

City delays driveway pipes action

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners today deferred action on a driveway pipes ordinance and delayed consideration of city action on matters arising from complaints against the operation of kennel.

Both issues received a number of remarks from citizens present at the regular commission meeting this morning at City Hall.

City Manager Bob Hart had presented the commissioners a proposed ordinance regarding installation of driveway entrance pipes and grates and providing for replacement of pipes removed last summer by city crews.

But Quenton Nolte, chairman of Citizens for Better Government, presented his own proposed ordinance to the commissioners during a citizens request period at the meeting.

Hart's proposed ordinance is eight pages long; Nolte's is three pages.

The major point of discussion this morning concerned the establishment of standards for the replacement of the driveway entrances and the installation of new ones in the future.

Don Reed said the city had permitted the installation of the pipes over the years without placing any restrictions on them. He said he resented the city's present move toward establishing restrictions and standards and said the ones which had been removed should be replaced at the convenience of the owners.

Nolte said Hart's proposal places limits on the size of pipes which could be installed. Hart defended the establishment of standards, saying minimum sizes should be required to aid drainage and other matters.

Commissioner David McDaniel asked if anyone had tried using the city's proposed measurements on driveways.

John Wright said many members of Citizens for Better Government had tried the measurements. He said the standards would not work in all situations, with conditions varying from one block to another or even from houses across the street from each other.

Public Works Director Allyn Moore said the standards take into account the variances of road crowns and driveway slopes and could be applied generally throughout the city in most situations. Wright and Nolte disagreed.

McDaniel said there is a sense of urgency to get some ordinance passed before the upcoming street projects get underway.

Commissioner Joe Reed agreed, but he said the city's proposed ordinance package "would not give justice to every driveway," saying it wouldn't work on his own driveway.

Reed said the first reading of the ordinance should be deferred to allow further study and review of the criteria for the entrances and to work out adjustments between Hart's and Nolte's proposals.

He moved the reading of the ordinance be deferred. McDaniel seconded the motion, with the understanding the ordinance would be considered under emergency status. The motion passed unanimously, with Commissioner Clyde Carruth joining the action.

Commissioner Bob Curry was out of town.

The city agenda had included an item for consideration of city action in relation to the impoundment of dogs and the operation of a business within a residential area.

The matter arises out of complaint by Vearl Ferguson against Suzi Reed concerning the operation of a kennel at 1105 Juniper. Reed keeps dogs for sale and operates a dog grooming service at her residence.

The case will go before the Municipal Court tomorrow. (See related story.)

In the citizens request period, Reed said Ferguson had told her the dogs' barking disturbed him and his family during the day but not at night. She said she keeps her dogs locked up from 4 p.m. to 9 a.m. and plays music to them to keep them quieter at that period.

She said the dogs often make noise because of neighborhood children teasing the dogs and even throwing rocks at them.

Reed said she has tried to abide by all city regulations concerning the business, which has been in operation more than 10 years. "We go by all the rules we are aware of

Girls basketball coach arraigned on indecency with child charges

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

The Pampa High School girls junior varsity basketball coach was arraigned today on three counts of indecency with a child.

Allison Renee Ott, 26, 1129 N. Starkweather, today was charged with molesting a 15-year-old Pampa girl on three days last month. According to the charges, the teacher-coach, who gave her immediate resignation Thursday, fondled the girl's genitals or breasts on March 1, March 17 and March 29.

Justice of the Peace David Potter set a $10,000 bond on each of the charges, and Ott was locked up in the county jail.

Police declined to say where the alleged sexual escapades between the woman coach and teenage girl took place.

Ott and her roommate, middle school girls coach and physical education teacher Beverly Morlan, both quit without notice Thursday. School officials declined to give the reason for the immediate resignations.

Superintendent James Trusty has said the administration "acted on information we had." He said the resignations were "accepted administratively." Trusty also declined comment on the charge against Ott.

Ott declined comment on the charges and resignation at her home Monday. She said Morlan, who has an unlisted telephone number, was not available.

Ott was in her third year with the local school district. Morlan quit in the middle of her second year. Both girls coaches were hired by the Pampa district for their first teaching jobs. The women, who reportedly grew up in Pampa, received their degrees from Fort Hays College in Kansas.

Ott was a health - P.E. teacher at the high school and was an assistant coach for the Lady Harvesters varsity basketball, volleyball and track teams. She was head coach of the girls junior varsity basketball team. As an assistant to girls head basketball coach Albert Nichols, the woman helped guide the Lady Harvesters to their best finish ever this year. The varsity girls squad finished with a record of 12 - 11 this season, good enough for third place in District 1 - 4A.

The girls coach also led the junior varsity squad to a winning season this year. The junior varsity victories included a 46 - 28 opening round win over Canadian in the White Deer JV girls tournament.

Ott was first arrested about 2 p.m. Saturday. She was initially charged by police with sexual assault of a child. She made bond and was released.

But after looking at the information, Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton authorized the three complaints on which the girls coach was arrested and arraigned today. Hamilton said he would present the charges to a grand jury this afternoon.

In barking dog case

Animal ordinance challenged

A Pampa lawyer has challenged a city ordinance that has been used to prosecute his client for having barking dogs.

Suzi Reed, who operates a kennel in the backyard of her home at 1105 Juniper, was charged last month with "allowing an offensive condition to exist by allowing dogs to bark and disturb the neighborhood in violation of Ordinance No. 969 (the city's animal control laws)."

Pampa attorney Mark Buzzard filed a motion to dismiss the case last week in Pampa Municipal Court.

The pleading said the charge against Reed "is invalid for the reason that it fails to sufficiently describe an 'offensive condition'."

The city ordinance doesn't specifically list dog barking as an offense. But city prosecutor Rick Harris has said the charge against Reed falls in the category of a canine "nuisance" that created an "offensive condition."

The defense motion to dismiss the precedent-setting prosecution said the ordinance doesn't adequately describe the term "nuisance." The ordinance is "not definite enough to enable the accused to know that the act is or was a crime." In its vague terms, the motion said, the ordinance would allow a conviction if just one person considered an act as "offensive."

City Judge Phil Vanderpool hasn't ruled on the motion, but the case has been reset for a hearing on Wednesday.

Clerk Faye Miller said a jury hasn't been summoned for the hearing but said that some action may be taken in the case.

Reed was the first Pampa resident scheduled for prosecution on the specific charge of having a barking dog. The charge is based on a formal complaint by her next-door neighbor, Vearl Ferguson.

For the past 11 years, Reed has operated Suzi's World of Poodles from her home in northwest Pampa. She breeds and sells AKC-registered toy poodles and Yorkshire terriers in her backyard kennel. Reed usually has about 20 adult dogs in the yard.

Ferguson has said the barking animals disturb his family and that he can't sell his home because of the kennel next door. He also complained to the city commission that the woman has violated city law by operating a business from her home.

Debate over Nicaragua aid reminiscent of Vietnam era

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a foreign policy battle reminiscent of the Vietnam era, Congress launched showdown debates today on President Reagan's call for $14 million in aid to Nicaraguan rebels. Republicans warned that defeat would permit a Soviet beachhead in Central America while Democrats decried U.S. support for terrorism.

Starting with unusual early morning sessions, the Senate and the House each scheduled 10 hours of debate to prepare for final votes on whether to release the aid sought by Reagan for the CIA-backed Contras.

As debate began, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., warned that the United States could reap the whirlwind by resuming aid to the Contras.

While criticizing some of the Sandinista government's actions, Simon said: "Violence invites violence. ... If we use terrorism against other countries, other countries will feel justified in using terrorism against us."

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., former House Intelligence Committee chairman, said the CIA's three years of support for the Contras have "brought down public scorn upon that agency" and that the plan for renewed aid "is a way into a morass."

But House Republican leader Robert Michel, Illinois charged that the Sandinista government will "aid the Soviet Union in establishing an enclave in this hemisphere. ... Because of that, I believe the United States ... has the moral, diplomatic and geopolitical right and duty to aid Nicaraguans who wish to have a democratic society in Nicaragua."

House Democrats were confident they had the votes to defeat both Reagan's initial plan and a milder GOP alternative. The situation in Senate was not so clear.

The House Republican proposal, sponsored by Michel, would ship $14 million in non-lethal aid to the Contras through the U.S. Agency for International Development, instead of the CIA as Reagan asked.

A House Democratic plan would give $10 million to Nicaraguan refugees through the Red Cross or United Nations and set aside $4 million for implementing a possible peace settlement.

But on Monday, attention focused on the White House, where the demonstration against Reagan's Nicaragua policies led to about 300 arrests for disorderly conduct and demonstrating without a permit, and where Senate Democrats presented a compromise plan to Reagan and Senate Republicans.

A day-long meeting — briefly attended by Reagan — failed to achieve a compromise.

The Senate Democratic plan would give the Contras $14 million in food, clothing and medical supplies, if Reagan agrees to resume bilateral talks with Nicaragua and the Contras accept a cease-fire. It also calls for economic sanctions against Nicaragua and possible resumption of military aid to the Contras if the Sandinistas do not negotiate in good faith.

The White House promptly dismissed the Democratic plan for ignoring the Contras as a party to a possible peace agreement.

"We believe that (peace) cannot occur unless there is dialogue between the parties in Nicaragua and ... it won't succeed — even if it begins — as long as there is a big arms buildup" on the Sandinista side, said a senior White House official.

Canadian rejects proposed hike in gas rates

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

CANADIAN — In a decision that will affect gas rates in Mobeetie, city officials here rejected a rate increase request by High Plains Natural Gas and replaced it with their own proposal.

At a special meeting Monday, Canadian City Council members offered a gas rate of 97 cents per thousand gallons (MCF), plus $4.50 customer service charge. This is an increase from the 92 cents per MCF and $4 service charge.

City manager Jody Butler said there would also be a 6.24 cents per MCF charge to recover $14,000 in consulting fees with their rate expert G.H. Guernsey Co. of Oklahoma City.

High Plains, which also provides gas to Mobeetie and Higgins as well as parts of rural Hemphill County, wants to increase the MCF charge to $1.45 and the customer service charge to $5. Company representatives say that would amount to an annual increase of $130,000 for Mobeetie, Canadian and Higgins. High Plains president Charles Morehead threatened to go to the Texas Railroad Commission if the company does not get the rate request.

"They left rather in a hurry last night," Butler said, adding that the company has 30 days to appeal to the RRC.

This morning, Morehead said the company is studying alternatives, which are to either accept the Canadian proposal or to go on to the RRC. Regardless of what the company does in Canadian, Mobeetie and Higgins may accept the rate increase on their own.

"I don't know what Mobeetie or Higgins would do," Morehead said. "I'd just be speaking for them if I speculated."

Butler said the High Plains proposal would have meant an increase of more than 50 percent while the city increase was about 12 percent.

"But I don't think the gas company figures it that way," Butler said.

Morehead said the gas company based its computing on the average residential use of 112 MCF per year.

"If you look at it on the whole bill over a year, it comes out different," he said, claiming that the High Plains proposal would mean an annual increase of 1.36 percent.

"With the city proposal, the increase per annum was less than one percent (.9 percent)," he said.

"It's been 31 months since we had an increase, and we have to allow for inflation," he added. "Their six cent charge (for the consultant) would bring their bill higher."

City officials in Mobeetie and Higgins were waiting for the Canadian decision before setting their rates. Butler said he will present the ordinance to officials of the two towns today. Neither city had representatives at the Monday meeting.

While Butler seems confident that the two cities will go along with the Canadian proposal, Mobeetie Mayor Leona House said she doesn't want any gas rate increase.

She said this morning that she was not aware of the Canadian City Council's decision.

"But I don't think anyone wants an increase," she said. "A few dollars don't hurt but they add up. I'd like to keep it the way it is."

She added that she will have to study the Canadian proposal.

"I imagine they did the very best they could" she said of the Canadian offer.

at this time," she claimed.
"The business has never bothered anyone before," she said. Ferguson moved next door several months ago. Reed claimed she had not received any complaints from neighbors earlier about the operation of her business from her residence.
Her business is no different than any other business operated from a home, such as Avon and Tupperware, she said. She noted Ferguson has placed advertisements in the newspaper about his home-operated business.
Ferguson said "the issue we're talking about here is having a business in a residential area."

with the barking of the dogs only a side matter.
Ferguson said he is a self-employed carpenter. No service or product is produced in his home, he said; his home phone is used only for contact purposes, with his work done outside his home.
The case before the court concerns the matter of the dogs' barking creating a nuisance and not the operation of the business in the area, however, Ferguson played a cassette tape for the commissioners recorded from his backyard, with the sound of numerous barking dogs heard.
"It would be kind of hard to conduct a meeting with this kind of noise, wouldn't it?" he asked the commission.

Another citizen said a barking dog can be a nuisance, "I don't care whether it's day or night." He said he has had problems with barking dogs in his neighborhood, "but we sure can't get the cooperation of people who own them." He said the city should have some ordinance against barking dogs.
At Hart's recommendation, the commission deferred any action on the matter pending the outcome of the court case.

Rate of inflation soars

WASHINGTON (AP) - Soaring gasoline prices sent the inflation rate up 0.5 percent last month, the government reported today. Food costs held steady.
Analysts said the overall increase at the retail level, the sharpest since January 1984, stemmed mostly from actual higher gasoline costs plus an unusual seasonal adjustment factor that made the final figure look even worse.
Food prices, also seasonally adjusted, were flat for the first time since last May.
But motor fuel costs ended a three-month decline and rose 3.8 percent after falling 2.6 percent in the previous month.
Without the seasonal adjustments, a process intended to remove predictable, periodic forces from the calculation, overall March prices rose 0.4 percent, the same as in February.

Coupled with the 0.3 percent seasonally adjusted gain in February and the 0.2 percent in January, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index so far this year has risen a moderate 4.1 percent at an annual rate.
This compares with a 4 percent rise for all of last year. Analysts expect inflation will run at about the same pace in 1985, giving the United States its fourth straight year of moderate inflation.
As recently as 1980, prices soared 12.4 percent in a single year.

Witnesses speak in favor of repealing state blue law

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas blue law is difficult to enforce and is confusing to consumers, witnesses told the Senate State Affairs Committee Monday.
Denton County District Attorney Jerry Cobb, supporting a proposed bill that would repeal the blue law, said he is not willing to commit his only three investigators and half his staff to enforce the blue law.
The blue law prohibits the sale of 42 categories of merchandise by retailers on two consecutive weekend days. The House passed a bill in February repealing the 1961 law.
Committee Chairman Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls is sponsoring the Senate bill to repeal the law.
Tarrant County Assistant

District Attorney Gerald Summerford also testified that his attempts to enforce the blue law were an "utter impossibility."
A Galveston neighborhood grocer said he is liquidating all pantyhose from his store and won't begin selling them again unless the blue law is repealed.
"I am tired of consumers coming in my store, picking up a pair of pantyhose and putting them on my counter and me or my employee having to tell them we can't sell them," M.J. "Milo" Milosevich said.
Texas Consumer Association President Brad Wiewel said the law also confuses people from out of state who don't know what they can and cannot buy.
Other supporters of Farabee's bill testified that lifestyles have changed and more people need Sunday as an extra shopping day.

"With the lifestyle of consumers today," Consumers Union attorney Carol Barger said, "time equates to money. The ability to shop evenings and weekends appeals to them."
But Jack Welch, a representative for the Texas Retailers Association testified that the blue law is working.
"It's accomplishing its purpose," Welch said. "It's protecting the retail employee and the retail employees family."
The Texas Retailers Association has been outspoken in its opposition to the repeal.

God didn't say 'shoot it out'

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark. (AP) - A leader of a survivalist camp besieged by law enforcement officers searching for five white supremacists says his group didn't shoot it out because God said it was "not time for violence."
Kerry Noble said the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord held worship services and listened to religious music during the four days the FBI blockaded the group's 224-acre camp before arresting the five men Monday.
The arrest of James Ellison, the 48-year-old founder and spiritual leader of the survivalist group doesn't mean its demise, Noble said. "CSA is in good shape. I think maybe in the long run, this will be good for us."

During the siege, 300 law enforcement officers closed in on the main CSA compound in the rugged hills near the Missouri border.
"We couldn't afford to fire a shot," Noble said. "If it had come down to a battle, without the intervention of God, the CSA wouldn't have had a chance."
But the overwhelming odds against the group would not have prevented a battle if leaders had received a sign they should fight. "If God says, 'Shoot it out,' we shoot it out."
Noble said he and Ellison negotiated with the FBI via a field telephone and in person at a police command post in the compound.
They agreed that U.S. Attorney

Asa Hutchinson would not recommend Ellison be held without bond, that Noble would be allowed to stay in the camp during a search by federal agents and that weapons and ammunition seized that are not illegal and not to be used for evidence be returned to the group, he said.
Also arrested Monday were Jefferson Butler, 42, and James Wallington, 42, whose addresses weren't listed by the FBI, and two reputed members of the neo-Nazi group The Order, Thomas Day Bentley, 57, of Hayden Lake, Idaho, and Paul Evans, 29, of Rosamond, Calif.
A machine gun found among a cache of weapons and explosives at the CSA camp is nearly identical to guns used in the slayings of Missouri state Trooper James Linegar last week and Denver radio talk-show host Alan Berg in June, federal officials said.

South Texas: Partly cloudy through the period. A slight chance of thunderstorms Lower Rio Grande Valley Thursday and Friday and a chance of thunderstorms western sections Saturday. Highs in the mid 80s to mid 90s. Lows in the mid 60s to mid 70s.

Twisters, thunderstorms, floods hit state

By The Associated Press

Heavy thunderstorms spawned at least one funnel cloud early today in Central Texas in the wake of damage caused by 12 tornadoes that ripped through central and eastern sections earlier, along with flooding and baseball-sized hail.

Fort Hood officials spotted a funnel cloud 12 miles south of Killeen at 1:15 a.m. CST, moving to the east at 15 mph, the National Weather Service said. But a dispatcher for the Bell County sheriff's department said no damage or injuries were reported.

A tornado watch issued by the weather service for Bell County expired at 2:20 a.m. CST.

Authorities said tornadoes Monday demolished mobile homes and spawned heavy rains that flooded streets in several cities.

Several mobile homes were destroyed when funnel clouds rolled through Kyle, about 20 miles south of Austin, around 7 p.m., said city administrator Merle Wilkins.

"That's 'Merle' as in 'Haggard,'" said Ms. Wilkins. "And that's what I'm going to be before the night's over."

A Hays County sheriff's dispatcher said no one was injured when the twisters hit, but one home was destroyed and three others were damaged. The dispatcher said a barn and 11 vehicles were also damaged.

Ms. Wilkins said homeless families were sheltered at city hall overnight.

The weather service said a tornado downed trees and fences and damaged some mobile homes in nearby Caldwell County.

Six funnels were sighted in Smith County near Tyler earlier Monday and three tornadoes touched down, officials said. Sheriff's Deputy Charlie Baker said none caused an injuries or major damage.

The first twister hit east of Lindale at 6:12 p.m. The second touched down on the eastern edge of the Lindale city limits at 6:22 p.m., and struck again 26 minutes later about 20 miles to the northeast between Quitman and Big Sandy, officials said.

The third twister was sighted at 6:23 p.m., north of Hideaway Lake, authorities said. A Lindale firefighter reported the funnel touched down for 30 seconds there.

Authorities said at least four other tornadoes, some accompanied by baseball-sized hail that caused an undetermined amount of damage, dipped down in the Waco area but did no damage or injuries.

Lt. Lewis Barber of the McLennan County Sheriff's Department said only one of the tornadoes touched down on land and another dissipated after sucking up tons of Lake Waco water.

Barber said the only funnel to hit land was southwest of Lake Waco in Speegleville, but it immediately — and harmlessly — ricocheted into the clouds. He said another tornado that moved over Lake Waco shortly after 4 p.m., turned into a waterspout and dissipated in minutes.

At least two other tornadoes were reported over Crawford and McGregor southwest of Waco, but caused no damage or injuries, said Barber.

The weather service posted a severe thunderstorm warning effective until 3:30 a.m. today for Falls County, where radar indicated threatening conditions developing about 5 miles northwest of Rosebud. Another very heavy thunderstorm was located southwest of Marble Falls in Central Texas.

It was the fourth straight day that violent springtime thunderstorms erupted across the state. A tornado killed three people in Northwest Texas on Sunday as at least six other twisters touched down in the area.

On Monday, about 13 residences in Duncanville and the Oak Cliff section of Dallas were damaged when a front bringing high winds and thunderstorms rumbled through the area, authorities said.

A small frame house exploded Sunday when it took a direct hit from a tornado near the Young County town of Olney in Northwest Texas. Authorities said the bodies of an 88-year-old man, his 85-year-old wife and their 64-year-old son were found nearby.

Authorities said several tornadoes ripped down trees and power lines and destroyed barns.

At least three other people were injured as the result of twisters that struck the area, they said.

Senate budget committee is concerned over tuition hikes

AUSTIN (AP) — Concern over a proposed college tuition increase and out-of-state students knocking Texans out of places in state law schools has surfaced in the Senate Finance Committee.

The committee met for nearly three hours Monday, after a five-hour meeting Sunday, in an effort to take care of final details on a $36 billion state budget bill. Another hearing was scheduled today.

The budget would balance without new taxes only if tuition is increased significantly and state service fees, such as for a driver's license, also are raised.

The committee voted Monday to give $5 million to colleges that might lose students if tuition goes up. It also agreed to raise the limit on the number of out-of-state students admitted to Texas law schools.

"I don't know if $5 million will be adequate, but we may be lucky to find that much," said committee chairman Grant Jones, D-Abilene. Legislative Budget Board staffers admitted they hadn't taken a possible drop in enrollment into account when they estimated the revenue from a proposed tuition.

"My indications are that there will be some reduction in student enrollment," said Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texas, "and $5 million won't cover but a few (schools)."

Jones said most other states also are raising tuition so the increase in Texas "would not be as dramatic ... as it appears to be."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who proposed a threefold tuition increase for September, said, "We don't even know that there will be a loss at any of them."

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, won approval of a special budget provision that would further restrict the number of out-of-state students who can be admitted to Texas law schools. The current limit is 10 percent, and Farabee suggested 20 percent.

"We can't have a national or international law school — we need to loosen up a little bit," said Farabee, a graduate of the University of Texas School of Law.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, responded, "I can understand new blood teaching but tell me why we need new blood learning?"

Farabee said with the increased tuition out-of-state students "would be carrying their own."

Parker said when Texas students with good grades apply to UT and someone from New York or New Jersey is occupying the place, "that puts the frosting on me." He proposed a 5 percent cap.

"It's not easy to get in law school, anyway you cut it," said Farabee.

After the 3-2 vote for Farabee's proposal, with one senator abstaining, Parker said, "I hope those folks from New York and New Jersey vote for you next time."

The committee also voted to require state agencies to inform the attorney general's office if they cannot collect certain debts within a specified time.

Tornado time is here again

I never thought I'd say this but: Jeff is a chicken.

Jeff Langley admitted it himself in his column Sunday, when he said he is a coward when it comes to tornadoes. But, I'm no coward when it comes to tornadoes, no siree. I'm from Oklahoma, after all, where tornadoes are typical coffee shop conversation.

In Oklahoma, tornado warnings are so frequent they're listed on the weekly TV schedule. That's why tornado season hits when the television reruns roll around. Watching the weatherman get flustered when a twister is spotted 150 miles away is more hilarious than even the most popular situation comedy.

After the first dozen interruptions, however, tornado watches become burdensome and boring. Sunday night, channel 10 flashed a tornado watch signal just as Angela Lansbury was announcing whodunit on "Murder, She Wrote." I threw a connoisseur fit bigger than any tornado could possibly be.

Tornado warnings: now that's where the fun begins. Once, when the weatherman said a tornado had landed 10 miles away in Cashion, I just knew it would come plowing right through our cow pasture and uproot our living room. I wanted to be ready. So I took all the blankets, pillows, books and stuffed animals from my room and a full supply of cookies and chocolate milk from the kitchen and set up my own little storm shelter under the pool table. I wanted, of course, to make sure our dachshund Fritz and our cats were safe with me, but Fritz didn't take too kindly to sharing a pool table with seven skittish kitties and soon set up his own shelter under the sofa.

When we sold the pool table (it had outlived its usefulness as a place to fold clothes), I moved my Tornado Alert Headquarters to Mom's bathtub. That worked until one night when Mom decided to ignore the tornado warning and take a shower.

As I grew older, I learned not to be afraid of tornado warnings. That was before our family moved into its current domicile where the roof leaks like Niagara Falls during every gentle spring sprinkle.

There is something eerily entertaining about a spring storm. Mom used to love to sit on our back porch in the late evening and watch lightning flash in the western skies. She says it relaxed her. A lady in the advertizing department, another Okie, claims she used to climb on her roof to watch the thunder boomers roll in. Managing Editor Wally Simmons will remember that when he needs someone to take storm pictures from the newspaper office's roof.

The billowy clouds of spring are bolder than those of other seasons. The big fluffy clouds, those that look like bunny rabbits, are cumulus clouds. In moderation they are harmless. The entertainment begins when they all bunch up together — becoming cumulo-nimbus clouds — and start spitting rain and lightning bolts.

Tornadoes are nothing to overlook. Ask any White Deer resident who survived the 1947 tornado; that one nearly wiped Woodward off the Oklahoma map. Ask any Miami trustee who had to redesign the school after it was destroyed in 1968.

City Editor Fred Parker can tell volumes about the killer tornadoes in Ohio. But we'll let him do that in his own column.

Despite their terrible beauty, tornadoes can be deadly. So be prepared when the stormy weather suddenly gets still and the sky is blackened by a mammoth cumulo-nimbus.

I'll be under the sofa with my cat, cookies, stuffed animals and blanket.

House backs school consolidation amendment

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Bill Haley waited until after the weekend and got more than the nine more votes he needed to pass a proposed constitutional amendment telling lawmakers to keep their hands off school consolidations.

The measure, approved 108-31 by the House Monday, now goes to the Senate, where approval would put it on the November general election ballot.

Haley's proposal got 91 votes last Wednesday in a preliminary vote, but needed 100 or more for approval. The Center Democrat postponed the final vote last Thursday, fearful that the votes were not there.

State law now bans the Legislature from forcing school districts to consolidate without the approval of local officials and voters. But Haley said that might not be enough protection against lawmakers who see consolidations as a way to save state money.

Some urban lawmakers and school officials have complained that school districts in sparsely populated, rural areas are money-wasters that should be consolidated.

Legislators could change the current law to allow them force consolidations. But if the provision is put in the Constitution, it would take a popular vote to change it.

"This says that we may not capriciously consolidate school districts without the approval of voters in the districts," said Haley, chairman of the House Public Education Committee.

Two lawmakers who spoke against the proposal said they like the idea, but not the method.

"The statutory provisions are fine and sufficient as they are," said Rep. Bill Hammond, R-Dallas, adding that the oft-amended Texas Constitution already is too long.

"Things of this nature simply do not belong in the Constitution," Rep. Gary Thompson, D-Abilene, said the Constitution now carries 269 amendments.

Courtroom 'spies' adding trial twist

HOUSTON (AP) — They are called mirrors, shadow, spies or surrogates. And more and more lawyers are using the courtroom observers to get feedback on what a jury probably wants to hear.

"In a trial, communication is critical. These 'mirrors' are able to give lawyers day-to-day feedback," says Bryon McCoy, a professor at the University of Houston Bates College of Law.

"It's too late after a trial is over to ask the jury if they understood the facts of the case," he said.

McCoy says the surrogate "jurors" are being used "more and more, especially in big cases with complicated fact situations."

Hired observers were used last month by the defense team in the commercial bribery trial of Attorney General Jim Mattox. Mattox was acquitted.

"We found out from them what the jury was tired of hearing and what they wanted to hear more of," said lead defense attorney Roy Minton of Austin.

"Mirrors" currently are being used in Galveston where a federal court jury will decide if a dozen corporations should pay damages to 50 men who worked with asbestos products.

The three men and a woman hired by the asbestos company created a stir during pretrial discussions when plaintiff's attorney Robert Ballard said he was afraid they could interfere with the presentation of his case.

Ballard wanted the 'mirrors' identified so the 12 jurors and witnesses in the case would be able to keep their distance.

Judge Hugh Gibson met privately with three of the 'mirrors' and learned that two of them had engaged in small talk with some jurors.

"Neither of you is to contact, accost, talk to or have any relations with members of the jury," he warned them.

In both the Mattox and asbestos cases, the observers did not know which side they were working for.

"This keeps them objective," said Minton, who had another firm hire the observers.

At the end of each day of testimony, a trial consultant hired by Minton, would ask the 'mirrors' to judge the performance of the attorneys. The consultant then reported to the defense team.

"I'd use them again," said

Minton. "In the Mattox case, they confirmed for us that the jury was sick and tired of hearing tape recordings and wanted to hear more from the defendant."

Marijuana worth $1 million is seized

HOUSTON (AP) — Drug agents seized $1.2 million worth of marijuana from a plane that landed in Houston and arrested the aircraft's pilot and three-man crew.

The 1,000 pounds of marijuana allegedly was flown from Mexico or Columbia, Jimmy Burleyson of the Texas Department of Public Safety said Monday.

The plane's pilot, Arnold Zimmefman, 56, of Socorro, N.M., was being held in the case. Also arrested were the plane's crew members: Martin Carl Young, 22, Abram Gonzalez, 28, and Ruben Rincones, 35, all of McAllen, Texas.

All four men were charged with possession of marijuana.

Bond was set at $500,000 each for Gonzalez and Rincones and at $300,000 each for Zimmermann and Young.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Hope on the tax front

So taxes are "the price of civilized society." Yawn. Snore. Let's talk about the real world - not some philosophers' paradise where every happy citizen happily contributes his apportioned mite to government.

Let's talk rather of the modern world, in which the federal government, through a tax code thousands of pages long, appropriates nearly a quarter of the national wealth for its own purposes. (Not counting what other levels of government appropriate for THEIR purposes.)

The technicolor nightmare of April 15 is behind at last. For once, in tax terms, there is more to anticipate than one more April 15. The tax system itself is under bombardment from both political parties, and this is a fun and glorious thing.

In his Saturday radio address, just before the tax deadline, President Reagan pointed to the tax simplification plan his administration will introduce next month.

"We know," said Reagan, "that our tax code is unfair. We know that it's complicated beyond belief. Millions of Americans need professional assistance just to complete their returns. And we know that it has bred another problem every bit as serious, the wasting of economic resources."

Reagan said he plans to "increase significantly the personal exemption," "lower personal rates by broadening the base," and "eliminate the shelters that make tax avoidance legal" while retaining "long-standing provisions like deductions for your home mortgage."

Meanwhile - just to prove that Democrats, too, know a bad thing when they see it, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri sends around copies of the income tax form as it might look were Congress enlightened enough to adopt his and New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley's own tax-reform plan.

The form is seventeen - lines long, on one side of an 8 X 11 - inch sheet of paper. In four blanks you report income. Then you claim deductions (six lines) for things like mortgage interest and medical expense. You adjust for IRA and Keogh contributions and personal exemptions.

You add up your deductions, subtract these from gross income, then multiply the remainder by 14 percent. That's your tax. I think I could do it myself, which, I may add, is saying quite a lot.

Such a gospel of hope comes in the face of much cynicism and despair. Yes, yes, all very nice to talk about, but who really believes Congress after all these years means business?

The progressive income tax system has been under fire since the very beginning. In 1913, Congressman Sereno Payne, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, during debate on the income tax, called it "a tax upon the income of honest men and an exemption, to a greater or less degree, of the income of rascals." A not-undiscerning judgment. Yet still the system afflicts us.

But it is in some sense a new day. The president backs tax simplification. The National Taxpayers Union, in a survey of congress, found substantial support in both houses for simplifying taxes without boosting revenues.

Tax reform is good politics - a "realigning issue," some call it; a catalyst for moving Democratic voters permanently into the Republican camp (which is why Democrats like Gephardt and Bradley are so eager their own party not get left out). The odds are presently on passage of some kind of simplification bill: "some kind" being the safest way of expressing things at so dynamic a moment as this present one.

Here, though, is the really radical thing about tax reform. The tax reformers have grasped and asserted a vital if forgotten truth. The truth is this: Government, contrary to what it apparently believes, has no limitless claim on the people's income (or the time it takes to calculate and report those incomes). What government has a right to is what the people freely concede to it.

In Washington, D.C., money saved through the use of this or that loophole is called a "tax expenditure." Meaning, the money was Congress' to start with, and, by letting you keep it, your lawmakers are "spending" it.

Something similar used to happen with bracket creep. Higher inflation meant higher tax brackets for everybody, which in turn meant more walking-around money for the House and Senate Budget committees. No more. Having got religion, Congress in 1981 legislated bracket creep out of existence, starting last January, though many on Capitol Hill still mourn the good old days.

Yes, times change, which is probably as cheerful a thought as one is likely to entertain, here in mid-April.

Restoring faith in big government

In an ironic development, it may be that Ronald Reagan's legacy will be to restore public confidence in big government.

The latest evidence is a Harris Survey that shows Reagan rolling up a 62-37 percent positive rating on his overall performance (only 1 percent of those polled were undecided about Reagan). Not surprising—the poll numbers just about match the results from the election.

The more interesting finding is that Tip O'Neill, who, in the matter of the functions and scope of government, represents everything Ronald Reagan does not, is rated favorably as well, by a 54-38 margin (8 percent of the respondents were undecided about O'Neill). It is the highest favorable rating O'Neill has achieved in a Harris Survey since he became speaker of the House during the Carter years. As late as 1982, in fact, O'Neill had a negative rating.

In other polls in recent years, public confidence in Congress and other governmental institutions in general has risen dramatically during the Reagan years (despite abundant examples of official corruption, venality and incompetence), after plunging to historical depths during the tenure of Richard Nixon and, later, Jimmy Carter.

Carter promised a government as good, as compassionate as the American people, then blamed the American people when his government turned bad. The American people were not fooled. They never confused their strengths with the Carter administration's failings and they turned him out of office.

Neither has Reagan ever confused the issue: to him, the people have always been the heroes, the government always the villain.

It would be great irony, indeed, if he were to encourage the identification between people and government that Carter tried so hard to, but could not bring about.

How to survive a war

Students at Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., learned last week of a referendum that, if passed, would provide cyanide tablets which students could take in case somebody started dropping a lot of nuclear bombs.

This is not a new idea. Gregory Peck gave Ava Gardner a cyanide tablet to pop - pop, fizz - fizz in the movie On The Beach, when the nuclear winds headed their way in Australia.

If Emory students want poison tablets in order to get themselves before The Bomb has a chance to do the same thing, I suppose that's their business.

But not me. First, it would be my luck to hear a report of nuclear war and pop a pill, and just before I conked out learn it was just President Reagan joking around about the Russians again.

And before I did something as drastic as poison myself, I'd at least give survival the old college try, if you will.

I mean, whatever happened to the fallout shelter idea?

It made perfectly good sense back in the '60s. If the worst happened, we would all crawl into our favorite holes in the ground and wait until it was safe to come out in the world again.

Has the younger generation lost its desire to survive? Have kids decided if the big ones start falling, they'll simply give up?

That wasn't the kind of spirit we had when I was in school. During the Cuban Missile crisis of '62, nobody at my high school had the slightest intention of doing anything but making it through in case Khrushchev started firing away.

Our principal, Mr. Evans, ordered each student to bring a change of underwear and some canned goods in the event nuclear war broke out and we couldn't get home.

I brought four cans of pork and beans, and I was quite excited about the possibility of getting to spend the night at school with my female classmates.

Mr. Evans soon dampened my enthusiasm, however, by announcing that in case of nuclear war, the girls would sleep in the gym and the boys on the other side of the school in the cafeteria.

Mr. Evans added: "As long as there is one teacher left to teach and one student left to learn, classes will go on."

But that's the kind of doggedness that made this country great in the first place. Before Emory students start planning a campus Jonestown, they ought to consider at least one alternative.

They could build a giant fallout shelter under one of the dorms. If they start now, by the time a war breaks out, they could have that sucker just like home.

Classes could continue as though nothing has happened, and a little ingenuity here and there could even make it possible to continue fraternity and sorority rush and intramural soccer.

As for food, that's no problem. Each student would bring canned goods to the shelter like we did in high school.

Besides, kids, if you later decided you wanted to end it all, eating four cans of pork and beans will kill you about as quickly as anything.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, April 23, the 113th day of 1985. There are 252 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

April 23, 1564 is generally regarded as the birthdate of the English poet and dramatist William Shakespeare. He died on the same date 52 years later.

On this date:

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford told an audience at Tulane University that the Vietnam War was over "as far as America is concerned."

Five years ago: With the flow of Cuban refugees arriving by boat increasing, the U.S. Justice Department warned that boatowners who transported refugees illegally would be subject to penalties.

One year ago: It was reported that Elizabeth Bouvia, a cerebral palsy victim who had demanded the right to starve to death in a hospital, had apparently changed her mind.

Today's birthdays: Actress Janet Blair is 64. Former secretary and U.S. ambassador Shirley Temple Black is 57.

Some 'local bills' affect entire state

In addition to the Appropriations Committee, I also serve on the County Affairs Committee. A lot of proposed legislation comes before this committee, some affecting only part of one county or a part of a State Representative's district. An unwritten rule is to quickly pass these bills out of committee and schedule them on the Local and Consent Calendar for floor action. These bills are usually gavelled through without a dissenting vote.

However, an increasing amount of legislation comes from Harris and Dallas counties where more than 20 representatives serve each of these counties. Many times the proposed legislation is a means to settle feuds between local figures.

Sometimes this legislation will affect the rest of the state adversely. Much of it mandates city or county government to do something. A lot of it is state legislation that actually meddles in the rightful affairs of a county.

capitol comments

For instance, one bill was proposed that would require all persons collecting fees, such as justices of the peace, to deposit the fees within 24 hours from the time of collection into the county treasury.

One such bill was assigned to a subcommittee of which I was chairman. Our subcommittee extended the time to seven days and permitted the county commissioners courts to grant a 30-day extension if the population of that county is less than 50,000 people. This is called a population bracket. Much of the legislation from Harris and Dallas Counties have a population bracket affecting counties of more than 1,000,000 people.

Most of the representatives of the County Affairs Committee have from two to fifteen counties in their legislative districts. This is very helpful in screening bills which will adversely affect smaller counties.

Recently, Rep. J.W. Buchanan, D - Dumas, passed a bill at the request of The District and County Clerks Association that would raise the cost of a marriage license by $7.50. All of the additional funds would go to the General Revenue Fund of the county.

For several years now, a group has been trying to raise the marriage license fee and require the funds be sent to the state to sponsor a program for battered wives and children. A representative from San Antonio offered an amendment which provides a county may use these funds for the benefit of battered wives. This amendment was accepted since it is an option given to the county court.

More recently, a major bill has come before the House which mandates marriage license fees be raised again and the monies sent to the State in order to establish a protective children's fund.

This bill has been delayed on the docket two times.

Panel approves music commission

AUSTIN (AP) — If the Senate approves a proposal to establish the Texas Music Commission as a state agency, the music industry in Texas could have the same success as the film industry, country and western singer Rudy Gatlin said.

Gatlin and other members of the music industry including country singer Jerry Jeff Walker attended a hearing of the Senate Affairs Committee Monday to support a bill establishing the commission.

"I look at my field of country and western and how many singers are from Texas, the list goes on and on of the vast amount of talent here," said Gatlin whose is from Odessa.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, who sponsored the bill, said the state is missing out on a big industry. Because the music industry in Texas isn't coordinated, singers and songwriters are going elsewhere to sell their music, he said.

William Beuck, a partner in the Fort Worth Billy Bob's Texas night club said the music industry is an "economically viable program and one that needs investment."

By establishing the commission as a state agency, Texas Music Association President Tom Molleson said the Texas music industry will be legitimized and identified.

The commission will be a privately funded organization, staffed by volunteers appointed by the governor. Molleson said gifts and donations will be easier to obtain if people recognize it as a state agency.

Forty percent of the country and western music market is from Texas, said Tom Pitts who served as the first president of the Texas Music Association when it was established in 1981.

Texas also is the largest source of capital for the entertainment industry, he said.

Senate okays new student-teacher test

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas could develop its own test for measuring how well prospective teachers can read, write and do math under a bill approved in the Senate.

The bill, which senators sent to the House on a 25-3 vote Monday, provides for the State Board of Education to review the exam regularly to eliminate possible "cultural bias."

The board, along with the Texas College Coordinating Board, would also consider courses that might help students prepare for the test.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, argued for the boards' exam review by noting that on a recent test for prospective teachers, 80 percent of Hispanics and 85 percent of blacks failed.

Although he doesn't want to make the test easier, he said the Board of Education should look at certain questions that are regularly missed by certain ethnic groups.

"If the items have a cultural bias, the board should review them" to avoid discrimination, he said.

Also Monday, senators sent to the governor a bill that would prohibit any private unaccredited institution from operating in Texas without the approval of the College Coordinating Board or the licensing agency for that profession.

The board and the state attorney general's office had raised questions about the operation in El Paso of a Caribbean medical school branch facility.

Senators approved 28-0 and sent to the House a bill that would require an independent audit of the Legislature and each of its agency at least once every five years.

The state auditor would be required to audit each department at least once every two years, and the auditor's office would be reviewed every six years.

The Senate also approved and sent to the House proposals that would:

- ban "non-bank" banks, which are institutions that can operate across state lines by not offering demand deposits or commercial loans, thus avoiding the legal definition of a bank.
- allow manufacturers and transporters of gambling equipment that is to be used out of state to avoid prosecution.
- ask Congress to require the federal government to assume full responsibility and liability for accidents involving nuclear waste, even above the current $500 million cap.
- direct the Board of Education to submit a plan to the 1987 Legislature for the education of people with cerebral palsy.
- authorize single-member districts for junior college trustees.

- tighten the theft law to make it easier to prosecute people who buy stolen merchandise for re-sale.
- authorize the creation of regional wastewater operations.
- extend the life of the Texas Commission for the Deaf.
- allow the Texas Youth Commission to assist private enterprise in establishing training facilities and programs for delinquent children.
- allow retail merchants to add a "bad check" charge to a customer's account.
- expand the list of medical students whose student loans may be waived.

A bill that would allow Pan American University at Brownsville to offer its own curriculum and issue its own degrees failed to clear a test vote. Sponsor Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, needed 18 votes, but the count was only 15-12.

Prison escapee is captured fishing

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — A Virginia man wanted on multi-state burglary charges is in a Texas jail today after authorities hooked him on his fishing expedition.

Donald Lee Ferris, 22, of Roanoke was the target of an intensive four-day manhunt before being arrested Monday as he fished in a farm pond, authorities said.

Ferris, accused of a shootout with Tulsa, Okla., police and multi-state burglaries and car thefts, was captured quietly about 12 miles east of here, Miller County (Ark.) sheriff's deputies said.

"He was fishing," Deputy Greg Casteel said. "He was probably pretty hungry."

The manhunt began Friday when an informant told authorities that Ferris was at a house trailer near DeKalb, Texas. Investigator James Gillespie said Ferris fled the trailer after police confronted him.

Gillespie said he found several items in the trailer that had been reported stolen in a rash of recent Pleasant Grove, Texas, burglaries. He also recovered a car reported stolen in Virginia.

For the next two days, Ferris eluded lawmen from Texas and Louisiana, who used horses, bloodhounds and a helicopter in their search of wooded areas in central Bowie County.

That search was called off late Sunday, and authorities began to suspect Ferris had left the area.

But the manhunt resumed Monday when a Miller County resident reported seeing a suspicious man in 1975 black pickup truck on his farm, deputies said.

Deputies later spotted the truck near Howard's Lake on an unnamed dirt road, crept up behind Ferris as he fished and arrested him at about 9:30 a.m., Casteel said.

Ferris, with one shoe missing and wearing a camouflage cap, was taken to the Miller County Sheriff's Office, where he signed papers waiving his extradition to Texas, deputies said.

Soviets deny ever promising not to shoot espionage 'intruders'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union, disputing the State Department's account, has denied it promised never to shoot intruders on espionage missions against Soviet troops in East Germany.

In a statement issued here, the Soviets called the death of Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson "regrettable" but said they had not "renounced the right to take legitimate steps" to prevent a recurrence. They also denied ever agreeing to consider compensation for the slaying.

The State Department immediately dismissed as "unacceptable" the Soviet version of a meeting of U.S. and Soviet military commanders and stood by its account.

Nicholson was shot while on a reconnaissance mission. After a meeting of the top U.S. and Soviet military officers in Potsdam, East Germany, the State Department announced last Tuesday the Soviets had agreed not to permit "use of force or weapons" against American military liaison personnel.

The statement Monday, signed by Boris Malakhov, a second secretary in the Soviet Embassy, said "one cannot help but be puzzled" by the State Department account.

It went on to accuse the department of presenting the results of the meeting of the military officers "in a distorted light" and said U.S. authorities were entirely responsible for Nicholson's death.

First, the embassy said, the Soviets had not agreed to consider some sort of compensation for Nicholson's death. According to U.S. officials last week, the Soviets had referred the question to "higher authorities" along with a U.S. demand for an apology.

Second, the statement said, the Soviets had not renounced the right to take "legitimate steps" against unknown intruders on intelligence missions. Insisting again that Nicholson and a staff sergeant who accompanied him were on such a mission, the statement said the sentry's actions were "completely lawful."

"They were not taken against a member of the U.S. military mission as such," the statement added, "but against an unknown intruder who was carrying out an intelligence mission and did not comply with the warnings of the sentry."

The State Department stood by its account of the April 12 meeting between Gen. Glenn K. Otis, commander of all U.S. forces in Europe, and Gen. Mikhail S. Zaitsev, the commander of Soviet forces in East Germany.

"We have seen the press reports on the Nicholson case coming from the Soviet Embassy," said Charles Sylvester, a State Department spokesman.

May be good time to buy a farm

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Even as thousands of American farmers go bankrupt every week and rural land prices continue to plummet, the time may be ripe to buy a farm, agriculture analysts say.

Some believe the lowest prices in a decade for land and farm machinery, particularly in the Midwest, now make an attractive investment — provided the investor grows a crop that will have a healthy market in the next few years.

And while success could hinge on the whims of weather and future export demand, lower land prices make the odds more favorable than in the 1970s when many failing farmers bought land at four times today's prices.

"Tell me what the price of corn will be next year and I'll tell you if buying a farm would be a good investment," private analyst Richard Lyng, a former deputy secretary of agriculture, said Monday.

"I would say that in some places, land prices have hit bottom, but in others, we still might have some way to go yet," Lyng continued. "But a corn farm that sells for $1,000 an acre this year is certainly a better buy than when it sold for $3,000 or $4,000 an acre."

Wayne Rasmussen of the Agriculture Department's Economic Research Service said there has been "a considerable amount" of talk among experts recently about the allure of farm investment now that prices are so low.

"A lot of those farms that are being foreclosed are being purchased by other farmers or investors who are leasing out the land," Rasmussen said. "There's still room for prices to drop, but farmland prices are getting closer to what they're worth. In some places, they may even be underpriced."

Rasmussen cautioned that before buying a farm, an investor must first have a sound estimate of crop prices for later this year and for 1986. Next, the buyer must be able to forecast how much it will cost to raise those crops in addition to the price of the land.

Because of those variables, University of Illinois economist John T. Scott, a land-price specialist, recommends that people with low assets consider farming as a tenant, not as a landowner.

Scott said the rate of return on land is likely to continue below prevailing interest rates, so it wouldn't make sense for a young farmer with limited assets to borrow money to buy land.

But beyond raw economics, there is still another factor to consider: the federal government.

The Reagan administration, despite protests from economically strapped farm interests, has proposed a multi-year farm bill for 1985 designed to gradually eliminate price supports and make farmers more reliant on the market for their income.

"It's unclear whether it's a good time to invest because we don't know what the farm bill will look like," said analyst Stephen Gabriel of the Economic Research Service. "A lot of programs that would tend to support the price of farmland may be cut back."

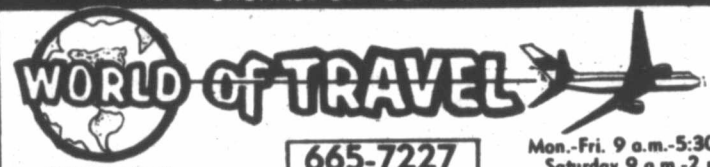

Gabriel added that farm investment prospects vary from region to region. For example, he said, Midwest farmland prices tend to be lower than those in California and Texas.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Increased snow and rain in the West during March improved the prospect of adequate water supplies for most of that region this year, the Agriculture Department says.

Heavy snow and rain fell in southeastern Idaho and eastern Montana and above normal precipitation fell over most of the Great, Colorado and Rio Grande basins, USDA Soil Conservation Service Chief Peter Myers said Monday.

ACCUSED OF "MEDIEVAL TORTURE"—Sgt. Richard A. Fike of Selden, N.Y., is escorted from Queens Borough Hall in New York Monday night after he and another officer were charged with inflicting "medieval torture" on an 18-year-old narcotics suspect with an electric stun gun. (AP Laserphoto)

Officers charged with torturing teen

NEW YORK (AP) — Two police officers charged with burning a young narcotics suspect 43 times with an electric stun gun ignored his pleas for mercy and threatened to "do it all night" unless he confessed, the teen-ager says.

"I was in pain. I was pleading with them to please stop," said Mark Davidson, 18, a high school senior with no prior record who was arrested Wednesday for allegedly selling $10 worth of marijuana.

"The pain was so bad. They said they would do it all night," Davidson said.

Sgt. Richard A. Pike, 50, and officer Jeffrey W. Gilbert, 33, were arrested Monday for the "medieval torture" of Davidson, Queens District Attorney John J. Santucci said.

Both officers face arraignment today on charges of felony assault in the second degree. Their precinct commander, however, said he thought they had been framed by drug dealers.

Davidson's attorney, Marvyn Kornberg, said the officers used the stun gun to extract a false confession that Davidson sold an undercover agent two $5 bags of marijuana on a street.

Davidson said he confessed because the officers administered 43 shocks to his stomach, back and buttocks during 20 minutes with the gun "and they threatened to do it to my groin."

Both Davidson's doctors and a city medical examiner said the burns are consistent with electrical burns.

A search of the stationhouse failed to turn up the device allegedly used on Davidson.

Acting Police Commissioner Patrick J. Murphy suspended both officers without pay. They face dismissal if convicted, said Murphy.

"This kind of behavior will not be tolerated," Murphy told a news conference after the officers' arrest. "There is no room in the Police Department for policemen who engage in this kind of behavior."

Added Mayor Edward I. Koch, "We'll come down on them as best we can like a ton of bricks."

An initial check indicated that neither of the arrested officers had records of abuse or misconduct, said Alice T. McGillion, the Police Department's deputy commissioner for public information.

But Santucci said Pike was accused of participating in abuse of a prisoner 12 years ago. The district attorney did not elaborate.

The commander of the precinct where the officers were based said he believed the charges resulted from a frame-up by drug dealers.

"I think they're false allegations," said Capt. Allen Haughton. "I figure we were hitting them (drug pushers) too hard on the street and this was their way to make us stop."

Santucci said he did not know whether race played a factor in the incident but that the officers, who are white, directed racial epithets at Davidson, a black. "Unfortunately, that's not a crime," Santucci said.

Jury seated in Bandidos drug trial

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Testimony in the second local trial stemming from a nationwide crackdown on the Bandidos motorcycle gang was scheduled to get under way today.

A 10-woman, two-man jury was seated Monday in the trial of Ira John Turner, 47, who is charged with two counts of possession with intent to distribute methamphetamines.

Turner faces a maximum 15 years in prison and a $125,000 fine on each of the charges.

Jury selection in the trial of Oscar Nieto, 31, sergeant-at-arms of the Corpus Christi Bandido's Club, is scheduled for Thursday.

Turner's case is the second to go to trial in federal court here as a result of the Feb. 21 arrests of local Bandidos. The first ended in a mistrial last week after a jury deliberated unsuccessfully for three days.

Jurors were deadlocked 10-2 for acquittal after 17 hours of deliberations on the quartet's multiple drug charges.

The four defendants in that trial were James Lyndon Cheatham, 31; Steven Robert "Boo Boo" Barbour, 39; Patrick "Rawhide" Ledoux, 44; and Karen Karensa Brown Cheatham, 31.

Nelson sings at church dedication

AUSTIN (AP) — He admits it's not his usual haunt, but there he was, Willie Nelson live, on stage — in church.

Nelson, the country singer with the outlaw reputation, joined the Rev. Gerald Mann, pastor of Austin's Riverbend Baptist Church, as the church dedicated its new building over the weekend.

Having turned down an unsolicited offer of $1,000 for two tickets to the Sunday night service, Mann didn't even pass the collection plate.

"The main purpose is for the world to see the other side of Willie," Mann said before the service, explaining how he lured Nelson into the free appearance.

"Willie is a spiritual person. All that's ever advertised is the outlaw image and the seamier side of his life. I love Willie. He's a kind and gentle man and a deeply spiritual man. Most people don't know that," Mann said.

Nelson devilishly threatened to sing "Whiskey River," even strummed two familiar chords.

Mann, pastorally, threatened to preach, even identified his topic as humility. But they reached a compromise. Nelson sang and Mann let the music flow.

Mann said he also got Nelson to sing when he was pastor at the University Baptist Church in 1975, and "at the end of the night there was hardly a dry eye in the place."

This time, Nelson was on stage for more than an hour, singing such songs as "Will the Circle Be Unbroken," "Amazing Grace," and "Uncloudy Day."

The format was picking and reflecting on life and more picking and more reflecting.

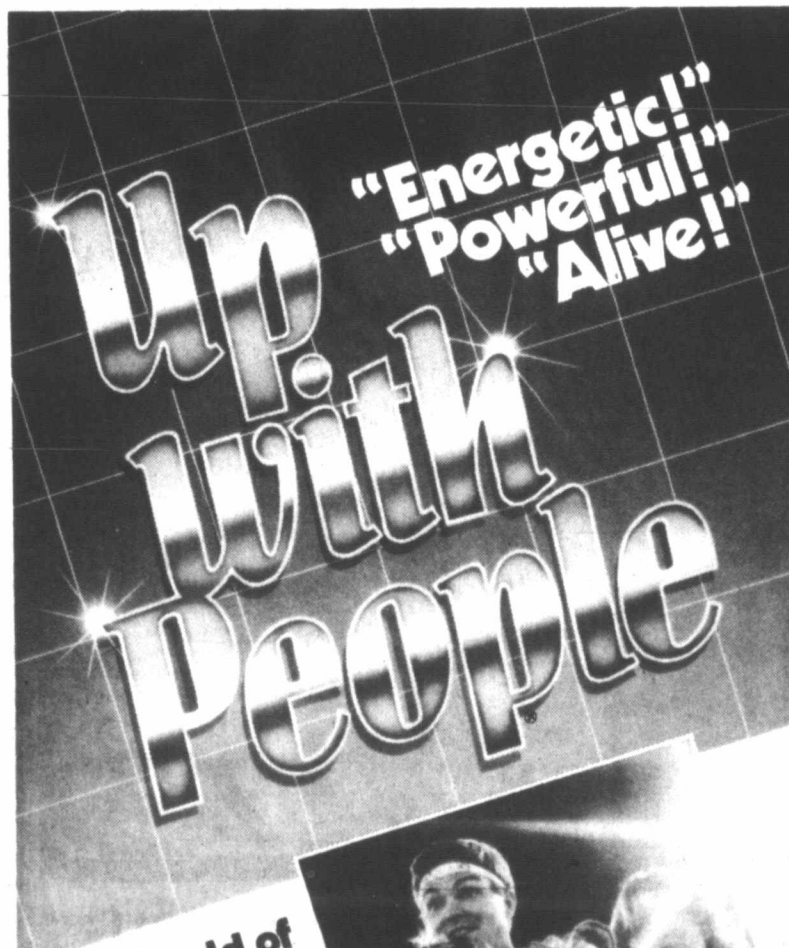

Mann's overture for Nelson to talk about life's tough choices drew this response: "Yes, I believe you get to choose everything. I believe you get to choose your parents before you get here."

After Nelson sang "In God's Eyes," Mann told the congregation and guests how their 1975 duet had gone.

Mann: "Have you been to church since?"

Nelson: "No."
Mann: "Do you send money?"
Nelson: "I've been sending it somewhere."

"He who has clear ideas can command." Goethe

Crack is appearing in once-solid national farm marketing system

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small slice of the Western citrus industry is hoping to harness the Reagan administration's deregulatory philosophy to squeeze out a 50-year-old marketing system, and it has the growers who control the system worried.

The growing controversy is over rules that allow a small board to hold down the amount of oranges and lemons that go into grocery stores each week, and to tell each grower what proportion of that amount he can sell.

The rules are called "marketing orders," and they have been in existence since a 1937 law designed to protect small farmers and ensure an orderly flow of perishable fresh fruit to market at stable prices. There are some 47 separate marketing orders nationwide for fruits, vegetables and nuts, but only 11 of them limit production and sales.

"Our agriculture is working," said Russell Hanlin, president of the Western region's dominant citrus cooperative, Sunkist, at a news conference last week. "This government needs to concentrate on the things that need to be fixed. We're not one of them."

Hanlin said he was concerned that opponents of marketing orders are gaining the upper hand in the lobbying and propaganda war over whether the marketing system should be preserved.

He said small growers, organized into cooperatives like Sunkist, overwhelmingly favor the system because it maintains their prices and preserves stability in the industry.

Removing the marketing orders would cause chaos, he contended, allowing large growers who want them removed to run roughshod over small growers and eventually put them out of business.

Adding to Sunkist's worries is the fact that Agriculture Secretary John Block in January, in a rare move that surprised many growers, lifted the system temporarily for this year's navel orange crop. The move had long been sought by administration officials with a philosophical antipathy for government regulation.

Marketing orders are essentially a form of government-sponsored supply control, a concept the administration vehemently opposes for other farm commodities and which it is trying to eliminate in the 1985 omnibus farm legislation now being developed by Congress.

Ted Turner delights conservatives

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is something about CBS that drives conservatives up the wall, and now they are getting a chance to see the giant network sweat a little.

But just what is it about CBS that outrages conservatives so much more than the other networks? Talk to many conservatives and it becomes clear there is no single answer. It can range from a longstanding dislike of anchorman Dan Rather to a populist perception that the network's board of directors epitomizes the big money, Eastern establishment — the foundations and the Rockefeller family.

Whatever their complaints about CBS, conservatives are united in their delight at the effort by Ted Turner to bring off a hostile takeover of the network. CBS executives are vowing to fight the Turner takeover attempt.

Turner, whose broadcast properties include Cable News Network, said his company has "no connection with any ideological or other group in this transaction."

Daughter of millionaire entertains for God

By HELEN PARMLEY
The Dallas Morning News
DALLAS (AP) — In nearly every family, there is one member who does the unexpected. Who would have predicted that June Hunt, reared in the grandeur provided by her oil-rich father, H.L. Hunt, would become a Bible teacher and Christian entertainer?

Certainly not Miss Hunt. "After college, I had no idea what I would do," she said. "I just thought — four years of college, get married and go on from there." That was the American way, and certainly the Texas way, when Miss Hunt was a happy-go-lucky student at Southern Methodist University in the 1960s. But a twist of fate and an unwitting assist by her father turned her life around and led her into a career and lifestyle far different from those of other family members.

June Hunt travels the country as a conference leader and speaker, a musical performer, a recording artist and an author. She does it all with one goal in mind — to inspire her audience to enter into a personal relationship with God. "There is a vast difference between relating to God and entering into a relationship with God," she said. "The essence of what God wants us to be is the best person you can be, to try hard. After all, once you've tried your hardest what more could God expect?"

Miss Hunt is the second child of Hunt and his wife, Ruth. She has an older brother, Ray, and two younger sisters, Helen and Swanee, and was reared on the luxurious White Rock Lake landmark Hunt estate with maids and gardeners, dinner parties and private schools.

Her transformation from a rich, young student with no direction for her life to a guitar-playing singer and speaker with a message began on a family visit to her grandmother's when she was a young girl.

"We'd sing all the way, make up little songs and sing," she said. "Dad and mother loved to sing."

"Then, all through my teenage years, Dad would have me sing. Oh, I was in such an awkward stage. There was no way I could have sounded melodious. He had me sing in front of company, and it seemed we always had company."

Hunt always called on his daughter to sing after dinner, and she recalls she was so embarrassed that as soon as dinner ended she would run up to her room and hide.

"When he called I wouldn't answer," she said. "But he outfoxed me. He started calling on me in the middle of dinner. I would have just taken a bite of mashed potatoes. I would stammer — put on this delay tactic, and he'd yell out, 'Sing. Sing something.'"

"I would say I didn't know what to sing, but he always wanted the same thing. 'Everything is up to Date in Kansas City,' and I'd always sing it."

Remembering those awkward moments of her youth, Miss Hunt cringes and even blushes. But she also reflects on the redeeming qualities of the special, loving relationship she shared with her father, who died in 1974.

"I tell you," she said, "I do so appreciate those times. In retrospect, I've seen how, and really thank God for, the way in which Dad would do certain things. While I was singing, he would actually yell out, 'Put some sweeping arm action into it,' and I would feel my face flush."

"Yet, because of that, I learned that if I'm supposed to sing, if I have been given a responsibility, if I have been given a stewardship of time, it does not make any difference if I feel sick, am hurt or tired. I can do it, and I will do it the best I can, to the glory of God."

Evangelist Billy Graham and Dallas business woman Mary Crowley saw this discipline during a Graham crusade a few years ago in Jackson, Miss., where Miss Hunt was featured singer.

"Shortly before she was to sing, it began pouring down rain," Mrs. Crowley said. "The wind was blowing, and people ran from the stadium. But when it came time for June to perform, she just ignored the weather and kept on singing for the Lord."

"It was a terrible night, but she was determined to give the audience what they came to hear," said Graham, who wrote the foreword to Miss Hunt's book, "Above All Else."

Miss Hunt dedicated the book to her father, "from whom I gained many insights which I didn't realize I was learning at the time." Although he was one of the world's wealthiest men, Hunt was well-known for being tight fisted with money. Reporters who called him for an interview often were invited to his office for lunch. Expecting a noontime feast, they invariably were stunned when Hunt would pull two brown bag lunches from his desk drawer. Prepared by his maid, they always contained a sandwich and a piece of fruit.

It's a familiar trail to his daughter June, who smiled and said, "I'm known as a penny pincher. I don't spend money just to spend money. That's foreign to me. Whatever I have is by a merciful act of God, and I must be responsive and responsible to it."

Her staff does all her shopping, but they laugh affectionately as they tell about watching Miss Hunt clip grocery and drug coupons from the daily newspaper or going around her home turning off lights.

"When she needs a new coat, she waits until there is a sale," said

Lori Rippert, one of Miss Hunt's closest friends. "She'd rather not go out for dinner — unless there is a two-for-one coupon."

"Actually, she is a very giving person. She's very generous to others. But she is a good steward and would rather not spend any money on herself."

Miss Hunt's North Dallas home is tastefully decorated in Early American styles, with overstuffed furniture and a few antiques.

"If it weren't for her mother, it would be decorated at a discount store," quipped one friend. "She and her mother are very close, and her mother comes over to the house and says, 'Now, June, what will we get for this room?' That's how the house was decorated."

A large den in Miss Hunt's home has vaulted ceilings equipped with spotlight and sound system, and a step-up stage holds a grand piano. It is there that she leads weekly Precepts studies, an intensive Bible study that includes homework and deep discussion. It is there that she leads weekly

Precepts studies, an intensive Bible study that includes homework and deep discussion.

"June has a great knowledge of the Bible," said Dr. W.A. Criswell, pastor at First Baptist Church, where Miss Hunt served several years as youth director and now teaches a Bible class. "She is also a gifted singer. She goes all over this earth singing and talking about the gospel. She has given her life to the work of the Lord."

The Hunts didn't join First Baptist Church until the children were grown.

"I came from a non-Bible background," Miss Hunt said. "I was raised in a mainline denomination, but we never took a Bible, never saw what God had to say. The sermon — a couple jokes, little biblical content and a lot of humanism."

"My father was not a Christian at the time he had us join First Baptist Church, a church that actually taught the Bible. I didn't want to go, but he forced me into it. He liked the patriotic bent of Dr.

Criswell. His motive was patriotic, I think. Dad was very patriotic."

Her father had the whole family rebaptized, she said, and in the next few years, she relearned what it meant to be a committed Christian.

"I had to deal with terms such as being born-again, spiritual rebirth," she said. "I had physical ears, but I learned to hear with spiritual ears and to hear His call."

"I learned that salvation is not of works — it's not like earning your wings. I saw people who had an inner depth that I did not have and I learned that God wants us all to be in a position to be in a position to accomplish what we were created for."

Just as she knows her name has opened some doors, she is aware it also has put up some barriers she has had to overcome.

"It's like you're not a real person who never had any hurts and disappointments."

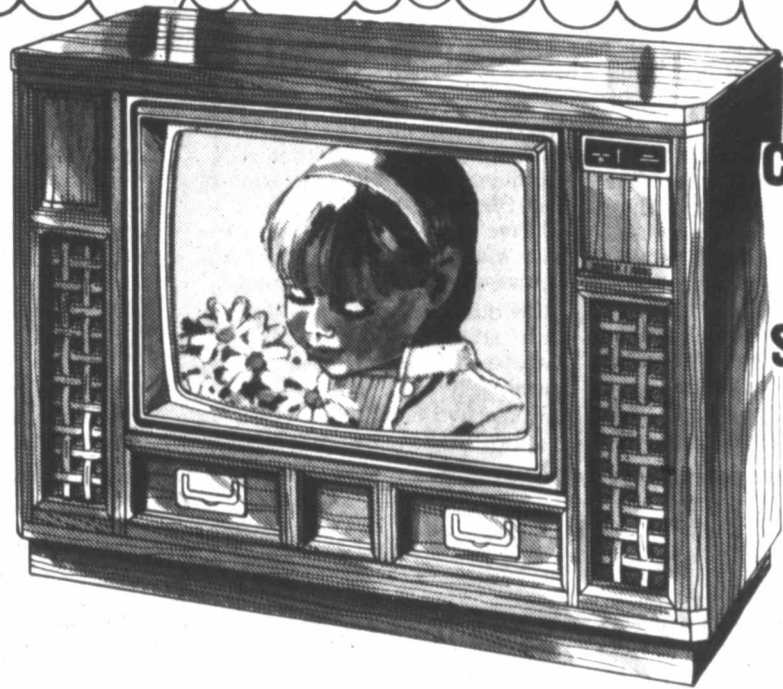

"I had to get past this to say what I wanted to say."

Designer ideas

Sometimes it may seem as if the world is inhabited by two different groups: professional designers and the rest of us.

In spaces decorated by the former, the plants are healthy, there is always a pencil and pad near the telephone, and a convenient place for overnight guests to sleep. Meanwhile, the rest of us search in vain for something to write on, have to turn the children out of their beds to accommodate visitors and reveal our black thumbs in droopy house plants.

The chasm can, however, be bridged. One method is for interviewers to ask prize-winning designers for decorating suggestions. As a recent crop of ideas from winners of this year's Hexter Awards for residential and commercial interiors indicates, good ideas can be used by anyone searching for a better way.

When it comes to choosing a color scheme, for example, both first-place winners suggested that permanent installations such as most walls, floors and major upholstery be in neutral colors. Accent these with small splashes of color on one wall or in accessories such as cushions. Tiring of the original scheme, as you will eventually, it can be changed inexpensively and quickly by changing the accents.

Plan in advance for rooms to fulfill more than one function, suggested the residential winner, if you are like most Americans who use rooms for a variety of activities ranging from relaxing to pursuing hobbies to doing paperwork or even running a second business. Placing some furniture on casters and selecting light, easy-to-move pieces can make rearrangement easier.

Often the unconventional idea is the better one when it comes to arranging residential space, said Janet Rosenberg of Design Studio in Upper Montclair, N.J. Her firm's prize-winning residential entry was a Manhattan apartment that had been turned from a two-bedroom into a one-bedroom apartment. Although two bedrooms are considered more desirable, her clients live informally and often entertain large groups. As a result, removing the wall between a bedroom and the living room to make one large living-entertainment space (with an el reserved for overnight guests) was a good idea.

Before pulling down walls, she suggests you try to open up your space with less costly tricks of the trade. For example, you can often

Dear Abby

Get the cold hard facts about hard-cooked eggs

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You gave the erroneous impression that hard-cooked eggs (especially those that have been colored) are unsafe to eat after one day. As the test kitchen supervisor of the American Egg Board, I hasten to inform you that properly cooked, cooled and stored hard-cooked eggs are quite safe to eat for at least a week.

Certainly, cracked eggs, or eggs that have been out of refrigeration for up to 24 hours even under the best of conditions, should not be eaten. If the weather is very hot, the time element should probably be shortened. In a home situation, colored eggs that have been kept refrigerated as much as possible following the coloring, dyeing and hunting processes should also be safe for up to one week.

Easter egg hunts conducted by park districts or community groups pose a more hazardous risk because unless eggs are properly refrigerated, there can be considerable risk. A food poisoning outbreak at a Modesto, Calif., egg hunt last year received considerable press coverage, but in that case, the hundreds of eggs involved were not properly handled, so the results were not surprising.

I am enclosing a pamphlet containing some valuable information about the incredible edible egg, along with the five basic methods of egg cooking.

KAY ENGELHARDT,
AMERICAN EGG BOARD

DEAR KAY: Thank you for writing. The face with the egg on it is mine. But all's well that ends well, because I found your pamphlet to be a real treasure. It contains recipes for the five basic methods of egg cooking: fried, scrambled, cooked-in-the-shell, poached and baked. There are also simple instructions for preparing omelets. I was especially fascinated to learn how to hard-cook an egg properly. (I did not know that boiling causes a green ring to form around the yolk, and makes the egg tough and difficult to peel.)

Readers, you may obtain this pamphlet by writing to: American Egg Board, 1460 Renaissance, Park Ridge, Ill. 60068.

It's free, but please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Have you lost your sense of humor? "November Bride" wrote to say that her fiance insists that when they feed each other the first two pieces of wedding cake, they should grind it into each other's faces. She doesn't want to go along with this, but her fiance is adamant. She turned to you for advice and you told her to take a second look at her fiance—that marriage to him might not be a piece of cake.

Remember what Marie Antoinette said: "Let 'em eat cake." ELLEN

DEAR ELLEN: Yes, and look what happened to her.

DEAR ABBY: I've led fund-raising programs to build two volunteer fire stations. Most people are eager to support their volunteer fire departments, but once in a while you find a dingbat who expects firefighters to risk their lives to save his property for free.

I know of $2 million country clubs whose staff called their volunteer fire departments to fight kitchen fires many times, but wouldn't give a dime to help build a new station.

CHARLOTTE, N.C.

Designer

remove a door and widen a doorway.

Large spaces do require some sort of division, but room dividers do not have to be walls. "You can hang a textile from a track, or use a wooden grid or a bookcase or other storage piece that only goes part-way to the ceiling," she suggested.

One of the greatest advantages of lowering partitions or eliminating walls is the increase in light it often brings, as daylight is borrowed from another space. Natural light is often not recognized as an important contributor to a pleasant room, but it remains one of the designer's little-known trump cards, she said.

The Hexter Awards (which have been given for 27 years by the Cleveland-based fabric firm) also singled out the Los Angeles Design Studio for its commercial design project.

The firm, headed by Joel M. Bernstein, created a new office for a law firm. Though the project was quite different from the residential winners', Bernstein noted that many of the same principles apply to commercial and residential decorating.

A technique that is useful, no matter what type of space is being considered, is to provide something attractive for the eye to observe as one moves through a space.

"There should be a series of focal points as one turns a corner. These don't have to be large and dramatic. A vase of flowers on a table, a subtle change in wall color, a painting or other art object displayed as one moves through a space are all effective," he said.

Changes in scale also provide the necessary counterpoint. If, for example, you have a dramatic two-story living room, accentuate its strength by lowering the ceiling in your vestibule.

"Don't date yourself with color by choosing what's currently fashionable," Rosenberg said. If, however, neutrals do not appeal, then take another tack. Bernstein noted that some color combinations, while emphatic, nevertheless continue to look attractive regardless of what is in fashion. Among these winning color schemes he enumerated red and white, black and white, and blue and white.

Another combination — and the one his firm employed in its winning entry — is red, gray, black and white.

Gunslingers' ballcarrier Jerry Gordon picks up short yardage before being tackled by the Invaders' John Sullivan.

Invaders topple Gunslingers

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Invaders looked invincible during the first half of their USFL Monday night game against San Antonio.

But in the second half, they left much to be desired. Oakland's 27-20 victory over the Gunslingers proved that the 5-3-1 Invaders are capable of getting on top and staying there, but head coach Charlie Sumner still has his doubts.

"I'm not happy with the way we won," said Sumner. "We lost something in the second half. It was not something to be proud of."

"We had a let down after coming out with good intensity and making some big plays. There was no consistency. We just couldn't put them away," he said.

The Invaders took advantage of San Antonio quarterback Rick Neuheisel's five turnovers in the first half and jumped out to a 20-0 lead. But they got a scare when Neuheisel threw three touchdown passes in the second half to rally the 3-6 Gunslingers.

"We gave the game away in the first half," said San Antonio Jim Bates. "It was encouraging to see us fight back, but we just turned the ball over too many times and made too many mistakes."

Neuheisel was intercepted once and fumbled two times in the first period. The Invaders capitalized on each giveaway, scoring a pair of touchdowns and a field goal for a quick 17-0 lead.

In the second quarter, Neuheisel fumbled again and was intercepted in the end zone, but the Invaders could not put San Antonio away.

Oakland place kicker Novo Bojovic hit a 52-yard field goal however, to make it 20-0 at halftime.

Neuheisel played hurt during the first half after Oakland linebacker David Shaw delivered a crushing hit during San Antonio's first offensive series. "That early pop definitely left me foggy," said Neuheisel, who completed 13 of 22 passes for 208 yards. "I was seeing stars every time I'd take a step. I probably shouldn't have been in there, but I wanted to make up for the mistakes."

Neuheisel played flawlessly in the final two periods, hitting wide receiver Jerry Gordon on touchdown passes of 12 and 44 yards and running back Don Roberts with a 7-yard scoring pass.

Rangers' Hough ends Orioles' jinx

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

After Opening Day this season, Charlie Hough was wondering if his knuckleball would ever beat the Baltimore Orioles.

"I have had a pretty tough time in the past with this ballclub," Hough said Monday night after twirling a two-hitter to lead the Texas Rangers past the Orioles 6-1.

Hough had lost all five of his prior decisions against the Orioles, although one of his more frustrating outings was a no-decision on Opening Day in Baltimore.

That afternoon he pitched six innings without allowing a hit. But he was taken out of the game trailing 2-1 after walking eight batters.

This time, in Arlington, Texas, Hough retired the final 19 Baltimore batters. Along the way, he walked just two while striking out eight.

"I had pretty good control and the six runs didn't hurt," said Hough, 1-0. "I felt if we got a couple of runs, we could win."

In other AL games, Cleveland beat Detroit 6-4, Kansas City trimmed Toronto 2-0, Milwaukee defeated Chicago 4-2, Minnesota pounded Seattle 9-5, and California downed Oakland 6-1.

Indians 6, Tigers 4
Tony Bernazard continued his strong start with an RBI single during a three-run fourth inning and a double that sparked a three-run seventh. Bernazard, who hit just .221 last season, is 9-for-21 so far in 1985.

Detroit rookie third baseman Chris Pittaro had an RBI single in the top of the fourth, but made an error in the bottom half of the inning to open the gates for Cleveland.

Jack Leonard, 2-2, took the loss.

Don Schulze, 1-0, went seven innings for the victory.

Royals 2, Blue Jays 0

In Toronto, Charlie Leibrandt was in control with a five-hitter and Steve Balboni and Darryl Motley homered for Kansas City's runs.

Leibrandt, 2-0, pitched his second straight complete game.

Balboni, the AL's Player of the Week for the period that ended Sunday, connected in the fourth off Dave Stieb, 1-2. Balboni extended his hitting streak to seven games with his fourth homer of the season. He has driven home seven runs in his last five games.

Motley hit his second home run in the eighth, also off Stieb.

Twins 9, Mariners 5
Kirby Puckett hit his first major league home run — barely — to highlight Minnesota's 16-hit attack.

Puckett's three-run homer just cleared the left field wall and came on his 613th at-bat in the majors. He had 557 at-bats as a rookie last year. Puckett also singled twice.

Ken Schrom, 1-2, retired the first 12 Seattle batters. Reliever Rick Lysander earned his first save.

Brewers 4, White Sox 2
Milwaukee has hit just three home runs in 11 games this season, and Bill Schroeder has two of them. One of those was a two-run shot in the eighth inning that carried the Brewers past host Chicago.

Schoeder's game-winner came off reliever Juan Agosto, 0-1. Rich Dotson, taken off the disabled list earlier Monday after an elbow problem, departed in the seventh.

Danny Darwin, 2-0, went seven innings for the victory and Rollie Fingers finished up for his second save.

Angels 6, A's 1
Doug DeCinces and Juan Beniquez connected for solo home runs and Jim Slaton allowed just three hits over eight innings in Anaheim, Calif.

DeCinces homered in the fourth to make it 1-1.

NL roundup

Hawkins hurls San Diego past Atlanta, 5-3

By The Associated Press

Six months later, Andy Hawkins is still pitching as if the San Diego Padres were in the World Series.

The lanky right-hander from Texas, whose sparkling middle-inning relief work was in sharp contrast to San Diego's general pitching collapse against the Detroit Tigers last October, has picked up where he left off by winning his first three starts.

He scattered two hits over seven innings Monday night as the Padres beat the Atlanta Braves 5-3.

"The playoffs made a world of difference. It's like night and day. It was a real confidence-builder," said Hawkins, who struggled at times in amassing an 8-9 regular-season record but then allowed only four hits and one run in 15 2-3 innings of post-season work. "Now I know what I've got to do in a situation and I go out and do it."

In other NL action Monday, Pedro Guerrero ruined Dave LaPoint's one-hitter with a two-out, two-run home run in the ninth, and Dave Anderson added a solo homer in the 10th as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the San Francisco Giants 3-2.

Glenn Wilson hit a two-run homer and Von Hayes drove in four runs in Philadelphia's 9-1 romp over the Montreal Expos.

Mike Scott and Dave Smith combined on a five-hitter as Houston beat Cincinnati 4-1 to halt the Reds' seven-game win streak.

Darryl Strawberry and George Foster homered to help the New York Mets shade St. Louis 7-6.

And left-hander Larry McWilliams, going past the fifth inning for the first time, scattered seven hits in 7 1-3 innings to help Pittsburgh beat the Chicago Cubs 5-3.

"I'm throwing the ball a lot better right now. I'm not getting behind the hitter," said Hawkins, who sports a 2.61 earned run average. "I'm throwing strikes."

One of those strikes became a three-run, first-inning home run off the bat of Dale Murphy, but Hawkins limited Atlanta to one hit over the balance of his seven-inning stint. He retired the last 18 batters he faced and Rich Gossage extended the string to 24 by pitching the last two innings for his second save.

Zane Smith, 1-1, recorded the loss.

Dodgers 3, Giants 2
LaPoint, 0-3, no-hit the Dodgers until Mike Marshall singled leading off the seventh, and took a one-hit shutout into the ninth. But with two outs in the ninth, he walked Marshall and Guerrero tagged the next pitch into the left-field bleachers to tie the game.

Astros 4, Reds 1
Scott, 1-0, allowed only three hits and an unearned run through eight innings, but surrendered singles to Dave Parker and Wayne Krenchicki in the ninth to prompt a call for Smith, who earned his second save. Jay Tibbs, 0-3, was the loser for Cincinnati.

Phillies 9, Expos 1
Garry Maddox snapped a 1-1 tie with a two-run, fifth-inning double and Wilson capped a five-run, eighth-inning uprising with a two-run homer as the Phillies won their third straight.

Cole wins Merchants Classic Crosby family severs tie with pro-am golf tourney

Forrest Cole defeated Rick McElliott, 238-165, to win the Pampa Merchants Bowling Classic last weekend at Harvester Lanes.

Pampa Merchants donated $560, which made it the largest prize fund ever for the annual Classic. The Pampa Bowling Association gave an additional $300 to the prize fund.

McElliott was the No. 1 qualifier going into Sunday's stepladder finals. He had the best 10-game series during Saturday's elimination tournament.

In Sunday's opening match, Roy Don Stephens defeated Jim Eakin, 189-173, then lost to Mike Hutcherson, 183-170. Cole defeated Hutcherson, 258-142, to set up the final game with McElliott.

Cole pocketed $325 while McElliott collected $200. Hutcherson, $100; Stephens, $70, and Eakin, $50. Other bowlers placing and their earnings included Russell Eakin, sixth, $35; LeRoy Proctor, seventh, $30; Howard Musgrave, eighth, $25; Rickey Bryan, ninth, $21; Ade Becker, tenth, $19; Joe Wilson Jr., eleventh, $18, and Buddy Epperson, twelfth, $15.

Russell Eakin and Stephens each shot a 244 to share high-game honors. Bowlers who had the high game during each round of Saturday's qualifying tourney received $30 each. They were Jim Eakin, Russell Eakin, David Horton, Epperson, Bob Shelton, Cole, McElliott, Hutcherson, Stephens and Becker. John Valdez, the last-place finisher, received a family-style dinner for two at Dyer's Bar-B-Que.

Tournament sponsors included Harvester Lanes, Bill's Grocery, Donny Nail, Keyes Pharmacy, Chase Oil, Builders Plumbing, Quarles Electric, B & G Electric, Elliott's Glass, Hale Cattle Company, First State Bank of Miami, Pampa Concrete, Houston Lumber, Dale's Auton, Dyer's Bar-B-Que, Pampa News, Titan, Crossman Implement, Star Dust Supper Club, and Malcolm Hinkle.

Crosby family severs tie with pro-am golf tourney

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, which has paired Hollywood stars with professional golfers over the years to raise millions for charity, will no longer carry the Crosby name after a decision by the family to sever all ties to the tournament.

In her announcement Monday, Kathryn Crosby, Bing's widow, cited corporate "exploitation" of the event as the main reason for the family's move.

Deane Beman, commissioner of the PGA Tour, said he regretted the Crosby family's decision, but said the tournament will continue, under a different name with a different sponsor.

The "Old Clambake," as the tourney was called since its inception in 1937, has been one of golf's premier events.

"For 40 years, Bing resisted all attempts to commercialize his yearly gathering of friends," Mrs. Crosby said in a statement released by family friend Ben Langella.

"Now the wrong elements have seized control of what was Bing's tournament and they are determined to transform the Old Clambake into just another corporate sideshow for the PGA.

"Bing would never have permitted such exploitation of his name," she said.

Her son, golfer Nathaniel Crosby, who has been the official host of the tournament since his father's death on a golf course in Spain in 1977, agreed with the decision, according to a family representative.

The tournament, which raised about $1 million annually for charity, will continue, chairman William Borland said Monday night after a closed-door meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation, which runs the event.

"The tournament ... will hopefully generate even more money for the charities," he said, adding that discussions continue with an undisclosed company, reportedly AT&T, to sponsor the event.

A source close to the tournament and Mrs. Crosby said she decided to break off from the tournament because of "behind the scenes" activity involving the PGA, the foundation's executive committee and AT&T, a potential sponsor.

"There are some people on the board down there (at Pebble Beach) that want to grab for the money," the source said. He said Mrs. Crosby believed that a member of the foundation was getting a $50,000 to $150,000 finder's fee from a potential corporate sponsor.

Beman said Kathryn Crosby's characterization of events involving the tournament was "erroneous. I am convinced that is not the case."

Lou Russo, chairman of the executive committee of the Crosby tournament in Monterey, said he would not respond to the accusation about a finder's fee.

"It's just ridiculous ... I'm sure you'll hear a lot of everything," Russo said.

Sutcliffe is apostle of Cubmania

CHICAGO (NEA) — Cubmania, the fervor surrounding Chicago's National League baseball team, has profoundly affected Richard Lee Sutcliffe.

He first became aware of it last summer on the afternoon of June 24 when he was scheduled to make his first home start as a newly arrived Cub.

"They announced my name as the pitcher," recalls Sutcliffe, "and people went crazy. I never had that reaction before."

He remembers saying to Chicago pitching coach Billy Connors: "I don't know how to take this. It makes me nervous."

It made Sutcliffe so nervous he went out and pitched a five-hit shut-out, one of the 16 victories (against one loss) he contributed to the Cubs in 1984. And his pitching helped to lead Chicago to the NL East championship, the first title of any kind for the Cubs since 1945.

His 16-1 record and the Cy Young Award as the National League's top pitcher (he was 4-5 with Cleveland last season before the June trade) catapulted Sutcliffe to a new contract. It will pay the tall (6-foot-7) right-hander $1.8 million annually for the next five years.

Rick is not exactly apologetic about the money — "I did not award myself that salary. I don't have to justify it" — but he is modest about the success that induced it.

"I had a lot of help," he insists. "I'm not trying to sound overly modest. I obviously pitched better than I've ever pitched before. But they scored six runs a ball game for me (111 runs in 20 Cubs outings, to be exact). It doesn't mean you're going to win — but you're never going to lose. The manager's not going to leave you in."

Now the Cubmania fan mail keeps pouring into Sutcliffe's cubicle in the team's dressing room, a box-full daily. This dumfounds the 28-year-old pitcher who whose career had virtually come to a halt four years ago.

"It doesn't have a lot to do with Rick Sutcliffe," he claims, applying the third person to himself as he waves toward the overflow pile of letters. "It comes from the fact that I'm with the Cubs. A lot of people are pulling for the Cubs. Rick Sutcliffe has played baseball for 12 years."

The implication is clear. The fabulous 1984 season was the product of perfect timing. In June, he was traded from a team (Cleveland) that was 25 games out of first place to a team (the Cubs) that had a four-game lead.

"That can motivate a person," Sutcliffe says. "It was fun being in a pennant race basically for the first time."

True, the Los Angeles Dodgers — with whom he broke into the majors in 1979 as a 17-game winner and National League rookie of the year — were world champions in 1981. But by then Sutcliffe had been relegated to the bullpen as a little-used middle reliever; he pitched a total of 47 innings. He wasn't even included on the post-season roster (and he tore up the manager's office in a fit of fury).

Sutcliffe's career was revived the next year when he was traded to Cleveland, which is like playing summer stock right after a Broadway hit show.

At first, though, the Indians, too, kept him in relief.

"While I was in the bullpen," he says, "I came up with a slider. The Dodgers don't believe in the slider. I'd never pitched relief, and I had a big curve ball. Working once every two weeks in long relief, I couldn't get it over. But after two days with the Indians, throwing the slider on the side, they put me in a game. Five outings later, I had two saves and two wins. I got a start and went from there."

"After I got back into the rotation, I went back to the big curve ball, threw it to get ahead of people, then the slider and the fast ball to get them out. It gave me another dimension. Now the slider's my big out pitch."

Paper says Wheeler took steroids

WACO, Texas (AP) — When former Baylor basketball player John Wheeler wanted anabolic steroids, he went to Dr. Walter F. Hart, a Gladewater physician and Baylor Medical School graduate.

Hart said Wheeler probably learned of him through other Baylor students — weightlifters — who had gone to his clinic for anabolic steroid prescriptions.

"I'm sure that's where he found out," Hart told the Waco Tribune-Herald.

The Tribune-Herald said it learned that Wheeler took the prescribed steroids in an effort to gain weight and strength.

"He (Wheeler) told me he was tired of (former University of Houston star Akeem) Olajuwon pushing him around," Hart said.

Former Baylor basketball coach Jim Haller said he knew about Wheeler's interest in the controversial drug. But he also said he didn't know if Wheeler took the potent hormone derivative.

Wheeler's taping of a conversation in which he and Haller discussed steroids and a $172 car payment he was given led to the coach's resignation Feb. 22.

Later, Haller and other Baylor athletic officials said they doubted whether Wheeler ever actually took steroids.

And Monday night, Haller reiterated to The Associated Press that "I never knew, and I still don't know, if John ever took a steroid."

"I told them (the Tribune-Herald) that at one time last fall, Wheeler asked me if I knew anything about steroids," he said. I told him I didn't know anything about them.

Hart said he examined Wheeler in his clinic and prescribed a well-known anabolic steroid named Dianabol to him about a year ago. The prescription, Hart said, called for five-milligram pills taken three times a day for three months.

Spurs hope homecourt advantage holds up

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs are hoping the Denver Nuggets won't be able to melt the Ice Age when the two square off tonight in their first-round National Basketball Association playoff game.

San Antonio, running in high gear after a last-minute 113-111 victory over the Nuggets Saturday, have a home-court advantage that has left Denver winless in San Antonio for its last 15 games there.

But "having the home court is not as big an advantage during the playoffs," Spurs coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said.

"They haven't won since the Ice Age in San Antonio. We haven't won since the Stone Age in Denver," he added. "But we proved that wrong by winning Saturday."

Denver coach Doug Moe discounts that home-court advantage, too.

"We know it's a tough situation to go down there and win, but we won 18 road games this year and good teams are capable of winning in tough spots," he said.

"This is a different team," Moe said. "As far as this team is concerned, we've lost three in a row down there (this season). That's like saying what Houston did before they got (Ralph) Sampson and (Akeem) Olajuwon means anything now."

Fitzsimmons predicted tonight's game would be much like Saturday's hard-fought contest.

"The playoffs are going to be a real dogfight," he said.

Fitzsimmons says the Spurs, tied 1-1 with the Nuggets in a best-of-five series, have put their embarrassing 141-111 playoff-opening loss to Denver behind them after breaking their eight-game losing streak in Denver Saturday.

Spurs star shooter George Gervin, who had not played in 20 days before the playoffs began, pumped in 41 points Saturday.

Wheeler boys win district meet

HIGGINS — Wheeler boys won the District 2-1A track championship held here Saturday.

The Mustangs racked up 163½ points, compared to 152 for second-place Gruver. Miami finished sixth with 25 points.

Individually, Wheeler's Larry Trevino won the long jump with a leap of 20-11 and Todd Alvey won the 110 hurdles with a time of 15.6. Trevino also placed third in the 400 while Alvey was second in the 200 hurdles.

Brad Francis of Miami won the pole vault, clearing 12-9. Francis also placed third in the high jump.

Others placing for Wheeler were Rodney Bond, second, discus; Cody Wiggins, third, long jump; Steven Snapp, third, pole vault; Joel Dodd, second 110 hurdles; Dale Hazel, third, Wheeler, and David Jones, second, 3200.

Wheeler also placed second in both the 1600 and 400-relay events.

In the girls' division, Miami finished second behind Gruver in the final results. Gruver had 123 points while Miami had 111.

Wheeler was seventh with 21.

Lanette Lisenby led the Warriorettes with two first-place finishes. Miss Lisenby won both the long jump (16-7½) and 400 (62.0). Also winning for Miami were Kara Benge, shot put (36-0¼) and Toni Richardson, 3200 (13:22.9). Miss Richardson also placed second in the 1600.

T. Alvey of Wheeler was third in the 800 and Lori Gill of Miami was second in both the 800-relay and 400.

X-rated movies lead to dissatisfaction, researchers say

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Watching too many X-rated movies and videotapes can cause people to become dissatisfied with their sexual partners' physical appearance and bedroom techniques, two pornography researchers say.

"Massively exposed individuals held marriage and the family in diminished regard," Jennings Bryant of the University of Houston and Dr. Dolf Zillmann of Indiana University concluded after a five-year study.

They say the finding is based on tests in which some subjects were shown 36 non-violent, non-coercive "soft-core" porn films over a six-week period while other people were shown 36 "innocuous" films.

The test subjects viewing the porn movies rated their satisfaction with their partners at 3.88 on a scale in which zero represented no satisfaction and 10 meant extreme satisfaction.

The people not shown the X-rated movies had a satisfaction score of 5.47, according to the researchers, who presented their findings Monday at a press conference sponsored by a non-profit conservative group, the Child and Family Protection Institute of the Free Congress Foundation.

The researchers said the porn watchers also rated their partners lower in terms of physical appearance, sexual behavior and "desire to explore novel sexual practices."

The researchers said, however, that "No ill effects on general happiness and satisfaction nor on professional satisfaction were observed" among the group that watched the X-rated films.

"However, those who were heavy viewers of pornography reported substantial dissatisfaction with their own sexual situation and with their sexual partner," Bryant and Zillmann said.

Challenging a conclusion reached 15 years ago by a presidential commission on pornography, they said that "repeated exposure to nonviolent, soft-core pornography can produce ... harmful social and psychological effects ..."

"Massively exposed individuals also exhibited a loss of concern about the potential ill effects of pornography on others, and they saw less of a need to restrict pornography," they said.

"Most importantly, women and especially men who had been massively exposed ... came to look at rape as a reasonably trivial offense," the researchers said.

They stated that heavy viewers not only lost their initial revulsion to the soft-core X-rateds but wound up with "less revulsion to hard-core, sexually violent pornography."

The subjects in the porn-viewing group also had "distorted perceptions" of sexual practices in society, they said.

Attending the press conference was Barry W. Lynn, legislative counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union. He said the studies were "nothing terribly new, a rehash of old and flawed studies, none of which establish that pornography incites people to criminal behavior."

Link between cancer and drinking water to be studied

HOUSTON (AP) — Radioactivity in drinking water along the Texas coast — where the incidence of lung cancer is high — may be a more serious health threat than state officials believe, a researcher says.

Whenever the level of radioactivity level in a public water supply exceeds federally set limits, state law requires the supplier to notify customers and take steps towards a solution.

Six utilities in north and northwest Harris County, serving 20,000 to 25,000 customers, are now in that position, health officials say.

Dr. Irina Cech, an associate professor at the University of Texas School of Public Health, said the utilities should move quickly to reduce their radioactivity levels.

The presence of the radioactive substances radium and radon in Houston-area water is a health hazard, but scientists don't know how much of a health hazard the radioactivity presents, she said.

The Texas Gulf Coast, home to numerous petrochemical plants, has long been identified as an area where lung cancer among white men is extremely high.

Charles F. Contant, a research associate at the University of Texas School of Public Health, found that while the national incidence is about 43 deaths per 100,000 population, the incidence for the counties of Orange, Jefferson, Chambers, Galveston and Brazoria is 47.8 per 100,000.

Possible causes other than the water, including occupations in industries with a high cancer risk, do not account entirely for the finding, Dr. Cech said.

Federal standards for radioactivity in water involve radium, a substance linked to bone cancer. But Ms. Cech said radon gas — a substance believed to cause lung cancer.

Former 'American Business Woman of the Year' accused of embezzlement

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A woman once honored as American Business Woman of the Year has been charged with embezzling $1.8 million dollars from escrow accounts she managed for a title company, officials say.

Rebecca Ann Doyle, 35, surrendered Monday at the Pinellas County jail and was freed after posting a $10,000 bond.

She was charged with grand theft Monday, said Pinellas County Sheriff's Detective Richard Poe. He said Mrs. Doyle had acknowledged diverting $1.83 million dollars from escrow accounts she managed in Pinellas County for Commonwealth Land Title Insurance Co., a Philadelphia-based firm.

At age 22, Mrs. Doyle founded Tri-City Title Co., a title insurance business, and built it from a two-desk operation to a five-branch firm in six years.

The American Business Women's Association named her American Business Woman of the Year for 1978-79. She was 28, and her Tri-City Title firm was insuring $76 million in real estate deals each year for about 400 real estate and banking clients.

One of those clients was Commonwealth. Under a written agreement, Tri-City had been acting as Commonwealth's agent in Pinellas County since 1977.

The agreement authorized Mrs. Doyle to withdraw money from escrow accounts for Commonwealth's dealings in order to pay closing costs and issue insurance.

But after Tri-City filed for protection from creditors in federal bankruptcy court last December, Commonwealth charged that Mrs. Doyle had embezzled as much as $1.7 million from its accounts since last November.

Commonwealth also asked for a judge's order to keep Tri-City from making further withdrawals from the escrow accounts and to conduct an audit.

Circuit Judge Harry W. Fogle granted the order Jan. 29. The Pinellas County Sheriff's office also began an investigation.

On March 11, Commonwealth filed suit in bankruptcy in which she had a financial interest.

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T Communications"), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of rates for its services. The new rates will be effective May 14, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the PUC. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by the proposed rates.

AT&T Communications has filed a reprice of its tariffs designed to more closely recover access and other costs for WATS and 800 Service and all private line services including Channel Services, Foreign Exchange (FX), DATAPHONE* Digital Service, and OCC Facilities.

Also proposed is the institution of a charge for Directory Assistance to begin to recover access costs incurred for such service and increases in rates for operator assisted AT&T Long Distance calls. The initial minute charge for all AT&T Long Distance calls and additional minute rates for AT&T Long Distance calls 51 miles or less are proposed for increases to reflect the access charges approved by the PUC for such calls.

The proposed new rates for all services would result in an increase in adjusted test period revenues of $139 million or 12.7 percent.

A complete copy of the proposed tariffs are on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Students suspended

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University officials say 10 students, all members of a fraternity that has been barred indefinitely from sponsoring social activities, face suspension for their roles in a March hazing incident.

Jim Caswell, SMU dean of students, told The Dallas Morning News the Lambda Chi Alpha members have been allowed to attend classes until their appeals of the suspensions are heard by the university's judiciary committee.

Caswell told the newspaper the committee — composed of faculty, staff and students — ordered the suspensions Thursday and is expected to hear the appeals by the end of this week.

He said the 10 students include two seniors whose scheduled graduation in May could be affected by the suspensions. The length of the suspensions, if upheld, would depend on the degree of each student's involvement.

University officials said the suspensions were the result of a March 2 incident during a Lambda Chi party in which a pledge tried to avoid a "swirling" that would force his head into a toilet.

Officials said the student was hospitalized for 11 days after suffering a broken ankle and torn ligaments.

Attempts by The Associated Press to reach

Caswell at his home or office for comment early today were unsuccessful. But five of the students told the newspaper they were suspended.

"I plan to appeal the ruling, but I would really rather not talk about it," one sophomore told the newspaper.

CSA LEADER ARRAIGNED—James D. Ellison, leader of the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord, is led from U.S. District Court in Fort Smith, Ark., after he was arraigned Monday before a federal magistrate on charges of illegally manufacturing automatic firearms and silencers and on a racketeering charge involving the 1980 burning of a Missouri house for insurance purposes. Ellison's arrest Monday ended a four-day standoff between heavily-armed CSA members and federal officials. Ellison is being held in a Fort Smith jail pending further court hearings. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan refocusing on budget plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the battle comes to a close over money for Nicaraguan rebels, President Reagan today begins lobbying Congress to approve a politically risky budget plan that curbs Social Security increases and kills 17 federal programs ranging from Amtrak to the Job Corps.

Reagan was to kick off his new sales campaign with a speech today to the National Association of Realtors. That is a prelude to a nationally broadcast presidential address on the budget at 8 p.m. EST Wednesday from the Oval Office.

The focus on the budget package follows more than a week of administration lobbying over American aid to Nicaraguan rebels, whom Reagan calls "freedom fighters." Both the Senate and House were to vote on that issue today.

The budget debate opens Wednesday in the Senate, with Republicans and Democrats alike unhappy over key portions of the package — particularly the plan to reduce Social Security cost of living adjustments.

A compromise endorsed by Reagan and Senate Republican leaders would chop proposed spending for fiscal 1986 by $52 billion and reduce expected deficits to below $100 billion by 1988 without raising taxes. Democrats see the GOP plan as ammunition they can use in next year's election campaign, and Republicans are worried they will be vulnerable.

An alternative budget unveiled Monday by Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., and three other senators calls for $145 billion in higher taxes as well as $234 billion in spending cuts over the next three years to reduce deficits further than the GOP plan.

Hollings' proposal includes a one-year freeze in Social Security benefits for all but low-income recipients. Spending on most domestic programs would be frozen, as opposed to the deeper cuts contained in Reagan's proposal. Military spending would be held constant with inflation next year, instead of being allowed to rise at an after-inflation rate of 3 percent.

In announcing Reagan's twin speeches, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president feels the budget debate "is of great significance to the American people."

The Reagan-GOP plan would freeze spending on numerous domestic programs.

'The real thing' is changing

ATLANTA (AP) — The slogan reads "Coke Is It," but times change and so will the 99-year-old secret formula of the world's No. 1 soft drink, industry experts say. The move has archrival Pepsi crowing that Coke is "not the real thing."

Coca-Cola's chairman, president and bottlers and executives from around the country were called to New York for a meeting today for what the company called "the most significant soft-drink development" in its history.

That development will be the announcement that Coca-Cola, the world's best selling soft drink, is changing its closely guarded formula to make a sweeter, smoother beverage and boost its market share over Pepsi-Cola, industry experts say.

The meeting will kick off a 27-commercial advertising blitz featuring comedian Bill Cosby touting the changed Coke. Observers of the $28 billion soft drink market say the company also will alter its familiar red-and-white Coke logo.

Pepsi, No. 2 in the cola wars, moved quickly to take some of the fizz out of Coke's hoopla.

"After 87 years of going at it eyeball to eyeball, the other guy just blinked," PepsiCo said in a full-page advertisement addressed to Pepsi bottlers and company personnel. In a press release the company said, "The announcement by Coke is clearly an admission that it's not the real thing."

Coke turns 100 in May 1986. It still is the most popular soft drink in the world but has lost ground to Pepsi since 1980, when Coke held 24.3 percent of the domestic soft-drink market. It held 21.7 percent of the market to Pepsi's 18.8 percent at the end of 1984, according to the trade publication Beverage Industry.

Industry experts were upbeat about the company's reported decision to change the formula.

Asbestos removal industry reels as nation's insurers halt coverage

By GEOFF QUINN
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A boom is turning into a bust for contractors who clean up buildings contaminated by asbestos, because insurance companies are balking at renewing insurance policies.

Nearly all major asbestos removal contracts in the nation — and potentially many remodeling contracts — are said to be affected by the insurance industry's decision involving worker compensation and liability policies.

Both contractors and insurers attribute the stalemate to two factors: efforts by public agencies to rid buildings of the cancer-causing insulation material and the insurance industry's poor performance in 1984.

For many years asbestos was used extensively because of its unparalleled ability to soundproof and withstand heat, but it is now considered a major cause of lung and intestinal cancer.

"It's very useful stuff as long as it doesn't get into the air," said David Pickman, a spokesman for the Environmental Protection Agency's Boston regional office.

"What it really is is a very powerful allergin, which forms a lesion inside the body which is likely to turn out to be a carcinoma."

Building contractors used asbestos widely despite warnings in British medical journals as early as 1919 that linked the material to cancer.

The EPA banned its use in construction in 1972, and efforts to remove it began a decade later with an EPA regulation requiring education officials to notify parents and teachers of any asbestos risk, said William Spain, an asbestos expert with the Georgia Institute of Technology.

The EPA mandate gave birth to a whole new, highly regulated asbestos-removal industry whose leaders — such as Acmat Corp. of East Hartford, Conn., and Emergency Response Inc., based in Shreveport, La. — expected 1985 to be their busiest year.
