Reed takes oath; Hart submits driveway plan

Recently elected Ward 3 Commissioner Joe Reed was sworn in this morning during a special city commission meeting called to accept the results of a recount vote from the April 6 city elections.

Reed's opponent, incumbent E. L. "Smiley" Henderson, had asked for a recount after the results showed a difference of only 25 votes between the two candidates out of nearly 2,000 votes cast in the Ward 3 race.

The recount Wednesday increased Reed's lead to 27 votes, with the final tally having Reed with 1,001 votes to Henderson's 974.

The city commission today canvassed the results of the recount and confirmed Reed's election.

Reed was administered the oath of office by Municipal Judge Phil Vanderpool.

Mayor Calvin Whatley, congratulating Reed on his victory, said, "You have been elected to a position of trust and responsibility" that at times can be awesome, exasperating but eventually rewarding. He urged Reed to uphold the duties of his position and to serve the people well.

During the meeting, City Manager Bob Hart handed the commissioners a memorandum concerning the development of a city policy on driveway access and entries. The memo is the result of a meeting Hart had Feb. 25 with the Concerned Citizens for Better Government group.

The group had formed last summer in reaction to the removal of driveway drainage pipes and similar driveway entrances by city crews preparing streets for seal coating projects.

The citizens group later initiated a suit against the city seeking damages and repairs for the driveway accesses. The group also fielded a slate of candidates in the recent election, including Reed.

Hart, in his memo, noted he had met with the group and later visited with two of its officers to survey the affected areas.

"I indicated to that group that I would investigate their concerns and would attempt to provide an answer by the middle of April," Hart said.

"The staff has discussed a number of alternatives and solutions and has been in contact with the Public Works Resource Center at Texas A&M, the Asphalt Institute and the Texas Municipal League," he continued.

"At the same time, it has been somewhat difficult in gathering information and still completing the other duties required by being new in this position and in Pampa," he added.

The memo contains a policy on the matter for consideration by the commission.

"The timing for your (the commission's) action may not be entirely desirable since there will be a runoff in the mayor's race on May 4, and the group may construe this policy as an attempt by the city to influence the outcome of the election," Hart observed.

"On the other hand, I feel that it is important that at least some mention is made because of the promise that I made the group at their meeting about six weeks ago," he said.

Hart said the commissioners should consider establishing an ordinance on the policy of installing driveway access and entries to permit both safer driveways and proper street drainage.

Hart's proposed policy would permit a residential owner to install a pipe within the gutter line of the driveway if it meets minimum standards, generally allowing a distance of 6 1/2 inches between the bottom of the gutter and the lower surface of the pipe without extending excessively out into the street.

The proposed policy would also require the city to pay for and install the pipes in the driveway for those homes having driveway pipes which existed prior to last summer and which were removed by city crews.

But the new pipes would have to meet the following conditions: the curb cut has been made; the vertical and horizontal distances would have to meet specified requirements; the pipe should be a split 8-inch pipe; and asphalt should not extend more than 24 inches into the street as measured from the face of the curb.

Driveways which do not meet the criteria should be given a reasonable time for the owners to

Water district members act against reorganization effort

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

WHEELER - After failing to get voter approval of a county maintenance tax and now facing a proposal to reorganize their board, Wheeler County Water Supply District members admit they are in limbo.

Voters Saturday rejected a maintenance tax (not to exceed three cents per $100 valuation) that WCWSD board members hoped would fund a hydrologist's study of the ground water supply in Wheeler County.

While the board spent last month counting on passage of the maintenance tax, a group of Wheeler County residents circulated a petition asking for legislation to reorganize the water board into an elected board and calling for "other amendments" to the enabling legislation which formed the board in 1983.

The board currently consists of five appointed members. Two board members are appointed by Wheeler County Commissioners, one by Wheeler City officials, one by Mobeetie city officials and one by Shamrock city officials.

At a meeting Thursday, board members denounced the proposed legislation and said that the petition is misleading. The board passed a resolution noting that while it was not opposed to having an elected board, it did disapprove of other amendments to the original enabling legislation.

Under the proposed legislation, the five WCWSD board members would be elected with one member elected from each of the four county commissioner precincts and the other elected at large from the rural areas.

Petitioners claim that such a breakdown would insure that rural residents would get representation on the board. But board members reply that, because of the way the precincts are laid out, the four other members could end up coming from Wheeler and Shamrock.

The legislation proposes that the election be held the second Saturday in August and that the directors serve two year terms. Vacancies are to be filled by election of replacements for the unexpired term, under the legislation which adds "a director may be removed from the board for misfeasance, malfeasance or willful neglect of duty;" after a public hearing is held. The board also must make all records, minutes, resolutions and books open to public inspection.

Under the current board guidelines, resolutions are passed by an affirmative vote of three or more members. The legislation proposes that the resolutions must be approved by four or more of the five members. Unlike the current guidelines, which allow for a board-appointed tax assessor-collector, the legislation says the board shall use the county TAC.

The proposed legislation also says that any contract or agreement which may endure for longer than five years or involve more than $1 million must be approved in an election.

"If we bail out now, anything can happen," warned board member Melvin May of Mobeetie. Wheeler County Judge Wendell Morgan agreed that the board should remain intact.

Board president Harrison Hall of Wheeler claimed that the petition circulated throughout the county "misled voters."

"Their main objective is to stack the board," he said.

The people who circulated the petition were the same rural landowners who led opposition to funding of construction and maintenance of a proposed lake northeast of Wheeler. Voters in three elections in 1983, 1984 and January rejected the lake proposals.

"We have done everything but walk on water," Hall said. "I do not want to serve on anything that I don't feel I have the backing of the people."

May agreed, noting that he felt the people of Mobeetie "have confidence in me. I'm a member of the hospital board."

The petition, addressed to State Senator Bill Sarpalius and Representative J.W. Buchanan, asks them to propose the legislation in the current session.

Hall asked board members to tell the legislators that the proposal is a misrepresentation of the board.

"It's just deception, it's what it all boils down to," Hall said about the petition. "It's saying that the judge and the mayors of the city don't have the intelligence to run their own towns."

Hall also wondered how the board can exist when voters rejected the tax that would fund the ground water study and operation of the board. He also wondered what the board should do now that the voters turned down the tax.

Board member M. Kent Sims of Wheeler suggested the board suggest that the cities of Wheeler, Shamrock and Mobeetie "pick up the funding for the hydrologist's study and do the initial study."

May was expected to present the proposal to Mobeetie city officials Thursday night. The proposal will be made to the Wheeler and Shamrock city boards at their next regular meetings.

Local trust firm closed by state

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

The Texas Department of Banking has ordered the permanent closing and liquidation of a Pampa trust company.

The state banking commission posted the order from Austin Commissioner James Sexton to the Bethany Trust and Company on Thursday.

The order said the trust was in an "unsafe condition" to the degree that its continued operation would be "hazardous to the public or its depositors and creditors."

The order said it was "not reasonably possible" that the trust company could be made solvent. It said investors' interests were "seriously jeopardized through its insolvency." The banking commission said it was in the "best interests" of the public "that the company be closed and its assets liquidated."

The company was placed under the commission's supervision April 2. It was placed into the agency's conservatorship April 4. Sexton's liquidation order was issued Wednesday but was received by examiners and posted at the company's office in the Hughes Building on Thursday.

The Bethany Trust was incorporated in May 1984 by convicted felon Tom Etheredge of Pampa. Because the investments firm called itself a trust company and offered "guaranteed" returns, it was under the jurisdiction of the banking commission.

The company offered investors a 25-percent return on minimum $5,000 contracts in 90 days. Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton said the insolvent firm had 140 active investors when the state shut it down. The investors were recruited in the Pampa area and other parts of Texas and Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri, Hamilton said.

Just about 20 of the company's investors are from the Pampa area, and most attend Etheredge's Lamar Full Gospel Church, he said.

The prosecutor has said the trust company operated a pyramid-type scheme, with money from a growing number of new investors being used to pay previous investors. The company had few real assets but claimed investments in mostly "bogus" enterprises, he said.

Hamilton said the trust company owes the 140 investors a minimum of $700,000. Examiners couldn't find the money taken in by the operators, and the prosecutor has said investors stand to lose everything.

Etheredge, 30, and Tim Bortka, the man listed as company president, dropped from sight when the banking commission began its examination last week, Hamilton said.

After setting up what authorities label a scheme last year, Etheredge bought a large, three-story estate west of Pampa on 23rd Avenue. Bortka moved into a large home at 2411 Fir. Neither man could be reached for comment at the residences, and family members said they don't know where the missing operators went.

The Pampa News will feature an in-depth report on the failed trust company and the people behind it in Sunday's Pampa News.

Collins submits resignation

By LARRY HOLLIS

LEFORS - Following an executive session Thursday night, the trustees of the Lefors Independent School District accepted the resignation of Supt. Jimmy Collins.

Collins submitted his resignation to the board, saying he was going into private business in the Austin area.

Collins is in his second year as superintendent at Lefors. He had served as superintendent for six years at Harrold prior to coming to Lefors.

"It has been a tremendously good two years at Lefors," he said. He feels the Lefors ISD is a better place now, with a lot of work having been done to improve the system.

"I wish the school system, the district, the faculty and the trustees future success in their endeavors," Collins said this morning.

His resignation will be effective at the end of June.

The board will secure the services of Dr. Kenneth Laycock, director of Region XVI Educational Service Center in Amarillo, as consultant to find another superintendent for the district.

The trustees canvassed school board election results during their regular meeting last night.

After the ballots were confirmed by the trustees, Supt. Collins administered the oath of office to Joe Watson and Joyce Cotham, elected April 6.

The trustees reorganized the board, electing Arnold Story to serve as board president. Other officers will be Harry Youngblood as vice president and Garrel Robertson as secretary.

In other business, the board appointed the three administrative members of the Teacher Career Ladder Committee: Supt. Collins; Gene Gee, high school principal, and Jess Baker, elementary school principal.

Supt. Collins explained the three administrators will select two teachers for the committee, as required by the state regulations. Those two teachers will be the first ones receiving the career ladder bonus.

After the committee is formed, the members then will select two other teachers qualifying for the career ladder supplement.

The trustees named Gee and Baker as liaison officers for the schools. Gee will oversee cases in the ninth through 12th grades, and Baker will handle cases from kindergarten through the eighth grade.

Supt. Collins said the state requires the naming of liaison officers to insure the educational process is not interrupted for students who must be out of school for court-related matters or social agency cases.

The State Board of Education suggested the liaison program for the educational needs of children awaiting adjudication in detention and other child shelter facilities.

Shuttle Discovery thunders into orbit with Sen. Garn

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)

Space shuttle Discovery thundered into orbit today, carrying Sen. Jake Garn among its seven-member crew on a much-delayed mission that blasted off with just 55 seconds to spare.

The space plane vaulted off its launch pad at 8:59 a.m. EST, spewing an awesome 700-foot tail of fire as it climbed swiftly out over the Atlantic Ocean and then disappeared from view into a heavy cloud layer. Nine minutes later, Mission Control reported Discovery was in a secure orbit, 281 miles up and circling the globe at more than 17,400 mph.

While the shuttle was accelerating toward orbit, the commander reported a caution and warning light on the cabin pressure. Mission Control checked its readings on the ground and told him it was a false alarm.

The mission, the first of two shuttle flights this month, got off the ground after five postponements caused by a number of problems - and after a 55-minute delay caused by cloudiness and by a cargo ship in the area where the booster rockets fall.

If it had not blasted off by 9 a.m., it would have been postponed again. The launch time was based on requirements for putting two communications satellites into precise orbit.

"We did it with 55 seconds to spare, which seems like we were playing brinkmanship," said shuttle operations manager Tom Utzman. "The only thing we were doing was letting our decision process run as long as time would allow."

The mission, which also includes experiments that could produce life-saving drugs, came on the fourth anniversary of the first shuttle flight, on April 12, 1981.

The space agency hopes the flight will kick off its long-sought goal of launching shuttles at a rate of one a month. The schedule earlier this year was scrambled by this mission's problems, and the last mission lifted off on Jan. 27.

Eight more flights are scheduled this year, with Challenger set to take off in just 17 days, on April 29. There are 15 flights planned in 1986 and 17 in 1987.

Among the thousands viewing Discovery's blazing departure were more than 100 people from Utah, Garn's home state.

Garn's wife, Kathleen, who watched with six of Garn's seven children, said: "It was frightening. Even though I had seen it on TV, I didn't realize there was going to be quite so much fire. And I expected it to go faster. I thought, 'Oh, my gosh, it's going to stall out.' The kids screamed, I cried."

Son Matthew, 5, described the launch as "awesome."

The other crew members are commander Karol Bobko; pilot Donald E. Williams; mission specialists Margaret Rhea Seddon, David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman; and payload specialist Charles Walker, who almost was bumped from the flight Thursday when his drug-making machine sprang a leak.

Lefors

Collins explained.

The Texas Education Agency, in a report submitted to the trustees by Collins, notes, "It appears that large numbers of children who are apprehended by law enforcement authority, or who are abused and neglected and removed from parental custody, spend considerable time in such centers awaiting adjudication. During this time, many school age children have no access to meaningful educational services."

The state is concerned such custody may cause students to have more absences than permitted in a semester and thus to lose credit, Collins explained. The liaison officers would arrange to see the students continue to receive education in a homebound situation and to keep credit, he said.

Collins noted Lefors has had no such cases this year that he's aware of, but there's always a possibility the situations may arise.

In other matters, Collins gave a financial report to the trustees. He said preliminary studies indicate the district will receive $47,000 less from the state for the 1985-1986 school year than it received for the current year.

In addition to the loss of state funds, the district faces higher utilities costs next year, the hiring of at least one additional teacher, and costs of materials and supplies for implementing new courses as required by the state rules, Collins said.

He said he was not "trying to paint a dim picture," but he wanted the trustees to be aware of such financial matters as they begin consideration of the budget for the next school year.

remove the pipe, Hart's policy proposes.

The policy also suggests the city may wish to install grates or alternatively make a cash payment in lieu of the pipe or grate installation to properly fix the driveway slab.

"This is a very broad statement of policy," Hart stated. "The policy should be adopted by ordinance and include a preamble outlining the historical development."

"I think the policy proposed here is very good," Reed said.

Commissioner Bob Curry said,

"I agree with the general principle of the thing." He agreed an official policy should be developed and suggested the commission pursue preparation of an ordinance, saying there was no need to wait any longer.

Mayor Whatley said the driveway pipes issue "has been dividing the community more and more, something I don't want."

Hart said he would get in contact with members of the CCBG group and report to the commissioners at their workshop session next Tuesday.

Police plan 'bicycle rodeo'

The Pampa Police Department, in cooperation with the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Optimist Club, will be conducting a Bicycle Safety Rodeo on Saturday.

The rodeo will be held between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. at the Coronado Shopping Center.

This will be the first of three bicycle rodeos to be held in various locations in the city this spring before school is out for summer vacation. Future dates and locations will be announced later, Cpl. Bruce Denham said.

"The purpose of these events is to educate the children of the community in various bicycle riding skills and safety, thus reducing the chance of one of them being involved in an accident," Cpl. Denham said.

Officer Mark King said several events and skill courses have been planned. Each registered participant will receive a ribbon, depending on his or her skill category.

There will be no age limit for participants. However, parents are asked to accompany small children, King said.

Refreshments will be available throughout the day, courtesy of McDonald's Restaurant.

There will be no charge to participants.

For further information, contact Denham or King at the Pampa Police Department.

Unocal files suit against Pickens

LOS ANGELES (AP) - An antitrust suit has been filed by Unocal Corp. against a group led by Oilman T. Boone Pickens that is attempting to take over Unocal.

The suit alleges that their attempts to restructure the oil industry are decreasing competition in oil and gas exploration.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Lafayette, La., and was announced by Los Angeles-based Unocal, the nation's 13th largest oil company and the parent of Union Oil Co. of California.

The suit was the third stemming from the takeover battle. Two of those have been filed by Unocal, and one by Mesa Petroleum Co. of Amarillo, Texas, of which Pickens is chairman.

The latest suit names Mesa Petroleum and others in addition to Pickens.

Mesa Petroleum spokesman Warren Vieth in Amarillo, Texas, said the company had not seen the suit and had no immediate comment.

A Pickens-led investor group already owns 13.6 percent of Unocal's 173.9 million shares and has offered $54 per share, or $3.46 billion, to boost its stake to 50.1 percent.

The Pickens group has also said that, if successful in the initial offer, it will seek to buy the remainder of Unocal's stock for cash and debt securities worth $54 per share.

In composite New York Stock Exchange trading Thursday,

Unocal was up $1 to close at $47.75 a share.

The latest court action alleges that Pickens' efforts to take over or restructure other oil companies actually constitute a conspiracy to restrain trade by so burdening targets with debt that they are less able to compete for oil and gas exploration properties.

The suit cites Pickens' takeover forays in recent years against Cities Service Co., Superior Oil Co., Gulf Corp. and Phillips Petroleum Co.

Pickens efforts resulted in the companies either restructuring themselves and assuming huge debts or being taken over by other companies that substantially increased their indebtedness.

Waters recede, but rains leave Corpus Christi a bonus

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Heavy rains chased hundreds of people from their homes in southeast Texas but also left Corpus Christi the kinder gift of a full reservoir heading into the sizzling Texas summer.

Officials expect the runoff from Wednesday's rain to fill Lake Corpus Christi to the brim by the weekend. In fact, the spillway gates will be opened for the first time in three years.

Six months ago, the lake was 35 percent full and communities along the Coastal Bend were forced into water rationing.

National Weather Service meteorologist John Leathers said Sinton received 9.20 inches of rain in the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Thursday. Odem received 5.50 inches in the same period.

The heaviest rain fell at Padre Island National Seashore, south of Corpus Christi, where rainfall was measured at 11 inches before the rain gauge overflowed, park officials said.

As showers gave way to sunshine Thursday afternoon, homeowners returned to homes flooded by rising waters dumped by the slow-moving storm. Over 500 homes were flooded in Sinton, St. Paul, Odem, Calallen and Edroy, according to Art Roberts, disaster chairman for the Coastal Bend Red Cross.

Officials at Corpus Christi and Alice reported high water, but said there were no evacuations.

Only one shelter remained open Thursday night in Sinton, where about 250 spent Wednesday night after being chased from their homes by high water, officials said.

Fields looked like lakes, highways like rivers as displaced families pulled boatloads of possessions.

But the only life lost was a 66-year-old Sinton man, Melvin Lee. He died after suffering a heart attack while trying to move his recreational trailer out of a flooded park, said Sinton Mayor Rosalie Brown.

Mayor Brown said the sun came out Thursday afternoon and the water was gone from most areas by late afternoon. Only one street remained covered with water late Thursday in Sinton, where water was five feet deep on some streets at the height of the flooding, she said.

"We got flooded with about 8 inches inside," Socorro Narvarez of Sinton told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "We had to get in the car and spend the night behind the (gas) station."

While some went back to damaged houses, the city of Corpus Christi saw rains dump a two- to three-month supply of water in 24 hours, said Jim Riley, Corpus Christi water supply superintendent.

"If you look at just the last six months, we've stored over two years' worth of water," Riley said.

The storm, triggered by an upper-air disturbance, moved into the Coastal Bend area of South Texas Wednesday afternoon and by 7 a.m. Thursday had dropped more than 11 inches of rain in some areas.

Slow learners are problem in school social promotions

AUSTIN (AP) — Slow learners, who make up maybe one-fifth of Texas' public school population, will be hurt by a proposed rule doing away with social promotions, parents and teachers have told a committee of the State Board of Education.

The 15-member state board is scheduled to make an initial decision on the social promotion rule Saturday with a final vote set in June.

Harold Massey, executive director of the Texas Association of Secondary School Principals, told a public hearing Thursday that under the proposed new regulations 40 to 55 percent of the state's students would not receive a regular high school diploma.

"This problem, coupled with an uncompromising stance on participation in extracurricular activities (no-pass, no-play) will result in the greatest political backlash in the history of educational legislation," said Massey.

"We need to teach these children, not fail them," said Beth Allen, a teacher in the Rosebud-Lott school east of Temple.

"Let's raise the sales tax to 6 percent and educate these youngsters, not fail them," she said.

The major public school reform bill passed in last summer's special legislative session prohibited advancement of students by "social promotions," and said students will be promoted only by making passing grades of 70 in each course.

However, the suggested new rules would be effective at the beginning of the 1985-86 school year but school districts could postpone the effective day for one year.

The rules also would allow school districts to provide alternatives for students who are consistently unable to be promoted because of poor achievement.

A district may place a student in a higher grade level if the placement does not disrupt or overly complicate instruction for other students. A student may also be placed in a non-graded continuous progress class where he or she receives specially designed instruction that concentrates on English, language arts and mathematics.

"We fear that continuous progress classes will become a trap for slow learners," said Lee Alvord, principal of a junior high school in Carrollton-Farmers Branch. "We think it also will isolate racially different students and minority groups."

"These kids need help, they need a place," said Marge Swarz, a parent from Plano.

Gene Stokes, Round Rock principal and president of the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association, urged the state board to retain social promotions "sparingly."

"Many students try their hardest but simply cannot master the necessary skills as quickly as others in their age group," Stokes said.

Doubtful that Alamo flag would be loaned to Texans

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A flag that flew over the Alamo can't be loaned to Texas for its 150th anniversary celebration next year because it is in poor condition and is being restored, a museum spokesman says.

"The flag is not going to be loaned because of the restoration. Because of that, neither can a photo be taken," Rocio Caldillo, a secretary in the office of National History and Anthropology Institute Director Enrique Florescano. "They are restoring it and it's going to take a considerable length of time."

The flag belongs to the National Museum of History in Chapultepec Park, which falls under the anthropology institute's supervision.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, and the rest of the state's delegation in the U.S. Congress have asked Mexico to loan the flag for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of Texas' independence next year.

Mexican officials say privately that, even if the flag weren't being restored, allowing it to leave the country would touch off a certain firestorm of controversy here and would be simply too touchy an issue.

The flag is the only banner that still exists from the Alamo, a small San Antonio mission that fell on March 6, 1836, after a band of Texas independence fighters held out for 13 days against the Mexican army.

The battle is seen here as a key starting point for the events that led to the loss of Mexico's northern territories, which have made up the American Southwest since the mid-19th century.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Vincent Hovanec said Thursday the Texas congressmen's request had been relayed to the Foreign Ministry's assistant secretary for cultural exchange.

"That's where the matter is right now," he said. "Right now, there is no movement whatsoever."

He noted the sensitive nature of the request and the differing Mexican and Texan points of view on the events at the Alamo.

Sex businesses bill enacted

AUSTIN (AP) — A law regulating sexually-oriented business locations by cities and counties was signed by Gov. Mark White.

Cities and counties have only been able to regulate sexually-oriented businesses that held alcoholic beverage licenses.

Current state law prohibits business with such licenses from locating within 300 feet of public schools, churches or hospitals.

The bill regulating the businesses was introduced by Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston.

White also signed into law a bill that creates the Silver-Haired Legislature of Texas.

The ceremonial body will be composed of Texans over age 60. The members will be elected by their peers and develop legislation pertaining to older citizens. Those ideas will be sent to the regular Legislature for consideration.

The group is tentatively scheduled to have its first session in October 1986.

Texas is the 23rd state to have such a legislative group.

The bill creating the new legislative body was sponsored by Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth and Rep. Jerry Clark, D-Buna.

Commissioner and school director say state schools can't be rushed

TYLER, Texas (AP) — The state mental health commissioner defended the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation before a federal judge while a sometimes-criticized state school superintendent in Fort Worth said the school does its best for the mentally retarded in its care.

The comments came Thursday in a federal court hearing on the state's efforts to provide community-based services for the retarded. U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice is hearing motions in a class action lawsuit against the department.

"We've been here for four days, and we've heard a great deal of one-sided testimony from persons brought into Texas by the plaintiffs from places like Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Nebraska," said commissioner Gary E. Miller.

"Some of those persons have never seen a state school in Texas and others have made only cursory reviews in the course of tours which lasted only a few hours," he said.

Mel Hughes, superintendent of the Fort Worth State School, said that facility hasn't had time to develop a program for moving residents into smaller, group homes in the community.

Miller, too, stressed the importance of only moving an "appropriate" number of mentally retarded people into community-based treatment during 1986 and 1987.

"A mentally retarded person will be placed from a state school into the community only on the basis of a professional judgment that the person and the placement are appropriate," he said.

The hearing, expected to last at least a week, is to determine if the state is complying with a lawsuit settlement ordering staffing improvements, community programs and other reforms in the care of the mentally retarded.

The plaintiffs — residents of state schools — are asking that approximately 1,000 residents and those on waiting lists be moved into group homes outside the schools. They contend state schools — particularly those in Austin, Denton and Fort Worth — have not complied with the settlement.

Parent groups, which have been in conspicuous attendance at the hearing, have voiced strong opposition to community homes.

Several parents have testified that they fear their children will not get the close supervision and constant care they need if they are moved out of the schools into group homes. "I don't see how you can pull my son and others like him and put them in a normal situation. They just don't fit," said Sandra Koustans, a registered nurse with a child at the Denton school.

In a related development, House Speaker Gib Lewis said he has "a great deal" of concern that the judge ultimately will order more state spending on the mentally ill.

"Don't get me in a comment on that. We'd be hear all day long on a soap box," Lewis said in Austin when asked about the Tyler hearing.

Lewis earlier this year was highly critical of federal judges who have ordered expensive changes in the state prisons and in the mental health system.

The judging of competency

A number of states are preparing to institute competency tests for teachers in their public schools. The objective of attempting to insure that incompetent teachers are not in positions allowing them to shape young minds is laudable. There is nothing greater than a good teacher and there is nothing more harmful than a bad teacher.

In the past, I have not been able to understand teacher associations' objections to these tests. It has seemed to me that it would be to teachers' advantage to have the question of competency moved from the subjective world into a situation where their abilities were judged in an objective manner.

But after watching a number of politicians, bureaucrats and education "experts" in a panel discussion last week which involved competency tests, I tend to side with the reluctant teachers.

The discussion went on for at least an hour and competency testing was talked about at length. But not once did I hear anything that indicated those politicians, bureaucrats and education experts were capable of even coming close to determining whether a teacher is competent.

Once they got past talking about basic tests on knowledge of subject matter, they discussed proposals that seemed to me to have absolutely nothing to do with a teacher's ability to teach.

They talked about such things as classroom demeanor and teaching techniques, which would be graded by administrators (call them bureaucrats, if you like) whose observations would be incorporated into the final determination of the teacher's competency.

Not once did I hear anyone even suggest that how much students learned in a particular teacher's class be figured into the competency equation. And not once did I hear anyone suggest that the opinions of students about a teacher be considered.

Now I don't mind admitting that I don't know the first thing about teaching. But it seems to me that teachers whose students learn a lot about their subject should be considered competent and teachers whose students don't learn much should be branded incompetent. And I fail to see how it is relevant if they don't follow the techniques prescribed by their college education instructors as long as their results are positive.

And, I don't see how teachers can possibly be evaluated without considering the opinions of those in position to know them best: their students.

If I were a teacher, I don't think I would want to be judged by the standards of politicians and bureaucrats, either.

Once you get past basic knowledge of subject matter, I think it is fairly simple to judge teachers. Those who care if their students learn or not are generally good teachers. Those who don't care are generally bad teachers.

But nobody is talking about grading them in that area. And I'm not sure they could if they wanted to.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A good reason for U.S. pullout

When the United States withdrew from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization last year, several critics accused the Reagan administration of overreacting. Soon thereafter, the British said they would follow suit by the end of 1985 unless the agency made some specific changes. Now, 11 nations have threatened to quit by May if UNESCO Executive Director Amadou-Mahtar M'Bow continues to resist major reforms.

The most conspicuous complaint comes from France, which recently pledged an additional $2 million to offset a small part of the financial loss from America's withdrawal. The French say they will not turn over a single franc until M'Bow demonstrates he is serious about cleaning up the mess at UNESCO.

Little wonder. M'Bow runs the organization as though it were his personal fiefdom. Every appointment, from high-ranking positions to the hiring of secretaries, must be cleared by him. To ensure complete loyalty, he keeps most staffers on short-term contracts. Promotions are awarded according to ideology and nationality rather than merit. This, predictably, has demoralized the staff. Some 20 seniors officials have resigned since 1980, the year M'Bow was elected to his second term.

Dominated by the Third World and the Soviet bloc, UNESCO promotes controlled economies, severe press restrictions, redistribution of the Western nations' wealth, and a distortion of human rights that stresses "the rights of peoples." Indeed, Owen Harries, who was Australia's ambassador to UNESCO in 1982-83, describes the agency as a "Mad Hatter's tea party of propaganda and palaver." The organization's so-called educational projects are, in fact, grants to further Marxist and terrorist "national liberation movements."

Such abuses are certain to continue so long as M'Bow remains in charge. All the more reason why the remaining Western members of UNESCO should demand his immediate resignation.

A lot to feel guilty about

NEW YORK (NEA) — One of the nation's leading liberal columnists recently wrote of his shock upon discovering that 40 percent of the 1.6 million children in New York City live below the official "poverty line." The very fact that he was surprised, he contended, and that most of his readers would be, simply demonstrates our willful blindness to the misery around us.

I'm not so sure about the willful blindness, but it is certainly true (to take one example) that the contrast these days between much of the local news on television, and the commercials interspersed among the news stories, induces a certain vertigo in the viewer.

Routinely, the first item on the local news will be about a fire, caused by a defective heater, that has killed a family of five. Switch to a TV reporter on the spot — the charred ruins of an elderly tenement in a scarious neighborhood. Attendees are carrying away the corpses — muffled forms on stretchers, or in body bags. Neighbors, some in tears, tell us in broken English how it happened. Now back to the newsroom — and time out for a commercial. We are being invited to take our winter vacation on some particular island in the Caribbean, where well-oiled young bodies are seen at play. It costs, we are assured, only a few hundred dollars. (And there must be plenty of potential customers for such joys out here in Television Land, because some airline paid many thousands to put that commercial on the air.)

Then back to the newsroom again. There is a special segment tonight on "Hunger in Our City." A woeful line of derelicts is seen, lined up for handouts at a church soup kitchen. Then comes a shot of the municipal "men's shelter" — a row of cots in a poorly heated shed, each occupied by a forlorn, unshaven hulk. And now this message: If you lose your traveler's checks in Acapulco or Hong Kong, you can always easily get more — provided they were the right kind.

Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr. told Harold Laski that it seemed to him that "socialism never got far beyond 'Look at the big house and look at the little one.'" If I mentioned television's nightly alternations between the poverty it regards as "news" and the widespread affluence implied in its commercials merely to bleat about the juxtaposition, I would be wasting your time. What fascinates me is the rest of the mental baggage carried by the liberals who think the contrast described above makes their case for a more intensive redistribution of wealth.

Typically, they have always favored lower immigration barriers or none — assuring us that this was the way to get our Einsteins, and then being genuinely surprised at the low proportion of Einsteins, and the high proportion of criminals, among the Marcellos. They have cheered on the "sexual revolution" — and then shaken their heads at the quantum increase in illegitimate births, and wept over its social consequences. They have sternly resisted so much as a moment of prayer in the public schools, insisting that "religious instruction," or the barest hint of the existence of a moral order in the universe, should be imparted only at "home"; often one of those roach-infested, crime-ridden, single-parent slums that television is forever so lasciviously exploring.

Apparently liberals see no connection whatever between such policies and the consequences they (quite rightly) deplore. Instead, they seek relief from their intolerable but unconscious sense of guilt by blaming "society" or "the affluent" or "the selfish" for America's shortcomings and attempting to enlarge still further the mendicant proportion of the population. Luckily most Americans finally realize just how disastrous the liberal's nostrums are. They have a lot to feel guilty about.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, April 12, the 102nd day of 1985. There are 263 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On April 12, 1945, the 32nd president of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, died of a cerebral hemorrhage in Warm Springs, Ga., at the age of 63, just three months after beginning an unprecedented fourth term in office. Vice President Harry S. Truman became the nation's 33rd chief executive.

On this date:
Ten years ago: The U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, was closed, and the last of the American personnel, including Ambassador John Gunther Dean, evacuated in the face of advancing Khmer Rouge forces.

Five years ago: The U.S. Olympic Committee's House of Delegates endorsed, by a 2-1 margin, President Carter's call for a boycott of the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

One year ago: The space shuttle Challenger's crew placed a satellite it had retrieved and repaired back into orbit.

Today's birthdays: Jazz musician Lionel Hampton is 72.

Finding time for shopping

Most working women are spending less time browsing through the dress racks — and enjoying it less, too.

That's been a hunch of mine for several years now, and some recent surveys, including one of my own, bear this out.

At a recent regional convention of Women In Communications, Inc., I passed out a questionnaire asking women to rank their enjoyment of wardrobe shopping on a scale of one to 10.

Less than a quarter (23 percent) gave shopping a 10; the majority ranked it between one and five.

The women didn't hesitate to write why shopping was usually a pain: "Don't enjoy the time it takes to find what I like"; "Before I worked, it was a treat — now, it's a necessary burden"; "I would rather do other things"; "It's always frustrating and time-consuming."

They complained mostly of the time involved, but also mentioned poor service, high prices and difficulty finding a good fit ("I feel too fat") or a style suitable to their needs.

Most women said they try to shop quickly, targeting specific needs. They also look for sales. A few comments: "Can't stop being thrifty"; "Always check the sale rack first"; "Sales make me feel better about the final bill."

Some women, including a newspaper reporter and a psychotherapist, estimated they buy 75 percent to 90 percent of their clothes on sale. That's considerably higher than findings in a study by Celanese, the fiber company. Celanese's results indicated that 38 percent of the working woman's wardrobe is bought at reduced prices. The attraction of sales was also borne out in a J.C. Penney survey of 120 married couples. The majority of those interviewed said they tried to buy only merchandise on sale, partly because they felt the sale price represented the actual value of the item.

Also evident in the J.C. Penney findings was that working women felt "harassed by time," a major factor affecting their shopping habits.

A number of women I questioned said they shopped for clothes as seldom as three or six times a year.

That reminded me that during an eight-year period I worked on a newspaper not close enough to stores to pick things up on lunch hour. So, twice a year, I set aside a Saturday for shopping. I overdosed on clothes and shoes, buying almost everything that fit, so I would be suited up for the next six months.

Some women save time by buying clothes from catalogs. A few use the services of wardrobe consultants.

One prominent New York consultant, Emily Cho, said in a recent Wall Street Journal article, "Only two out of 10 (career women), really like to shop." She said they have difficulty shopping fast or efficiently and are turning to women like herself in increasing numbers.

Some executive women pay extra for special services. Jonal, a Manhattan store patronized by professional women, once did a fitting for a busy attorney in the law firm's conference room. Another time, the store delivered a suit to the airport as their client boarded a plane.

Few of us are ever going to be able to afford that kind of attention, but most of us are changing our shopping patterns. It's dash in, get what we need, and dash out.

We are becoming as reluctant as men to give up precious time for shopping.

"More bad news with a liberal bias — after this message."

Robert Walters

They run on leftovers

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When the Shelby for U.S. Senate political committee was organized early this year, it enjoyed an advantage few other campaign organizations have at their inception — a bank account worth almost half a million dollars.

To make that money instantly available to the Senate campaign, aides to Rep. Richard C. Shelby, D-Ala., merely transferred the funds from the political committee which has financed Shelby's four successful campaigns for the House.

No attempt was made to contact the contributors to those campaigns to determine whether they approved of having their money used to finance a bid for a Senate seat, although a member of Shelby's staff says "he'd be glad to refund the money" to any donor who objects to the transfer.

What Shelby has done is neither illegal nor immoral, but it does illustrate the increasing tendency of members of Congress to amass surpluses of Brobdingnagian proportions in their campaign accounts, then spend it in a manner only vaguely related to the originally stated purpose.

The numbers are awesome: In 1982, the major party candidates in the general elections for 33 Senate seats emerged from the campaign with a collective surplus of $4.7 million. Last year, the number of Senate contests remained the same but the surplus increased by 55 percent, to $7.3 million.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., has a surplus of almost $985,000, while Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., has a surplus of more than $676,000. Both solicited more than $1 million in campaign contributions last year although neither faced a serious challenge in their re-election campaigns.

In the House, 116 legislators emerged from the 1984 campaigns with surpluses of at least $100,000 apiece. Atop that list is Rep. W. Henson Moore, R-La., with a surplus of more than $722,000. He is followed by Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., with $608,000; Rep. David Drier, R-Calif with $600,000; Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., with $598,000; and Shelby, with $490,000.

What those legislators do with their leftover campaign money is left entirely to their discretion and imagination. The only applicable federal statute says the funds "may be used for any... lawful purpose."

In most cases, the politicians save the money for their next campaign, often investing it temporarily in high-interest accounts. In other instances, however, the funds are donated to charity, contributed to colleagues' campaigns or used to cover various personal and professional expenses incurred by the office-holders.

In late 1979, Congress approved a law prohibiting its members from using excess campaign funds for their personal use after they leave office — but everybody who was a member of the House or Senate at the time was exempted from that restriction.

Shelby is among the many of legislators who could take advantage of that loophole, but he has no plans to retire or be defeated. Indeed, he wants to move up by challenging Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., in next year's campaign.

Since being elected in 1978, Shelby has never faced serious opposition.

Church of God schedules revival

The Church of God, 1123 Gwendolen, will conduct revival services Sunday through Wednesday with Rev. Harvey Blackshear as the evangelist. Services will begin at 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

A native of Texas, Rev. Blackshear has served as state evangelist for his denomination for the past six years. He is presently serving as minister of youth and Christian education at the Church of God in Sherman.

Pastor T. L. Henderson said the public is invited to attend the revival services.

St. Vincent gains 14 new members

Illinois state health director fired for vacationing during salmonella outbreak

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois public health director has been fired for vacationing in Mexico even as subordinates were telling the governor that he was holding daily staff meetings on a salmonella outbreak that has been linked to three deaths, the governor's press aide said.

The milk-borne disease has sickened nearly 3,000 people in five states in the second-largest recorded outbreak in U.S. history, and caused the Chicago area's largest grocery chain to close its dairy operation for a thorough inspection in an attempt to find the cause of the outbreak.

Thomas Kirkpatrick "saw fit to leave his responsibilities as director of the Department of Public Health at a time when he should have been at his desk," Gov. James Thompson said Thursday in a statement.

The governor's spokesman, David Gilbert, said health department employees sent memos to Thompson saying Kirkpatrick was conducting daily staff meetings on the crisis when, in fact, he was in Mexico.

"It was a mistake for Mr. Kirkpatrick to go on vacation at this time and not to tell me," Thompson said, adding, "it was a mistake for him to stay there and it was a mistake not to return."

Gilbert said it was not clear when Kirkpatrick left for Mexico or whether he was still there.

Efforts to reach Kirkpatrick for comment Thursday were not successful. A spokeswoman for the department, Mary Huck, said she did not even know that Kirkpatrick had been fired.

"Oh, you're kidding!" she said when told by a reporter. She said she didn't know Kirkpatrick had been in Mexico or where he was at the present time. "We got so busy, I didn't even ask about where he was," she said.

Also on Thursday, four lawsuits were filed in Circuit Court against Jewel Companies Inc., makers of dairy products contaminated with the bacteria.

The outbreak has produced a total of 3,902 reported cases of salmonella poisoning and 2,923 confirmed cases in five states.

State youth jobs program expanded

AUSTIN (AP) — A program combining summer jobs and college-based education was so successful last year, it is being expanded to include an estimated 1,000 Texas teen-agers, Gov. Mark White says.

The 14- and 15-year-olds will participate in the Youth Opportunities Unlimited program that is being expanded from three college campuses to 10 this year, White said Thursday.

"This is not a one-shot, 'make work' program. We will teach these young people to read at the same time we teach them to work, so they can have jobs now and careers later," White said.

The governor told his weekly news conference that the program for economically disadvantaged students last year was a success. A total of 299 students lived, worked and attended classes at three university campuses for eight weeks last summer.

"The intensive, total immersion program resulted in an impressive 87.6 percent graduation rate, and a follow-up survey seven months later found that 100 percent of those contacted were still in school and 99 percent were planning to finish," he said.

Participants will receive 280 hours of classroom training, with emphasis on English, mathematics and computers.

Second Mexico drug baron to be arraigned

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Ernesto Fonseca, or "Don Neto," reputed to be Mexico's leading drug dealer and leader of the trafficking combine known as La Familia, is due to be arraigned before a federal magistrate today on multiple narcotics charges.

First Criminal Court Judge Pedro Elias Soto Lara has scheduled a midday arraignment hearing for Fonseca and 23 bodyguards and accomplices, all arrested after a brief shootout Tuesday in the Pacific resort of Puerto Vallarta.

A brief the Attorney General's Office filed with the court Thursday night listed the principal charge against Fonseca as "crimes against the health of the nation."

But the brief indicated the case may be linked later to the kidnap-murder of an American narcotics agent and a Mexican pilot, pending further investigation.

More than 150 special police officers surrounded Fonseca's luxurious villa in Puerto Vallarta for the arrest. Police were said to have found an arsenal of high-powered weapons.

In Mexico, crimes against health can include a variety of narcotics charges, including trafficking.

Fonseca, 60, a drug dealer for more than 40 years, was the second Mexican drug baron brought to trial this week, in the biggest government crackdown against the country's illicit narcotics trade.

Rafael Caro Quintero, arrested

April 4 in Costa Rica, was ordered Thursday by Judge Soto Lara to stand trial for "crimes against health," criminal conspiracy and weapons smuggling.

He is also wanted in Guadalajara for the kidnap-murder of Enrique Camarena Salazar, a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, and Alfredo Zavala Avelar, a Mexican pilot who worked for Camarena Salazar.

According to U.S. officials, La Familia — or The Family — is based in Guadalajara and controls tons of narcotics that pass through Mexico from South America en route to the United States.

They estimate that nearly 30 percent of the marijuana and 38 percent of the heroin used in the United States comes from Mexico, and 30 percent of the cocaine passes through this country.

In Washington, deputy State Department spokesman Edward Djerejian noted the two arrests, saying: "This means that two of the most prominent reputed kingpins among narcotics traffickers in Mexico have been captured. This is a very positive indication of the Mexican government's commitment to combat the traffickers."

Caro Quintero, 29, was arrested with six accomplices in San Jose, the Costa Rican capital. Mexican law enforcement officer say he was a top enforcer and coordinator within La Familia.

One of the accomplices, Jose Angel Morales Ibarra, was sent to Tijuana, across the border from San Diego, where he was ordered to stand trial in federal court on drug-related charges and for the murder of a Mexican narcotics agent.

Another, Juan Carlos Campero Villanueva, was arraigned on a lesser charge of criminal conspiracy and released Thursday on his own cognizance pending trial.

Judge Soto Lara ruled the rest of the Caro Quintero's accomplices, by law, were not eligible for bail, since the charges carry a sentence of more than five years imprisonment. The four were charged with criminal conspiracy and "health crimes," which are punishable with up to 15 years imprisonment.

In Guadalajara, a police report said of six more Fonseca accomplices were arrested there on Wednesday, including a Japanese identified as Isao Sasaki.

The report Thursday evening said Sasaki arrived in Guadalajara in 1976 and worked as a cook Japanese restaurant until 1983 when he quit his job to go work for Fonseca.

The Attorney General's Office has said Caro Quintero continues to be the prime suspect in the kidnapping and murder of Camarena Salazar, 32, Zavala Avelar.

Both were kidnapped there Feb. 7. Their badly beaten bodies were found, wrapped in plastic bags, March 5 on a ranch 60 miles southeast of that city, the capital of Jalisco state.

The two victims were taken to Caro Quintero's house, where Fonseca is said to have been present part of the time while mobsters questioned the American agent and the Mexican pilot.

Six Jalisco state policemen and a former officer are being tried in connection with the kidnapping.

Also arrested for trial on bribery charges was Armando Pavon Reyes, Commander of the Federal Judicial Police in Guadalajara, and the man in initially in charge of investigating the two murders.

In a confession he repudiated later, claiming it was extracted under police duress, Caro Quintero said he paid Pavon Reyes the equivalent of $300,000 to allow him to flee Guadalajara Feb. 9 in his private jet.

Witnesses at the time said Caro Quintero gave Pavon Reyes a farewell embrace at Guadalajara airport before boarding the plane.

Mexican officials say arrests only one battle in the war against drugs

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Two of Mexico's top drug traffickers are behind bars and their La Familia organization damaged, but U.S. and Mexican officials agree a major anti-drug war lies ahead before they can claim victory.

Authorities on Thursday continued questioning Ernesto Fonseca, 60, known as "Don Neto," the man the government calls the nation's drug overlord and leader of La Familia, or "The Family," a confederation of drug traffickers.

He was arrested Tuesday as Rafael Caro Quintero, with a reputation as one of the top four members of the organization, was brought before a federal judge on drug charges following his arrest last week in Costa Rica.

Caro Quintero had been sought as the chief suspect in the kidnap-murder of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar and a Mexican pilot who worked with him, Alfredo Zavala Avelar. Both men were kidnapped Feb. 7 in Guadalajara and their bodies found March 5.

The power of La Familia reaches throughout Mexico with a well-organized, well-funded operation that has international connections.

"In many ways it is like a cobweb. You pull a string and think you are getting close, only to find another string. It's an endless process and as long as there is demand there is going to be a problem," said a ranking Mexican official who spoke on condition he not be identified.

"Mexico works at its own pace, maybe not as quick as some would like, but in the end you have more than you thought."

American officials criticized Mexico for its slow initial response to reports of Camarena's kidnapping within sight of the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara, home base for La Familia and considered a major drug center in Mexico.

An AP News Analysis

A U.S. Embassy spokesman, who did not want to be identified for protocol reasons, agreed the anti-drug war, in which the United States has been cooperating with Mexico, is far from over.

"Nobody expects them to stop doing business overnight. One or two battle victories doesn't mean the war has been won. It just means we have to keep fighting the war," he said.

One source with close ties to the investigation said the drug operation has been "severely damaged" because it has not been able to operate as freely as in the past. The source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, estimated the organization's losses "in the millions of dollars."

U.S. officials have estimated that nearly 30 percent of marijuana and 38 percent of the heroin used in the United States comes from Mexico while 30 percent of the U.S.-used cocaine passes through Mexico from South America.

As an indication of its power, La Familia controls the flow of 12 of the 20 tons of cocaine that passes through Mexico annually, U.S. officials say.

Counting Caro Quintero, 16 people have been formally charged, including six Jalisco state policemen and a former officer.

Caro Quintero said in his confession, which he repudiated, that he paid the equivalent of about $300,000 to Armando Pavon Reyes, former commander of the Federal Judicial Police in Guadalajara.

Hallberg takes first-round lead

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Gary Hallberg says there's no way he will begin thinking about a Masters golf championship yet.

"If you think like that you can eliminate your chances right away," Hallberg said Thursday after securing a one-shot lead with a 4-under-par 68 in the opening round of the season's first major championship.

"It's four days, 72 holes," he said. "The easiest time is when you're on the golf course. It's the other 18 hours I have to keep such thoughts away."

"I don't want to think about it until I have a tap-in on 18 Sunday," he added.

Hallberg, who wears an Indiana Jones-style fedora, birdied two of the last four holes on the 6,905-yard Augusta National Golf Club layout.

Payne Stewart, whose clothing quirk is knickers, and Tom Watson, who has won twice and recorded five other top five finishes in the last eight Masters, shared second, one slender shot off the pace.

There were several other imposing figures within striking distance.

Defending champion Ben Crenshaw, PGA champ Lee

Trevino and former Masters winner Ray Floyd were in a group at 70.

Jack Nicklaus, holder of a record five Masters titles and 17 major professional triumphs, and South African Gary Player, a three-time winner of this event, were in a group at 71.

Hallberg also gave credit to a physics professor and a teaching pro from Scotland.

He said he went to see the physics professor, Dr. Ralph Mann of Ocala, Fla., two weeks ago for computerized swing analysis and got some more help from the Scot, Bob Torrance, on Wednesday.

Hallberg told Torrance he thought he had done wonders with his son, Sam Torrance, who had an opening round 73. The elder Torrance then spent about an hour helping Hallberg work on his game.

Hallberg says he wears the Indiana Jones hat for several reasons.

"I didn't want to be like the other clones I hear so much about out here," he said. "It's funny. Baseball and football players wear the same uniform, but they're seen as different."

He also said the hat shields his eyes from the sun and keeps him from making eye contact with spectators, which he finds distracting.

Hallberg's round included six birdies and two bogeys. It was a two-putt birdie from 25 feet on the 15th that gave him a share of the lead and a 10-footer on the 17th that moved him to the top of the leader board.

Seve Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard who won at Augusta in 1980 and 1983, headed a large group at 72.

Cal Peete, winner of the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago, had a 75 and U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller 77.

Curtis Strange, winner of two Tour events earlier this year, had an 80 and one of the all-time favorites among Masters galleries, four-time winner Arnold Palmer, had the worst score of the day, an 83.

National Golf Club didn't suit his free-wheeling style.

For a couple of seasons, he declined an invitation to compete. But now, he's done a 180 degree turn.

A victory in the Masters is one of the most cherished dreams for the man who won the U.S. Opens in 1968 and 1971, the British Opens in 1971 and 1972, the PGA in 1974 and again last year.

The Masters now is the only one he needs to place his name on golf's most select and exclusive list — the roster of those who have swept all of the game's Big Four events.

First round leader...Gary Hallberg.

Trevino confident of victory

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — It was the Lee Trevino of old: stalking and swaggering, grinning and gesturing, brash and brassy as ever.

"If I can strike the ball the way I did today, there's no reason I can't win," the 45-year-old Trevino said Thursday after a 2-under-par 70 in the opening round of the Masters. He was two shots off the lead in this event that holds a unique place in his career.

Once, back in 1969, he vowed he'd never again play in a Masters. He said the hilly course wasn't suited to his game. And, too, the stiff and proper atmosphere of the Augusta group at 72.

Cal Peete, winner of the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago, had a 75 and U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller 77.

Cey's blast sparks Cubs

By The Associated Press

Steve Trout made one bad throw, and it cost him a run, but Jose DeLeon's one bad pitch cost him the game.

With two runners aboard in the fourth inning, DeLeon threw a pitch to Chicago's Ron Cey that wandered across the middle of the plate. Cey deposited the ball into the left-field seats to send the Cubs to a 4-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Trout, meanwhile, limited the Pirates to three hits in tossing a complete game. His only bad toss was directed toward first base, and the resulting errant toss set up Pittsburgh's only run.

In other National League action, Mike Marshall's two-run homer capped a three-run Dodger uprising in the eighth inning and Los Angeles held on for a 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros at the Astrodome.

In New York, Danny Heep drew a bases-loaded walk in the bottom of the 11th inning to give the Mets a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

In Philadelphia, Dale Murphy drove in three runs and scored twice to pace the Atlanta Braves to a 6-3 triumph over the Phillies, who have lost 11 consecutive games over two seasons.

Dodgers 4, Astros 3

The Dodgers, who dropped behind 3-0 in the early going, got to Houston starter Bob Knepper for a run in the sixth before erupting in the eighth against reliever Bill Dawley.

Mariano Duncan walked with two outs in the eighth and scored when Ken Landreaux doubled to right. Marshall, who had struck out five times in three games, followed with his first homer of the season.

Carlos Diaz gave up one hit over three innings to pick up the victory in relief of starter Orel Hershiser. Ken Howell pitched the final two innings for the save.

Mets 2, Cardinals 1

New York, forced into extra innings for the second time in as many games, again won at the expense of ex-Met Neil Allen. After Keith Hernandez singled to open the 11th, Allen came on to face Gary Carter, who won Tuesday's 10-inning affair by beating an Allen pitch into the St. Louis bullpen. On Thursday, Carter singled off the glove of third baseman Art Howe and, when the ball skittered into foul territory, Hernandez chugged into third.

George Foster was walked intentionally to load the bases before Heep was walked on a 3-1 pitch.

Seattle's Gorman Thomas knows how it feels to be down. So he wasn't about to show up the Oakland A's, even if it meant passing up a chance to tie a hallowed major-league record.

Thomas, a veteran slugger who hit just one home run in 1984 while missing most of the season with a torn rotator cuff, had already blasted three home runs, including a grand slam, when he came to the plate in the seventh inning Thursday night with the Mariners leading 13-6.

And, in his final at-bat with a chance to tie the major-league record of four homers in a game, Thomas walked on a 3-2 pitch.

"I would have liked to hit four home runs, but there is no way I was going to swing at a 3-0 pitch or even a 3-1 pitch," said Thomas, who also walked in the first. "Then you're showing someone up. In this game you try not to embarrass yourself or anyone else."

Thomas wound up with six runs batted in as Seattle belted seven homers and won 14-6.

Earlier, when Thomas slammed his third home run, the fans at the Kingdome kept standing and applauding hoping for a wave. But Thomas stayed in the dugout.

"It's not that I don't appreciate the fans' cheers, I do," he said. "But if I come out of the dugout, it could be interpreted as rubbing it in someone's face."

In other American League games, Detroit got past Cleveland 11-10 in 10 innings. Toronto nipped Kansas City 4-3 in 10 innings. California stopped Minnesota 4-3 in 10 innings. Boston tripped New York 6-4 and Milwaukee halted Chicago 8-1.

Tigers 11, Indians 10

Detroit, which got off to a 35-5 start last year and went on to win the World Series, completed a season-opening, three-game sweep of Cleveland when reliever Dave Von Ohlen walked three batters in the bottom of the 10th.

Red Sox 6, Yankees 4

Dwight Evans clubbed a two-run homer and had a sacrifice fly to help Boston complete a season-opening, three-game sweep of New York.

Willie Hernandez, last year's Cy Young Award winner, pitched 32-3 innings for the victory.

Detroit's Larry Herndon sent the game into extra innings with an RBI single in the ninth.

Blue Jays 4, Royals 3

In Kansas City, George Bell blasted a mammoth home run on Royal reliever Dan Quisenberry's first pitch of the 10th inning to give Toronto its triumph.

For the second straight night, Blue Jays reliever Bill Caudill got the victory. He pitched 1 2-3 hitless innings before Jim Acker took over in the 10th and got a save.

become one of choosing between the physical pain of playing with a swollen ankle and the emotional pain of ruining a record of playing in 444 straight games and 4,009 innings.

Ripken's streak may end

BALTIMORE (AP) — Only one thing is certain: if Cal Ripken Jr. plays with the Orioles tonight against the Toronto Blue Jays, he'll be playing in pain.

The decision then would

With the Major League baseball season getting underway, it's now time for the Optimist Club youngsters to get their turns at bat.

Tryouts for boys baseball (10 through 12 years old) and girls softball (9 through 12) will be held April 16, 17, 18, from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on the Optimist Club fields.

T-ball and Intermediate League players (boys 7 years old by July 31 through age 9) will register April 23-24 at the Optimist Club from 5 to 6 p.m.

League registration fees are $18 per player, which also includes jersey and caps, plus one ticket to the opening day barbecue ceremony May 18.

Play ball!

Speaking of Major League baseball, the unlikely Minnesota Twins could be the surprise team of 1985. Billy Gardner could make manager of the year and Kent Hrbek could challenge for the batting title. Look for the Chicago Cubs to make their first World Series appearance since 1945.

A letter I received from Dale Reinhardt, a high school track coach in El Paso, points out the inhumanity of House Bill 72 and the traumatic effects it could have on borderline students.

Here's Reinhardt's touching letter about a former student:

"With the new academic standards on extracurricular activities this next semester, the following story never would have taken place.

Jaime was a high school sophomore when I spotted him running a time trial in a physical education class, and he certainly looked good to me. I talked to Jaime after class about running cross country and track, as I felt he had great potential.

Later that day, I did some investigating into Jaime's grades and a little of his history. I found that he smoked, drank and was running with others who were known to smoke marijuana. He was also failing three classes.

Jaime and I worked and worked. He loved athletics, and I loved him. He stopped smoking, drinking and brought up his grades in all but one class. But he was eligible to participate.

His junior year, he did a great job — no drinking or smoking and only failed one class the second semester. His senior year, he was a district champion. He also was passing all courses except one. Jaime graduated that year.

Jaime, his wife and daughter come to see me often. We still love each other and do a lot of talking. One thing Jaime said was that if it had not been for athletics, he never would have graduated from high school.

I told him he was lucky he was able to participate when he did, for today, he would have been ineligible because of one class his sophomore, junior and senior years. But that is OK. Today, he still would be eligible to drink, smoke marijuana and drop out of school."

In case you're unfamiliar with HB 72, it contains the no-pass, no-play rule where students must be passing all classes at the end of the six weeks grading period to be eligible to play sports. Texas State Board of Education members remind me of our Washington bureaucrats. They stay up late thinking up all the good things they're going to do for us, and we spend sleepless nights afraid they're going to accomplish their purpose.

Teams competing against the Pampa High girls' tracksters this season must feel like lambs being led to a slaughter. The Lady Harvesters have won six consecutive meets and there's been plenty of points to spare between them and the second-place team in every outing.

The Lady Harvesters go for No. 7 today at the Five-State Relays in Liberal, Kans. Pampa is heavily favored while Tascosa, Palo Duro and Liberal are expected to battle it out for second.

"You might say this is a warmup for district, but it's going to be a tough meet," said Pampa coach Gary Cornelsen. "I just hope the girls can keep improving their times and keep on rolling."

That District 1-4A meet is scheduled for April 19 at Plainview.

The Pampa boys have been overshadowed by the Lady Harvesters' success, but it's made them a better team, Cornelsen said. The Harvesters won the varsity division at the Bulldog Relays in Borger last weekend.

"I think the girls have actually made the boys into a better team," Cornelsen said. "Maybe there's a little jealousy there, but whatever it is, the boys are trying harder."

The Harvesters are entered in the 12-team boys' meet at Liberal. There are 16 teams entered in the girls' meet, making it the largest field the Lady Harvesters have competed against.

The Lady Harvesters are loaded with depth, which is essential if a team is going to win like they've been doing. If they don't win, they at least place in almost every event.

Who has been winning the first-place medals for the Lady Harvesters? Freshman sensation Tanya Lidy has won six times, four in the 200 and twice in the 400. Kristi Hughes has won the high jump three times, the long jump once, and the 100 hurdles twice. Sandra Farrah has won the shot put once. Andrea Hopkins had won the discus three times and the shot once. Sophomore standout Linda Ammons has won the 400 twice. Courtney Brown has a victory in the 100 and Tacy Stoddard has won the 1600.

setting up scoring opportunities for opponents.

"Ed's working hard, but sometimes things don't fall in place. It has become a very negative factor on occasion. But it's not his fault. He's just had a couple of bad days," Infante said after Saturday night's loss.

Luther, however, blames himself and not Infante.

"Coaching is the last problem this team has," said Luther.

San Antonio upset Eastern Conference co-leader Birmingham 15-14 on Sunday.

They have raise their season record to 3-4.

Nick Mike-Mayer kicked three field goals, including a 24-yard effort with 11 seconds remaining, to propel the Gunslingers past the 5-2 Stallions.

With less than a minute remaining, Birmingham kicker Danny Miller missed a 37-yard field goal attempt, which would have put the contest out of reach.

NBA roundup

Celtics continue to dominate Cavs

By The Associated Press

The Cleveland Cavaliers, still excited about making the National Basketball Association playoffs, had better settle down soon and figure out how to beat the Boston Celtics.

Larry Bird scored 29 points Thursday night as the Celtics defeated the Cavaliers 121-115. The victory marked the 15th straight time Boston has beaten Cleveland, dating back to January 1983.

More importantly, the outcome ensured the Cavaliers will meet the Celtics in the first round of the playoffs next week. That series will be best-of-five.

Still, Bird says he is wary of his team's opening-round opponent.

"The Cavs are on a hot streak and they have a bunch of scrappy guys," Bird said. "There are other teams I'd probably rather play in the first round."

Boston's victory improved its record to 63-17, clinching the best record in the NBA this season.

In other NBA games, Houston nipped Kansas City 125-123. Utah routed Portland 145-107, the Los Angeles Lakers beat Golden State 137-130 and Dallas clobbered Seattle 124-80.

Rockets 125, Kings 123

Ralph Sampson sank a 10-foot shot with two seconds left to give Houston its victory.

Kansas City had tied it with 10 seconds left when Eddie Johnson made an 18-foot shot. The Rockets called timeout, and Sampson then took the inbounds pass and worked inside.

Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon each scored 31 points. Olajuwon also grabbed 11 rebounds.

Johnson had 26 points and Mike Woodson 24 for the host Kings.

Jazz 145, Trail Blazers 107

Adrian Dantley scored 23 points, Jeff Wilkins 22 and Fred Roberts 20 as Utah won by the biggest margin in its 11-year history.

The victory enabled the Jazz to pull into a tie with Portland and San Antonio for the fifth Western Conference playoff spot.

Utah's previous biggest winning margin was 30 points over San Antonio during the 1979-80 season.

Lakers 137, Warriors 130

Byron Scott and Earvin "Magic" Johnson sank consecutive baskets to help Los Angeles fend off Golden State's furious rally.

The Lakers led by 17 points early in the fourth quarter, but Sleepy Floyd and Purvis Short helped pull the Warriors within 124-121 with 2:18 remaining.

But Scott, who had 22 points, and Johnson, who had 28, made their baskets to give the visiting Lakers their victory.

Floyd scored a season-high 33 points and Short had 20.

Mavericks 124, SuperSonics 80

In Tacoma, Wash., Mark Aguirre scored 30 points, and Rolando Blackman added 20 as Dallas took advantage of Seattle's injured front line.

The victory clinched the home-court advantage for the Mavericks in the first round of the playoffs.

Tom Chambers, normally a forward for Seattle, started for the first time in his career at center. He scored 13 points and grabbed a career-high 18 rebounds.

Sweden's Nystrom stuns McEnroe

DALLAS (AP) — On the day Sweden's Joakim Nystrom shot the lowest golf round in his life, he also whipped defending Buick WCT Finals champion John McEnroe, the world's top-ranked tennis player, in straight sets.

"It was the greatest victory of my career, in tennis that is," said a stunned Nystrom. "My baby being born was another."

"I played my best match. I also played golf earlier and shot 92. It was my best score there also."

The 22-year-old Nystrom knocked off the 26-year-old four-times WCT Finals king 6-4, 7-6, and 6-3 Thursday night and McEnroe said "I felt like my tennis shoes were glued to the floor."

McEnroe had made the finals in the tournament the last six years.

"I felt flat," said McEnroe. "But Nystrom is a good player who makes you work. You have to be on top of your game. I played bad."

Nystrom, the world's 11th ranked player and 10th seeded here, will meet America's Tim Mayotte in a Saturday semifinal match.

Mayotte, the tournament's 11th seed, made surprisingly quick work of the favored Mats Wilander, fourth seeded and No. 4 ranked in the world, 6-3, 6-1, and 7-6.

His serve-and-volley game devastated the Swede, who had beaten him twice previously.

"It was the best match I ever played," said Mayotte. "I served well, and had very few errors volleying. I just didn't let him get it together."

Wilander admitted he was dazzled by Mayotte's serve.

"I just couldn't read it," Wilander said.

Mayotte defeated Andres Gomez of Ecuador in five sets on Tuesday night.

Tonight's quarterfinal matches feature 19-year-old Stefan Edberg, who upset his Swedish Davis Cup doubles partner Anders Jarryd in five sets, meeting No. 3 seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

In the other match, America's 17-year-old Aaron Krickstein, who knocked off Eliot Teltscher in five sets, goes against No. 2 seeded Jimmy Connors, who has all but recovered from back trouble which forced him to default in Chicago last week.

The survivors will play each other in the semifinals on Saturday.

Nystrom is one of five Swedes who started out in the tournament but still not good enough to play singles on their Davis Cup team which beat the United States in 1984.

Nystrom said, "I surprised myself. I had lost to McEnroe 6-4, 6-2 the only time I played him."

"I just wanted to come out and hope to play a good match. After I won the first set, I knew I had a good chance to beat him."

Asked when he knew he had it, Nystrom laughed. "When it was 40-love in the last game," he said.

It was the first loss in a tournament for McEnroe since last August. McEnroe lost only three matches last year.

"I never had a good feel," said McEnroe. "I was just a step slow all night. I hadn't been playing that great. I had been winning but I was struggling."

"I just don't feel quite as mobile as usual. Movement to me is most important," McEnroe said.

Nystrom knocked off countryman Henrik Sundstrom 6-3, 6-3, and 6-4 on Wednesday night to advance against McEnroe.

Gunslingers take on Bulls tonight

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Jacksonville has the makings of a good football team but hasn't put the pieces together, said Bulls Coach Lindy Infante as he prepared for tonight's United States Football League game with San Antonio.

"This is going to be a good football team. It will be good before the season is over. We can't dwell on the past. We have to keep focusing on the future," said Infante of the 2-5 Bulls.

"We're only three games behind (conference leaders) with 11 games to play. There's still a lot of football left this season and anything can happen. We certainly haven't given up hope," he added.

Bulls' owner Fred Bullard also is concerned about the lackluster showing this season, especially because his payroll has doubled to more than $4 million.

Bullard said Infante and General Manager Larry Csonka are working to try to determine why the Bulls haven't been more successful.

"We feel we may have some round pegs in square holes and square pegs in round holes," said Bullard.

The Bulls, who lost 31-17 Saturday night to cross-state rival Tampa Bay, have had trouble punching the ball over the goal line.

"We're just not executing," said quarterback Ed Luther, after the loss to Tampa. "We should do a better job of getting the ball in the end zone. The offense is good enough to move the ball, but we have to concentrate better when we get close."

Luther, who was acquired recently from the San Diego Chargers, has had success throwing the ball. He connected on 26 of 44 passes against Tampa for 292 yards.

In the past two weeks, however, he has thrown eight passes to the other team, stalling drives and setting up scoring opportunities for opponents.

"Ed's working hard, but sometimes things don't fall in place. It has become a very negative factor on occasion. But it's not his fault. He's just had a couple of bad days," Infante said after Saturday night's loss.

Luther, however, blames himself and not Infante.

Plaatjes barred from Boston Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — Highly touted Mark Plaatjes, a 24-year-old South African, headed home, his dream of running in the Boston Marathon ended by an international rule that has plagued his country for more than a decade.

Since the early 1970s, South African track and field athletes have been barred from worldwide competition, including the Olympic Games, by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for the sport, because of that nation's policy of racial separation, or apartheid.

The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track and field, applied that rule Thursday in ordering Plaatjes, a former runner at the University of Georgia, out of Monday's 89th Boston Marathon.

"TAC has no choice but to request the BAA (Boston Athletic Association, the race organizer) to refuse entry to Plaatjes," Alvin Chris, the special assistant to TAC

Executive Director Ollan Cassell, said from his Indianapolis office.

"They agreed to do so."

"Based on this policy (of TAC), the BAA regrets the need to disallow Mr. Plaatjes from competition," said Len Luchner, the technical adviser for the Boston Marathon course and a member of the 11-man BAA Board of Governors.

"It's really regrettable, but probably what was expected," said race administrator Guy Morse.

CONVICTION UPHELD—Barbara Dotson, mother of convicted rapist Gary Dotson, weeps Thursday as she is escorted from Cook County circuit court in Markham, Ill., after learning her son's conviction had been upheld. Gary Dotson's accuser, Cathleen Crowell Webb, came forward to testify the rape never happened. Judge Richard Samuels, however, upheld the conviction. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge upholds man's rape conviction

MARKHAM, Ill. (AP) — Cathleen Crowell Webb screamed "He's innocent ... He's innocent" after a judge, saying he did not believe that she fabricated a 1979 rape charge, refused to free the man who was convicted and spent six years in prison.

Gary Dotson, 28, still faces the balance of a 25- to 50-year sentence after Circuit Judge Richard Samuels ruled Thursday that Dotson "failed to sustain his burden (of proof) and I cannot find that perjury was committed."

"I've told the truth!" said Mrs. Webb, whose testimony sent Dotson to prison, as she was led from the courthouse Thursday supported by her husband and attorney John McLario.

"I lied in 1979 and I'm telling the truth now," she continued, speaking through tears, pale and visibly shaken.

Mrs. Webb, 23, testified last week she was never raped on July 9, 1977. She said she made up the story when she was 16 because she feared she was pregnant and wanted to prevent her foster parents from learning she had had sex with a boyfriend.

Samuels, who had sentenced

Dotson in 1979 on the rape and aggravated kidnapping charges, said Illinois Supreme and appellate court rulings made it difficult to accept recanted testimony. He said that new witnesses who appeared on Dotson's behalf failed to "establish the credibility of Cathy's recantation."

Dotson, who was freed April 4 on $10,000 bond after Samuels continued the original hearing until Thursday, covered his eyes as the judge began reading his notes from the bench following closing arguments. He will be eligible for parole in 1988.

As the judge announced his decision, Dotson's mother, Barbara, screamed "What happened?" from her seat several feet behind her son. Dotson slammed the table, then sat back quietly, staring at Samuels.

Mrs. Webb, who now lives in Jaffrey, N.H., said on ABC-TV's "Nightline," "I lied (in 1979), evidently too convincingly ... I regret deeply that it took me six years to come forward ... Prior to my decision to become a Christian I didn't have a conscience about this."

Dotson was led from the courtroom by police and moved to the county jail. His mother said he later spoke to her from the jail infirmary. She said she did not know why he was there and that "he just said 'don't worry about me.'"

An official at the jail, who declined to identify himself, declined to say why Dotson was in the infirmary.

Handicapped plan demonstration

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — More than a hundred handicapped individuals are threatening to demonstrate outside an American Public Transit Association convention next week over the lack of wheelchair lifts on buses and trolleys.

"This is blatant discrimination," Wade Blank, a spokesman for the American Disabled for Accessible Public Transportation told the San Antonio Light.

"It's like saying everyone but the disabled and handicapped may ride this trolley — it's like saying 'Whites only.'"

The group will protest the lack of wheelchair lifts on San Antonio's VIA transit buses and trolleys.

VIA officials, however, say the chair lifts are too costly. Instead, they provide 20 special vans available for the transportation of those in wheelchairs. Several cities in Texas use a van system for the mobility impaired rather than put lifts on all city buses.

"It is not our intent to be discriminatory toward the handicapped," VIA spokeswoman Claire Sellers said.

"The lifts are highly expensive and in other cities, research shows the use of the lift equipment is minimal," she said.

Blank, a Presbyterian minister who says he was involved with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the Civil Rights Movement in the 1960s, is director of the Atlantis Community in Denver — an independent group for the disabled.

"If police plan to arrest people, we will block the buses," said Blank, who has a 14-year-old disabled daughter. We will model our activities after the civil disobedience followed in Montgomery, Ala., during the 1960s.

ADAPT already has held demonstrations in Dallas, Austin and Houston.

Administration has second thoughts over cemetery visit

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — American Jewish leaders say they are shocked and saddened that President Reagan plans to honor German war dead by visiting a cemetery near the site of World War II's bloody "Battle of the Bulge."

Apparently surprised by the vehemence of the Jewish reaction, administration officials said the plan might be looked at again.

"There is no active reconsideration of it at present. But that's not to say there won't be," said one White House official, speaking privately. "We may or we may not" review it.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes announced Thursday that Reagan will join West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl on May 5 in visiting the cemetery at Bitburg, a German staging area for the Battle of the Bulge. Plans call for a wreath-laying ceremony, a religious service, and a joint U.S.-German military ceremony.

The visit is planned as part of Reagan's 11-day trip to Europe, beginning May 1.

Jewish groups, already disappointed that Reagan would not visit a concentration camp, protested the president's planned stop at a German cemetery.

"We are saddened," said Phil Baum of the American Jewish Congress, "that the president of the United States should decide against commemorating those European Jewish communities destroyed in concentration camps and decide instead to pay homage to the very soldiers who fought a war in defense of a regime that engineered their destruction and indeed who killed thousands of American young men."

B'nai B'rith International, a Jewish service organization, said it hoped he would reconsider.

"President Reagan was reluctant to visit the site of the Dachau concentration camp for fear of reopening old wounds — a decision we take strong issue with," said Daniel Thursz, executive vice president of the organization.

"His willingness now to visit a German military cemetery shocks us precisely because it reopens old wounds — and in a way that will stir the bitterest resentment not just among Jews, but among former American soldiers, the soldiers of our allies, and the families of all the victims who fell to Nazi Germany's madness," Thursz said.

Father-daughter team runs farm operation

By SYLVIA JONES
The Vernon Daily Record
LOCKETT, Texas (AP) — In a period when hard times on the farm are making national headlines, a Wilbarger County father and daughter are working hard to make the "gamble" of farming pay off.

Rather than take her bachelor's degree in elementary education into the classroom, Carlie Ann Streit, now 28, came home to the Lockett community the day after graduation from West Texas State University in May 1979 to become a hired hand in her father's farming operation. A year later she and her father formed the partnership of Homer and Carlie Streit Farms.

The father-daughter team currently farms some 340 acres that are family owned and 660 acres of wheatland leased from the W.T. Waggoner Estate.

"Farming is a gamble," said Carlie, "and lot of hard work. You have to like it. You can lie in bed and take it easy, but, if you do, your crops will blow away."

But, Carlie worries little, if any, about the perpetual element of risk in her work. She is very serious about farming, but "takes life as it comes one day at a time."

She said about her chosen vocation, "I like it and hope I never have to do anything else."

She can remember as a 6-year-old how she liked to drive her dad's Ford tractor around the vacant lot adjoining the Streit home which then was on Beaver Street. Even then she knew that she wanted to be a "real farmer" someday. When she was a high school student, she began to work with her father as a hired helper.

During one of her early visits to a local cotton gin, she convinced herself that being a farmer was possible for her. It was there that she saw Avis Judd, also engaged in farming, bringing in her cotton crop. Although Ms. Judd normally only oversees the actual work done on her more than 1,000 acres, she represented a successful role model for the young girl who thought, "If she can do it, by George, I can do it, too."

In 1975, Carlie graduated from Vernon High School and was ready to begin working full time. But her mother, Virginia Streit, told Carlie that she had to go to college first if she wanted to farm.

"So I packed my bags real quick," said Carlie.

She spent two years at Vernon Regional Junior College before going on to WTSU. While majoring in education with a minor in art, she also earned credits in golfing and bowling and was on the VRJC bowling team.

Fishing during summer and hunting during winter are now her favorite sports — which she enjoys at every opportunity.

Cooking is something else she really loves to do. She is the number one luncheon chef for her parents and herself in their home located just across the field from her own house.

A typical day begins about 5:30 a.m. After breakfast and the daily chore of feeding chickens, hogs and her "critters" (three cats: Tuffy, Buff and Tippy-toes, and a part German shepherd-part golden retriever dog: Muffin), Carlie meets with her father to plan the day's work.

The day can be long, especially in the summertime when work usually lasts until 9 p.m. or later.

Many of the winter days are used to get machinery and equipment ready for the heavy spring and summer schedule. A large metal shop-barn, built by the farming partners, provides a warm place for this work — as well as space for a relaxing solitary game of pool or group parties which are frequently initiated as fish fries.

Carlie is very much at ease with any task involving their big tractors. In January she hired out to help a neighbor strip cotton, but had none of her own to harvest.

The Streits' 1984 cotton crop was a prime example of the gamble of farming. Three times cotton was planted on the Streit farm. The first planting was blown away. The land was too dry for the second round of seeds to sprout. The meager stand resulting from the third and final planting was plowed up and replaced with mung beans in a futile attempt to get some return from the land. The bean crop failed also. That was bad luck, but winter wheat was better.

Carlie and her mother share the work of canning and freezing the products of their homegrown fruits and vegetables.

And Carlie plans to fill her brooderhouse with 100 baby chicks and at least 15 baby turkeys this year. These will be added to her flock of chickens, which presently includes about 60 laying hens of different breeds.

The chicken pens and buildings are behind Carlie's 80-year-old house, which underwent considerable renovation on weekends while the new owner was still in college. Professional help was required for some of the remodeling, but Carlie did much of it herself.

One of her personal projects was the laying of a brick patio.

Have you traced your ancestors to the English Quakers or the French Huguenots who fled their countries in search of religious freedom? You might find them in NEW JERSEY.

Many researchers have thought their ancestors came from Europe into one of the ports of South Carolina only to discover that the family traveled down the coast from New Jersey. This is especially true for a large group of the Huguenots. Many records have been published in both states from the group.

For vital records from 1878 write The State Registrar's Office, State of New Jersey, Department of Health, John Fitch Plaza, P.O. Box 1540, Trenton, N. J., 08625. Before that date, we have to rely mainly on family Bible records or church records.

New Jersey has several genealogical societies. Researchers might consider joining one for easy access to the area. Check the location of the ancestor in the last known time period and try for the nearest society. Write for information on membership and queries. Often, an initial query will be free or at a lower cost than the annual membership with excellent results. Many of the societies are establishing family registers and will include a card with your family if you request the service.

Remember, when you have a query published you might receive several letters requesting information. It is ASSUMED that you will answer all correspondence. That is why it is suggested that you publish queries only on lines that you are actively researching.

Do you have a query you would like published in this column? Send the information to me: Gena Walls, 11507 Brookledge Dr., Houston, 77099. If you would like a personal reply, please include the self-addressed, stamped envelope. Happy Hunting!

Spring genealogy workshop set April 27

The Northwest Oklahoma Genealogical Society is to conduct their first spring one-day workshop on April 27 at the Pioneer Museum, 2009 Williams Ave., Woodward, Okla.

Conducting the workshop are Leona Marlar of Oklahoma City, and Dava Woodard of Del City, Okla. They are president and past president respectively of the Oklahoma Genealogical Society. The women's presentation is to be on Civil War records, including Reconstruction. Topics will include military records, North and South; related records such as draft, hospital and illness; veteran's benefits like pensions and cash benefits paid to enticesters.

Also included in the presentation will be what life was like for civilians during and after the war, including their records such as amnesty, Presidential pardons, claims in Civil Court for property damage. Some of these record groups are found at the state level and a different type at the national level.

Marlar and Woodard are veteran researchers and lecturers and are returning to Woodward for their second workshop. Registration is to be made in advance or at the door. The workshop is open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. with a lunch break at noon.

The society's mailing address is P.O. Box 834, Woodward, Okla., 73802. For more information, contact the Wandalee Brown, workshop coordinator, at (405) 2565362.

Dear Abby

Couple decides in-laws are best enjoyed at a distance

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Concerning "Heartbroken Parents," who blame their daughter-in-law for "stealing" their son from them, thank you, Abby, for saying the daughter-in-law may have influenced her husband, but the final choice was their son's.

We live only a few hours from my in-laws, but we visit less and less as each year passes. I would enjoy a nice relaxing visit at their home, but it never happens. Please let me speak to them through you, Abby.

You turn every visit into a golden opportunity to impose your religious and political beliefs on us. They're not "discussions"; they're lectures on why your beliefs are right and ours are wrong.

Your son and I are forced to watch the painfully obvious favoritism you show toward your other grandchildren who live in your town and therefore see you more often.

We are subjected to your entire schedule of television programs because you think yours are the only appropriate choices.

We, who are health-minded non-smokers, are subjected to a thick cloud of cigarette smoke during the entire visit.

In short, instead of making us feel as though you enjoy our company, we leave with the feeling that we have spent the weekend at boot camp.

YOUR "THIEVING" DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

DEAR D-I-L: Read on:

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Heartbroken Parents," who blamed their daughter-in-law because they no longer "had" a son.

It is a quote from "The Prophet," by Kahlil Gibran: "Your children are not your children. They are the sons and daughters of life's longing for itself. And though they are with you, yet they belong not to you. You may house their bodies, but not their souls, for their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit even in your dreams."

MRS. C., LAGUNA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: May I say a word about the "Heartbroken Parents" who blame their daughter-in-law for "stealing" their son from them?

I'm a daughter-in-law, too, and if it weren't for me, my in-laws would see a lot less of their son.

I'm the one who reminds my husband to call his mother. I'm the one who keeps track of the birthdays in his family. I'm the one who writes the letters, buys the cards and gifts for Mother's Day and Father's Day, and puts the pen in their son's hand to get him to sign the card. And I'll bet I'm not all that unusual.

No name or town, please. My mother-in-law thinks her son is perfect.

Library family of the year to be honored

Friends of the Library will be sponsoring a tea Sunday afternoon to honor the Library Family of the Year and to recognize people working on the Gray County history book.

The tea will be held in the main section of the Lovett Memorial Library from 2 to 4 p.m., with members of the Friends and the general public invited to attend.

Named as 1984-1985 Family of the Year for their patronage of the library are Fran and Eileen Kludt and their three children, Amanda, 7; David, 8, and Heather, 13.

Also to be honored are those who are helping to compile the history of Gray County for the book to be published in conjunction with the state's upcoming Sesquicentennial observances in 1986.

The tea is being held to note National Library Week, set for April 14-20. Memberships to the Friends group will be available at the library during that week.

The Pampa Fine Arts Association's reception for the artists of the year will be held in the library's auditorium at the same time, with people invited to attend both events.

The Friends of the Library are making preparations for their annual used book sale, scheduled for Saturday, April 27, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday, April 28, from 1 to 5 p.m.

Donations of used hardbacks, paperbacks, tapes, records and magazines are being accepted at the library, the Senior Citizens Center and Wal-Mart. Those unable to drop their books off at those locations may call the library at 665-3981 or Nancy Hill at 669-3467 to arrange for pickup of the books.

North Texas community dwells in ambiguity

By RUSS RODEN
Sherman Democrat

KNOLLWOOD, Texas (AP) — The second anniversary of this young city's birth probably went unnoticed by most of its 215 or so residents this month and that may be a blessing considering what such a celebration would include — or more importantly exclude.

Proud citizens couldn't crowd around the steps of city hall to hear the mayor boast of the city's fine heritage, seeing as there is no city hall in Knollwood, about two miles north of Sherman.

And without a school here you could nix the idea of having the local band march through spectator-lined streets of the 47-acre city while dotting parents searched the rank-and-file for a glimpse of Junior and his trombone.

How about just a simple picnic on the town green?

Forget it. Even if you could find a town park — and there aren't any — there's not a single store located in the City of Knollwood's 47 acres where you could buy an All-American meal of hot dogs, potato chips and a cold bottle of pop.

"There are no real plans (for the anniversary)," says Mayor Thomas Roelke, who also concedes that there has been little change since the mobile home park became a municipality. "We've just been idling along for the past two years just running the government, being sort of like hermits."

The events leading up to the conception of this small city began in the late 1970s when a dispute over water rates arose between the City of Sherman and the residents of Knollwood Mobile Home Park.

To avoid double-rates for water and sewer service — Sherman's standard procedure when serving communities or subdivisions outside of their city limits — the owners of Knollwood Trailer Park requested that they be annexed into Sherman.

When Sherman declined, the people of Knollwood, or at least the 29 of them who voted to incorporate, defiantly voted to return the snub and become a city — thus preventing Sherman from taking over the mobile home park in the future.

The results have been — as one resident puts it — "a joke."

Knollwood's water and sewer services continue to be served by Sherman — at double-rates, of course — and the entire city still only consists of a bunch of mobile homes with a clubhouse-turned-child-care-center and swimming pool. And, of the original mayor and five aldermen elected two years ago, four have left Knollwood.

Many residents are apparently bitter about the way the incorporation turned out — but chances are you won't hear their thoughts voiced publicly because Knollwood's political situation would seem more appropriate to feudal Europe rather than modern Texas.

The bizarre scenario centers around the fact that Roelke, the mayor, is related to the Roelkes who own every inch of soil in the City of Knollwood.

With that in mind, some residents of Knollwood who might dislike conditions here keep their complaints to themselves.

"A lot of people are mad," said one resident who asked not to be identified because, "if you use my name they might evict me. I've seen them do it to people before."

Said another, "You're not going to use my name are you? They might get mad at me and kick me out."

One resident said Knollwood dwellers were upset that "promises" made by the owners before incorporation have never materialized.

Though they were actually suggestions, not promises, the president of Knollwood Inc., Elroy Roelke, did circulate material prior to incorporation citing certain changes that could occur if Knollwood became a city.

Included on the list were ideas that Knollwood residents might be able to negotiate for better water and sewer rates as a city, that they could establish a town marshal, volunteer fire department and "adopt a mobile home subdivision ordinance allowing for sale of lots specifically adapted to mobile home ownership needs."

"The only 'promise' they've kept is that we wouldn't have to start paying city taxes," says one.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

HIS TROUBLES WON'T GET HIM DOWN

Forgetting his incapacitation, he is happily determined to plan ahead. His spirit is not easily crushed. Life is always full of hope and excitement. The Lord and this young man's Christian friends have taught him to have such an outlook on life.

"But the fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith." Galatians 5:22.

We invite you to attend the church of your choice regularly to worship, to be uplifted, encouraged, and blessed.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

WANNE SILVA

Pampan to serve in Baptist mission

DALLAS - Wanne Silva of Pampa was recently selected to serve a 10-week term as a Texas Baptist Rio Grande River Ministry summer worker.

Miss Silva, a student at Wayland Baptist University in Plainview, is among 32 volunteers who will spend the summer doing mission work along the 900-mile Texas-Mexico border. She has been assigned to North Chihuahua.

Hundreds of volunteers from throughout the United States each year give their time and talents to the River Ministry to staff medical and dental clinics; construct churches, missions and other buildings; teach border residents agricultural skills, lead Vacation Bible Schools and dig water wells.

The River Ministry is one of the mission arms of the 2.3 million member Baptist General Convention of Texas that receives its financial support from the Mary Hill Davis Offering for State Missions.

The offering is taken each fall in the 4,700 churches and missions affiliated with the BGCT.

St. Paul planning mission meetings

The St. Paul United Methodist Church, 511 N. Hobart, will host a Mission Event from Friday, April 19, through Sunday, April 21, covering a broad spectrum of mission involvement.

The series will begin with a covered-dish meal in the Fellowship Hall at 6:30 p.m. April 19. Speakers will be Rev. and Mrs. Chee Benallie, engaged in the Native American Ministry at Four Corners and Shiprock, N.M.

On April 20 a sandwich luncheon will be held at 12:30 p.m. Speakers will be Rev. Wallace Kirby, chaplain at Kings Manor Methodist Home of Hereford; Mrs. Joyce Cooper, teacher at McCurdy School in Espanola, N.M.; and Rev. and Mrs. Benallie. There will be a question and answer session.

At 7 p.m. Mrs. Cooper and Rev. Kirby will share experiences of their ministries in missions.

On April 21 the missionaries will meet with the Sunday School at 9:30 a.m. Rev. Benallie will speak at the 11 a.m. worship service. A covered-dish luncheon will be held at 12:30 p.m. for the missionaries, congregation and guests.

Rev. James Putnam, pastor, said, "These missionaries will challenge you to actively participate in missions and help you see how vital and helpful your participation in missions has been to the people in these areas of our mission."

Rev. Putnam invited the public to attend the special sessions on missions.

Area poet to address church women's group

Jan Cunningham of Perryton will be guest speaker Wednesday at the Christian Women's Fellowship of the First Christian Church, 1633 N. Nelson.

Cunningham will address the April CWF general meeting at 9:30 a.m. in the church parlor.

The daughter of Moore "Cowboy" and Leone Jones of Pampa, Cunningham is the author of "Jan's Song," a book of poetry.

The B&PW Group will serve as the hostess group. Mary Bowers will bring the worship portion of the program.

The public is invited to attend the special meeting.

Religion in the news

WASHINGTON (AP) - About 200 Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish clergy have appealed for a congressional investigation of the government's deportation of Central American refugees and recent crackdown on the church movement to give them sanctuary.

Blaming the government's military support in Central America in part for the flight of refugees, the broad cross-section of clergy says the administration's "scandalous policy" now is interfering with "rights of religious congregations" to help the refugees.

REV. CHARLES PAULSON stands at the pulpit in the new sanctuary at Zion Lutheran Church, 1200 Duncan.

Zion Lutheran to dedicate new sanctuary

The congregation of Zion Lutheran Church, 1200 Duncan, has invited the community residents to attend a Service of Dedication at 3 p.m. Sunday and a reception immediately following in honor of the new sanctuary.

Rev. Charles Paulson, pastor, will be the Officiant of the Service. Rev. Louis L. Pabor, third vice president of the Texas District of the Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod, will be the preacher.

Other Lutheran ministers from Amarillo, Borger and Hereford will also be participating in the dedicatory services.

Zion Lutheran Church had its beginning in Pampa in 1941, with the first services being held in the chapel of a local funeral home.

In 1942 the church was formally organized as a mission congregation, and three lots were purchased on Duncan St. An old school house was purchased from the Davis School District and moved onto the property; it was remodeled and dedicated in 1944.

Additional buildings were purchased on adjacent lots and used for Sunday School rooms. In 1984 the old school building, which had been used for a Parish Hall, was sold and removed from the location. In April, 1984, groundbreaking services were held for the new building and sanctuary.

In the 43 years that Zion Lutheran has been in existence, there have been six pastors that have served the congregation. Rev. Paulson has been at Zion since July, 1982.

Two members, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Carlson, Sr., are the only two remaining charter members of the congregation. Bob Lemke is chairman of the congregation and the Building Committee. Bruce Riehart is treasurer of the congregation, and Deck Woldt serves as chairman of the Pledge Committee.

Rev. Paulson said the Lutheran Church bases its teaching upon the Crucified and Risen Lord Jesus Christ "as he is revealed to us in the inerrant Word of the Bible. Man's only hope of salvation lies in faith in Jesus Christ, who reigns as God with the Father and Holy Spirit in the Holy Trinity."

Rev. Paulson added, "The Lutheran Church seeks to follow Christ's teaching to love God and one another, to baptize all people, to offer his (Christ's) true body and blood for forgiveness of sins in the Lord's Supper and to make disciples of all nations - this, not to put people under more law, but by offering them Christ's gospel, love and forgiveness."

Further information may be obtained by calling 669-2774.

THE LADS

Revival services announced

Hi-Land Christian Church, 1615 N. Banks, will begin revival services Sunday with The Lads, gospel singing group, and Gary Layman, minister of the New Life Christian Church at Chickasha, Okla., as featured speaker.

Services Sunday will be at 10:45 a.m. and 6:30 p.m., with a fellowship following the evening service. The revival will continue each evening at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

The Lads present a mixture of old hymns, mellow middle-of-the-road songs and contemporary gospel music and have fun with a "piano tour around the world."

Pastor DeWayne Wright said, "Their humor is warm and sincere, and their message gently tugs the heartstrings as they share the Good News they've found."

The Lads have produced and recorded more than 25 albums and have previously been featured in three one-hour television specials.

Layman, who grew up in the Kiamichi Mountains of Oklahoma, is a graduate of Mid-West Christian College; he also attended Cincinnati Bible Seminary. He has held ministries in Indiana, Texas and Oklahoma.

Pastor Wright invited the public to attend the special revival services.

GARY LAYMAN

College halts building plans

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Texas Wesleyan College trustees have agreed to cancel plans to build a campus in far west Fort Worth and will remain on their 60 acres in the heart of the Polytechnic section of the city.

City officials and Polytechnic area leaders, who had opposed the decision to move a 300-acre site in far west Fort Worth, were pleased by the decision.

Bawcom said statistics from the North Central Texas Council of Governments show that the greatest growth in the county will come in east Fort Worth and in northeast and east sections of the county.

"Moving out there we would lose some of the students who would not want to drive all that way," Bawcom said.

Author calls comedy asset in literature

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Comedy is not a laughing matter to Thomas Baird, a professor of art history at a prestigious small liberal arts college in New England.

Baird, who divides his time between teaching at Trinity College and writing, believes there is room — and a need — for comedy in contemporary literature. "Comedy is as profound as serious literature. It's just not seen that way in these times," he said.

Baird's 11th novel, "Villa Aphrodite," has been praised as an entertaining tale of love, art and manners.

Set around a villa in Florence, the novel brings a young American into an intricate web of emotions swirling about the discovery of a previously unknown drawing by Raphael in an old book.

The plot takes some absurd twists as one character tries to move the masterpiece out of Italy illegally. Eventually it expands to include a wealthy American oil heiress being exploited for her money for a Renaissance art center to be located — where else? — in Texas.

Comedic writing is neither easy, nor should it be lightly taken, Baird maintains.

"I take my work seriously for what it is," he said.

"But when you take yourself seriously, it is much more likely that you will make a fool of yourself or make people conclude you're one," he added.

"Villa Aphrodite," which was published late last year, also represents a return to the familiar elements of the art world for the former staff member of the National Gallery of Art "in the sense that the matter of the Raphael drawing is part of it."

"In three of my earlier novels, art is central to the work. Here, it is one of the strings that pull the novel together," he said in a recent interview at Trinity's Austin Arts Center.

Baird, holder of bachelor and master of fine arts degrees from Princeton, exerts himself to make the Raphael drawing seem real. "It is absolutely plausible, but it does not exist," he said.

There are a number of references in the book to things that are extant. "Some of it could be footnoted," the 51-year-old native of Omaha, Neb., said with a smile.

While acknowledging that using some actual references is a matter of self-indulgence, Baird recalled some advice given him by novelist Caroline Gordon during his apprentice days as a writer: "Accuracy in our facts is how we make people believe things in a novel that really matter."

Baird characterized himself as a deliberate writer, one who must believe in what he writes. "Is it really true, I ask myself. Or does it smell made up, smell of a typewriter or, these days, of a word processor."

"Villa Aphrodite" evolved over several years. Baird had written 60

Texas ex-congressman learning about living, working in Orient

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Alan Steelman can truthfully say, with tongue in cheek perhaps, that he has gone farther than any other former Texas congressman.

His new home is a far cry from Mesquite, from which he represented East Dallas in Congress from 1973 to 1977. But after leaving politics in 1977 and spending a few years in the Washington area, he packed his family up last year and moved to Singapore.

"The island is 25 miles by 14 miles but there are 2 1/2 million people on the island, so there is not much room for single-family housing. We live in a high-rise," Steelman said in a telephone interview from Singapore.

Steelman, 43, left politics after running unsuccessfully on the Republican ticket against incumbent Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen in 1976.

He stayed in the Washington area, renovating a seven-bedroom, 150-year-old house on the Chesapeake Bay, and then joined the Alexander Proudfoot Co. about seven years ago as a board member. He later became a full-time employee, working as a productivity consultant for the international business consulting firm.

Steelman, his wife, Carolyn, and the three youngest of their five children moved to Singapore when he was named managing director of Alexander Proudfoot Co., Far East.

Steelman said two of his children, seniors in high school, just returned from a trip to China and now one of his sons is in Malaysia for Easter break, camping out on an island in the South China sea.

"They've all adjusted really well. They like it a lot."

For Steelman, who "had never been west of Hawaii," the transition from back-slapping good ol' boys in Texas politics to the somewhat arcane world of Oriental business required a re-education.

"There's things that you have to do differently than in the Western world," he said, adding that Westerners tend to be more direct than Orientals and that it takes patience to close a business deal in Japan or Korea.

"There are also country-to-country specific things," he said. "Like in Malaysia, which is a Muslim country, you never use the left hand for anything. It's a religious custom. They consider the left hand to be the evil hand."

He said he plans to stay in the Far East for another three or four years.

Polio symptoms return years later

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Susan Maslar figured the pain and agony was over when she left a home for crippled children three decades ago following a successful battle against polio.

But many of her old symptoms gradually began reappearing. She began sleeping through entire weekends and needed a cane or a wheelchair to get around.

It was a nightmare returned, worsened by doctors' insistence that the horror was all in her head.

"I was tired of them telling me I was crazy," the 36-year-old transportation analyst said from her home in Fairfax, Va.

Finally, last spring, Ms. Maslar learned in a magazine article that she wasn't crazy, that she wasn't even alone. Thousands of others who had overcome paralytic polio as children were now experiencing many of the same symptoms that they'd thought they'd left behind for good long ago.

"What we're finding is a small group of patients, all of them with polio as children, who are developing new muscle weakness," says Dr. Marinos Dalakas, a neurologist at the National Institutes of Health.

The non-fatal syndrome, called post-polio myelitis muscular atrophy, seems to strike about one of every four polio survivors about 30 years following the disease's onset, according to Dalakas. There are about 300,000 people in the United States today who are believed to have contracted the disease before the advent of vaccines in the mid-1950s.

"There is no link to the virus," Dalakas says. "But there is a link to the whole disease in the sense that the nerve cells have been previously affected in acute disease and now cannot meet the increased (body) needs. They're overworked and may be succumbing to the aging process faster than usual."

Until the past few years, no one realized there was any connection among former polio patients who complained of weakness, fatigue and muscle pain.

Like Ms. Maslar, they were considered "crazy or depressed or going through mid-life crisis," says Dr. Michael Alexander, medical director of D.T. Watson Rehabilitation Hospital in Sewickley.

Alexander knew better. He'd been stricken with polio 34 years ago at age 3 and was among those experiencing the disease's delayed effects.

"A lot of these people have to learn they have a disability and that they have to alter their lifestyles," he says.

Susan Maslar is one.
