matters become firm partisans of liberty in their own profession. Perhaps some reporters will see that freedom of the press requires economic freedom in other areas as well. However recent libel cases could indicate the danger of a popular backlash, which unfortunately might lead to additional government regulation of media. Those who come to see the first amendment as an enemy could give proponents of increased state power the opportunity to shackle it.

Economist Wilhelm Roepke once wrote that no occupation can "go on in a moral vacuum...Self-discipline, a sense of justice, honesty, fairness, chivalry, moderation, public spirit, respect for human dignity, firm ethical norms - all of these are things which people must possess before they go to market and compete with each other." These attributes cannot be imposed from outside, by government edict. They must come from within each individual, in business or in journalism. Otherwise, dictators will step in and try to make us think that imposition is possible.

Those who wrote and voted for the Constitution and its first amendment knew that their work could not survive in a moral vacuum. The media could be checked and balanced by judicial review, but the primary check was self-scrutiny. As one historian described Amos Kendall, an early nineteenth century newspaper editor and White House aide, "He promised himself never knowingly to misrepresent, and if, through mistake, he did, to rectify the mistake without being asked."

Honesty of that kind is easy to forget once power is obtained. Periodically in American history, supposedly-libertarian journalists have become libertines. Shortly after the first amendment was adopted, for instance, Benjamin Franklin Bache (the great man's grandson) decided to call George Washington a "debaucher" and John Adams a "querulous, bald, blind cripple." Adams was bald, but one out of four was not good enough for angry legislators. The result was the passage of tough laws, in the 1790s, that threw some editors into jail. Those laws were wrong and did not last long, but the scenario has repeated itself

Story unfair to Etheredge, Bortka

To the Editor,
I would like to comment on the recent series of articles on Bethany Trust & Co.

I also would like to take a stand for Tim Bortka and Tom Etheredge.

I have known Tim Bortka and his family for many years. I have worked, played and prayed with them in Kansas City as well as here in Pampa. I have never found them to be more than good, honest, trustworthy, God fearing Christians. I am proud to call them friends as well as fellow believers in Christ.

I also know the Etheredges and find them to be a strong Christian brother & sister in the Faith.

In my opinion neither of these men would knowingly, or willingly, steal from a fellow human, but would do everything in their power to help them prosper.

Your paper has not only attacked these men's integrity and judged them to be guilty of theft and fraud, it has attacked the God they worship as well as the place they worship Him in.

It is easy for those of us who know Tim and Tom to defend and lift them up as they are righteous, upright men.

It is even easier to see through the disguise of journalism your reporter uses to boost his own ego. It seems as though he is an opportunist seizing on a chance to make a name for himself with the "Big Scoop". He reports some facts, although slanted for his story, and when a lack of facts exist, he fabricates new ones. He then tries to lead the reader to agree with his own erroneous conjectures.

I always thought that a good reporter reported all the facts and tried to report objectively. It seems your reporter's objective is to persecute and judge these men even before the law, (that says they are innocent until proven guilty), has a chance to charge them. His reports ring of "Vendetta" against Tom Etheredge and any and all in association with him. As far as I know, the investors are still happy with Tom & Tim's financial expertise and know, as well as believe, that they will return with all the investor's money.

In all fairness to the reporter's coverage, I will agree with him that our God is indeed in prison and many are those that find him there, and many are those, like himself, who would keep him there!!!

As for me and my household we will continue to pray for the Bortkas and the Etheredges and their deliverance from the persecution your reporter's on-sided coverage has heaped upon them. We also will pray that all their trials and tribulations be over soon.

ROBERT L. LAWRENCE

EDITOR'S NOTE—We think anyone who could write a letter like this and still accuse someone else of fabricating anything deserves the "Gall of the Year Award." We have only reported what authorities accuse Etheredge and Bortka of doing. We challenge you to write another letter showing where anything in our stories concerning Bethany Trust has been fabricated. There is nothing in the article attacking anyone's religion or church. Also, please tell us how we can write about Etheredge's side of the story when he can't be found. Finally, go back and read the article again. Our reporter didn't say anything about God being in prison.

Vicious attack on Bethany investors

Dear Mr. Simmons:
It is difficult to imagine why you would allow publication of the front page article, "Faith Unlikely to Save Bethany Investors," written by your senior staff writer.

The writer has viciously attacked the investors in Bethany Trust as well as their faith. Doesn't he realize that these people are hurting enough by the loss of their life savings without having their religious faith degraded? It is now becoming apparent that these people made a very poor investment decision, but having their faith so demeaned on the front page of your paper (as if their religion had anything to do with their investment decisions) is very cruel and unjust on your part.

Thankfully, I have no investments with Bethany Trust, but I feel sorry for those who stand a chance of losing their life savings. I think we should stand behind these fellow Pampans, for they definitely need our moral support - not a nasty eruption on the front page of the Sunday paper!

ELDON R. REED

EDITOR'S NOTE—It is astonishing to us how anyone could interpret that article as an attack on investors or their religion. You are reading something into it that simply isn't there.

Different view on barking dogs

Dear Mr. Simmons
This letter is concerning the barking dogs. It looks as though Mr. Ferguson needs a muzzle. Mrs. Reed wants to comply to his complaints and is willing to absorb the expense of debarking her dogs.

If a business next door to him bothers him, he should take a second look. Some of the sharp readers of this newspaper would have seen Mr. Ferguson's very large ad for "Joy's Construction, 1109 Juniper." Is it okay for him to conduct a business of another kind out of his home, but not for Suzi?

And the Quick's living behind Mrs. Reed. I understand they want an appliance repair service. If they store old refrigerators, freezers, etc., in their back yard, what hazards does this impose on curious children?

As for the smelly dumpster, how could Mrs. Quick know it is not her own garbage smelling. Why has she not called the city to replace the dumpster with only one lid. An open dumpster regardless of its contents will attract flies.

I do know for a fact Mrs. Reed does place daily doggie and household waste in plastic garbage bags and seals them.

I have seen for myself that neighborhood children have climbed on Suzi's fence and teased the dogs. I am sure the dogs bark, but no more so than the three others on the other side of Suzi.

Just because Suzi does not clean her alley daily doesn't mean it is smelly. Her back yard is cleaner than some of her neighbors'. I would like to see what opinions others who care about this issue would have.

Meeting at the Elbe

Moment of victory transformed into long cold war

EDITOR'S NOTE — The Americans had fought their way east while the Soviets pushed to the west. They met on the Elbe River in one of those historic moments of rich symbolism. But what succeeded the warmth of the occasion was the long frost of the Cold War.

By SAUL PETT

AP Special Correspondent
They crawled toward each other slowly and carefully along the twisted girders of the blown-up bridge, one from the west, the other from the east.

Finally, they met in the middle, two young men, one from the United States, the other from the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. They met and they shook hands and in the touch of their fingers there came the end of two long roads on which millions had died, from Normandy and from Stalingrad.

It was a moment sweet with victory then. It has been a moment bitter with irony since. In the diabolic design of history, World War II was ending and the Cold War was beginning.

But the scent of peace would not be denied on that golden day 40 years ago, April 25, 1945, when Lt. William Robertson of the 69th Division of the U.S. 1st Army crawled along that bridge over the Elbe River. Adolf Hitler's Germany was now cut in two. Total surrender was only twelve days away.

TWO GREAT ARMIES from two profoundly different countries were racing toward each other and between them lay the enemy that had united them, the Nazi war machine that had terrorized Europe, now crushed, beaten and in groveling disarray. German soldiers, like German civilians, were fleeing west ahead of the Soviets, begging Americans to take their surrender.

Both the American and Soviet forces knew they were about to meet but the Soviets, who had suffered greater casualties than any nation in history, were taking no chances.

Bill Robertson, at the head of a four-man patrol, reached the Elbe in a jeep. Seeing Soviets on the other side, the Americans shouted, "Amerikanski!," and waved a white sheet. The Soviets fired at them.

The Americans retreated, regrouped, broke into a German drug store, liberated some colored powders, mixed them with water and then waved a sheet of approximate red, white and blue. The Soviets fired again.

Robertson climbed the tower of a nearby castle, waved the "flag" and his allies across the river fired again. He did this several times with the same uncomfortable result. Then he sent Pvt. Frank Huff back to a slave labor camp liberated the day before. Huff returned with a Russian, who climbed the tower and shouted something in Russian and, in the ensuing peace, Robertson crawled across the bridge to the east bank, where the Soviet soldiers were now smiling.

WATCHING THROUGH his binoculars, Maj. Alexei Gorlinsky of the 58th Guards Infantry Division thought the two bridge crawlers looked like acrobats. He was still not convinced the men on the west bank were Americans; the colored bed sheet looked like no flag to him.

But then he heard them shout what sounded like "Moscow-Washington!" and then he knew they were Americans and he ran toward the bridge.

At another point, Pvt. Alexander Vasilyevich Olshansky and his unit crossed the Elbe with orders to find out who was on the other side.

They came around a turn and there were men in uniforms they hadn't seen before walking toward them. Both groups paused cautiously. Then both started to run and they met exactly midway in a collision of joy, everybody talking at once, nobody understanding anybody, nobody needing to.

Twenty miles to the south of Robertson's bridge, Lt. Albert Kotzebue, Pvt. Joseph Polowsky and 20 other GIs of the U.S. 69th Division reached the Elbe near another destroyed bridge. Soviets on the far shore waded them over and, in a sail-less sailboat found on the bank, Kotzebue, Polowsky and two others paddled across with their rifle butts. The celebrations began.

On into the night, wherever Americans and Russians met, they shook hands, they hugged, they drank vodka and schnaps and other spoils of war together. They sang to accordians and balalaikas, they toasted each other and they toasted Franklin Roosevelt and Josef Stalin, Harry Truman and Winston Churchill.

Bill Robertson of Los Angeles felt a "one-world feeling" and gave his watch to a Russian who responded with the gift of his gold wedding band. Joe Polowsky of Chicago felt tears and vowed he would never forget the day. Alexie Gorlinsky of Kiev said he could not imagine anything but peace between the victors.

The celebrants could not know that two days before, in the Oval Office of the White House, President Truman had sternly berated Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov for Soviet violations of agreements reached at Yalta a few months before.

THE COLD WAR

It has produced four decades of tension, enmity, competition, confrontation, mutual fear, mutual distrust, staggering cost. It has brought crisis or a sense of crisis in every inhabited continent.

It has shaped and misshaped the world. It has made enemies out of allies, friends out of enemies, hostages out of neutrals, opportunists out of idealists.

It has led us to the hills of Korea, the rice paddies of Vietnam, the craters of the moon. In bloodshed, it has cost us more than 110,000 lives and Russia none until Afghanistan. In treasure, it has cost us more than two world wars combined.

Since World War II, the United States has spent about $3 trillion ($3,000,000,000,000) for defense. Prof. William Kaufman, a Pentagon consultant and Harvard lecturer on "defense planning," estimates that 60 per cent of that can be charged to the Cold War.

How did it all start? How did we get here? Hindsight suggests it may have been inevitable.

After World War I, the United States, England and France sent troops to Russia to overthrow the Bolshevik regime. That failed, but the Soviets didn't forget.

In 1933, the United States became the last major power to recognize the Soviet Union. In the process, the Soviets agreed not to propagandize the United States or interfere with its domestic politics. They kept neither promise. The United States didn't forget.

In World War II, the two powers joined arms against Hitler in an alliance of necessity, not ideology. The Soviets took horrible losses. They received $11 billion in lend-lease from the United States but repeatedly suspected their western allies of delaying a second front in the hope that Stalin and Hitler would bleed each other white.

The United States ended lend-lease abruptly three days after the war and Russia was suddenly cut off. Stalin did not permit free elections in Eastern Europe, as promised, and tightened his vise there.

Western Europe, its economy shattered by war, also looked ripe for plucking by Stalin. The United States countered with the imaginative Marshall Plan to revive Western Europe and contain the Marxist tide.

STALIN PUSHED and the United States pushed back, in Berlin, Greece, Iran, Turkey, the Near East, the Far East, the Congo, Cuba, Korea and Vietnam. The Soviet Union said it was trying to prevent its own encirclement. The United States said it was trying to prevent Communist domination of the world.

For his work at the Elbe, the Russians gave Al Kotzebue a medal, the Order of Alexander Nevsky. "They tell me," he says, "that the medal entitles me to travel free anywhere in the Soviet Union." He does not appear to be in a hurry to try.

Joe Polowsky came back to Chicago after the big war, drove a cab, raised a family and never forgot what he called "The Oath at the Elbe." The event, he said, "took possession of me the rest of my life." He worked tirelessly for peace.

Every April 25, he stood at the Michigan Avenue bridge over the Chicago River and passed out leaflets urging nuclear disarmament. He wrote letters to members of Congress and world leaders and fellow veterans. In 1955, he went to Moscow and met with Nikita Khrushchev and Soviet alumni of the Elbe.

In 1983, Joe Polowsky died of cancer and was buried, at his request, near thuddy river where he and his buddies paddled into history. His grave is in the middle of the Torgau cemetery in East Germany surrounded by the graves of strangers. Beyond, one sees the drab, gray buildings of an old town in need of repair and Soviet army trucks rolling in and out of a large Soviet garrison.

NEARER THE RIVER, there is a large stone monument with inscriptions commemorating the union at the Elbe. It stands in front of the old castle, from whose tower Bill Robertson waved a sheet 40 years ago.

Maj. Gen. Alexei Gorlinsky came from Moscow for the funeral service at the monument in which he praised Joe Polowsky, the Chicago cab driver, as "a simple man who devoted his life to the spirit of the Elbe by working for peace between our two countries."

Then, three American and three Soviet servicemen marched to the monument to lay wreaths in Polowsky's memory, a simple ceremony that had narrowly skirted an incident.

There, on their side of the Iron Curtain, the Soviets seemed for a time to be insisting that they lay the first wreath. Then, a U.S. diplomat suggested that both wreaths could be laid at the same time, and this was done. A minor chill in a long, long cold war.

Missile crisis, Berlin Wall, Korea, Vietnam, the Middle East. Do we find safety in the stars? Will they disarm? Dare we disarm? Who will survive a first strike? Who will lay the first wreath?

several times and threatens to be re-enacted in the 1990s, if present trends continue.

There is still time for leading American journalists to learn a little humility. Some graceful acceptance of correction of their written errors by juries would go a long way. Journalists should be neither craven nor arrogant. For despite recent dips in reputation, the press is still considered a friend by most citizens. That, beyond particular legal considerations, might explain why Time and others were rapped on the hands but not officially punished in the pocketbook, although Time's court costs and lawyers' fees amounted to roughly $90,000.

James J. Collins, a former Dallas city attorney, was once told by Mrs. Collins that their son, young Jim, had done wrong and needed to be taken to the woodshed. Old Jim granted, but ending up merely reprimanding his son. Later Mrs. Collins came out and asked, "Did you do what I said?" "No," said the old man, looking miserable. "Why not?" demanded Mrs. Collins. "Because he's a friend of mine," said Old Jim. Similarly, publications are friends for millions: They may do wrong, but prodigal sons generally receive one safe conduct.

Not two, though. Young Jim was in for it next time. So is the press, unless the moral sense Roepke wrote of is regained.

It is easy for anchor-men to think themselves godlike and important editors to think they can do whatever they want to whomever whenever. It is also easy for government regulators to think that a new assault on private property as represented by newspapers would solve the problem. But that would just make things worse.

Our best hope is not in governmental regulation but in education of journalists, and education of media consumers and businessmen to punish in the marketplace those journalists who prove untrustworthy. Perhaps more journalists will develop the self-awareness of a New Englander named Shanghai Pierce who moved to Texas, built a great ranch and in his retirement hired a sculptor to memorialize him in a giant bronze statue set out in the pasture. The story is that Pierce would ride by on horseback, doff his sombrero politely, and say to the statue, "Morning, Shanghai, you damned old cow thief."

SPS receives top award from state business assn.

AUSTIN—Gov. Mark White has presented Southwestern Public Service Company the Texas Association of Business' Ed. C. Burris award.

The equivalent of the "business of the year award" it was presented to SPS chairman and chief executive officer, Berl M. Springs, during a luncheon last week.

The award is presented annually to one company that exemplifies the best in Texas business and industry, said Bob Myers of Fort Worth, chairman of the TAB committee that made the selection.

SPS' efficiency in operations, power plant construction, fuel management and other areas that directly benefit electric customers played a major role in its selection, Myers said.

Among the SPS accomplishments noted by the selection committee were:

—This summer the company will complete its fifth coal-fired generating unit on schedule, within budget, at a cost of about one-half the average for similar plants throughout the nation.

—SPS was a leader in the utility industry in the early 1970s when it made the decision to meet increasing demand for electricity in its service area with coal-fired power plants, resulting in savings of $157 million to customers last year alone.

—SPS renegotiated its coal-haul contracts, which will save customers $790 million over the next 17 years.

SPS is constructing a test facility near Amarillo that will examine the feasibility of a coal slurry pipelining using liquified carbon dioxide in place of water to transport coal.

—SPS has led in the development of historic interconnections between the Eastern and Western electrical grids on the United States, making it possible for utilities in different halves of the nation to share power.

Also mentioned were SPS efforts in air quality control, safety programs, crime patrol and community service.

Southwestern Public Service Company primarily provides electric service to a population of more than 1 million in a 52,000 square mile area of the Panhandle and south plains of Texas, eastern and southeastern New Mexico, the Oklahoma Panhandle and southwestern Kansas.

Financial Focus

We've said Individual Retirement Accounts or IRAs offer significant tax benefits. Up to $4,000 can be set aside by a working couple, and it's all tax deductible. But, the real purpose of an IRA is to establish a retirement fund. And, our retirement lifestyle largely will depend on where we invest our retirement dollars and how much they earn.

Most people establish IRAs with banking institutions or insurance companies. In the case of banks, the funds usually are invested in CDs; with insurance companies, annuities. In fact, banks and savings and loans currently hold half of all IRA money invested to date. Others prefer to self-direct their IRA investments through brokerage firms. The institution you choose to invest your IRA funds with depends on your retirement goals, how much risk, if any, you're willing to take; and what kind of results you expect your investment to produce.

One of the primary advantages of investing IRA funds with banks and insurance companies is you're guaranteed a specific return on the dollars you invest. For some people that's a critical consideration. However, one of the disadvantages of choosing these institutions to handle your IRA is the "guaranteed" return you receive can, and probably will, lose buying power as inflation rises. For example, if inflation is held to 6 percent, prices will double in 12 years. Due to the fact inflation is held to 6 percent, prices will double in 12 years. Due to the fact inflation has consistently risen since 1957, this is a plausible scenario of what could happen to your hard-earned IRA dollars.

For this reason, many people choose to purchase a self-directed IRA from a brokerage firm. This means, with the help of a professional, they distribute their annual $2,000 contribution among any of the investments that firm offers. Corporate bonds and common stock are two examples of the types of IRA investments you could purchase from a broker. The advantage of self-directing your IRA funds is you participate in the economy and, hopefully, earn a return that outpaces inflation. The disadvantage is you may not be guaranteed a specific return, and you take the chance that your return on the dollars invested in your IRA will be significantly more, equal to or less than you'd hoped. You could, however, purchase fixed-income investments such as corporate bonds or growth-oriented investments such as common stock mutual funds for your self-directed IRA if you want the best of both worlds.

Remember, to establish an IRA you must not only decide when to open your account but also what type of institution to establish with. These are probably some of the most important financial decisions you'll ever make.

Calm hits market

NEW YORK (AP) — In the midst of stormy activity in the bond and currency markets, the stock market lately has been becalmed.

The dollar has fallen significantly from its early-1985 highs against leading foreign currencies. Interest rates lately have been tumbling in the credit markets.

At the same time, numerous signs of a slowing economy have prompted a heated debate among economists over whether a recession looms.

But while individual issues may respond dramatically to a takeover rumor or a disappointing earnings report, the overall stock market has essentially gone nowhere for several weeks now.

Since early March, the Dow Jones industrial average has been stuck in a narrow range between 1,250 and 1,275. Not since March 19 has the average posted a net change of as much as 10 points in any session.

This noncommittal behavior has variously been interpreted as a sign of uneasiness, confusion or just plain apathy among investors.

Whatever its cause, it has given investment experts some trouble. When nothing much is happening, it is difficult to analyze.

In recent days, the Dow Jones industrial average managed to string together seven straight sessions of gains. But for all its trouble the average rose less than 20 points over that stretch.

At the close on Friday, the widely recognized average of 30 blue chips stood at 1,266.56, up .88 from the week before.

Kennedy questions linger

Uncertainty surrounds charges against two bellboys

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) - The posh but obscure Brazilian Court Hotel, which gained unwanted attention a year ago when David Kennedy died in one of its rooms of a drug overdose, is closed now, undergoing a facelift for its new owners.

As workmen pull apart the rooms, police continue to pull apart the case. There are still questions to be answered before the trial begins for two men charged with supplying cocaine to the 28-year-old son of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Hotel owners Dennis and Elizabeth Heffernon had agreed to sell the block-long Brazilian Court before Kennedy's death, but the $6.76 million deal with the Hibiscus Hotel Corp. wasn't signed until two days afterward.

The new owners - three Texas investors - immediately began renovating the Spanish-style hotel, a watering hole and guest house for Palm Beach since the 1920s.

Laboratory tests found cocaine had been dumped in the toilet water of Kennedy's $250-a-day room. How it got there is unknown. Investigators have yet to determine if anyone entered the room and tampered with evidence before police arrived.

Police reports say David's cousin, Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the slain president, was among the last to see him alive and was seen in the area before police were called. She has denied entering the room.

Enough uncertainty remains to cloud the case against the two former bellboys charged with selling Kennedy cocaine, says a lawyer for one.

"In this case, there appears to have been some zealotry to arrest someone," Michael Salnick said. "They arrested first, charged blindly and investigated later."

Former bellhops Peter Marchant and David Dorr have pleaded innocent. They face up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

Circuit Judge John E. Born said the two may wait nearly another year for their trial because his 1985 docket is jammed.

Salnick cited unusual delays in the case - legal battles with the prosecutor, the Kennedy family and the media over releasing evidence, and problems with tracking down witnesses who have moved away.

Those early court fights and accounts of Kennedy's last days were the talk of the wealthy resort community where his grandmother, Rose Kennedy, has an estate.

But public attention has waned. At a national cocaine information hotline, calls from drug users have returned to normal after soaring as details of Kennedy's drug habits surfaced after his body was found last April 25.

Freshly released from a month-long drug rehabilitation program, Kennedy spent his last few days drinking heavily, taking tranquilizers or cocaine, and was sometimes incoherent, according to court and police records.

Victim's remarks key

Rape conviction set aside by judge

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - A state district judge has set aside the rape conviction and 40-year prison term assessed a 28-year-old Abilene man because of reports that the 21-year-old alleged victim has told several people she was really not raped.

District Judge Bill Thomas on Friday granted court-appointed defense attorney Rick Mabry's motion for a new trial after three witnesses testified that the complainant told them Bobby James Williams had not raped her, but that she was not going to change her testimony.

The purported rape victim, who had failed to appear for two prior hearings, denied the allegations and maintained that she had told the truth at Williams' trial March 11 and 12. However, she also testified that, contrary to her trial testimony, that she had lived with Williams for several months a few years ago.

Williams claimed the woman pressed charges against him because he had turned down her request for sex after he'd given her a ride home from a friend's house last July 24.

A secretary in the district attorney's office said the complainant had already inquired about the procedures for dropping charges, however, the prosecutor, Assistant Criminal District Attorney Sharon Johnson, said she wants to visit with the woman before she makes up her mind. She said the woman was confused by Friday's developments in the case.

Asked if she'll retry Williams, Ms. Johnson said: "At this point, I don't know. We'll have to talk about it."

Mabry asked for the new trial a month ago, but the hearing was postponed twice - the first time because of a death in the family of the complainant, and the second time because the complainant was sedated due to the relative's death. Thomas had indicated then he would grant the motion for a new trial if the woman failed to appear Friday.

Sherilyn Simmons of Clyde, former wife of the defendant, testified that while the jury was deliberating Williams' punishment, she asked the complainant if Williams really raped her. She said the woman said: "No, it's just the way I can pay him back for when I lived with him."

Barbara Clayton of Route 1, Baird, and Lois Leach of 617 S. 14th, both testified they heard the complainant say she'd lied about the rape.

Ms. Johnson called the complainant as a witness. The woman denied making the statements to the other women and said her trial testimony was true.

"He raped me. He ought to do the time," she said.

The woman's father-in-law testified at Friday's hearing that, after Williams' conviction, the woman had threatened to file rape charges on him and another man.

He said his daughter-in-law got mad at him for turning off a TV set and told him: "I'll holler rape on you, too."

He said he told the woman, "You do and I'll slap you through that window."

Dollar hits lowest point of the year

NEW YORK (AP) - The dollar, its first-quarter strength having battered the earnings of many U.S. corporations, has since tumbled to its lowest point of the year.

Provided the dollar maintains its current levels or moves even lower, the dollar's effect on profits of U.S. companies' overseas operations should be less severe in the second quarter, economists said.

But they said the dollar will have to fall substantially further before exports of U.S. goods, and the profit margins of their producers, see improvement.

"The dollar's recent slide 'is going to do very little to affect sales volume in foreign markets; that's many months down the road,'" said Larry Kreicher, assistance vice president of Irving Trust Co., a New York bank.

Robert Sinche, chief economist of the investment firm Bear, Stearns & Co., agreed. "In the second quarter the negative currency-translation impact will not be as serious as in the first quarter," he said. "But in terms of trade flows it won't have much of an impact."

Two months ago the dollar soared to unprecedented heights, and its effect on first-quarter earnings continues to be well documented.

One major company after another this past week cited the dollar for dragging down first-quarter results, including Borden Inc., Georgia-Pacific Co., Weyerhaeuser Corp., Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co., Burroughs Corp., W.R. Grace & Co. and Aluminum Company of America.

The dollar's strength over the past two years has produced a huge U.S. trade imbalance, largely because the stronger dollar makes American products more expensive overseas while simultaneously increasing U.S. purchasing power of foreign goods.

At the same time, U.S. companies have found that the earnings of their overseas operations are severely eroded when those earnings are translated back into dollars.

However, since reaching record heights on Feb. 25, the dollar has tumbled about 12 percent and now is nearly 5 percent lower than when the year began, according to the Federal Reserve Board's measure of the dollar against 10 other major currencies.

In other developments this past week:

-Ted Turner, the broadcasting entrepreneur, offered to acquire CBS Inc. for a package of stock and notes with a face value of $175 a share, or $5.4 billion. Some analysts asserted the market value of the package was worth considerably less. CBS declined to comment, but had said previously it would fight to remain independent.

Reagan's visit could wind up hurting Kohl

WASHINGTON (AP) — It backfired horribly, but President Reagan's strategy for minimizing the Holocaust during his visit to West Germany next month was aimed at giving support to a key ally, who has backed the president on "Star Wars" and the deployment of U.S. missiles in Europe.

However, while the gesture looked good in West Germany, it looked terrible in the United States. The American outcry, and the partial retreat by Reagan, could end up embarrassing and even weakening the government of Chancellor Helmut Kohl, whom it was designed to help.

It also has cast a cloud over Reagan's entire trip to Germany, scheduled May 1-6, and which includes the seven-nation economic summit conference.

Reagan still was resisting pressure from critics and some of his own advisers to cancel the most controversial event of the trip, a visit to a war cemetery at Bitburg that holds the graves of Nazi troops, some of whom participated in the annihilation of 6 million Jews.

Kohl had wanted the visit; Reagan agreed. Although Reagan on Friday added a visit to the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp site, he is caught in the middle between American Jewish and veterans groups who want the cemetery visit canceled and the possible humiliation of such a change for the Kohl government.

"The consequences in Germany would be very negative," said Helmut Sonnenfeldt of the Brookings Institution. "A cancellation from the German side would be seen as an affront." But he said he hoped a compromise could be found.

Sonnenfeldt, an expert on East-West relations who served in the Nixon and Ford administrations, was born in Germany and lost members of his family in the Holocaust.

He predicted Kohl would get some blame for the furor from West Germans because "it suggests careless preparation on his part" and an "unawareness of U.S. sensibilities."

There is plenty of blame being tossed about. Elie Wiesel, who as a child was imprisoned at Auschwitz and Buchenwald, suggested at a White House ceremony Friday that the Reagan administration had let political motivations sidetrack it from a clear-cut issue of "good and evil."

Wiesel urged Reagan to find an alternative site rather than visit the Bitburg military cemetery, which includes the graves of 47 members of Hitler's notorious SS corps.

The planned visit to Bitburg has cast doubt on some of Reagan's own earlier explanations as to why he didn't plan to visit a concentration camp. The controversy has reawakened the passions, and put new focus on the tragedy that Reagan, during a March 21 press conference, said he hoped to avoid.

But there was another reason for Reagan's decision — a desire to give support to an ally that has been key to the success of American policies in Europe.

Kohl has been extremely supportive of the administration's commitment to deploying new U.S. cruise and Pershing II missiles in Europe, many of them in Germany. He also has emerged as a key supporter of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, called Star Wars.

In its plans for Reagan's West German visit, the administration also sought to avoid any repetition of the rebuff given to Kohl by the NATO allies at the D-Day celebration in France last year.

College parking lot work starts

Construction work got underway last week for the paving of a parking lot west of the Pampa Center of Clarendon College.

Director Larry Gilbert reported the parking lot should be ready in time for the summer session.

The college has been conducting a fundraising project in the community to obtain the $30,000 needed for the project.

The initial paving will involve the south end of the lot across the street from the college, Gilbert said, with spaces for 75 to 80 vehicles. The lot also will have lights to aid students at night, he noted.

The lot has been used in the past, but rain and snow often made it muddy and created problems for the students walking through the lot to and from class, he said.

The parking lot will help to alleviate some of the problems with students parking on surrounding streets, especially in inclement weather, Gilbert noted.

Though students will be the main beneficiary of the parking spaces, Gilbert noted it also will help those residents who attended the various community activities and personal development courses at the college.

Though construction has begun on the lot, Gilbert said the college is still in need of funds, with about $4,000 still being sought to reach the goal.

"The college is just extremely grateful to the community for making this possible," Gilbert stated. "We couldn't have done it without them."

Persons, businesses or organizations still wishing to contribute to the paving project fund may contact Gilbert at the college.

Nicaraguan aid plan pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arguing for more U.S. aid to Nicaraguan rebels, President Reagan said Saturday that "Russian military personnel" are in battle zones where the Sandinista government is fighting "democratic resistance."

In his weekly radio address from the weekend presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., Reagan also said Nicaragua's leftist regime "may put forth an 11th-hour so-called peace proposal aimed at blocking aid to the democratic resistance."

Reagan appealed to his listeners to contact their representatives in Congress on behalf of his program so as not to "let the Sandinista communists and their sympathizers be the only voices heard."

Reagan repeated previous assertions that followers of Libyan President Moammar Khadafy and Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini "are in Nicaragua — about two hours by air from United States borders."

"And just this week," he added, "we confirmed the presence of Russian military personnel in the battle zones of northern Nicaragua."

"The Soviet terrorist bloc nations know what is at stake in Nicaragua," he said. "That's why, in the seven months since Congress cut off aid to the democratic resistance, they've been pouring in weapons and personnel to their communist allies hoping to wipe out the democratic forces while they're most vulnerable."

The president also charged that some in Congress are playing politics with the issue and said that even before his latest proposal was announced, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., called it "a dirty trick."

"That's not true," said Christopher Matthews, a top O'Neill aide.

O'Neill was "responding to what he saw was the fraudulent use of the term 'humanitarian' aid to describe logistical support for the Contras," Matthews said.

The president is calling for limiting the aid to non-lethal supplies such as food, medicine and uniforms while peace talks are sought. But he rejected in his speech a Democratic counterproposal ruling out military aid, saying this plan "would only provide assistance to the democratic forces if they abandon their struggle to liberate Nicaragua."

"Any proposal that abandons over 15,000 members of a democratic resistance to communists is not a compromise; it's a shameful surrender," Reagan declared.

Playground built as haven for latch-key kids

By CAROLE KEENEY
The Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — Barron "Pee Wee" Williams, 14, is a budding builder, and like all entrepreneurs, he has setbacks.

His 24-room clubhouse is the object of vandals on a regular basis. Less ambitious, perhaps even jealous, peers creep in and push over the walls and kick holes in the roof at night.

He takes it with equanimity. It's one of the lessons he's learning at Adventure Playground — that in spite of rocky beginnings, success is possible.

A joint venture of The Metropolitan Organization and Houston Parks and Recreation, the playground operates five days a week after school and on school holidays at Freed Park in Spring Branch.

It's for youngsters, like Pee Wee, who might wander the streets after school, learning a different way to deal with aggression, frustration and dangers. Instead of banging heads, the kids at Adventure Playground hit nails, saw wood and use their brain power to build rather than tear down.

"They tear it up," Pee Wee said placidly. "I fix it right up. It makes me a little bit mad, but I just get back to business."

And of his business, he's proud. A grand tour takes us through the living room first. Adults must duck to pass through a wall with a door that has jagged edges, sawed by unsure hands but, nevertheless, standing in proud defiance of those who would scoff.

The room has a skylight of sorts. A hole in the ceiling permits passage through to the room above, which Pee Wee said is the playroom. He points to a closet where his shoes are deposited each day for a siesta.

"I come in here and take off my shoes and relax," he said like the proud homeowner he is.

Next we move upstairs toward the third story of his soon-to-be four-story house. It's one of the rooms that "they" demolished, he said. The roof is gone, as is the door, but Pee Wee dismisses his losses by noting that all the rooms have carpeting.

Outside we peer over a wall into a deep hole where Pee Wee is planning a fish pond.

"This is the Loch Ness swamp," he said, grinning as if pleased with his imagery.

At the back of the house is the kitchen. A small room with shelves and a serving window is used on the days cooking is part of playground routine. Pee Wee stands with his arms folded for the photographer while Rigo and Eric Lopez, twin brothers, age 10, demonstrate the kitchen's convenient arrangement.

Sighing with the heavy weight of remembered responsibility, the Landrum Jr. High School student said building the house wasn't easy. Fights broke out over the design and who had the right to enter and work on the project.

As the self-appointed "foreman," Pee Wee followed the example of playground leader Robert Hager, 41, who was instrumental in starting Adventure Playground.

"I told them to stop fighting, or stop working on it now," Pee Wee said. "I told them to go sit down and come back later. I got mad at this boy who tried to kick my walls out. I was going to beat him up, but I talked. I told them if they knocked my house down, I'd make them build it up."

So there! Martin Morris, 8, works in the carpentry shop where all the projects start. Over the entrance, painted in crude letters, are instructions:

1. Store your unfinished work on project shelf.

2. Clean up. Put up tools.

Lumber, wooden spools, plywood are stacked everywhere. It's all donated, much of it from Southern Displays, a company that builds booths for conventions. The kids rip old booths apart and build whatever they want. It's their choice. Martin said he's constructing a boat. He's trying to pound a long nail through two thick pieces of wood. When his arm tires, he rests the hammer on the bench, massages the muscles, then begins again.

After several minutes, he realizes more leverage is needed, and he climbs onto the bench. Finally the nail joins the two pieces. He puts a similar contrivance on the other end, then moves to the paint table and begins to decorate it.

It's a boat that perhaps may never sail, but Martin is satisfied. He feels power in the nails he pounds and the pieces of wood that go together the way he intends. It's something he can control.

Hager, who is co-founder of Esperanza, the outdoor school in Montrose, said the kids he first saw at Freed Park were different than those he had seen in his school.

"To go into the carpentry center, to find a piece of lumber, get an idea, hammer it, re-hammer it when it splits — that takes a lot of power that some of these kids don't feel," he observes. "Unless your life is stable, you pull back and don't explore. Everything breaks. Nothing works for these kids."

Most of the children live in three apartment complexes that surround the park. Some go home to empty apartments because both parents must work to make ends meet. Sometimes the cupboard gets dangerously bare.

At the Adventure Playground Christmas party last year, Hager said one 12-year-old grabbed the big bag of popcorn intended for everyone and dragged it around the playground, eating it as he went. When the counselor asked him why, he said, "I thought I might not get some. Is that a good answer?"

On another afternoon Hager walked to the 7-Eleven with two 6-year-old boys. As they walked, the two inventoried the cupboard at home. One said he knew they had some mayonnaise and bread. The other said maybe if they got some meat, they could make a sandwich. Hager bought them dinner — a sandwich — and gave them $2.50 each to buy something for their sister at home.

The boys told Hager they liked school because it meant free lunch and breakfast. But their work didn't show it. One boy showed the counselor a paper he had turned in when the teacher asked students to tell what they liked about Thanksgiving.

He wrote, "I heat pumpkin pie. I heat Thanksgiving. I heat Turkey. I heat the Pilgrims, and I heat you."

The teacher returned the paper with the spelling of hate corrected.

"The problem is these kids are so preoccupied, so extremely nervous about what they're going to do, they can't work," Hager said.

In addition to food, when the rent comes due, many children find they must move on because the family paycheck hasn't stretched far enough again.

Betty Hughes, a counselor at Housman Elementary School and catalyst for the playground's beginning (she's president of the newly formed Freed Park Adventure Play Association), said 50 percent of the children at her school moved at least once last year.

And, in a survey she conducted in May 1982 of 9,500 children in the city, 33 percent were latchkey kids. At some schools, 44 percent of the students were latchkey youngsters.

The average age that children are first left alone is 8, although professionals agree that most children aren't mature enough to be unsupervised after school until age 12.

Ms. Hughes believes the situation is a dangerous one throughout Houston.

It is for these kids that she approached The Metropolitan Organization, a group of citizens from churches in the Houston area, with the concept for Adventure Park. A latchkey committee was formed, with Ms. Hughes as chairman. A $30,620 startup budget was set and a $33,909 budget for the 1984-85 school year, most of the funding coming from private donations.

The committee then approached Houston Parks and Recreation's Donald G. Olson who, with the support of Mayor Kathy Whitmire, agreed to operate the program under the auspices of the department, providing space, help with utilities and trucks to move materials.

The program now has a commitment to operate for two years with a budget of $89,584, but some of that money has yet to be raised.

Ms. Hughes asked Hager to supervise the playground, since he had been involved in Mountain Park, a for-profit venture that was based on the Adventure Playground concept that originated in Europe.

The school counselor wanted a program similar to the one she toured in Denmark in the summer of 1983. At the Tingbjerg Fritidscenter, an Adventure Playground in Copenhagen that is part of a network that covers the city, she saw a dream to bring home.

The Danish center serves all ages — not just children — from preschool to over 65 years with activities such as computer training, filmmaking, a soft drink disco for teens, carpentry, animals, a large garden, a swimming pool for toddlers, tires for swings and houses built by the children who play in the center.

The cost to parents is $2.78 a month with the remaining 90 percent of costs being paid by the Danish government. Apartments near the center rent for $222 to $277 a month, and $1.66 is taken from the rent for use of the playground.

Field trips to a farm for 14 days cost $3.34; to France for 14 days, $111; to Yugoslavia for 10 days, $133; and to Norway for 10 days, $100.

Although U.S. programs are far from approaching such sophistication, Ms. Hughes' goal is to see Adventure Parks like the one in Spring Branch all over the city. If this one works, she thinks it can happen. It needs to, she said.

According to U.S. Census figures and Children's Resource and Information Service, about 250,000 children in Harris County between the ages of 6 and 13 are without supervision after school each day. More than 65.5 percent of mothers with children ages 6 to 17 work full time, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The Houston Independent School District now has 67 campuses with extended day care. North Forest ISD is the only other district in Harris County that offers such a program.

Not only do such programs prevent crime by youth; they also provide a safe place for children who have no responsible adult available after school, Ms. Hughes said.

Flooding damages crops, land in large area

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Crop losses in the Coastal Bend area are still being determined following flood damage resulting from an average of 6 inches of rain over most of the district late last week, but elsewhere in the state spring planting is moving ahead rapidly.

Much severe flooding and soil erosion was reported in the district, particularly in San Patricio County, where livestock also were flood casualties. Most of the flooded-out crops probably will not be replanted due to lateness of the season, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Across the state, the wheat crop is progressing although rust is a problem in a number of areas. Economically significant rust damage has been narrowed to one wheat variety in Southwest Texas. Some leaf rust also is reported in the Panhandle and South Plains, where short moisture is another concern, said Carpenter.

Producers took advantage of open weather to hasten planting of corn, sorghum and cotton, although cooler soil temperatures are being monitored carefully in many areas. Preparation has begun for cotton planting in Far West Texas, and some alfalfa has been baled there and in the Rolling Plains with good quality reported. Farmers also are continuing to harvest some small grains for hay.

Cooler nights have kept soil temperatures from warming up much, noted Carpenter. Temperature readings at the 4-inch depth as recorded by the National Weather Service's Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University averaged as follows for the past week: Austin, 64 degrees F.; Beaumont, 70; Beeville, 68; Big Spring, 66; Bushland, 63; College Station, 66; Corpus Christi, 71; Dell City, 68; Dilley, 73; Eagle Lake, 68; Haskell, 71; Lavon Dam, northeast of Dallas, 65; Longview, 75; Lubbock, 71; Lufkin, 69; Pecos, 65; San Angelo, 70; Stephenville, 74; Uvalde, 69; Waco, 66, and Weslaco, 75.

Minimum soil temperatures recommended by the Extension Service for good seed germination are 50 degrees F. for corn, 55 for sorghum and 65 for cotton.

Condition of cattle continues to improve as forages and grasses make progress, and the calf crop appears to be off to a good start in many areas despite last year's severe drought. Sheep and goats in Far West Texas are reported in excellent condition.

At mid-week, District Extension directors reported these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Winds are depleting surface moisture, but most wheat fields are making good progress. Leaf rust is evident in some fields, however. Sugar beet, potato and onion plantings are in full swing in Deaf Smith County. Wheat is providing good grazing.

SOUTH PLAINS: Moisture is adequate to short throughout the district. Irrigation and application of fertilizer and herbicides continues, and corn and sugar beet planting is well under way. Onion and potato planting continues. The wheat crop looks good, but some leaf rust is being reported. A major activity is planting preparation for cotton in late April.

ROLLING PLAINS: Wheat prospects continue excellent, with most of the crop in the boot stage. Farmers continue to prepare seed beds for spring planting. Most sorghum hay crops have been planted, and farmers also continue to harvest some small grains for hay. First alfalfa cuttings this past week resulted in mostly average yields. Pecan trees are receiving first zinc applications. Home vegetable gardens are being planted.

NORTH CENTRAL: Most wheat has headed, but some insect and mildew problems are reported. The oats crop is in the boot to head stages, and corn and sorghum crops are up to good stands. Hay crops are being planted along with bunch vegetables.

NORTHEAST: High winds are drying soils, and fertilizer applications are under way for hay crops. Spring grasses are making excellent growth, and cattle are improving in overall condition. Home gardens need top soil moisture.

FAR WEST: Moisture is short to adequate, and ranges could use a good rain. Alfalfa is being baled, with good quality reported. Sheep and goats are in excellent condition, and cattle are in fair to good condition. Planting of chile, onions and cantaloupes continues.

WEST CENTRAL: The entire district needs a good soaking rain, since strong drying winds have depleted surface moisture. Rust is becoming a problem in the wheat crop, along with dry conditions. A few hay fields are being planted and some oats are being baled. Despite last year's drought, the calf crop percentage appears good at this time. The number of cattle being marketed is declining. Pecan tree owners are spraying for insect control.

CENTRAL: Excess surface moisture is affecting wheat maturity. Hybrid sudan sorghum is being planted. Native range conditions are improving where grasses survived last year's drought. Cattle are having problems with hornflies. Early indications point to excellent prospects for peach and plum production this season.

EAST: Corn is up to excellent stands and making good growth, and much of the oat crop is in the boot stage. Fertilizer is being applied to hay fields. Clover and rye pastures are needing moisture. A good calf crop is reported. Commercial vegetable crops are progressing well and peach producers are applying fungicides and pesticides and beginning to thin their peach crop. Pecan growers have sprayed once.

UPPER COAST: Planting of corn, grain sorghum, rice and watermelons in progress, with field work in Wharton County halted by heavy rains last week. Cattle in good flesh in Brazoria, Colorado and Jackson Counties, with pasture forage in excellent supply. Vegetable crops also are progressing. Peach trees are being sprayed for black spot and insect problems.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Cotton planting continues along with spraying of wheat fields for rust control. Most vegetable gardens have been planted and fruit crops are progressing with some spraying under way. Pecan trees are in the bloom stage.

SOUTHWEST: Grain and cotton fields are making slow growth due to cool temperatures. Recent light rains will help fill out wheat kernels as they pass through the soft dough stage. Weeds are growing rapidly, but recent moisture should help bring grasses through the weed cover. Ranchers are restocking gradually after last year's drought. Flies and other insects are becoming a problem for livestock and crops.

COASTAL BEND: Most of the district received an average of 6 inches of rainfall last week, with San Patricio County getting much more. Some crops were flooded and others damaged by strong winds and washing rains, which also resulted in severe soil erosion. Some livestock were lost to floods. Crops damaged by floods probably will not be replanted due to lateness of the season. Most corn, cotton and sorghum crops are planted and most wheat fields have headed. Vegetable gardens are doing well.

SOUTH: Corn is progressing well and grain sorghum is making rapid growth despite cool temperatures. Hay is in short supply and grass growth is slow. Ranges and pastures are in fair condition, and cattle are putting on weight. The market is strong for young cows and heifers. Light supplies of cabbage, carrots and onions are being harvested and melon fields are being pollinated. Bloom continues on citrus trees, with some fruit beginning to size.

Two senators proposing 'transition payments' to farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the search goes on in Congress for a formula to rescue U.S. agriculture from its economic doldrums, two farm-state senators are proposing an idea guaranteed to at least get noticed.

Sens. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., and David Boren, D-Okla., say they will introduce legislation that includes something called "transition payments" to farmers, to help them survive until their export markets rebound from the current slump.

The payments would be substantial — up to $63,000 per farmer in 1986, declining to a maximum of $91,500 in 1990. And the sponsors conceded that their bill "is not the cheapest farm plan coming down the pike by any means."

The transition payments would be based on a farmer's production of wheat, corn, cotton or rice in the 1984-85 crop year and would use a sliding scale that diminishes the payment rate on larger farms.

Farmers would collect their payments regardless of what they do with their land. If the payment is based on past corn production, for example, a farmer could switch to growing soybeans or even leave it idle and still receive the money each year, Boschwitz said. "It's an up-front, straight cash payment for them to use however they see fit," he said.

The payments represent the most unusual and perhaps the most generous safety net offered in any comprehensive legislation advanced so far in the 1985 farm bill debate.

But like other alternatives before Congress as it labors to draw up a new generation of agriculture policy, the goal of the Boschwitz-Boren plan is to dramatically cut price supports to the point where U.S. farm goods can again compete in world markets. The income guarantee payments would shelter farmers from the initial shock of lower prices supports.

"Our farmers want to produce. They want to be competitive, and they can be competitive," Boschwitz said Thursday at a news conference called to outline what he said is the first bipartisan farm bill to be drawn up in the Senate.

Boschwitz said substantial cuts in price-support loan rates would offset the increase in the value of the dollar relative to other world currencies since 1981. That increase has had the effect of hidden tax on U.S. farm exports and has contributed to a marked slide in world market share for major grains.

"Even the Agriculture Department says this would do more to increase farm prices and net farm income than their own proposal," Boren told reporters.

But whether such a plan can work, or any of the other legislation that vests its hope in export recovery, remains an open question.

Neither sponsor could come up with firm cost estimates, although Boschwitz said he had seen figures ranging from around $14.5 billion up to about $18 billion for its 1986 cost. An administration agreement with Senate leaders would allocate about $14.6 billion for price-support programs that year, although that number is far from final.

BY JOE VANZANDT County Extension Agent WHEAT LEAF RUST TOUR

On Wednesday, April 24, at 1:30 p.m., we will meet in front of the Courthouse Annex to have a tour inspecting wheat for leaf rust. Dr. Bob Berry and Dr. Frank Petr will be present for the tour and discussions about rust and wheat varieties.

The tour will inspect two wheat variety demonstrations for the degree of leaf rust infestations and any variety differences noted. One demonstration is located one mile west of Memory Garden's Cemetery on one of Neil Stovall's farms.

The other wheat variety demonstration is just west of John Spearman's house, northeast of Pampa. While we are east of town, we will also go by a winter barley variety demonstration on the Earl Smith farm.

Anyone interested in learning more about leaf rust and in seeing these variety plots at this stage of growth are certainly welcome to make the tour. See you Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 p.m. at the Annex.

EAST PANHANDLE RANGE TOUR

A Range Tour will be held in the Alanreed-McLean area on May 2. The tour starts at 9:30 a.m. on the O.J. Weldon place, just southeast of Alanreed on Highway 291. The first stop at Weldon's will inspect yucca control. The plot is on the south side of the old railroad and on the east side of the highway. Other stops will inspect Goldaster weed plots and mesquite control on Joe Magee. Shin Oak control will be checked on Jake Hess II and Tony Smitherman.

The tour will arrive at the Gray

County Ag Barn in the southeast edge of McLean for a free noon barbecue. Following lunch, short presentations and a panel discussion will cover rangeland weed control, range grasses and improved pasture grasses. Also, control of internal parasites (grubs and worms) and fly control with ear tags on cattle will also be discussed. The program should adjourn by 2:30 p.m. Transportation will be by private automobile.

Meal reservations should be made before noon, May 1, by calling one of the sponsoring County Extension Offices:

Donley - 874-2141; Gray - 669-7429; Collingsworth - 447-2313; or Wheeler - 826-5243.

Texas Agricultural Extension Service specialists who will assist with discussions include: J.F. Cadenhead, range and brush control; Frank Petr, agronomist; and Carl Patrick, entomologist. Also, County Extension Agents in the sponsoring counties will assist with program discussions.

COMBATTING HORN FLY RESISTANCE TO PYRETHROID EAR TAGS

During the past year, horn flies in eastern and southern areas have begun to develop some resistance to ear tags impregnated with pyrethroid insecticides.

Cattlemen using insecticide ear tags on their herds need to keep a close check on control once the horn fly season is at hand to determine whether or not the tags are effective.

We suggest these strategies for managing horn flies:

Do not apply insecticide-treated ear tags to animals before economically damaging populations of horn flies develop.

Horn fly resistance to pyrethroid insecticides can be suspected if new tags have not satisfactorily reduced fly numbers within 10 to 12 days.

Animal treatments with insecticides which have an alternate type action should be used in normal treatment schedules before pyrethroid resistance becomes evident. Dust bags, oilers and other self-treatment devices should be used to reduce and delay the pyrethroid resistance problem.

Spray, "pour-on," "spot-on" or dust treatments with phosphate compounds - coumaphos (Co-Ral), crotoxyphos (Clodrin), dichlorovox (Vapona), dioxathion (Deinav) or malathion - provide a different mode of killing action and can be used to reduce pyrethroid resistance and to control horn fly populations.

Whole-body sprays of pyrethroid insecticides should not be used to control resistant flies which can not be controlled with ear tags as these sprays will provide significantly higher selection levels of already resistant flies.

Remove ear tags from animals as soon as they have lost their effectiveness in killing target pests. Tags emitting a sublethal dose to the animal appear to add to the resistance problem by killing or weakening susceptible individuals in the population.

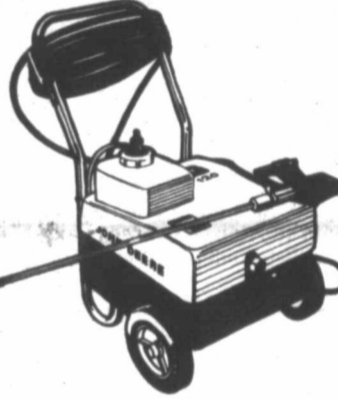

Pyrethroid tags can be successfully used to manage horn flies where resistance has not developed. In general, western and southern areas of Texas have not experienced a resistance problem. However, tagging entire herds year after year with pyrethroid ear tags can develop serious resistance.

Some producers are enjoying satisfactory management of horn flies by tagging only the calves in the herd. Fly movement within the herd is sufficient to achieve control in this manner. Self-treatment devices with phosphate-type insecticides can be easily integrated into the management system if pyrethroid resistance develops or is suspected.

Suggestions for managing the horn fly resistance problem must be considered on a herd-by-herd basis. Previous herd treatments must be considered as well as possible cases of resistance already at hand.

New ear tags are being developed which disperse phosphate-type insecticides to combat the pyrethroid resistance problem, but these have not been evaluated under Texas conditions.

Texaco official sees more industry cutbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. oil companies can no longer compete with subsidized overseas exporters and will continue shutting down refineries if they don't get some trade protection, an officer of Texaco Inc. told a Senate hearing.
 William Tell, a Texaco senior vice president, said last week that the company has closed or sold refineries because of unfair trade practices by other countries.
 Texaco recently closed its Amarillo refinery and laid off 1,200 workers from its Port Arthur refinery.

 "There are powerful trends in motion," Tell said. "They have taken their toll. From our perspective we see, really, little basis to believe that these trends are about to level off or reverse."
 Tell told Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who conducted the Joint Economic Committee hearing that U.S. refineries cannot get any more productive, they just cannot compete with overseas refiners who are subsidized by their governments.

"I don't think of us as protectionists," Tell said. "I can think of no company that has had a stronger commitment to the principles of free trade, and we continue to support free trade. We don't think it's unreasonable, however, to insist that that free trade also be fair, and it certainly isn't fair at the present time."
 Tell said overseas companies continue to build expensive, modern new refineries, Japan has closed its doors to oil imports and European countries are considering doing the same.

 "And here we are, the prize market with the door pretty widely open," Tell said.
 "I have always been for free trade, but by God, it should be just as free for us as it is for them," said Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont.
 Brooks said that in 1980, Money Magazine rated his home town of Beaumont as the best American city in which to work and live. Today, however, the area is "one of the most economically deprived

Oil consumption increases as imports climb

By BARRY SCHWEID
 AP Diplomatic Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — As the United States recovers from the recession, oil consumption increases, and so do oil imports. They rose 7.7 percent last year, the first jump in five years.
 Oil is still plentiful. According to Edward Murphy, director of statistics from the American Petroleum Institute, there are at least 10 million barrels a day in excess capacity on world markets. Despite the glut, however, and as U.S. imports increase, Saudi Arabia remains a major influence on oil prices.

 More than a decade ago, the
An AP News Analysis
 Nixon administration paid close attention to what the Saudis had to say about world events, particularly the Arab-Israeli conflict. At the same time, the United States tried to persuade the Saudis to use their influence in the Arab world to promote a settlement.

 That process continues today. The Reagan administration, like its predecessors, is hoping the Saudis will promote negotiations between Israel and a mixed Jordanian-Palestinian delegation. The Saudis, in turn, hope to influence U.S. policy.
 How the Saudis try to exert their influence is not very easy to trace. The rulers of the desert kingdom operate quietly, even within Arab councils.

How they operate in the United States remains mostly a mystery. Unlike Israel, for instance, whose supporters are both persistent and vocal, the Saudis are usually low-key.
 According to a new book, "The American House of Saud: The Secret Petrodollar Connection," the Saudis have quietly translated their immense oil wealth — $661 billion in oil earnings from 1973 to 1984 — into immense political power.
 During the congressional fight over the purchase of U.S. AWACS radar planes, Emerson says, the Saudis held up all contract negotiations with American companies.

Two Texas firms plead guilty to charges of selling illegal pesticides

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Two Texas pesticide dealers face possible fines of several thousand dollars for illegally distributing restricted pesticides.
 M&J Fertilizer & Chemical Co. of Winnie and the American Rice Growers Association-Anahuac Division pleaded guilty in federal court Thursday to the charges.
 U.S. Magistrate Earl Hines accepted the pleas and set a May 17 sentencing in both cases.
 Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Naman told the Beaumont Enterprise-Journal the charge against the rice growers group was "where the whole thing started."
 The co-op agreed to plead guilty to the charge and give prosecutors information in the pesticide case in exchange for immunity from prosecution for individual farmers, Naman said.
 The rice co-op was charged with selling Furaldan, a pesticide that was originally developed by the military as a nerve gas.
 The single misdemeanor count against the rice growers' group is punishable by a maximum fine of $25,000.
 Joe Eddleman, M&J general manager, pleaded guilty to four counts on behalf of the fertilizer company. M&J could be fined up to $100,000 for the four misdemeanor counts with which it is charged

 M&J was charged with selling to rice farmers the chemical aldrin, a suspected carcinogen that has been sold illegally to kill birds that eat rice seeds.

Restoration of rare 'boat tail' roadster of '30s major project

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
PALM SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Denny Smallridge is a friendly individual who would share most anything with a close friend — except his car.

Not the three or four automobiles he, his wife and son usually drive around town when the vehicles are not on display in local auto shows; it's the roadster Smallridge is so possessive about.

People old enough to recall the elegant cars of the early 1930s may never have encountered one of these. Only about 200 of the 1931 Auburn "Boat Tail" roadsters were ever made at the Indiana plant.

It was a rare car even then, explains Smallridge, because it was a limited edition model and its cost was an extravagant $3,000 or so.

"It was a gentleman's car," says Smallridge, president of an air-conditioning firm here, as he gingerly wheels the two-seater through a residential section of town. Heads turn, drivers stop and pedestrians stare at this rare, vintage automobile.

Smallridge estimates there may be a half dozen vehicles like his in running condition around the country, but he hasn't encountered one that can match the authenticity of this car.

What makes his "Boat Tail" so special is he restored the eight-cylinder convertible exactly as it was when it rolled out of the Auburn, Ind., factory. That includes such minute details as the same type of wiring, materials, paint, fabric and screws and bolts as were used 54 years ago.

Since many of the car's parts and accessories are unavailable, they had to be recast or machined according to original specifications.

"I've kept all the bills, but I've never totaled them. If I knew how much it cost me, it might take part of the fun out of it," he said.

He vividly remembers spending $85 apiece to have new door handles made, $184 to reproduce a small oblong-shaped rear view mirror and over $1,200 for castings to hold two pieces of glass that make up the car's windshield.

Admittedly, he fell in love with the vehicle from pictures received from a Philadelphia estate that had it for sale.

The bullet-like rear end for which it was given the "Boat Tail" nickname is eye-catching. Some of the amenities, like a special compartment for a bag of golf clubs, a center spotlight that turns with the steering wheel and an independent lubricating system for clutch bearings, springs and shackles, were irresistible.

Smallridge purchased the car unseen for a price he won't divulge. What he got was a car body loosely bolted onto the chassis and several boxes filled with parts. Rust and corrosion had taken their toll, requiring endless days and nights of manual labor for refurbishing.

"The four motor compartment latches took 30 hours each just to prepare them for finishing," he says.

The restoration project was completed in May 1984. Since then, he has entered the classic, painted cream and light milk chocolate, in several car shows, along with the Ford Mustang and 1940s-era Pontiac he owns. Each time, the "Boat Tail" won the blue ribbons.

He's been offered upward of $80,000 for the car.

'Designer drugs' nightmare for enforcement officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dangerous new drugs developed by underground chemists are conjuring up nightmares for public health experts, law enforcement officials and some members of Congress.

The so-called "designer drugs" have been blamed for dozens of deaths, mainly in California, officials say. If they spread across the country, they could create a public health disaster, according to drug experts.

The drugs can shoot the users higher than morphine, are inexpensive to produce and can be made in enough quantity by one chemist to meet the entire nation's heroin demand.

And they are beyond the reach of the law.

A designer drug is a controlled substance modified slightly to produce a "chemical cousin" not covered by the Controlled Substances Act. A chemist adding a fluoride or an extra carbon molecule can create a new drug that will produce a high but is not illegal.

Often, while the Drug Enforcement Administration moves to control the new substance, a chemist may be marketing a new variation beyond the reach of the regulation.

"Whatever success we achieve in destroying drug crops and interdicting drug shipments will be of little consequence if the opium fields of Asia and the coca fields of Colombia are replaced by clandestine laboratories in the United States," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla.

Chiles, who introduced legislation to require federal study of the problem, said, "... in all likelihood they (designer drugs) will spread to the rest of the country."

Increasing use of dialects concerns Swiss

By BRENDA WATSON
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — In English, it's an onion.

In "proper" German, it's "zwiebel" (pronounced zweebul). But in German-speaking Switzerland — about 73 percent of the 5.5 million multilingual population — it can be anything from a "zibe" to a "boe," in one of numerous Swiss German, or "Schwyzerduetsch," dialects.

The multitude of "Schwyzerduetsch" dialects has long presented a problem for the non-German-speaking Swiss minority who want to communicate with their fellow countrymen in German.

Swiss educators in German-speaking areas say they are alarmed by an apparent increase in the use of the dialects in elementary and high school classrooms and on radio and television, saying it threatens to widen an existing gap between Switzerland's different language regions.

This small country has four official languages: German, French, Italian and a rare form of Caesar's Latin, Rhaeto-Romanisch.

French speakers are about 20 percent of the population and Italian speakers nearly 7 percent. Less than 1 percent are Romansch speakers, hailing from the valleys of the southeastern canton (state) of Graubunden which is called "Grisoni" in Italian and "Grischa" in Romansch — since both are also spoken there, and Grisons in French — which is not.

Non-native German speakers who learn "high German" (Hoch Deutsche) or as the proud German-speaking Swiss say "Schrift-Deutsche" (written German) in school, are often frustrated when they try it out on their Schwyzerduetsch-speaking counterparts, who shoot back a seemingly unintelligible, tongue-twisting string of words in a local dialect.

Hellmut Thomke, formerly a German instructor at a high school in the Italian-speaking canton of Ticino, said many of his students told him tales of woe about attempts to communicate with the "Schweizers."

Thomke, currently a Bern University professor of German language and literature, said there had been a resurgence of the use of Schwyzerduetsch dialects since about 1970 in classrooms and on television and radio, where the use of "high German" was previously the rule.

He said he had written an article about the trend seven years ago, and his comments helped trigger an investigation by Bern authorities. The probe, begun three years ago, is due to be finished this year, he said.

Thomke said his observation was that "more and more dialects are being spoken in classrooms, especially by the younger teachers."

"It is very dangerous for communication and understanding between people in the four-language Switzerland," Thomke told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

A recent issue of the French-language Geneva daily newspaper La Suisse shares the alarm, headlining its story, "Dialect versus High-German."

The article quoted Hansjoerg Graf of the Zurich canton Department of Education as saying the decline in the use of "high German" was having a "very bad influence" on the oral and written communications skills of high school students.

"They make more and more mistakes in tense, case and style in their essays," he was quoted, referring to the complicated rules of grammar almost unknown to native speakers of English unfamiliar with languages where the article "the" can have many different forms.

In an apparent attempt to bridge this language chasm, a pair of Swiss linguists have recently developed a "Schwyzerduetsch" language course aimed at Switzerland's non-native German speakers.

The textbook — written in "high German," of course — presents the student with everyday situations in Basel, Bern and Zurich, three cities with distinctive dialects.

The course was designed by Martin Mueller and Lukas Wertenschlag of the German Language Institute in the University of Fribourg, itself a bilingual city on the border of French- and German-speaking regions, and called "Freiburg" in German.

The two designed the course for students in French-, Italian- and Romansch-speaking areas who they said were "not very motivated" to learn high German

EXTRA GOLD DISCOVERED

Coors Announces New Product

Extra Gold, Extra Commitment

Going the extra step — it's the way we've always done things at Coors.

With that in mind, Adolph Coors Company has developed a new beer with something extra — we call it Coors Extra Gold.

Extra Gold is a beer with a taste you can actually see. In comparison to other full-bodied premium beers, Extra Gold has a deeper, more golden color, with the more robust taste many premium beer drinkers demand.

We at Coors have always put a little extra into our products to make them the best they can be — and Extra Gold is no exception.

"Every aspect of this product has been thoroughly tested — from the packaging and the advertising to consumer approval of the final product," said Bob McBride, Coors Extra Gold brand manager. "Extensive consumer research has demonstrated that once a beer drinker who prefers a fuller-bodied brew tries Coors Extra Gold, he is highly likely to purchase it again."

"We at Coors have always put a little extra into our products to make them the best they can be — and Extra Gold is no exception."

Loyal consumers — that's what makes a strong, successful brand," McBride said.

Coors believes the time is right for a new premium beer that offers a little extra. "We see a segment of the market that wants a bolder taste, and we've developed a product that will fill the need," said Robert A. Rechholtz, executive vice president of sales and marketing.

We at Coors know what you've been looking for. A more robust beer with a rich, golden color — a beer with the taste you can see.

So try something extra — Extra Gold.

Coors

EXTRA GOLD

"... Extra Gold will prove to be as strong an addition to the Coors product line as Coors Light has been."

GOLDEN, Colo. — A rich, robust, full-bodied taste and quality that lives up to its name are two key selling features of Adolph Coors Company's newest beer, Coors Extra Gold.

The new full-bodied premium will be test marketed in Jacksonville and St. Augustine, Fla.; Austin, Amarillo and Pampa, Texas; Sacramento, Stockton, Modesto, Portola, Sonora, Susanville and Yuba City, Calif.; Reno and Winnemucca, Nev.; and Boise, Twin Falls and Hailey, Idaho. Additional test markets may be added later this year.

Introduction of Coors Extra Gold as a line extension is seen as an all-out attack by the Golden-based brewer to more aggressively compete in what has been termed the "beer wars."

According to Robert A. Rechholtz, executive vice president of sales and marketing, Coors Extra Gold has been researched more thoroughly than any other Coors product with very positive test results. In addition, the brand will be supported by the heaviest advertising budget for any Coors brand in the history of the company.

"While we find many consumers who are totally satisfied with the distinctive smoothness and drinkability of Coors, we have seen a move on the part of some consumers to try new brands within the premium segment — a segment which represents almost 50 percent of the industry volume. We are responding to this change in consumer demand," said Rechholtz.

"We also find consumers who now say they want a more robust taste. We believe Coors Extra Gold will capture the distinctive attributes these consumers say they want without sacrificing drinkability," he said.

The theme "Coors Extra Gold, the Beer with the Taste You Can See" was developed by Tatham, Laird and Kudner in Chicago, Ill., for use in print, radio and television. This tag line focuses on the rich, golden color of Coors Extra Gold which is indicative of its full-bodied, robust taste.

Rechholtz added that Coors Extra Gold will complement the company's flagship and light brands.

"We are convinced that Coors

Extra Gold will prove to be as strong an addition to the Coors product line as Coors Light has been," he continued. "Adding Extra Gold will provide a full range of Coors products for all consumer tastes and ensure future growth for the Coors franchise."

Coors Extra Gold will be marketed initially in 12-ounce non-returnable bottles and 12-ounce cans.

Pampa girls win district

PLAINVIEW — As expected, the Pampa Lady Harvesters won the District 1-4A track championship Saturday with plenty of room to spare.

The Lady Harvesters, unbeaten all season, rolled up 186 points to far outdistance second-place Canyon and Borger, who both ended up tied.

"The girls did well. We had a lot of personal bests. I was just real pleased with them," said Pampa coach Gary Cornelsen.

Pampa jumped out in front early and scored 82 points in the field events alone.

Sandra Farrah won both the shot put and discus. Her 119-0 toss in the discus was her best ever. Andrea Hopkins finished second to Miss Farrah in both events. Kristi Hughes won the high jump with a 5-4 leap and freshman Tanya Lidy pulled off the surprise of the day when she won the triple jump with a school-record 37-10 leap. Miss Lidy seldom places in the event and her record-setting jump was her best by four feet. Teammate Sandee Greenway finished third with a 35-10 jump, but it was also a school record.

"Tanya really amazed me with that jump. She had a super day," Cornelsen said. "I guess you might say they all did."

Miss Lidy also won the 200 with a school record of 24.6 and was the anchor on Pampa's winning 400 and 1600-meter relay teams. Pampa's 1600-meter relay team also came in first.

Courtney Brown won the 100 with a personal best of 12.3 and teammate Linda Ammons took second with her best time of 12.4. "Our relay times weren't quite as good as they could have been, but we weren't really pushed, so we tried to keep our handoffs safe," Cornelsen said. "I feel like we'll be able to run better times when the regionals get here."

The Class 4A girls' regionals will be held in two weeks in Brownwood. The top two teams and individuals in district qualify.

Pampa placed fifth in the boys' meet which was won by Lubbock Dunbar. The Harvesters will send discus thrower Lyle Vanbuskirk and the 440-meter relay team of Marvin Jackson, Dennis Dailey, Robby Ellison and Early Jackson to regionals.

Vanbuskirk won the discus event with a personal best throw of 155-5. The 440-relay team placed second with a time of 43.4.

"We've got five people going to regionals in the boys' division which is more than we've qualified in a long time," Cornelsen said. "We did better than we have all season long."

Pampa's results in the girls'

division are as follows:

440-relay: 1. (Jackie Oglesby, Courtney Brown, Sandee Greenway, Tanya Lidy), 49.4.

800-relay: 1. (Beverly Paine, Courtney Brown, Jackie Oglesby, Tanya Lidy), 1:44.

1600-relay: 1. (Tina Greenway, Katrina Jackson, Beverly Paine, Linda Ammons), 4:07.9.

100: 1. Courtney Brown, 12.3; 2. Linda Ammons, 12.4.

200: 1. Tanya Lidy, 24.6.

800: 3. Misty Shofner.

3200: 4. Tacy Stoddard.

High Hurdles: 2. Kristi Hughes.

High Jump: 1. Kristi Hughes, 5-4.

Long Jump: 2. Kristi Hughes, 17-9.

Triple Jump: 1. Tanya Lidy, 37-10; 3. Sandee Greenway, 35-10.

Shot Put: 1. Sandra Farrah; 2. Andrea Hopkins; 4. Stacey Bennett.

Discus: 1. Sandra Farrah, 119-0; 2. Andrea Hopkins; 3. Stacey Bennett.

Boys Division

Discus: 1. Lyle Vanbuskirk, 155-4.

100: 5. Lance Ripple, 10.9.

200: 6. Marvin Jackson, 22.1.

3200: 3. Willie Jacobs.

440-relay: 2. (Kelly Wyatt, Lance Ripple, Marvin Jackson, Gary Jernigan), 43.4.

Mile Relay: 3. (Marvin Jackson, Dennis Dailey, Robbie Ellyson, Early Jackson).

100-METER WINNER: Pampa sprinter Courtney Brown won the 100 with a personal best of 12.3 at the District 1-4A girls' track meet Saturday. Miss Brown also ran the second leg on Pampa's winning 400 and 800-meter relay teams.

Tennis Club to meet

The Pampa Tennis Club will meet at 7 p.m. Monday night in the meeting room of Citizens National Bank.

Lady Harvesters qualify for golf regionals

BORGER — Pampa High girls' golf squad clinched a trip to the Class 4A regional tournament by placing second in the final District 1-4A standings.

The Lady Harvesters played their final district round Saturday at Borger and came in with a 384 to finish second to Borger's 376. Overall, Borger won the district championship with a total score of 1,974 while Pampa's 2,003 was good enough for the runnerup spot.

Girls' coach Frank McCullough said as far as he knew this was the first time a Pampa girls' team has ever qualified for regionals.

"I talked to Deck Woldt (longtime Pampa coach) and he couldn't remember a girls' team ever getting as far as regionals," McCullough said. "I'm just very pleased with our girls. They've worked hard all year and it's paid off for them."

Pampa's B team finished fourth in the final standings with a 2,271, but was third with a 440 in yesterday's district round.

"The B team has really improved since the first of the season," McCullough said. "I'm really proud of the way these girls have progressed."

In the medalist race, Borger's Audra Parker won top honors with a 433 and Dumas' Amy McDougall was runnerup with a 441. Pampa's Brianna Marsh was third with a 489. In Saturday's round, Miss Parker shot an 86 for medalist honors while Pampa's Jessica Baker was second with a 92. Miss McDougall of Dumas was third with a 94.

Following Miss Baker for Pampa were DeLynn Ashford, 94; Miss Marsh, 97; Becky Starnes, 101, and Kim Harris, 107.

For the Pampa B team, Lisa Coon shot a 105, Leigh Harnley and Kathleen Dunigan, 110 each, and Robin Rohde, 115.

The Lady Harvesters have two weeks to practice for the regionals, which is set for May 1-2 at Brownwood.

"If we go and play like we did today (Saturday), I feel like we've got a chance to do well, but it's going to be tough," McCullough said.

Golf's battle of the sexes may be best spring sporting event in Lone Star State

By DENNEH FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Let's see, down here in the Texas spring sports world we've got three teams in the National Basketball Association playoffs and the American League and National League baseball seasons have started.

Mickey Sullivan's Baylor Bears are the surprise leaders of the Southwest Conference baseball chase and spring football is just about over.

The professional tennis people have been on the scene at Dallas and Houston and the McDonald's High School All-Star basketball showcase game is history.

The Pro Bowlers have come calling and the Major Indoor Soccer League is finally in the books.

We've had the Women's Final Four and NCAA Swimming Championships in Austin and the Midwest Regional in Dallas and are currently "enjoying" United States Football League games.

Roy Martin ran wild at the Texas Relays in the 100 meters and there's more to come in May at the University Interscholastic Meet in Austin.

The storied old Texas League is underway and don't forget professional boxing that keeps drawing the national television cameras to our state.

There's a dizzying schedule of WCT, NBA, NL, AL, MISL, TL, SWC, UIL, PGA, PBA, USFL, etc....

But now we're finally getting down to the Texas event I've been waiting for all spring.

No, it's not Earl Strom refereeing a Dallas Mavericks game with glue in his whistle.

No, it's not abolition of the USFL. What it is, is, Mickey Wright and Kathy Whitworth trying to beat the good old boys down at the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf next week at Onion Creek Club.

Now folks this is intriguing.

It's not just one game in a 162 contest major league schedule.

Or just another NBA playoff game.

Or just another, yawn, USFL effort.

It's the two best women golfers in history (forgive me Babe Zaharias fans), breaking through the old stuffy traditions of men's golf to compete on an equal footing.

Wright won 82 tournaments, including 13 in 1963. She once shot a 62 in Midland, Texas.

Whitworth was the first member of the LPGA to win $1 million, was player of the year seven times and won 85 tournaments, an all-time record.

No, Wright and Whitworth won't win the better ball tournament.

Diamonds still in business despite loss to Snitz team

EL PASO — The Amarillo Shakey's Diamonds were still alive in the National AAU Women's Basketball Championships Friday night despite a 75-55 defeat by Snitz Manufacturing of Green Bay, Wisc., earlier in the day.

Jazz buries Rockets in playoff opener

HOUSTON (AP) — The Utah Jazz aren't expecting any more second quarter gifts from the Houston Rockets when they meet Sunday in the second game of their best of five National Basketball Association playoff series in The Summit.

"I'm certainly not over-confident because we know they have the capability to come back and win the whole thing," said Jazz forward Adrian Dantley, who scored 34 points in a series opening 115-101 victory for Utah Friday night.

Games three and four are scheduled for Salt Lake City Wednesday and Friday.

A fifth game, if necessary, would be April 28 in Houston.

"I don't expect any more second quarters on Sunday," Dantley said. "The first game is meaningless because they can come back."

The Jazz, although finishing fifth in the NBA's Midwest Division behind second place Houston, had answers to everything the Rockets tried to do.

They outscored Houston 32-15 in the second quarter to take a 17-point 60-43 halftime lead. When the Rockets surged in the third quarter to tie it at 71-71, Utah spurted again to take a 1-0 lead in the series.

Ralph Sampson scored 26 points and had 24 rebounds and Akeem Olajuwon added 14 points and 14 rebounds for the Rockets but the Twin Towers weren't enough to overcome Utah's outside shooting and 7-4 Mark Eaton's inside work.

"There's no question that Ralph and Akeem have more ability than me," the 290-pound Eaton said. "They get a lot of dunks but the bottom line is who wins the game. My objective was to keep Akeem off the glass."

Dantley and Thurl Bailey did most of the damage to the Rockets. Dantley hit 50 percent of his shots and Bailey, who finished with 25 points, was 65 percent from the field.

"Sooner or later we're going to have to start hitting from the outside," Sampson said. "There's a certain point in a game where they know our outside shot isn't going well and they pack it in on you."

The Rockets got 18 points from relief guard John Lucas, including a pair of three-pointers, but Coach Bill Fitch said they came too late.

"We had no one who could hit it when we were still in the game," Fitch said. "The only consistent outside shooter we had was Lucas and that came when we were out of the game."

Utah Coach Frank Layden said there was no time for either team to make drastic changes prior to Sunday's game.

"The first thing you do is you get up early and you go to Mass," Layden said.

Harvesters fall to Lubbock Estacado

District 1-4A leaders Lubbock Estacado broke open a deadlocked game with three runs in the final two innings to defeat the Pampa Harvesters, 7-4, Saturday at Harvester Field.

Estacado broke out with four runs in the first inning while Matadors' pitcher Torey Gant held the Harvesters scoreless the first two frames. But Pampa's bats came alive in the third, and aided by two Estacado errors, knotted the score at 4-all.

Mike Lopez led off by reaching first on a groundball error. Dwayne Roberts singled and Todd Hardin drew a walk to load the bases. Juan Soto, who carries a .383 batting average in district play, brought two runs in with a single to right field. Trace Robbins singled in another run to make it 4-3 and then Brent John laid down a sacrifice bunt to bring in Soto to knot the score.

Howard, the Pampa hurler, settled down after a shaky start to hold Estacado scoreless until the sixth when two runs came across on a triple by William Martin and a sacrifice fly by Gant. Estacado added one more run in the seventh on a run-scoring triple by Ed Walker.

Pampa got two runners on in the fourth and sixth innings, but couldn't plate another run.

Howard went the distance for the Harvesters, giving up nine hits while striking out nine and walking five. His record is now 3-6 overall and 2-4 in league play. Gant surrendered five hits for the Matadors while striking out 11 and walking three. Roberts, Soto, Howard, Robbins and Hardin had one hit each for the Harvesters. Pampa is now 2-7 in district play and 6-11 overall. The Harvesters host Borger at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Blazers down Mavs in overtime

DALLAS (AP) — Portland's Kiki Vandeweghe scored 27 points, including eight in overtime Saturday, as the Trail Blazers rallied to a 124-121 overtime victory over the Dallas Mavericks to deadlock their National Basketball Association playoff series at one game each.

The third game of the best-of-five series in the Western Conference will move to Portland on Tuesday night.

Vandeweghe, the original 1980 draft choice of the Mavericks, hit his last five shots and nailed two free throws with seven seconds to play to ice the game. He was booed by the Reunion Arena crowd everytime he touched the ball.

Dallas' Rolando Blackman, the hero of Thursday night's 139-131 double overtime victory, scored 41 points including a three-pointer with three seconds to play that gave Dallas hope.

However, De nell Valentine hit two free throws and Sam Perkins' wild three-point attempt at the buzzer missed.

The Blazers, trailing by 10 points with 2:06 to play, outscored Dallas 14-4 and tied the game 110-110 in regulation on Mychal Thompson's dunk shot with one second to play.

Thompson scored 25 points including four in overtime. Clyde Drexler had 19 points.

Mark Aguirre added 20 points for the Mavericks.

Portland overcame an atrocious start to trail only 45-43 at halftime.

The Blazers fell behind 19-6 in the first period when they went almost six minutes without a field goal. Portland had one stretch where it was 3 of 17 from the field while Dallas was on a 15-2 run.

The Blazers were jubilant over their comeback.

Portland Coach Jack Ramsay said, "We hung in there and never let it get out of reach. We only got one game out of two but we're going back now to win at Portland."

He added, "We just made some great comebacks and great tough plays."

Vandeweghe said, "When we were down by 10 points Dallas had us in their back pockets. We had nothing to lose. We were going for broke."

"We came down here to get one of two and we think we have the advantage going home," he said.

Thompson said, "We had the attitude we were going to win this game no matter how many overtimes it took."

The Dallas dressing room was a somber one.

"We made a few mistakes you should make in February, not in the playoffs," Aguirre said.

Blackman said, "They hit their big shots in the last few minutes and we missed ours."

The Mavericks had a chance to tie the game 120-120 late in the overtime but Ellis threw the ball out of bounds with 20 seconds left.

"We wanted to inbound the ball to Rolando and I try to get the ball to the corner but nobody knew where it was going so it went out of bounds," said Ellis.

Blackman, who only had six points at halftime, scored 21 of Dallas' last 29 points.

Portland's Sam Bowie had 20 rebounds and Dallas' Sam Perkins added 19.

Dallas was out-rebounded 62-38 by the Blazers.

McLain sentencing re-scheduled

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Sentencing for ex-Detroit Tigers pitching ace Denny McLain was rescheduled for next week after his attorney requested time to interview victims of a loan-sharking scheme that led to the former major league star's racketeering conviction.

McLain, 41, is set to go before U.S. District Judge Elizabeth A. Kovachevich again next Thursday. He faces a maximum penalty of 75 years in prison and an $85,000 fine.

Kovachevich delayed sentencing Friday after defense attorney Arnold Levine argued that portions of a pre-sentence report containing statements were based solely on government interviews with loan-shark victims.

Levine, who is seeking probation for McLain, objected, saying he also wanted an opportunity to talk to the victims if some passages from the document weren't stricken or altered by Kovachevich.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ernst Mueller insisted that the statements belonged in the report, and the judge postponed the proceedings 40 minutes into McLain's hearing.

Earlier, two co-defendants of baseball's last 30-game winner, Seymour Sher and Frank Cocchiaro, were sentenced to 20 years each for racketeering, conspiracy and extortion.

McLain, who wore a gray suit to court and stood before Kovachevich with his hands clasped behind his back, was convicted March 16 of racketeering, conspiracy, extortion and drug dealing. He has been held without bond in the Seminole Correctional Institute.

His wife, Sharon, daughter of baseball Hall of Famer Lou Boudreau, and the couple's four children were among the spectators in a packed courtroom.

In suggesting probation accompanied by one or two days a week of unpaid community service work, Levine said:

"To incarcerate Dennis D. McLain would be repaying the injustice that the jury found he participated in by a greater injustice."

Sher, 59, also was ordered to pay $10,000 restitution to a loan shark victim. He was denied bond.

Cocchiaro's sentence is to run concurrently with a 10-year term he is serving in Atlanta for mail fraud. The 65-year-old inmate has already spent 37 months behind bars in that case.

Prosecutors contended during a 14-week trial that McLain charged loan shark victims interest as high as 150 percent, ran a sports bookmaking operation, and threatened violence to collect debts.

McLain testified in his own defense that he had been involved in bookmaking from time to time, but still maintained he was innocent of the charges in a five-count indictment.

McLain became the first pitcher in 34 years to win 30 games in a season when he posted a 31-6 record in 1968. The Tigers won the American League pennant that season and beat the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series.

FLOORED — Steve Colter of the Portland Trailblazers looks like he's about to tackle Brad Davis of the Dallas Mavericks who tries to pass the ball while lying on the floor. Portland won the first-round playoff game in overtime, 124-121. (AP Laserphoto)

Rangers' Toby Harrah (11) runs into Brewers' second baseman Jim Ganter, breaking up a double play.

Rangers down Brewers

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dickie Noles won his first game as a starter for the Texas Rangers by limiting Milwaukee to one hit over seven innings, and the Rangers beat the Brewers 5-1 Saturday.

Noles and Brewers starter Moose Haas were locked in a duel through the first six innings. Haas retired the first nine batters he faced before Toby Harrah singled in the fourth inning. Noles retired the first eight batters he faced before Brian Giles was safe on an infield hit in the third.

Buddy Bell tripped to open the seventh inning for the Rangers, and he scored on Pete O'Brien's ground out to shortstop. After Cliff Johnson and George Wright ripped consecutive singles, Don Slaught hit a ground ball that third baseman Paul Molitor could not field for one error. Wayne Tolleson, who was running for Johnson, scored, and Wright raced home when left-fielder Robin Yount bobbed the ball on the same play.

Pinch-hitter Bobby Jones had a two-run single in the Texas eighth. Noles, 1-1, struck out three while walking none through the seven innings he worked. Dave Schmidt gave up Milwaukee's only run on a double by Ted Simmons, who went to third on a fly ball, and an RBI grounder by Jim Gantner.

Expos blank Cubs, 4-0

MONTREAL (AP) — Bill Gullickson limited Chicago to two hits over seven innings, and Andre Dawson hit a solo homer as the Montreal Expos defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-0 Saturday for their fourth straight victory.

Until Ron Cey's leadoff single in the eighth, the only hit off Gullickson, 2-1, was a third-inning single by Steve Lake. Jeff Reardon got the final six outs without allowing a hit for his third save. Steve Trout, 2-1, retired the first 11 Expos, finally allowing a single to Dawson in the fourth.

Tim Wallach opened the fifth with a double and advanced to third on Jim Wohlford's fly. One out later Mike Fitzgerald doubled.

Dawson made it 2-0 with one out in the sixth, sending a 1-0 pitch over the left field fence.

Hubie Brooks' two-run single made it 4-0 in the eighth.

Yankees down Indians, 5-2

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Pagliarulo's bases-clearing double capped a four-run first, and the New York Yankees held on to defeat the Cleveland Indians 5-2 Saturday.

Pagliarulo's double off Jose Roman, 0-2, made a winner of Phil Niekro, 2-1. Bob Shirley relieved in the sixth, and Dave Righetti pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Omar Moreno opened the first with a single, stole second, moved to third on a ground out and scored on Roman's wild pitch. After Don Mattingly popped out, Dave Winfield and Don Baylor singled. Ken Griffey walked and Pagliarulo's hit scored the three runners.

Cleveland cut it to 4-1 in the third on Tony Bernazard's first homer and to 4-2 in the fifth when Otis Nixon doubled, stole third and scored on an error by third baseman Pagliarulo.

The Yankees added an insurance run in the seventh off reliever Mike Jeffcoat on Moreno's single. Meacham's sacrifice bunt and Mattingly's single.

Langer leads Heritage Classic by one stroke

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Bernhard Langer, the West German who won last week's Masters, came through the pack with a late rush and established a one-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

Langer, despite being warned for slow play, finished off a 2-under-par 69 with birdies on three of the last five holes on the Harbour Town Golf Links. He completed three rounds at 203 — 10 shots under par.

Langer, who was fined for slow play during the Tournament Players Championship a month ago, was warned that he was being timed when his group went off the 10th tee.

He responded by playing the back nine in 31, a 4-under-par effort that enabled him to break out of the scramble. Eight players had either led or shared the lead at one time or another during the round.

Danny Edwards, who combines his PGA Tour activity with a career as an auto race driver, had a 68 that moved him into second at 204.

Larry Mize, with a 67, and Bobby Wadkins were next at 205. Wadkins, who led or shared the lead through the first two rounds, had to battle back from a double-bogey to post a 72 in the sunny, breezy weather.

Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA champion, was another stroke back at 206 after a 70.

USFL woes continue

NEW YORK (AP) — United States Football League owners who feel the 3-year-old league's many problems can be solved with a switch to fall schedule have a new and important supporter — Commissioner Harry Usher.

Usher, who took over three months ago from Chet Simmons, said Friday that the league's disappointing television ratings and attendance this season is at least in part attributable to fans who just can't get accustomed to watching football games in the spring.

"It just doesn't work at this time of the year," he said.

USFL owners voted last August to move the league, now in its third spring season, to the fall beginning in 1986.

But the failure to obtain a network television contract for the first fall season has convinced some owners that the league ought to continue playing in the spring next year. In fact, Tampa Bay's John Bassett said three weeks ago that his team would continue playing in the spring even if it had to play against itself.

The USFL, which started with 12 teams two years ago, expanded to 18 last season, then cut back to 14 for this year while shifting three franchises. But that hasn't alleviated the problems.

Attendance is off 6.7 percent from the eight-week mark last season, network television ratings are down 24 percent, and there are serious financial problems with teams in Birmingham, Ala., San Antonio, Texas, Los Angeles and Houston.

Reds edge Giants, 2-1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Eddie Milner led off the Cincinnati ninth with a double and raced home with the winning run on pitcher Frank Williams' error to give the Reds a 2-1 victory Saturday over the San Francisco Giants.

Mario Soto, 3-1, fanned 11 in his second complete game, leading the Reds to their sixth consecutive victory.

Soto bunted in the bottom of the ninth to try to advance Milner. Williams, 0-1, fielded the ball and threw wildly to third as Milner scored.

Soto allowed four hits and walked three.

Soto blazed his way through the first five innings, fanning nine while allowing just two hits and a walk. Chili Davis drew the walk in the second, stole second, took third on a fly-out and scored on Scot Thomson's ground out.

The Reds tied it in the third against Jim Gott, who left the game in the fifth with a blister. The Reds loaded the bases on walks to Eric Davis and Pete Rose and Dave Parker's single, setting up Cesar Cedeno's sacrifice fly.

Tigers slip by Royals, 4-3

DETROIT (AP) — Lou Whitaker hit a bases-loaded single to cap a ninth-inning rally as the Detroit Tigers edged the Kansas City Royals 4-3 Saturday.

With Detroit trailing 3-2 in the ninth, John Grubb singled and Jim Weaver ran for him. Then Darrell Evans singled as Tom Brookens ran for him.

One out later, Chet Lemon singled Weaver home and Royals reliever Dan Quisenberry, 0-2, walked Chris Pittaro to load the bases. Whitaker then singled in Brookens.

Willie Hernandez, 2-0, pitched the ninth for the victory.

Darryl Motley and Frank White doubled to spark a two-run second inning for the Royals.

In the Kansas City fifth, Willie Wilson doubled off Walt Terrell, and George Brett walked Jorge Orta singled in Wilson for a 3-0 Royals lead.

Detroit's Darrell Evans hit a two-out solo homer, his first, off Gubicza in the seventh.

OLD OPRY HOUSE—The old Ryman Auditorium, left, in downtown Nashville, Tenn., was the previous home of the Grand Old Opry which is now housed in a modern auditorium. This year the Opry celebrates its 60th birthday and is being televised live for the first time in its history.

Small museum — large art collection

LAUREL, Miss. (AP) — The painting "Sleeping Beauty in the Woods" has special significance for Estill Curtis Pennington III; he considers it a symbol of his undiscovered jewel of a museum in the piney woods of Mississippi.

Pennington hopes to awaken not only Mississippians, but national art figures to the Lauren Rogers Museum of Art, which he says "has the possibility of being one of the great museums of the South."

"How unexpected," says the director, that a small museum in a south Mississippi town of 22,000 is able to boast a Winslow Homer and paintings by most of the major 19th-century American landscape painters, as well as an exceptional, small collection of Georgian silver and a fine collection of North American Indian baskets.

In a time when small museums are struggling to survive, the Lauren Rogers Museum is building its holdings. Thanks to a $5 million endowment consisting of oil and gas investments and an aggressive membership drive that brought in $96,000 last year, Pennington is busy shaping the collection and acquiring new works. In addition, he oversees the museum library, which contains extensive Mississippi genealogical records.

Pennington says the museum, founded in 1921, was opened in 1923 as a memorial to Lauren Rogers by his grandparents, Lauren Chase Eastman and Elizabeth Gardner Eastman. It began with a core of paintings Eastman had purchased. On the foundations of what was to be a family house, the Eastmans had a New Orleans architect design a library and gallery upstairs and what was the city library downstairs. It was later expanded.

On the walls of the stately, long central gallery are works by 19th- and 20th-century artists

Frederick Kensett, Albert Bierstadt, John Singer Sargent, Mary Cassatt and Robert Henri. Five additional galleries hold contemporary paintings and sculpture, European art and traveling exhibits.

Country music citidel nearing 60th birthday

EDITOR'S NOTE — Calvin Coolidge was president and Ronald Reagan was a teen-ager when the Grand Ole Opry made its debut. Billed as the nation's longest-running live radio show, the hoedown is going stronger than ever as the citadel of country music tradition approaches its 60th birthday.

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It has survived three wars, the Great Depression, floods and MTV. It has weathered rock 'n' roll, disco and New Wave. In this era of microchips, the Grand Ole Opry is as plain as a paper clip.

This folksy hillbilly hoedown, dressed up a bit through the years, is America's all-time musical smash.

This year the Opry celebrates its 60th birthday, an American institution as country as a rocking chair, as appealing as bacon and eggs frying on a bright spring morning.

"It's like a family reunion — all-day singing and dinner on the grounds," says humorist Minnie Pearl, who has spent 45 years on the show in her flowered straw hat with dangling price tag, always bounding up to the microphone and exclaiming: "Howwww-deeee!!! I'm just so proud to be here!!"

The Opry bills itself as the oldest continuous live radio show, in the best of the tradition that holds that "the show must go on." This year, for the first time, it is also being televised regularly.

It has been staged hundreds of times more than "A Chorus Line," which is the longest running Broadway play ever — almost 3,900 performances.

About a million people a year, up to a capacity 4,400 at each performance, see the show in person, and millions in this country and Canada hear the live radio broadcast on WSM radio. The newly added television broadcast, on The Nashville Network on cable television, reaches 20.6 million households.

Fans travel an average of 1,000 miles round trip for the show. They pay $6 to $10 for tickets for a 2½-hour show that typically features about 25 entertainers, each performing from one to three songs.

Despite its boondocks charm, the Opry is now presented in an antiseptic, $13.5 million auditorium within a 120-acre, $23 million park, "Opryland USA." It was moved from the old downtown Ryman Auditorium, which was too small, stuffy and antiquated.

But even in the fancier surroundings, the audience can still sit back in carpeted pews and hear unadorned songs like Roy Acuff's famous "Wabash Cannonball."

Interestingly enough, the show is not rehearsed. The performers know what time they're due on the orange-curtained stage and how many songs to sing. Their own bands supplement the Opry's 11-member band, which uses charts if necessary to play tunes they don't know. A quartet of backup singers, the Carol Lee Singers, also uses charts if needed.

"There's no script except on the commercials," says Miss Pearl. "People say what they think and do as they please."

Booze is banned, and there is no dancing. The audience merely sits and watches, clapping on signal from well-scrubbed Opry announcers. The Opry is a temple of twang, no rowdy West Texas honky-tonk. Elvis Presley was not invited back after he demonstrated his trademark wiggle onstage.

The entertainers themselves are as diverse as the far-flung crowd. John Conlee is a former Kentucky undertaker. Stu Phillips is an Episcopalian priest. Porter Wagoner is a rhinestone-speckled former grocery store clerk from southern Missouri. Charlie Walker was a disc jockey in Texas, and Boxcar Willie once operated a bowling alley.

Just ordinary folks, and the fans love it.

"The reason it's stayed on is the informality, the warmth," says Miss Pearl. "The people on the Opry have tried to make those people listening believe that they were singing and talking directly to them. People in Boone, Iowa, or Normal, Ala., tell me that they feel like the people on the Opry are talking to them."

Calvin Coolidge was president when the Opry opened on Nov. 28, 1925. Ronald Reagan was 14 years old and playing football in Dixon, Ill.

The featured performer on the first Opry show was an 80-year-old fiddler named Uncle Jimmy Thompson, who boasted that he could "fiddle the taters off the vine."

The Opry got its name by accident when announcer George D. Hay introduced the radio show following a program of classical music.

"For the past hour we have been listening to music taken largely from Grand Opera," Hay said, "but from now on we will present 'the Grand Ole Opry.'"

In the 1930s, as people stood in the bread lines of the Depression, Uncle Dave Macon was entertaining Opry audiences with rippling-banjo numbers like "Buddy Won't You Roll Down the Line."

In 1943, the Opry moved from a local auditorium to the fabled

Ryman Auditorium in downtown Nashville where the show was presented until 1974. Originally a tabernacle built by a former river boat captain for religious services, it had hard wooden pews and no air-conditioning to fend off the Dixie heat. Sidewalk vendors did swift business selling old funeral parlor-type cardboard hand fans to people in the lines waiting to get in.

During the summer, Opry officials kept a nurse on duty to tend to the people who fainted, often a dozen or so each Saturday night.

Today the Ryman is a monument among rundown downtown dives — a tourist attraction where 150,000 people a year pay $1 to walk through and stand on the same stage where Hank Williams, Marty Robbins, Loretta Lynn and the rest once stood.

Hank Snow, who has been an Opry regular since 1950, misses the Ryman, although he acknowledges it was outdated.

"I don't feel the warmth now that I did at the old Ryman," he says. "I voice the thoughts of an awful lot of entertainers who say that. A lot of people come to the new Opry house out of curiosity. When the new Opry House opened, some people thought the auditorium was rather highfalutin for a show that had once boasted such colorful acts as the Possum Hunters, Gully Jumpers and Skillet Lickers."

The your hair is thin and graying, And the Forties are almost past. Your family and friends all send best wishes That The Big "49" doesn't go too Fast!

Crusade chairman announced

Dear Abby

Wife's nose for news is a little too keen

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: For 47 years I have been married to a beautiful, kind, affectionate, caring, concerned, bright and loyal woman.

On the other hand, for 47 years she has been reading all my personal mail, and never have I received a phone call that she has not listened to on the extension phone.

We have discussed this violation of my privacy many times in a calm and fairly amiable open discussion, but to no avail.

Please understand, her policing of my communications has nothing to do with jealousy or suspicion—it seems to be an extension of "what's new"—her keen interest in everything that's going on. No guile or meanness is involved.

What could I have done to improve the situation? I'm writing this at 4:10 a.m.

W. IN BOYNTON BEACH, FLA.

DEAR W.: If you had demanded your privacy, instead of discussing her violation of it in a calm and fairly amiable open discussion, perhaps you wouldn't be writing to Dear Abby at 4:10 a.m. 47 years too late.

How a kind, caring, concerned and bright woman can be so insensitive to the rights of her husband baffles me.

DEAR ABBY: Please warn people never to send cash to a charitable organization—even if it's only a dollar! (Small amounts are more easily pocketed.)

I worked for a highly respected charitable organization, and when I had been there a short time, I discovered that one of the employees who had been there for a very long time was taking money. Even though the giver received a receipt for the donation, a copy of that receipt to show that the organization had received the money was not kept.

There are many fine charities that are 100 percent honest, so I am not discouraging people from sending money; I want only to advise them never to send a dollar or two in cash—give checks or money orders.

I truly believe that if this letter is published, it will save a lot of money from going to places unintended by the giver.

EYEWITNESS

DEAR WITNESS: Most people send checks or money orders because they want a record of their contributions (for tax purposes), but it doesn't hurt to remind those who think it is more "convenient" to just stick a dollar or two in an envelope.

If this applies to you, Dear Reader, please don't stop giving—just stop giving cash.

***

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen this problem in your column, but I know I'm not the only person who has it. I have always been a very quiet person, and rarely talk unless I have something to say. However, my problem is not that I am quiet, it's people who introduce me and add, "She's very quiet" or "Maybe you can get her to talk." Then there are those who in the presence of others loudly ask, "Why are you so quiet?"

I would never ask a person who talks a lot, "Why are you so loud?" Yet, quiet people are constantly asked, "Why are you so quiet?" Abby, people who are quiet are usually shy and lacking in confidence, which is difficult enough to deal with without having it pointed out in public.

I am working on overcoming my shyness and am making progress, but nothing sets me back more than being asked loudly in a crowd, "Why are you so quiet?"

Please print this. We in the quiet minority will thank you.

THE QUIET ONE

DEAR QUIET ONE: Thanks for an important message that came through loud and clear.

Leona Willis of Pampa is to serve as chairman of the American Cancer Society's 1985 Crusade in Pampa, announces Shirley Wooldridge, president of ACS's Gray-Roberts unit.

"Leona Willis is active in many areas of our community, and I am confident that she will conduct a very successful campaign. She will have more than 100 volunteers to help meet the 1985 Crusade goals," Wooldridge said.

"Here in Pampa, we expect to raise $15,000 this year," Willis said.

"This money will be used to support programs in Pampa for prevention, early detection and treatment of cancer and to provide assistance to cancer patients.

"Another Crusade goal is the saving of lives in Pampa," she added. "Local volunteers will be going door-to-door on April 21 through May 5 to distribute a folder called 'Your Colo-rectal Health Check.' It contains information which could save your life about this highly curable form of cancer as well as cancer's seven warning signals."

The 1985 Cancer Crusade in Pampa is part of statewide and national efforts involving more than 2 million volunteers. Those who would like to volunteer to help the crusade may call Willis at 665-8269.

"Close to one in every two patients diagnosed with cancer today will be alive five years after treatment," said Wooldridge. "That figure has improved dramatically in the last 50 years. In the 1930s, less than one in five cancer patients survived. That improvement means that this year alone about half of the cancer patients in Pampa will still be alive in 1990."

In addition to announcing the Crusade chairman for 1985, Wooldridge outlined goals for the 1985 ACS Crusade here.

"The goals of this Crusade are to inform as many people in Gray-Roberts counties as possible about cancer prevention and early detection and to generate funds for the American Cancer Society's service, research and education programs," Wooldridge explained.

"Early detection and treatment are still your best defense against cancer," she added. "Your local office of the American Cancer Society can give you information on cancer's seven warning signals, on dietary recommendations, testicular and breast self-examinations and other preventive practices."

The door-to-door distribution of the colorectal folder is only one of many activities planned by volunteers in Pampa. Other special educational and fund raising events will be held throughout the year.

April 22-26

School

As days of April get longer with the changing of seasons, various activities dominate the local scene to provide news that commands our attention. Are you ready?

Do peek at the flowering trees in full bloom on the far east blocks of East Browning for breath-taking beauty. Lilacs blooming in profusion remind us again that Red Weatherly last year shared lilac bushes removed from Fairview Cemetery with the local citizenry for all of Pampa to enjoy. The largest array of lilacs is at the Ben Guill residence.

Forrest Hills missed his March 12 birthday when he and Majunta flew to Australia on March 11 and arrived the next day to discover it was already March 13! During their Australia visit they were overnight guests of Neal Braswell's host family when he was an American Field Service student there. Small world, huh?

Transportation for the month-long tour that included New Zealand and Fiji as well as Australia was by motor coach and moter home caravan. In the remote Fiji village where they attended Good Friday services, 350 students daily walk barefoot to attend Catholic school. The trip was wonderful — and so is living in America!

Hear Rubye and Earl Davis did not spend their recent anniversary in quite the way they would have liked to — no dancing anyway! Rubye is still recovering from a broken kneecap suffered in a fall while visiting her daughter in Wyoming last month. She felt at home in her full length cast, however, when flying home to Pampa with all the Colorado skiers. Seems they brought home a few broken bones, too!

BOB CONWAY was installed as Salvation Army Board president at a recent luncheon. Louise (Mrs. Bill) Bailey, Ed Barker and Ab Conway were welcomed as new board members. Bonnie Hogan was presented a certificate of appreciation for making some of the Christmas dolls by presenter Dr. Richard Whitwam. Georgia Mack introduced three Rho Eta chapter members who accepted the chapter's award for dressing 45 dolls.

The word "Sweepstakes" has cropped up again — The Pride of Pampa High School band brought home "sweepstakes" honor from recent UIL contests — the only band in the area to win the honor. Director Charles Johnson is still walking on air! Last Saturday he accompanied and directed the Pampa Middle School band in contest. Charles' schedule has been a little hectic — contests plus singing for Beta Sigma Phi's Woman of the Year Tea and dedication services at Zion Lutheran Church in the same afternoon.

Kind words of praise and appreciation and recovery wishes to Joe Dicosimo who for the first time in 30 years failed to attend the school band contest because of recent surgery. For all of those 30 years, Joe has been an influence for good to hundreds of students, many of whom became members of the Pride of Pampa band. People glimpses at the 20th Century Cotillion Antique Show and Sale — Nancy (Mrs. Doug) Coffee, Geneva (Mrs. Bill) Tidwell, Dorothy Buzzard, Rochelle (Mrs. Calvin) Lacy, Susan (Mrs. Mike) Dunigan with her wee one in a stroller, Molly Abigail Baker, daughter of Beverly and Jim Baker, all dressed up in lavender and white. (Gee! Babies are cute this year!), Elizabeth Marshall and son Ed (He's opening a silver exchange business of old and new silver to be called The Silver-Chest), Geneva (Mrs. Dan) Michael, Howard Graham.

CONGRATULATIONS TO Pernie Fallon (Mrs. Jim David), a jewelry designer and Jacqueline (Mrs. Gary) Kastor, a painter, named co-artists of the year by the Pampa Fine Arts Association.

They were guests of honor at a Saturday night reception. A showing of their work was displayed at Lovett Memorial Library for the weekend. Juanita and Gerry Sanders had Gwen and Bud McCaulley as their guests from Amarillo at the reception and viewing. Chairman of the event was Jean (Mrs. David) Murtishaw.

Cile (Mrs. Howard) Taylor is president. Laird Ellis was a busy behind-the-scenes helper. Reports tell us it was a wonderful reception and a super show attended by about 200 people.

Loads of Pampa bankers attended the Texas Bankers Association convention in Amarillo last weekend: Debbie and Steve McCullough, Karen and Larry Ables, Connie and Jerry Foote, Freda and Guy Lemon, Jennie and Steve Jones, Betty Casey, Jim Olsen, Maxine and Floyd Watson, Jerry Sims, Pat and Phil Gentry, Joan and Brian Vining, Louise and Bill Bailey, Kathy and Vernon Pratt, Debbie and Danny Stokes, Eunice and Mack McMillan, Estelle and A.C. Malone, Donna and Bob Monthey, Janelle and Harold Cochran, plus Donna and Dean Burger of the Groom area.

Make a small donation to AMBUCS, an almost new men's service organization, for an opportunity to win a dollhouse — a dream house — come true, built by members, or a Cabbage Patch doll. Proceeds from the group's first fund raiser to go to help handicapped and needy children, always a worthy cause. Mike Conner is president. Added note — Mike's wife, Liz, works untiringly with the mentally handicapped.

BISHOP SAM HULSEY spent the Easter weekend in Pampa to conduct a confirmation service and the christening of several babies. Sam, a former rector of St. Matthews Episcopal Church, is always a welcome Pampa visitor.

Frashier family members had a joyous weekend recently when they all joined together for a reunion here. Visiting were Loyd and Anne Frashier of Malibu, Calif.; Gordon and Joyce Frashier of Albuquerque, N.M., with their sisters in Pampa, Claudine and Elmar Balch and Betty and W.C. Epperson. Their parents, Elmer and Alice Frashier were a pioneer Gray County family. Also joining in the fun were Betty's son, Gary and family from Pampa and flying in from Lubbock were their son John with wife Beck and Travis and Cassie. W.C. and Gary provided meals from the snack shack they recently opened. The couples plan their next get together in Albuquerque, N.M.

Upsilon chapter of Beta Sigma Phi is to host a teenage dance at the Pampa Youth and Community Center April 26. Three sisters are member of this sorority, Kathy Parsons, Debbie Bailey and Rebecca Lewis. All three sisters have three sons each ranging from age eight to four months. They're the daughters of Edna O'Neal and the late Earl O'Neal.

Debbie and Kevin Lombardozi and two little girls spent a relaxing weekend at Red River, N.M.

One of Pampa's beautiful and young multi-talented matrons is Heidi (Mrs. Philip) Rapstine. Saw her dashing into a store a few days ago.

PATSY (MRS. DANNY) Strawn looked svelte and smart dressed in peachy pink.

Couldn't let the day go by without complimenting Retha (Mrs. Ray) Jordan, chairman, and dozens of Beta Sigma Phi members who made the Yellow Rose Tea, honoring their 1985 Woman of the Year, a special occasion attended by more than 200 guests. Retha gives her every project her best shot — always.

Abreanne Ward (such a pretty name!) and Dane Ward, brother and sister, celebrated their birthdays this week on the 14th and 18th respectively. They're the children of Terry and Vicky Ward and the grandchildren of Jim and Norma Ward, all of Pampa.

Hear little Lacey Jaye McGuire has her very own car — a racy little convertible it seems. AND she's nice enough to let proud granddaddy John McGuire drive it

County Extension Agent
National Consumer's Week is a time for all consumers to focus on sharpening their consumer skills. April 22-28 has been designated as National Consumer's Week. The Gray County Extension Service joins in the observance by acquainting you with some of our educational services.

This year's theme is "Consumers Should Know..." It is information on many consumer topics available in the Gray County Extension Office. Our office is located in the Gray County Annex on East Highway 60. Our office hours are 8:30 to noon and 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. Persons may call at 669-7429 or stop by anytime during office hours.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service through its local office, the Gray County Extension Office, offers many pamphlets and fact sheets on consumer topics like home energy conservation, budgeting, gardening, appliance use and care and resolving consumer problems. Anyone who's too busy to do a lot of comparison shopping and reading in consumer magazines will find that our fact sheets on appliance buying and their topics provide consumers with the unbiased information they need to make a good decision.

In addition to pamphlets, fact sheets, and other printed information, we are available to help with your questions. If we don't know the answer, we will be glad to help you find someone who does. Just remember that every week is really consumer's week with us.

Another source of information from the home economics part of the Gray County Extension Service is a monthly newsletter. The newsletter covers a variety of topics of interest to consumers plus information on upcoming educational opportunities. The newsletter is also provided free of charge. Just give us a call to be added to our mailing list.

As you approach National Consumer's Week, why not set a goal to become a more informed and active consumer. Comparison shopping, asking questions, using company toll-free numbers to secure information, and being alert to fraud are just a few of the practices you can adopt.

To get you started, here are some Hot Line numbers that you may want to keep handy. Remember - they are toll-free, so take advantage of them. Fleischmann's Yeast - 1-800-932-7899 (M-F, 9-9 E.S.T.); Nutra - Sweet plus information on PKU and Diabetes - 1-800-321-7454; Pillsbury - 1-800-328-4466 (M-F, 8:15-5:00 p.m. C.S.T.); Kraft (A La Carte Entrees) - 1-800-323-0768 (M-F, 8-4

C.S.T.); Duncan Hines - 1-800-543-7276; Burda Patterns - 1-800-241-6887; Vogue - Butterwick Pattern Company - 1-800-221-2670; Simplicity Pattern Company - 1-800-223-1664; G.E. Consumer Hotline - 1-800-626-2000; Kerr Glass Company - 1-800-331-2609; McCall's Pattern Company - 1-800-255-2764.

You can call some other numbers that are not free. They will return your call if necessary. They include: General Foods -

1-914-335-2500 (M-F, 9-4 E.S.T.; as for consumer department); National Presto Industries - 1-715-839-2030 (M-F, 8-5 C.S.T.); Reynolds Wrap - 1-804-281-4630 (M-F, 8-5 C.S.T.); and Campbell Soup Company - 1-609-946-4000.

As you observe National Consumers Week, remember - a consumer has a right to fair treatment in the marketplace as well as a responsibility for self-education.

Nurse ends 44-year career

Naomi Martin of Pampa is ending a 44-year nursing career this week. She is to be honored with a reception Monday at 2 p.m. in the private dining room of Coronado Community Hospital.

Martin began her nursing career in May 1941, shortly before World War II. She entered the service in 1942 and was stationed at Will Rogers Airfield in Oklahoma City. She married Austin William Martin who was also in the army. They moved to Pampa in 1952.

She first began working at Highland General Hospital, but with the demands of her growing family, she decided to take an office nurse position with Dr. Raymond Laycock at the Kelley and Laycock Clinic.

In 1972, she took further training in intensive coronary care at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo and returned to hospital nursing at Highland General Hospital here.

"I've never regretted becoming a nurse," she said. "Even though there were times when the salary was low, and I wondered if people really appreciated nurses, I've really enjoyed the career. The work is difficult, both physically and mentally, but I have met and worked with wonderful people — shared their laughs and their heartaches."

The Martins have four children: William, a veterinarian of La

Organ donation awareness week set

The National Kidney Foundation of Texas has announced that April 21-27 has been designated National Organ Donation Awareness Week to call attention to the serious lack of organs for transplantation and the need for Americans to become organ donors. "More than 200,000 Americans were in need of a transplant of some kind in 1984, but only half received them," explained William E. Meenan, president of the National Kidney Foundation of Texas. "In Texas more than 524 were waiting for a kidney transplant but only 305 received one. We hope our efforts during National Organ Donation Week will result in an increased number of organs donated in 1985." "As transplantation of all organs, not just kidneys, becomes more successful, the need continues to increase dramatically," Meenan said. "There were 6,100 kidneys transplanted in 1984 but another 6,000 people did not get one because of lack of organs. More than 24,000 corneal transplants were performed but 3,000 people are still waiting. And the need for donated livers and hearts has been widely disseminated in the media." The Foundation is urging all interested citizens between the ages of 18 through 65 to sign an organ donor card, indicate their desire to be an organ donor on their drivers' license and to tell members of their family that they want their organs donated upon death. "Telling one's family or spouse is vitally important," Meenan said, "because family members are asked to sign a release form even if the deceased has signed a donor card." The National Kidney Foundation of Texas is the major voluntary health agency seeking the total answer to diseases of the kidney... prevention, treatment and cure. Its many-faceted program brings help and hope to millions of Americans who suffer from diseases of the kidney and urinary tract through patient services, research professional education and public information.

New, improved gladiolus add color to garden

By JOE VANZANDT
County Extension Agent
GLADIOLUS ARE SPRING FAVORITES

Spring is in the air all over Texas, and that means planting time. If you haven't gotten started, you'd better get a move on it.

The grass is greening, the tulips blooming, the shrubs are budding...and the weeds are growing! Local nurseries and garden centers are stocked with springtime beauty and plants galore for your garden.

One of spring and summer's favorite flowers is the gladiolus. If you have not tried growing gladiolus in recent years, you are in for a pleasant surprise and a real treat. Today's modern gladiolus have been vastly improved in color, size, beauty, and performance.

Gladiolus can be planted most anywhere. They are especially impressive when combined with other summer annuals and perennials in the garden. They can be left alone to grow in rows, or they can brighten up a corner of the vegetable patch.

Unlike other kinds of flowers, gladiolus require very little space in your garden. You can plant a dozen or several dozen bulbs in a row, or group them in clusters for a massed effect. This small area devoted to gladiolus can produce a bounty of beautiful blossoms.

Now is the ideal time to plant gladiolus, and your local garden center is featuring a good supply of bulbs. Choose the varieties that are in the colors you want. Most all of the "standard" varieties are offered, in addition to many beautiful new hybrid varieties which have been introduced in recent years.

Nearly any color you fancy can be had in gladiolus - from pure shades of white, cream, and pink, to bizarre combinations of tan and brown. Or how about green or blue? You can grow gladiolus that color, too.

While the tall - growing, large-flowered types are extremely popular, the relatively new miniatures or tiny tots (as they are sometimes called) are creating excitement in the gardening world. They yield profuse numbers of spikes, 2 1/2 - 3 feet tall, each with 15 - 20 dainty flowers 2 - 2 1/2 inches across. The tiny tot glads make charming indoor arrangements that are just the right size for that end table, coffee table, or centerpiece.

No matter which gladiolus you prefer, choose quality bulbs; you'll be happier in the long run for doing so and when they bloom, you'll agree that you got your money's worth.

Here are some cultural tips for gladiolus:

Where to plant: Anywhere there is full sunlight most of the day, in a row or bed, or in clumps among other flowers and vegetables. Avoid planting close to buildings or large trees.

Depth and distance apart: Plant large bulbs five or six inches deep and about the same distance apart. If you are growing for exhibition or garden club competition, you might want to give them a bit more room.

Cultivation and watering: Keep well cultivated and weeded. Don't cultivate too deep or you may damage the root system. Use lots of water if drainage is good. Deep soakings are preferred to light sprinklings. Gladiolus prefer at least one inch of rainfall or supplemental watering per week. Don't underestimate the value of water to gladiolus. They need it to grow well.

INSTANT MAGIC FOR YOUR GARDEN

Bedding plants are ready when you buy them - ready to add splashes of color to your flower beds, ready to be potted into containers to decorate your deck or patio, ready to grow and bloom from time of purchase until frost.

To make the most of these vigorous young plants, it pays for you, the gardener, to be ready too. Before heading to the garden center to buy annuals or perennials, have the flower beds, hanging baskets or other containers prepared to receive them.

First refresh the soil in your garden. Your annuals will flourish if you spade in some compost, peat moss or other soil amendments and a complete fertilizer like 5 - 10 - 5. Rake the area until it's relatively smooth, ready for planting.

If you plan to garden in containers, have clean pots, barrels or baskets, plus a generous supply of commercial potting soil on hand.

Then it's time to go shopping.

Select plants carefully. You can buy everything from spidery cleomes that will ultimately be four feet tall to tiny shadragons, zinnias, and marigolds that will never be more than six inches. Bedding plant labels provide lots of information, so be sure to read them and see if the plants you're considering need sun or shade, will be large or small, and are the colors you intend to use.

Once you have purchased your trays or flats of bedding plants, give them a generous dose of T.L.C. This care begins when you put the plants in your car. Treat your new annuals like a carton of ice cream. Make them your last purchase before heading home. Cooking in the trunk of a car is no better for plants than for frozen desserts.

Once home, protect the seedlings until you are ready to plant them. Place them in a shady spot and water well. The trick is to be sure the plants never dry out. One hot day of neglect can result in dead or damaged plants.

Today most bedding plants are sold in plastic cell packs or trays in which each small plant has its own separate mini - pot or cell. When removing a seedling from the cell pack, don't tug it out by its top. Push the root ball out by pressing on the bottom and sides of the individual cell. Watering them a few hours before you transplant them will aid in getting them out of the container.

If bedding plants in your area are sold in common trays, simply take a knife and divide the plants as if you were cutting a pan of brownies, or remove the entire contents from the tray and gently tease the individual plants apart with your fingers, trying to keep root balls intact.

Pop your plants into the garden as quickly as possible, preferably on a gray day. Mist the foliage and water the plants in thoroughly. Using a very dilute solution of water soluble fertilizer will get the new plants off to a good start.

If you must plant on a sunny day - and often one must - plant, mist, water, and then protect your newest plants from the sun. Shade them with inverted strawberry baskets, cardboard, or a board elevated on bricks...anything to shade the plants for the first few days.

One inventive gardener collects old umbrellas and uses them as shades for his newly planted garden. It looks strange, but it works. With minimal care, your bedding plants will quickly re - establish themselves and reward you with color, beauty and fragrance until frost.

Beauty Briefs

Cut uppermost

It's not the set but the cut that matters most in creating hair styles that keep their good looks.

Top salons keep developing new techniques, such as a cut in which very thin cross sections of hair are cut in graduated lengths.

The David Daines salon in New York, which worked out the method, says it produces much better "layering" to get the body and direction of new spring styles with their unwaved sides and fluffy tops.

Wake up to air

Instead of groping, bleary-eyed, for a wake-up cup of coffee, try simple fresh air. Open the bedroom window wide and breathe deeply a few times to clear out the cobwebs.

ROGER STAUTER

Roger Stauter to speak to Knife & Fork Club

"The officers and directors of the Knife and Fork Club of Pampa realize that problems abound in today's world," says Jerry Lane, president of the club. "That is why we choose our speakers carefully and well, to balance the 'bad news' from the media with the 'good news' from the platform."

"Roger Stauter has made a reputation for himself by bringing 'good' news with him," Lane says. Sauter is to be guest speaker at the Knife and Fork Club on April 30 at 7:30 p.m. in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn. Members should purchase tickets before 2 p.m., April 29.

Sauter's philosophy of speaking? "I make people laugh and when their mouths are open, I slip in something for them to chew on," he says.

Born in 1939, Stauter grew up on a farm in northern Wisconsin. He graduated from the University of Wisconsin with a degree in American History and was elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa in the process.

He is married with two daughters and is active in the Baptist Church. He has served as president of the Professional Speakers Association of Wisconsin.

Sauter bases all his speeches on three truths: audiences want to laugh; audiences want to think and audiences want to feel good about themselves.

Service award winners announced

Ten area women have become recipients of the 10th annual Texas Panhandle Distinguished Service Awards.

They received the awards during the annual luncheon at West Texas State University in Canyon Saturday. The luncheon, one of the cornerstone events in the celebration of WTSU's 75th anniversary, also premiered the Hall of Fame, with eight former award recipients as members.

The 1985 award winners include Barbara Akins, Amarillo, personnel management specialist who is involved in community activities; Joan Levy, executive director of Amarillo's Parenting Services Inc., who helped to establish Children's Cottage; Lois Lowe, whose family was presented a special award in the retired teacher's memory; Peggy Aull, Berger, a retired teacher who continues her involvement with education; Charlotte Rappsilber, Canyon, dean of the WTSU School of Nursing; Ann Brown, Hereford, adoptive mother and newspaper columnist; Eloise McDougal, Hereford, retired teacher and community volunteer; Mary Lou Wysong, secretary at the Spearman Chamber of Commerce who later became manager; and Timmie Brown, businesswoman and newspaper columnist; and Grace Heck, author of family and community histories and Yolanda McAtee, Dumas, a naturalized citizen who shares her interpreting and organizational abilities to help the needy and elderly.

Face of actor returns to normal

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It has been a year since Eric Stoltz acted in the movie "Mask," and his face has almost recovered.

Stoltz is the young actor who portrayed Rocky Dennis, the real-life youngster who endured his brief life with a grotesquely deformed face. He suffered from a congenital disorder of excessive bone growth called craniodiaphyseal dysplasia.

The role required the punishing ordeal of three to four hours each day in the makeup chair so the actor's face could be overlaid with synthetic flesh.

"That happened every work day for three months," the actor recalled. "By the weekend, my face hurt all the time. I couldn't sleep because of the pain. For months afterward I had sores and scabs. After a year my face is finally getting back to normal."

He is 22, looks younger because of his pale skin and carrot-red hair. "It's dyed for another film role," he said as he ate a hearty mid-afternoon meal at a health-food restaurant on the Sunset Strip.

Stoltz had just come from two acting classes of two hours each.

He is a dedicated actor who is somewhat disturbed by the spotlight that has shone on him since "Mask." He recently made his first publicity appearance in New York for the film's release.

Abilene cadet dies after run

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Authorities say a 25-year-old ROTC cadet who collapsed at Hardin-Simmons University near the end of a two-mile run that was part of a physical test died of apparent heart failure.

Albert Lewis Fitts was pronounced dead at 2:50 p.m. Thursday at Hendrick Medical Center by Taylor County Justice of the Peace Samuel Matka, who ordered an autopsy.

Major James P. Ellis of the HSU Military Science Department said Fitts, a junior at McMurry College, collapsed shortly after noon while running with 20 other cadets taking the "routine Army Physical Readiness" test.

Ellis said the test for all cadets, being given at Parramore Field, also involves sit-ups and push-ups and is given twice a year.

Fitts recently passed a physical examination at Dyess Air Force Base that "revealed no difficulties," he said.

Cajun song a hit in Texas

By DENNY ANGELLE
Port Arthur News
VILLE PLATTE, La. (AP) — This is a tale of a tune, a song that has become a bonafide hit in Texas and Louisiana and is perched at the edge of the Big Time. This is the story of a man and his "toot toot."
Nobody knows exactly what a "toot toot" is, but everybody knows where it comes from. It comes from "My Toot Toot," a song by Rockin' Sidney that is rapidly being added to radio playlists across Southeast Texas and throughout Louisiana.
To a toe-tapping zydeco rhythm, the singer warns everyone not to "mess with my toot toot." If you persist, he says, he will "make a case" or even "break your face."
The novelty single has become the first true regional hit in over a decade, in an area that at one time mined gold and platinum records as easily as it extracted oil from the ground.
Since the single was released in January, "My Toot Toot" has sold over 46,000 copies, an ever-escalating figure affixed with a bullet that has "Gold" written all over it.

Or so thinks Floyd Soileau, owner-operator of a record plant here that is relentlessly pressing "My Toot Toot" singles.
"The song is a remarkable thing," says Soileau. "I don't think I've ever seen a record do so well so fast. It usually takes a long time for a record to catch on, sometimes even a year."
Soileau should know — he operates the only record-pressing plant in Louisiana, as well as the record labels Jin, Swallow and Maison du Soul. ("My Toot Toot" is on Maison du Soul, which means "House of Soul.")
In the record business since 1956, Soileau has produced and/or pressed countless Cajun and swamp-rock classics such as Rod Bernard's "This Should Go On Forever" and "Sweet Dreams" by Tommy McLain. Both songs were Billboard Top 20 hits in the late 1950s.
"Sweet Dreams" stayed on the charts for a year and it sold more singles than anything else that came out of Louisiana. But "My Toot Toot" is taking off even faster than that," says Soileau.
The song comes from a Rockin' Sidney album titled "My Zydeco Shoes," which was released in October of last year. "Sidney recorded the whole album in his house, playing all the instruments on a multi-track recorder," says Soileau. "He sent me the tape and two or three songs stuck out. We put the album out in late October and some DJs latched on to 'My Toot Toot' almost immediately."

"After the song was played in markets like Baton Rouge, Lafayette and in the Beaumont-Port Arthur area, the album began to take off. It sold 4,500 copies by the holiday season, which is almost unheard-of for a new zydeco album."
Finally Soileau relented to demand and pressed "My Toot Toot" as a single in January. Radio stations — rock, country and R&B — from Dallas to Houston to New Orleans are hastily adding it to their playlists.
"We service one jukebox operator in Pittsburgh and they tell me they've moved over 6,000 copies up there," says Soileau.
One female singer, Jean Knight, has already covered the tune and another version by Denise LaSalle should appear in stores within days. But Soileau says the original is about to be peddled to a major, undisclosed record label for distribution worldwide.
Rockin' Sidney is Sidney Simien, a veteran Cajun-zydeco musician who lives in Lake Charles. Sidney had a small hit in Louisiana with "No Good Woman" in 1962 but he is best known for the flip side "You Ain't Nothing But Fine," which has been covered by the Fabulous Thunderbirds and Rockpile (Nick Lowe and Dave Edmunds).
Simien was on the road and unavailable for interview.

Woman turns nickels, dimes into college gift

By SIG CHRISTENSON
Corpus Christi Caller-Times
KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — For more than three decades, Alta B. Rose worked in South Texas restaurants as a waitress and manager, quietly but diligently saving nickels and dimes she knew she'd never use.
Still, friends say, she was never without a kind word or a smile, even when she fought cancer during the last five years of her life. Miss Rose kept the prettiest garden in all of Kingsville, but she never received a college degree or walked to the tune of Pomp and Circumstance on a May graduation day.
She had a will, though, and a way, and someday Bee County College nursing students learning their vocation will need only the first half of that combination to win their state certification as nurses.
Tomorrow's nurses, as well as BCC officials and friends of Miss Rose, who died last year at 74, gathered at the Kleberg County Courthouse recently to celebrate her drive, loyalty, tip-earning ability and a big decision.
That decision was to give all her tips away all $64,816.17 in tips, that is, and bequeath it to BCC's nursing school to assist who Miss Rose termed needy students in her will. Miss Rose also left 64 shares of stock to the school, in addition to cash sums of $5,000 each for her sister, Mrs. Eva Remmers, and a sister-in-law living in California, according to a will filed in Kleberg County Aug. 26, 1983, 11 months before her death.

What Miss Rose did, said BCC President Norman E. Wallace, will do much more than just help a few students who couldn't make it without a scholarship. The money, which will be put in an interest-bearing account and accrue more than $6,000 a year, will someday make it possible for Kingsville's 30-member nursing class to receive their entire education without paying a dime.
"What we'll do," said Wallace, "is invest that money at the highest rate of interest we can. It will be a permanent fund. We will never use the principal. We're going to take 90 percent of the interest for tuition, books and supplies. The other 10 percent we'll just add back to the principal," he said.
Wallace explained that the day will come when enough money will exist to defray the tuition, books and supply costs for all 30 nursing students in Kingsville, Miss Rose's hometown. That's a long way down the line. At 10 percent interest, we're talking about $6,500 a year that can go into the nursing program now. Wallace, though, seems content to be patient about the matter, for he hardly seems worried that it might take a couple or three decades to reach his goal.
Miss Rose, who hunted and fished when she wasn't working or tending to her garden, would probably like that attitude. She wasn't extravagant about anything. She never did want to owe for anything, said 72-year-old A.R. Bradshaw, a close friend of Miss Rose's who first met her after coming to Kingsville in 1946.

The most she ever spent in rent was $65 a month. Bradshaw, who came to work as a contract employee for the King Ranch and earned his living as a supply foreman, said he and his wife Maycel met Miss Rose in a restaurant and soon hit the fishing holes and hunting grounds on occasional outings.
"She was working in a cafe. And then, she started fishing and hunting with us. She went everywhere with us for, oh, I'd say, 25 years. We were very good friends. And she was a pretty good fisherman."
County Judge W.C. McDaniel, who knew Miss Rose for some 30 years and helped her write a will as she was dying of cancer, said she worked as a waitress for two Kingsville restaurants before spending her final years running the Elks Club as a manager. He also recalled discussions they had about the legacy.
"She had talked with me and my wife about donating to a worthy cause," said McDaniel. "We talked about several colleges for scholarships and she decided to use it where it would be most helpful for the people of this county."

During the last years of her struggle with cancer, Miss Rose and her ill sister often saw BCC nursing students, he said.
"Nurses most of them have a tendency to be cheerful around people. This was her way of being cheerful back," said McDaniel, who believes gratitude wasn't the only reason for the bequest. "I think she realized the inadequacy of not having a college education."
Born June 6, 1910 in Kiowa County, Colo., Miss Rose moved south to the Houston area during her early childhood, he said, before coming to Kingsville in the late 1940s.
"Upon coming to Kingsville, where her sister already lived, she first went to work at Cheatham's Eat Shop, one of the nicer (restaurants) in Kingsville at that time," said McDaniel.
Later, he added, she worked for Nolan's Steakhouse, which bought out Cheatham's during the early 1960s, while John F. Kennedy was still president. In 1972, Miss Rose became day manager of the Elks Club.
The movement from job to job, said McDaniel, didn't have a negative effect on her at all. "It was just an effect of maybe they got new ownership, or maybe she got a better offer. Everybody loved her. She always had a smile and a kind word for everybody."

THE WORLD OF GOD TO NO PROFIT

"Let us fear therefore, lest haply, a promise being left of entering into his rest, any one of you should seem to come short of it. For indeed we have had good tidings preached unto us, even as also they; but the word of hearing did not profit them, because it was united by faith with them that heard." (Hebrews 4:1-2) The Israelites had been instructed by God through Moses. However, as Paul says, it did not profit them because they did not believe what they heard. Consequently, that generation, with the exception of Caleb and Joshua, did not enter into the land of Canaan (Numbers 14:20-30; Psalms 95:11.)

We wonder how these people could have doubted the power of God in His Word. They had witnessed the miracles performed in Egypt and the parting of the waters of the Red Sea. In the wilderness they had been fed with the manna from heaven and received the water from the rock. Still they would not believe the Word of the Lord to the extent that they obeyed His will. The Hebrew writer's point is that we, today, can fail to enter into heaven the same as those Israelites failed to enter into Canaan. If our disbelief in the Word is the same as theirs then we will fall short of heaven as they fell short of Canaan.

The warning of Hebrews 4 is appropriate for people today, we are dealing with the same God who still demands obedience to His will (Matthew 7:21) He promises the reward of heaven for the faithful as He promised the reward of Canaan for the faithful Hebrew.

When such commandments as believing the being baptized in order to be saved are heard but not obeyed it is the same as the Israelite failing to believe what they heard in the wilderness (Mark 16:16; I Peter 3:21). When God's Word emphatically teaches the one true church (Ephesians 1:22, 23; 4:4; Colossians 1:18) and people still maintain that all churches are all right, they simply do not believe what they hear from God's Word, the Bible. Only believing to the extent that we obey will assure salvation (Hebrews 10:39)

I Don't Have Time
For My Eyes

Don't get me wrong. I think taking care of your eyesight is just as important as the next guy. In fact, that's why I went to Dr. Simmons & Simmons in the first place...to see about extended wear contacts.

I know a lot of stores have them. But I figure for something as important as my eyes, I needed an eye-care specialist to make sure I get the best fit possible. And besides, for one fee, I got a thorough examination, the right type of lens for me, a good fit and check-ups to make sure I'm getting the best wear possible.

Now that I've got my extended wear contacts from Drs. Simmons & Simmons, I've got more interesting things to do with my time than worrying about my eyes...see what I mean?
