

State closes local trust company

BY JEFF LANGLEY

Senior Staff Writer

Area residents who invested up to $13 million in a Pampa trust company may be left holding the bag, a prosecutor indicated.

Bethany Trust & Co., headquartered in the Hughes Building, was shut down and placed into conservatorship Friday by the Texas Department of Banking.

Investors in the firm promising outstanding returns propped up a pyramid-type scheme, Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton said. The trust company had few real assets, however, and used money from new investors to pay previous investors, he said.

Now that the financial bubble has burst, those who put trust in the trust company stand to lose most, if not all, of their money, the prosecutor said. Before the financial house of cards collapsed in Pampa, the operators of the company had siphoned off most of the money invested, possibly funneling it into a huge Swiss bank account, Hamilton alleged.

The total losses could run from $1.3 to $13 million, authorities estimated.

The man behind the company, Tom Etheredge, dropped from sight last week, just before the banking commission took control of the firm, the prosecutor said. Etheredge, listed as vice president of Bethany Trust, can't be located, Hamilton said.

"There is a substantial amount of money in a foreign bank account," he said.

Etheredge, 30, is a convicted felon and super salesman, according to authorities.

The married man with small children has a home and farm west of town. The family remained in Pampa after Etheredge left town, according to authorities.

A woman with a Spanish accent answered the phone at the Etheredge residence this morning and identified herself as the maid. The woman said she saw Mrs. Etheredge this morning, but that she hasn't seen Tom Etheredge for several days and can't say where he went.

The district attorney and state banking commission are working to sort out the tangled financial web left behind in the failure of the Pampa investments firm. The "paper trail" of money and promises of profit stretch from Pampa to Dallas to Kansas and overseas, Hamilton said.

The beginning of the end for the company came when, unknown to each other, the district attorney and department of banking began separate investigations of the firm. Hamilton said he received a complaint about the trust company about 45 days ago. He said he launched a criminal investigation of the operation.

Meanwhile, the banking commission also began an examination of the trust company. Hamilton said the Texas Department of Banking in Austin has jurisdiction over the investments company because it is registered as a "trust" company. People who invested money with the firm technically are considered "depositors," rather than investors, the prosecutor explained.

Last week, the banking commission sent four examiners to the Pampa office and seized records.

The commission took conservatorship of the firm, and formally announced the action Friday.

Commissioner James L. Sexton of Austin "determined that the trust was in unsound condition and that the continuation of its business posed a hazard to those individuals and other entities placing funds with the trust," a prepared statement said.

"They can't find the money," Hamilton said of the banking authority's examination of Bethany's records.

The prosecutor said Etheredge recruited a steady stream of investors for the trust company, promising guaranteed returns on investments that included Cabbage Patch dolls, Bon Dell water filters and "oil and gas speculation."

The company had sold entire drilling packages, offering investments in oil and gas wells to be drilled and completed by the company, the prosecutor said.

He said Bethany had sold the drilling packages for about a year. A predecessor company, Day Star Productions, also sold the drilling packages, Hamilton said.

But the only wells Etheredge drilled for his investors were three dry holes, Hamilton said.

Still, until authorities halted the White Deer officials make plans for new city landfill

By CATHY SPAULDING

WHITE DEER — After listening to state health department criticism of the city landfill, city officials agreed Monday to start work on a new one.

The Texas Health Department wants the city to clean the dump and to set aside separate areas for metal and appliances, concrete and masonry, and combustible items.

On Friday, city officials visited with Michael Edmunston of Canyon, a solid waste inspector with the health department, to work up a plan on clearing the dump and separating the different categories of debris.

At the regular council meeting Monday, Mayor R.W. Standefer showed aldermen a penciled plan of the proposed new dump, to be located at the current dump site. The current dump is about 215 feet by 14 feet and is located in a city owned area of 1,800 feet by 860 feet. About half that area consists of a lake bed, which health officials say is not suitable as a landfill.

Standefer proposes that an area of 1,800 feet by 430 feet be divided into three areas: one for concrete and masonry; one for metal, appliances and abandoned vehicles and the largest area (1,200 by 430 feet) for combustible items.

This large area would consist of a number of smaller landfills which would be built, used and filled-in as years go by.

"This would start a progression that would last 20 years of digging pits and filling them in," the mayor said, adding that one contractor said he could dig four such pits for $4,000. Another contractor estimated that he could clean the dump area and clear it of debris for about $8,000.

"You're talking about spending a total of $15,000 on the whole project," Standefer said adding that it "takes a year or two years to get an application for a new dump."

"So we have a 20 to 30 year problem to be solved in two years," he said.

The city is now on a "non compliance basis" with the state, according to Standefer.

"Next month, he (the inspector) will check to see if we've done anything, then he'll come back in July," he said. "He said that we convinced him that we knew we had to do something."

In other business, council members split on the need and legality of buying a tractor-mower from city maintenance supervisor R.A. "Junior" Williams.

In a 3-5 decision the council decided to spend $2,000 for the 1952 Ferguson tractor from Williams, who told board members that the tractor would be sold to Skellytown if the city doesn't buy it.

McLean principal plans to resign despite board action

By CATHY SPAULDING

MCLEAN — The McLean ISD board of trustees voted Monday to rescind last month's non-renewal of the contract of high school Principal Ron Cummings.

In addition, the board adjusted Cummings' 1984-85 salary to allow for $4,500 in consulting services.

While the action nullifies the March non-renewal, it does not mean Cummings will return to his job next year. The principal, who has been with the school for eight years, said this morning that he plans to resign.

In March, the board voted 6-1 not to renew Cummings' contract for the 1985-86 school year due to what board members felt was an "apparent lack of support from the community and a lack of discipline and positive leadership with the students."

School patron George Green told trustees at the March meeting that Mr. Cummings was an asset to the school.

The board's action also apparently lacked the support of over 60 McLean High School students who wrote letters to The Pampa News in support of their principal.

"We would like to see one of the people who voted against him come up here and run this school for one week," they challenged in their letter. "It's not easy."

The students expressed their "faith" in him and wished him luck in the future.

Cummings declined comment on the board's motion to rescind its March decision.

The board also swore in new trustee Gwen Henley who replaces outgoing trustee Loyd Hunt, and returning trustee Joel Magee.

Hunt, who was board president this year, offered "congratulations to Joe, sympathies to Gwen and a sigh of relief from me."

Trustees chose Magee as board president and James Hefley as vice president.

In other business, trustees adjusted their cheerleading policy to conform to stiffer state education and extra-curricular activity standards. The policy will also match those of other area schools.

Cummings explained that the new policy reduces the squad from seven members to five. Cheerleaders will be chosen at-large instead of according to class.

"Our policy is that cheerleading comes first, until basketball starts," he said, adding that there will still be a cheering squad for basketball "unless there is a problem."

Like those at other small schools, such as Groom, many McLean cheerleaders also play girls' basketball. Although Groom recently dropped basketball cheerleading, Cummings does not anticipate McLean following suit.

Board members also agreed to make plans for a heating system for the elementary school. The trustees originally wanted to revamp the elementary school heating and lighting system and to lower the ceiling. But rising costs and declining local tax revenue caused the board to revamp the heating system this year and to delay other work. Business manager Shirley Johnson said that the board wants to replace the boiler and steam heater.

She said that the school heating system has not been adequate for more than 11 years.

The board also agreed to let bids on a copier for the high school. Johnson said the board adjusted the 1985 budget for $5,500 to allow for the copier, but she does not expect the copier to cost that much.

Trustees also re-hired all custodians, cafeteria workers and bus drivers.

City approves recount in close Ward 3 race

By LARRY HOLLIS

Staff Writer

The Pampa City Commission this morning approved a request for a recount of the votes in the Ward 3 city commissioner's race.

Incumbent E. L. "Smiley" Henderson asked for the recount in his race with challenger Joe Reed. Reed received 1,004 votes in Saturday's election to Henderson's 979, a difference of only 25 votes out of the nearly 2,000 votes cast in the race.

City Manager Bob Hart presented the commission with Henderson's letter requesting the recount in all four wards for the Ward 3 post.

At Henderson's request today, the commission moved to excuse Henderson and Reed from voting and discussion of commission matters but to let them sit as observers only. Both Reed and Henderson attended today's meeting and sat at the commissioners' tables.

The commission then adopted an order directing the recount and appointed four members of a recount committee: Roy Sparkman, Jerry Sims, Paul Simmons and Darville Orr.

City Attorney Don Lane explained the legalities of the recount procedures. Only the recount committee, the city secretary and the two candidates or their representatives may sit in on the reopening of the locked ballot boxes and the recount of ballots, Lane explained.

Lane said the law prohibits any election clerk, judge or pollwatchers who participated in the city election from sitting on the recount committee. Instead, the members must be "disinterested registered voters."

Lane said the recount must be conducted within two to four days after the committee's appointment. But Henderson and Reed waived the two-day notice requirement, allowing the recount committee to convene Wednesday to begin its operations.

The city commission will reconvene as the election canvassing board in a special meeting at 8:30 a.m. Friday in the City Commission Room at City Hall to receive the recount tallies.

The commissioners canvassed the other election results today and certified the final votes in Saturday's balloting. Hart reported 2,030 voters had cast ballots.

"Smiley" Henderson, who has asked for a recount of votes in his race, watches the swearing-in of Curry while City Secretary Phyllis Jeffers takes minutes at the city commission meeting. In the mayor's race, incumbent Mayor Calvin Whitley received 937 votes; Jerry Mulanax, 274, and Sherman Cowan, 811. Since no candidate received a majority, a runoff election is necessary, Hart said.

Hart announced the runoff election for the mayor's post would be held May 4, with voting in the same ward locations as Saturday.

Absentee balloting will be conducted at the city secretary's office from April 15 through April 30.

In the Ward 1 commissioner race, R. W. "Bob" Curry received 1,283 votes to write-in candidate Floye Christensen's 533.

Curry was administered the oath of office at today's meeting by Municipal Judge Phil Vanderpool.

Official planning to urge tougher school exercises

AUSTIN (AP) — Last year, Ross Perot told Texans that mediocre schools were damaging their children academically. This year, Donald Haydon will tell them their children are too flabby and short-winded.

"The levels of fitness we see in Texas youth now are a disgrace to the state of Texas," said Haydon, executive director of the Governor's Commission on Physical Fitness.

He believes Texas youngsters' strength and heart-lung endurance are declining, and he said he will ask the board this week to reverse the trend.

Although school officials say steps already have been taken toward improvement, Haydon said he plans to urge the board to require more — and tougher — physical education classes.

Roberts County to provide $50,000 for museum work

By CATHY SPAULDING
 Staff Writer

MIAMI - Overflowing with historical displays and plagued by a leaky slate roof as old as the railroad depot in which it's housed, the Roberts County Museum got $50,000 from the county commissioners' court for a new annex and roof.

The commissioners approved the grant Monday at their regular meeting. Cecil Gill, chairman of the Roberts County Historical Commission said if the members of his board will accept bids on the annex and roof, they will get the $50,000.

Faced with a growing number of displays, the museum board began discussing adding to the museum in August. The museum is now housed in the original Miami Railroad Depot and an annex as well as a long building in the back and an outdoor display of a sod shanty. Amarillo architect Pat Tunnell was authorized to make a blueprint and cardboard model of the new annex, which Gill said would be 50 feet wide by 95 feet long and feature. He added that so far, the board is only planning to build a shell, with the displays and interiors added when money allows.

Gill also wants to repair the museum's roof.

"It's got the original slate roof of it and it's cracking," Gill said of the depot, built in 1888. He added that the museum has had a problem with its roof since the depot was moved six years ago from its original site by the railroad tracks to U.S. 60.

Gill estimates that the both improvements would cost $130,000. After the commissioners kick in their $50,000, the rest of the money will be obtained through donations and through us of some $65,000 the museum has in certificates of deposit. Despite the large amount, Gill is confident that the donations will come.

"We hope to get at least started by the Annual Cow Calling Contest, June 1," he explained, adding that the town has many visitors during the event.

He has no idea how long construction would take place.

"I hope to get it ready by the Texas Sesquicentennial in 1986 or the Miami Centennial in 1987," he said.

After granting the money for bids on the museum annex and roofing, the county commissioners discussed ways of cutting costs in bringing its 72-hour holding jail to state jail standards. The state wants the county to add a booking room and a kitchen to its small jail, which is located in the Miami city-county building. The jail accommodates prisoners for 72 hours before they are transported to other counties. The county also wants to add an extra cell for juveniles or women prisoners and provide a room for the local food bank.

Last month, Tunnell showed commissioners two variations of jail plans. One represented a wing added to the city-county building for the jail and sheriff's office. The other moved the jail and offices into the fire station garage and moved the fire trucks into a new wing. Both plans were too costly, commissioners felt.

At the Monday meeting, several commissioners reported that Miami resident John Sebastian told them that he could renovate the jail for less than the current estimates of $198,000 and $237,000. Commissioners agreed to show Sebastian the plans to see what ideas he could come up with, or to have him present a plan of his own.

Sheriff Eddie Brines had some ideas of his own to show commissioners. Why not move the city into its own building and install the cells in what is now the city council room and boy scout meeting room, he proposed. Brines told commissioners about pending legislation which, if passed, would require juveniles to be kept in separate area than adult prisoners. No action was taken.

Commissioners also expressed their disapproval of a "proposal" reportedly made by the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control (commonly known as the Grace Commission) that the U.S. Postal Service close 41 Post Offices in the Texas Panhandle. The Miami Post office would be one of the 41.

The commissioners signed a resolution noting that closing the Post Offices would "cause a hardship and inconvenience for area residence" and that "the services offered by the postal department at the present time are necessary and are conducted for the best interest of the community."

Commissioners also hired Angie Smith to be assistant manager of the Miami swimming pool and four Miami high school students as life guards. The girls and pool manager David Thweatt, a speech teacher at Miami school, will attend life saving classes before starting their jobs June 1.

Texans like trucks

AUSTIN (AP) - Texans love trucks, so much so that four of the top five selling vehicles in the state in 1984 were pickups, according to a comptroller's report.

"If you think the family car in Texas isn't what it used to be, you're right. It's likely a truck," said the report in the "Fiscal Notes" publication.

operation, investors had received payments from the company, he said.

"There aren't any unhappy investors," Hamilton said.

He said money from new investors recruited by Etheredge was used to pay previous investors. He said such an operation can continue almost indefinitely, as long as a growing number of needed investors can be recruited to put up more money.

Listed as president of Bethany is Tim Bortka of Dallas. Etheredge is listed as vice president and sits on the boards of the various enterprises, the prosecutor said. Other local residents also sit on the various boards, he said.

Etheredge was convicted on a theft charge in south Texas in 1979. He was sentenced to two years in prison. Hamilton said he doesn't know whether the conviction involved investments.

Etheredge had built a reputation as the aggressive mover of a high-rolling company, authorities said. The investigation has unraveled stories of expensive diamonds given to employees, secretaries sent on numerous trips to Europe and secret Swiss bank accounts.

Hamilton said the district attorney's office and banking commission likely will work together in the continuing investigation of the company.

He said the banking commission is concerned with the solvency of the trust company. He said the commission wants to track down any remaining assets and eventually return them to investors.

The DA's office is investigating possible criminal charges in connection with the operation. Hamilton said. He said a grand jury will have its work cut out in sorting out the complicated case.

Kansas authorities also have reportedly stepped in to halt the company's operation in that state.

Legislators return from long Easter holiday

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators today started a short work week on a long agenda that includes health care for the poor, water planning, the state budget, liquor regulation, and perhaps public education.

U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, was scheduled to speak at noon to a joint legislative session.

Legislators, presumably rested after a five-day Easter holiday, returned for the 92nd day of the 140-day session.

If it follows its practice of quitting on Thursday, it will be only a three-day week. Later in the session, however, lawmakers will work on Fridays and the weekend.

The House Committee on Public Health planned to take testimony today on a package of public health reforms for the poor that could, according to Rep. Jesse Oliver, save Texas $250 million a year.

Oliver, D-Dallas, said a program sponsored by him and Rep. Frank Madla, D-San Antonio, "will save up to 25 percent of the cost of providing health care to the poorest people in our society, but at the same time we can organize and deliver services to more people at a lower cost."

Oliver said he also would offer a bill to outlaw "patient dumping" by hospitals. Oliver said Texans "have nothing but contempt" for those who refuse emergency care to the poor, "and we're going to put a swift and permanent end to this practice."

Statewide water proposals trickling through a House-Senate conference committee were on the committee agenda again today.

The House Appropriations Committee is expected to finish its version of the 1986-87 budget Wednesday, but it may take the Senate Finance Committee another two weeks to complete its spending proposal. A conference committee most likely will write a compromise.

Also on Wednesday, the House Liquor Regulations

Committee will consider proposals to ban drinking while driving and to raise the state drinking age from 19 to 21. The higher drinking age, in response to federal action to withhold $107 million in Texas highway funds, is considered almost a sure bet to pass.

"We really don't have a choice," said Rep. Gary Thompson, D-Abilene.

The Senate Nominations Committee on Wednesday will question Volly Bastine, Houston, the only member of the new 15-member State Board of Education who has not been confirmed.

A House-approved bill that would end the State Securities Board's "merit review" of securities is on the Senate Economic Development Committee calendar for Wednesday. Brad Wiewel, president of the Texas Consumers Association, said Monday the law change is sought by "greedy securities dealers that we believe have in mind making money, whether it's a fast buck or a slow buck."

House sponsor Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, responded, "It makes no sense to have a securities board say a blessing over a stock."

Dallas Rep. David Cain, chairman of the House Transportation Committee, said a House bill requiring the use of seat belts should be ready for floor debate soon. The Senate already has approved a bill that would require people in the front seat of a car or pickup truck to wear seat belts.

A Senate bill that would shift more money to the teacher career ladder and would free the Board of Education to change the no-pass, no-play rule may be brought before the full Senate this week.

The bill, which cleared committee last week, also would punish administrators who burden teachers with unnecessary paperwork and would allow school districts to suspend or expel students, after reasonable alternatives are tried.

AT&T increases rate hike

AUSTIN (AP) — AT&T Communications' $123.4 million rate hike request has grown to $139 million. The revised package omits a previously offered cut of 3.2 percent in the cost of basic long distance service.

Public Utility Counsel Jim Boyle says the new request filed Monday might include the bane of all telephone users — wrong numbers.

"It's just hard to know what their situation is, given the game of numbers du jour which they tend to put forward," he said of AT&T's latest request.

The company filed its $123.4 million rate hike request in January. That package sought large increases in services used mostly by businesses. It also included a 3.2 percent cut in the tolls for basic, intrastate long distance calls.

The Public Utility Commission postponed the case until AT&T could come up with a full year's data to support the request. The updated information was filed Monday. The 3.2 percent cut was left out.

"The increased financial losses have made it impossible for AT&T to achieve its intended intrastate long distance rate reduction with this filing," said Tom Jones, AT&T vice president for external affairs in Texas.

Included in the revised request are higher charges for short-haul calls, intrastate long distance directory assistance, some operator-assisted calls and WATS services.

AT&T claims Texas losses of more than $300,000 a day, most of it because of "access" payments to Southwestern Bell and other local telephone companies. The long distance companies pay for use of the local phone network.

"We will continue to work with the commission to lower the cost of access charges in Texas and affect a future intrastate long distance rate reduction," said Jones.

Company spokesman Phil Bode said the updated data — which includes the 12-month information required by the commission — shows "significantly more losses than we anticipated."

Law hampering state programs

AUSTIN (AP) — A new effort to increase collection of federal taxes may hamper operations of four popular Texas programs, according to Comptroller Bob Bullock.

A special report from the comptroller's department says the restrictions will limit the issuance and favorable tax treatment of so-called "private purpose bonds," including industrial development bonds.

The comptroller also noted that the new restrictions will critically affect three popular Texas projects — the Texas Veterans Land Program, the Veterans Housing Assistance Program, and the Student Loan Program.

Under the new federal restrictions, Texas will be limited to $2.3 billion in selected industrial development bonds and other private purpose bonds in 1985 and 1986. After 1986, the limit will be about $1.5 billion. Industrial Development Bonds were issued for 1,458 projects in Texas between 1979 and 1984, the report said.

The Texas Economic Development Commission said those projects generated more than 200,000 jobs and $1.2 billion in federal, state and local taxes.

IDBs have financed manufacturing plants in Marshall, Arlington and El Paso; office buildings in Waco, Austin, and Amarillo; retail businesses in Kerrville, Falfurrias, Jacksonville and Pampa; and hotels in Laredo, San Antonio.

Twelve bank buildings were approved. An $85 million bond issue was approved for an airport training facility in Grapevine.

"In Texas, the bonds typically are sponsored by an industrial development corporation created by a city, county or other governmental body," the comptroller said.

In return for providing a public benefit, the IDBs were given tax-exempt status similar to traditional municipal bonds.

Critics pointed out that IDBs and other private purpose bonds drive up interest rates for all municipal bonds, increasing borrowing costs for state and local governments, the comptroller said.

The comptroller said the Legislature, in legalizing the use of IDBs, intended them to benefit rural and high unemployment areas.

"But a University of Texas study shows higher-population areas in Texas received the most direct employment from IDB issues. Low population areas have received proportionately lower direct employment benefits," the report said.

The new law removes the tax-exempt status of veterans land bonds, effectively ending the program after 1987, the comptroller's report said.

The law also severely restricts the new Veterans Housing Assistance Program, so that by 2007 no veterans will be qualified, the report said.

The new law treats Texas College Students Loan Bonds as IDBs, putting them under the $2.3 billion cap. "The Student Loan Program will have to line up for approval along with all the local industrial development corporations," the report said.

TEXAS GOVERNOR ARRIVES—Texas Governor Mark White paid a visit to a Honduran military installation shortly after he arrived in the Honduran capitol of Tegucigalpa Monday.

White set to inspect camps near the Nicaraguan border

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Gov. Mark White today was scheduled to tour military base camps where Texas National Guard troops are conducting war maneuvers with other American and Honduran soldiers three miles from the Nicaraguan border.

White planned to deliver 400 pounds of barbecued beef to Texas troops taking part in Big Pine III exercises.

The governor also was to carry 500 pounds of tortillas, 100 pounds of pinto beans, barbecue sauce and an undetermined number of jalapeno peppers to the troops.

The Texas troops arrived in Honduras a week ago to participate in war maneuvers that White said would "demonstrate we are an effective fighting force should we be called to the defense of our nation."

White arrived in the Honduran capitol Monday aboard an Air Force C-130 Hercules loaded with reporters to observe the Texas troops in action.

He was expected to return to the Honduran capital this afternoon before flying to Panama where he was to visit the U.S. military command headquarters. He was scheduled to return to Texas late Wednesday.

On his arrival in the Honduran capitol, White was greeted by U.S. ambassador to Honduras John Negroponte and a mob of reporters. He was immediately whisked to a military base near Tegucigalpa, where he was briefed on the war games by U.S. military officials.

White emerged from the briefing, saying he was satisfied that all possible precautions were being taken to ensure the safety of the Texas troops.

"I'm impressed that they not only did what they told us, they've gone further than that," he said.

White was invited to Central America by the Department of Defense after giving his permission for the Texas guardsmen to participate in the war games.

The guard's involvement has been highly publicized because of the proximity of their base camp, which they call "the Alamo," to the Nicaraguan border and the possibility of a confrontation with Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista troops.

Other than a small public affairs contingent from Connecticut, Texas is the only state with guard troops in Big Pine III. The Texas troops will be playing the role of the aggressor in the games, staging a mock attack on Honduras from near Nicaragua.

The governor said his three-day trip was designed to show support for the troops and "let them know the seriousness of the mission."

"I don't think anyone would confuse this with a pleasure trip," the governor said.

White had kind words for President Reagan's Central American policies upon his arrival in Central America.

"I think the president is entitled to the support of the nation on issues relating to foreign affairs," said White, a Democrat who has often been critical of the Republican administration in the past.

White said he backed President Reagan's attempt to maintain a strong democracy in countries that have a democratic heritage.

The governor on Monday repeatedly defended his controversial decision to let the guard take part in the maneuvers.

Refusing, he said, might be "politically cute to do — but I don't think it would be right."

Unheralded competitors

Ahhh, the sweet smell of competition is in the air as high school students from throughout the state vie for that elusive state championship.

Oh, I'm not talking about that piddly gridiron stuff. I'm talking about speech contests, music festivals and literary-academic meets: something kids can really sink their brains into.

It's unfortunate that schools and communities pack their school spirit away when the last basket is shot at the final ball game. At Deer Creek, our cheerleaders made sure that every football and almost every basketball game was preceded by a pep rally. It was pretty important stuff. In 1972, for example, two students were suspended from school because they skipped out on a pep rally.

Before each game, the cheerleaders festooned the ball players' lockers with crepe paper, posted spirit signs in their front yards and made cookies for the hungry athletes.

But I never got my locker festooned. When I qualified for the state speech contest in 1976, nobody wrote "Take state" on my car window or put signs in my front lawn. And the cheerleaders never made us any cookies or donuts, not even the cheerleaders going to the speech contests got anything.

When we went to speech contests, we had to wake up at 5 a.m., squeeze into speech teacher Mrs. Ferguson's car, listen to speech students from other schools harangue about how good they were, then make sure we didn't leave anybody at the contest when we returned home. And when we showed our trophies (we got plenty in 1975-77) to our classmates the next Monday, all they could think to say was "why weren't y'all at the game Friday?"

Our vocal music program fared no better. The Deer Creek High School Choir took the State Sweepstakes Award (in our class) in 1975. But did the school give us a pep rally? Did the local citizenry give us a victory party? No. All we got was a big trophy to put somewhere behind all the basketball trophies and all I got was a stomach ache after eating a taco at the Oklahoma State University student union.

We kids in S and M — speech and music — did have our heroes, though. Nita Gately of Tipton High School could get more out of a poem than even the poets imagined. She'd always pick one with lots of imagery and blood and the way she'd curl her hand and grit her teeth made everyone else melt with envy. In one-act plays, few people could touch Lisa Woolfe of Cushing. And, for more than 25 years, anyone who tooted a horn at Mooreland High School was assured a trip to the state band contest.

That's why I'm so thrilled to hear about the success high schoolers advancing in speech, music, debate and academics. The Texas speech contest standards seem tougher than those in Oklahoma. In our speech contests, the student won on how well she delivered the reading. Here, there is more emphasis — maybe too much emphasis — on how much information and trivia the student knows about the piece and its author.

The students who make it to state in speech and music may not get their names mentioned on the "Welcome to our town" signs the way the champion football players do. But only a mindless boor would argue that they don't deserve just as much credit for their efforts as the jocks do.

Area literary and speech contests are Saturday. Nobody else may care to say this but: go get 'em, Tigers.

And Harvesters. And Bucks-Does. And Pirates. And Warriors.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Shultz wins fight over U.N. envoy

The palace intrigue that prompted Jeane Kirkpatrick to resign her post as U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations nearly prevented Lt. Gen. Vernon A. Walters from taking her place.

It is no secret that Mrs. Kirkpatrick's departure was hastened because Secretary of State George Shultz and National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane resented her outspoken views on foreign policy. They criticized her for not being a "team player," and their aides leaked to the press that she was a disruptive presence during strategy sessions.

Now, the foreign policy "pragmatists" have consolidated their position by convincing the president that ambassador-designate Walters be denied membership in the National Security Council.

Never mind that Reagan assured Gen. Walters that he would have cabinet rank and access to NSC meetings as did Ambassador Kirkpatrick. Or that the experienced diplomatic trouble shooter is eminently qualified to enter into foreign policy deliberations. It appears that his duties and most of all his influence will be diminished now that Secretary Shultz has prevailed.

Administration officials say that, although Gen. Walters will be accorded full cabinet status, he will not be given a seat on the security council, where the most significant foreign policy issues are discussed and often decided.

Gen. Walters, however, decided to accept the job even though he will not be an NSC member. His decision should please President Reagan, who was hard-pressed to find a suitable replacement for Ambassador Kirkpatrick.

By responding to pressure from the State Department, however, President Reagan has limited the services of a man whose special missions in behalf of five administrations during the last 40 years have taken him to the Middle East, Africa, Asia, South and Central America. He may find that is a high price to pay in order to placate Secretary Shultz.

Behind the scare in Ohio

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The depositor panic about the financial integrity of Ohio's state-insured savings and loan associations has subsided, but the political repercussions are just beginning to be felt.

The two men in the middle of a potentially explosive political situation are both Democrats — Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste, who is expected to seek re-election next year, and Cincinnati businessman Marvin L. Warner, a long-time major financial backer of Democratic office-seekers.

Warner owns virtually all of the outstanding stock of the Home State Savings Bank of Cincinnati, whose sudden closure last month caused a financial crisis among the other 70 Ohio thrift institutions insured by a state agency.

Warner also was a major investor in ESM Government Securities, Inc., a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., firm whose arcane specialty was the trading of short-term, high-risk financial instruments known as repurchase agreements.

Home State invested almost half of its assets through ESM. On March 4, ESM was closed under a court order sought by the Securities and Exchange Commission, which has accused the firm of fraudulent practices.

Five days later, Home State was forced to close amid reports that it had lost as much as $150 million on its investment with ESM. That action panicked depositors at the other 70 state-insured thrift institutions.

Warner was a major financial backer of Celeste's 1982 gubernatorial campaign, personally contributing $36,000, co-signing a loan for $75,000 and hosting a party that raised about $200,000.

Celeste is hardly the only political beneficiary of Warner's largesse. The flamboyant real estate developer and horse breeder has been a major donor to Sens. Howard M. Metzbaum and John H. Glenn Jr., both Ohio Democrats, and to current and former Senate Democrats from Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Montana, Alabama, Colorado and other states.

In addition, he has made substantial donations to the presidential campaigns of Democrats Glenn, Jimmy Carter, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado and others. In 1977, Carter named Warner ambassador to Switzerland, an appointment criticized at the time as a political payoff.

Until recently, Warner served as chairman of the Ohio Building Authority, which presides over millions of dollars worth of state construction every year.

He was appointed by Celeste. But he resigned, reportedly under pressure from the governor, at the same time Celeste was ordering the temporary closure of all state-insured thrifts to halt a depositor run on their assets.

However, the two men remain inextricably tied in the minds of many politicians in Ohio and here in Washington.

Two years ago, Ohio officials warned Home State that it was too heavily involved with ESM. But the state regulators took no action when the bank failed to follow up on a commitment to phase out its ties with ESM. Some Republicans suspect that the lenient treatment was attributable to Warner's political influence.

When Home State was forced to lock its doors, $600 million to $700 million of its $1.4 billion worth of assets was tied up in repurchase agreements made through ESM — although Warner reportedly withdrew $37 million of his personal funds from ESM before its collapse.

Fearful that the state's official investigation of the financial debacle might be perceived as a whitewash, Ohio Democrats gladly accepted the selection of a Republican (a widely respected Cincinnati lawyer) to lead the probe.

Celeste handled himself deftly during the first month of the crisis, but the official investigation — as well as possible unofficial disclosures — could adversely affect his promising political career.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, April 9, the 99th day of 1985. There are 266 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On April 9, 1865, the Civil War was at a virtual end as Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee surrendered his army to Union Gen. Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Courthouse in Virginia.

On this date:
Ten years ago: North Vietnamese forces continued their assault on the key South Vietnamese provincial capital of Xuan Loc, 36 miles northeast of Saigon.

Five years ago: Iranian militants holding the American hostages repeated their threat to kill their captives should the United States take any military action against Iran.

Time to count Rocky out

Horrible news has just reached my desk. It came in the form of a photograph I saw in the paper.

There were three men in the photograph and they were getting off an airplane in a snowstorm. Underneath the photograph were these words:

"JACKSON HOLE, WYO.—Actors Sylvester Stallone (top), Tony Burton (center), and Burt Young get off a plane Sunday during filming of 'Rocky IV' at Jackson Hole airport. The plot this time around calls for Rocky Balboa, played by Stallone, to fight a bout in Siberia, and Jackson Hole was chosen as a good site for winter scenes."

Say it ain't so. Say Sylvester Stallone doesn't have the guts to do a fourth "Rocky."

The first "Rocky" was a good movie. I saw it, and I enjoyed it.

I was even OK with "Rocky II." Frankly, I wanted to see if Rocky's face had healed from the pounding it took in the original movie.

Then there was "Rocky III." I couldn't believe it. How many movies can you make with basically the same plot, which is Rocky always wins in the end and you get to see a lot of blood?

I didn't go to see "Rocky III" because I didn't want to be counted in the number of suckers who did.

I did, however, convince myself that Rocky - the third - time - around would be the last of its kind because a Rocky No. 4 was out of the question. That shows you how much I know about how big of fools Hollywood considers the movie - going public to be.

Rocky is going to fight in Siberia this time? What's he going to fight, a polar bear?

No, what he probably will fight in the movie's climatic bout is a big Russian guy, a godless Commie with a hammer and sickle tattooed on his forehead.

We're talking great box office here. The American hero goes against Big Red, who will throw a few low blows to show his disdain for fairness and good sportsmanship.

After beating each other to within an inch of their lives, Rocky, of course, will emerge victorious, Americans will feel the Red Menace has been halted, and President Reagan will invite Sylvester Stallone to the White House to see if he would like to go to Geneva and punch out a few real Russians at the arms talks.

I plead with all in the range of this column to join with me in putting an end to this Rocky nonsense.

It's too late to stop "Rocky IV," but think about "Rocky V" and who knows how many more "Rockys" as long as there is one person left to buy a movie ticket.

Think about your grandchildren. You want them to have to endure "Rockys" themselves? You want them to have to sit through movies where a punch - drunk 65 - year - old Rocky beats up some other old geezer for the National Nursing Home title?

Of course not. So when "Rocky IV" comes to a theater near you, don't dare to see it. Pick a fight with your wife, instead. Just don't do anything to encourage one more of these inane movies.

Only you, my fellow Americans, can count out Rocky for good.

"DAD — I didn't know you were an Eddie Murphy fan, too!"

The federal budget is strictly political

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

In recent hearings on the administration's budget, Senator Daniel Moynihan (D., N.Y.) made a statement which, in my opinion, came as close to pure nonsense as anything I've heard in years. He said that he thought that the Democrats should support the President's budget provided that the White House wasn't using the deficit merely as an excuse to cut programs they would want to cut anyway.

Who does the good Senator think he's kidding? He's been in politics long enough to know the real nature and purpose of the federal budget. He knows that unlike most state budgets (49 out of 50) which are required by law or constitution to be balanced and, therefore, must concentrate on the funding of routine services, the federal budget has for many decades been less an economic document than it has been a political document. Indeed his own career in the Kennedy - Johnson and Nixon administrations, as well as his Senate sojourn, has demonstrated that he takes a back seat to no one in using the federal budget as an instrument of politics.

In his analysis of the forces which put our present welfare state in place (Losing Ground, New York: Basic Books, Inc., 1984) Charles Murray makes it clear that the rationale for the new social programs which emerged in the 1960's was political in the most fundamental sense: "The government should take a more active role in helping people get on their feet."

No one had a greater role to play in developing these programs than did Daniel Patrick Moynihan. During the Kennedy years he served on the Labor Department task force which, as much as any other group, fashioned the architectural framework upon which the Lyndon Johnson

"Great Society" was hung. Moreover the entire edifice was adamantly defended on the grounds that the ascendancy of Keynesian budget management was certain to generate a "fiscal dividend" which would fund the increased spending required by these programs. Thus a political agenda was defended on budget grounds.

Senator Moynihan is one of the more principled men in politics. My point is not to question his personal integrity but, rather, to observe that the federal budget - whether its direction is toward more or less spending - has for a long time been a political instrument.

Since I'm persuaded that he understands this, I conclude that his real trouble is that he doesn't like the fact that the current dynamics of budgetary politics are pointing the federal establishment down a track which doesn't fit his political interests and instincts. He's not alone: members of Congress from farm states and our fifty state governors are also unhappy about the fact that Reagan's request for $50 billion in spending cuts includes programs upon which they depend for their own political stability if not political survival. Naturally they are all fighting spending cuts while, not surprisingly, joining the chorus for a balanced federal budget. That is, after all, the essence of professional political posturing.

The farm issue is a laboratory case. The administration has introduced legislation to phase out government price supports for farming over the next five years. The end result of this, according to Agriculture Secretary John Block, would be to make farmers more competitive in world markets by lowering farm prices while at the same time reducing those huge farm expenditures which have contributed to deficits and higher interest rates. Yet in spite of overwhelming evidence that the hundreds of billions of dollars spent to guarantee farm income have not accomplished their purpose, Congress has effectively said that the administration's plan is "dead on arrival." What Congress - both Democrats and Republicans alike - want is more money to finance those farmers whose debt to asset ratio is so large that they are unable to acquire loans to finance spring planting. Specifically they want $1.85 billion more than the $650 million already authorized.

On balance it does not appear that the nation faces anything approaching a collapse of its agricultural sector if the additional loan guarantees (which would become outright expenditures when, as surely will happen, some farmers go bankrupt) are not granted. In fact, as the Federal Farm Credit Banks Funding Corporation (a government institution), reports, the current farm "crisis" is "concentrated in about 1 farmer out of 15 who got overly aggressive in buying land in the late 1970's." The rest - 14 out of 15 - are "magnificently solvent."

But even if there is no danger of any economic collapse which would threaten the entire nation there is certain guarantee of political collapse for those farm state Senators and Representatives who fail to win welfare income - transfers, those troubled businessmen we call farmers want.

All spending is political. All spending cuts are political. That's the way a federal budget which does not have to be constitutionally balanced works. Welcome to the real world Mr. Moynihan.

HEADED NORTH—Christians fleeing from fighting in the southern port city of Sidon join other travelers Monday for a ferry boat ride to Beirut. The boat service is run five days a week by Christian "Lebanese Forces" militia from the town of Jiye, which is just north of Sidon.

Israeli jets attack base in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli air force jets bombed what the military command said was a base for Marxist Palestinian guerrillas eight miles southeast of Beirut today, in Israel's closest air strike to the Lebanese capital since its 1982 invasion.

Aviv, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the target of today's raid was a two-story building used as headquarters for the Popular Struggle Front, a small Marxist faction opposed to Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat.

Socialist Party of Walid Jumblatt said in a statement broadcast by its "Voice of the Mountain" radio that the Israeli planes had attacked a Druse militia center.

It said four militiamen were wounded in the attack near the hilltop town of Shemlan, and four others were missing under rubble.

Heroin addict says he mapped out burglaries, fencing operation

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A three-time felon who decided to talk to police is unraveling a hidden criminal world involving as many as 1,000 burglaries, a black market fencing ring, and a possible money-laundering operation involving millions of dollars.

The unidentified buglary suspect told police he would cruise through posh neighborhoods, collecting addresses of homes likely to hold a burglar's booty.

Sometimes he called the home he'd targeted to make sure no one was in. Sometimes he'd simply show up and knock on the door.

For 18 months, police said this 41-year-old hard-scrabble heroin addict and big-time burglar roved

Tarrant County undetected. But after his arrest with a female companion three weeks ago, he has shed light on numerous unsolved cases, police said.

Police Lt. John Yarborough, who is heading an investigation that has grown to include federal agents and officers in almost every city in Tarrant County, said police won't release the man's name because they fear he will be killed.

Yarborough said the man, who is being held in a Fort Worth jail, is continuing to lead police to businesses that acted as fences for stolen property.

"I think he just wanted to get everything out. He just wanted to tell it all, clear the record and get it over with," he said of the man's story about breaking into as many as 1,000 homes.

Yarborough said three other people, whose names have not been released, have been arrested and other arrests are expected.

"It's one of the biggest turn-arounds I've ever heard of," said Assistant District Attorney Jim Blankenship, who is assisting police in the investigation. "It's got the potential of cracking a lot of fencing operations."

So far, Yarborough said, police have used the self-proclaimed burglar's information to set up two undercover stings of business fencing stolen goods and conduct six searches.

Administration cooling initial hot reaction to Soviet missile freeze

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — After trading hot charges with the Soviet Union on its offer to freeze missile deployments in Europe, the Reagan administration is cooling its rhetoric and emphasizing that the two superpowers are working together on mutual problems.

"The escalation stops here," said White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes on Monday. "You can't whip this horse anymore."

The low-key approach was in stark contrast to a statement a day earlier by Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser. In unusually blunt language, he called the Soviet offer disappointing and said it was "a guise, a snare, a delusion" and added, "We had hoped for better."

McFarlane's tough words came after he met for three hours with President Reagan, vacationing at his mountaintop ranch. Television camera crews and correspondents were summoned to his hotel room and given an opportunity to question him in separate interviews.

The Reagan administration immediately rejected the proposal, saying it merely would lock into place a substantial Soviet edge in warheads.

In response, the Kremlin issued a statement through the news agency Tass, accusing Washington of following a "an irresponsible and dangerous policy" and saying the U.S. claim of Soviet missile superiority was "a gross lie."

Speakes refused to fire another volley.

"Got nothing to add to it," he said.

The presidential spokesman said Soviet statements, as well as their actions at the Geneva arms control talks, will be weighed as the United States looks toward a possible summit with Gorbachev.

"But we would be hopeful that it would not change the prospects for a summit, nor the prospects for arms reduction, nor the prospects for improved U.S.-Soviet relations," Speakes said.

Asked if negotiations for a summit were under way, he said, "No, not in a sense. There are continuing diplomatic discussions at various levels, but not on a summit per se. They're on U.S.-Soviet differences, U.S.-Soviet problems."

"I think there has been an increase in the diplomatic activity, or at least in the diplomatic conversations" between the two sides in Washington over the last 10 days to two weeks, Speakes said.

Discussing summit prospects in an interview with the Cable News Network, McFarlane said, "It seems to me less likely that he (Gorbachev) would find it feasible for an early meeting."

"We are open," McFarlane added. "The president's position is that he is ready at any time... he is open to a meeting occurring at the convenience of the other side."

Swedish doctors use artificial heart

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Doctors at Stockholm's Karolinska Hospital have carried out the first artificial heart implant operation in Europe, a hospital spokeswoman said today.

"The patient, a Swedish man in his 50s, received a metal and plastic Jarvik-7 artificial heart two days ago," Mrs. Tanja Blanck, a press officer at the hospital, told The Associated Press.

"He is awake and his condition is satisfactory," she said. "He had had several heart attacks. There was no other alternative."

Mrs. Blanck said the surgical team was led by Norwegian professor Bjarne K. Semb, head of the hospital's thoracic surgery department.

The first permanent recipient of an artificial heart was Barney Clark.

Lovett Library to link with area consortium

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

The card catalog trays at the Lovett Memorial Library may become a thing of the past with the implementation of a new computer system now underway.

Dan Snider, head librarian, said the library has installed a computer link-up system through the Harrington Library Consortium which will handle cataloging and circulation needs.

The system also will improve the access to materials in other libraries for the patrons, he said.

Lovett has received three computer terminals through a state grant arranged by the consortium. Staff members have been busy for the past several months with installation, training and initial cataloging efforts, Snider said.

But, as so often happens with new systems, there have been some problems encountered in getting the system operative.

Part of this has been due to the system being designed to interconnect a number of Panhandle area libraries and then to coordinate the transmission lines. There were problems in getting telephone lines established properly for the connections, he noted, that now has been taken care of.

Other problems have included developing the proper software programs and eliminating equipment problems.

Those setbacks were expected, though.

"It's going to take awhile, but we knew that," Snider said.

The major effort being undertaken now is to catalog all the volumes currently in the library into the computer system, Snider said. So far only about 4,000 of the 60,000 to 65,000 books in the Lovett Library have been cataloged on the computer system.

It will probably take a year to get everything inventoried, cataloged and readied for general public use, he said.

To more quickly reach that goal, the library is asking for volunteers willing to help with the inventory and catalog efforts.

The system joins the libraries at West Texas State University, Amarillo College, Amarillo, Pampa, Hereford, Borger, Frank Phillips College, Panhandle, Dumas and McLean. Others will be added later.

The Amarillo public libraries serve as the main resource center for the Harrington Library Consortium.

To add Pampa's catalog into the system will require a lot of legwork, Snider said.

The books must be taken down from the shelves. Then the books are checked against the computer file to see if they are already in the system's catalog.

If a book isn't already listed in the file, then the information must be copied and sent to Amarillo, which handles the original file cataloging data.

All that takes time, Snider said, mainly because of the number of volumes involved.

Volunteers will greatly aid the cataloging efforts, he said, since the staff members are having to work with the computer now amid their regular duties.

It only takes about an hour for the volunteers to get the training they need, Snider said.

Snider said volunteers can give as much time as they have available, but at least a couple of hours at a time are needed once or twice a week. He said it's better to have volunteers who can work fairly regularly so they can stay familiar with the operations.

"You have to know what you're doing" on inventory input matters, he said, though it's not too difficult once you learn the procedure.

Persons wanting to volunteer their services should contact Snider at the library. The times of service have to be arranged with periods of computer use.

The initial cataloging will involve books. Later, periodicals and other materials will be included.

After the cataloging is completed, Pampa library patrons will have access to "millions of records," Snider said, aiding those doing research or wanting books and collections not available locally.

The computer system also will aid the use of the Interlibrary Loan system, Snider said. He's already seen improvement in that area, with the Lovett Library already receiving several requests for materials from other parts of the state for materials available only here.

But the computers will allow more ready access to materials in other libraries. Requests for materials will be able to be handled through the computer system directly to other libraries. Presently, interlibrary requests are sent first to the Amarillo library, which then contacts the other libraries.

With the computer, requests can be made directly to the library having the needed materials instead of going through Amarillo, Snider said. This will cut down on the time required to get the materials sent to Pampa.

The system currently involves only the Panhandle area libraries involved in the consortium. But later plans call for connecting the consortium with other similar systems throughout the state, greatly expanding the access to materials.

The computer also offers more direct benefits. The cataloging will place a book under all the subject headings attached to the book by the Library of Congress.

Because of the limited space in

NEW LIBRARY COMPUTER — Dan Snider, head librarian for Lovett Library, catalogues one of the Pampa library's book into the new computer system recently acquired by the library. the current card catalog trays here, a book generally is only listed under one or two of the subjects designated by the Library of Congress, even though it may have four or five subjects under which it could be classified.

The computer cataloging will place the books under all the designated subject areas, Snider said, enhancing research efforts.

Once the system is readied, patrons will be able to use a computer terminal to access the cataloging information. The terminal will note whether the book is available at Lovett or at another of the consortium's libraries.

Eventually the terminals will probably replace the current card catalog files, Snider said. "We'll have to see how the public takes to the computer," he said.

As more money becomes available, the library hopes to be able to purchase three more terminals. The terminals will be used in three main areas. The staff will continue to place new materials into the computer catalog file and handle interlibrary requests. Patrons will use terminals for public access to the catalogs. And the staff also will use the computer to handle circulation, including a list of card-holders and the regular check-out and check-in of materials.

"The system is really fantastic," Snider said.

Wall decorating: age-old practice remains

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The more things change, the more they remain the same is an old saying that illustrates many aspects of home decoration. Consider, for example, the decoration of walls.

The remarkable prehistoric cave drawings at Lascaux in southeastern France prove that the urge to embellish walls is as old as humankind itself. Archaeologists theorize that only the most talented individuals had authority to draw the animals and natural features of the world that intrigued these ancient people.

Today, we, too, have our talented muralists. However, the graffiti on city walls and subway trains are examples of the commonality of the desire to embellish a wall.

If such an urge is part of your psyche, a socially acceptable way of gratifying it is to decorate the walls of your own home. Kitchen, bathrooms, children's rooms, recreation areas, laundry rooms and hallways lend themselves nicely to such a project.

Furthermore, with the use of standard semi-gloss latex paints for interiors, an individual should be able to produce an acceptable decoration inexpensively.

That opinion comes from Karen Greenbaum, half of a partnership known as Whimsical Walls Ltd. She and her partner, Iris Vanderputten, of Scarborough, N.Y., paint murals for a living on other people's walls. But Ms. Greenbaum shared some of their methodology for do-it-yourselfers.

First, she said, paint your wall with semi-gloss latex interior house paint in white or an extremely pale tone. That way you know you are starting out with a good sealed washable wall.

If you can draw freehand, then use this ability to create an appropriate scene or design. Use a grease pencil or crayon to place the design directly on the wall. The grease pencil will outline the pattern and also serve as a border to contain the paint. Once the wall is painted and dry you can erase the pencil lines.

Select as many colors as you like, suggests Ms. Greenbaum. She says successful wall murals can be as simple as a single motif in one color or elaborate all-over creations that employ many different colors.

If you are not adept at drawing, you can select one or more designs from a variety of sources and cut them out and trace them on the wall. Wallpapers, gift-wrapping paper and pictures from magazines and books on art and decorating are all sources for designs.

Once the wall is painted and dry, no further treatment is necessary if you have used washable latex paints. You should be able to wipe up spills and dirt with a sponge and soap. Since you can paint over the latex wall paint quite easily, when you get tired of the design it will be a relatively simple matter to remove it by repainting the wall, she said.

Another method is to use artists' acrylic paints and stencils sold at craft supply and home decorating outlets, according to Mary Gilliatt, a decorating authority in New York. Ready-made stencils can be taped directly to the wall with masking tape.

She suggests applying the color with sponges cut into small pieces. Use one sponge for each color.

After taping the stencil to the wall, you dip a piece of sponge into one color, removing the excess by dabbing the sponge on a plate. Then, apply the paint on the wall through the stencil opening.

Do one color at a time, she suggests. Gear the size of sponge you use to the size of opening.

When you've filled in all the cut-out areas, carefully lift the pattern from the wall, being sure to bring it straight out so the paint does not run.

You can use a small artist's brush to add details or to touch up small errors.

If the idea of decorating your wall with a handpainted mural appeals, but you don't want to do it yourself, you can hire an artist to do it for you.

Save a mint on the bath

By Joanne Schreiber

Does your bathroom need a face lift? Don't call a plumber. Turn to your sewing machine and redecorate by using coordinating fabrics and wall-coverings.

An example is that of an old-fashioned bathroom, complete with ball-and-claw foot tub, brought up to date with contemporary designs. The main portion of the wall is re-covered with a vinyl wall covering in a nostalgic floral design; the ceiling and lower wall are covered in a coordinating pin-dot design. Fabric for the sink skirt and tieback draperies for the tub is the same pin-dot, but in the reverse colorway, with solid-tone ruffles. The fabrics used were from the Cameo Collection by Fashion. Using fabrics from one design collection usually makes it easier to coordinate color and pattern without spending hours shopping to match fabrics.

The old tub, set into an alcove, is framed in tieback draperies and these are lined with separate vinyl shower curtains. The draperies are hung on a sturdy wooden dowel. For an alcove measuring 6- by 7-feet, allow double fullness of 45-inch fabric, or about 12 yards, which will include hems and headings. Allow another three yards for the shirred sink skirt.

Join drapery sections to make 90-inch panels. Turn and press a six-inch strip across drapery tops. Press raw edge under. Stitch lower edge in place and stitch again to form a casing. The top edge will form a self-ruffle.

From the solid-color fabric, cut 6-inch strips and join the strips to equal double the distance around the inside and lower edges of the draperies. Fold lengthwise, right sides together. Stitch long edges, trim, turn and press. Using the longest stitch on your sewing machine, gather to the correct length and pin in place. Stitch, using decorative trim set just below the inside fold.

The sink skirt is made with a deeper ruffle, approximately 6 inches deep. Stitch the ruffle in place. Then turn under one-half inch at the top of the skirt and stitch to a strip of four-cord shirring tape. Gather the tape to fit the sink. You may sew self-adhering strips to the back of the tape and glue matching strips to the sink to insure a snug fit.

The sink skirt will handsomely hide a collection of cleaning aids, laundry hampers and unsightly pipes.

Complete your new bath decor with drapery tiebacks attached to cuphooks. Add towels and bathmat in coordinating colors and use leftover fabric to applique monograms or other motifs onto the towels.

In this case, a little charm and stitchin' time goes a long way to update an old-time bath — without major expenditures.

UPDATE AN old-time bath with coordinated fabrics and wall coverings, at a fraction of the cost of installing new fixtures.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I have decided to build a workshop. I would like your opinion on the best place for it to be. Right now, I am torn between the attic, which is unfinished, or the basement, which also is unfinished. Whichever one I do not use will be kept for storage of various kinds.

A. — Nobody can give you a definite opinion without having some idea of what kind of activities will be performed there. Generally, however, a basement with a concrete floor is the better choice. It usually has some overflow of heat from the furnace and, in a hot weather area, is cooler in the summer. If the noise from power tools can be heard upstairs, it is fairly easy to keep the noise downstairs. It will support heavy tables and tools. There is usually plenty of storage space. The one thing that might cause trouble is dampness. Be sure you have a good system of gutters and downspouts so that water does not settle alongside the foundation and eventually find its way into the basement. If there is a danger of condensation or if you have had it at some time in the past, take all the necessary steps to control it, one of them being the covering of cold water pipes which attract moisture. If you expect to be using large sheets of plywood, gypsum board or hardboard, be sure there is a way the sheets can be maneuvered into the basement — and, not so incidentally, out of it. You wouldn't be the first person who built something in a basement workshop and then found he couldn't get it out without taking it apart.

Q. — I bought a second-hand table saw and am just getting used to it. How far above the table should the blade be?

A. — It isn't how far above the table the blade should be; it's how far above the stock it should be while cutting. The answer is — the top of the blade should be one-fourth of an inch above the stock. Please try to get an instruction booklet by the manufacturer of the table saw or, at the very least, a book about table saws in general. It should be done at once, not after some trouble occurs.

Drop-in guests make life on the lakeshore a chore

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We are dreading the summer because we live on a lake in Minnesota, which seems to make us fair game for uninvited summer guests. They plan their summer vacations with our place in mind—not to mention the use of our boats, fishing equipment, gasoline, golf clubs and, most of all, our precious time.

We welcome invited guests, but how can we discourage those who pop in on us uninvited? They come with suitcases and kids, telling us not to fuss—they'll sleep anywhere!

This is a loud cry for help, Abby—not only from us, but from other lake dwellers, too.

We hate to be rude, but we are so tired of uninvited guests we've even thought of selling our summer place. NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: As long as you permit yourself to be imposed upon, you will be, so in the interest of self-defense, you must do the following: When uninvited guests appear at your door with suitcases and kids, tell them without hemming and hawing or apologizing that you can't ask them to stay because you've made other plans. You owe them no further explanations as to what the "other plans" are.

I am enclosing a poem for you and your fellow lake-dwellers. I ran it about five years ago, after which a Wisconsin reader informed me that he had it framed to hang in his beach home. Help yourself!

OUR PLACE AT THE LAKE
June is past, so is July,
August is ended—likewise I.
The pattering feet of summer and sun
Are over, complete, exhausted, done!

I've fed the young as well as the old,
I've cooled the warm, I've warmed the cold.

The wounded and weeping I have consoled,
The tender and touchy I have cajoled.

I have steered the scared, I have scared the bold,

I have bit my tongue till it was controlled.

I've broiled the steak, I have casseroleed,
And the grocer thinks I am made of gold.

(The other bills I have pigeon-holed.)

And frankly, friends, I am ready to fold!

Next time I live I'll make the most

Of being the guest, not the host.

TIRED

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about vivisection, which is defined as "the cutting of or operation on a living animal usually for physiological or pathological investigation; animal experimentation, especially if considered to cause distress to the subject"?

FOR ANIMAL RIGHTS IN N.Y.

DEAR FOR: The late George Bernard Shaw expressed my feelings perfectly when he said: "You do not settle whether an experiment is justified or not by merely showing that it is of some use. The distinction is not between useful and useless experiments, but between barbarous and civilized behavior. Vivisection is a social evil because if it advances human knowledge, it does so at the expense of human character."

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Lefors council changes fiscal year

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

LEFORS - Lefors city council members Monday night voted to change the fiscal year period for city operations in response to auditors' suggestions.

City Secretary Yvonne Pittman said the auditing firm of Dickey, Cory and Co. of Pampa had recommended the city move its fiscal year, now set from April 1 to March 31, to Oct. 1 to Sept. 30.

The auditing firm said the new fiscal year period would accord more with most other governing entities in the area. In addition, it would better assist financial records-keeping methods in relation to such matters as setting property tax rates, collecting taxes and reporting records to state and federal agencies.

Pittman said the city would have a short fiscal period from April 1 to Sept. 30 for auditing purposes before implementing the new fiscal year period next fall.

The council canvassed results from the Saturday election of city officials and accepted the tallies. Mayor R. B. "Ben" White then administered the oath of office to newly elected members Gene Gee, Wendell Akins and J. W. Franks.

Akins and Franks were incumbents, while Gee is a new member of the council. Pittman reported 36 voters cast ballots in the city election.

Council members discussed liability insurance matters. Mayor White said the premium would amount to $5,000 a year. Gee said it would be good to pay the amount, which would only be "a drop in the bucket" if the city were ever involved in a $500,000 lawsuit, for instance.

The mayor agreed the coverage would be good, but he said the city would have trouble in meeting the annual premium payments.

Pittman said City Attorney Mark Buzzard was checking into insurance coverage and requirements to see what policies would really be needed.

In other matters, council members discussed on-going plans for developing future water supplies. The mayor said he hadn't had "too good luck yet" in finding more water rights for the city to acquire.

Councilman Walter Elliott said the city might want to consider the possibility of developing a small reservoir by building a dam on one of the nearby creeks. He said the project would require obtaining a source of funding, either from state or federal agencies, for the long-term project.

Franks said the idea for the dam project should be pursued.

The council discussed making reapplication for a Texas Community Development Program grant for water supply projects.

"We've got to try for it again," Akins said, noting the city might have a better chance for it this year. Last year Lefors' request ranked in the top ten for approved projects, but TCDP funds for the area ran out before the city's project was reached on the list.

Elliott said the city needed to conduct a new survey of residents on employment and economic information. The council members agreed to help conduct the survey, which will be turned in with the TCDP application.

In other matters, the council discussed problems with street drainage occurring during heavy rains. They noted that unpaved streets often get too muddy, while other streets face flooding problems.

Franks said much of the problem results from the rain water coming down into the city from the hills to the north. He said the solution would require a storm sewer system, which he estimated would cost between two and three million dollars. He said the city can't afford such a project now.

Akins said the city should undertake efforts to keep the city park cleaned up, including pruning trees, hauling off broken tree limbs, mowing the weeds and otherwise maintaining the park.

Councilwoman Betty Hannon suggested the city could have a joint workday on the park, with residents invited to help clean up the park. She also said beautification efforts could be made, such as planting flowers.

Council members noted there were also problems with people using the park and then not cleaning up the trash they left behind.

"It would be nice to have a nice park," Akins said, saying the city should take more pride in it.

In other items, the council approved leasing city property to an individual, discussed repairing and replacing of fire hydrants and approved payment of bills.

U.S. trade threats bring concessions

TOKYO (AP) - Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, warning that protectionism by trading partners threatens Japan's economic potential, appealed to consumers today to buy more imports, and told businesses that emphasis on exports alone will not lead to solid trade relations.

Nakasone spoke after an economic committee approved a three-year plan to open Japan's markets to foreign products.

The program indicated Japan had yielded to some U.S. requests for greater access to its huge telecommunications market, including American input on product evaluation and a study on ways to simplify technical standards for computer equipment.

In a nationally televised speech and news conference, emphasizing Japan's concern about the trade issue, Nakasone appealed to Japan's trade partners to avoid "the temptation of protectionism," and pledged quick implementation of the trade program.

To Japanese citizens, he said: "I ask all of you ... to be willingly receptive toward foreign products for the purpose of enriching your livelihood."

"And I hope that people in business circles will fully realize the fact that export alone cannot bring about a balanced expansion of trade nor harmonious external economic relations and will endeavor for the increased import of manufactured goods."

Using charts and a pointer, Nakasone reminded his public that Japan had gained much from the postwar free trade system and that the nation now shares as much as one tenth of the world economy.

Nakasone said technological change was leading the world into "a new age of development," and that protectionism threatens to "deprive us of the possibilities which can bring such new development."

Nakasone's half-hour appearance was the highlight of a day-long official blitz on the trade question. In news briefings and conferences, various officials explained details of Japan's latest effort to maintain peace with its major trading partners, especially the United States.

The centerpiece of the trade program was the report on "external economic measures" compiled by the ministerial conference for economic measures, headed by Economic Planning Agency Director Ipei Kaneko.

It endorsed the recommendation of another advisory committee that a three-year trade program be implemented.

In its own report issued separately today, the advisory group headed by former Foreign Minister Saburo Okita called for "re-examination" of tariffs on agricultural, forestry and fishery products and other import restrictions.

IF YOU THOUGHT RETIREMENT PLANS WERE COMPLICATED AND COST A LOT, THINK AGAIN.

Your retirement plan shouldn't have to be complicated to be effective. Security Federal has several retirement plans that make it easy for you.

As little as one hundred dollars can start your Individual Retirement Account. And you can put in the amount you want, when you want.

Your I.R.A. from Security Federal is insured safe, and it earns money market interest. That interest is tax deferred till you retire. You also get real tax savings each year on what you deposit.

There's really no reason to wait on starting a retirement plan. You can do it right now. And it's as simple as walking into your nearest Security Federal office.

When you think about retirement, think Security.

Soviets re-define words in Oxford English Dictionary

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — When is propaganda simply information and capitalism a system "based on the exploitation of man by man?" Answer: When Soviet editors redefine words in two products by the guardians of the English language — the publishers of the Oxford English Dictionary.

Selected Moscow bookstores are selling special editions of two English dictionaries by the Oxford University Press, smaller cousins to the company's mammoth central work, The Oxford English Dictionary.

The Soviet editions are the two-volume Oxford Learners Dictionary of Current English, and the one-volume Oxford Student's Dictionary of Current English.

In the $6 single volume or the $15.10 two-volume work, Muscovites can learn the Kremlin-sanctioned English definitions of imperialism, Bolshevism, Marxism, Maoism, Socialism and other words.

We've aligned, at Russian request, these words to the usage of that country. I think that we should have said in the dictionary something to the effect that, 'in Marxist doctrine, Capitalism means such and such, or Socialism means such and such,' and not done it quite so badly," said Richardson.

The dictionaries are in English. The only Russian is a title page note saying the dictionary is sanctioned for use in the Soviet Union.

The Soviets' Oxford Student's Dictionary of Current English defines Marxism as "teaching on the main laws of development of nature and society."

In contrast, the Shorter Oxford Dictionary used in England defines Marxism as "pertaining to, or characteristic of... the doctrines of Karl Marx."

Maoism, ideologically suspect here, is defined in the Soviet edition as the "opportunist ideology and policy of the ruling circles in China, named after Mao Tse-tung."

Bolshevism is defined as "the revolutionary Marxist trend of political thought... in Russia at the beginning of the 20th century" and imperialism "the highest and last stage of capitalism."

In the original version, a Bolshevik is a Russian Communist who supported Vladimir I. Lenin after 1903. Imperialism is the rule of an emperor.

Probably only Soviet students would accept a first definition of propaganda as "information, doctrines, opinions and official statements." In the original Oxford Dictionary, propaganda is "(means of, methods for) spreading of information, doctrines, ideas, etc."

Capitalism is defined in the Soviet editions as "the last antagonistic social and economic system in human history, based on the exploitation of man by man, replacing feudalism and preceding communism."

Cambridge proclaimed sanctuary

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A resolution proclaiming Cambridge a sanctuary for illegal aliens from Central America and Haiti does not solve their legal problems or even provide them with a safe haven, city officials said.

The city council approved the resolution 5-4 Monday after hearing a Salvadoran woman, her face hidden behind a bandanna, describe being raped and tortured before she fled to the United States.

Under the resolution, city agencies and employees are told not to cooperate with federal efforts to expel the estimated 5,000 illegal immigrants from El Salvador, Guatemala and Haiti who have fled to this university city of about 98,000 residents.

"What this resolution tries to say," said Councilor Alice Wolf, a sponsor, "is that we want the federal government to see they are not doing the job they are required to do... and we as a city will not help them."

The refugees contend they face persecution and torture if they return to their nations, while the Reagan administration maintains most come to the United States for economic reasons and should not be granted asylum.

The resolution also would extend city services to all Cambridge residents, whether or not they are U.S. citizens. The measure's backers said refugees, worried they will be forced to prove citizenship or legal residency, may not be seeking medical treatment or education for their children.

But City Solicitor Russell B. Higley and other officials said they doubt that the measure will have any effect. He told the council, "The resolution is not legally binding. I see this document as a policy statement of the council."

Higley said immigration authorities conduct investigations independent of the city and have never contacted his office or city police. The resolution requires non-cooperation only "to the extent legally possible."

Mayor Leonard Russell said he did not want to give refugees "false hope" by misleading them into believing they would find a safe haven in Cambridge, home to Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The city council is a non-partisan body with four members considered liberal, four considered conservative and one member, Alfred Vellucci, swinging his vote, as he did Monday when he voted with liberals to pass the measure.

Sanctuary movement activists contend the Reagan administration has deported many Central Americans while extending protection to those fleeing Communist countries. The federal Refugee Act of 1980 extends asylum to those who flee political persecution or who have a "well-founded fear of persecution."

Several members of the sanctuary movement, which involves between 150 and 200 church congregations, have wound up in court for their efforts.

In February, a federal jury in Houston convicted Jack Elder, 41, of five counts of illegally transporting aliens.

In both books the terms have been changed to fit the dictates of Soviet Communism, leaving the English publishers slightly red-faced.

"I think it's rather unfortunate that it's turned out this way," George Richardson, chief executive of the Oxford University Press, told the British Broadcasting Corp. in London Monday. "I think that its political overtones should have been thought more carefully about."

He said he had not been involved in agreeing to the Soviet request to change some entries. Richardson said the Soviet alterations were sanctioned several years ago in a general publishing agreement.

SAVED FOR FUTURE GENERATIONS—Marjorie Kobs looks out over an old family plot dating back to the 1870s. As many as 20 people may be buried in the cemetery near Bennington, Neb., which was included in farmland sold by the Kobs a few years ago. (AP Laserphoto)

Association aims to locate forgotten burial grounds

By KATHY EYRE
Associated Press Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Iowa-Nebraska Cemetery Protection Association aims to save old, abandoned cemeteries from a variety of threats, including the farmer's plow.

Association members say the dead should be respected even if their descendants can't, or don't care to, fight for the preservation

Inhalers recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has announced the recall of two prescription inhalers because the products may not contain enough medication to provide relief to asthma sufferers.

Bill Grigg, an FDA spokesman, said Saturday that Dorsey Laboratories of Lincoln, Neb., was voluntarily recalling Metaprel Metered Dose Inhaler and Metaprel Asthma Mist.

Grigg said the "sub-potency" problem was discovered by Dorsey and did not involve other products bearing the Metaprel label.

Purchasers of the two recalled inhalers should consult their pharmacist about obtaining substitute medication, Grigg said.

of their resting places.

"It's basically sacred ground. We (as a society) don't even consider cemeteries sacred today," said Association President Eric Driggs. "We figure if the family's gone, that's it."

Some families have long forgotten the old burial places, others recently have been forced to sell the family farm with its old family plot, he said.

"One hundred — perhaps only 50 — years from now, will your ancestors be able to find your final resting place intact?" asks a brochure printed by the association.

"Or will time have erased your name? Today there are countless cemeteries and family burial plots whose stones cry for attention, plead that someone care — in a seemingly uncaring, throw-away world."

The Omaha-based association, formed last June, has attracted 20 members interested in preserving the old cemeteries scattered across the prairie of Nebraska and western Iowa.

The nucleus of the group includes members of the Greater Omaha Genealogical Society and the Old Council Bluffs Historical Recovery Development Group.

Besides respect for the dead, association members mentioned another motivation.

"Really, your tombstone is your only claim to fame," Driggs said of many of the pioneers and homesteaders who collectively were the heroes of the region's early days.

Death certificates weren't common until 1904, Driggs said, so genealogists and historians often must rely on tombstones for vital information. Although no one may have cared yesterday about the information on a particular tombstone, someone may care tomorrow and the information will have been lost forever.

However, more and more old tombstones are being destroyed each year, particularly by farmers, according to association members.

"Their motivation isn't just strictly greed. It's just common sense," Margaret Forsythe, association treasurer, said of the farmers. Although many of the abandoned cemetery plots are relatively small, she observed, plowing around them every year could be a bothersome chore.

If it is impractical to preserve a cemetery, farmers should at least record all information available from the cemetery before plowing it under, she said.

Gays take battle to the marketplace

HOUSTON (AP) — Gay rights leaders and some city officials and businessmen are still haggling over an election almost three months ago in which voters defeated two proposed gay rights laws.

But, now the battle is being fought in the marketplace and not at the polls.

The city's Gay Political Caucus recently announced it has compiled an "enemies" list of bankers, doctors and businesses and is urging its members and supporters not to do business with those on the list.

Gay leaders say the people and businesses on the list contributed to a campaign to fight two proposed ordinances that would have barred the city from discriminating against homosexuals in its hiring practices. The proposals were defeated by a 4-to-1 margin in a January referendum.

Among the targets of what gay leaders call the "economic response" are several financial institutions — including First City, Texas Commerce and Allied banks — and many doctors.

Ray Hill, chairman of the caucus, insists the measure is not a boycott because, "a boycott is designed to bring somebody down to their knees."

"But face it," Hill said, "we know that we're not about to bring Allied Bank to its knees."

Thanks To Simmons & Simmons, I Don't Have Time For My Eyes

Don't get me wrong. I think taking care of your eyesight is just as important as the next guy. In fact, that's why I went to Dr. Simmons & Simmons in the first place...to see about extended wear contacts.

I know a lot of stores have them. But I figure for something as important as my eyes, I needed an eye-care specialist to make sure I get the best fit possible. And besides, for one fee, I got a thorough examination, the right type of lens for me, a good fit and check-ups to make sure I'm getting the best wear possible.

Now that I've got my extended wear contacts from Drs. Simmons & Simmons, I've got more interesting things to do with my time than worrying about my eyes...see what I mean?

DENTON CHAPEL—This view shows the Little Chapel in the Woods at Texas Women's University in Denton. It was designed in 1938 by O'Neil Ford and Arch Swank as part of a National Youth Administration program. (AP Laserphoto)

TWU's Little Chapel in the Woods features richly detailed handicraft

By DAVID DILLON
The Dallas Morning News

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The Little Chapel in the Woods at Texas Woman's University in Denton could have been built 200 years ago, or 20 — or the day before yesterday. Its strong, simple shape and wealth of traditional detail recall countless other churches without copying any one.

It is, instead, an abstracted and simplified blend of elements from many churches — a distillation of the "idea" of a church into a straightforward and immediately comprehensible design.

The Little Chapel was designed in 1938 by O'Neil Ford and Arch Swank as part of a National Youth Administration program, which sought useful work for the nation's unemployed. The NYA paid for the labor, while Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Nicholson of Longview (she was a TWU graduate) donated about $15,000 for materials.

The craft work that gives the chapel its special character was done by students from the TWU art department, directed by Antoinette LaSelle and assisted by artisans from around the country. Emil Frei of St. Louis trained students in making stained glass; Lynn Ford, O'Neil's younger brother, taught wood carving and occasionally took a few artful whacks himself. Other artisans provided instruction in masonry, metalworking,

Confidence of consumers waned

NEW YORK (AP) — The crisis among Ohio savings and loan associations last month contributed to a decline in consumers' confidence about the economy, the Conference Board reported.

But the decline in confidence did not seem to hinder plans to buy homes, cars and major appliances, the business research organization said Sunday.

In its March survey of 5,000 households, less than 20 percent of the respondents said they expected business conditions to improve over the next few months.

stenciling and related manual skills.

In their integration of architecture and crafts, Ford and Swank were following the lead of the English Arts and Crafts movement and the work of some of its American disciples, such as the Greene brothers in California. To Ford, the idea that architecture and other visual arts were neatly divisible was heresy; in the Little Chapel, he showed how rich the synthesis could be. This small structure is an epitome of many features of his later work: love of natural materials (particularly brick and stone), sensitivity to site, preference for simple forms and regular proportions and the effort to combine the latest building technology with traditional forms and materials.

Yet the Little Chapel delights and instructs even without a knowledge of Ford's work. It is a compendium of small sensory surprises, of little details lovingly executed. It is regional without being simplistically nostalgic, and personal without being sentimental or self-indulgent.

The exterior walls are native fieldstone from Bridgeport, Texas, with Texas brick around the windows and doors and topped with a pitched copper roof. The side walls are supported by small buttresses, simultaneously structural and evocative of the grander versions found on the cathedrals of Europe. In the same spirit, a traditional rose window sits above the front door, emitting a warm glow to the interior of the chapel while giving the exterior a more dramatic presence.

Yet the interior of the chapel has a special character that derives from no obvious source. Although a small structure, seating approximately 150 people, it seems much larger because of the soaring parabolic arches that support the roof. Constructed without wooden forms — "to save materials," Swank recalls lightly — but made of brick, they illustrate Ford's interest in combining the latest technology with familiar building materials. More important, they give the nave loftiness and airiness that we would never expect from the outside.

Along the side walls is a series of tall, narrow stained-glass windows, done mostly by TWU students. They depict, in a highly representational style, the pursuits of literature, music, dance, theater, teaching, medicine and community service. Behind the altar is a three-panel window honoring woman as wife, mother and nurturer — traditional in its message and compelling in its execution.

It is only after being in the chapel for a while, however, that we discover its true richness. The amount of detail is astonishing: hand-crafted brass light fixtures — a signature Ford detail — hang from the ceiling and, just above them, strips of redwood with hand-stenciled designs. The ends of the pews are handcarved, each in a traditional geometric pattern that betrays the influence, if not the hand, of Lynn Ford. On the curved wall of the baptistry, we find slender strips of mosaic, Byzantine in their brightness, and a small stained-glass window depicting the chapel's construction and containing portraits of the architects and chief benefactors. Something that might have been hokey and mawkish turns out to be beautiful and touching.

The spirit of the baptistry window is the spirit of the whole building. Its wholeness and purposefulness transcend anything as abstract as "good design." The chapel is clearly a labor of love, an expression of commitment and affection.

With the emergence of the International Style, and its dogmatic insistence that buildings were pieces of sculpture, in no need of further embellishment, this interest in craftsmanship died out. Ford, following the lead of his mentor, David Williams, carried the tradition on almost single-handedly for three more decades. The Little Chapel in the Woods is an example of that tradition at its best, and a marker along a road that American architecture by and large did not follow.

New Ford plant will meet Mexico demands to increase exports

HERMOSILLO, Mexico (AP) — The Ford Motor Co. assembly plant under construction here will begin producing automobiles for the U.S. market late next year, thus completing the Big Three automakers' response to a government ultimatum to export or get out.

It's a mere skeleton today, but the ultramodern $500 million plant on the outskirts of this capital of the northwestern border state of Sonora will begin rolling cars off the assembly line in November 1986, company officials say.

At that time Ford will join General Motors and Chrysler, which last summer began exporting Mexican-made vehicles to the United States for the first time.

The companies' decision to export vehicles, after decades of producing cars in Mexico for sale domestically and motors for assembly plants on both sides of the border, follows the passage of a Mexican law requiring automobile companies to balance their imports and exports, said David McKee, the plant's Dearborn, Mich.-based industrial relations program manager.

"It's indispensable that the automobile industry stop being a liability for the country's commercial balance and begin to generate all foreign currency necessary for their operation," says the law, passed in September 1983 as part of President Miguel de la Madrid's plan to restore the ailing Mexican economy.

"If you want to stay in business in Mexico, you can't contribute to a trade imbalance. And Ford, Chrysler and GM are totally dedicated to staying in Mexico," McKee said in an interview at company headquarters in Hermosillo.

Ford, which has been in Mexico since 1925, will produce 130,000 cars a year at the Hermosillo plant, at least 80 percent of which will be exported to the United States. The rest will be sold on the rapidly improving domestic market.

Last July, the Chrysler Corp. began importing two-door K-cars from its assembly plant in Toluca near Mexico City. A month later, GM's 1985 El Camino headed to the United States from the company's plant just outside Saltillo in northeastern Coahuila state.

Ford officials here said the company has not decided what model to produce for export in Mexico.

"It's not designed yet, but it will be a medium-size car more or less the size of the Topaz," said Ernesto

Zertuche, Ford public relations director in Hermosillo.

The plant, 150,000 square yards set on a nearly 300-acre site, will employ 1,600 people, he said.

The new plant is being built at a time thousands of U.S. communities are competing for GM's planned Saturn automotive plant, which reportedly will employ 6,000 people and bring a major economic development boost to the winning city.

Wages much lower than the rate paid in the United States have been cited historically as a key factor in the automakers' decision to Mexico.

Mexican autoworkers earn the equivalent of about $1 an hour, according to Pablo Roman Salinas, GM workers union leader in Saltillo.

U.S. laborers earn 20 times that amount.

GM workers in Saltillo, saying most of the vehicles they produce are exported to the U.S., staged a brief strike recently demanding to be paid in dollars.

McKee said wages are not a major factor in Ford's interest in Mexico. "The issue is productivity and flexibility in the work force."

The Mexico labor system allows "broad job assignments where a worker takes ownership for his part of the operation ... and flexibility in classification," he said.

The U.S. United Auto Workers union has "not been happy" with Ford's decision to make such a major investment in Mexico, McKee acknowledged. "But it fully understands the reasons for doing it." McKee said the company had to overcome "some trepidation" from citizens who fear the plant is a "smokestack industry" that will damage the environment.

The project, he said, "will not interrupt the environment." But some residents remain ambivalent.

"It'll change Hermosillo — for better or worse," said one female resident, asking not to be identified.

Hermosillo, a clean, colonial-style city of more than 300,000 people, is Sonora's agricultural, bureaucratic and business hub. Industry has centered around cement, fertilizer and food processing plants.

McKee said Ford chose Hermosillo because it has the necessary infrastructure, a highly trainable, adaptable work force and because it's close to the United States.

Orioles, Reds win openers

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD

First, Charlie Hough couldn't control his knuckleball, then he lost control of the situation.

The 37-year-old Texas pitcher allowed eight walks Monday, including four in the sixth inning, before Ranger Manager Doug Rader took him out of the game at the start of the seventh, trailing 2-1 but with a no-hitter still intact.

Then in the eighth, after Texas tied the score, Eddie Murray blasted a two-run homer, the second of Baltimore's two hits, to give the Orioles a 4-2 victory on the opening day of the 1985 major league baseball season.

"I had no choice," Rader said of his decision to remove Hough. "Eight walks is the same as eight singles. Charlie had done all he could do."

Hough didn't quarrel with Rader's hook.

"Nobody can manage for one person," said Hough, who allowed 12 hits and 12 runs in four innings against Baltimore last season. "A manager has to manage to win. He had to do what he did."

In other openers, Detroit edged Cleveland 5-4, Boston bombed the

New York Yankees 9-2 and Kansas City trimmed Toronto 2-1 in the American League, while Cincinnati beat Montreal 4-1 in the only National League game.

Reds 4, Expos 1

Player-manager Pete Rose hit three runs with a double and a single to pace Cincinnati over Montreal while resuming his chase of Ty Cobb's all-time hit mark.

Two snow storms delayed the game for more than an hour in the fifth inning, chilling a standing-room-only crowd at Riverfront Stadium, but Rose warmed up those in attendance, including Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, with a two-run double in the fifth to give the Reds a 2-0 lead.

Mario Soto picked up the victory, allowing one run on four hits in seven innings.

Rose, who added an RBI single in the seventh, is now 93 hits away from breaking Cobb's all-time mark of 4,191.

Tigers 5, Indians 4

Rookie third baseman Chris Pittaro had three singles and knocked in the tying run during Detroit's two-run, game-winning rally in the eighth inning against Cleveland.

The Tigers, who won their first nine games last season en route to a 35-5 start that led to a World Series championship, trailed 4-3

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd was the winning pitcher. Phil Niekro, now 0-7 in opening-day games, was plagued by wildness, giving up two bases-loaded walks to

Sambito given release

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe Sambito, one of the top relief pitchers in Houston Astros history, declined to accept a move to the National League club's Class AAA affiliate in Tuscon and was given an unconditional release.

"I still think I can play in the big leagues," Sambito said. "I looked at our club and the talent they had in the big leagues and Triple-A. I decided it would be difficult to get back to the big leagues with the Astros."

Sambito, 32, who had been attempting a comeback from a series of elbow operations, was told last Friday that he had failed to make the Astros pitching staff.

Astros General Manager Al Rosen said Monday that Sambito elected to take his release rather than the demotion.

"We are saddened by the fact the course of events took us to this point," Rosen said. "Joe has worked hard in his attempted comeback but we are certain that after reviewing the total situation carefully this past weekend, he made a decision which he felt was in the best interest of everyone concerned."

Sambito earns $600,000 per year on an Astros' contract that extends through the 1985 season. If another major league team signs Sambito for a lesser contract, the Astros would pay the difference to give Sambito his annual salary through the end of the 1985 season.

"I might get 12 or 13 teams interested in taking a chance on me and anywhere from none of them to two of them who might have a spot open for me now. But it's late to be thinking about being on anyone's big-league team at the start of the season," he said.

Sambito was among the top relief pitchers in the National League in 1982 when he started experiencing elbow problems that led to surgery. He missed the entire 1983 season. He returned to the Astros roster last season but was not used in game situations.

Sambito finished his Astros career with a 33-32 record, 2.42 earned run average and 72 saves. Sambito's ERA is a club record for pitchers with more than 400 innings. He was second on the team in all time saves behind Fred Gladdings' 74 saves. Sambito's 353 appearances ranked third on the all-time list.

This spring, Sambito had a 1-0, record, 7.53 era and two saves in nine games.

Arkansas wants Richardson

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — University of Tulsa coach Nolan Richardson has been offered the job as head basketball coach at the University of Arkansas and is expected to announce his acceptance at a news conference in Fayetteville today, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

Arkansas officials said Monday the news conference would be held this afternoon, "depending on our new coach's arrival," the newspaper reported.

Richardson would replace Eddie Sutton, who resigned a week ago after 11 seasons to become head coach at Kentucky.

Richardson, 43, would become the first black head basketball coach in Southwest Conference history.

In five years at Tulsa, Richardson's teams are 119-37 with three appearances in the NCAA playoffs and two in the National Invitational Tournament.

The Golden Hurricane went 23-8 during the past season and won the school's first outright Missouri Valley Conference championship. The team tied for the MVC title in 1983-84 and his other teams have two second and one third place finish in the conference.

Richardson, a graduate of Texas-El Paso, coached Western Texas Junior College of Snyder to the National Junior College Association national championship in 1980 with a 37-0 record. He went to Tulsa the following year, taking many of his players with him. The Golden Hurricane won the NIT championship in 1981.

Richardson could not be reached for comment Monday night and Arkansas Athletic Director Frank Broyles was in Memphis, Tenn., for a speech at a banquet for the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

University of Tulsa President J. Paschal Twyman told the newspaper the offer had been made to Richardson.

Twyman said he and Richardson "visited at length" Monday night concerning Richardson's consideration of the Arkansas job. It was believed that Twyman and four of the university's trustees made a counteroffer in an attempt to keep the most successful basketball coach in Golden Hurricane history.

A source close to Richardson told the newspaper that Richardson had made up his mind to accept the job.

The newspaper said Richardson was believed to have been one of those on Broyles' original list and first interviewed for the job last Thursday.

Part of the delay in Richardson accepting the post, the newspaper reported, was that he wanted assurance that proper medical services would be available in Fayetteville for his 13-year-old daughter, who is ill.

Longhorns work on run-and-shoot offense

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas, which built a national football reputation on the running of backs such as Steve Worster, Jim Bertelsen and Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell, spent much of spring training on a run-and-shoot passing offense.

Texas Coach Fred Akers says the offense created by pro football coach Mouse Davis of the Denver Gold is effective all over the field and from the first minute to the last.

"But by the same token, I'm not going to guarantee we'll use it all," said Akers.

The Longhorns, once ranked No. 1 but losers of four of their last five games, view the new offense as a quick-striking one that allows any or all of four or five receivers to run up to eight different routes.

"I don't know if we really established it, but it's all we saw this spring," said quarterback Shannon Kelley, a redshirt freshman.

"Every spring I've been here we've experimented with something," said quarterback Todd Dodge, last year's starter. "Sometimes we used it in the fall; sometimes we didn't. We ran it every day this spring, and that should be the telling point."

In 1984, Texas tried to offset numerous injuries to its running backs by throwing a school record 261 passes. A record 123 were completed for yet another school record — 1,950 passing yards — but defenders also intercepted 24, which was a record.

Fourteen Texas runners had a total of only 1,586 yards, with departing senior Terry Orr tops with 580.

Coach Davis brought the offense to prominence with the Houston Gamblers last season, and he and Gambler offensive coordinator John Jenkins say speedy, intelligent receivers, a big blocking-type back and a smart quarterback with a strong arm are necessary for success.

A line that can protect a quarterback four seconds while he scans the field and passes is a big plus.

"If guys can execute it, fine," said Akers. "There's a real simple policy I've always had in coaching — if someone can't catch, don't throw it to him."

Dodge, a senior, has the most experience. Backup Bret Stafford, who will be a third-year sophomore, has a good arm and scrambling ability. Kelley has perhaps the strongest arm.

"In college, the kid has got to have good poise and leadership and be able to throw the ball accurately. Running ability is overrated," Davis said.

Texas has speed at receiver in Everett Gay, former tailback Kevin Nelson and Donovan Pitts. Returning letterman Bill Boy Bryant and tight end William Harris combined last year for 57 receptions, seven touchdowns and 1,024 yards last year.

Ronnie Robinson, at 6 feet 2 and 220 pounds, has the size and running ability to play the single setback but was hurt last year and only gained 70 yards rushing. Edwin Simmons, 6-4 and 220, would be perfect, said Davis. Simmons, however, has knee problems, which make him questionable.

Kiwanis Club sets volleyball tourney

The first Top O' Texas Kiwanis Invitational Volleyball Tournament will be held April 11-13 at McNeely Fieldhouse in Pampa.

The tournament will be double elimination in both men's and women's divisions. Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. Children under six is admitted free.

Interested persons may call Ronnie Parker at 669-3984 for more information.

Kite eyes first Masters win

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Stephanie Kite, age 24 at the time, was sitting on her daddy's lap explaining one of her adventures. This one involved a piece of candy that stuck in her throat and necessitated Stephanie being up-ended and slapped on the back. "Did that ol' candy slip down your throat, Stephanie?" asked daddy. There was a sigh, a shrug, and the solemn, philosophic reply:

"Some days they just do that." And daddy Tom knows all about those days, the days things just happen like that, the good things turn to bad, when the best effort is not good enough. He, too, takes a philosophic approach. "I can shoot 67. There's nothing in the world I can do about somebody else shooting 65," Kite said. He was in position, some years ago, to win the Hall of Fame Classic. But, during the last round, his ball moved. No one else saw it. Kite did. He called a penalty stroke on himself. He lost the tournament by one stroke. In 1982 Ed Fiori beat him in a playoff with a 60-foot birdie putt. Last year, Kite was in position, as he so often is, to win the Masters. But Ben Crenshaw holed a 65-foot putt and Kite hit a 7-iron shot into Rae's Creek on No. 12. "People think I blew it when I went in the water on 12. That's not so. I lost because I missed some crucial putts in the early rounds. Still, I played well enough to win. I have no control over the fact that Ben made a 65-foot putt on the 10th hole. He's in 3-putt range and he makes the putt. Well, that's Ben," Kite said.

He finished sixth, the eighth time in nine years he had placed sixth or better in the Masters, including a runner-up position in 1983. He also was second in the 1978 British Open and was fourth in the 1981 PGA. The hard-working little man, one of the game's most dedicated grinders, has done almost everything else. He's won seven titles and more than $2.3 million in a 14-season career.

Lady Harvesters place third

DUMAS — The Pampa High girls' golf team shot a 425 for third place in the third District 1-4A round last weekend. Borger took first with a 401, followed by Dumas at 416. Pampa's B team finished fourth at 458. Borger is in first place in the overall standings at 1,198, while Pampa is second at 1,212. Dumas is third at 1,249 and Pampa B is fourth. "Everyone has a bad round and I hope this was ours," said Pampa coach Frank McCullough. "We're still sitting in pretty good shape to go to the regionals, but we can't have another bad round." Jessica Baker shot a 90 to lead the Lady Harvesters in third-round play. Following her were Brianna Marsh, 98; DeLynn Ashford, 118; Kim Harris, 119, and Becky Starns, 126. For Pampa B, Stephanie Logue had a 97, Heather Simpson, 111; Lisa Coon, 120, and Leigh Harnly, 130. The Lady Harvesters have two district rounds to go before the regionals. The next district round is Saturday at the Canyon Country Club. The final round is scheduled for Saturday, April 20 at Borger.

The Pampa News

WILL PUBLISH A SPECIAL PRIVATE PROPERTY WEEK EDITION

ON SUNDAY APRIL 28, 1985

REALTORS®, real estate professionals who are members of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS®, invite you to observe Private Property Week, April 28-May 4. This weeklong observance reaffirms the rights that come with owning property. For most of us this means a home of our own.

Home ownership ensures a stronger democracy because it dispenses decision-making to the individual household. Homeowners tend to put down roots, to become involved in local government processes and to care about what takes place in their community and neighborhood.

The rights that attend home ownership are precious and must never be taken for granted. Rather, they must be protected and preserved for future generations.

Please join us in this year's observance of Private Property Week.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charlene Tilton, who has portrayed Lucy Ewing on the top-rated CBS television series "Dallas" for the past seven years, is honeymooning with her second husband after an Easter Sunday wedding.

Miss Tilton, 25, and Domenick Allen, a singer, actor and composer who has toured extensively with flamboyant pianist Liberace, were married at the Church on the Way in Van Nuys.

Miss Tilton was previously married to country singer Johnny Lee. It was the first marriage for Allen, 27.

About 50 people attended the wedding, at which Miss Tilton's 2 1/2-year-old daughter, Cherish, served as flower girl.

Miss Tilton's publicity firm, PMK, said Monday the couple was honeymooning at an undisclosed location.

North Africa and eventually the commander of the 8th Air Force in the European and Pacific theaters.

Eaker, 88, was responsible for organizing the VIII Bomber Command in England in 1942. He became commander of the 8th Air Force before Doolittle, going on to become commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces. He was named deputy commander of the Army Air Forces and chief of the air staff as the war came to an end, retiring two years later on Aug. 31, 1947.

The nominations for the promotion were said to have been sent to the Senate recently by President Reagan, but the announcement did not specify when the Senate had voted to confirm them.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Singer Frank Sinatra, actor Jimmy Stewart, humanitarian Mother Teresa, former test pilot Chuck Yeager and nine others will receive the nation's highest civilian award, the Presidential Medal of Freedom.

The 13, chosen by President Ronald Reagan, will be honored at a White House luncheon May 23. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday.

The honorees also include marine explorer Jacques-Yves Cousteau for his contribution in the fields of education and science, and Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick, former ambassador to the United Nations, for her contributions to the security and national interests of the United States.

Mother Teresa, an Albanian nun who works with the poor and dying in India, was chosen for her contributions to humanitarianism. Sinatra and Stewart for contributions in the arts, entertainment and public service.

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may have been nearly 40 years since they saw duty, but two of the nation's top World War II generals are being promoted.

Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, who led the first bomber raid on the Japanese mainland in 1942, and Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, who played a key role as commander of U.S. and allied air forces in Europe and the Mediterranean, have been confirmed by the Senate for promotion to four-star rank, the Pentagon said Monday.

Doolittle, 88, retired from the military in July 1946. After leading the first bombing raid on Japan on April 18, 1942, he became the commander of the 12th Air Force in

Alcoholics Anonymous unique organization

EDITOR'S NOTE — Alcoholics Anonymous, born 50 years ago, has grown into a worldwide organization with more than 1 million members in 114 countries. It's an organization like no other. Nobody's in charge. There aren't any membership lists. But there are many people who credit it with saving their lives.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It was fifty years ago on May 11 that a New York stockbroker stood in the lobby of the Mayflower Hotel in Akron, Ohio, dying for a drink. The stockbroker, Bill Wilson, had been sober about six months and was determined to stay that way. He had an unusual idea. He felt that if he could just talk with another hopeless drunk he would not need the bottle.

He looked at the church directory on the wall. Surely a minister would know a forlorn drunk, he thought. After a series of telephone calls, he reached the wife of an Akron doctor who had all but lost his practice because of drinking.

The doctor, Robert Holbrook Smith, was too far gone for conversation that day. His wife said she would try for the next day, Mother's Day.

Dr. Smith reluctantly agreed to meet Wilson, but only for fifteen minutes. Instead, they talked for hours, about their drinking and their lives, but Dr. Smith continued to drink.

Finally, the doctor had his last drink and on June 10, 1935, two sober alcoholics sat and talked. That was the day Alcoholics Anonymous was born.

It had no name and didn't until several years later when Wilson wrote a book, "Alcoholics Anonymous," and the group took that name.

This year, as an estimated 30,000 members prepare to go to Montreal to celebrate AA's golden anniversary over the July 4th weekend, AA is a worldwide organization with more than 1 million members, many of whom credit AA with saving their lives. You can attend an AA meeting in 114 countries and read the "Big Book," as members call Wilson's work, in 14 languages.

Members say there's no other organization quite like it. For one thing, no one's in charge. There's no permanent leadership, no official spokesperson, no promotion effort. AA refuses money from anyone who is not a member.

AA is not taking money from members, either. It doesn't cost anything to belong. A hat is passed at meetings and that's the sole support. If grateful alcoholics want to leave something to AA in their will, the most the organization will accept is $500.

At the meeting level, leadership changes every six months. At national headquarters, the positions are rotated every two years.

It is truly anonymous. Headquarters has no membership list. The only requirement for belonging is the desire to stop drinking. You don't even have to be sure you're an alcoholic.

One member telephoned AA and asked, "How do I go about joining?"

"You're in," the volunteer told him.

That's how people join. They just start going to meetings.

You don't get kicked out, either. Some members don't get sober quickly. They are encouraged to keep coming back, but are asked not to speak up at meetings if they have been drinking that day.

At a typical AA meeting, a speaker "qualifies," that is, he tells his story about how his drinking began, the disasters it led to, what caused him to stop and how life has been sober.

Alcoholics Anonymous is just that to the outside world, but within the warm atmosphere of meetings, members are anything but anonymous to each other. They know one another's dreams, dark little secrets, occupations, family histories and usually last names as well.

The program for recovery consists of 12 steps, including an admission that the person is powerless over alcohol and that only a surrender to a higher power of one's own choosing will effect recovery.

There are also steps in which the member cleanses the emotional baggage of the soul by talking about it, trying to change negative patterns and making amends to those he hurt.

The last step, the Twelfth Step, involves helping other, still-suffering alcoholics. AAs don't prowl streets for them or force people in who have made it clear they would rather keep drinking.

"The program is for those who want it, not those who need it," they say. Besides the 12 Steps, AA is based on 12 traditions, one of which is the principle of anonymity, the closest thing AA has to a rule. Members are free to tell families and friends they have joined, but at the public level of press, radio and television, they are instructed not to identify themselves as members.

The reasons are twofold. By rotating the leadership at all levels, AA has kept the organization grass roots. A housewife is as important as a congressman, a typist as important as a movie star.

The second reason is practical. Should a public figure proclaim he was an AA member and then drink again, people who might benefit from AA could be tempted to conclude it doesn't work.

A 1980 survey conducted with volunteers at meetings showed that half of all newcomers, under three months, did not continue attending meetings. Another 25 percent stayed, but did not stay sober through their first year, and the remaining 25 percent stayed sober the first year.

The survey also showed that at a typical meeting, 35 to 40 percent are sober less than one year, another 35 to 40 percent sober from one to five years, and the remaining 20 to 30 percent sober five years or more.

Extrapolating from these figures, the survey suggests that a randomly selected member of the AA population with less than one year's sobriety has a 40 percent chance of going through the next year without drinking. A member with one to five years has an 86 percent chance of not drinking the following year. After five years, the figure goes up to 92 percent.

In 50 years, the only real change in AA has been in its tremendous growth, the increasing number of women and young people and an upswing in dually addicted members.

The polyaddiction sometimes touches off controversy at meetings when the focus seems to be turning toward drugs, not alcohol.

A Chesapeake waterman, attending a meeting mostly made up of younger alcoholics, thought he was hearing too much about drugs. "There are people in this room who don't even know what a Quaalude looks like," he shouted. "The name of this group is Alcoholics Anonymous, not Quaaludes Anonymous."

At other meetings, the majority of the members are cross addicted and anecdotes about popping pills and taking street drugs are easily accepted. Most members feel that if an individual is an alcoholic, he belongs at AA meetings regardless of what else he was addicted to.

Telephone therapy is a staple of the recovery program and strangers exchange numbers without suspicion.

"I couldn't believe it when I walked in," says a New Yorker who grew up on Staten Island. "It's the only place I ever found where people don't want anything from me. They just want to help. They told me to keep coming back. Nobody had told me that for a long, long time."

Prosecutor halts no-risk speeding

BRIDGEPORT, Texas (AP) — Last year, if you got a traffic ticket on Wise County highways, you could win an automatic dismissal if you knew — as many lawyers, truckers and other drivers knew — that the county attorney refused to prosecute traffic tickets appealed to district court.

All you had to do was simply plead guilty or "no contest" to the charge before a justice of the peace, then appeal to the district court.

As a result, local law enforcement officers say, truckers "kept the hammer down" when they thundered down State Highway 114 of the alternative trucking route, U.S. 380-287, to deliver their 35-ton loads of sand and gravel to Dallas area construction sites.

But all that's a thing of the past now, says Pat Morris, who took over in January as the new county attorney for Wise County.

"I didn't go to law school for three years to try traffic cases, but Wise County is kind of unique. I'm going to open traffic court," Morris told the Dallas Times Herald.

A state crackdown on reckless driving in Wise County produced more than 1,500 traffic tickets last month, and Morris promises that a vigorous effort will be made to collect fines on them.

Police and local prosecutors say they hope this enforcement effort succeeds where others have failed. In the past, they say, truckers viewed traffic citations in Wise County as little more than small annoyances.

"It's been a big problem in Wise County for a long time. All those troopers write a lot of tickets, but it hasn't done a lot in terms of deterrence," Morris said.

In neighboring Denton County, which has a larger population, 135 tickets were appealed last year. In Wise County, 1,257 tickets were appealed to district court in 1984, and virtually every one was routinely dismissed, Morris said.

In the past, appealing traffic tickets to district court has been a guaranteed victory for truck drivers and automobile drivers alike, Morris said, because his predecessor had a policy of not prosecuting traffic cases appealed to district court.

Former County Attorney Sam Gallo said he used the policy because his staff was too small and the court docket was already overcrowded.
