

Economic index falls

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge decreased 0.2 percent in March, reversing a two-month gain and hinting of lagging business activity later in the year.

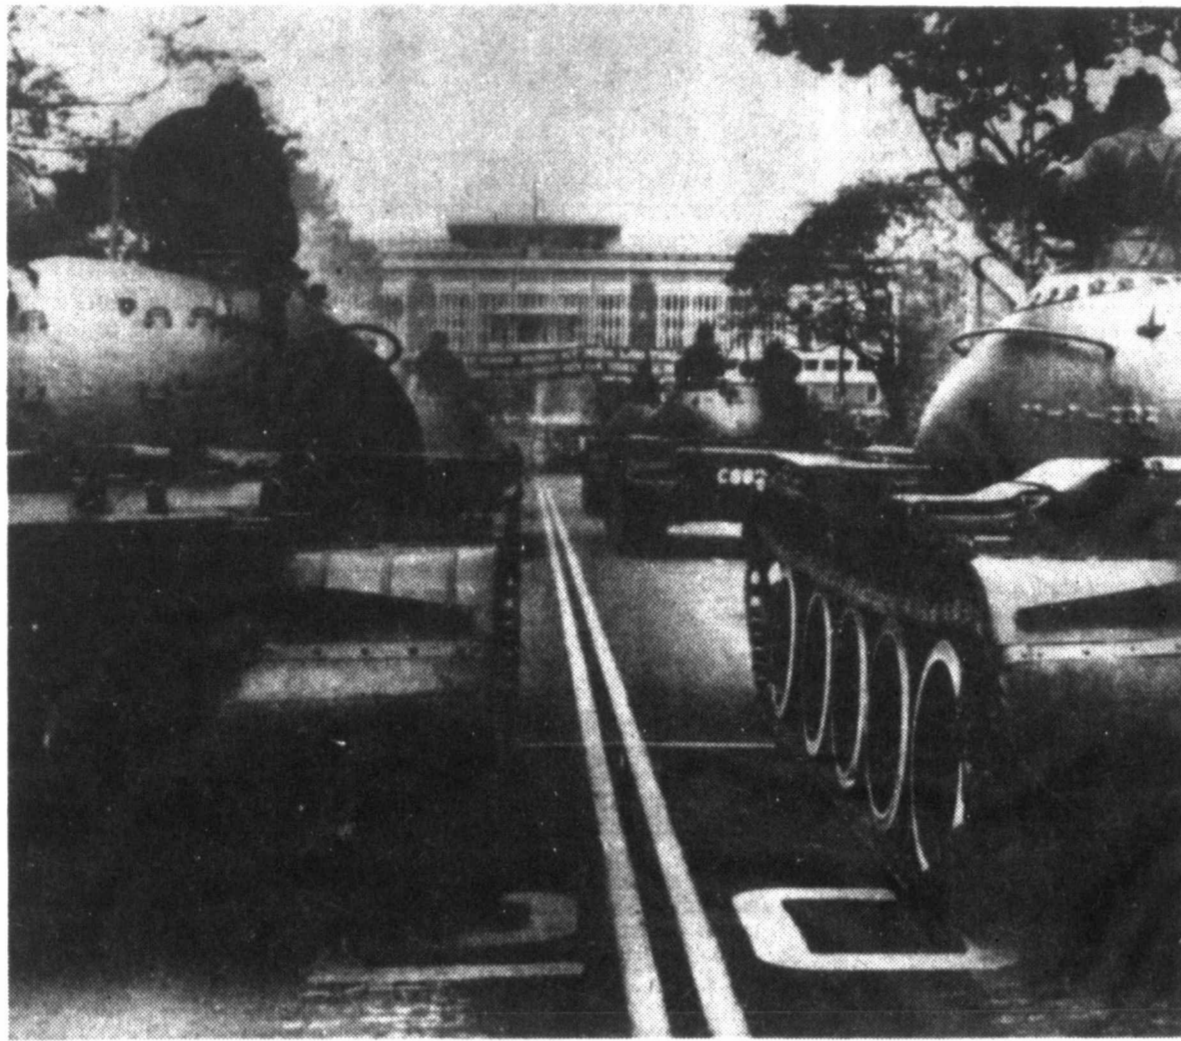

Moreover, the report issued today by the Commerce Department revised downward the gains posted by the index of leading indicators for the past two months — dropping the February increase from 0.7 percent to 0.5 percent and the January gain from 1.5 percent to 1.3 percent.

The index has not risen for three consecutive months since last May.

Most analysts had been expecting at least some gain in the March index as a signal the economy was ready to pick up steam after a first quarter in which growth, as measured by the gross national product, was only 1.3 percent.

Although many private economists view that as a bit optimistic, the majority of them have been predicting an annual growth rate of well over 3 percent for the year.

In another report today, the Commerce Department said the United States suffered an $11 billion foreign trade deficit last month, only a slight improvement from the $11.4 billion deficit run up in February.

Hail damage estimates go to $7 million

Damage reports from last week's hailstorm continue to roll in, with estimates of the loss now ranging from at least $1 million up to $7 million.

The storm that moved into town at an estimated 45 mph and without warning Thursday produced hailstones up to the size of baseballs. The ice stones pounded people caught outdoors by the sudden storm, shattered windows, knocked holes through roofs and battered vehicles.

In the 10-minute barrage of hail, 2,650 Pampa homes were damaged, according to a survey by the Red Cross.

Insurance companies and adjusters have called in extra help to deal with the rash of claims.

"It will be several months before it's finally tabulated," Jack Stroup, owner of Etheridge Claims Service, said.

Stroup stood by his original damage estimate of at least $1 million, qualifying the losses as a catastrophe.

Eddie Cole, another independent insurance adjuster, said his preliminary survey indicated damages will total about $7 million.

Cole, area manager of General Adjustment Bureau Business Service (GAB), said insurance agents remain "inundated" with claims.

He said losses have been compounded by water damage from subsequent rains that leaked through damaged roofs. He said the rains on the days following the hailstorm also have delayed inspections.

Bill Weatherbee, owner of Superior Claims Service, said he hated to take a "wild guess" about the total damages but said he "wouldn't be surprised" if they reach $2 million or more.

He said many homes in the south and east sides of town sustained "total losses" to windows and roofs.

Weatherbee said average residential losses have run from $1,500 to $2,000. He said many vehicles also sustained damages totaling $1,000 to $1,500. Weatherbee said the storm that hit Friday also caused some hail damage on the north side of town.

The Red Cross has begun a relief effort to supply repair materials to people without insurance or with inadequate insurance. The agency estimated that 60 percent of those residents suffering losses had little or no insurance.

The relief office at 106 N. Russell (the First Methodist Church education building) processed 50 applications Monday.

For the approved applicants, the Red Cross will donate the repair materials. Labor is to be furnished by family members.

Perryton Menonites also have said they will come to Pampa to help with the labor of making repairs.

'Fee' increases miff Kennedy

BY JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

No matter what the state legislature calls its proposed increases in government fees, a tax is a tax, Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said.

And the county judge is more than miffed that local officials ordered to collect the higher fees for the state will catch the flak from citizens, while legislators can declare: "We didn't raise taxes."

"Our Gray County taxpayers need to be aware that the state legislature is dipping deeper into our pockets to fund state-level programs, and the public is not supposed to mind because the money comes from county fees, rather than state taxes," Kennedy said.

"Bill after bill has been introduced to increase the fees charged by county government...but with the money going to the state under the disguise that state taxes have not been increased. The same technique was used during last year's special session when (fees for) license tags, vehicle registration and a multitude of indirect taxes were increased," the judge said.

"The money generated from the increased fees will go to the state to fund its approximately $3 billion increase in budget for the next two years," Kennedy added.

Some of the legislature's proposals include increases in court fees and fines. One of the biggest pushers of the fee hikes in the senate is Grant Jones, D-Abilene. Jones first proposed raising the filing fees for suits filed in district court (which would include divorces) from $25 to $100. Jones' bill would have sent the extra $75 collected by district clerks directly to the general fund of the state. The House dropped the Panel okays license fee hike

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas motorists would have to pay $16 for a driver's license instead of the current $10 under a measure approved by the Senate Finance Committee.

The unanimous action Monday increased the $12 price set last week by the House for the four-year driving permit.

The committee was scheduled to continue its work today on the House-passed bill to increase a large number of state fees by $106 million the next two years.

The drivers license amendment added another $30 million.

"The need for more money for the state is about all the rationale you need at a time like this," said Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, chairman of the committee and author of the amendment.

He said he hoped to have the fees bill ready for Senate debate next week.

The committee also approved an amendment by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, to decrease the House-approved $40 a month court probation fee to $25. The current fee is $15 a month. Farabee said the change would not affect state finances because all the probation fees go to county offices.

However, the committee was unable to reach final agreement on another Jones amendment that would increase the filing fee for civil suits in district courts from the current $25 to $75. The House set the fee at $65.

Farabee protested that some court fees were getting so high "that the average person won't be able to get a divorce without paying about $200 in just fees."

Ray Hardy, Harris County district clerk who said he spoke for the Texas District and County Clerks Association, protested that the proposed fee bill did not increase fees received by district clerks.

He said his Harris County office had a $6 million deficit and the fee bill would just make it worse, although it would make the state $2 million in Harris County.

"You are saying those who use the courts should pay for them," said Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur. "The courts are for everybody. To make people pay for using the courts is like saying if you don't have the gold, you don't have justice."

The Texas Association of Counties also opposed the courts fee plan.

Earlier the committee approved 10-1 a House-passed bill that would put new long distance telephone services within the state under the state sales tax. In 1988-89 local county and city governments would be able to levy a local sales tax.

Billy Hamilton of the state comptroller's office estimated the bill would produce $12.3 million in new revenue for the state the next two years.

proposed higher filing fee to $65, but Grant now wants to kick it up to $75.

Other proposed fee hikes that most of those in Austin decline to label taxes (one legislator has sponsored a bill to mandate that higher fees be called "taxes") include increases for driver's licenses, probation fees, marriage licenses, college tuition, various fines for criminal offenses, peace officers' service of legal papers and sales tax on long-distance phone service.

One bill would place an additional $1 fine on any criminal offense with the money to be used to send prosecutors and their staffs to schools.

Another would collect an additional $200 on any felony drug conviction with the money to be used for state-sponsored drug-abuse programs.

Part of the extra money generated by raising the filing fees in district court would be used "to increase funds available for the administration of justice in each county of the state," another way of saying that some judges and their staff would get pay raises, according to the Texas Association of Counties.

One bill would order an extra $20 fine on any misdemeanor or felony conviction, with the money to be used to pay lawyers for defending indigent clients.

Another would generate money to pay victims of crimes in Texas who live out of state.

The House bill raising the various fees and fines, which is now being considered by the senate, would generate about $106 million for the state.

During chamber banquet

Wheeler principal named man of year

WHEELER — Wheeler High School Principal Bob Wills was honored as Man of the Year Monday at the annual Wheeler Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

Wills, a Wheeler resident since 1972, was not the lone honoree at the banquet. Also honored were Dorothy Risner as Woman of the Year, Joel Dodd as Teen of the Year, Steve Walker as Volunteer Fireman of the Year, Adrian Risner as Employee of the Year and Jim Batton as Farmer-Rancher of the Year.

Also honored were Clarence Zybach for an outstanding contribution to agriculture and Shari Gail Porter as Alpha Mu Alpha sorority Woman of the Year.

The honorees were chosen by Wheeler residents who voted with ballots printed in The Wheeler Times. Dodd was chosen by Wheeler School officials.

Marshall Andis, local manager of Southwest Public Service paid tribute to Wills in a speech filled with anecdotes and praise. No relation to the famous country-western musician, Bob Wills, a singer in the 1940s, Wills "watched a bunch of our kids grow up," according to Andis.

"It is his job that the children be disciplined and praised," he told the banquet-goers.

Wills is a native of Athens, Tex., and later served in the Navy. He received his Masters' Degree and teaching certificate from West Texas State University. He coached and taught physical education and history. Wills and his wife, Evagela have three grown children.

A retired employee of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Risner has been secretary of the Wheeler First Baptist Church for two years. She is active in several church activities such as the Women's Missionary Union and the Youth Committee. She teaches junior high level Sunday School. She and her husband, Adrian, have one child who lives in Mustang, Okla., and two grandchildren.

Dodd, a senior at Wheeler High School has been active in football, basketball and track. A member of the National Honor Society, Dodd is one of the school's honor graduates, students with at grade average above 90. Dodd has also been involved in University Interscholastic League one-act play competition. Earlier this year, he received the Citizenship Award from the Las Pampas Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Adrian Risner is the vice president of the First National Bank, where he has worked since 1952. In his 33 years of service, he has worked in several capacities including teller, bookkeeper and loan officer. He is active in civic and church activities.

Batton is a rancher in the Mobeetie area, where he serves on the Mobeetie School Board and the Wheeler County Soil and Water Conservation board. He helps with Wheeler County 4-H Clubs and Future Farmers of America, as well as the Wheeler County Rodeo and Livestock Show. A graduate of the University of Tulsa and Oklahoma State University, he raises registered Herefords.

The Alpha Mu Alpha Woman of the Year, Shari Gail Porter, works at the First National Bank of Wheeler and was elected to the Wheeler School Board this year. She and her husband, Jim Porter, have two children and are graduates of Wheeler High School.

Ordinance changes recommended

Board approves home beauty shop

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

The city's Board of Adjustments granted permission Monday for a Pampa woman to operate a beauty shop at her home and recommended the city re-examine its ordinance requirements for home occupations.

Mrs. Eblan Hernandez, 1318 E. Kingsmill, had appealed to the board after her request for a permit for the shop had been denied by the city.

Steve Vaughn, head of the Department of Neighborhood Integrity, said he had denied the permit because he did not think Hernandez's shop qualified under the conditions specified in the city ordinance.

Hernandez plans to have a building constructed and then moved onto her property and permanently attached to her house. She said it would meet the city building codes for a permanent structure.

Vaughn had stated he did not think the ordinance permitted a new structure to be attached to a home for the purpose of a home occupation.

The ordinance states a home occupation must be operated in the permanent structure of the house. He had interpreted that to mean an attachment to the house would not be part of the original permanent structure.

The board had held the hearing and initial discussion of the appeal last Thursday and reconvened

Monday afternoon to reach its decision.

Board member Jim Ward said, "I was certainly unclear on the definition of a home occupation the other day." Monday he clarified that Hernandez's shop would be a new construction, but that no sign would be erected, no take-products would be sold, no entrance would be available into the living quarters and adequate parking would be available.

Ward said he didn't "agree wholeheartedly with the way the ordinance is written." He supported Hernandez's request, saying it was within the spirit of the ordinance guidelines.

Ward said the ordinance should be rewritten to make it more enforceable.

Board member Ken Smith agreed, adding that the request had the support of the people living in the neighborhood.

Board member David Miller said the board had a duty to all the people who lived in the vicinity. "Those who live there are in favor," he said, the only protest came from a property owner who lives elsewhere in the city, he noted.

Miller said he was worried about setting a precedence for more appeals. He said the ordinance should have more specific requirements which would limit the routes of appeal available.

Ward said the ordinance can't be strictly enforced until the wording

H.L. ANDERSON

REDDING - H.L. "Andy" Anderson, 64, of Redding died April 23 at Mercy Medical Center in Redding.

Memorial services were held April 25 at McDonald's Redding Chapel with Rev. James Horton officiating.

Mr. Anderson, manager of Lake Shasta Caverns, was active for many years in the Asphalt Cowboys, the fund raising organization that is responsible for many of the activities associated with Redding's Rodeo Week each May.

In 1977, Anderson was selected as the club's "most outstanding cowboy." He became "grand exalted puncher" in 1978, and "top hand" a year later.

Mr. Anderson also had served as president of the Redding Host Lions Club, the Shasta Dam Area Chamber of Commerce and the Shasta Lake Resort Owners Association.

He was honored as "Citizen of the Month" by the Redding Trade Club in 1982.

In 1974, he was elected president of the National Cave Association for a two-year term. He served as third vice president of the International Caves Association in 1978.

Mr. Anderson was born Jan. 30, 1921, in Pampa and attended Pampa Schools.

He retired in 1960 as a captain in the Marine Corps, where he spent 21 years, 11 of them as an officer. He served in World War II and the Korean conflict.

Moving to Redding in 1962, he served as an office manager of Red Star Industrial Service, then as a personnel manager of U.S. Plywood Corp., predecessor of Champion International.

An avid spelunker, Anderson was attracted by Baird Cave on the shore of Shasta Lake.

He was a founder of the Masonic Lodge in Yokosuka, Japan, and a member of the Marine Corps Retired Officers Association.

Anderson also belonged to Redding Elks Lodge 1073, the American Legion's Boomtown Post in Central Valley and Redding Post 1934 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Survivors include his wife Virginia, of the home; a daughter, Victoria Morris of Redding; two sons, Tim Anderson of Victoria, British Columbia, and Michael Anderson of Ketchikan, Alaska; a sister, Venora Cole of Pampa; two brothers, Sam Anderson of Boston, Mass., and Phillip Anderson of Texas; four grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

AIDING THE LADY - Approximately 300 students at Wilson Elementary School spent their Thursday physical education class times participating in the Run for Liberty project. Principal Ray Thornton reported most students had obtained pledges for the run to raise funds toward the restoration of the Statue of Liberty. Money was pledged for each lap the students ran or walked in a 20-minute period. The pledge forms will be sent to the Run for Liberty Processing Center, which later will send statements to the sponsors based on the number of laps for each student in the project. Students who received at least 10 sponsors will later receive Run for Liberty T-shirts. New parks advisory board elects officers at 1st meet

The recently appointed members of the city's Parks and Recreation Advisory Board had its organizational meeting Monday night in the City Commission Room at City Hall.

Duane Harp was elected to serve as chairman of the new board.

Selected as vice chairman was Gary Meador, with Larry Hollis as secretary.

Other members of the new board are W. A. Morgan, Mae Williams, Joel Derington and Mrs. Robert Sanford.

The board will meet regularly at 4:30 p.m. on the fourth Tuesday of each month in the City Commission Room.

Following the organization of the board, the members discussed various needs for the parks and recreation facilities of the city with David Callison, head of the Parks and Recreation Department.

Callison noted the city has a master plan on file for city parks facilities, developed by Texas A&M University. The board needs to review the plan and make any recommendations for its updating to the city commission, Callison explained.

Harp said the board should plan for future parks to be developed in areas to be annexed into the city. Meador said the city might consider the possibility of zoning requirements for developers to include parks in future additions.

Morgan said there has been a problem with the Pampa Environmental Beautification Foundation donating trees to city parks only to have the trees die because they had not received proper watering. He said the PEBF is willing to work more closely with the city to make sure the donated trees survive.

Williams said there are no adequate restroom facilities in parks on the southside of the city. Callison agreed many parks have no facilities, and those that do exist are in bad shape, victims of too much vandalism, he said. The board discussed the need to find solutions to keep restroom facilities operating.

Noting a problem in manpower, especially during the summer months, to keep up with maintenance of all the parks and facilities, the board discussed the possibility of hiring more seasonal help in summer on a part-time basis.

Callison said a large part of the PARD crew is tied down in two areas during the summer: mowing the parks yards and picking up the trash in the parks. He said temporary help in summer could free the permanent crew for other jobs, such as landscaping, maintenance and construction projects.

Sanford said there are problems in the summer from mosquitoes, resulting from creeks not draining properly after rains. Derington suggested the city contact pesticide company representatives for advice and consultation on the problem.

Callison said the city is erecting a new wading pool in Central Park, with one to three others being planned. The board said the Marcus Sanders Park should be next on the priority list.

Other items discussed at the organizational meeting included the possibility of a city volleyball league program, signs to guide travelers to the parks, placing more drinking fountains in the parks and general maintenance problems.

The board plans to visit all the parks in the city to become acquainted with them and their needs, with the first tour being planned for its next meeting on May 28.

Cub leaders training set

Training for Cub Scout leaders will be conducted soon, announced Helen Cook, Cub Scout training chairman of the Adobe Walls Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Training sessions will be held for Cubmasters, Den leaders, Webelos leaders, assistants and committee members, Cook said.

The sessions will be held Thursday, May 11, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, 727 W. Browning.

Webelos leaders and assistants will pay $4, which includes a meal. Everyone else is asked to bring a sack lunch and pay $2.50, Cook said.

A babysitter will be available at $2 per child.

"Training not only makes a difference in the lives of boys, but it is a factor in the tenure and satisfaction of the leader himself," Cook said.

"If more and more young people are to have their dreams of Scouting fulfilled through a quality program, we know that we must have informed volunteer leaders," she explained.

Persons wanting further information may call Tary R. Clump at 669-6845 or 665-2033 or Lanora Ripple at 669-3309 or 665-0569.

Shop approved is more specific.

Mike Connor, acting chairman of the board, said he realizes other home occupations in the city don't meet the guidelines, but "today that's irrelevant" to Hernandez's appeal.

He said he felt Hernandez's shop didn't meet the guidelines because the salon equipment would be the type not usually found in a home and because the addition violates the concept of the use of the main structure.

"I have nothing against people working in their homes," he said, but he didn't think this case met the guidelines.

Connor recommended changing the ordinance "to meet what we see out there."

He said the way the ordinance is written, "there are good arguments on both sides" concerning how to interpret "main structure" and "home." But if Hernandez's building meets city codes, it could be considered part of the main structure, he said.

Ward said the ordinance needs

"either you can or you can't" situations without permitting latitudes of interpretation. The wording now is so vague that many cases have to be considered on individual merits, he said.

He added the vagueness of the statute permits so many interpretations, with Vaughn's being only one. He said the board didn't have to accept Vaughn's interpretation and thus could approve Hernandez's request without it having to meet the more strict requirements for a hardship case.

Miller said Hernandez "has showed her willingness" to meet the standards for the structure and the operation of a home occupation. The only negative element had been Vaughn's interpretation regarding the moving of a new structure to be attached to the home, he said.

Ward moved the board rule in favor of Hernandez, with the understanding the addition would meet city codes to be a part of the permanent structure. He also recommended the city re-examine the ordinance for more strict definitions and wording regarding home occupation standards.

Miller seconded the motion, and the other two board members joined in approval.

Vaughn said he has already talked with City Manager Bob Hart on considering recommendations for rewriting the ordinance. Vaughn agreed there's some problems with the ordinance. He said the guidelines and standards need to be specific enough for the city to take into court with confidence.

Better wording would also aid enforcement of the ordinance, he said, and cut down on having to consider so many cases on individual merits and appeals.

Vaughn noted he had pushed for the organization of the Board of Adjustments and was glad to see it in operation.

The Hernandez appeal was the first case for the recently organized board.

Coalition urges Superfund reauthorization

AUSTIN (AP) — Leaders of a coalition of 30 environmental and consumer organizations said cleaning up the 1,112 documented hazardous waste sites in Texas will require the state's support of a strong Superfund bill in Congress.

Texas also needs to spend some money itself to get the cleanup underway, Ken Kramer, representing the Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club, told a Capitol news conference Monday.

"Texas often has the image of being provincial, but Texans cannot ignore the need to support reauthorization of the federal Superfund," Kramer said.

"We can do our share in achieving clean up of hazardous waste sites, but we need federal funds to complete the job even here in our own state."

Similar news conferences were scheduled by the coalition in seven other metropolitan areas — Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Beaumont, El Paso and Tyler.

Kramer said the coalition endorses a "strong" bill by U.S. Rep. Gerry Sikorski of Minnesota that would provide additional funds for the Environmental Protection Agency to clean up toxic waste sites. The current Superfund bill expires later this year.

"The petrochemical industry in Texas wants a weak, do-nothing Superfund bill," said Cyrus Mehri, representing Public Citizen, a consumer organization.

"The manufacturers of hazardous waste want to reap the profits of their poisons, but do not want to be held accountable for the dangerous wastes they leave behind."

Mehri, of Washington, said U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, voted March 1 for a Senate Superfund bill that Mehri said was "inadequately funded and had no mandatory schedules or standards for cleanup."

Kramer stressed that even if the Superfund is reauthorized, Texas must provide about 10 percent matching state money plus provide money for a state clean-up fund.

Kramer said a bill voted out of a state House committee last week provides only $10.75 million for both purposes.

"That is about half of what the Texas Department of Water Resources estimated may be needed for those purposes over the 1986-87 biennium and reflects the hope that 50 percent of needed funds will come from private parties. ... There is no guarantee of that," Kramer said.

"We want Senator Bentsen to meet with representatives of the 30 organizations represented in these statewide press conferences, just as he has met with the chemical lobby," said Michael Twombly, state director of Public Citizen. "Our health and safety depend on it."

Senators scuffle in hallway after comment made on Parker's indictment AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth, apologized on the floor of the Texas Senate early today after scuffling in a Capitol hallway with Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, in a skirmish triggered when Parmer made a comment regarding Parker's recent indictment.

The incident occurred shortly before midnight and overshadowed a filibuster that Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi, waged for almost 20 hours in an attempt to defeat, or at least delay, passage of a proposal to put the state in charge of regulating shrimp and oyster fishing.

After Truan sat down at 5:44 a.m., extending his filibuster to 19 hours 52 minutes, the Senate tentatively approved the bill he opposed on voice vote. After adjourning for a few seconds, the Senate returned and sent the bill to the House, also on voice vote.

Truan kept on talking as Parmer accepted Parker's invitation to step outside to settle their differences.

Senate Sergeant-at-arms Steve Guest said he saw Parker throw Parmer against the wall, and another witness said Parmer's glasses flew off. Parmer said Parker did grab him by the vest and swung him around but he didn't remember hitting the wall or momentarily losing his glasses.

"There was no swing. I was not injured. I was not struck," said Parmer, a former mayor of Fort Worth. "He was angry and with some justification."

Parker had joined Truan after 11 p.m. and was at his desk, entertaining shrimpers in the gallery and others with remarks against the legislation when Parmer, from his own desk about 20 feet away, asked if any amendments were pending.

"Parmer, you're going to keep it up and you're never going to be elected to a job two terms — I've been trying to give you advice," said Parker.

Parmer responded, "Senator, I may not be elected but I ain't been indicted yet."

Parker, who is under indictment in Jefferson County on felony charges of engaging in criminal activity and wholesale promotion of obscene material, replied in seemingly good humor, "Just wait. There's some of those who have been and some of us that should have been."

Parmer briefly pursued what amendment was pending, and Parker said, "Sen. Parmer, I think what you and I ought to do is go out back and talk about your smart remarks."

Both senators walked out of the chamber into a hallway near the members' lounge, and several Senate employees dashed after them.

"Knock him out," came a yell that seemed to come from the gallery.

As several reporters ran into the hallway, Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, already was between Parmer, 45, and Parker, 50, who cursed Parmer. Help soon arrived, and the two senators were led back to the Senate floor.

Parmer went to his desk, and addressed Sen. John Sharp, D-Victoria, who was presiding. "Mr. President, I wish to issue an apology to my colleague Sen. Parker and the Senate. I spoke out of turn, and I am sincerely sorry."

"I wish to apologize to my colleague from Jefferson (County). I was wrong. I was in error, and I am sincerely sorry."

A photographer who asked them to pose for a picture found them quite willing to do so.

"Me and Carl reached our flash points at about the same time," Parmer told the photographer.

Commodities broker gets 35-year sentence in multi-million dollar overseas oil swindle

HOUSTON (AP) — A commodities broker faces a 35-year prison sentence for arranging the sinking of an oil tanker off the Senegalese coast as part of a multimillion dollar oil fraud scheme.

Frederick Soudan, 41, of Houston apologized Monday after U.S. District Judge Carl Bue read the prison sentence.

"I got involved in something beyond my comprehension," he said. "I should have known better. I made a mistake ... and I'm very sorry."

Soudan will be eligible for parole after 10 years. Bue also told Soudan he should try to repay the $4.25 million prosecutors claim he made in a $56 million oil swindle.

Soudan was convicted on March 26 of 17 counts of wire fraud, perjury, interstate transportation of stolen property, conspiracy to defraud the United States and conspiracy to obstruct justice. He had faced up to 86 years in prison and an $88,000 fine.

Prosecutors contended Soudan stole 200,000 tons of crude from its Italian owner and ordered it delivered to South Africa on the supertanker Salem.

According to the 22-count indictment, Soudan and four other men arranged for the tanker to be sunk off the coast of Senegal on Jan. 17, 1980, to cover up the theft.

Government prosecutors said Soudan made $4.25 million from the scheme, which they claimed was part of a conspiracy to steal 1.4 million barrels of oil from European firms and secretly deliver the crude to South Africa.

South Africa was eager to buy oil because the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries refused to sell to the nation because of its racist policies.

Soudan's lawyers argued during the 11-week federal trial that their client was an innocent oil broker who was duped in the deal by a "Greek mafia."

Prosecutors said Soudan's largest assets are two bank accounts in the Bahamas and Switzerland, totalling about $300,000. The money will be divided among Shell International Trading Co., which owned the oil, and Lloyd's of London, which insured the sunken vessel, prosecutors said.

Bue decided against levying a fine, saying it was more important that Soudan try to make restitution.

The judge also told Soudan he should try to sell some of his belongings to repay the money. Soudan's brother-in-law, Abdul Wahab Al Ghazou, 48, of Syria, also was sentenced Monday to five years in prison.

Intimidated, but not upset

I often regret that I didn't do better in high school, that I didn't read more or take harder classes. Oh sure, I made straight A's in my junior and senior years, but horrid grades as a freshman and sophomore kept me out of the Honor Society. Even without the opportunity to flunk trigonometry or physics, I ended up 24th out of a class of 56.

Good grades came easy for my brother Craig. I once thought I knew his secret: he slept in class. He'd be dozing away in chemistry and Mr. McGee would ask him to explain some complex formula. Craig would wake up, give the correct answer, then go back to sleep. I tried that once in biology, but the only thing that happened was that Kimi and her friends on the basketball team threw spitballs at me.

Craig was so set on maintaining his four-point grade average that he hung his head in shame every time he received a B. I tried to convince him to appreciate what he got — "Think of all the dumb people in Africa who would give anything to get that B" — and assure him that he's still a smart person, but it didn't work.

Grades came easy for the other valedictorians. Jim, the valedictorian in 1976, was an intellectual who used words like nomothetic and recalcitrant in lunchroom conversation. He had to be restrained from implementing his ideas for the yearbook, with the picture of our homecoming queen, he wanted to include a quote from one of his philosopher idols about how it is better to reign in hell than to serve in heaven. When the boys' basketball team took to wearing colorful beads and big berets, he chastised them for "adopting characteristics of the negroid race."

Lynn, the 1976 salutatorian, wrote in my yearbook "to the most talented, wittiest, most dedicated person I ever met." She has not spoken to me since.

There was hot competition for the top place in the class of 1977. The sure bet was Renee Zinck, who, after years of being listed at the end of everything, obviously had good reason to want to graduate at the front of her class. Everyone was impressed with how studious she looked when she read, her eyes intently fixed on her book. But I knew that it wasn't sociology that held her rapt attention, it was the latest Harlequin romance that she had hidden in her textbook.

Renee could have been the top student if it weren't for Karlyn Kay Koenig. Karlyn, Renee and I were Snittys, an elite group of English IV students (so named because of our "Snitty" attitude to our inferiors) who were allowed to ignore Mrs. Bradshaw's grammar lectures if we ace the quizzes and did an extra book report.

1977 was the year of "Welcome Back Kotter," a TV show about a teacher in a poor Brooklyn School. To most of the kids at school, the program assured that it was okay, even desirable, to be a cut-up, a juvenile delinquent or a moron. I was proud that I was never one of them. But I was no honor student either.

Whenever I felt intimidated by all the awards and honors the smart kids received, Mom assured me that, with the exception of my brother, they'd probably all end up drunk in an alley someday. Unfortunately, that is not the case.

Lois, the valedictorian of the class of 1975, uses her linguistic skills to work with international clients at the Hertz worldwide reservation center in Oklahoma City. She obviously makes more money than I do.

Last I heard, in 1981, Karlyn was an honor student at the Oklahoma University School of Pharmacy. She probably makes more money than the entire Briscoe ISD faculty combined. Craig is a dentist in Stillwater, Okla. and if it weren't for his loan payments and office debts, he'd be making more money than the combined salaries of the entire editorial staff at The Pampa News.

I'm still a bit intimidated, but I'm not upset. After all, how many of them get paid for writing about people they knew in high school?

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T Communications"), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of rates for its services. The new rates will be effective May 14, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the PUC. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by the proposed rates.

AT&T Communications has filed a reprice of its tariffs designed to more closely recover access and other costs for WATS and 800 Service and all private line services including Channel Services, Foreign Exchange (FX), DATAPHONE* Digital Service, and OCC Facilities.

Also proposed is the institution of a charge for Directory Assistance to begin to recover access costs incurred for such service and increases in rates for operator assisted AT&T Long Distance calls. The initial minute charge for all AT&T Long Distance calls and additional minute rates for AT&T Long Distance calls 51 miles or less are proposed for increases to reflect the access charges approved by the PUC for such calls.

The proposed new rates for all services would result in an increase in adjusted test period revenues of $139 million or 12.7 percent.

A complete copy of the proposed tariffs are on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Government union to resist savings

The American Federation of Government Employees thinks its members are getting a bum rap, so it is spending $300,000 on an advertising campaign to improve their image.

There is an inherent problem, however, that fancy advertising campaigns won't change. Government employees supposedly are in the business of serving people, but the nature of their jobs is such that most often they are regulating lives instead of helping people. That causes resentment, no matter how nice the regulator.

When someone tells you what you can and can't do, and makes you stand in line for the privilege, it's hard not to feel resentful.

Unfortunately, that's not the thrust of the new three-week advertising campaign. The government workers' union instead is trying to counter what it considers an unprecedented attack by the top federal employee, President Ronald Reagan.

What has Reagan done to merit such hostility? He has proposed saving taxpayers some money, floating the idea of a 5-percent pay cut for 2.2 million civilian federal employees. The Reagan administration is flirting with other cost-saving measures, including hiring more temporary employees instead of fulltime workers and increasing the use of outside contractors.

That's what has the federal bureaucrats' union upset? Don't they understand that there isn't an unlimited supply of taxpayer dollars to support their habits? Or are they primarily concerned about keeping the pool of dues-paying union members well stocked?

Behind the high-minded talk, you have a typical union-management conflict. The boss says the revenues are down and the company has to cut expenses. The workers say to heck with costs, don't expect to balance the books at our expense.

In private industry, it's easier to prove that revenues are down, and often quite difficult to turn fortunes around. In the federal government, the line has always been that if revenues are down, just increase taxes. People working in private industry will never notice.

Reagan made a campaign pledge in 1980 to run government in a more businesslike manner. In some ways, he's apparently trying to follow through on that pledge, so it shouldn't be too surprising that he has gotten himself—and his company, if you will—into a problem with its union.

That's something to keep in mind when you hear about the dedication and selflessness of federal bureaucrats. It's your money on the line there.

A warning from Reagan

When President Reagan goes to Bonn this week, he will carry a message the Canadians and Europeans may not want to hear - but it is in their self interest to listen.

That message is: If you want to keep pace with American growth, and hang on to your capital, you had better cut your marginal income - tax rates, now. Because when we get through with tax reform, America will become the capital mecca of the world.

As proof of his thesis, he can point to two major developments: the rising "net inflow" of capital to the U.S. since our top marginal tax rates were cut to 50 percent in 1981 - 82 (This was caused mainly by U.S. capital staying home, instead of being exported.); and the parallel experience of Canada, whose own sluggish economic growth and soaring deficits have resulted from RISING tax rates in the same period.

Contrary to popular misconceptions, the "net inflow" of capital to the U.S. has not been caused by excessive capital flows to the U.S. from overseas. In fact, the 1984 inflow was the same in constant dollars as in 1978 and 1981, when the dollar was 40 - percent lower than today.

The big difference is: U.S. capital outflows overseas have dropped 58 percent in constant dollars since 1981. They are now 41 - percent below 1978, principally because since 1978 U.S. capital gains tax rates have been cut from a top of 49 percent to 20 percent.

This huge drop in capital outflow has come during a period when American credit markets have expanded by a record 32 percent in real dollars. That means soaring U.S. capital is now staying home with a vengeance and expanding.

This is why the U.S. economy has created over 8 million jobs since December 1982, and nearly 1.8 million since last October - more jobs than the Common Market countries have created in the last twelve years!

It is also why the U.S. now has the highest employment ratio in its history, and the highest labor force participation rate - almost 65 percent of all adults. Relative to the supposedly "booming '80s" the "constant" base unemployment rate is now 40 - percent LOWER than during the record year of 1966.

All this at a time when the Common Market countries and the United Kingdom have an average unemployment rate of more than 11 percent and rising. And Canada's sluggish economy still has a rate above 11 percent.

Canada, for example, dares not lecture the U.S. about budget deficits and the need for higher U.S. taxes. That high - tax nation just posted its highest deficit ever - $34.8 billion which amounts to more than $1,400 per capita, nearly double the U.S. figure or less than $800 per capita.

Worse, Canada posted this deficit in the third year of a weak recovery which has been attenuated by a substantial RISE in Canada's average marginal tax rates (from inflation). Its overall tax burden has soared from 32.9 percent of GNP in 1981 to nearly 34 percent in 1984. The U.S. burden has FALLEN from 32.4 to 30.9 percent in that same period.

The same pattern holds true of virtually all the Common Market countries, where much - higher tax rates have produced very slow economic recovery. Several of these countries have produced deficits in excess of 6 percent of GNP, compared with less than 5 percent in the U.S.

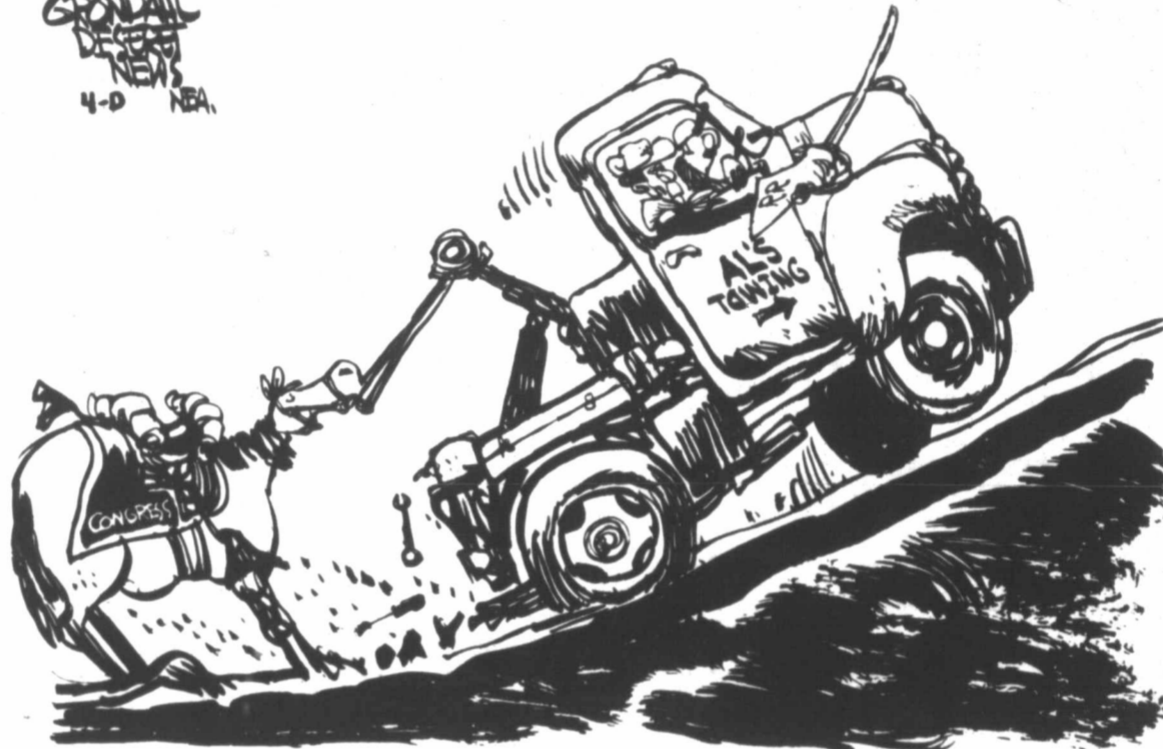

Both Italy and Sweden have already reached the point where every tax increase makes their deficits larger and their economies more sluggish. Italy's 90 - percent 1981 tax increase succeeded only in increasing its relative deficit burden nearly 70 percent from 10 to 17 percent GNP.

In short, the U.S. has every right to warn these countries that unless they get their own tax rates and burdens down, they are in for even bigger trouble, especially with serious tax reform now looming on the U.S. horizon.

Top marginal tax rates in Europe now average more than 65 percent - and in some countries rise to as high as 80 or 90 percent. One does not have to be an economist to know that if the U.S. cuts its top rates to the 30 - 35 percent range, the capital flow into the U.S. will quickly double its present rates.

Reagan has no need to apologize to any of the summit conferees - and every right to instruct them on how to grow.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, April 30, the 120th day of 1985. There are 245 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
Ten years ago - on April 30, 1975 - the South Vietnamese capital of Saigon fell to Communist forces as President Duong Van Minh announced an unconditional surrender. Three decades of conflict that had racked Vietnam were over.

On this date:
Five years ago: Several gunmen claiming to represent dissident Iranian Arabs seized the Iranian embassy in London, taking about 20 hostages.

One year ago: President Reagan ended his visit to China by concluding three agreements with his hosts on scientific and cultural exchanges, economic cooperation and the development of nuclear power.

Today's birthdays: Actress Eve Arden is 73. Singer Willie Nelson is 52. Actor Gary Collins is 47. Actress Jill Clayburgh is 41.

Only her boyfriend cares

The big news in the publishing world these days is that Brooke Shields soon will have a book out. It is to be titled "On Your Own."

The even bigger news is that the lovely Miss Shields, movie star, wearer of tight blue jeans in commercials, and presently a student at Yale, answers one of the great questions of the age in her book:

Yes, writes Miss Shields, she is a virgin.

This revelation made the wire services and was prominently displayed on the front of the features section of USA Today.

I had to ask myself, what does it say about our society that it's big news when a 19 - year - old girl admits she is a virgin?

When I was growing up, it was generally presumed that all 19 - year - old girls who weren't married were virgins.

There were some exceptions, of course, those girls who were considered loose, but there usually was just one for every community.

I must applaud Miss Shields for remaining chaste in the midst of all the promiscuity of today and in a time when many members of the feminine gender are casting aside the restraints of their mothers in the name of liberation from outdated mores.

But, let me also ask this:
Has there ever been a virgin who has been seen naked as many times and by as many people as Brooke Shields?

Did you see her in "Pretty Baby?" This is the nation's favorite virgin running around in a torn loincloth?

It's not that I doubt Miss Shield's virginity. If she says she is a virgin obviously we have to take her word for it.

But how can she flaunt her body on the silver screen and expect to reap reward on a book in which she apparently wants to come off like Miss Goody - Goody?

I certainly wasn't losing any sleep over whether or not Brooke Shields was virginal, but if she's going to make such a big deal over that fact, why doesn't she do a remake of the movie where Shirley Temple sang, "The Good Ship Lollipop," rather than a New Orleans hooker as she did in "Pretty Baby?"

I've never been a Brooke Shields fan in the first place. Sexy? No way. Natassia Kinski is sexy. Angie Dickinson, even at her age, is sexy.

Brooke Shields looks like some airhead who couldn't carry Joan Collins' garter belt.

Furthermore, her acting ability is located mostly in the seat of those blue jeans she sells.

I suppose sooner or later, every celebrity is bound to write a book. We crave information about anybody who ever had the slightest moment dancing in the public eye.

But Brooke Shields writing a book to tell the world she's a virgin?

Other than her boyfriend, who cares?

Biggest debate came on state budget

The big issue this week in the State Capitol was the four - and - one - half - hour debate on the state budget for the next two years.

Most efforts to change the bill failed. The big fight developed when an effort was made to restore a $9 million cut in the budget of the University of Texas at Permian Basin in the Midland - Odessa area.

A valid point of order was called by a group of representatives who voted just two days before for a $106 million fee increase for state services. Republican State Representative Kelly Godwin of Odessa had voted against the fee bill, yet he distributed a letter to each representative's desk asking for support in his efforts to restore the cuts for his local university. This didn't set well with Speaker Lewis.

Later in the debate, cuts were made in the administration budgets of all the University of Texas campuses across the state to restore the $9 million loss. Godwin's defeated Democratic opponent, Jay Gibson, was hired by a group of individuals from the

STATE REPRESENTATIVE
FOSTER
WHALEY

capitol comments

Midland - Odessa area to help restore the cuts. Ironically, Gibson was the Chairman of the Budget and Oversight Committee on Higher Education during the 1983 legislative session.

To illustrate how the state budget has grown in 10 years, here are some examples of the 1974 - 1975 year in comparison with the 1984 - 1985 budget:

Agriculture Department, from $18.8 million to $40.4 million.
Arts Commission, from $317,000 to $9 million.

Attorney General's Office, from $7 million to $37 million.

Comptroller of Public Accounts, from $32 million to $203 million.

Department of Corrections, from $65 million to $619 million.

Parks and Wildlife Department, from $86 million to $168 million.

Railroad Commission, from $14 million to $60 million.

Texas Education Agency, from $3 billion to $9 billion.

The session will end on May 27. Unless something unforeseen occurs, the budget will be balanced without a tax increase.

Members are tired of the grind.

It has been said if most members had to make up their mind near to the end of a legislative session as to whether they would file for re - election again few would file.

They soon forget the 15 - 18 hour days that are spent in the legislative grind. Serving in the legislature is a very rewarding experience. A few thank you notes now and then helps heal the wounds of a few cutting notes and phone calls one receives during each session.

Woman abducted in fatal shootout found unharmed

Mistrial declared in Kyle murder trial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A woman abducted after a shootout in which one man was killed and two were wounded was rescued unharmed after she scribbled a note on a restroom wall pleading for help, authorities said.

Donna Irwin, 18, was shaken Monday, but "she's in good condition," said Jim Whitaker, chief of detectives for the Iberville Parish Sheriff's Department in Plaquemine, La.

An 28-year-old Arlington man and a 22-year-old Houston man were being held in the Iberville Parish Jail for Fort Worth authorities.

In the meantime, a female customer stopped at the station, went into the restroom and found the note.

About five miles farther east on I-10, the Iberville Parish sheriff's deputies stopped the men's truck. The two were arrested without incident, Whitaker said.

Deputies also recovered a .22-caliber automatic pistol believed to have been used in the fatal shooting of Allen, and a large pocket knife, Whitaker said.

Authorities were investigating whether the pickup was stolen, Whitaker said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge declared a mistrial and Ricky Kyle burst into tears after a jury deadlocked 10-2 in favor of convicting him of murdering his millionaire father to avoid being disinherited.

"We're elated that the state failed to convince these fine jurors that Ricky Kyle committed a crime," said Kyle's attorney, Jack Pate. "We anticipated an acquittal and we continue to anticipate it."

Superior Court Judge Robert Devich ended the six-month trial Monday after jurors deliberated 4½ weeks but failed to reach a verdict. Devich set a June 21 hearing on a possible retrial.

Kyle, 22, who was accompanied to court by his wife, Kelly, and their son, Justin, declined to comment.

Henry Harrison Kyle Sr., 60, a former Dallas resident, was shot to death July 22, 1983, in his Bel-Air mansion as he and Ricky Kyle searched for prowlers. The prosecution contended he was murdered, but the defense portrayed Ricky Kyle as firing in self-defense against his abusive, overbearing father.

Deputy District Attorney Lewis Watnick said he was disappointed. "We did have what I would consider overwhelming evidence," he said. "Ten jurors thought it was a very solid case. If 10 believe it was sufficient...."

Watnick said he thought the case would be retried.

The prosecution contended Kyle killed his father because he feared being written out of Kyle Sr.'s will.

The elder Kyle, whose personal fortune was estimated at $20 million, headed a $100 million empire that included apartments, restaurants, dairy farms, coal mines, a bank and a television production company.

Juror Bruce Bauder, 32, disclosed that only two jurors voted for a first-degree murder conviction on the first ballot. The votes changed later, as jurors realized they could not vote for a lesser charge unless they first came to a unanimous vote on the first-degree count.

The two jurors who held out for an innocent verdict told reporters they thought Kyle shot his father in self-defense. They said they resisted intense pressure from the others, who pressed for a guilty verdict.

"I felt he (Ricky) was an abused child and I think he feared for his life," said Grace Williams, 55. "I think that's why he shot."

"I felt Henry Kyle was the one who shot first," said the other holdout, Marilyn Williams, 37, no relation. For that reason, she said the killing was lawful.

The jury began its deliberations March 27 after five months of testimony.

The elder Kyle had moved from Dallas into the Stone Canyon Road mansion several months earlier after taking over Four Star International, a television production company.

Ricky Kyle testified that his father, who he said often beat him, had threatened for years to disinherit him, and defense attorney Michael P. Gibson said Kyle felt he had already been cut from his father's will.

The share of the estate for Kyle's half-sister, Jackie Phillips, jumped from $10,000 to $1 million after Ricky Kyle was charged with murder, Gibson said. In the original will, Ricky and his brother, Scott, were each to receive half of the estate.

The two are also wanted in the shooting death Sunday night of Kevin Allen, 21, and the wounding of two other Fort Worth men, David Suson, 32, and his brother-in-law, James Bell, 31.

Suson was shot in the head and was in critical condition early today at John Peter Smith Hospital. Bell was shot in the face and was listed in good condition at JPS.

The three men who were shot were driving around in the Lake Worth area when they came across Miss Irwin and her date, Thomas Emmitt Cox, 22, as they were being attacked by two men at a scenic overlook at Lake Worth in northwest Tarrant County, said Fort Worth police Detective J.D. Roberts.

Roberts said the two men robbed Miss Irwin and Cox and threatened to kill them. About that time, the three other men drove up, were pulled out of their truck and shot. Cox escaped and ran for help while the two attackers fled, forcing Miss Irwin to go with them, Roberts said.

Miss Irwin's captors apparently traveled by pickup truck to Louisiana. They stopped at about 5:30 p.m. Monday at the Ramah Truck Stop on Interstate 10 west of Baton Rouge. Tony Forty, a gas station attendant at the truck stop, said they stopped and allowed Miss Irwin to use the restroom.

"She just walked in and walked out," said Forty, 56, adding that one of the captors stood guard at the bathroom door. "He told her, 'You hurry up.' He was watching her at the door, waiting on her."

But inside, Miss Irwin scrawled a message on a small piece of paper: "I am kidnapped. Would you please call my mom and dad. They are taking me to Orlando, Fla." She also wrote her parents' phone number, Forty said.

The two men and Miss Irwin then drove next door to the One-Eyed Jack Restaurant for food, but Miss Irwin waited in the truck with one of the men, Forty said.

House vote exempts carnival games from gambling bill

AUSTIN (AP) — The House planned a final vote today on a tentatively approved measure exempting some carnival games from the state's gambling laws.

The bill, approved 59-9 in a Monday preliminary vote, changes the definition of "bet" in state law to exclude transactions involving an offer of merchandise worth $25 or less.

That exemption would apply only at carnivals run for non-profit organizations.

Sponsor Rep. Bill Messer, D-Beaton, said several non-profit groups have been concerned their carnival games might be in violation of the betting laws.

"There's been some fear for the last couple of years that under some interpretation, carnival games like at the State Fair of Texas could violate the penal code," said Messer.

Also Monday, the House gave tentative OK to the Hazard Communication Act, a bill intended to help employees know about potentially dangerous material used where they work.

Deer Park Ed Watson's bill, which he said was worked out by the Texas Chemical Council, environmental and labor groups, would require employers to keep records of hazardous materials.

Students to compete nationally

Roby Dehls and Shawn Davis are to leave Wednesday for San Francisco to attend the 39th annual National DECA Career Development Conference.

Dehls and Davis are to be among 200 Texas students selected to participate in the conference of Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA), to help develop future leaders for marketing and distribution, May 2-5. More than 6,000 DECA members, state advisors and local advisors are expected to attend from all 50 states plus the District of Columbia, Canada, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Guam.

Dehls, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. C.E. Dehls of Pampa, is employed at McDonald's Restaurant. As state winner in restaurant management, Dehls will not only represent Pampa DECA chapter, but also the Texas chapter, in contest at national. Dehls is a senior at Pampa High School.

Davis, the son of Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Davis of Pampa, is a Pampa High School junior. He is to represent the Pampa DECA and Texas DECA chapters in service station retailing at the national conference. He won first place in this event at the state DECA conference in March. He is employed by Sirloin Stockade.

A special feature of the conference is to be presentations of scholarships to a number of outstanding marketing and distributive education students for advanced study in marketing, management or marketing and distributive education.

Nationally known leaders from marketing, education and government fields are to speak at the conference and serve as judges and consultants in the competitive events.

Leta Olson, coordinator - sponsor of the local DECA chapter, is to attend the conference also.

DECA is the only national student organization operating through the nation's schools to attract young people to careers in marketing, merchandising and management. DECA develops a respect for education which contributes to occupational competence and promotes understanding and appreciation for the responsibilities of citizenship in a free, competitive enterprise system.

National DECA career development conferences provide worthwhile activities to assist students in career development as they prepare to be the marketing and distribution leaders of the future. More than 200 activities in the conference are planned for this development. Many of the sessions are prepared and conducted by the national officers of DECA, who are assisted by other outstanding leaders from DECA's state associations.

Here's the Answer

Q. — I have a kerosene lamp which I intend to electrify. We are discussing whether the lamp will need a shade. It does not have one now and I want to leave it that way, but my wife thinks it should have a shade if I electrify it. What is your opinion?

A. — Kerosene lamps did not have shades because their owners were always figuring out how to get more light, not less. That's why they often used different kinds of reflectors. Electric lamps without shades often have glares. Shades cut the glare and give decoration. Why not select a shade that is in the decor of yesteryear yet reduces glare? —

Q. — What is your advice to someone about to use a paint spray gun for the first time? I expect to be using one for one particular job and perhaps then not again for years, so I have decided to rent rather than buy one.

A. — The chances are the place where you rent the paint sprayer will lend you a complete instruction booklet telling and showing you how to use it. If they do not, here is some advice: Keep the gun moving at all times and hold it between 6 and 10 inches from the surface unless the instructions say something else. Hold the gun at right angles to the surface of the work and overlap each stroke by one-half. Perhaps the most important of all advice is to start the trigger just before you start your arm across the work and not to stop it until just after your arm passes the work. —

Q. — I am rewiring my basement workshop, replacing all the incandescents with fluorescents. What color fluorescents are best?

A. — In a basement workshop, where maximum light is vital, use cool white and daylight white lamps. —

Wilson school PTA wins award

Woodrow Wilson Elementary School's PTA were winners of the excellent award for the 1984 - 85 yearbook at a recent meeting of the District 8 PTA in Panhandle.

Wilson and Lamar elementary schools' PTA chapters were represented by Lilith Brainard and Vickie Moose, members of the board of manager.

Vickie Moose was chosen as vice president of the District 8 PTA. She will be responsible for Gray, Carson, Wheeler, Armstrong, Donley, Briscoe, Hall, Collingsworth and Childress counties. In addition to Moose, other officers elected and installed for the next two year term include Jan Stedje of Gruver, president; Billy Tate of Amarillo, vice president; Sharon Taylor of Texline, vice president; Linda Venneman of Gruver, vice president; Charlene Bentley of Amarillo, corresponding secretary and Betty Womble of Pringle - Morse, recording secretary.

Workshops conducted during the conference included such topics as leadership for new PTAs, seatbelt safety, talking so children will listen, and child abuse prevention.

Dear Abby

Bike shop can teach you to become a pedal-pusher

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Ashamed," the male college student who never learned to ride a bicycle. I'm a 27-year-old male who's never learned how to ride a bicycle either. I can't believe there are two of us! I certainly can identify with his shame and embarrassment.

Ironically, I recently completed a motorcycle course and obtained my license.

MIKE IN WICHITA

DEAR MIKE: Don't give up. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the letter from a young college man who did not know how to ride a bike and was embarrassed to ask.

Bicycle USA has trained cycling instructors in virtually every state. Contacting a local bike shop, bicycling club or Bicycle USA (6707 Whitestone Road, Suite 209, Baltimore, Md. 21207) directly should be sufficient to put anyone interested in learning to ride a bike in touch with a certified instructor. No matter what the age of the rider, instructors have the skills and experience to be of assistance. Often instructors teach through local park and recreation offices, or through bike shops. Bicycling safely becomes more and more important as more people commute to work, ride on the weekends and make cycling a family activity. We stress safety!

I hope you can find room for this in your column, Abby.

SUSAN BAXTER, INSTRUCTOR, EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR SUSAN: Find room? I'll make room to promote safety in cycling. Especially since May is National Bicycle Month.

DEAR ABBY: I have a business partner whom I must telephone at home between five and 10 times daily. He has two small children, 4 and 7 years old, and the competition between these children to answer the telephone is a great source of irritation to me.

My partner allows his children to answer the telephone and also screen his calls, and every time I call I am subjected to these competitive kids who obviously are fighting over who should answer the phone.

This is so upsetting to me that I want to scream! Am I wrong to feel this way?

GOING OUT OF MY MIND

DEAR GOING: No. You can't help how you "feel," but in the interest of maintaining your sanity, you should tell your partner what's on your mind before you go out of it.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Texan wins acclaim for her cinematic vision

By BOB DARDEN

Waco Tribune-Herald
WACO, Texas (AP) — Sara Driver is the producer-production manager of the Cannes Film Festival Camera d'Or Award-winner "Stranger Than Paradise," opening this week in general release throughout the country.

And while she has deep family roots in Waco and currently lives in New York, the success of "Stranger Than Paradise" has made her something of a child of two continents, constantly traveling back and forth between the United States and Europe — constantly in pursuit of her particular cinematic vision.

Not much of Waco shows up in "Stranger Than Paradise." The black and white film was made on a minuscule budget of less than $130,000. It follows three nearly inarticulate friends through a series of non-adventures in New York, Cleveland and Florida.

But the inspired, mostly amateur cast, Jim Jarmusch's creative script and directing and breezily direct style have won it a cult following wherever it has shown. It's obviously a labor of love.

"Jim is my business partner and we've been working together for the past four years or so, beginning with his film 'Permanent Vacation' (which also won numerous critic's awards). Then he served as cameraman on my first film, 'You Are Not I.' We kind of switch off."

"Stranger Than Paradise" began a couple of years ago when noted director Wim Wenders gave us his leftover film stock from 'State of Things,' about 50 minutes worth. Well, in New York, if you rent a 35mm film camera on Friday, you only have to pay for it for Friday. So we shot 28 minutes worth of film in 21-2 days."

The footage became the first part of "Stranger Than Paradise," "The New World." Jarmusch entered the short film in a Rotterdam film festival and walked away with top prizes. At one screening, he asked the audience if they'd like to see more. The response was so positive, that he immediately began working on the script.

"Shortly after that we met German film director Otto Groenberger. He liked what he saw and put up $100,000 for us to finish the picture. We went over that by $30,000, but when Otto saw the rough footage, he was so pleased he got a German TV company to put up the rest of the money as a pre-sale fee for German TV."

"Otto is going to produce my next film, tentatively entitled 'In the Year of the Dog,' and Jim will be my cameraman. He's going to produce Jim's next film as well."

The remaining 60 minutes of "Stranger Than Paradise" were filmed in 16 days by a crew of eight and the acting leads. John Lurie has acted and composed the music for previous films by Jarmusch and Miss Driver, while director of photography Tom DiCillo has acted and filmed earlier works by the others.

"We all work on each other's films, it's really the only way to do it," Miss Driver said. "You have to have that solid support system. Woody Allen uses the same people every time. So does Fassbinder, so does Bergman. We go against the system in a lot of ways. And even though most of our crews are union, they love working with us. They work all year making commercials and technical films, so they love working for a month on an independent film. They love having that creative input. It shows."

Budgetary constraints meant that "Stranger Than Paradise" doesn't have a lot of the techniques taken for granted in big budget films. There are no fades or abrupt cuts. Each scene is done before an almost stationary camera, much like a play. The result is a number of striking visual images, expertly composed and photographed.

"Jim rehearsed the actors for a month before filming began," she said. "Since every scene was a 'master shot' without close-ups, he had to know exactly how he wanted the scene to look in his head beforehand. It helps that our cameraman, Tom DiCillo, wants to be an actor. He's so sensitive to what an actor can do that each scene is framed perfectly."

"Stranger Than Paradise" even looks different than an ordinary film. Wenders gift film stock turned out to be a super-fast, light-sensitive film, which is great for a low budget production not able to afford expensive lights. One spectacular scene where the heroine changes from a dress to a suit on a street corner was lit only by a solitary street lamp — yet the audience can see action at the end of the street, a block away.

But despite her strong roots in this area, Miss Driver hasn't made any films with a Texas base. Yet.

"I've thought about it a lot," she said. "When my grandparents died, I was offered the old home. I love the idea of Texas being a nation within a nation, but I don't have any plans to film down there right now. I know Jim is toying with the idea of making a film in Mexico. Still, I'm very interested in suburban drama, and Waco would make a nice setting for that."

Miss Driver leaves for Italy next week to begin work on "In the Year of the Dog," another $100,000 film, only this time in color.

"We'll shoot it around New York," she said. "It's about a normal typesetter who gets caught up in some fairy tales come-to-life in a suspenseful way. You know, like Jimmy Stewart, the nice person who is forced to respond when horrible things come true. In this case, the machines begin to take on a human quality. John's going to do the music again, but he won't appear in this one."

Although Miss Driver, Jarmusch and the cast all believed in "Stranger," she's still somewhat overwhelmed at its success.

"Oh yes indeed," she said. "We finally finished it in January a year ago and worked around the clock for two months to edit it so we could submit it to the Cannes Film Festival. In the end, we had to submit an unfinished work print."

"We didn't know how the public would respond. On opening night with Roger Eberts and all the critics in attendance, they had projector problems. The bulb was too hot and kept melting the frames and they never did get it in focus. Somehow, that didn't seem to bother anyone."

Reagan to begin European summit trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan embarks tonight on the first overseas trip of his second term, still struggling to keep his visit to Nazi graves from overwhelming his hopes for a celebration of 40 years of Western European peace and reconciliation. The president is making an overnight flight to Bonn, West Germany, for the annual summit of the seven major industrialized democracies that begins Thursday. Also on the itinerary before Reagan's return May 10 are state visits in West Germany, Spain, Portugal and a speech in Strasbourg, France, marking the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II in Europe and looking toward the future of East-West relations and European unity.

But the president's intentions for an upbeat journey have been submerged by an uproar over his planned visit next Sunday with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl at the Kolmesohne cemetery at Bitburg, near the Luxembourg border.

Among the nearly 2,000 graves are those of 49 soldiers from the SS, the elite Nazi combat corps which ran Adolf Hitler's concentration camps.

Jewish leaders, American veterans groups and members of Congress have condemned Reagan's appearance at the cemetery.

Hours before Reagan's departure, the House of Representatives was due to vote on a resolution urging the president to reconsider his visit to Bitburg.

During debate on the measure Monday, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., addressing Reagan as though he were present in the House chamber, said: "You are taking our moral leadership several notches lower. You are leaving a permanent blot on this nation's history. This resolution is a last plea. Please, do not visit Bitburg."

But Rep. Thomas F. Hartnett, R-S.C., said that although placing Bitburg on Reagan's schedule was "a mistake, a blunder and poor judgement," Reagan should go ahead with it out of diplomatic and foreign policy considerations.

"You hold your head high Mr. President. I will stand here in support of your visit and I wish you Godspeed," Hartnett said.

A resolution signed by 82 senators has urged the president to reassess his plans, and a letter signed by 257 House members was sent to Kohl urging him to withdraw the invitation for Reagan to visit Bitburg.

Nonetheless, Reagan is holding firm to his plan to visit the cemetery.

"The final word has been said as far as I am concerned," Reagan said Monday in an interview with foreign television reporters. "I think it is morally right to do as I am doing, and I am not going to change my mind on that."

Reagan added, "All of those in that cemetery have long since met the supreme judge of right and wrong, and whatever punishment or justice was needed has been rendered by one who was above us all."

The president said the visit to the cemetery is intended to "bring to the people an awareness of the great reconciliation that has taken place."

Reagan also told the foreign journalists, "Very frankly, I don't think many of your American colleagues in the press have been quite fair about this. They got hold of something and like a dog chewing on a bone they were not going to let go of it."

Clearly, the controversy over the Bitburg visit has knocked White House planners off balance and sent them scrambling to get the focus back on the economic summit and Reagan's message of progress in Europe since the end of the war.

"You try to be ready for unanticipated contingencies," said an administration official involved in planning the trip. But I must confess that one unanticipated contingency is so overwhelming it just threatens to eclipse the totality of the trip," said the official who discussed the matter on condition that his name not be used.

Northeast faces worst drought ever

By The Associated Press
Wayward winter winds have left the land between Philadelphia and Boston moist when it should be soaking wet, leaving millions of people who live in the region facing one of the worst droughts in years, experts say.

After nine straight months of below-average rainfall, drought alerts or emergencies have been declared in northern New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, New York City and 20 towns in Massachusetts. Lawns are going without water, cars are unwashed and some restaurants are serving water only on request.

Three reservoirs at the headwaters of the Delaware River in New York State are at 61 percent of capacity when they should be nearly full. These Catskill Mountain reservoirs provide about half of New York City's drinking water and are considered a lifeline of the region's supply.

"We are in worse shape going into the hot, dry summer than we've ever been — and that includes the drought of the '60s, which is the worst on record," said

Dawes Thompson of the Delaware River Basin Commission, which tracks water supplies for southern New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

Robert Goodell, the commission's chief engineer, figures the area around the Catskill reservoirs would need about 15 inches of rain before June — three times normal — to lift the drought warning.

The dry winter has been blamed on storms that veered from their normal patterns, fluctuations in land and sea temperatures, a lack of snow and the meandering of high-altitude winds known as the jet stream.

The jet stream normally moves along the South and Gulf Coast, said Kenneth Bergman, a climate analyst for the National Weather Service. Last winter, it swung north over the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence Valley, taking normal rain and snow storms with it.

Municipalities are being forced to tighten the tap.

Gov. Thomas H. Kean has declared a drought emergency in northern New Jersey, banning car washing, lawn watering and the automatic serving of water in restaurants. To prevent forest fires, more than 2 million parched acres of public and private woodland have been closed to hiking, camping and other recreation.

In Massachusetts, 20 communities have imposed watering restrictions and more may join the list soon. Boston's rainfall has been almost 8 inches below normal since last summer.

Parade marks 10th anniversary of communist victory

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Jet fighters thundered overhead and thousands of soldiers and civilians marched through Ho Chi Minh City today to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the communist victory over U.S.-backed South Vietnam.

Nguyen Van Linh, Communist Party boss of the city formerly known as Saigon, said in a speech opening the ceremonies that the victory was "a brilliant exploit of the 20th century."

He thanked the Soviet Union for its support, and said for the United States, the Vietnam War was "a tunnel with no light at the end."

High-stepping infantrymen of the world's fourth largest armed force and militia units carrying U.S.-made M-16 rifles, seized at the collapse of South Vietnam, moved past a stand filled with aging revolutionary leaders who had fought the Japanese, French and Americans.

Thousands of spectators watched the parade, officials said to include 50,000 participants.

It traveled to the former presidential palace where on April 30, 1975, South Vietnam surrendered to communist forces who had ringed the city the previous day.

Towed Soviet-built artillery pieces, tanks, and armored vehicles were part of the parade. Soviet-built MiG-21 jet fighters, helicopter gunships and transport aircraft flew overhead.

The parade route went past or near some of the places where the last acts of the South Vietnam drama were played out — and at almost the same time that those events occurred ten years ago.

The parade began at almost exactly the same time that on April 30, 1975, the last helicopter had lifted off the roof of the U.S. Embassy at 7:52 a.m. to end a mass evacuation of Americans and South Vietnamese.

Communist troops were then moving through the city's last defenses.

Just before 10:30 a.m. on that day in 1975, the last leader of South Vietnam, Gen. Duong Van Minh, announced on the radio that his nation had surrendered.

At 12:45 p.m., Nguyen Trung Kien, a tough 20-year-old woman guerrilla, raised the flag of the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government over the presidential palace after a tank smashed through the gates. President Nguyen Van Thieu had fled days earlier.

Linh said in his speech that Saigon had suffered for 116 years as an imperialist city, "a place full of debauch, prolific in social evils, oppression and injustice."

He claimed major advances have been made over the past decade such as more vegetable growing and elimination of prostitution.

With Linh on the stand were eight of 13 members of the Politburo, the nation's key organ of rule. They included Communist Party Secretary General Le Duan, Premier Pham Van Dong and Defense Minister Gen. Van Tien Dung, the architect of the 55-day campaign which climaxed with the fall of Saigon.

Many of the gray-haired, frail-looking men started out as teenagers fighting the French decades ago and rose to power during the later struggle against the Americans.

Portraits of the revered late President Ho Chi Minh, the national hero who died in 1969 and is known as "Uncle Ho," were posted in the parade area and constant references were made to him. The ceremonies contained little rhetoric attacking the United States and no sign of overt anti-American feeling. The Hanoi government has said it wants to establish friendly relations with the United States.

Nostalgia part of press coverage

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Vietnam is hosting the largest number of Western journalists ever to visit this Communist nation, giving them great but not unlimited freedom to see and report what they want.

The unprecedented coverage climaxes today as this city once called Saigon becomes the stage for celebrating the 10th anniversary of the Communist conquest of South Vietnam.

For many reporters it has been a nostalgic journey, and a reunion with old competitors and comrades in the wartime Saigon press corps.

"We are rediscovering our youth, our manhood, our moment, our Vietnam," said Peter Arnett, who won a Pulitzer Prize covering the war for The Associated Press. "I've seen some of my old friends come to a place, maybe a battlefield, and have their eyes glaze over. I've been glaze-eyed myself."

Since January, more than 300 journalists have roamed through provincial capitals, remote villages and onetime battlefields from the Chinese border in the north to the southern Mekong Delta.

Nearly 200 media people are currently in Ho Chi Minh City, with the "capitalist" press far outnumbering journalists from friendly Communist nations like the Soviet Union. The Americans lead with some 80 people, including representatives from major news organizations and television networks.

"We hope that it will be a two-way channel. We hope that the media will help with a reconciliation," said Duong Minh, deputy chief of Vietnam's foreign press center.

Similar words have come from other Vietnamese officials including Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, indicating Hanoi is seeking a way out of its isolation. Some Western analysts of the region believe Vietnam is unhappy with its increasing political and military dependence on Moscow and also hopes to forge profitable economic ties with the West and Japan to repair its economy.

Vietnam did not, of course, throw its doors wide open after keeping them closed for a decade. Reporters were escorted by foreign ministry guides.

FIRST DRAFT PICK — Bruce Smith of Virginia Tech gets fitted for his new jersey by NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. Smith was drafted by the Buffalo Bills Tuesday, making him the first player picked in the NFL draft. During his collegiate career, Smith made 71 career tackles behind the line for 504 yards in losses. He had 46 sacks, 16 last season.

Draft lacks "glamor"

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League began a generally glamorless 50th draft today as the league's 28 teams began choosing players from a crop heavy in offensive and defensive linemen but light in players from the glamor positions — running back and quarterback.

Even the one glamor player who might have been drafted wasn't — University of Miami quarterback Bernie Kosar, who chose to make himself eligible instead for a supplemental draft in which the Boardman, Ohio, native is expected to be chosen by his favorite team, the Cleveland Browns.

There was no suspense about the identity of the first pick — 283-pound defensive lineman Bruce Smith of Virginia Tech, the Outland Trophy winner. He was signed by the Buffalo Bills last February.

Before the draft began, Buffalo picked up another first-round choice, No. 7 overall. The Bills got it because linebacker Chip Banks, whom they acquired from Cleveland in the deal for Kosar's rights, declined to play in Buffalo. Under terms of the deal, the Bills got the Browns' first-round pick instead.

Houston picking third, immediately took Texas A&M defensive lineman Ray Childress. The Oilers had stipulated in the Kosar deal that Minnesota not pick Childress.

Childress is a 280-pounder who gained a starting berth midway through his freshman season. His career totals were 360 tackles, including 26 sacks.

Minnesota, which reportedly had been looking for a wide receiver, pulled something of a surprise by using almost all of their 15 minutes before taking another Pitt player, defensive end-outside linebacker Chris Doleman.

The 6-foot-6, 245-pound Doleman, who was hampered last season by a turf toe injury, was very impressive in working out for the scouts, demonstrating 4.65 speed and outstanding agility. He missed two games last fall but made 65 tackles, 11 behind the line.

The Indianapolis Colts, picking fifth, took linebacker Duane Bickett from Southern California. Bickett came on strong in 1984 and won Pacific-10 Conference Defensive Player of the Year honors. A fine blitzing, he made 139 tackles last fall and led USC with 15 stops behind the line.

The Detroit Lions selected 285-pound offensive tackle Lomas Brown of Florida, noted as a good drive blocker who is seldom beaten at the point of attack. A three-year starter for the Gators, he holds the vertical jump record of 34 inches for Florida's offensive linemen.

The Green Bay Packers pulled a deal with Buffalo to acquire the Bills' second first-round pick, No. 7 overall which had been acquired from Cleveland, as well as the Bills' fourth-round pick next year. The Packers gave up their first-round pick — No. 14 overall — as well as their second-round choice this year.

The Packers used the pick to grab Southern Cal offensive tackle Ken Ruettggers, a 265-pounder who came back from a serious 1983 knee injury. The injury-prone Ruettggers has undergone two knee operations and has suffered a broken thumb, broken hand and broken ankle.

After all the wheeling and dealing, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers quickly grabbed defensive end Ron Holmes of Washington. Holmes got off to a slow start last season until a blood sugar problem was discovered but he looked great in the Orange Bowl.

Holmes was runner-up to Bickett for Pac-10 Defensive Player of the Year honors but won the Morris Trophy as the league's top defensive lineman. He made 117 tackles in 1984, including five sacks. He also forced four fumbles and broke up eight passes.

The Philadelphia Eagles used 14:45 before selecting offensive tackle Kevin Allen of 0-11 Indiana, a great physical specimen who bench presses more than 400 pounds.

As soon as the Eagles' selection was announced, some of the estimated 250 fans in the mezzanine began shouting for the New York Jets to take a wide receiver. They did, picking Wisconsin's 6-4, 201-pound Al Toon, an outstanding athlete who has gone over 24 feet in the long jump, 53-7 in the triple jump and has run a 13.92 in the 110-meter high hurdles.

Toon was Wisconsin's top receiver with 50 catches for 702 yards and five touchdowns in 1984 and is the school's all-time leading receiver with 127 for 2,655 yards and 19 TDs.

Nine rounds was the longest the NFL has gone since 1968 without selecting a quarterback, running back or wide receiver.

Houston then picked another Wisconsin player, cornerback Richard Johnson, who has the speed to stay with anyone, running a 4.38 forty. He also blocked a school record six enemy kicks in 1984 while leading the Badgers with seven passes broken up and had three interceptions.

The Bengals, seeking speed at wide receiver, then took Eddie Brown of Miami (Fla.), a sure-handed receiver who can outrun a lot of secondaries with his 4.48 speed. Brown was the most prolific receiver in Miami history with 1,754 yards on 89 catches, including 14 touchdowns, despite playing only two seasons on offense. He was a defensive back in 1982.

Pokes pick Brooks in first round

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys, needing help at wide receiver and linebacker, selected All-Big Ten defensive tackle Kevin Brooks of Michigan today in the first round of the National Football League draft.

"We tried to move up in the draft and came close to making a trade but it didn't work out," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry of the Cowboys' pick from the 17th position.

"Brooks fills a defensive need for the future of the Cowboys," said Landry. "We have security in our down linemen positions where we are starting to get some age."

Landry said he wasn't certain whether the 6-foot-6, 260-pound

Brooks would play end or tackle.

"He doesn't have a lot of weaknesses," said Landry. "He is young and maturing. He could have stayed for a fifth year at Michigan but decided to come out with his graduation class."

Brooks is scheduled to graduate on Saturday from Michigan.

Gil Brandt, personnel director of the Cowboys, said, "We tried hard to trade up but were just not successful. We talked to everybody."

Brandt said, "One team even agreed to a price but then kept their pick."

Brandt said Brooks "has the potential to be a dominating player. He has size, speed, and played in a good program. He was taught to work hard and has good fundamentals."

Landry said, "Brooks has good size, like Ed Jones. He's very active on the film I saw of him."

"The competition just keeps getting tougher," said Brandt. "Everybody is getting better in the draft. It's tough when you draft from as far back as we do."

Brandt said there were no franchise players in the draft this season.

"There's no one player in there who could put a team into the Super Bowl," he said. "There are a lot of solid ones, though."

Oilers pick Childress, Johnson in first round

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers, trying to bolster their sagging defense, used their two first round selections in today's National Football League draft to select Texas A&M defensive end Ray Childress and Wisconsin cornerback Richard Johnson.

The Oilers' selection of Childress was expected, Oiler Coach Hugh Campbell said.

"For the past month we've been looking toward selection Ray but we had to play out our cards until this point," Campbell said. "He's 6-6 and he gives us the height and power. We're just happy it worked out. We're looking forward to having him in our defensive line."

The Oilers used their second pick in the first round, obtained from New Orleans for running back Earl Campbell, to select Johnson, a 6-0 190 speedster.

"He has exceptional speed and quickness," Campbell said. "Some reliable people have clocked him in under 4.4 which is hard for me to believe."

After hinting that they might file a suit against the NFL that could halt the draft, Oiler owner Bud Adams announced Monday that the Oilers would not seek court action in the Bernie Kosar case.

That cleared the way for the Oilers to formally choose Childress.

Adams said the Oilers had decided not to seek the aid of the courts because the Minnesota Vikings, who Adams said were more injured than the Oilers, declined to join any litigation.

Adams also said the Oilers didn't want to delay the draft for all other college players because one got an advantage.

"It is felt it would be unfair to the hundreds of young men who are awaiting the outcome of the draft to delay that process because the commissioner has seen fit to rule so as to provide one athlete with an advantage, not enjoyed by any other," Adams said in a statement.

Adams also said he hoped the league would act before next year's draft to remedy the situation.

The Vikings and Oilers traded first round draft choices giving Minnesota the first choice in Tuesday's draft. Buffalo, with the first pick, already has signed Virginia Tech defensive end Bruce Smith.

Rozelle ruled that Kosar is ineligible for Tuesday's draft and can qualify for the league's supplemental draft, which would give the Cleveland Browns first choice at Kosar.

Tubbs wins WBA title

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — "TNT" is Tony Tubbs' nickname, but after refusing to hype his challenge to Greg Page's World Boxing Association heavyweight title with the traditional vigor, some wondered whether Tubbs was more ladyfinger than cherry bomb.

There was no Monday night explosion, but Tubbs, the self-proclaimed "boxer-thinker," won a 15-round unanimous decision over Page with a well-conceived, if unexciting strategy.

The belt that signifies a champion was stolen from Page's hotel room Sunday night, but Tubbs took it in the ring as he out-thought and then out-fought Page.

The Cincinnati native, unbeaten now in 22 professional fights, did benefit from a lackadaisical effort by Page, who lost in his first title defense, and for the third time in his last four fights.

Tubbs' strategy seemed to fly in the face of the boxing axiom that says a challenger must take the fight to the champion. He was content to let Page come at him. When Page did, which was all too infrequently, Tubbs countered, consistently landing the crisper punches.

"Also, the champ has got to fight," said Tubbs, responding to criticism of the waiting game he played. "He was dancing, throwing shots, but not landing no blows. And every time he came in, I landed the cleaner shots."

The strategy might have had its origins when Tubbs came to town and checked out Page, who entered the ring weighing a not-so-trim 239 1/2 pounds.

"The fans were telling me Greg wasn't training," said Tubbs. "He was playing basketball."

Page had been predicting a knockout in four rounds, and perhaps that's how much he trained. Tubbs said all along he was training to go the distance.

"Going in, I knew I had never been 15 rounds before," he said. "Basically, I wanted to keep my hands up and control."

With the exception of a few of the very early and very late rounds, that's exactly what Tubbs did.

Control was also the key Monday for another heavyweight, "Terrible" Tim Witherspoon, who also took advantage of his opponent's less-than-peak condition.

Page may have been overweight, but James "Broadax" Broad, defending his North American Boxing Federation heavyweight title against Witherspoon, invited puns on his name when he entered the ring weighing 261 pounds.

"I told everybody I'd jump out of the ring if he started on his way down, because he'd make a big hole in the ring and bring everybody down with him," said Witherspoon.

Rangers spoil Martin's fourth debut

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Larry Parrish says he even has trouble hitting three home runs in batting practice.

But Parrish did it in a game Monday night, spoiling Billy Martin's fourth managerial debut with the New York Yankees.

Parrish knocked in six runs with the three homers as the Rangers snapped a five-game losing streak with a 7-5 victory over the Yankees and Ron Guidry.

Parrish drilled three homers, two of them off Guidry, and knocked in six runs to spoil Martin's comeback with a 7-5 Texas Ranger victory on Monday night.

"I don't know how to explain it," said Parrish. "Everytime I swung at the ball I hit the center. I wish it was that easy every night."

"You can go to batting practice and not hit three out. It was just one of those freak things."

It was a "freaky" night.

Bobby Meacham cleared the way with a drive in the fourth inning off starter Frank Tanana but instead of getting a three-homer he got a two run single and was ruled out.

Meacham was admiring his work when he passed Willie Randolph who thought the ball was going to be caught. Meacham was called out and given a single but the two runners on base scored.

"I'm not going to blame anyone for that one," said Martin, who replaced Yogi Berra, who was fired Sunday. "Things like that happen."

Meacham said "I was running hard. I went to touch first and Randolph was going back to first. There was no way I could stop."

Dave Schmidt, 1-1, picked up the victory in relief for Texas.

Parrish has a special spell over Guidry, now 1-3.

Parrish has touched Guidry for four homers in two years and has 12 career homers against the Yankees, most against any team.

He also is now only the fifth player to hit three or more homers in a game in both leagues.

Parrish's two-out, two-run homer off reliever John Montefusco, making his first appearance of the season, in the eighth inning was the game winner.

Richardson named to All-American squad

Kellye Richardson, former Pampa High player, has been named to the Amateur Athletic Union All-America Women's Basketball Team.

Miss Richardson, who also played at Amarillo College and Texas Tech, is a member of the Amarillo Shakey Diamonds which won the National AAU Tournament held recently in El Paso.

Miss Richardson's teammates, Rhonda Kimbrough and Merry

Johnson Byers, were also named to the All-American Team. Miss Kimbrough was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Miss Richardson scored 13 points to go along with six rebounds as the Diamonds downed Snitz Manufacturing of Green Bay, Wis., 56-52, in the finals.

Kellye is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Richardson of Pampa.

Celtics still concerned about Pistons

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD AP Sports Writer

After winning their first laugh of the playoffs, the Boston Celtics are looking at the past to remind themselves that an easy victory doesn't necessarily mean an easy time the rest of the series.

The Celtics' centers and forwards outscored Detroit's counterparts 106-42 Sunday as they crushed the Pistons 133-99 in the opener of their Eastern Conference semifinal.

"They're a much better team than they showed," said Boston forward Kevin McHale of the Pistons. "Remember, we lost to Los Angeles by 30 points last season."

McHale, who had 26 points and 13 rebounds, was remembering a 33-point loss that gave the Lakers a 2-1 lead in the championship series. But Boston took three of the next four games and the title.

The Celtics, who beat Cleveland by a total of seven points in three victories in the first round, also remember 1982, when they clobbered Philadelphia 121-81 in the opener of the Eastern Conference finals, then lost the next three games and the series 4-3.

The Pistons have a chance to get even in Game 2 at Boston tonight. Philadelphia is at Milwaukee and Portland at Los Angeles in series the 76ers and Lakers lead 1-0, and Utah is at Denver in the opener of their Western Conference semifinal.

"We have to guard against a letdown," Boston guard Danny Ainge said. "The Pistons are not going to roll over and die."

But Detroit could have a difficult time winning if Boston gets another first-rate performance from center

Robert Parish, who had 26 points and 16 rebounds in Game 1.

Meanwhile, Detroit center Bill Laimbeer, who averaged 17.8 points and 11.8 rebounds per game against the Celtics during the regular season, managed just one point and three rebounds in 22 minutes of the opener.

Philadelphia also romped in its first game with Milwaukee, and the 76ers also have to guard against a letdown tonight.

"I think these guys (the Bucks) had a great season," 76ers forward Julius Erving said. "We didn't lose any respect for them. We're not taking anything for granted."

"I don't think the margin is important," Bucks guard Sidney Moncrief said. "We have to evaluate the game and see what we have to do to win."

The Lakers have won their first four playoff games by an average of 21 points, including a 125-101 decision over the Trail Blazers in the opener.

If you haven't checked John Deere's deal, you haven't gotten the best deal

Shop around. There are all kinds of "deals" floating around out there. And most of the benefits of those "deals" disappear after the dollar sign. Our "better" deals go far beyond the dollar sign. We're going to be very competitive price wise, but we can offer you so much more. We're ready to show you just how sweet a deal you can make—right now.

DEAL 1. 4WD TRACTORS

Thousands of dollars in pass-along savings on every new John Deere 4WD tractor in stock. No interest for 9 months from date of sale. (or 1 May, 1986 depending on Ser. #.) See us for details with John Deere financing.* Or in lieu of the finance waiver take an extra discount worth thousands more!

DEAL 5. IMPLEMENTS

Make your best deal on a MOLDBOARD PLOW • STANDARD DISK • DURACUSHION™ DISK • ROLLER HARROW • FIELD CULTIVATOR • CHISEL PLOW • SPREADER. Then we'll add a pass-along discount allowed by the John Deere factories.

DEAL 2. 100- TO 190-HP TRACTORS

Huge pass-along savings on new 100- to 190-hp tractors plus interest-free financing for 9 months from date of sale. If you prefer, take an additional discount in lieu of finance waiver.

DEAL 6. HAY AND FORAGE EQUIPMENT

Buy a new baler, mower-conditioner or PTO forage harvester and get pass-along discounts worth hundreds of dollars. Discounts on self-propelled windrowers are worth up to $3000. Save even more with interest-free financing from John Deere until July 1, 1985, on new and used hay equipment, and until September 1, 1985, on new and used forage equipment. There are discounts in lieu of waivers on new equipment.

DEAL 3. 40- TO 85-HP TRACTORS

Get unheard of savings - like factory-direct discounts worth up to $2700 - on new John Deere 40- to 85-hp utility tractors. Then get interest-free John Deere financing for 9 months from date of sale. Or, take an additional discount in lieu of finance waiver.

DEAL 7. PLANTERS

Make your best deal on a new John Deere planter, and then get an additional discount worth as much as $7500! Special finance waivers are available, too.

We're ready to write the most competitive deals around on any new John Deere equipment. Stop by today for all the details.

DEAL 4. COMBINES

Take advantage now of fabulous off-season savings on all new Titan combines. Thousands of dollars off PLUS INTEREST-FREE FINANCING TO THE FIRST OF THE 1985 USE SEASON when the combine is purchased with new header equipment. There's also a discount in lieu of finance waiver available.

*Availability of John Deere financing subject to approval of credit. All tractor offers end June 15, 1985 and others may be withdrawn at any time.

In the coming year several friends will play helpful roles in your affairs. Two of them will be older and far more experienced than you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take a firm position today in situations where you believe you're in the right. To succeed, you must have the courage of your convictions. Looking for romance? The Matchmaker set can help you select the right person for you. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you might find it necessary to give a gentle prod to a member of your family who has been neglecting his responsibilities lately.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you desire social involvement today, don't wait for friends to get in touch. Conjure up something and invite them to participate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Devote your efforts today to situations that can strengthen your financial position or enhance your career. These are two areas where you'll be lucky.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're not apt to take a back seat to others today. Anyone who attempts to usurp your authority will learn this quickly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Bold measures on your behalf may be required in your financial dealings today. If you feel you're being taken advantage of, speak out loud and clear.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Within your peer group today, you will be the catalyst who comes up with the bright ideas that all can enjoy. Lay out the itinerary and let your friends climb aboard.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Companions may dawdle their time away today on unproductive ventures. However, their whimsical endeavors won't influence you or your ambitions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Instead of relaxing in an easy chair today, try to do something physically and mentally invigorating. You need activity to feel at your best.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Situations important to you may be subjected to sudden changes today. It's to your benefit to flow with the tide.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) People you associate with will exert considerable influence over you today. Select companions who will inspire you to do something worthwhile.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If your desires are to help others as well as yourself, tides will stir in your favor today to enhance your possibilities for personal gain.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — More than 900 illegal aliens apprehended by the U.S. Border Patrol using infrared scopes in a special nighttime dragnet along a 12-mile section of the border have been returned to Mexico, authorities say.

The sweep that ended early Monday caught 919 undocumented aliens trying to sneak into the United States between San Ysidro and the base of Otay Mountain, said Gene Smithburg, assistant chief Border Patrol agent in San Diego.

The aliens from Mexico were returned by bus, Smithburg said. Four from El Salvador, two from Honduras and one from Peru were held for deportation hearings.

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — A bank employee accused of skimming at least $200,000 from the town's parking meter receipts faces a hearing May 14 after she pleaded innocent to larceny.

Carol E. Young, 35, was released Monday on her own recognizance by District Court Judge Francis J. Doyle. She was arrested Friday at her job at Patriot Bank.

Police said she had $1,800 in her purse at the time and that "the skimming — up to $1,000 a day — began in April 1983. Police said Ms. Young had deposited about $170,000 in her account since June 1983 and paid cash for a house, car and $25,000 worth of home furnishings.

BOSTON (AP) — Blind singer-songwriter Stevie Wonder is urging business leaders to develop high-tech tools to help the handicapped compete with other workers.

The entertainer demonstrated to an audience of Boston business executives Monday how he can, with the help of a personal computer and a device called DEtalk, program a music synthesizer with various tempos and sounds.

DEtalk, marketed by Digital Equipment Corp., converts the computerized information into speech, which lets Wonder arrange and edit the music without a recording studio engineer.

He can also write lyrics and then have them read back to him for editing with the new equipment.

The new machine sells for $4,000, according to Brad Allen of Digital.

Study says more hard times ahead for the steel industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — During the next decade, the nation's steel industry faces continued retrenchment, problems with imports and costly restructuring as it struggles to compete in world markets, a new study says.

Even in a scenario that includes effective import controls and favorable exchange rates, the so-called integrated steel mills that perform a broad range of production and manufacturing functions would continue to close as producers strive to become more efficient, said the 158-page report of a panel of steel industry experts.

The report, prepared under the auspices of the National Academy of Engineering for release today, said that if the steel industry is to shake off its financial woes, "the most efficient operations must be saved, clearly inefficient operations should be closed, and mixed (integrated) facilities must be encouraged to modernize and restructure themselves."

But some factors necessary for revitalization are beyond the industry's control, said the report, titled, "The Competitive Status of the U.S. Steel Industry." Chief among these factors are the strength of the U.S. dollar and effective domestic trade law enforcement and legislation.

Problems with imports, it said, are likely to get worse as developing countries add new capacity. The study mentioned but did not evaluate President Reagan's program, initiated last year, of seeking voluntary restraint agreements with major exporters to reduce the foreign share of the U.S. steel market from 25 percent to 18.5 percent.

The difficulty in competing with foreign steelmakers stems not from a lack of technical knowledge, but from subsidization of foreign producers by their governments and a lack of capital by American firms to make use of known technology, the report said.

"The introduction of radical new technologies will probably not be the salvation of the domestic industry over the next 20 years," the report said.

James Collins, executive vice president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, agreed with the study's conclusion that the industry must "turn out more steel with less people." But he said the report's figures appeared "dated."

"It doesn't talk about the last couple of years and cost reduction. Our productivity has gone up sharply in that time," Collins said.

Hans Mueller, a Middle Tennessee State University economics professor who sat on the panel, said, "If you define productivity as output-per-man, then it has gone up. The industry fired so many people that they cut into the marrow."

Kid mayor of Crabb nonchalant over movie

CRABB, Texas (AP) — Like any politician, Brian Zimmerman has become used to talking to the press.

But Marcia Zimmerman can hardly keep the tears back when she talks proudly of her son, who at age 12 is the nation's youngest mayor. "Oh, she gets excited easily," Brian, who is an only child, said of his mother in interviews with two Houston newspapers.

The mayor of Crabb, a tiny town 20 miles southwest of Houston, was elected two years ago in an unofficial election at Gonyo's Grocery, his aunt's store.

Now, Anson Williams, who played Potsie on the Happy Days television series, is producing a movie for New World Pictures about Brian. The kid mayor says he might even get to star in it.

But Brian is rather nonchalant. "I've been in the press and on Good Morning America. I'm not jumping up and down," he told the Houston Post.

Even if he doesn't star in the film, he plans to go to Hollywood to watch the shooting.

Activists unionize homeless and unemployed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A newly organized union here has no employer, no contract and no muscle except the power of protest. Nonetheless, it intends to bargain with government agencies and businesses over life's essentials — health care, housing, food and jobs.

Since the Philadelphia-Delaware Valley Union of the Homeless began organizing about seven weeks ago, it claims to have signed up about 6,000 members. Homeless working people are asked to pay $5 in dues a month; unemployed homeless people are asked to pay $1 a month.

"We have the capacity to deal with the crisis of poverty in our midst and we intend to agitate until those who refuse to act are forced to act," said David Fair, spokesman for a union of 75,000 health care workers that is assisting the organizing efforts among the city's homeless and unemployed.

The National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees has voted to spend $1,000 a month for five months to help the new union; some local unions also have pledged their support. But the homeless union ultimately intends to pay its own way, Fair said, adding that it has about $1,000 in its treasury.

"There are 15,000 homeless and hungry people in Philadelphia alone, people who live in shelters, who live on the streets," said Fair. "The city has a responsibility to take care of them, to see that they are trained and can read and write."

"We intend to make the city act," he said.

"We intend to rekindle ... commitment to the poor and the neglected," Henry Nicholas, president of the national health care union, said after a convention April 6 that chartered the union of the homeless.

Fair, who is Nicholas' assistant, said the new union was started by Chris Sprowal, a 52-year-old former union organizer who had become homeless. Sprowal, who has since been elected president of the union for the homeless, approached Nicholas for help, Fair said.

The hospital and health care workers union, which has about 13,000 members in the Philadelphia area, also recognized that many of its low-paid members, if they lost their jobs, could easily become homeless, Fair said.

Last Thursday, 26 members of the new union were arrested when they refused to leave the office of an employment agency they claimed charges fees of $350 to $600 for placing poor people in minimum-wage jobs with no benefits.

This week, Fair said, members of the group will meet with top-level managers of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority to argue their case for reduced mass-transit fares for the area's poor.

The group said that increased fares for public transportation prevented many of its members from applying for jobs and took too large a portion of their low wages. It asked SEPTA to treat the homeless the same as senior citizens, who pay reduced rates.

In another demonstration, about 50 union members, wearing new "Homeless Not Helpless" buttons, conducted a sit-in at the office of Philadelphia Health Commissioner Stuart Shapiro. They demanded the city force the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania to recognize an agreement to provide free hospital care to 50 poor people a year.

Shapiro agreed to speak with university officials.
