U.S. military action against Iran weighed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The continued detention of five American hostages by Lebanese groups believed loyal to Iran has become a potentially explosive issue as the United States weighs the possibility of military action against the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

According to U.S. officials, Secretary of State George P. Shultz has warned Iran the United States is prepared to take unspecified retaliatory action against Iran should any harm come to the hostages.

The warning was issued about two months ago, after the captors indicated they may try the hostages and possibly execute them, said the officials, who asked not to be identified.

Shultz's message was followed up by a speech three weeks ago in which National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane appeared to suggest the United States was contemplating military action against targets in Iran.

McFarlane asserted that the United States "should be prepared to direct a proportional military response against bona fide military targets in a state which directs terrorist actions against us."

He added that there is "sufficient evidence that radical Shiite terrorists are responsive to Iranian guidance for us to hold Tehran responsible for ... attacks against United States citizens, property or interests."

The American in Lebanon who was taken captive most recently is Terry Anderson, Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, who was seized on March 16.

Four other Americans kidnapped last year and early this year also are missing. They are: William Buckley, political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Presbyterian minister Benjamin Weir, who was abducted last May 8; American University librarian Peter Kilburn, who was reported missing last Dec. 3, and the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest who was kidnapped Jan. 8.

The kidnappings are viewed as part of a campaign by Moslem extremists in Lebanon to end American influence in Lebanon with Iranian help.

The McFarlane speech represented an additional U.S. effort to develop a public consensus behind the administration's view that the United States must not allow acts of international terrorism to go unpunished.

"We cannot proceed in such a way that terrorist groups or their sponsors feel they can make free and unopposed use of violence against us," he said.

Opponent calls it slavery

House rejects work for probationers

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House today voted down a Dallas lawmaker's plan to force all people on felony probation to do at least 40 hours of community service work, such as picking up highway litter.

Rep. Al Granoff won 66-63 tentative approval of the measure Monday. But his bill died in a 62-75 final vote today.

Several black lawmakers said the program sounded like slavery.

Under the Granoff plan, judges would have to order felony probationers to do 40 hours to 1,000 hours of unpaid community service work during the probation period. A probationer could not be forced to do more than eight hours work per week.

Under current law, judges can order probationers to do community service work.

"We used to do that a long time ago," said Houston Rep. Harold Dutton. "We forced people to work and they didn't get paid. We had a term for it — slavery."

About 32,000 Texans are put on felony probation each year, but Granoff said probation is not a severe enough penalty in many cases.

"Probation, for many people, is a joke," Granoff said. "When you commit a felony there should be some form of punishment involved; checking in once a month (with a probation officer) is not enough."

Under current law, judges can order probationers to do community service work. But Granoff's bill would require judges to sentence felony probationers to minimum of 40 hours of work over the course of probation and a maximum of 1,000 hours.

A probationer could not be forced to do more than eight hours work per week.

"Texans are demanding that we be serious with our criminals," he said.

The bill's foes complained the community service work — such as collecting highway litter — could interfere with a probationer's ability to hold a paying job.

Houston Rep. Larry Evans agreed with Dutton, saying, "I was under the impression that involuntary servitude in the United States had been done away with many years ago."

The first vote on the Granoff bill ended in a 67-67 tie, which meant failure. But Granoff asked for a roll-call vote and wound up with the 66-63 win.

Also on Monday, the House gave tentative approval to a bill making it a misdemeanor to sell illegal knives to minors. Sponsor Anita Hill, R-Garland, said the bill is aimed at preventing minors from getting oriental weapons — such as Chinese throwing stars — that have become popular.

Another tentatively approved bill would make it a misdemeanor to take cable television service without paying for it.

Vandalism to cost White Deer schools

WHITE DEER — It's going to cost nearly $950 to repair vandalism on the skylight and lettering at the White Deer elementary school, board members discovered Monday at their regular meeting.

White Deer School trustees approved the allocation of $320 to replace the skylight and windows which were apparently damaged by a juvenile and two 17-year-olds who allegedly broke into the school April 4. The three youths were caught that night by White Deer town marshal Tam Terry.

White Deer Elementary School Principal R. T. Laurie said one of the youths and a Pampa youth had also vandalized the sign on the elementary school building about two weeks before that.

"They apparently pried some of the letters off," Laurie said, adding that damage to the sign was estimated at $630. The district will also pay for those damages.

In other business, the board agreed to increase the size of its cheering squad from five to six members. There were no other apparent changes in the school's cheerleading policy in which one cheerleader is chosen from freshman, sophomore and junior classes and two are chosen from the senior class. This year's junior class cheerleader will become head cheerleader next year.

Board members also discussed what to do about the Texas Education Agency's decision not to count teacher Terry Cox's four years of military time as part of his credited experience. Superintendent Tom Harkey explained that because of a new state teacher salary schedule, the TEA denial of credit will not affect Cox's salary.

Board members also hired Steve Ford of Oklahoma as coach and industrial arts teacher and Mark Lanham of Bovina as girls' basketball coach.

They accepted the resignation of coach Wade Petty and White Deer Elementary School teacher Marion Johnson, who is leaving the teaching field after 20 years experience.

Johnson was appointed to the school's Career Ladder merit pay criteria committee. Also on the committee are Harkey, Skellytown Elementary School teacher Tom Thornberg and White Deer High School teacher Marguerite Hudgins.

New board members Mike Chaney of Skellytown and Bobby Blodgett of White Deer were sworn into office.

Trustee Cinda Lafferty was selected school board president. Gary Gortmaker was selected board vice president.

Court upholds CIA secrecy powers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today gave the CIA practically unlimited power to keep its intelligence sources secret.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices said it is up to the spy agency to specify who is an intelligence source protected from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act.

The court overturned a ruling that in some cases — such as those in which the agency merely is trying to avoid public outrage — could have forced the CIA to reveal its sources.

The court threw out a ruling that could have forced the CIA to disclose the names of researchers who took part in a notorious program in the 1950s and 1960s involving brainwashing and experimental drugs.

"Congress intended to give the director of Central Intelligence broad power to protect the secrecy and integrity of the intelligence process," said Chief Justice Warren E. Burger in his opinion for the court. "The reasons are too obvious to call for enlarged discussion. Without such protections the agency would be virtually impotent."

In other cases, the justices:

- Ruled unanimously that Indian tribes may tax mineral, oil and gas leases on tribal lands without the federal government's approval.

The case involved Navajo lands in Arizona, New Mexico and Utah.

— Struck down an 84-year-old provision of the Alabama Constitution that denied the right to vote to people convicted of crimes of "moral turpitude."

The justices unanimously ruled that the ban on voting was based on unconstitutional racial discrimination.

The CIA case involved a program with the code name MKULTRA in which some individuals unwittingly were administered LSD and other drugs and at least two people died because of the experiments.

Speedy spacewalkers try to save satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Working with great speed, two spacewalkers floated into Discovery's open cargo bay today and attached to the shuttle's robot arm crude "flyswatter" tools designed to save an $80 million communications satellite.

"Job well done," Mission Control commended them.

The unrehearsed work by astronauts David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman was the first step in a hastily arranged but well-thought-out plan to try to rescue the Syncom satellite.

Early Wednesday, Discovery's crew will close the 40-mile gap with the satellite, move in and try to snag a four-inch lever on the side of the huge rotating payload with holes cut in the plastic flap-like ends of the tools, which look like large flyswatters.

The lever is an on-off switch for electrical power, and was supposed to have tripped outward automatically when the astronauts deployed Syncom on Saturday. Without power, the satellite is useless.

Working in cumbersome $21 million spacesuits, Griggs and Hoffman had trouble at first as their tools, straps and other gear kept floating away at the end of tethers. After about 40 minutes they were well-adjusted to their outside environment and within 90 minutes they had completed strapping the tools to the arm. Mission Control had estimated the task would take more than two hours.

They even took time to enjoy the breathtaking panoramic view of sun, sky, Earth and stars that surrounded them.

"Not a bad view, eh?" Hoffman remarked. "It looks different when you don't have a window frame around it."

The tools were crafted out of pieces of plastic, a window shade, tubing and other items scavenged from Discovery's cabin.

The rescue exercise has extended the mission from five to seven days, with landing now set for Friday at the Kennedy Space Center. It gives Sen. Jake Garn of Utah, who is flying as a congressional observer, extra time to see how the National Aeronautics and Space Administration responds to difficult situations.

The innovative thinking that developed the "flyswatter" has helped astronauts convert bad situations into good on many missions.

"We will once again have demonstrated the flexibility of the manned system, whether we succeed or not in this," said flight director Randy Stone.

Hoffman and Griggs were selected for the spacewalk because they had trained in case an emergency sent them into the cargo bay to stow or unstow the robot arm and open or close a satellite sun shield, which were considered the most likely contingencies.

The astronauts were instructed to cut three rectangular holes out of two plastic covers of their flight files to create ladder-like flexible flaps. One version was attached to a cone made of rolled plastic, another was affixed to the aluminum ribbing of a window shade.

A third device was built as a backup. It uses a windowshade frame, tubing and wire.

White Deer leads parade of area students to state

White Deer High School's existentialist one-act play, "Waiting for Godot," advanced to state competition Saturday by taking top honors in Class 2A regional competition.

The play was one of two plays to advance Saturday from the regional one-act play contest at Texas Tech University. Cast members Dave Nicholas and Ron McIntosh were named to the regional all-star cast while Travis McIntosh received an honorable mention.

"This is the tenth time since 1949 we've made it to the state meet," said drama teacher James Hinkley, who added that he has not taken a team to state. "Last time we went to state was in 1968. We are one of eight AA plays out of roughly 150 schools to make it to state."

Two other White Deer students advanced to state competition by placing third in regional University Interscholastic League competition. Brent Bridwell advanced in typing while Dana Walden advanced in journalism.

The White Deer High School livestock judging team also advanced to state by placing in the top ten percent of the area competition Saturday at Texas Tech. The four team members, Jamie Pohnert, Brad Clay, Kent Tice and Darin Russell, will go on to the state meet April 27 at Texas A & M.

Groom High School continued its journalism tradition Saturday as four journalism students advanced to state competition. Groom competed in the Class A UIL competition. Karen Britten placed first in newswriting, Becky England placed second in feature writing, Jeannette Homer placed second in headline writing and Carmel York placed third in editorial writing.

In the 10 years that the GHS "Tiger Tale" newspaper has competed in UIL, staff member went to state finals twice, in 1976 and 1978, according to journalism teacher Janetta Lamb. She added that Groom has also received "tops" in the mimeographed newspaper competition at the Interscholastic League Press Conference.

Also qualifying for state UIL class A competition were Jami Duke of Groom, who placed first in poetry and Lora Gill of Miami who qualified in prose.

In the Class 3A UIL competition, two Canadian High School students advanced to state. Jeff Grice placed second in poetry while Kelly Russell placed second in prose. A CHS debate team, David Duncan and Larry Gatlin were named as alternates, as was Frank Young in calculator competition.

No one from Pampa High School advanced to the state 4A competition.

The State UIL contest will be April 26 and 27 in Austin.

Shooting shocks small town

ANSON, Texas (AP) - Abel Flores Sr. had finished talking over his daughter's marital problems with a priest only an hour before he and his daughter were gunned down at a row of small storage buildings, the priest says.

"He said, 'We've got trouble,'" Father Frank Nelan said Monday. "I said, 'What are we going to do about it?'"

Authorities say Flores' son-in-law, Roy Herrera, had already decided.

Herrera, 21, went to the building near St. Michael's Catholic Church about 3:30 p.m., shot Flores in the head with a .38-caliber pistol, then shot his wife Sonia, 19, from whom he was separated Saturday, authorities say.

He then turned the gun on himself, sheriff's department officials told the Abilene

Reporter-News. Herrera and his wife died at the scene, and Flores was pronounced dead on arrival at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene, about 20 miles from this West Texas city of 2,700.

Anson High School, where the couple had attended school, was as quiet as the empty St. Michael's Church Monday.

"The whole school is stunned," said Donella Spurgin, who taught English to Sonia during her sophomore and junior years.

Sheriff's Deputy Eric Coleman said the Herreras had spoken to Nelan about their problems and that they were storing some of their belongings at Anson Mini Storage.

Herrera and his wife agreed to meet at the storage unit, where he was going to give her some of their belongings, Coleman said.

"He had made up his mind what he was going to do," Coleman said.

Herrera and his 14-year-old brother drove to the storage facility, and Mrs. Herrera came with her father, 37.

Drug baron's trial ordered

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Ernesto Fonseca, reputed leader of La Familia drug trafficking empire, and 24 others arrested in the investigation of the kidnap-murder of an American narcotics agent, were ordered Monday to stand trial on a variety of drug and weapons charges, the judge hearing the case said.

The action by Federal Judge

Jesus Arzate Hidalgo brings to at least 40 the number of people ordered to stand trial in the case.

They include reputed drug baron Rafael Caro Quintero, thought to be another La Familia leader, and mentioned by Mexican and U.S. officials as a key figure in the slaying of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, and a Mexican pilot who worked with him in Guadalajara.

"The formal imprisonment was decreed," Arzate Hidalgo said by telephone. He said only four of the 25 were eligible for bail.

The two dozen, arrested with Fonseca in Puerto Vallarta last Tuesday, include current and former agents of the Jalisco state judicial police and two agents of the Federal Security Police.

Under Mexican law, there is no jury trial and the defendants, if not eligible for bail, remain imprisoned while the judge takes up to a year to decide if they are guilty or innocent.

Fonseca, 60, is charged with crimes against the health of the nation, a broad category that includes laws against the production, sale and use of illegal drugs, along with stockpiling weapons reserved for use by the armed forces.

At his arraignment Saturday, Fonseca called the charges "lies and slander."

Fonseca claimed during interrogation he and Caro Quintero wanted to talk with Camarena, thinking they could bribe him as they had other officials, according to the government newspaper El Nacional.

Caro Quintero, ordered to stand trial in another court, also denied charges against him, saying he was tortured and forced to sign the court file of evidence against him and statements he made during interrogation without reading it.

Senate panel reviewing local phone billings

AUSTIN (AP) — A senator whose bill would prohibit local measured telephone service says any Southwestern Bell talk about making the service voluntary only disguises the company's true goal of making it mandatory.

Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville, read from a letter Monday that he said was written in 1979 from Z.E. Barnes, Southwestern Bell president, to William Ellinghaus, president of American Telephone & Telegraph.

"We believe that to attempt to convert the remaining 92 percent of business customers to non-optional measured service in a single pricing action will jeopardize the concept through potential legislative action to ban either the non-optional strategy or measured service in its entirety," the letter said.

The letter goes on to talk about an optional strategy "to condition the market" and says Southwestern Bell is looking "toward the eventual withdrawal of business flat rates."

Edwards' bill would prohibit telephone companies in Texas from charging for local phone calls based on length of the call, distance and time of day — or local measured service, known as LMS.

Edwards told the Economic Development Committee on Monday his bill would self-destruct Sept. 1, 1990, but that it would give lawmakers time to collect data and "let the dust settle" from a judge's decision that cut Southwestern Bell off from AT&T, its parent company.

Edwards said such a major policy change as LMS "should only occur after a full public study, debate and vote by the Legislature. Only the Legislature, not the Public Utility Commission, can provide that forum."

Committee review was cut off by the Senate's going into session, and after the Senate got caught up in delaying tactics on another bill, the committee hearing was canceled. Several witnesses had signed up to testify.

Southwestern Bell on several occasions has proposed LMS. It withdrew its most recent application for LMS on an optional basis.

Edwards quipped that some call LMS "lacking merit service," and added that it would cost ratepayers millions of dollars "because equipment must be installed to measure each local call. And you'll have to pay extra just to get a copy of local calls to verify your monthly bill."

"Businesses and government agencies alike will have a nightmare trying to limit or charge for employees' calls to home or friends," he said.

Most of the 24 states that now have mandatory LMS started with it on a voluntary basis, Edwards said.

"Unfortunately, LMS is more like toothpaste," he said. "Once you get it out of the tube, you can never get it back in."

Jim Bernau, state director of the Oregon Chapter of the National Federation of Independent Business, told the committee Oregon is facing mandatory LMS on July 1, after it was approved by that state's Public Utility Commission between legislative sessions.

According to sample billings, small firms such as travel agencies and insurance companies reported increases of up to 1,000 percent of current costs.

Lucas admissions questioned

AUSTIN (AP) — In part because confessions were all local authorities had, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox says his office declined to help prosecute at least two murder cases in which Henry Lee Lucas confessed.

At various times, Lucas has claimed responsibility for between 100 and 600 slayings. Nationwide, police have closed the books on 210 slayings based on those confessions.

Mattox said Monday that his office has looked at 13 Lucas cases so far, two of which were requests for help from local prosecutors.

"In the cases where we've been asked to assist, we will not be lending prosecution assistance ... except to further investigate to determine whether or not someone else possibly has committed the offense," Mattox said.

"That's not to say he (Lucas) did not commit the crimes. But certainly, there's no evidence there with the exception of his own confessions," Mattox said.

Mattox refused to specify which cases his office reviewed.

When asked, the attorney general's office helps local prosecutors in capital murder cases. The office also reviews death penalty cases on behalf of the state.

Asked whether he believes Lucas is guilty of all the killings to which he has confessed, Mattox replied flatly: "No."

A grand jury in Waco is now investigating two slayings where Lucas' confessions have been cast into doubt, Mattox added.

In an interview with the Dallas Times Herald, Lucas, 48, now claims that all but three of his confessions were bogus. Lucas says he staged the hoax "to show law enforcement doesn't do its job."

Mattox noted that news reports indicate that in some cases, the one-eyed drifter was thousands of miles from the scenes of crimes or would have had to travel constantly to commit all the killings.

"I think some of what has been reported in the media concerning the conflicts as to schedules and locations and times would tend to make it appear to be impossible that Lucas could have committed some of the offenses," Mattox said.

While declining to criticize police handling of any case, Mattox did say that "I know that there is substantial desire among law enforcement people to clear cases. And sometimes, cases are cleared even when it's not justified ... We would hope it's happened to a minimum in these particular cases."

Mattox said his office is continuing to investigate Lucas cases and has "intensified our review of a few." The office has assigned a full-time investigator to the job, said spokeswoman Elna Christopher.

"Our principal concern is, of course, that we do not want him blamed for not confessing to crimes that he did not commit," Mattox said. "If he does that, it makes it more difficult to prosecute individuals that actually perpetrated the crimes."

One law enforcement official who rejects Lucas' contention that he killed only three people is Williamson County District Attorney Ed Walsh, who prosecuted Lucas in the strangulation of an unidentified hitchhiker found near Georgetown on Halloween night in 1979. Lucas was given the death penalty for that slaying.

"I can say without a doubt he has committed more than three murders," Walsh told The Associated Press on Monday.

"There are just too many cases I am familiar with — by talking with officers I have the highest regard for — where he has provided details, scenes and things no one but the killer could have known," Walsh said.

The district attorney declined to speculate on the total number of Lucas' victims, but said the evidence supports more than three.

Finally, stardom attained

That silly looking lady you'll see galavanting around on the Pampa Middle School Stage Friday and Saturday is me.

A little more than a month ago, in a moment of mental weakness, I auditioned for and got a part in the upcoming ACT I community theater production of "Blithe Spirit." All I wanted was a tiny part where I simply walked onstage to say "Hi, Folks," then go on to the cast party. What I got was a major part that takes up a good one-third of the play.

Of all the plays I have been in, I never was what one would call the romantic female lead. Usually, I've had to be content with character and cameo roles (I was a store clerk in a college production of "Auntie Mame" and a washerwoman frog in the Oklahoma Theater Center production of A.A. Milne's "Toad of Toad Hall) or with face-in-the-crowd roles.

I also played The Wall in a college production of Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream." Now, being The Wall in the Shakespeare play is not like being a tree or a rock in a grade school pageant. The Wall, a bona-fide and valuable speaking role, is a character in the "play within a play" which was presented by area geezers to honor the marriage of Athenian Duke Theseus to Hippolyta the Amazon Queen.

It was through The Wall's "crannied hole or chink" that the lovers Pyramus and Thisbe conducted their illicit romance. The play's director tried to bring every sexual reference and double entendre imaginable out of my little part. But that really didn't embarrass me because I didn't understand half the things the men were laughing about.

I started out as a theater major at Northeast Oklahoma A & M. But when I, the greatest speech and drama student in the history of Deer Creek High School (according to my mother), went up against the greatest speech and drama students from large high schools throughout northeast Oklahoma and found that I was not getting the roles I felt I deserved, I quickly changed my major.

I also was busy working behind the scenes, where my jobs ranged from painting huge backdrops to pushing a button to raise and lower the orchestra pit at the NEO theater. I even got an award for my technical genius. In "Auntie Mame," when I wasn't being a store clerk or a lesbian poet, I had to stand backstage and tap on a buzzer to represent the sound of a busy switchboard. But when I tapped the buzzer on opening night nothing happened, so I started shouting "buzz, buzz, buzz" and the play was saved. Saved, that is, until the snippy reviewer for the campus newspaper said he was amused by the "15 little voices going buzz, buzz, buzz."

Snippy reviewers and snooty actors are the main reason that drama people and newspaper people seldom get along, even though they are often cut from the same mold. Drama types say that newspaper types never understand such things as motivation and theme while newspaper types accuse drama types of not understanding the First Amendment. Having been on both sides of the reviewer's desk, I still don't understand what the big fuss is about. When I reviewed community theater productions for The Woodward Press, the drama people accused me of not knowing diddly squat about the theater; I accused them of not knowing diddly squat about me.

Despite the extra load, I am proud of my role in "Blithe Spirit." But I am even more proud of my newest role: the aunt of Clinton Douglas Spaulding, born April 10, 1985 to Craig and Brenda Spaulding of Stillwater, Okla.

Spaulding is a staff writer of The Pampa News.

Senate tentatively okays primary bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has tentatively approved a presidential primary bill described by one Democrat as a threat to conservative Democrats but by others as a measure that could attract voters.

The Senate's six Republicans opposed the proposal in a series of votes Monday, and Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, protested it with a six-hour filibuster.

The measure, tentatively approved on voice vote, would allow Texans to vote in a "Super Tuesday" presidential primary in March 1988. A final vote is needed to send the bill to the House.

Sen. Chet Edwards' bill would set up a presidential primary for Democrats and Republicans on the second Tuesday of March in presidential election years.

The May primary date for state and local candidates would remain the same, but a person voting in the presidential primary would have to vote in the same party's primary in May.

For years, Texas Republicans have been holding presidential primaries at the same time they vote in the May primary. Texas Democrats in the past have chosen their delegates for national conventions, where the presidential nominee is selected, through a complex caucus system.

Under Edwards' bill, at least 75 percent of the delegates, excluding elected and party officials, would be named according to the popular vote in the presidential primary. Party conventions would choose the remaining 25 percent.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, objected that conservatives might vote for Vice President George Bush in March 1988, "and not vote for you and me in May."

Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, responded that more conservative Democrats might stick with the Democratic presidential primary in an effort to prevent a liberal candidate from being nominated.

Edwards said, "It concerns me that people of Iowa, Kansas — very tiny states — along with northeastern states continue to dominate presidential politics."

"Texas is the third most populous state in this country, it is a major industrial and agricultural and technological state and as such it has every right — Republican and Democrat alike — has the right to have our voice heard significantly in the process of selecting the most important political position in this country."

"We have a very clear choice today," he said. "We can make Texas a major player in presidential politics by going to an early presidential primary or we can continue to develop late in the process and stay in the minor leagues."

Leedom described the March date as a "phony issue, because New Hampshire and Iowa would still be ahead of us."

Sen. Don Henderson, R-Houston, said Texas would be a "pivotal state no matter when we held the election." An advantage of a later primary, he said, is that "once they (candidates) get to Texas, the serious folks are running, and we can choose from the serious folks."

Republicans objected to the estimated $10 million cost for the primary, and Edwards responded that amount represented "one-tenth thousandth of the state budget but would give us an opportunity to cast a vote and a vote that will count in the single most important election in the nation."

An amendment to allow cross-over voting in March and May failed 20-9, and an amendment to authorize cross-over filing was rejected 17-10.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Taxpayers always taken for a ride

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum posed a rhetorical question to his colleagues last week. "Have we lost our heads?" he asked, noting that the Senate had approved a tax break for corporate executives but had refused to extend federal compensation for jobless workers.

But it is Metzenbaum himself who should answer the question. It was his logic that was exposed as faulty—the Senate's actions were consistent.

The senators were dealing with two separate issues: through the tax break allowing some individuals to keep a little more of their own money, and through the jobless program, giving away to a third party money earned by someone else.

The result: individuals get to keep a little more and government will spend a little less (assuming that the Senate doesn't get carried away and spend the money it would have put into the jobless program into a different one.)

While the Senate appeared to be stroking its consistency—the taxpayers—the Internal Revenue Service was stroking its—government officials. The IRS is considering a rule that will give public officeholders a considerable tax break, one that does not apply to anyone else.

What the IRS wants to do is make corporate officers using company-provided cars and chauffeurs add the value of that service to their income for tax purposes. For those who fall into this category, their stretch limo could end up costing several thousand dollars come tax time.

Buried in the regulation, however, is an exemption that Washington insiders say is tailor-made to benefit high-ranking government officials, who also make extensive use of limousines and chauffeurs. The exemption says that if you are not an officer of the company that provides the car and driver, you only have to add $3 to your income statement for each working day the service was provided.

Voila! What could cost an executive in the private sector nearly $4,000, could cost the privileged public servant only $400. That's the sort of tax break that should make public officials wonder if they've lost their heads, not the one the Senate approved.

The bottom line? No matter how you argue the tax question, the system is always going to contain some unfairness. Taxes—even flat taxes—are inherently unfair.

They take away from some and give to others, often without benefit to either the payer or the payee, only to the middleman—government employee. If only Metzenbaum and his colleagues would complain about that, maybe some of their time would be justified.

Reagan no budget cutter

Recently, former President Jimmy Carter was all over network tv badmouthing President Ronald Reagan for, among other things, "unconscionable social-spending cuts."

At the same time, the Treasury was reporting that through the first five months of fiscal 1985 total federal spending had risen 11.8 percent over 1984, which, with 3.2 percent inflation, is a real growth rate of 8.4 percent - the fastest real spending rise since World War II, forty years ago, and over three times the real growth rate of the Carter years.

And, while real defense spending was growing at 6.8 percent, non-defense spending was rising over 9 percent. So much for Reagan the miserly spender!

Even more startling, the 1986 Federal Budget (page 9-59) shows that in the first three years of Reagan budgets (1981-84), actual spending on social programs (payments for individuals) had risen at a 4.8 percent REAL rate - a third faster than the 3.6 percent of the last three Carter years (1978-81).

In other words, Reagan has been a bigger social spender than Carter! We say this not with pride, but horror. So much so, we decided to go back and try to compare Jimmy Carter's spending plans for 1981-85 (as outlined in this 1982 proposed budget submitted in January 1981) with what Reagan has done.

We found that when you take out of those projections the 53.2 percent inflation Carter forecast for this period (1981-85) and substitute the actual 27.3 percent CPI under Reagan, Carter's actual spending plans were much lower in constant 1980$ than what Reagan has actually spent.

For example, Carter proposed that in 1985 spending for individuals would be $469 billion, but he also projected inflation rates of 12.6 percent (vs. 8.9 actual) for 1981; 9.6 percent (vs. 3.9) for 1982; 8.2 percent (vs. 3.8) for 1983; 7.5 percent (vs. 4) for 1984; and 6.7 percent (vs. 4.2) for 1985, a grand total of 53.2 percent for the period, compared with 27.3 actual.

Thus, when you divide Carter's (1985) $469 billion projection by 1.532, then multiply it by 1.273, you get an inflation-adjusted Carter projection for FY 1985 of $404 billion, for real average growth rate (after inflation) of 2 percent per year.

Well, friends, that great "budget cutter" Reagan is now spending at the rate of $427 billion for FY 1985, 6 percent MORE than Carter planned. Actual average real growth since 1980, under Reagan, has been 4 percent, (using the CPI as the price deflator) - DOUBLE the planned Carter growth rate!

But, some will say, that's counting middle-class entitlements (Social Security, etc.); take a look at those programs just for the poor. So we did. We applied the same rules to those income security programs (housing, welfare, SSI, food and nutrition) directed at the poor, and found the same result.

For FY 1985 the Carter planners proposed to spend $58.7 billion - with total inflation of 53.2 percent, or $38.3 billion in constant 1980 dollars, up only 4.4 percent in real dollars over the $36.7 billion actually spent on these programs in 1980.

Well, this year Reagan will spend $48.6 billion on these programs, but his total inflation for the 1981-85 period will have been only 27.3 percent, which means that in 1980 constant dollars Reagan's spending is now $38.2 billion - EXACTLY what Carter proposed!

And, look at health care; Reagan has been far more generous than Carter planned to be. Carter's 1982 budget projected total health care services (Medicaid and Medicare) spending for FY 1985 of $101.8 billion - and Reagan will actually spend $93.5 billion.

But when you factor in the inflation difference, Reagan's "real spending" (in 1980 $) for health care in 1985 comes to $73.4 billion, about 11 percent MORE than the $66.4 billion in 1980 dollars proposed by Carter planners in January 1981.

In other words, Carter planned a 25 percent real growth in health care (1981-85). Reagan has increased real health care spending by 38.5 percent in the same period - a real annual growth rate of 6.7 percent, compared with Carter's proposed 4.6 percent.

By any measure, Reagan has been a complete failure at cutting social spending - and has actually been a far bigger social spender than Carter was, or planned to be.

Salty talk from oval office

It was reported during the recent MX missile debate that President Reagan used bad words to express his displeasure with a certain congressman who decided to vote against the missiles, one of the president's pet projects.

Arkansas Rep. Bill Alexander, a Democrat, refused to say exactly which words the president had used. But he did say that during the conversation the president got mad and became "profane" and actually "cussed."

This might alarm some people, but not me. I sort of like a president who will take off the verbal gloves occasionally and duke it out with some bare-fisted cussing.

Drawing from my vast storehouse of historical knowledge, I can note that many of our greatest presidents were notorious for their salty language.

Harry Truman. It was Truman who told Douglas MacArthur to get his you-know-what out of Korea and back home, and it was Truman who once shocked a group of ladies with the language he used while giving the group a tour of the Rose Garden.

After the tour, some of the ladies went to Mrs.

Truman and complained that the president had used the term "manure" during his discussions concerning the proper development of roses.

"He simply shouldn't say such a word," the ladies suggested.

Replied Mrs. Truman, "You'd be surprised how long it took me to convince him to say manure."

George Washington, the father of our country, didn't have a timid vocabulary either.

It is a little known fact that when his father asked, "Who cut down my cherry tree?" young George spoke up and said, "I cut down the sonofa..."

It also is a little known fact that President Theodore Roosevelt didn't go around saying "bully" all the time.

What he did go around saying involved a bull, but the press had to shorten the term to "bully" so as not to embarrass the president and distress the readers.

In recent years, we also have had some presidents who didn't think twice about expressing themselves with earthy language.

Lyndon Johnson cussed up a Texas storm. Most everybody from Texas cusses, as a matter of fact. Said Colonel Travis at the Alamo, "I've never seen so many (bleep) Mexicans in my life."

Richard Nixon turned out to be not so great a president, but he was world-class when it came to cussing, as evidenced by the Watergate tapes. He could wash his mouth out with 20 - Mule Team Borax and it still wouldn't have come clean.

Even Jimmy Carter, the staunch Baptist, let a little off - color slip with his "I'll whip his (hindparts)" comment in reference to Teddy Kennedy's challenge in his 1980 nomination.

If Carter had been that tough with his language more often, he might have been able to throw off the wimp image that eventually helped in turning him out of office.

So if Ronald Reagan figures he needs to cuss to get his point across, I'd say he should go for it, and if anybody gets offended, then that's their problem.

Nobody gets more manure thrown at them than the president, and he deserves to be allowed to throw a little back.

Room for more state spending cuts

After ninety days of heated debate and many hours of hassling over the budget for the State of Texas, our Appropriations Committee approved a two-year budget that totals $36.1 billion.

This was done mostly by cuts in the budget, some raises in user fees and a tuition increase for students in our state-supported colleges and universities.

No doubt this has been the toughest session in the last 10 or 12 years. But take my word for it, there is plenty of room to make further cuts.

Contingent on the passage of several pieces of legislation which we feel will pass, state employees will receive a three-percent raise for the first year of the biennium and a two-percent raise for the second year.

I am very proud of the fact I successfully authored many of the motions to trim the budget by millions of dollars.

STATE REPRESENTATIVE
FOSTER WHALEY

capitol comments

One of my motions cut the Legislative Budget Board's proposed $17 million teacher testing program to $6.5 million. This would leave enough only for basic skills testing. I supported an amendment to delete all of the funds for the testing program, but this motion failed. I then dropped back and made the motion for the basic skills test.

Can you imagine a test that would cost $100 per teacher for our state's 170,000 teachers. Assuming five-percent fail and are declared incompetent, this would mean it would cost $2,000 per teacher to locate the incompetent teachers. There has to be a better way.

We didn't touch the kindergarten (baby-sitting) program. By eliminating this program, we could have saved another $93.3 million.

There are certain programs still left in the budget which I'll be "gunning for" when they hit the floor of the House. I will be referring to the items in future columns.

My, it is fun down here when one is successful in cutting out waste.

Last week a good friend from Pampa called in regard to the required auto liability law. Col. Jim Adams of the Texas Department of Public Safety provided me with some information on this subject.

In 1981, before the bill mandating the liability insurance on automobiles went into effect, only 73 percent of Texas motorists had insurance. In 1982, when the law took effect, the number of insured motorists rose to 91.5 percent. In 1983, the number of insured motorists dropped to 84 percent. In 1984, insured motorists remained at 84 percent.

During the 1982-1983 fiscal year, there were 135,838 convictions for those violating the liability insurance law. In the 1983-1984 fiscal year, this figure rose to 177,000 convictions. As of April 4, 1985, there have been 367,267 drivers who have had their driver's licenses suspended for violating the auto insurance liability law.

If you don't have liability insurance, I would advise you to read these statistics.

Life in the classroom is testing for students these days

SUSAN C. HUMPHREY
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — Eighteen-year-old Grace Cuban is an honor student who takes advanced-level classes at Houston's Westbury High School and wants to study biomedical engineering in college this fall.

But having superior grades doesn't spare her from the multitude of tests that all Houston high school students must take.

And if Grace weren't graduating, next year she would face even more tests required under Texas House Bill 72.

The state's education reform bill has been, well, testing the patience of those in the classroom, students and teachers say.

And while the bill has been hailed as one of the greatest innovations in Texas education in years, some educators say it will have fewer direct effects on the classroom than House Bill 246, a mandate calling for a curriculum overhaul in the state's schools.

"I personally think we're going to see more benefits from House Bill 246," says Arnold Oates, superintendent of the 11,500-student Brazosport Independent School District.

"I think we're going to see more benefits gained from that than from HB 72. What we have to do is blend the two and make them work together," Oates said.

House Bill 246 revised and updated the school curriculum and was called a back-to-basics bill because it stressed academic subjects, particularly reading, writing, math, science and history or social studies. Under the 1983 legislation, 21 credits are required for graduation.

Jane Eixmann, a teacher at Houston's Milby High School, says the attitude of students has changed in the class this year.

Students are "definitely more serious about their studies now because they understand that they have to perform," she said.

But the changes "seem to have taken a lot of spark out of the students," she said. "The excitement of going to school—it's so restricted. They have so much pressure on them they seem physically and mentally exhausted, especially your better students."

Houston school Superintendent Billy Reagan says HB 246 is responsible for more changes in the curriculum than HB 72, but the newer bill — particularly the achievement test requirement — "will have a dramatic effect on the classroom."

One of a series

are mandatory student achievement tests, exit exams for graduating seniors, final exams for all students and a ceiling of five absences a semester for each student.

HB 72, as it stands, has districts administering state-standardized achievement tests to students every two years. In addition, graduating high school seniors must pass an exit exam.

"You've got to raise the concern of students toward accomplishing the classwork," says Gayle Fallon, president of the 3,000-member Houston Federation of Teachers. "And nothing raises your concern more than an end-of-the-year proficiency test."

In Corpus Christi, records show 48 percent of school district's seventh-through 12th-graders made at least one failing grade during the fourth six weeks of the current school year.

"We need to know if they are not turning in their work or if they don't understand the material," says school trustee Susan Hopkins.

But to students like Grace Cuban, the achievement test provision means more tests in addition to final exams, district proficiency tests and the "alphabet soup" of college entrance tests.

"I think it would be a good idea if we didn't have to take finals," she says.

The graduation test alone would not be enough, Houston school spokeswoman Geri Konigsberg says. "You have to prepare them all along the way."

Bernard Jackson, who teaches

English-as-a-Second-Language at an inner-city school in Houston, says the tests are important in order for the district to set a minimum level of competency that all students must attain.

Most educators agree one group that could be hurt by the tests are students whose native language is not English.

More than 32 percent of Houston students are Hispanic and more than 3 percent are Asian, according to district figures. Ms. Konigsberg and several school administrators say they aren't sure whether any special allowances will be made for such students.

Paul Ofield, principal at Houston's Waltrip High School and president of the Houston Professionals Association, says non-English-speaking students will be drastically affected by the tests.

"They're really good students, but they have a language deficit," Ofield says. "If they do not pass that test, they don't receive a diploma. And I'm wondering how that's going to affect some of our students."

Classes will be smaller — another provision to which many district administrators take issue with is class size.

State law calls for each district to limit classes to 22 students for each teacher in kindergarten through second grade starting next school year. The same ratio will be imposed in the third and fourth grades for 1986-87.

Most districts say they can't afford to hire more teachers to meet the class size requirement, but they also say the problem comes down to more than money.

"The problem is that there are no teachers to carry this out," says Reagan, whose district is the nation's seventh largest. "We're faced with a totally inadequate supply of teachers to be able to do it." Several educators say the bill has had a double-edged effect on student performance in the classroom.

Ofield, the high school principal, says students seem "very aware of House Bill 72. They know that they have to keep their grades up."

Oates says many students are choosing easier classes so they can literally make the grade. "And I don't think that's really the intent of the bill," he says.

Ms. Fallon predicts it would be at least five or 10 years before noticeable changes are seen in the classroom.

"As a start, I think you'll see more one-on-one interaction with the students. I think you'll see students who have spent more time on tasks, students who basically know a little more."

"And I think you're going to see a high school diploma mean something again."

Deputies acquitted of assault

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Two of three Jefferson County sheriff's deputies cleared by a jury on assault charges have criticized an FBI investigation that resulted in an indictment that alleged they beat two jail inmates.

A federal jury Monday found all three deputies innocent of the charges.

"It's going to be very hard to get back on the streets," said David Matlock, a 16-year veteran law enforcement officer. "I'm thinking of not going back because of this. ... Because this (the FBI) investigation was one-sided, and if it was one-sided this time, would they do it again? You could say I'm gun shy," Matlock said.

Though fellow deputy John Allen Gowing said he never doubted that he would be acquitted, he too, criticized the FBI's work.

"I felt like there never was any evidence that we were guilty," said Gowing. "The worst part was the waiting for the 12 to return the verdict, though. This has been going on for over a year."

Gowing called the FBI year-long investigation "very one-side, very poor."

The government finished its testimony and evidence Friday and, in an unexpected move, defense lawyers concluded their case Monday morning without testimony from any witnesses.

The three were indicted by a federal grand jury in February 1985 on one count of conspiring to deny county jail inmates' civil rights by beating them and two counts of depriving those rights while working as law enforcement officers.

The charges stemmed from a year-long FBI investigation into two former jail prisoners' claims that the officers beat them.

The inmates, William Jack Crick and Wendell Earl Smith, said officers beat them during the early morning hours of Feb. 21, 1984, in an attempt to coerce confessions from them.

During testimony, U.S. District Judge Robert Parker reduced charges against two of the deputies because of the government's lack of evidence that could prove Matlock and Gowing beat Crick.

Smith now is serving a 46-year sentence in the Texas Department of Corrections for robbery. Crick is serving a 50-year sentence in TDC for robbery.

Dear Abby

Guest's early entrance throws harried hostess off her beat

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I invited some friends over for cocktails at 6:30 p.m. That afternoon one of my guests called to confirm the time. We talked a while, and just before she hung up, she said, "I'll come by early. Goodbye." I was so surprised, I didn't say anything, but it was too late anyway.

She arrived at 5:45. I was still dressing, so I let her in and I returned to finish dressing. Then I had several last-minute things to do for the cocktail party, so I wasn't able to visit with her, or even listen to her while she followed me around babbling about one thing or another. She really upset me because I couldn't concentrate on the things I had to do, and I'm afraid I wasn't a very gracious hostess.

Is it acceptable in today's society for guests to inform the hostess that they will be coming by early? And how could I have avoided this unsettling experience?

OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: The problem here is not what is "acceptable" in today's society; it's the difference between how you perceive your relationship with this woman, and how she perceives it.

She was presumptuous to assume that she would be welcome to come early. And you lacked the backbone to call her back and tell her it would not be convenient for her to come early—which is what you should have done.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you three years ago saying my husband had asked for a divorce (another woman). I was 42 at the time and thought my life was over. Suicide even crossed my mind, but I couldn't do that to my children.

You advised me to get into therapy, even though I said I couldn't afford counseling. You said, "You can't afford not to have it; call your local mental health facility—you'll be charged only what you can afford to pay."

Well, I went for counseling, and it really turned my life around. Now I realize that my husband did me a big favor when he left me because I met and married a loving, caring man whom my "ex" couldn't compare to.

Sometimes when it seems like the end of the world, it's really only the beginning.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Thanks, I needed that. I recommend "counseling" so frequently, many readers think it's a cop-out on my part. It's not. Sometimes it's a lifesaver.

DEAR ABBY: My 42-year-old husband's "get up and go" has been gone for a long time. He comes home from an office job, eats his dinner, then falls asleep in his recliner. He wakes up two hours later and goes to bed.

Should I get rid of the recliner or my husband?

NO ONE TO TALK TO

DEAR NO ONE: First, ask yourself if your company or conversation could be putting your husband to sleep, and your question may answer itself. If it's not you, your listless mate could be sick or depressed. Insist that he see his physician before you get rid of him or the recliner.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column was a letter from a hurt grandmother whose grandchildren never acknowledged her gifts. Advice was offered from another reader to "gift" those grandchildren with an unsigned check the next time.

Abby, several years ago you ran a letter from a mother who offered wiser advice regarding the same problem. She said that when her children received a gift, she would not allow them to play with it, eat it, read it, wear it, spend it or bank it until they had written a thank-you letter. She said she would guide the hands of the little ones who were too small to write themselves. And this is how her children formed a valuable lifelong habit.

I am another grandmother who has been hurt many times when gifts I have sent with love were never acknowledged.

WTSU, Canyon — Pampa organizations have nominated four women for the 10th annual Texas Panhandle Distinguished Service Awards to be presented at West Texas State University (WTSU) on April 20.

Among the more than 60 women from the Panhandle and South Plains areas who will be recognized during the luncheon are Pampa residents Nadine Arney, Helen Dimmler, Esther Ruth Gibson and Helene Hogan. The luncheon will also feature a Hall of Fame with eight former award winners establishing the Hall of Fame in observance of the 75th anniversary of WTSU.

Tickets to the luncheon may be reserved by calling the WTSU Returning Student Program. The luncheon begins at 11 a.m. at the WTSU East Dining Hall.

To continue the tradition of recognizing women who have distinguished themselves, 10 of the nominees will be honored as recipients of the Texas Panhandle Distinguished Service Awards. Judges from the area will select recipients for excellence in community service, business, education, medicine, activities and other areas.

Genesis House Inc., has nominate Arney who has been an active volunteer with the Genesis House, homes for troubled teenagers. Genesis House was established in 1971. Arney was instrumental in the remodeling and opening of the Genesis House for boys. She also worked on office plans and donated furniture towards the construction of the administration building.

In addition, Arney is a member of the Drug Task Force, Society of Social Services and the United Way. She and her husband, Bert, coordinate the Cabot Van Program to provide transportation to and from Amarillo for cancer and kidney dialysis patients. She also teaches oil painting at the senior citizens center.

Dimmler has been nominated by the City Council of Pampa chapters of Beta Sigma Phi sorority. Several years ago, she arrived in Pampa from New York with no home, family or job. Since, she has volunteered her services to the community of Pampa. She volunteers as an interpreter for the deaf and hearing impaired, teaches sign language and is "on call" with several agencies, including Coronado Community Hospital, Pampa Police Department, Department of Human Resources, Texas Rehabilitation Commission and Clarendon College.

She is an active member of United Methodist Women, St. Paul's United Methodist Church and Golden Harvest Group of the Texas Extension Homemakers Association.

In 1982, Dimmler was honored as Beta Sigma Phi's Woman of the Year.

Gibson's nomination has been submitted by the Varietas Study Club. A retired teacher, Gibson taught first grade for 30 years. Her time since retirement has been spent as a volunteer. She has taught story telling to pre-schoolers at the Pampa public library and is an active member of Pampa Community Concert Association, American Cancer Society, Women's Federated Clubs, Meals on Wheels and is a volunteer with the hospital auxiliary.

Helene Hogan is a retired kindergarten teacher. Before she began her teaching career, she hosted a morning radio program and owned a millinery and ladies' accessories shop.

In conjunction with her kindergarten, Hogan also taught dance for more than 25 years. She is active as a charter member of Progressive Extension Homemakers Club, one of the first workers for Meals on Wheels, a charter member of Highland General Hospital Auxiliary, member of the Petroleum Engineers Wives Society, Chamber of Commerce and Altrusa Club.

For 50 years, she has been a member of First Christian Church where she served as a deacon and district secretary of Texas Women's Christian Missionary Society. She also teaches exercise classes for patients at Coronado Nursing Center.

Her biographical sketch has been accepted for the first limited edition of "Notable Women of Texas." Hogan is the mother of three sons and grandmother of six. She has been nominated by Georgia Mack of Pampa.

Irish designer offers home fashions collection

As the first Irish fashion designer to be welcomed to the United States in the 1950s, Sybil Connolly was lionized by the American press and later offered the chance to design home furnishings, as well.

She was featured in Time and Life Magazines as well as in Vogue and Harper's Bazaar. This attention conferred on her the kind of instant celebrity in which this country seems to specialize.

Being picked up by fashion did not, however, change her ideas and values. "As someone once remarked 'we should forgive fashion anything; it dies so young.' A long time ago I decided that between fashion and beauty, I would opt for beauty," she said in an interview in New York.

While here to introduce her new collection of home furnishings fabrics for Brunshwig & Fils, Miss Connolly was asked to compare American and British habits in decorating.

"In Britain and especially in Ireland, a family may have lived in the same house for 900 years or more. Each family member has left something behind." Decoration of the home happens piecemeal as a new layer is added to the old.

Furthermore, she added, homes may become quite shabby without anyone becoming unduly concerned.

Although the view is often expressed that American homes are more informal than the British variety, she disagrees. She finds that homes here are more likely to be furnished so that everything matches. If they can afford it, Americans tend to redecorate completely from time to time and shabbiness is rarely tolerated.

As an example of the differences, she recalled that not too long ago, an American manufacturer of sheets and towels opened a plant in Britain, but soon closed it. There simply wasn't enough demand for new products to keep the factory profitable.

People in Ireland would never think of buying new lavender towels to match the new paint job in the bathroom, she says. But in the United States, it's different. There is a concerted effort to convince people to buy new things before the old things have worn out. And, she added, it's an effort in which the customers cooperate willingly.

As one who has been coming to this country at least twice a year for the past 30 years, Miss Connolly is in an excellent position to compare American and British habits. Americans buy 90 percent of her couture clothing and she has designed sheets, china, collectibles and home furnishings fabrics for American companies.

At 58, she has received many awards here for her designs and is well known as an inspired gardener, plant and flower enthusiast and for her decorating and artistic talents.

The love affair between her and the United States began when she received her first invitation to come here to put on a fashion show of her clothing.

"I expected it to be my only chance so I made a list of all the sights I had to see." Luckily she added, there were to be many more trips since "it took me 11 years to work through that first list."

Pro-life, pro-choice forces at hearing

AUSTIN (AP) — The unregulated abortion industry in Texas has produced abortion clinics with a "butcher-shop image," says an El Paso woman who worked in one clinic until she decided abortion is wrong.

"It degenerated into a facility that was profit-oriented, with little concern for the health of the woman, much less an unborn child," Judy Weerstra told the House State Affairs Committee on Monday.

The committee is reviewing Rockdale Rep. L.B. Kubiak's bill that would ban abortions in the final three months of pregnancy and increase state restrictions on all abortions.

"Pro-choice" and "pro-life" forces packed a hearing room and spilled over into an adjacent corridor where the testimony was piped out to speakers. Committee Chairman Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, said more than 150 people signed up to testify and that the bill would go to subcommittee for further study.

Houston physician Steven Hotze said that lawmakers who refuse to ban abortions in the final three months of pregnancy are similar to Nazi leaders who refused to stop the killing of Jews.

"You're no different than the men and women in Germany who refused to take up the case for the Jews who were slaughtered in the concentration camps," he told the committee.

But even if the bill is passed, Hotze said that "this is not going to do away with abortion altogether, unfortunately."

A Dallas lawyer testifying against the bill said a fetus is comparable to "seed corn" and is not entitled to the same protections as a baby.

The Kubiak bill would ban abortions in the final three months of pregnancy — unless the mother's life is endangered — ban state money for abortions, require anesthesia for the fetus in some cases and require parental consent for a minor to get an abortion.

"This problem has been virtually ignored by the state of Texas since 1973," when a Texas case sparked the U.S. Supreme Court ruling legalizing abortion, said Kubiak, a veterinarian.

He said the high court ruling allowed states to regulate, but not ban, abortion. Forty states have such regulations.

"The unborn child has less rights than a murderer on Death Row in this state," Kubiak said. "What has that child done to deserve this?"

Carol Everett of Dallas, who said she made up to $125,000 a year doing abortions, testified she gave it up because she could not take it anymore.

"Nobody can tolerate killing babies day after day after day. Even the employees can't take putting them in a garbage disposal or trash can," she said.

Ms. Everett, who is not a physician, said her change of heart came when "I knelt down in the abortion clinic and asked God if this is what he wanted me to do."

Mrs. Weerstra, former office member for an El Paso abortion clinic, said some of the clinics have a "butcher shop image."

"It's a dog-eat-dog type of industry," she testified.

She recalled recovery rooms "filled with tears, remorse, hyperventilation and questions."

Dallas attorney Otto Mullinax offered an argument against any state restriction on abortion "until you, the state, know more about it."

"You had better let her do the guessing," he said of mothers who face an unwanted pregnancy.

Rep. Gary Thompson, D-Abilene, asked Mullinax if he is "troubled" by such a "cavalier attitude toward life."

"I'm not troubled by a family asking the state to stay out of its business," he said.

Mullinax said he has no trouble differentiating between "fetal life and human life."

A fetus is "nothing more than a seed corn," he said. "I'm against laws that try to make criminals out of our citizens when there is no victim."

But committee member Bill Messer, D-Belton, said he sees no reason why a fetus should have fewer rights than a baby.

Leak plugged in Burcham's chest

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Doctors in emergency surgery stanching a leak that oozed blood with every beat of Jack C. Burcham's artificial heart, then watched for signs of infection or worsening kidney damage in the 62-year-old retiree.

"I'm relieved to tell you things are much better now than they were at any time last evening," Dr. Allan M. Lansing said at a briefing today, one day after Burcham was taken back into the operating room to redo the stitches connecting his artificial heart to a major blood vessel.

"We feel very much relieved about his condition."

Lansing, medical spokesman for the Jarvik-7 heart implant team at Humana Hospital Audubon, said there were no signs of infection. He also said he did not yet have the results of tests on Burcham's kidneys, but "so far, things look OK."

He said Burcham was being given morphine for pain, particularly for the "aggravating condition" caused by the respirator tube down his throat. However, Lansing said, Burcham's color is the best it has been since the surgery.

Doctors who implanted the Jarvik-7 heart in Burcham on Sunday said they were concerned about possible infection caused by the post-operation bleeding and damage to Burcham's already weakened kidneys. He was in critical but stable condition Monday night.

Burcham's vital signs were normal and chest X-rays taken after the follow-up surgery on Monday confirmed that the bleeding in the left side of his chest had stopped, according to hospital officials.

Lansing said earlier the bleeding from stitches at the rear of Burcham's aorta may prompt a procedural change in future heart implants, with the use of reinforced sutures becoming routine, "because this has happened now in two patients and it's very distressing."

Follow-up surgery to stop internal bleeding also was required for William Schroeder and Murray Haydon, the previous artificial heart recipients at Audubon, although Haydon's surgery was not related to sutures.

In the second operation on Burcham, the world's fifth and oldest recipient of a permanent artificial heart, Dr. William C. DeVries restitched the synthetic fabric "cuff" anchoring the pump to Burcham's aorta, the body's main artery.

At the rear of the aorta, "every little needle hole showed a tiny little leak through it," Lansing said. The leak was "not a spurt, but one drop each beat," he said. At 50 beats per minute, however, "this led to a significant amount of bleeding" into Burcham's left chest cavity.

Doctors were worried that accumulated blood around the tissues or lungs posed a danger of infection. Lansing said the incident was "a setback, but barring an infection, then I don't think this will change his recovery."

Burcham had lost 21 pints of blood in the 24 hours since the implant operation and the emergency surgery required additional transfusions. An average adult male has about 11 pints of blood.

Public to have access to hospital evaluations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The public soon will be able to compare hospitals for their safety and effectiveness under a new law that opens the books on previously undisclosed government evaluations.

The new regulations, which go into effect 30 days after publication Wednesday, stipulate that the public is entitled to see hospital review data compiled by Medicare's Peer Review Organizations and hear the peer review evaluations of the hospitals. The Peer Review Organizations, or PROs, are, in effect, Medicare's watchdogs over hospitals, and are supposed to keep tabs on hospital performance to see how well Medicare recipients are treated. Their reports, which now will become public, are sent to the Department of Health and Human Services, which oversees Medicare.

"Public interest is served by providing access to certain PRO data by the public..." the Department of Health and Human Services says in the regulation. "PROs deal with matters of great public concern — the providing and cost of health care."

"They are therefore an important source of information to aid consumers and consumer organizations in reaching informed decisions about the types of health care services that are offered," the department added.

The regulation was published in draft form last year. HHS said it received 160 comments on the proposal since then, with 75 of those arguing that release of such data carried "a potential for misinterpretation and misuse."

Some hospitals have argued that statistics could be misleading. Mortality figures, for example, may show higher death rates for a particular hospital because it treats large numbers of elderly patients, not because of a lower quality of care.

But HHS said hospitals will be protected by a provision in the rule requiring that they be given advance notice of information being released. The hospitals can then write their own explanation, which would be released with the data.

For example, the department said, if the PRO releases mortality figures for various hospitals, a hospital could add additional statistics on the number of unusually severe illnesses or the number of elderly patients being treated.

PROs, consisting of doctors and other health professionals, are supposed to keep track of such things as whether hospitals allow unnecessary admissions or keep patients too long.

Under the new regulation, they also will be providing information directly to the public. The regulation specifies that the review panels can "disclose their interpretation of the quality of health care in a particular institution to the public."

Evaluations of individual doctors cannot be released, and the department said it rejected proposals that such information be released. However, another regulation scheduled for publication on Wednesday authorizes the department to exclude doctors from Medicare or impose fines on them based on PRO recommendations.

Crackdown widening to shippers

AUSTIN (AP) — Shippers who overload their trucks will otargets of an expanded crackdown that could bring the state $1 million in judgments this year, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

Mattox on Monday said the crackdown against overweight trucks that began in November has already wrought changes.

"The troopers out on the highway tell us that the attitude towards hauling on an overweight truck has dramatically changed," Mattox said, adding that the Department of Public Safety reports "substantially reduced" violations.

The beefed-up enforcement program has resulted in 37 lawsuits against trucking companies. The lawsuits seek civil penalties to help pay for the damage overweight trucks do to highways.

Mattox said the suits have brought $360,000 in judgments so far, adding that he expects the total to hit $1 million by the end of the fiscal year on Aug. 31.

The decision to file civil suits was made because the small criminal fines the law prescribes against overweight trucks were no deterrent to truckers, Mattox said.

"The firms were operating with virtual immunity," he said, adding that trucking companies considered fines "just a normal expense of business."

Mattox said, however, that many trucking companies have noted that truckers sometimes don't have control over their loads. Because of that, he said, shippers are the next target.

"Truckers are placed in a difficult position many times because of shippers and loaders overloading their trucks," he said. The attorney general said four lawsuits against shippers would be filed within the next two weeks.

"The trucking industry itself cannot stop the problem if the people that load the trucks and ship the products — the grain, the concrete, the crushed gravel — continue to overload," he said.

Of the $360,000 in judgments obtained so far against 13 defendants, Mattox said $245,000 already has been collected and the remaining $115,000 will be paid over time, with the state collecting 12 percent interest.

Hagler stops Hearns in third round

Marvin Hagler (right) has Thomas Hearns on the ropes.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — At the end of the first round, referee Richard Steele walked to a neutral corner and exhaled like a man caught in a buzz saw.

The veteran referee had just emerged from the cauldron that was the first round of the Marvelous Marvin Hagler-Thomas Hearns fight Monday night.

Make that: FIGHT. It was eight minutes and one second of the kind of action fight fans dream up.

It was eight minutes and one second of the kind of action critics of the hardest game point to as brutality.

But there was pride and courage in the ring, too, on this warm desert night.

And on this night, Hagler and Hearns would have chased a lot of street toughs home to their mamas.

The tougher of the two, this time, was Marvelous Marvin Hagler, who looked like he had been hit by a beer bottle in a barroom brawl.

There he stood in the middle of the ring, blood on his face, the middleweight championship belts of three boxing governing bodies draped on his glistening torso.

Just moments earlier, Hagler had knocked Hearns down. Hearns struggled up, but Steele decided Hearns had had enough and stopped it at 2:01 of the third round.

A short time before, Steele had summoned Dr. Donald Romeo to the ring to examine cuts above and below Hagler's right eye.

Hagler, who had fought like a man possessed, got the green light to continue. That turned out to be a red light for Hearns.

"Great" will always be the word associated with this fight. And like all great fights, there will always be questions asked, especially questions of the loser.

As to why he engaged in that first-round war instead of trying to box, Hearns, called the "Hit Man," said: "I had to, it was there. It presented itself. Hagler kept running in, I had to protect myself. I had to show I deserved some respect."

The biggest punches were a three-punch combination Hagler landed near the end of the second round, and a right hand Hagler crashed to the head that sent Hearns reeling.

Smith captures Boston Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — One moment, Geoff Smith was running comfortably at a pace that would bring him the world marathon record. The next moment, he was struggling to walk and fighting for survival.

Facing little competition, he attacked the Boston Marathon course with a vengeance Monday, blasting through the first three miles at a four-minute, 36-second-per-mile pace. Just past the 20-mile mark, though, his hamstrings attacked him.

A certain triumph had turned, in that instant, into an uncertain fate.

"It was a matter of, will I finish," said the defending champion. "Both legs cramped up and I couldn't move them forward. I had to stop."

He stood for a few seconds, painfully began jogging and gradually increased his speed.

"I said 'I can't let this happen, I've got to keep moving,'" said the determined former firefighter from Liverpool, England. He kept moving, worked the cramps out and, despite periodic recurrences of the tightening in his thighs that brought grimaces to his face, destroyed the mediocre field by more than five minutes in the 89th running of the race.

His time of 2 hours, 14 minutes, 5 seconds was the slowest winning clocking in the race in eight years. But it was a huge margin of victory over Gary Tuttle, the 37-year-old runner-up from Ventura, Calif., who ran 2:19:11.

For most of the race, it seemed Smith might break Steve Jones' world record of 2:08:05, set last fall in Chicago.

"He was running a sub-2:07 pace 18 miles into the race," said Joe Catalano, the runners' liaison for the Boston Athletic Association.

Mark Helgeson of Cincinnati was third in 2:21:15, followed by Lou Spino of Colorado Springs, Colo., in 2:21:29 and Bobby Doyle of Boston in 2:21:31.

April 17, 1985

This coming year will be more fortunate for you than it has been in the past where friendships are concerned. The pals you make will prove their loyalty when the chips are down.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's important today that you be purposeful and consistent. If you permit your attention to wander, you'll get thrown off course. Looking for romance? The Matchmaker set can help you in your search. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Guard against tendencies today to worry and fret about things that may never happen. Don't use your imagination negatively.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone in your peer group who often takes advantage of friends might try to use you in some manner today to further his purposes. Be watchful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are too self-seeking today, it will not rest well with your companions. Be considerate of others and keep your image in mind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to keep pace with your present duties and responsibilities. Things you delay today will stack up on you and be harder to handle later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) One who loves you will be disturbed today if you're too attentive to someone else in his presence. Don't make waves.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're involved in negotiations today, stand up for your rights. Don't agree to any terms that do not serve your best interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's not likely to work out too well for you today if you get others to perform tasks that you should be taking care of yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) In social situations today, relax and be yourself. Affections or airs will make those with whom you're involved feel uncomfortable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Review your guest list today if you're having others over to your place. Be sure the friends you invite are compatible with one another.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Disappointment is likely today if you do things for others in hopes of getting more in return. When they don't reciprocate, you might be angered.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You might be a trifle too loose with your resources and possessions today for your own good. Take measures to protect what you have.

STRUGGLING—An employee of Lone Star Steel walks past a pile of surplus pipe. A decline in the oil industry has meant hard times for the people in the town of Lone Star who depended on the plant for their livelihood. (AP Laserphoto)

East Texas town struggles to overcome large layoffs

LONE STAR, Texas (AP) — "Steel Country" has melted away from more than just the local newspaper's name. The change from "The Steel Country Bee" to simply "The Bee" reflects a changing attitude as towns once dependent on the steel industry diversify and try to rebuild their economies with other industries, the paper's managing editor says. "We looked to our very name and realized there's more to our future than the steel mill," said Charley Harrist. Three years ago, Lone Star Steel Co. had 6,000 employees and a booming market for its oil field pipe.

"People used to fuss because they had to work so much overtime," said J.D. Hay, a 30-year veteran at the mill. But the boom ended suddenly, and in August 1982, Lone Star Steel laid off 4,000 workers. Unemployment in the area jumped to 36 percent, and the hard times have lasted longer than many imagined. Last month, the steel company hit the community with more layoffs — an additional 800 that cut the workforce to 1,700 hourly workers. According to the Texas Employment Commission, more than 1,500 workers have left Morris County since 1982, and the county's tax base has shrunk from $1.7 billion to $1 billion. Gov. Mark White created a special task force last month to help communities cope with large industrial layoffs. "It's not enough that we aggressively promote the diversification of the Texas economy," he said at the time. "We must take steps to help the troubled." Other recent developments also have brought new hope to the dying town. Three new industries — a roofing plant, a high-speed printing company and a builder of modular classrooms — just received state and federal grants.

How much is too much credit?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The American consumer is going for broke, and may get there if borrowing continues at its current level. Installment debt as a percentage of disposable personal income has shot up close to the record high of about 18 percent, or about 2 percentage points higher than a year ago. And the rate of increase may be rising. At the same time, the savings rate has been running under 6 percent, a rate low enough to measure near the bottom of most modern industrial nations. "Our puny national rate of saving is an international mortification and must be substantially increased, or else," comments James Griffen, economist for Aetna Life & Casualty, the insurer. Meanwhile, the growth rate of disposable personal income — after taxes that is — has been eroding. A year ago it was growing at more than 7.5 percent a year; early this year the rate was only one-half that. Not everyone views the situation with alarm. Data Resources Inc., which keeps track of the numbers for many large companies, in January viewed the willingness to borrow as "a good sign for sales." Nevertheless, the stress is showing up in some indicators, such as a rising level of mortgage foreclosures, believed to be a consequence, among other things, of that slowdown in personal income growth. Frustrated with waiting for prices and interest rates to become less onerous, many young couples plunged all their financial resources into homes after the last recession, leaving little reserve for job or income emergencies. Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker has warned that "in a real sense" the country is living on borrowed time and money. Worse, according to Volcker, is the fact that much of the money is foreign, attracted to America by high interest rates and a currently strong economy. What happens, he suggested, when that money returns home? Conceivably, that could happen when growth in the U.S. economy slows, reducing the return from equities and credit instruments. And a growing number of financial people think the slowdown might already be occurring. Foreign money oils the U.S. financial machinery, making funds available that otherwise might not be there. Consumer installment credit soared at an annual rate of 27.1 percent to $10.37 billion in February, a record for any month, following a jump of $7.22 billion, or 19.2 percent, in January. In an ideal world, says Griffen, "an effort might be made to balance our books before creditors, foreign or otherwise, force the issue."

Bandidos' trial begins

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Four people arrested in a nationwide crackdown on alleged drug trafficking by the Bandidos motorcycle gang are scheduled to go on trial today. The defendants, James Lyndon Cheatham, 31; Steven Robert "Boo Boo" Barbour, 39; Patrick "Rawhide" Ledoux, 44; and Karen Brown, 31, are charged with conspiracy and possession of methamphetamine and cocaine with intent to distribute. A nine-man, three-woman jury was seated Monday afternoon and was told by U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. that testimony is expected to last three to four days. If convicted, the four face up to 15 years in prison and a $125,000 fine on each charge. The three male defendants, who had shaggy hair when they were arrested in February, arrived in court Monday with close-cropped hair and coats and ties. Barbour and Ledoux, both ex-convicts, also face weapons charges. Barbour is charged with having a Walther .380-caliber pistol, while Ledoux is charged with having a Ruger .22-caliber rifle. The jury was seated after 46 of 50 were questioned individually, many saying they didn't know much about the club, although what they had heard was negative. Six other bikers arrested in the Feb. 21 crackdown will be tried later this month. They too face indictments alleging possession of methamphetamine and cocaine with intent to distribute. Facing trial later this month are club president Jose Jesus Talamantes, Gerald Wayne Walton, Oscar Nieto, Ira John Turner, James "Big Jim" Faulk and Marcia Steffen.

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T Communications"), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of rates for its services. The new rates will be effective May 14, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the PUC. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by the proposed rates.

AT&T Communications has filed a reprice of its tariffs designed to more closely recover access and other costs for WATS and 800 Service and all private line services including Channel Services, Foreign Exchange (FX), DATAPHONE* Digital Service, and OCC Facilities.

Also proposed is the institution of a charge for Directory Assistance to begin to recover access costs incurred for such service and increases in rates for operator assisted AT&T Long Distance calls. The initial minute charge for all AT&T Long Distance calls and additional minute rates for AT&T Long Distance calls 51 miles or less are proposed for increases to reflect the access charges approved by the PUC for such calls.

The proposed new rates for all services would result in an increase in adjusted test period revenues of $139 million or 12.7 percent.

A complete copy of the proposed tariffs are on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leonard Goldberg, who produced some of ABC's most popular programs, including "Charlie's Angels" and "Hart to Hart," after he left the network in 1969, said he and the network might work together again some day but not just now.

Goldberg said Monday he has turned down an offer to rejoin the network. But he said his relations with ABC are still good. "I hope that in the future, the situation (for contract talks with ABC) will be better," he added.

Goldberg, 51, formed a partnership with Aaron Spelling when he left ABC, and they produced "Charlie's Angels," "Hart to Hart," and "Vegas," all purchased by the network.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Thomas Eagleton, back home from a hospital after suffering a mild heart attack early this month, will probably ease back into his work right away, a spokesman said.

The 55-year-old Missouri Democrat was released Monday from Bethesda Naval Hospital, where he had been treated since the April 5 attack. Said press secretary Jon Austin.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Angela Lansbury says she survived "a succession of stinkers" in the movies to stage her latest acting comeback, as the star of a television serial.

Miss Lansbury, 59, said in the May issue of McCall's magazine, released Monday, that she was playing middle-aged women through much of her film career, which she started as a teen-ager in the 1940s.

"Except for an occasional good film like 'State of the Union,' I was in a succession of stinkers," she said.

Miss Lansbury won a Tony for her part in Broadway's "Sweeney Todd" in 1979. Her television series, "Murder, She Wrote," has been renewed for next season.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan had nothing but kind words for a man who regularly gets in his hair, Milton Pitts, the barber who has shampooed, shorn and shaved three presidents.

"We all look a little bit better — a lot better" because of his haircutting, Reagan said at Monday's party for Pitts, thrown by the Sheraton Carlton Hotel, where the barber runs his shop.

In his other barber shop, in the basement of the White House's West wing, Pitts has trimmed the hair of every president except Jimmy Carter since shortly after Richard M. Nixon took office in 1969.
