

Bill would change 'casinghead' definition

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN (AP) — Mayonnaise jars of "real" black crude oil and "white oil" were passed around a Senate committee table in an effort to dramatize an issue splitting oil and gas producers in the Panhandle fields.

Witnesses testifying before the Natural Resources Committee, however, even disagreed whether white oil was an issue.

Austin lawyer Ivan Hafley, representing independent Panhandle operators, said Wednesday a proposed change in Texas' Natural Resources Code would not affect the white oil case pending before the Railroad Commission (RRC).

"I don't agree," said Clark Gillespie, a Fort Worth lawyer representing the Association of Natural Gas Producers of Texas.

Witnesses also disagreed over the financial impact on the Panhandle of the proposed change in the code.

"We're going to have a (financial) disaster overall" if the change is not made, said Lottie Elder of Panhandle, the wife of a farmer who makes part of his income from oil and gas royalties.

Lawyer Frank Douglass, also representing Natural Gas Producers, however, described as "poppycock" stories that Texas could lose over $100 million a year if a tentative federal decision stands on "casinghead gas."

The pending decision by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) rules that a number of independents had not been pumping casinghead gas, as they had claimed, but instead had been producing mainly natural gas rightfully belonging to Dorchester Co.

The $100 million figure was mentioned recently by State Comptroller Bob Bullock and referred to a possible loss in oil and gas severance taxes.

El Paso Sen. Tati Santiesteban, committee chairman, put off a vote on his bill redefining casinghead gas until Monday.

The bill, which would change a 50-year-old definition, defines casinghead gas as "all gas produced from a well classified by the commission as an oil well."

The current RRC regulations define casinghead gas as "any gas and-or vapor indigenous to an oil stratum and produced from such stratum with oil."

The proposed change is intended to head off a recent federal administrative law judge's finding that operators of so-called white oil wells are illegally diverting natural gas from Panhandle fields and selling the gas.

White oil, also referred to as "Panhandle Light" and "albino oil," is produced through the use of refrigeration units that chill vapor into a liquid.

A related complaint about white oil by Phillips Petroleum Co. and others is pending before the Railroad Commission.

(Ray Grasshoff, public information specialist with the RRC, reported recently that the RRC commissioners are expected to make their ruling on the examiners' proposal during their regular meeting Monday.)

Hafley said the federal interpretation of casinghead gas is important because casinghead gas, which is a byproduct of oil production, commands a higher price than natural gas.

Making an interpretation of a brief reference in the FERC proposal, some independents and their supporters are claiming the federal decision would impose a 2,000 to 1 ratio of gas to oil on wells.

They claim this would prohibit any oil well from producing more than 2,000 cubic feet of gas per barrel of oil from any oil well. Current RRC regulations permit a 100,000 to 1 gas-oil ratio for oil wells.

Phillips representatives and others have disputed that interpretation, saying there is no basis for expecting the imposition of the 2,000 to 1 ratio.

Phillips, which opposes Santiesteban's bill, contends that white-oil operators are diverting gas committed to interstate commerce and selling large amounts of gas at up to six times the price allowed under the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978.

The FERC administrative judge had upheld similar claims made by Dorchester during the federal hearings. The judge ruled the independents, while producing some casinghead gas from their oil wells, were pumping more gas from other than

Allyn Moore resigns from post with city

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa Director of Community Services Allyn Moore, 47, has announced his resignation to take a similar position with a city in Central Texas.

Moore, who became director of public works in Pampa on March 1, 1984, submitted his resignation Thursday morning to City Manager Bob Hart.

In addition to his public works director position, Moore also serves as city engineer. He also served as acting city manager following the resignation of former city manager Mack Wofford last September until Hart took over as city manager on Jan. 21.

"I really got a nice offer and decided to take it," Moore said. He will become director of public works in the Central Texas community on June 3.

Moore, who had been a center of controversy over the removal of driveway entrance pipes last summer, said he had been under no pressure either from inside or outside City Hall to leave his position.

He said he had received several offers from other communities, and the one he accepted just had benefits he couldn't refuse.

Hart said he hated to see Moore leave, but he felt Moore had a good opportunity that was hard to turn down.

No definite effective date for Moore's resignation has been set yet, Hart said, but it will be "in about three weeks." Hart said, "We have some projects going on, and he will stay to finish those."

Moore said he will work here through the end of May, except for "taking a few days to move." Hart said the city will try to coordinate Moore's moving with the completion of projects here.

Hart said he hoped to have a replacement for Moore fairly soon. Thursday afternoon Hart said he had already started calling people to initiate efforts to find a replacement.

Moore said he felt projects he has helped to initiate and develop will result in long-term benefits for the city.

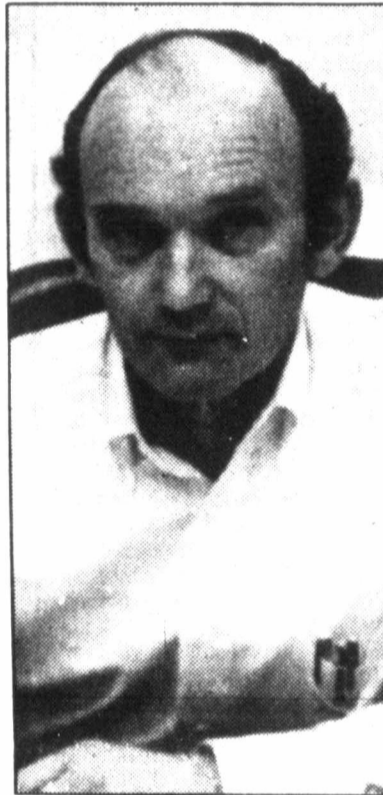

He has worked on tightening zoning requirements for new developments, including allowing for better drainage systems. He initiated repair and renovation efforts at M. K. Brown Auditorium, including a new lobby ceiling, new doors, better insulation and improved lighting system.

He urged studies of traffic problems in the city; suggested revisions of a number of city ordinances, including tightening the city's anti-litter laws; encouraged development of better parks and recreation facilities, helped oversee construction of the new municipal swimming pool, advised development of a long-range master plan for the city, revised an employee classification and compensation plan and worked on street improvements.

Moore encountered controversy when he ordered the removal of a number of driveway entrance pipes and humps during last summer's street repair and seal coating operations. The action was protested by a number of citizens.

But Moore defended the removals, saying they were needed to permit better street improvements, to cut down on repairs resulting from improper street drainage and to eliminate impairment of street cleaning equipment.

Moore has admitted he made a mistake in not informing citizens of the removal efforts before they occurred, but he has stated the streets will be better because of the obstructions removed.

Local jobless rate climbs in March

The March unemployment rates in Pampa and Gray County increased 14 percent over the previous month, but the respective 5.7 - percent and 5.8 - percent rates still were well below the state and national averages.

Texas Employment Commission Pampa Manager Charles Vance said he saw "no particular reason" for the substantial jump in the latest local rates of unemployment, but that activity in March "was slow all across the board."

He said most jobs reported to his office in the month were temporary, except jobs in the service industry.

Pampa's unemployment rate in February was 4.3 percent. January's city rate was 5.3 percent. The February unemployment rate for all of Gray County was 4.4 percent; the county's rate in January was 5.5 percent.

The city's unemployment rate in March 1984 was 4.5 percent, 1.2 percent less than in the current year.

Pampa's jobless rate was 1.4 percent lower than the state average in March of 7.1 percent. It was 1.6 percent below the nationwide March rate of 7.3 percent.

The March figures translate into a city labor force of 11,063 people. Of the total, 10,431 people were working, and 632 were unemployed. In the total county labor force of 13,618 people, 12,822 were working, while 796 were listed as unemployed.

Vance said the local TEC office has seen no change in the area's sluggish drilling activity. He said the office recently has had "but very few" requests to fill a job in the oil and gas industry.

However, the TEC official said the overall local employment picture had improved in April.

He said the office has had openings for a legal secretary, full-charge bookkeeper, retail sales clerks, convenience store cashiers, nurses' aides, fast-food workers and "a wide variety of general labor."

Finance panel clears way for debate on 'fee' hikes

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee has cleared the way for the Senate to debate its version of a $36.8 billion state spending bill next week.

The Senate bill, a rewrite of the $36.4 billion bill approved earlier by the House, was approved unanimously Wednesday by the committee.

However, Senate budget writers stressed that neither the Senate nor the House bill can be financed without new taxes unless lawmakers also approve about $700 million in pending "non-tax" revenue-raising measures.

The Texas State Employees Union said later it would oppose the Senate bill because it does not contain a state employee pay raise that was in the House bill. The House proposed a 3 per cent a year pay increase, provided the pending revenue-raising bills pass.

"This bill can be afforded without new taxes only if we pass these other bills," said Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. "Otherwise the money is just not there."

The major revenue-raising measures include:

— At least $275 million the next two years from state college tuition increases.

— More than $220 million from increased state fees, permits and court costs, including a hefty increase in oil and gas regulation charges.

— A net revenue increase of $72.5 million by decreasing the state's contribution to the retirement funds of state employees and teachers.

The Senate's proposed appropriations from all sources is 4.35 percent above 1984-85 spending and would require $26.2 billion from state general revenue funds, an increase of $1.37 billion or 5.5 percent above current spending.

The Senate committee also unanimously approved Wednesday its package of increased fees, permits and court costs that would raise more than $220 million.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, chairman of the committee, said the Senate fees bill likely would be debated before the state spending bill is laid out.

The proposed fee increases would raise the four-year Texas driver's license from $10 to $16 and the annual auto inspection fee from $5.25 to $9. The cost of filing a civil suit in a state district court would increase from $25 to $75.

The increased oil and gas fees, estimated to bring in $50 million additional the next two years, are aimed at financing the cost of the Railroad Commission's oil and gas division. There would be a new levy of 1.6 cents per barrel of oil and three-tenths of a cent per thousand cubic feet of gas.

The House has already approved a $106 million fees increase bill.

Some highlights of the Senate spending bill include:

— An increase of $608 million over 1984-85 for the Foundation School Program which allocates state money to public schools.

— Funding of the 33 state senior colleges and universities at 90 percent of the 1985 spending level.

Paper reports Hance making switch Friday

DALLAS (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, who has been heavily recruited to join the Republican Party and run for governor of Texas in 1986, is on the verge of switching parties, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

Sources close to Hance, 42, said Wednesday that an announcement of such a switch was tentatively planned for Friday in Austin, the newspaper said.

However, the announcement could be postponed because Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who publicly invited Hance to change parties and wants to attend the event, will be tied up with Senate business in Washington. "I think we're getting very close," the newspaper said, quoting a source close to Hance who asked not to be identified. "We're trying to work things out this week, but there are still some ends to tie together. The final knot's not yet been tied."

The same sources said there was still a slim chance remaining that Hance would not make the change, the newspaper said.

The News said Hance was reported to be in Austin Wednesday, but that its repeated attempts to locate him for oil-producing strata. That gas cannot be called casinghead gas and thus was being produced and sold in violation of federal regulations, the judge indicated.

Mrs. Eller said if the federal administrative law judge's decision stands, the Panhandle would experience "mass unemployment... loss of valuable tax dollars... and instant migration."

White oil wells have proliferated in the Panhandle fields since 1978, and operators claim shutting them down would wreck the region's economy because of the tax loss to communities and schools.

Austin lawyer Broadus Spivey described the issue as a "dispute between ourselves (Texans) and eastern interests, and FERC ain't necessarily on our side."

Gillespie said Santiesteban's bill would make white oil wells "completely acceptable."

He said by counting a gas chilled to a vapor state as oil, certain operators can classify their wells as oil wells. In the Panhandle fields, 64 oil wells can be drilled on one square mile but only one gas well can be drilled in that same area.

Oil wells also are allowed to produce large

Annual vaccination clinic set for Friday, Saturday

All four Pampa veterinarians will participate in an annual rabies vaccination clinic Friday and Saturday, offering reduced prices on shots to protect pets against rabies and other diseases.

The prices at all of Pampa's veterinary hospitals will be reduced about 30 percent for the rabies clinic, being held in cooperation with the Texas Department of Health.

During regular office hours Friday and Saturday, the Pampa vets will give dogs rabies shots for $6, distemper shots for $8 and Parvo vaccinations for $6. For cats in the two-day clinic, the reduced price for a rabies vaccination will be $6; distemper, $11.50; and leukemia, $15.

Those wanting to have their pets vaccinated should take them to the animal hospitals of Drs. Ron Hendrick, Ron Easley and Kenneth Royle or to Bill Horne at the Gray County Veterinary Clinic.

"Spring is when wild animals such as coyotes and skunks are more prolific, and rabies is on the upswing at this time," Dr. Hendrick remarked about the timing of the annual vaccination clinic.

Unvaccinated pets can contract the disease by having contact with a rabid coyote or skunk, he pointed out.

"There were 719 confirmed cases of rabies in animals in Texas in 1984," Hendrick said. "We hope to make it less this year."

Royle said residents need to vaccinate their cats as much as possible against rabies. He said in 1983 and 1984 more cats than dogs in the state were found positive for rabies, the first times that had happened.

Failure to vaccinate pets for rabies is a violation of both state and city laws, Hendrick vet remarked.

Royle noted the state and city laws require cats and dogs to be vaccinated against rabies every year. The vaccine lasts only about 12 months, he explained.

Royle said the World Health Organization has estimated that keeping at least 70 percent of pets vaccinated will likely prevent an epidemic outbreak of rabies in an area.

About four or five years ago, three skunks found within the city limits were tested positive for rabies, so there is a danger for pets in the city, he said. But a large percentage of vaccinated pets helps to keep that danger low, he said.

An old term for rabies is hydrophobia, meaning fear of water. Hendrick said the name was given to the disease because the muscles in the throat of animals afflicted become paralyzed, rendering them unable to eat or drink. "Foaming at the mouth" in animals, a common image of rabies, can be caused by almost anything, but it is an end-stage sign of rabies, Hendrick said.

Getting pets rabies shots not only protects the pet but also the human population, the vet reminded owners. The disease in humans is rare but always fatal. A 12-year-old Houston girl who contracted rabies died last July.

"Rabies is definitely still around," Hendrick said.

Local Animal Control personnel reported no pets under observation for rabies Wednesday, but three had been under such observation recently.

Also to be offered is a vaccination for feline leukemia virus (FeLV) in cats. FeLV is one of the leading causes of death in pet cats and kittens, Easley said.

Within the past 20 years researchers have discovered that this virus is associated with numerous cat diseases. Persistent FeLV infection is virtually always fatal, and infected cats rarely live more than three years, Easley noted.

"Fortunately, a vaccine is now available to protect cats," he said.

FeLV can lead to leukemia, a blood cell cancer; lymphosarcoma cancer tumors, or associated diseases resulting from impairment of a cat's immune system, Easley explained. These can result in reproductive failures, a high rate of infectious diseases, frequent stomach problems, anemia or skin and mouth sores.

The virus is contagious and is often present in the saliva, urine and feces of cats. It is passed to healthy cats by licking, sneezing and sharing contaminated bowls and litter pans. Kittens may pick it up by nursing an infected mother, he said.

Households having two or more cats create a high risk of infection because of the greater exposure to FeLV possible, Easley noted. Cats in this environment have a chance for a higher incidence of FeLV infection, as much as 30 percent.

But cats in single-cat households also risk the infection if they are likely to come in contact with other cats, he warned.

Signs such as depression, fever, loss of appetite and swollen glands in the neck or abdomen suggest the onset of FeLV disease, Easley said.

For years no means of preventing FeLV infection existed, but recently the first federally licensed FeLV vaccine was approved. Vaccination is recommended for all healthy cats nine weeks of age or older, he said.

Social Security cap defeated

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Republican leaders, powerless to stem a vote to protect Social Security benefit increases, are struggling to keep a defense spending hike and other key elements of a GOP 1986 budget compromise from unraveling.

The GOP-run chamber defied its own leadership on Wednesday and voted 65-34 to strike a proposed 2 percent cap on Social Security cost of living increases from the 1986 budget package negotiated by the White House and top Republican officials.

"I don't believe we gain any ground by everyone abandoning ship on the first amendment," complained Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, who helped draft the compromise proposal designed to cut federal spending by $52 billion in fiscal 1986.

The vote stripped the GOP package of its single largest domestic savings - $3 billion in 1986 and $22.7 billion over three years by curtailing annual Social Security cost of living increases.

Dole vowed to return to the Social Security issue at a later time to try to "put it together again, like Humpty Dumpty."

Meanwhile, the Kansas Republican and other administration allies shifted their attention to fending off an assault on a White House-endorsed provision to permit a 3 percent rise in military spending.

Reagan had originally sought a 6 percent increase.

Sponsors of the White House-endorsed budget, which the Senate tentatively approved by a single vote on Tuesday, said the vote striking the Social Security limits would undermine the entire package.

"It will blow the whole package out of the water," said Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo.

driveway pipes removal organized to protest the action. They later initiated a suit against the city and ran a slate of candidates in the city elections.

The city commission currently is devising a new ordinance concerning the driveway entrances, including procedures for replacing some of the removed pipes and standards for later ones.

Moore left the private sector of civil engineering after 17 years of experience to become public works director in Pampa. He replaced Jiggs Cooke, who had retired in November, 1983.

Moore moved here from Tulsa, Okla., where he had been working for two years as vice president and chief engineer for an engineering company with 35 employees. Prior to that he had worked for two engineering companies at Junction City, Kan. He had graduated from Kansas State University at Manhattan, Kan., in 1967 with a bachelor's degree in civil engineering.

He is a registered licensed professional engineer in Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

Though Moore will be leaving the Panhandle, he said he still will have ties with the area. One daughter will be attending West Texas State University at Canyon, and the other daughter will be performing in the production of "Texas" at Palo Duro Canyon this summer.

comment were unsuccessful. Hance has resumed his practice as an attorney since narrowly losing the Democratic nomination last year for the Senate seat Gramm later won.

Although his West Texas congressional district voted heavily for Hance, it helped give Gramm, Reagan and other Republican candidates landslide victories in the General Election last fall after Hance was eliminated.

Despite increasing speculation that Hance would change parties and run against Democratic Gov. Mark White next year, he stated publicly on repeated occasions that he had no such plans.

At the same time, however, he said "you never say never" in politics.

The News reported that sources close to Hance said Wednesday that Hance wants Gramm to join him for the party change announcement and that

Gramm "is going to accommodate him."

With the Senate working on the budget this week, Gramm probably will be unable to leave town, but is scheduled to participate in Texas A&M commencement ceremonies Friday night.

In addition to Gramm, the newspaper said others vigorously involved in the effort to recruit Hance into the Republican Party include Jim Francis of Dallas, the top aide to former GOP Gov. Bill Clements; Austin direct mail expert Karl Rove; and Charles Black, a Washington political consultant who worked on Gramm's Senate campaign last year.

In an interview Wednesday, Gramm said he believes Hance will make the switch, the News said.

"I believe that when you get right down to it, Kent will realize it is the right thing to do... in the sense that in the Republican Party he will be in a position to work for the things that he's always believed in," Gramm said.

At least three other Republicans, including U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, are expected to run for the GOP gubernatorial nomination. Former State Sen. Bill Meier of Eules and Mike Richards of Houston also are likely candidates. State Sen. Lloyd Doggett.

Hance and Gramm both were elected to Congress in 1978 and - before Gramm became a Republican - were leaders in the Boll Weevils, a mostly southern coalition of conservative Democrats who aligned themselves frequently with President Reagan on economic issues, incurring the wrath of the Democratic leadership.

College tuition increase approved by Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill that would triple college tuition starting in the fall but added a "safety net" and other provisions to make the increased cost somewhat less painful.

It would be the first substantial hike in tuition since 1957. Additional tuition increases would be phased in over 11 years, a longer period than originally proposed by the Senate.

Sen. Grant Jones' tuition measure was returned to the House Wednesday on a 24-7 vote, and House sponsor Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, said, "I'm inclined to concur" in the Senate amendments, which would send the bill to the governor.

The bill had been held up by a Senate minority of 11 in an effort to work out the compromise, with enough senators switching Wednesday to provide the 21 votes to put the measure into immediate effect.

The bill would raise tuition for Texas residents at state-financed colleges from $4 per semester hour to $12 in the fall. It would go up to $16 per semester hour for the next three years, and after that tuition would increase $2 every two years until it reached $24 per semester hour in 1995.

Tuition for out-of-state students would triple, from $40 to $120 per semester hour, this fall and would remain at $120 the next year.

Tuition for resident medical and dental students would go up from $400 a year to $800 in the fall and $1,219 the next year. Veterinary students would pay $800 and $900 respectively. Non-residents would pay four times as much.

Law student tuition for Texas residents would rise from $4 a semester hour to $24 this fall and to $36 the next year. Out-of-state rates would jump from $40 to $150 this fall and remain there the following year.

The tuition bill would raise an estimated $275 million, and has been described as crucial to balancing the next two-year state budget.

The bill tentatively approved by the Senate 18-11 on April 23 called for more accelerated increases in the future, reaching $24 a semester hour for Texas residents in 1988.

On Wednesday, two senators who were absent last week — Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, and O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas — returned and voted for the bill. Also, Sens. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena; Hugh Parmer, D-Fort Worth; John Whitmore, D-Houston; and Lindon Williams, D-Houston, switched and went along with the new proposal.

Parmer, however, added an amendment that states, "It is the goal of this state that no resident be denied the opportunity to receive an education in a public institution of higher education due to a lack of financial ability."

A college, under Parmer's amendment, could defer or waive repayment of emergency loans.

"This is a safety net for students who might fall between the cracks" of current financial provisions for loans and grants, Parmer said. "It is a clear statement that any kid in Texas ought to have an opportunity to go to college if he is intelligent enough to qualify."

The bill would set aside $20 million for grants and loans.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, tacked on an amendment that would allow businesses to contribute sales tax savings for student financial assistance grants but still did not like the bill enough to vote for it.

Barrientos said businesses are eligible for 1 percent rebates on "timely" sales tax payments to the state comptroller, and his amendment would set up a checkoff to channel that savings to student assistance.

"Ideally, we could raise $30 million," he said. "It's a matter of choice for the businessmen and women of this state. It's up to them."

The Senate approved and returned to the House a bill that would set up a clearinghouse within the Department of Public Safety to track missing children. Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said the first year of a similar operation in California, 58 missing children were located.

Parker said a two-year cost estimate of $942,353 is "unrealistic," but he added that Gov. Mark White's office had told House sponsor Frank Collazo, D-Port Arthur, the governor would find the money.

"There are enough funds in the governor's budget if push comes to shove. He (White) is totally committed to this," Parker said.

Junior college tuition, which is established by the school's governing board, would not be affected by Jones' bill.

In other action, the Senate approved and sent to the House bills that would:

— Change the Texas Family Code to authorize for the first time in Texas periodic support payments — other than child support — to a former spouse.

House sets final Blue Law repeal vote

AUSTIN (AP) — The House planned a final vote today on a tentatively approved bill that would clear the way for Texans to buy everything but a car on Sundays.

A resounding 102-40 vote Wednesday gave preliminary approval to the bill gutting the Blue Law that has kept most stores closed on Sundays since 1961. After the formality of today's final vote, the bill would go to the Senate.

Legislative approval and Gov. Mark White's signature would virtually kill the Blue Law on Sept. 1.

The Blue Law now bans the sale of a hodgepodge list of 42 items on both days of a weekend. It has closed most stores on Sundays. The House repeal measure leaves the Blue Law on the books only for auto dealers, who have vigorously fought repeal efforts.

In a key vote on an amendment, the House voted 75-63 Wednesday against a partial repeal measure that would have allowed all stores to sell everything during the Christmas season, but not allow additional stores to open on Sundays the rest of the year.

Dallas Rep. David Cain, sponsor of the approved bill, said Texans have changed since 1961. Many Texas families need another day of shopping because both parents work, he said.

"We all remember 1961. That was the year of Ozzie and Harriet. That was the year of June and Ward Cleaver, where June is sitting around there waiting for the Beaver and all his friends to come home after school to give them a peanut butter and jelly sandwich," Cain said.

The modern "June" probably has a job, he added. "Unfortunately, June is not there (at home). And she needs time to go shopping," said Cain.

Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, acknowledged changes in "Texas society," but said "the basic values of life we treasure so much remain constant."

"We're talking about the quality of life this great state has offered our citizens for so many years," Uher said.

That quality of life includes Sundays free from shopping and work, he added. It also includes "Sunday dinner with fried chicken, mashed potatoes, rice or whatever," he said.

The bill would bar employers from making employees work for seven consecutive days. There also are protections to guarantee time to worship.

Although the bill's fiscal note says Sunday sales would add $10.6 million to the state's sales tax collections next year, Uher said he is not convinced.

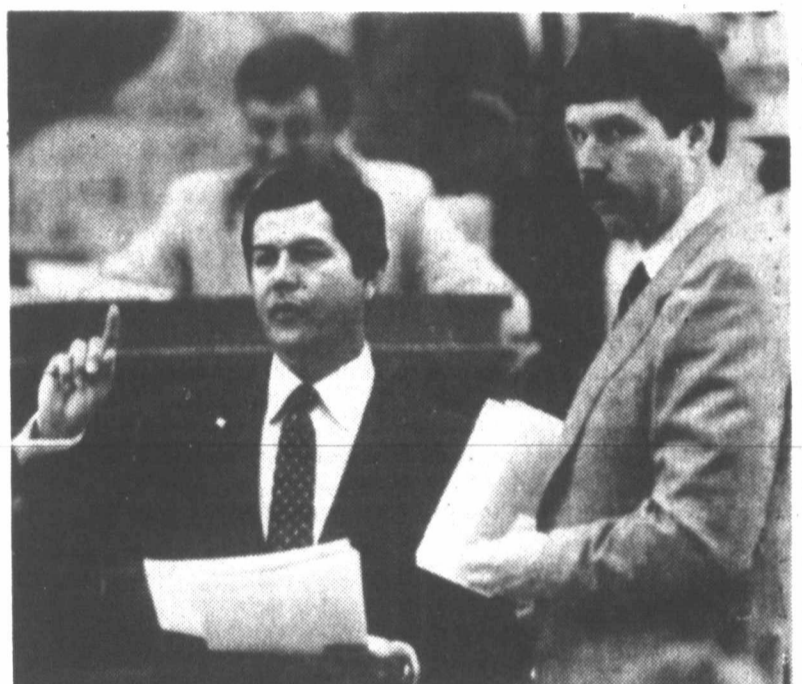

"There are only so many dollars any family can spend," he said.

The Texas Automobile Dealers Association has long led the fight to keep the Blue Law on the books. The association opposes the Cain bill although it keeps auto dealers under the law.

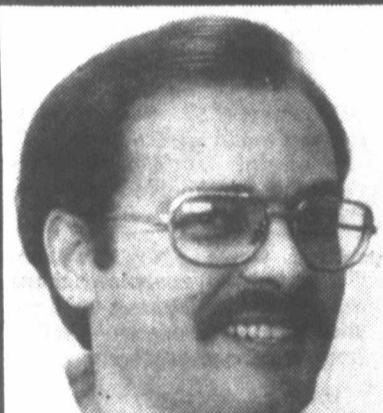

Rep. Doyle Willis, D-Fort Worth and a veteran Blue Law opponent, was defeated 123-16 on his amendment for total repeal.

Pampa Rep. Foster Whaley agreed with Willis' idea, but realized the problem of raising the ire of the powerful auto dealers' lobby.

"Let's take everything off but automobiles," he said. "Next year we'll go for that."

The project belongs to us

A friend and I were out riding our bicycles the other day, just enjoying the scenery and surveying the remains from the storms of last week.

As we rode down one block, my friend stopped and said, "Man, would you look at that!" He pointed to one of the vacant lots that dot parts of the city.

"Yeah, look at all that stuff the storm blew there," I said. "Oh, don't give me that," he said. "There's no way a storm could have blown that much junk into a field."

I looked around. There were bottles, cans, a few trash barrels, pieces of lumber, pieces of rubber hoses, a pile of decaying magazines, scattered tree limbs and numerous other materials, all just junk. And all were lying among grass and weeds that obviously had not felt the touch of a mower blade in ages.

"I was by here a couple of weeks ago, and it looked just as bad then," my friend said, a touch of exasperation in his voice. "In fact, it's looked like the remains of a storm for months, at least."

I had to agree. The lumber was gray, pieces falling off from the attacks of weather and bugs. Metal pieces were rusted, broken pieces of glass were coated with dirt, weeds and grass had grown around and through a number of the items.

"Boy, that just makes me mad," my friend muttered, getting off his bike and walking carefully into the lot. "Whoever owns that lot is just telling others he doesn't care about them. Or about himself."

He kicked at a slightly crushed can, knocking it toward the center of the lot.

"I can hear the owner now," he said. "I don't care what others think. I like ugly." He kicked another can; it went up into the air and then came down, moving a broken beer bottle an inch or so.

He was getting angrier. "Doesn't the owner realize some young kid could get hurt someday here? Doesn't he care about how it detracts from the appearance of all the other homes and lots in this area?"

"He probably just doesn't care," I replied. "Especially if he lives out of town somewhere."

"I don't care whether he lives across the street or in Timbuktu. There's just no excuse, no reason for this."

"Well, there's not much we can do about it," I said.

"There ought to be something we can do. Or if not us, then why not the people who live around here? Don't they care about this blot on their neighborhood?"

"Maybe not," I said. "After all, it's not their responsibility, is it?"

"Would you live next door to a place like this?" he asked, disgust marring his face.

"Hell, no," I said. "I'd clean it up myself. If I lived around here, anyway."

"Well, if the neighbors don't care, somebody ought to. It's a blot on the whole city. There's too many of them around the city. Everybody in the whole city ought to care, whether they live around one of them or not."

"Well, the city's clean-up campaign is coming up. Maybe someone will clean up some of the lots," I opined.

"It will take more than 'someone,'" he said. "I hope a lot of people undertake some group projects to get rid of some of these lots. And it's about time all those abandoned, rotting houses in the city are torn down. And I'm tired of seeing so many junkyards out in plain sight."

He walked back to his bike, kicking several items on the way back. "This could really be such a nice looking city, much better looking," he said, getting on his bike and pedaling off.

We pedaled awhile in silence.

"What are you doing next weekend?" he asked.

"Oh, nothing much," I said.

"Good."

"What do you mean, 'good'?"

"I think we'll find us a filthy lot to clean up."

"WE? Why us?"

"If not us, then who?" he asked.

Court says apartment's owner can be sued

AUSTIN (AP) — The owner of an apartment complex can be sued for damages by a 10-year-old girl who was raped in a vacant apartment, the Texas Supreme Court says.

In a 6-3 decision Wednesday, the court said the lawsuit brought by the girl and her mother could go to trial.

The girl was abducted outside the Dallas apartment where she lived on Aug. 7, 1981. She was dragged across the street to the Chalmette Apartments, taken into a vacant unit and raped, court records said.

Court records said evidence showed the vacant apartment was dilapidated. A police officer reported that "the glass was broken from the windows and the front door was off its hinges."

A state district court and the 5th District Court of Appeals in Dallas dismissed a suit filed against the apartment's owner and a property management company.

The Supreme Court opinion written by Chief Justice John Hill Jr. cited several reasons for the decision.

A Dallas city ordinance requires property owners to keep doors and windows of vacant buildings securely closed to prevent unauthorized entry, he said.

"A reasonable interpretation of this ordinance is that it was designed to deter criminal activity by reducing the conspicuous opportunities for criminal conduct," Hill wrote.

A second point, the opinion said, is that "a reasonable inference exists that, but for (the property manager's) failure to comply with the ordinance regarding maintenance of its apartment complex, this crime would have never taken place."

The judge said evidence suggests the rapist knew the apartment was vacant and available for the crime.

Hill also noted that numerous crimes previously had occurred at the apartment complex. Police had investigated one attempted murder, two aggravated robberies, two aggravated assaults, 16 apartment burglaries, four vehicle burglaries, four cases of theft and five cases of criminal mischief, court records said.

Dissenting, Justice Sears McGee said nothing the defendants did or failed to do caused the rape.

"Rather, the criminal conduct of an unknown person in this case was unforeseeable," he said.

Many of the previous crimes at the apartments took place before the owner named in the suit purchased the property, McGee noted.

"A missing or unlocked door at the Chalmette Apartments was not a cause in fact of (the girl's) rape," McGee said.

The benefits of free enterprise

Remember when the McDonald's sign read 2 Billion Served, then 4 Billion, then 8 Billion? A lot of us don't believe somewhere along the line the restaurant chain began selling hamburgers so rapidly that it gave up trying to keep track of the exact number. The signs were all changed to be non-specific Billion Served (in the neighborhood of 50 billion is the firm's best estimate).

It has probably become equally difficult to keep track of other significant numbers associated with the fast-food firm founded by the late Ray Kroc, who franchised his first McDonald's in Illinois 30 years ago and truly revolutionized American's eating habits.

- Billions in Profits Earned.
- Billions in Wealth Created.
- Millions Employed
- Thousands of Millionaires Made.
- Hundreds of Competitors Launched.

Ray Kroc might well have recorded such accomplishments on banners under the golden arches. But his business was selling hamburgers, so that is what he counted. All of the rest flowed from, but was secondary to, the business of selling hamburger.

McDonald's management has chosen to celebrate the anniversary as the Year of the Crew. Employees from years past have been rounded up for television ads in which they are pictured in their current jobs sporting the familiar McDonald's paper hats they once wore.

With its emphasis on courtesy, speed, efficiency, quality control and value, McDonald's has not only provided the first paychecks to thousands of American teenagers, but also helped them learn work habits for a lifetime, along with the ethics and techniques of free enterprise.

The telling point, again, is that all these benefits flowed naturally and freely from the business of selling a good hamburger at the right price. No one was forced to buy. Ray Kroc did not set up McDonald's as a "job-training program." Innovations in food preparation and quality control were not developed to fill the pages of a government research study. Wealth was created, not redistributed.

All these things were done to sell more hamburgers. And these same complimentary things can be said of hundreds of other successful American businesses.

Selling the right product at the right price. It's the simple essence of free enterprise, from which all the other good things flow.

Volcker missing 'player'

As President Reagan sits down to his fifth Economic Summit the most important "player" will be missing from the table: Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker - an absence that diminishes Bonn's potential significance.

Not only does Volcker really "run" the U.S. and the world economy, he is the key to one of the main items on the agenda: world monetary reform.

Indeed, it is the extreme volatility of Volcker's U.S. monetary policy that has given rise to Europe's clamor for monetary stability. Under that policy the U.S. dollar has swung a massive 67 percent from one of the world's weakest currencies in 1979 to its strongest. This swing started two years before a single Reagan economic policy was implemented.

The size of this swing was not the result of the Fed's single-minded, commendable pursuit of lower inflation - but because that pursuit was a totally negative, demand-choking, rather than productivity-promoting, approach, characterized by wild gyrations from tight to loose to tight money.

Instead of gradually lowering monetary growth, the Fed has sent world financial markets reeling by alternating between five- and six-month periods of zero monetary growth, and similar periods of 15- to 17-percent growth. It is that wild instability that has pushed real U.S. interest rates so high and made the dollar soar.

The Fed's own economists argue that it is difficult, if not impossible, to keep monetary growth perfectly steady. But that argument falls apart when you observe (as Volcker should)

Japan, whose monetary policies have brought both comfort and consternation to U.S. monetarist theorists.

Comfort because Japan has held its monetary growth in a very steady pattern and narrow range. For example, Japan has had less than a two percentage-point variation over the last twelve quarters, compared with a sickening eleven-point swing by the Fed in the same period.

Consternation because on average (1980-84 inclusive) Japan's M-2 monetary growth (8.4 percent) has been about as high as that of the U.S. (9.6 percent), and a full five points above its own real GNP growth rate. That's a condition monetarists say should have produced 5-percent inflation and 10-percent interest rates. But Japan's inflation has averaged 2 percent, and its interest rates have held steady at 6 percent, four to eight points below ours!

What's more, Japan's 8.4-percent M-2 growth rate has only produced a much lower average 5.5-percent "nominal" (inflated) GNP, something the monetarists suggest should be impossible because money growth is supposed to equal nominal GNP growth.

In short, Japan has provided generous monetary growth, five points above real output, with no penalty either in inflation or interest rates. And it has kept this growth within a steady narrow band of two percentage points, even though its own deficits, as a percent of GNP, have consistently been at the 4- to 5-percent level - about where ours are now.

No wonder its economy has produced a real average GNP growth rate (3.5 percent) that is two thirds better than the U.S. (2.1 percent) in the same 1980-84 period.

By contrast, all of the U.S. "excess" monetary growth has been absorbed in inflation, even as its tight money swings produced two recessions in two years. The Fed has produced high and wildly swinging interest rates, with the prime rate varying a massive eleven points from 1980-84, compared with only two points in Japan.

Obviously, automobiles and electronics are not the only places where the Japanese are beating us hollow. They simply are better at managing their money supply and credit rates. And they have decided that monetary policy must be geared to accommodate economic growth, not the other way around. Tight money is out.

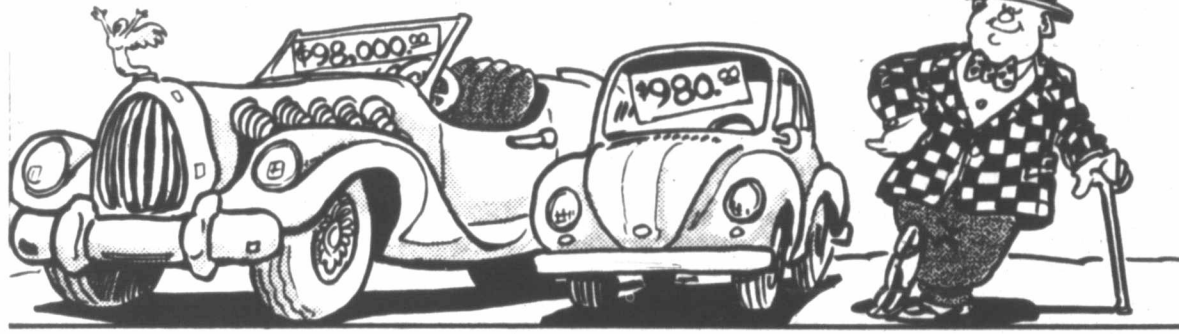

In short, the Japanese have chosen to make productivity, growth, savings, and investment, not tight money, the focus of their anti-inflation policy - a "supply-side" approach.

Since inflation is "too much money chasing too few goods," there are two ways to deal with it - either choke off the money (as we have), or boost goods production (as Japan has done). Using this "supply-side approach" Japan has cut its inflation rates from 24 percent in 1974 to under 2 percent today, even as it has regularly cut taxes and run big budget deficits with low interest rates!

With a tax policy that exempts up to $40,000 a year in savings, and all capital gains, and the lowest overall national tax burden among industrialized nations, Japan has made its monetary policy accommodate their tax policy to maximize growth and productivity - and it works.

Ted Turner's commercials

I've been watching Ted Turner's WTBS SuperStation, available in many areas of the country via cable television broadcasting services, for a long time and there are lots of things I like about it.

It was Ted Turner and WTBS that gave "The Andy Griffith Show" a home, for instance.

Andy and Barney and Aunt Bea and Opie and Goober and Gomer and Ernest T. Bass living the Mayberry way of life is grand entertainment, family entertainment, entertainment that leaves you warm and satisfied.

WTBS also features "Academy Award Theatre" on Sunday mornings. I haven't understood a single movie since whatever John Wayne did last.

Academy Award Theatre shows the old movies, movies in which nobody gets naked or says bad words.

But I must admit there are a few things about the SuperStation that get on my nerves and I wonder, if Ted Turner did get control of CBS, would he take Ginsu knife commercials with him?

Has there ever been a longer, more annoying commercial than that one, which always is interrupting WTBS movies?

"How much would YOU pay for this set of knives?" the commercial asks.

Not one thin dime, is my answer because I'm sick of the stupid commercial, and whoever produced it should do the only decent thing and go fall on one of those blades they show slicing through a beer can.

If I run into a beer can I can't open, I'm not going to slice through it with a Ginsu knife. I'll find an ice pick and punch some holes in the top.

Think of some of those other awful commercials on WTBS, the station that put Slim Whitman back in the record business just when we thought yodeling was a lost art.

It was WTBS that told us about "Popell's Pocket Fisherman!" It was WTBS that tried to sell us

"Mr. Microphone," too, and the Ace Cannon party record, like somebody is going to shell out bucks for a record by a washed-out sax player.

And who can ever forget the Bamboo Streamer WTBS brought us? Or "The Amazing Moul" from France? Or all those magic potions that were supposed to "promote" hair growth? Or the Party Ring that changes colors with your every mood?

And this Ted Turner also is the man - lest we never forget - who gave television the worst show in its history, "The Catlins," a soap opera set in Atlanta that is the most embarrassing thing to happen to that city since the Falcons joined the National Football League.

It's just a thought, but wouldn't the viewer be better served if, before Ted Turner tries to take over a major network like CBS, he got rid of the garbage on his own station first?

In the immortal words of Sheriff Andy Taylor, "I'd preciate it," if he did.

Know the candidate before you vote

Dear Sir,
In the recent city and school elections, many people voted "against" the incumbents and for the opposition. Unfortunately many people did not know who they were voting "for."

My recommendation is that if you disagree with the incumbent, vote against him. But do not vote for someone you do not know. If you do not know the challenger or his background, do not vote "for" or "against."

Several years ago Don Yarbrough received a majority of the votes for the Texas Supreme Court. Shortly after taking office, he was indicted for fraud and now is in prison. He was elected by people that did not know for whom they were voting.

Ethiopia poverty not new

Dear Editor,
Recently I have been wondering why other nations are just now discovering the poverty in Ethiopia. Can you tell me why?

I visited Ethiopia in 1967. One afternoon we were driving in a town in northern Ethiopia. The estimated population of the town was 200,000. No records of births or deaths were recorded.

We drove in some of the poor parts of town. We discussed driving to the most impoverished parts, but I was so nauseated at things we had already seen we decided to wait another day.

When we drove to that part which was called "Sticktown" the people were sitting on the sandy ground with ragged clothes, as they had no other place to live. There were children, babies, women and men, all looked hungry.

It was called "Sticktown" as the people would go out and hunt sticks to sell the Americans who lived near there.

The nights were very cold and the sun was hot in the daytime. I could hardly keep from crying to see the people looking so pitiful.

The United States had rented a fenced compound for the civil service employees to live. There was a guard at the gate at all times.

The civil service people bought their groceries at the PX on the military base. The groceries and other supplies were shipped from the United States. The Americans were warned not to give food and water to the natives.

One afternoon as we were leaving the compound, we had passed through the gate and an old crippled man came running up to the car begging for water. It was hard not to give him water. If we had, more natives would have rushed in for water and food.

We drove about three hundred miles down through the country. When we stopped in a village to get gas, natives were all over the car begging for food until the police had to get them off the car. Everywhere we went we saw poverty.

When we were stopped, a boy about 12 years old came hopping like a frog to get to the car. He was so deformed that was the only way he could travel.

None of the natives had cars. If we saw a man riding a horse, we knew he was rich according to their standards.

Reagan meeting with Kohl privately before summit

BONN, West Germany (AP) — President Reagan and Chancellor Helmut Kohl, partners in a politically uncomfortable joint visit to Bitburg, were conferring privately today in advance of the economic summit that brought Reagan to Europe.

In his first substantive actions since arriving Wednesday in the West German capital, Reagan also planned to hold separate face-to-face meetings with French President Francois Mitterrand, Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher before attending a dinner with the leaders of all seven allied summit nations.

Also attending the summit on Friday and Saturday are Italian Premier Bettino Craxi and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

But the seven-nation conference and Reagan's plans for stops in Spain, France and Portugal could not divert attention from Sunday's planned visit to the Bitburg Kolmesohne cemetery.

It contains the graves of 2,000 German soldiers who died in World War II, including 49 members of the Waffen SS, the combat branch of the elite guard that operated Adolph Hitler's concentration camps.

To mute criticism of the Bitburg visit, Reagan also arranged to go later Sunday to the site of the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp, where 50,000 people died at the hands of the SS.

Reagan made no public appearances following his arrival Wednesday on a chill, damp morning, but he did order economic sanctions against Nicaragua in retaliation for that country's overtures to the Soviet Union.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters it would be cynical to view the timing of Reagan's Nicaragua action as an attempt to divert attention from the Bitburg controversy.

Speakes complained that reporters asking about Bitburg were "barking up one tree and another," and said "the event there has not changed since Day One."

"The president is going to stick by his commitment," Speakes said.

Reagan has rejected suggestions — including bipartisan votes of both houses of Congress — that he skip the visit, a step that would be seen as a political blow to Kohl, who has backed Reagan on the siting of U.S. missiles in Europe and on his "Star Wars" missile defense concept.

Kohl has said he invited Reagan to visit the cemetery, located near the border with Luxembourg, as a "demonstrative gesture of reconciliation" 40 years after Germany was defeated in World War II.

In a recent interview with The Associated Press, Kohl said Reagan's trip to the cemetery carries great significance for Germany.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, a German-born Jew who lost 13 members of his family in Nazi concentration camps, supports Reagan's decision to visit Bitburg.

"I understand the concern of the critics," Kissinger said in a statement in Washington.

STOCKS AROUND THE CLOCK?—With money flows coming from around the world and all time zones the New York Stock Exchange, the world's largest market for stocks, is studying the need for 24 hour trading. The exchange now operates from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Big board and Wall Street debate more trading hours

NEW YORK (AP) — If businesses like supermarkets and gas stations can remain open 24 hours a day, why not the stock market?

That's the question now under study at the New York Stock Exchange and the subject of a lively debate among publicly traded companies, Wall Street brokers, investors and practically everybody else who has an interest in the securities markets.

The NYSE, the world's largest market for stocks, has operated for the past decade from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time each business day. It last changed its hours in 1974, when the close of trading was extended from 3:30 p.m.

Since then, however, the investment world has been greatly transformed. Money flows in much greater amounts in and out of U.S. stocks from remote time zones in Europe and the Far East.

Buying and selling of NYSE-listed stocks on smaller, regional exchanges is now reported, along with Big Board transactions, on a single consolidated ticker tape. One of those regionals, the Pacific Stock Exchange in San Francisco, remains open a half-hour after the close in New York.

The NYSE also faces competition from the National Association of Securities Dealers' over-the-counter market, where stocks are traded by competing dealers rather than a designated "specialist" broker on an exchange floor.

With deregulation of the securities markets, independent firms like Los Angeles-based Jefferies & Co. can bid for, and sometimes get, big transactions that would otherwise be handled at the NYSE.

There is considerable pressure on the 193-year-old institution to adjust to the changing investment world. "We have the choice of being the leader or a follower on this, and we want to be the leader," said Richard Torrenzano, the exchange's vice president for communications.

However, the mere mention of 24-hour trading raises cries of alarm from brokerage firms, whose managers envision enormous additional costs connected with around-the-clock operations without a corresponding increase in revenues.

Leaders in the industry, which employs some 250,000 people, are extremely cost-conscious because of Wall Street's less-than-bountiful year in 1984.

Who, they ask, is going to trade stocks at 2 a.m.?

Meanwhile, the New York exchange has begun talks about a possible merger with the Pacific Stock Exchange, and has discussed some sort of linkup with the Stock Exchange in London.

The idea of a New York-Pacific merger faces at least one major obstacle, however. Traders at each institution worry they might lose some of their business to their counterparts at the other.

In addition, the New York and London exchanges operate under different governments with different regulatory rules.

Astronauts watch over sick monkey

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Challenger's astronauts kept watch today on an ailing monkey and worked to overcome nagging problems with an experiment while still being bothered by leaking animal cages that fill the cabin with rat food and wastes.

Still, scientists said they were very pleased with the round-the-clock research being conducted in two shifts in the billion-dollar, 23-foot-long Spacelab mounted in the shuttle's cargo bay.

"We're having a very successful science mission," reported Joseph Cremin, who heads the team of Spacelab managers at Mission Control Center.

He reported that of 15 experiments aboard, 13 were operating at 100 percent, one was abandoned and experts on the ground were trying to find a way to repair another that has an electrical short.

The ailing experiment is designed to study the effects of weightlessness on fluid drops. Astronaut Taylor Wang, a physicist who is operating the experiment, took the machine apart Wednesday in search of a short circuit.

Ground specialists said they hoped to have a solution later today. Wang commented, "I refuse to come home until I get this thing fixed."

An experiment in which interstellar clouds would be photographed was knocked out when a jammed airlock door prevented extension of a special camera.

The seven-man astronaut crew continued to complain about food particles and animal wastes floating into the laboratory from cages holding two squirrel monkeys and 24 rats.

Cancer Society's fund use explained

"The breakdown of how American Cancer Society funds are spent in Texas represents one of the best returns on the dollar that I know of," said Leona Willis, chairman of the 1985 educational and fund raising Crusade in Pampa.

In preparing for the Crusade, Willis said she feels it is important for the community to realize ACS expenditures. "It is one part of the ACS we're most proud of and I think our friends and neighbors will be more willing to give to cancer control if they know how well their money is being spent," she said.

The following represents the breakdown of how each dollar raised last year by ACS is being spent this fiscal year (Sept. 1, 1984 to Aug. 31, 1985) in Texas:

- Cancer research — 29 cents.
- Professional education — 11 cents.
- Public education — 28 cents.
- Service - rehabilitation — 25 cents.
- Program Development and administrative — six cents.
- Crusade — 12 cents.
- Total — $1.11.

This 111 percent expenditure reflects increased research allocations to Texas by the National American Cancer Society.

"The ACS is currently sponsoring research investigations in 12 major Texas hospitals, medical schools and universities totaling more than $6 million," said Willis. "Because Texas has so many research institutions, the national society allocates additional funds here."

"In spite of inflationary trends, we were able to keep tight control over our administrative costs and keep them within acceptable limits, as this breakdown indicates," she added.

ACS programs such as patient service and rehabilitation (Reach-to-Recovery, esophageal speech lessons, etc.), public education (films, pamphlets, exhibits, the Great American Smokeout) and professional education for the medical community are mainly administered through the society's volunteer system.

"Volunteer manpower helps maintain these impressive figures," said Willis.

Dear Abby

Freeloading father is burden for his self-sufficient son

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 23-year-old man with a problem: my father. Three months ago he quit his job and moved in with me. He didn't even let me know he was coming; he just showed up at my door—bag and baggage.

He's been here for three months now, and still no job. I doubt if he's even looking. I asked him to take any kind of job for now, but he said he was too old to start at the bottom. (He's 47.)

To top it off, his girlfriend is always here. They have sex in my bed, shower in my bathroom and have practically taken over my apartment. Dad got upset when I told him I didn't want her over here so much. She's married with two small children and is 10 years younger than my father.

Abby, I liked living alone. I work two jobs so I wouldn't need a roommate to share expenses.

What can I do? Dad keeps telling me, "You owe me your life; if it weren't for me, you wouldn't be here." Should I feel guilty because I want him out of here. What should I do?

FED UP

DEAR FED UP: Reverse roles, and do what a loving parent should do with an able-bodied adult son who freeloads off his parents. Give him a deadline. He'll take as long as you're willing to give.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 48-year-old white male, and a child molester of pre-adolescent children, ages 5 to 12. I have a long history of non-violent sexual offenses. I am once again in jail awaiting sentence for a sexual offense.

Abby, please continue to tell your readers that all children, boys and girls, should be supervised when going to the bathroom at movies or any other public place. No one knows better than I how easy it is for a child to be accosted by a molester in a public restroom. Flea markets, county fairs and carnivals are a molester's delight. I am amazed to see so many small children wandering around alone at these places.

Prevention of child molestation can come about only through educating parents as well as children.

Parents need to warn their children about molesters, and further protect them by never allowing them to roam around in public places unsupervised.

INMATE IN COLORADO

DEAR INMATE: Thank you for reaffirming some facts that many parents are already well aware of. But it never hurts to remind them.

NEW YORK (NEA) — Pity the businesswoman, who, in summer, has to keep cool and reasonably chic and crisp-looking. Wardrobe advisor Karen Zarn thinks it can be done. She owns La Cabine, a salon-kind of shop on New York's fashionable 57th Street, where businesswomen go to assemble or extend their wardrobes rather than merely shop around.

"I believe in simplicity for summer and I buy from fashion houses that supply the right things," said Ms. Zarn. "For example, I may suggest a client start with a striped jacket and plaid skirt, in the same beige tone scheme, from Arthur Chapnik. Then, add a vanilla silk shirt from Omanti. All three can be used with other pieces and colors. The basic outfit is for work when the weather isn't too hot."

"I never believed in overly severe dressing for businesswomen," said Ms. Zarn, "and certainly not in summer. We aim for fabrics first, in quality and usefulness for such aspects of the business life as travel. We have a navy blazer, for example, in silk-fibranne blend, for work and weekend, which is another basic around which to build a wardrobe."

For women who don't have an adviser like La Cabine, Karen Zarn has this advice: "Planning is the word, at any season. Next, avoid fads, except as an occasional fun extra for leisure, not for work. Buy quality, even if that means buying fewer clothes. Don't buy any item until you've thought about how it will fit in with what you've got or whether it will be the basis for a new group of clothes in your wardrobe."

For the dog days, Ms. Zarn might recommend a more casual ensemble, cooler both in look and feel, such as a long white cotton-silk blend knit vest by Leon Block with drop-shoulder cap sleeves worn as an open jacket substitute over a silk cowl-neck sleeveless top and pleated silk skirt from Omanti. This is ideal if you're going to dinner after the office and it also looks tailored for a dressier day look at the office when worn with a Chapnik plaid skirt.

The vest also becomes weekend wear with Omanti's military shirt and soft skirt in cotton-linen blend. For added flair, Ms. Zarn recommends some waistline accents, for example, a cotton sash in several color sections to wrap and tie, a plaid sash or a braided belt with the front in neon red, turquoise and royal blue.

Testing continues as first of exotic craft is delivered

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer
EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (AP) — Maj. Dick Reynolds eased into the cramped B-1 cockpit, pointed to the red screen amid a myriad of controls and talked of the 239-ton nuclear bomber hugging rugged terrain at speeds exceeding 600 mph.

Reynolds, 36, was a pre-schooler in 1953 when America began building its last generation of bombers — the aging B-52 warhorse. He has spent the past four years as one of the test pilots fine-tuning the exotic grey-black bomber crafted for 21st century warfare.

Now, after years of political haggling and hesitation, 100 of the state-of-the-art B-1 bombers will be heading for air bases in Texas, Kansas, North and South Dakota over the next three years. The price tag: $20.5 billion in 1981 dollars.

The first B-1 for use in the Strategic Air Command inventory rolled out of Rockwell International's Palmdale, Calif. plant last week and will be stationed at Dyess AFB, Abilene, Texas June 29.

Half as long as a football field and with a tail more than three stories tall, the B-1 will be capable of carrying 22 cruise missiles and eight nuclear weapons at Mach 1.2 speeds, delivering the deadly cargo at near-supersonic speeds.

"We can enter enemy territory, drop down to 200 feet, and use the terrain to fool the enemy's radar," Reynolds said, shifting in the crowded cockpit of the huge plane.

Reynolds is one of 10 pilots involved in the B-1 program at this sprawling desert base 80 miles northeast of Los Angeles. He was at the controls Aug. 29 when one of the four B-1As crashed in the Mojave Desert while on a test flight.

"Any loss hurts, but the loss of ship No. 2 was a real loss," Reynolds said of the accident that killed Doug Benefield, Rockwell's chief B-1 test pilot. "The man sitting next to me died. We lost a one-of-a-kind test asset."

Reynolds suffered a broken back and was hospitalized four months. Two other crewmen were injured.

Scant feet behind the pilot and co-pilot seats are tiny cubicles for the Offensive Systems Officer and Defensive Systems Officer.

The OSO's job is to navigate to the target area, arm weapons and deliver them to their target.

"The pilot and the OSO are needed to arm any nuclear weapon," said Capt. Don Golding, one of five OSOs currently training with the B-1 at Edwards. "It takes two people to arm that weapon and you must have the proper code."

The DSO, sitting across a narrow aisle from the OSO, will be using what has been described as the most sophisticated electronic warfare system ever built. State-of-the-art computers can pick up, identify and counter incoming hostile signals in milliseconds. The system is designed to outfox the strongest enemy defenses into the 1990s, less heavily defended areas well into the next century.

Reynolds and Golding, standing in the shade of the B-1's imposing wing to escape the hot desert sun, talked about the characteristics of the giant aircraft.

"The plane's skin is nuke-hardened, which means you can absorb the radiation from a nuclear explosion," Reynolds said. "It's more akin to the space shuttle than any other aircraft."

Some stealth characteristics are applied to the B-1, giving it a radar signature less than one-tenth that of the B-52.

The B-1 can fly twice as fast as the B-52, carry far more weapons and deliver them more accurately at a much lower level, Reynolds said.

Testing will continue at Edwards while production moves forward at Rockwell's plant 35 miles to the southwest. The idea of testing and producing a plane simultaneously is unprecedented, Reynolds said.

Across a runway apron, in a huge seven-story hangar built to house the giant CSA during its early testing days, technicians swarmed over the newer B-1B. Eerie coral lights on the blackish plane cast a Star Wars aura.

The tip of the nose was pulled away to expose a radar dish that is the key to the plane's unique terrain-following system — allowing it to fly on automatic pilot, 200 feet above the ground at near-supersonic speeds.

"The terrain-following system hooks into the automatic pilot," explained Golden. "The radar looks 10 minutes ahead of the airplane and stores the configuration of the terrain in computer memory. It knows the terrain inch by inch. The radar will send a signal to the automatic pilot when there's a hill to lift over or something to avoid.

"The radar looks every three or four seconds. It's spaced out that way to prevent enemy radar from locking onto the plane."

Golden doesn't buy the argument that the B-1 is duplicating the Stealth bomber, a newer generation craft being designed to escape enemy radar.

"The B-1 and the Stealth bomber are compatible," he said. "They compound the defensive problems for the Soviets, leaving them with less to spend on offensive weapons."

Does he expect to see combat in the B-1?

"If we do our job right we will have the deterrent force that can prevent war," Golden answered. "You only have that deterrent when you convince the enemy you have the will, the capabilities, and are ready to use them."

The B-1 is built by Rockwell with the Boeing Co. producing the offensive avionics, General Electric the engines and Eaton Corp. the defensive avionics.

The first B-1 was flown Dec. 23, 1974.

Primary bill slated to die

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Clint Hackney said he is going to "keep plugging" for a proposed bill that would give Texas an early presidential primary in 1988.

Hackney, House election committee chairman, said on Wednesday the bill proposing to move the presidential primaries to the second Tuesday in March "won't die until the last day of the session, if it dies at all."

But Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle said the bill is "lingering near dead."

The Senate passed the bill in mid-April that would set up a Democratic and Republican presidential primary on "Super Tuesday", the day that several other states hold their presidential primaries.

Primaries for state and local offices would remain in May, but a person voting in the presidential primary in March would have to vote in the same party's primary in May.

The bill has been opposed by Republican committee members and by some Democratic committee members.

Author: Lucas had contract to kill Carter

WACO, Texas (AP) — Henry Lee Lucas, who now says he was lying when he recanted hundreds of murders he once confessed to, had a contract to kill then-President Carter, an author says.

Dallas author Max Call, in his recently published book "The Hands of Death — The Story of Henry Lee Lucas," also says Lucas delivered the poison to the Rev. Jim Jones in November 1978 that was used in the mass suicide of 913 of Jones' followers in Guyana.

Call said Wednesday he has 40 to 45 hours of taped conversations with the self-professed serial killer, and that Lucas claims he was a member of the underground cult The Hands of Death.

In that capacity, Lucas said he delivered cyanide to Jones, stalked Carter with intentions of assassination and carried out six contract murders, including the murders of two Houston millionaires and a West Texas politician.

Meanwhile Wednesday, Denver radio minister Bob Larson aired a taped conversation with Lucas in which Lucas claims Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox and McLennan County District Attorney Vic Feazell coerced him into recanting his murder confessions.

Lucas has confessed to as many as 600 murders nationwide, but he recently told the Dallas Times Herald he really murdered only three people. He also has been testifying before a McLennan County grand jury, which resumes Friday.

Now, however, Lucas is telling Larson that the recants "are not true. It's only what (Mattox and Feazell) wanted to hear, and that's all. It's not what the actual truth is."

"The truth is I killed around 360 people and the only way I can prove it is with the help of the police in Georgetown and the Rangers who have turned their backs on me," he said.

Larson told the Waco Tribune-Herald that moments before the show was aired in Waco, Lucas called him in Denver and tried to convince him not to air the tape. The tape was recorded in McLennan County Jail on Monday.

"What I said to you Monday was a lie," Larson quoted Lucas as saying Wednesday.

In Call's book, Call said that "Henry told me he was sent down (Guyana) on a chartered flight to deliver the poison. He delivered it and then flew back."

Another source familiar with Lucas told the Waco newspaper that the one-eyed drifter originally said he had driven the poison to Guyana.

Famine victims ousted from camps

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopian authorities forced more than 50,000 famine victims from a refugee camp and ordered them to go to feeding centers in their native regions, international relief agency officials said.

The evacuation this week amounts to a "death sentence" for about half of the refugees, said the administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, M. Peter McPherson, in Washington on Wednesday.

The Ethiopian government has made no comment on the forced removal of the refugees — many of whom were children, elderly and dying — from the Ibbet camp in the Gondar region about 250 miles northwest of Addis Ababa.

Ethiopian officials said a statement would be issued today. The evacuation of 56,000 people began Sunday and ended Tuesday, leaving only 2,000 people at the camp, relief agency officials said Wednesday. U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Chester Crocker said in Washington that 58,000 of 60,000 refugees were evacuated. There was no explanation for the discrepancy in the numbers.

The relief officials in Ethiopia, who refused to allow their names be used because of the sensitive nature of the issue, said the evacuation apparently was carried out by local militia. The Washington Post quoted Western relief officials as saying Ethiopian army troops herded the famine victims out of the camp and then burned their huts.

The relief sources said each famine victim was given 33 pounds of dry rations, equivalent to what is doled out in a month, and told they should make their way to feeding centers in their native regions of Tigré and Wollo.

"They are several days walk — they are all walking, of course — away from their homes, but they came to this camp to begin with because there wasn't anything in their home," said McPherson.

"So to go back to their homes means they go back to starvation," McPherson said at a State Department briefing. He estimated that half of the people will not make it home and "in effect have been given a death sentence."

The United States is calling on Ethiopia to reconstruct the camp, bring the people back to it, and discipline those who dispersed them, he said.

Crocker said at a hearing on Capitol Hill that the evacuation was an "appalling disaster" for which "there was no excuse."

He said the Reagan administration was trying to determine what could be done for the refugees.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the Company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective May 6, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the Commission. The Public Utility Commission of Texas has received the application as Docket 6200.

While proposals as to specific rates vary, it is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish a 10.5 percent increase in the Company's unadjusted test year intrastate revenues or a 9.7% increase in test year revenues as adjusted for test year customer growth and annualization of test year rate increases. The rate application seeks an annual increase of $323.9 million in revenues. All customers and classes of customers of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company within Texas will be affected by the proposed changes.

Most rates proposed for increase would increase by about 18.5 percent, including local exchange rates. However, there are some exceptions. For example, those customers residing in cities that will be reclassified into larger rate groups will experience local exchange rate increases greater than 18.5 percent. Also, the rate increases proposed for private line services in El Paso, due to a proposal to restructure such rates, are greater than 18.5 percent.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas and with each affected incorporated municipality served by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's rate application. This filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for local exchange service, intraLATA long distance, intraLATA interexchange private line service (which includes foreign exchange service) and to decrease certain access service rates.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

This filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for intraLATA long distance and for intraLATA, interexchange private line service (which includes foreign exchange service) and to decrease certain access service rates. Changes in such rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide certain services in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell Telephone Company's tariffs.

Notice to All Customers Concerning Access Charges and Certain New Service Charges

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, as a part of this filing, is also proposing to reduce certain access rates charged such customers as AT&T Communications, Inc., MCI and other carriers. The resulting reduction in revenues is proposed to be offset by revenues from two new service charges, late payment charges applicable to business customers only and for certain operator services such as busy line verification, plus stimulation of access service charge revenues. Since this portion of the filing, if granted, would have essentially a zero net revenue effect on Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company is proposing that this portion of the filing be expeditiously handled by the Commission and not await Final Order.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso Público

En conformidad con las disposiciones de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company anuncia mediante el presente aviso su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel de tarifas telefónicas en Texas, con vigencia a partir del 6 de mayo de 1985, salvo disposición en contrario de la Comisión. La Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas a registrado esta solicitud bajo el Docket 6200.

Si bien existe variación entre las propuestas en cuanto a las tarifas precisas, se anticipa que el arancel tarifario solicitado aumentará en un 10.5% los ingresos intrastatales no ajustados de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company durante el año de prueba, o sea, un aumento del 9.7 por ciento en los ingresos del año de prueba, después de realizar el ajuste por la expansión de los usuarios y por la anualización del aumento de tarifas para el año de prueba. El objeto de esta solicitud de tarifas es lograr un aumento anual en los ingresos de $323.9 millones. Los cambios propuestos afectarán a todos los usuarios y grupos de usuarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company en el estado de Texas.

La mayoría de las tarifas que resultarían afectadas por el propuesto aumento aumentarían aproximadamente en un 18.5 por ciento, incluyendo las tarifas de centrales locales. Sin embargo, existen algunas excepciones. Por ejemplo, los usuarios que residen en ciudades que se reclassificarán para formar parte de grupos tarifarios mayores experimentarán aumentos mas elevados del 18.5 por ciento. Por otra parte, los aumentos de las tarifas propuestas para servicios de línea privada en El Paso aumentarían en más de 18.5 por ciento, como resultado de una propuesta para reestructurar tales tarifas.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel de tarifas se halla archivada en las oficinas de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos en Austin, Texas, así como en cada municipalidad incorporada afectada que tenga servicio de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa se halla sujeta a cambio toda vez que Southwestern Bell Telephone Company solicite nuevas tarifas. El registro de esta tarifa incluye, pero no en forma limitativa, las propuestas de aumentar las tarifas por servicios de centrales locales, de larga distancia intraLATA y por servicios de línea privada interLATA entre centrales (incluyendo servicios de centrales externas) así como las propuestas de reducir ciertas tarifas de servicio de acceso.

Aviso a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono
El registro de esta tarifa incluye, pero no en forma limitativa, las propuestas de aumentar las tarifas por servicios de larga distancia intraLATA y por servicios de línea privada intraLATA entre centrales (incluyendo servicios de centrales externas) así como las propuestas de reducir ciertas tarifas de servicio de acceso. Los cambios en dichas tarifas también afectarían a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono, puesto que dichas compañías proporcionan ciertos servicios de acuerdo con las tarifas especificadas en los aranceles tarifarios de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Aviso a todos los clientes con respecto a los cargos de acceso y a determinados cargos nuevos de servicio

Al registrar esta tarifa, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company también propone reducir ciertas tarifas de acceso que se les cobran a clientes como AT&T Communications, Inc., MCI y otras compañías de larga distancia. La consecuente reducción de ingresos se piensa compensar por medio de dos cargos nuevos de servicio (cargos por pago atrasado que se aplicarían solamente a usuarios comerciales, y cargos por ciertos servicios de operadora, tales como verificación de línea ocupada) además de la estimulación de los ingresos por cargos por servicios de acceso. En vista de que, en caso de otorgarse esta parte del arancel tarifario registrado, su efecto real en los ingresos de Southwestern Bell Telephone Company sería igual a cero, ésta propone que la Comisión tramite dicha parte de la tarifa en forma expeditiva sin esperar la Orden Definitiva.

Toda persona que desee intervenir o participar en el presente proceso debe notificar a la Comisión lo antes posible. Las solicitudes de intervención, participación o información deben dirigirse a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Para obtener mayor información debe llamar a Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division, (512) 458-0223, o (512) 458-0227, o al (512) 458-0221 si requiere teletipo para personas con impedimentos de audición.

Texas man recalls liberation of German prison camps

By HEBER TAYLOR
The Lufkin Daily News
LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — For 40 years, the blood red swastika flag that flew over the Flossenburg concentration camp lay in Woodrow W. Scott's attic.

During the uproar over President Reagan's decision to lay a wreath at a cemetery where Nazi SS soldiers are buried, Scott brought the flag down for a look.

Scott, as a lieutenant leading a company of 90th Infantry Division soldiers, took the town of Flossenburg 40 years ago. His troops threw open the gates of the death camp.

"We pulled the prisoners out and put the guards inside," Scott said. "That was it."

Scott was horrified by what he saw. But he said he could do little for the death camp victims who were still alive.

At the head of one of Gen. George Patton's 3rd Army columns, Scott was racing for Prague, Czechoslovakia. He could pause only long enough to release the prisoners and radio headquarters to bring up the ambulances.

Scott recalled that, as he entered the town, a grubby soldier came running up to him.

"He saluted. Hell, I hadn't been saluted since I got overseas. I thought he was a German."

"He said, 'I'm a GI.'"

"I said, 'Well, there are a hell of a lot of GI's around here. What do you want?'"

The soldier told him American soldiers were imprisoned in the town.

Scott, following orders, had to go through the town to set up a roadblock before going to the house where the American prisoners were held.

"He followed me all the way and kept telling me there were Americans in town," Scott recalled. When Scott got to the house, he almost got sick.

"There was a house about the size of a room. Six inches off the floor there was a platform. Six inches above that there was another platform — one platform right on top of another. And it was full of American prisoners."

When the prisoners saw Scott, they began to crawl toward him.

"They were too weak to walk. Their legs were about the size of my arm."

"I reached down to pick the first man up. When I did, he said: 'No, don't touch me. We heard you coming. I just want to lay here and thank God you've come...'"

Scott stopped his story for a minute. "It was a bad sight," he finally said.

Scott said his men began to give the prisoners candy they had in their pockets.

"There was a German medic there. He came up and said: 'Don't let them eat that lieutenant. They won't make it.'"

Scott rounded up the Nazi guards and lined them up in front of the men who had been held captive. "I said, 'Tell me who's good and who's bad.'"

"You heard of drawing a line and leaving the good ones on one side and putting the bad ones on another? Well, we knocked them from one side to the other."

The one "good guard" was the German medic, Scott said. "He had gone out at night to steal food to keep the men alive."

After freeing the captive soldiers, Scott went to the prison camp.

"They had a fence around it with 23,000 volts going through it. They had all kinds of people in there: German Jews, Americans — everybody."

"The latrine was about the size of a room. They had a wood rail built around it. As the prisoners got weaker, some of them fell off that rail. When they did, they (the Nazi guards) wouldn't try to get them out. They just shot them. When I got there, there were seven people who had fallen down the bank of the latrine and had crawled in a crack, waiting for the guards to shoot them."

Scott said he had no trouble rounding up the Nazi guards.

"You call the burgermeister and tell him to tell all the people who worked in the prison to turn themselves in or you'll kill them. They understand it real well when you tell them you're going to kill them."

Scott's men put the Nazi guards in the concentration camp and moved on.

Businessman brings Smithsonian to Dallas

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Most American history buffs go to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington D.C. to view treasured artifacts from America's past.

History buff and real estate developer Harlan Crow had the Smithsonian come to him.

With the Trammell Crow Co. of Dallas footing the bill, the National Museum of American History jumped at the first chance it ever has had "to make available things that belong to the whole nation out where the nation is, which is outside of Washington and New York," said museum director Roger G. Kennedy.

At untold cost, objects once held by historic figures such as George Washington and Thomas Jefferson were transported from behind the thick marble walls of the Smithsonian to the chrome and glass of downtown Dallas. The exhibit runs through October.

Crow in some ways built the pavilion adjacent to his LTV Tower to suit the Smithsonian — for instance, installing air conditioning ducts beneath the cases that hold some of the especially frail objects.

The setting for the exhibit, created by theatrical designer Peter Wexler of New York, features spotlights and recorded music inspired by the John Bull, the oldest operable steam locomotive in existence; the first telegraph key; Lewis and Clark's compass; Washington's telescope; General Custer's buckskin jacket; and dozens of other irreplaceable relics transported from Washington.

Many were removed from the museum for the first time.

As Kennedy said, "You can't just stick 'em in a box and send 'em."

Terry Sharrer, an American History Museum curator who originated the Dallas exhibit, said he had to convince some of his colleagues to let the objects go.

"Curators are paid to worry about these things, to guarantee their good care forever, so we finally persuaded them that these things were going to get extraordinary care," Sharrer said. "In fact, I think we have at least as good a security system down there as we do in our own building. We have a humidity and temperature control system in the cases that I think is superior to anything that we have (at the museum)."

"But, of course, you worry every time you take the family jewels out of the vault," said Kennedy. "And sometimes the family jewels never get out of the vault for that reason."

The Crow company will not discuss the cost of the exhibit and Harlan Crow, a partner in Trammell Crow Co., will not talk publicly about it at all.

"He said the exhibition is the important thing, not him," said his secretary, Patsey Campbell, who called Crow "a history buff." She said he hoped other business leaders would consider doing similar things for the public.

But Sharrer said the extraordinary objects in the Dallas exhibit probably would not go anywhere else.

GRUVER — At first-glance, it would appear the Pampa High girls' track team is a shoo-in to make it to the Class 4A state meet this year. After all, the Lady Harvesters are unbeaten in eight meets, including district, and have won every one of them by a lopsided margin. Personal and school records seem to fall by the wayside at every meet. But coach Gary Cornelsen believes the Lady Harvesters must keep improving to have a shot at the state meet.

"The girls are going to have to perform to the best of their ability," said Cornelsen as the Lady Harvesters get ready for the Class 4A Regionals this week at Brownwood. "We're not far out from being a contender, but the girls are going to have to run a little faster and jump a little further."

Preliminaries for the regional meet get underway Friday. Finals are Saturday with the running events scheduled for in the morning and the field events that afternoon.

Both Pampa boys and girls competed in a regional qualifiers meet at Gruver last Friday, but wind, rain and cold weather hampered the performances.

"It wasn't a very good day for us, but the weather had a lot to do with it," Cornelsen said. "The boys did real well, but the girls just weren't too fired up. They just weren't mentally prepared, which is probably my fault."

There were no team points awarded at the qualifiers meet, but the top three individuals in each event received medals.

All three of Pampa's relay teams crossed the finish line first in the girls' division. Relay team members include Jackie Oglesby, Sandee Greenway, Courtney Brown and Tanya Lidy, 440-relay; Beverly Paine, Jackie Oglesby, Katrina Jackson and Tanya Lidy, 880-relay; Sandee Greenway, Beverly Paine, Katrina Jackson and Linda Ammons, 1600-relay.

Kristi Hughes won the high jump and placed second in the long jump. Misty Shofner won the 800 and recorded her personal best in the event.

Linda Ammons took third in both the 100 and 400. She set a personal record in the 100. Tanya Lidy was second in the triple jump and Andrea Hopkins was third in both the discus and shot. Hopkins had her best throw ever in the discus.

WT signs cagers

West Texas State basketball coach Gary Moss announced Wednesday the signing of three more junior college players to letters of intent, bringing the Buffs list of transfers signed to eight.

Signing with WT was David Woods, a 6-5 forward from Blinn Junior College, Jerry Singletary, a 5-11 guard from Lon Morris Junior College and Roy Crockett, a 6-7 forward from Cloud County College in Concordia, Kansas.

Woods was an all-district and all-region selection at Rockdale High School before enrolling at Blinn. He averaged 14 points, five rounds and two steals a game for Blinn last season.

Singletary, who played his high school ball in Darlington, S.C., averaged 10.5 points, six assists and four rebounds per game for Lon Morris Junior College.

Optimism abounds in football draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Counting the winners and the losers on the day after the National Football League draft is never easy. For one thing, every team says it's a winner. And, for another, it probably takes three years to really tell who's done well and who's done poorly.

To listen to coaches and general managers after Tuesday's NFL draft, every team got exactly the player it wanted in the first round. Even those who acknowledged they preferred someone else put an optimistic shine on things.

"In the long run, what happened is probably for the best," said Dallas' Tom Landry after the Cowboys failed to complete a trade that might have put them in position to get a receiver and settled instead for defensive end Kevin Brooks.

"We would have loved to have an impact wide receiver, but we got some solid players for the future."

In fact, the opinion around the league Wednesday was that the Cowboys were among the teams that had a good draft.

But it wasn't so much the choices of Brooks and linebacker Jesse Penn that had people talking. It was the fifth-round pick of Herschel Walker, the 1982 Heisman Trophy winner who now plays for the United States Football League's New Jersey Generals.

With the USFL in shaky financial shape, Walker looked to many people around the league as the potential successor to Tony Dorsett in the Dallas backfield.

Another winner seemed to be the San Francisco 49ers, who outmaneuvered the Cowboys and obtained the one ingredient missing from their offense in speedy wide receiver Jerry Rice. And two others were last year's NFL's have-nots, the Buffalo Bills and Houston Oilers.

The Bills had seven of the top 85 picks in the draft, in part because of the deal that gave the Cleveland Browns the rights to Miami University quarterback Bernie Kosar in a supplemental draft. They probably got two instant defensive starters in defensive end Bruce Smith and cornerback Derrick Burroughs, a decent quarterback prospect in Frank Reich, a versatile offensive lineman in Mark Traylor and some outside speed with wide receivers Chris Burkett and Andre Reed.

The Oilers, next-to-last in the league in defense in a 3-13 season, picked up immediate defensive help in the first round with defensive end Ray Childress and cornerback Richard Johnson. They also got a potential starter in defensive end Richard Byrd in the second round and well-regarded center Mike Kelley in the third.

The New York Giants, Kansas City Chiefs and Seattle Seahawks all benefitted by the rush to offensive and defensive linemen at the top of the draft to grab running backs who otherwise might have been gone.

The Chiefs landed North Carolina's Ethan Horton with the 15th pick of the first round, the Giants got Kentucky's George Adams with the 19th.

All-star ballot features familiar names

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1985 All-Star Game ballot features such familiar baseball names as Pete Rose, Rod Carew and Reggie Jackson, plus a major-league high of nine players from the Boston Red Sox.

Among those who made the list announced Wednesday by the Baseball Commissioner's office were Rose, player-manager of the Cincinnati Reds, and California Angels teammates Reggie Jackson and Rod Carew. Each has been on the ballot every year since fans resumed voting for the teams in 1970.

The Red Sox' list of nine players tops the majors by one. Both the Toronto Blue Jays and St. Louis Cardinals have eight on the ballot.

Of the 144 players listed, 24 appear for the first time.

The voting, to run from May 17 through July 6, will determine starters for the July 16 game at the Metrodome in Minneapolis.

The voting will take place at all major and minor league ballparks as well as some retail stores. Fans again will be able to write in the names of players whose names do not appear on the ballot.

Pampa teams behind in 4A golf regionals

BROWNWOOD — Pampa girls are seventh and the Pampa boys hold down ninth place after the opening round of the Region 1-4A Golf Tournament Thursday at the Brownwood Country Club.

The Lady Harvesters shot a first-round score of 405, five stroke behind Grandbury in sixth place. Belton leads the girls' division with 368. District 1-4A champion Borger stands fifth with a 389.

Individual, Brianna Marsh paced the Lady Harvesters with a 90. Becky Starnes and DeLynn Ashford had shot 103 and 104 respectively. Jessica Baker had a 106 and Kim Harris a 113.

Genny Kovacs of Andrews is the medalist so far with an 83.

Pampa boys, led by Johnny Snuggs' 81, shot an opening round 335. Brownwood is the team leader with a 305. District 1-4A winner Canyon is fifth with a 322.

Jody Chase followed Snuggs with an 83. Dyrann Crosier and Jeff Langen had 85 and 86 respectively. Brian Loeffler had a 94.

Randall Carpenter of Stephenville is medalist with a 71. The final 18 holes is today.

Both Pampa teams finished second in the District 1-4A standings to qualify for the regionals.

Chief's Crown solid favorite

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Chief's Crown's record speaks for itself, and trainer Roger Laurin would just as soon have it that way.

Having won six straight races, including three this year, Chief's Crown is the solid favorite for Saturday's 111th Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs. In his last start, the colt impressively won the 1 1/4-mile Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

Chief's Crown's main opposition is expected to come from the late-charging Proud Truth and a pair of front-runners — Spend A Buck, the Garden State Stakes winner, and Wood Memorial winner Eternal Prince.

At least 13 3-year-olds were expected to be entered for the $250,000-added, 1 1/4-mile classic, the first leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown which also includes the Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

The 49-year-old Laurin speaks confidently but matter-of-factly about the son of Danzig and grandson of the great Secretariat.

"Once he makes the lead, he doesn't pass the dice," the low-key Laurin said in a rare moment of boasting. "I like the hand I've got. I wouldn't trade my horse for the whole field."

Chief's Crown worked a half-mile in 47 3/5 seconds Wednesday over a track made sloppy by a driving rainstorm.

Laurin, whose father, Lucien, saddled consecutive Derby winners in Riva Ridge (1972) and Secretariat (1973), figures his colt may be two or three lengths off the lead for the first eighth of a mile, depending on the pace.

Chief's Crown, owned by the Star Crown Stable, has earnings of $1.2 million, a healthy portion of that coming from the Breeders' Cup Juvenile last November. His nine triumphs in 12 career starts also include the 1 1/4-mile Flamingo when he beat Proud Truth by a length.

Eternal Prince, the last son of 1969 Derby winner Majestic Prince, posted a wire-to-wire victory in the Wood Memorial April 30 at Aqueduct. Winless in three starts last year, the colt has won four of five this year, including the Gotham.

Proud Truth finishes a workout.

CBS sports announcer dies of heart attack

DALLAS (AP) — A funeral service for Frank Glieber, a "consummate professional" who missed only one assignment in his 21-year career as a CBS-TV sports announcer, is scheduled for Friday morning in Dallas.

Glieber, 51, died Wednesday of a heart attack while jogging around an outdoor track at a Dallas health club. He was the original color commentator for the Dallas Cowboys and was sports director at radio station KRLD in Dallas.

The veteran broadcaster covered the National Football League, the National Basketball Association and golf tournaments for CBS, including 18 years at The Masters. "A runner behind him on the track knew CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) and started working on him within 10 seconds. A doctor was on the scene within three minutes," said Robert Vernon, a spokesman for the Aerobics Center.

Glieber was rushed to a hospital but died during treatment at 11:08 a.m., said Richard George, a field agent with the Dallas County medical examiner's office.

He had been a member of the center since 1978, but Vernon said his "program had been deteriorating. He had a lot of risk factors — he was overweight. I'm sure yesterday was a very stressful day with the NFL draft."

Glieber had covered the draft for KRLD, Dallas' all-news radio station.

Frank Chirkinian, executive producer of CBS's Masters telecast, remembered Glieber as "probably the most consummate professional I have ever worked with."

"I'm deeply saddened by the news," said NBA Commissioner David Stern. "Frank was not only a first-class announcer, but a wonderful gentleman and human being."

At CBS, Glieber was known as an even-tempered professional who, without preparation, replaced an ailing Lindsey Nelson during the first quarter of the 1980 Cotton Bowl game, said network spokesman Doug Richardson.

"Whoever he was paired with, he made them a better broadcaster," Richardson said. "When we broke in a new expert analyst, a former coach or a former player, we gave them to Frank Glieber. He broke in John Madden, Joe Greene and Dick Vermeil."

"CBS sports lost a broadcaster. I lost a very good friend. And his family lost a loyal husband and father," Vermeil said.

"Many times when we were on the road, I knew him to fly all night after a long, exhausting day just to get home a little earlier to be with his family. He was a masterful, professional broadcaster who was of immeasurable help to me in my first two years. He will be missed by all who knew him, personally, or through his broadcasts."

Glieber, a native of Milwaukee, began his professional career after graduating from Northwestern University in 1956 as the announcer for the Dallas Eagles baseball team of the Texas League.

Cowboys President Tex Schramm hired him as the team's first color commentator in 1960 on KBOX. For two years, he was the voice of the Cleveland Browns.

"He kind of grew with us," Schramm said. "Everybody on the Cowboys, as a result, has always felt very close to him."

Canadian boys win region golf crown

ODESSA — Canadian came from behind Tuesday to win the Region 1-3A boys' golf tournament championship, firing a 635 to defeat Seminole by three strokes.

The Wildcats had trailed Seminole by one stroke and defending regional champion Abilene Wylie by two after Monday's opening round.

Steven Cross led Canadian with a 149 while teammate Steve Lusk had a 156. Donnie Anderson shot a 173, Kirk Morrow, 157, and Duane Clark, 217. Cross was second in the medalist race.

Canadian placed second behind Childress in the District 1-3A standings. Childress finished seventh in regionals with a 660.

It Must Be Election Time...

—Calvin Whatley has taken the street repair program as a mandate. What happened to our maintenance program for the last two years?

It must be election time!

—Why is Calvin Whatley suddenly so concerned about the handicapped having access to City Hall? They've paid taxes for years!

It must be election time!

—The wading pool in Central Park is now being replaced, but Marcus Sanders swimming pool has been closed for over a year and the rest of our city parks have been neglected as long. Why the repairs now?

It must be election time!

Is it sound financial planning to allow our parks to get in such a state through neglect and then try to repair rather than maintain them regularly? Is it sound financial planning to commit future tax dollars to try and make up for past neglect?

Scientists working on 'plant tonic'

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Scientists are studying a "plant tonic" they say could stimulate plant growth and revolutionize agriculture in the 21st century.

Preliminary studies under way at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station indicate that a chemical "bioregulator" can increase plant growth and crop, officials said Wednesday.

The chemical, dichlorophenoxy-triethylamine, could be a shortcut to increasing crop yields without going through lengthy breeding experiments, says Dr. C.R. Benedict, a geneticist and plant physiologist with the Experiment Station.

"This bioregulator appears to have the potential for biochemical manipulation of plant growth and could have a profound impact on increasing the quantity and quality of crops," he said.

He and other researchers say they have found that DCPTA stimulates gene activity in the plant, speeding up the production of enzymes that in turn speed up the plant's metabolism.

They first discovered that DCPTA doubled the rubber production of guayule, a native desert plant that yields small quantities of high-quality natural rubber, Benedict said.

Names in News

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music superstar Johnny Cash was told to take it easy for a while when he left a hospital where he underwent abdominal surgery last week, his personal secretary said.

Cash, 53, released Wednesday from Baptist Hospital, will do that, but only until the end of the month, when he heads for Toronto for performances May 26-29, said Irene Gibbs.

The singer had a 45-minute operation April 22 to remove scar tissue and adhesions from surgery he had in 1983, Ms. Gibbs said.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — The wife of former singing cowboy and baseball magnate Gene Autry said she withdrew her offer to build a $2 million museum featuring Western memorabilia in Burbank because of opposition from residents she says were misinformed.

In a letter to Burbank Mayor Daniel Remy, Jackie Autry said her decision came after a group of residents complained the Gene Autry Heritage Museum would ruin Buena Vista Park, the proposed site. She said Tuesday that she intended to build the museum elsewhere.

The Autry Foundation, a charitable trust created by Autry's first wife, who died in 1980, had proposed last November that a $2 million museum be built to house Western art, boots, guns, saddles and memorabilia of the 77-year-old Autry and other cowboy stars.

BOSTON (AP) — Conductor Sarah Caldwell says she had a lot of time to think while she lay in the hospital for four months recovering from double pneumonia and she returned to work with the Opera Company of Boston with a whole new perspective.

Miss Caldwell, 61, said Wednesday that she has ambitious plans to diet, exercise and, at the same time, remold the company she founded in 1958.

"I see things with different eyes now," she said. "I see what's important and what's not so important."

A trained violinist and the first woman to conduct the Metropolitan Opera in New York, Miss Caldwell is considered the world's leading woman opera director.

SHERBORN, Mass. (AP) — With their sons looking on, a new building of a school for the handicapped has been dedicated to Robert F. Kennedy, the slain U.S. senator from New York, and assassinated civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

Both sons spoke at the dedication Wednesday. "There has been an unselfish kind of love shown here today," Martin Luther King III said at the Life Experience School. "With that spirit I know the school will continue."

Michael LeMoyné Kennedy said lives of his father and King were dedicated to "giving voice to the voiceless and helping those less well off than themselves."

NEW YORK (AP) — A scuffle involving rock star Cyndi Lauper, wrestler Rowdy Roddy Piper and actor Mr. T was not planned, said the producer of a 90-minute television wrestling special the three were helping promote.

Miss Lauper and the wrestlers were making an appearance Wednesday for "Saturday Night's Main Event," a 90-minute special scheduled to be broadcast by NBC on May 11.

WAIT FOR ME—The Belle of Louisville, right, receives a little shove during the turn around of Wednesday's boat race. The Delta Queen completed the turn faster and headed back down the Mississippi River to Louisville, winning the 22nd annual race of the paddle-wheel river boats. It was the second straight win for the Delta Queen.

Regan's crusade for democracy being stressed by administration

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his aides, struggling to keep a few minutes at a West German cemetery from dominating the president's 10-day European journey, are trying to focus public attention on Reagan's desire to recommission the crusade for democracy he launched in London three years ago.

Following more than three weeks of bitter controversy over the president's decision to visit the Bitburg military cemetery where Nazi SS troops are buried, one administration official said the White House is trying to deal with the gathering storm "by not talking about it and trying to keep it from being the central theme" of Reagan's four-nation journey.

Reagan himself has given a series of interviews to foreign broadcasters and journalists, but his questioners have been warned in advance that they are not to ask about Bitburg.

Instead, Reagan has sought to emphasize the emergence of democracy in Western Europe since World War II and his desire to promote freedom elsewhere, including in the Soviet satellite states of Eastern Europe.

Another administration official, who like the first agreed to brief reporters on plans for the trip if he were not identified, said the visit to Bitburg, ironically, was arranged as part of the overall theme.

"The president wants to stress his commitment to what he calls the most compelling idea in the world today, which is human freedom and, within that, the concept of peace, reconciliation and prosperity," the White House official said. "The Federal Republic (of Germany) is an ideal setting for that."

The official said that following 12 years of Nazi rule before and during World War II, "you now have 40 years of evolving democracy, peace and prosperity and a former enemy that is now one of our strongest allies and friends."

But deluged by widespread criticism of the plan to lay a wreath at the World War II military cemetery containing the graves of some 2,000 soldiers who died fighting for Adolf Hitler's Third Reich, the official said he and other advisers were "stunned at the wounds still hardly healed after 40 years." Nonetheless, the aide said, Reagan would seek to bury the issue as quickly as possible by hammering at his intended theme in a series of major speeches in each of the four nations he plans to visit following his trip Sunday to Bitburg and the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp memorial.

During stops at an old German castle near Ramstein, as well as in Madrid, Lisbon and prior to the European Parliament at Strasbourg, France, the president is expected to outline his vision of a free world.

Federal judge says shots fired at him

WACO, Texas (AP) — U.S. District Judge Walter S. Smith Jr. said he has "no doubt" that a passing motorist fired two shots at him as he jogged near his Waco home.

Smith said Wednesday he wasn't injured in the shooting that occurred at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday but said he was being protected by federal agents.

Bob Seale, FBI agent in Waco, declined to comment.

Dotson is home, but for how long?

COUNTRY CLUB HILLS, Ill. (AP) — Gary Dotson is home from prison for the second time in two months, but the man convicted of raping a woman who now says she made up her accusation is skeptical about his chances of remaining free.

Dotson, 28, who has spent six years behind bars for the rape of Cathleen Crowell Webb, was released Wednesday from the Dixon Correctional Center after his mother posted $10,000 cash required to cover $100,000 bond.

His family planned a quiet homecoming, but he was greeted by more than 100 well-wishers who had decorated trees along the streets of his hometown with yellow ribbons and posted red-and-white signs reading "Free Gary Dotson."

"I just want to get back on with my life," Dotson told reporters.

He said he hadn't made any plans and that he doesn't know if his fight for freedom will succeed.

"I'm skeptical," Dotson said of his chances of remaining free. "I believe I should have been let loose the first time (in April)."

"I'm going to keep a very low profile. My lawyer told me to and I think it's for the best."

Dotson's attorney, Warren Lupel, said at a news conference outside the prison: "He's just out on bond. His freedom is not guaranteed by a long shot."

After Mrs. Webb said in March that she had lied when accusing Dotson of rape in 1977, he was released on bond April 4. A week later, Circuit Judge Richard Samuels ruled that Mrs. Webb's recantation wasn't convincing and ordered Dotson returned to prison.

The Illinois Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that Dotson could be freed on bond while the appeal process continues. His mother, Barbara, 48, secured his release.
