A severe hailstorm that pounded Pampa windows, roofs, vehicles, power lines and people Thursday afternoon took just 10 minutes to cause what those in the insurance business call a "cat" — a catastrophe of at least $1 million in damages.

A thunderstorm throwing isolated "strips" of hail — some stones as large as baseballs — roared across Pampa so fast that weather officials had no time to issue a warning, Darrell Sehorn, National Weather Service observer for Pampa said.

The relatively-small storm system gathered intensity just southwest of Pampa, then suddenly shot across town on a northeasterly path at about 45 mph, Sehorn said.

Winds briefly gusting to 50 mph threw sheets of hail sideways as the storm hit Pampa. It shattered windows, knocked holes through roofs and pounded people who were caught outdoors without warning of the sudden storm.

About 10 minutes later, the severe weather was gone, but left in its path were damages that could total several million dollars, according to a local insurance adjuster.

The storm started without incident in Armstrong and Donley Counties to the southwest of Pampa. But in a stroke of good fortune for glass companies and roofers, it "mushroomed" into a large thunderhead with hail as it moved toward town, Sehorn said.

When it struck Pampa about 3 p.m., some stones in the bands of hail had grown to the size of baseballs, though most of the destructive pellets flung by the winds were the size of marbles and golf balls.

"It wasn't a large storm," Sehorn said. "It deposited the hail in strips."

"And it didn't hang around long. But with that much hail, it didn't need to," he added.

The heaviest damages were reported in the south, southeast and east portions of town, according to insurance adjuster Jack Stroup, owner of Etheridge Claims Service. He said the damages "presumably" would total over a million dollars.

"We call it a 'cat,'" he said. Stroup said the widespread damage here qualifies as a catastrophe.

"I'm not sure I have them yet," he said.

Stroup said he has had insurance adjusters "from all over the country" calling his firm to offer their services.

But he said it's too early to tell how much help is needed or to put a firm figure on the damage.

Damage claims are being taken by insurance agents, who refer the claims for inspections by adjusters, he explained.

Jerry Noles, with the Duncan Insurance Agency, said agents have been swamped with pleas for help.

"We're taking claims as fast as we can," Noles said.

He said the local agents and adjusters likely will call in extra help to deal with the widespread damage.

"They usually will bring in what they refer to 'storm troopers' to work a bad hailstorm like this," Noles said.

He said agents will give priority to damages that require immediate repairs and could result in further damage — such as leaking roofs.

The band of hail cut a three-mile-wide path of destruction across the county's cropland, according to Extension Agent Joe VanZandt.

VanZandt said several hundred acres of winter wheat were destroyed. He said much of the wheat was chopped off at ground level by the pellets of ice.

Skellytown hopes for grant to improve its water system

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

SKELLYTOWN — Residents here say they live in a poor community and city officials hope the town is poor enough to qualify for a state grant to improve its water system.

The town is seeking a grant from the Texas Department of Community Affairs — administered through the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission — to use in improving its water system. City officials and representatives with the PRPC, explained the grant program at a public meeting Thursday at the Skellytown Elementary School. The grant is based, in part, on the number of low income families in the project area.

"We're not low on water, we just want to make improvements so we won't have problems," Skellytown mayor Wesley Russell said, adding that the city hopes to make improvements to the storage system and pipes and possibly build a new elevated storage tank or underground tank.

"Part of the town is fed off the water lines before the water gets to the elevated tank. Others are fed from the tank," he said. "We want to improve it so that it goes to the overhead storage before it goes to the lines."

Russell does not know how much it would cost to improve the system or how much the grant would or should be.

"Right off the top of my head, I don't even have a ballpark figure," he said.

The grants are based on a competitive point basis; the more points a town or project has, the greater chance the town has to get the grant. About $1.3 million has been allocated to the PRPC to administer the grant to Panhandle communities. The grant application is presented to a PRPC review committee, which awards the points on the basis of how badly the project is needed, the number of low income residents in the project area and how many minority families living in the project area.

Thursday, however, Pitner denied to the all-white audience that minorities play any part in the awarding of the grant. Resident Paul Harmon expressed concern that Skellytown would not get the grant because it has few minorities. He read reports that Miami could not get the grant for the same reason.

"Minorities play no part in getting the grant," Pitner said. A PRPC representative said that many people mistakenly believe that low income residents mean minorities.

But former Miami mayor Paul Goodman, who served for two years on the PRPC review committee, said this morning that minorities are taken into consideration when the grant application is reviewed. He said towns are awarded points if more

Middle-income citizens pay most federal taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Pogo might have put it, "We have met the special interests and they are us." The people who make the most use of itemized deductions are the middle-income Americans who pay most of the federal tax.

Couples and individuals with incomes between $20,000 and $75,000, who file 46 percent of the taxable returns, are expected to pay 61 percent of the taxes next year, according to new estimates by the staff of the congressional Joint Committee on Taxation. Almost two-thirds of those taxpayers (23 million) will itemize their deductions.

They will claim 67 percent of the total tax deduction for unreimbursed medical expenses; for real estate taxes, 73 percent; home mortgage interest, 77 percent; automobile loans and other consumer credit, 69 percent; charitable contributions, 53 percent; state and local income taxes, 60 percent; sales taxes, 76 percent; the credit for child-care expenses, 67 percent, and the $100-per-person dividend exclusion, 68 percent.

These are among taxpayers who, in the tax-overhaul plans advocated by the Treasury Department and lawmakers of both parties, are targeted as "special interests" that benefit from today's tax system at the expense of others.

They are considered special interests because only 37 percent of the people who file taxable returns itemize deductions. But they pay over three-quarters of the tax.

The overhaul proposals would eliminate or reduce many deductions while raising personal exemptions and lowering tax rates. As a result, sponsors say, most of these people would pay less tax than they do now.

But that would depend on the extent to which a taxpayer now uses itemized deductions. For example, a $25,000-a-year family of four that takes only minimal deductions under current law could easily end up paying higher taxes by losing some deductions and being taxed on some job-related fringe benefits.

President Reagan is expected to send his own tax proposal to Capitol Hill next month with a plea for final action on it this year. But passage this year seems unlikely, especially since the House Ways and Means Committee probably won't start writing its version of the bill before September.

Whenever the action comes, the debate will boil down to whether the tax system should be used for something other than raising revenue to run the government.

Republican scour Senate for budget-proposal votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leaders, unable to give the budget package endorsed by President Reagan the early send-off they had promised, are scouring their party's ranks for the votes needed to keep the plan alive.

"I'm not sure I have them yet," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., conceded late Thursday after he abruptly recessed the GOP-controlled Senate rather than risk a crucial showdown vote he had spent most of the day arranging.

The inability of Dole to move the package over its first procedural hurdle, coming just 24 hours after the president's nationally broadcast appeal for the $52 billion package of spending cuts, dealt the plan a potent, possibly disabling, blow.

While Democrats rejoiced in their initial victory, Dole vowed to toil overnight to find the needed additional support.

The proposed spending outline, painstakingly negotiated by GOP leaders and the White House, contains a raft of politically sensitive spending cuts, ranging from limits on Social Security benefit increases to termination of Amtrak rail passenger subsidies.

Dole's hasty retreat from Thursday's scheduled showdown — a vote needed to bring the administration's plan formally before the Senate as a package — came even as switchboards all over the Capitol were lighting up in response to Reagan's plea for a show of public support.

Patricia Daniels, assistant chief telephone operator, reported that more than 23,000 calls came into the Capitol on Thursday — more than three times the usual 7,000. The calls were running heavily in favor of the president's package, congressional offices reported.

But with a partisan battle expected, Republicans appeared to be at least a vote or two shy of the needed majority in the 100-member chamber. One Republican, Sen. John East of North Carolina, was in the hospital, and the support of at least three GOP members was reported by party strategists to be questionable.

Republicans maintain a narrow 53-47 majority in the chamber.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd apparently caught Republican leaders off guard by agreeing early Thursday evening to go ahead with the vote at once — after initially delaying the showdown.

Absent Republicans were quickly summoned to the Senate floor, as was Vice President George Bush, who as presiding officer can vote to break a tie.

"The vice president looks a little nervous," Byrd taunted.

Byrd all but dared Dole to proceed with the roll call vote. When the Republican leader backed away, Byrd said Democrats might not be as accommodating on Friday.

Even if the Senate had held the vote Thursday, and the Republican leadership had prevailed, it would have marked only the beginning of a budget battle that is expected to last at least two weeks.

Democrats even gave Dole a hard time in his move to recess the Senate, demanding a roll call vote on that routine motion. This time Dole won, and on a 52-44 party-line vote, the Senate called it quits for the night.

than 50 percent of their residents are on low or fixed income, if more than 50 percent of the residents are minorities or if there is an emergency need for the project.

Pitner said that, because of the need factor, water projects and those affecting the community health get higher priority than such projects as streets or community centers. Among the communities that have gotten PRPC assistance were Groom, Shamrock, Vega and Dodson.

Skellytown officials feel confident that the city has enough low income residents to qualify for the grant.

Water superintendent Don Basam, who is conducting a survey of city residents' incomes, reported that, with two-thirds of the survey completed, he found that 68.5 percent of the residents are qualify as "low income."

"That just shows we're a poor community," he said as audience members mumbled in agreement.

Pitner assured residents that there would be no strings attached to the grant which is "100 percent funded" by the state with no local money used. Still, audience members remained skeptical, wondering if taxes would be raised.

"If the federal government comes along with a handout, it won't be free," Harmon said.

"It is money you have already paid into the government," Pitner said, correcting people who call the grant a "loan."

Part of this water improvement project would be a well that pumps 250 gallons per minute.

"We do need a new well," city secretary Sherry Davies said. "We've had trouble keeping up with water, especially in the summer."

City officials are also looking at ways to expand their landfill or find a new site.

"Our problem is that our landfill is filling up," Russell said, denying what he called rumors that the dump was condemned by the Texas Health Department.

City officials have discussed two new sites for the dump: one west of the school livestock pens and the other behind an old Cabot carbon black plant east of town. They also considered expanding the current dump, located on the Bill Arrington Ranch, to include a nearby canyon. But city officials were told by health officials that they cannot use the canyon if it was not included on the original plat. Sherry Davies said the city is checking to see if the canyon is listed on the original plat.

City officials differed with some area residents on whether the state would allow the city to use the canyon. Harmon said that he visited with health inspector Larry Edmiston of Canyon, who told him that the canyon was acceptable. Davies said Edmiston told her the canyon would not be acceptable. Pitner told residents that it would be wise to get statements in writing when dealing with the state.

Davies added that building a new landfill could cost up to $100,000 to $200,000.

hailstones, hospital spokeswoman Linda Haynes said.

At the time of the storm, an ambulance was called to the police station to pick up a resident who had been trapped in the hailstorm and pounded.

The storm also brought down utility lines and caused some minor interruptions of service.

Gray County had no severe weather warnings in effect when the storm hit. The possibility of severe weather had been predicted earlier in the day, but by the time weather officials issued a severe thunderstorm warning for the county, "the hail was pounding," Sehorn said.

"It was a very rapid deal, one of the quickest storms of that nature that I've seen in a long time," he said.

The high temperature in Pampa Thursday was 77. Minutes after the storm hit, the temperature had dropped to the mid-50s. Along with the hail, the brief storm dumped .42 inch of moisture on the city.

Sehorn said the forecast holds the possibility of more of the same for tonight. A chance of thunderstorms, some possibly severe, was forecast for the area through late tonight.

The forecaster said an unstable air mass that has caused snow in the Rockies and brought the severe weather to the area also would keep temperatures cool and continue the chance of rain through Saturday. Skies will clear, and temperatures will rise to the mid-70s by Sunday, according to the forecast.

City, Chamber make plans for annual clean-up drive

City and Pampa Chamber of Commerce officials met with representatives of Clean Pampa, Inc., Thursday morning to coordinate activities for the city's upcoming Clean-Up Campaign - and that was before yesterday's hail storm littered streets and yards with debris.

The meeting was held at 10 a.m. in the Clean Pampa office as part of the activities for Keep America Beautiful Week.

Attending the meeting were Jo Potter, Clean Pampa coordinator; W. A. Morgan, Clean Pampa chairman; Betty Henderson, Clean Pampa trustee; Phil Gentry, Chamber president; Larry Henderson, head of the city Sanitation Department; David Callison, head of the Parks and Recreation Department; Steve Vaughn, head of the Neighborhood Integrity Department; and Larry Hollis, Clean Pampa Publicity Committee chairman.

Vaughn and Hollis are also members of the Chamber's Fire Prevention and Safety Committee, which is helping to support the clean-up events.

The city will conduct its annual Clean-Up, Paint-Up and Fix-Up Campaign in May, with a week set aside for each ward to concentrate on clean-up activities.

Dates for the campaign ward are as follows: Ward 1, May 6 - 10; Ward 2, May 13 - 17; Ward 3, May 20 - 24; and Ward 4, May 27 - 31.

Simpson said residents will be expected to place their clean-up trash, used furniture, tree cuttings, junked appliances and other items in the alleys behind their property during the week assigned to their ward. City crews will then pick up the trash and other items by ward in addition to regular trash collection services, Simpson said.

Simpson outlined general procedures residents should follow to insure proper collection of their trash, refuse and discarded materials during the campaign.

"Everything should be put in the alley, not on the street side," he said. But, he explained, items should not be placed around the dumpster, since that would interfere with the regular dumpster collection. Nor should items be placed in the middle of the alley, since that would block the city trucks using the alley on the pick-up routes.

Simpson suggested residents place their materials outside their gates or behind their fences or property line.

Since the dumpsters will generally be more full than usual because of the clean-up campaign, Simpson asked residents to place yard cuttings, grass trimmings and similar materials in plastic bags and set them out in the alley away from the dumpster.

After the clean-up drive, the cuttings and trimmings can be placed in the dumpsters as usual, he said.

Tree limbs should be cut and tied in one-man bundles to aid the crews to pick them up and place them on the trucks more easily, he said. If they are not bundled, they won't be picked up, he said.

The crews will haul off large items such as junked appliances, ice boxes and used furniture if they are placed in the alley, Simpson said. The crews will not go into the yards, garages or homes to pick up such items.

Potter reported the local high school chapter of Distributive Education Clubs of America (DECA) will conduct a service project to aid the elderly and handicapped during the campaign. The DECA students will help carry the larger items out to the alley for those needing assistance, she said.

Persons needing the assistance may call the DECA school number at 665-5011 or telephone 665-4947 and ask for Robbie during the campaign, Potter said. Con Chem Co. will be providing trucks for use to haul off any items in conjunction with the DECA project.

Henderson said Clean Pampa is encouraging residents to use the campaign period to mow the grass and cut the weeds on lots, especially the vacant and unattended lots. She also noted this would be a good time for residents to get rid of the weeds in the alleys behind their homes.

Representing the Chamber, Gentry said, "We're in complete support" of the clean-up campaign activities.

The newspaper and local radio stations will be providing more information on the clean-up drive later.

Governor sees no new taxes in state budget

AUSTIN (AP) — The way he reads it, Gov. Mark White says the $36.4 billion, two-year state budget approved by the Texas House won't require any tax increase.

"I'm very pleased that they were able to reach the compromises to permit a balanced budget without any new taxes," White said.

Although some lawmakers have said a tax hike may yet be needed to balance the budget, House Speaker Gib Lewis said a $106 million increase in fees and a quadrupling of college tuition will cover state government operations.

The House voted 135-11 preliminary approval of the budget on Wednesday and sent it to the Senate on a voice vote Thursday. The Senate is working on its own spending plan, so the final state budget will be written by a House-Senate conference committee.

The House-approved budget, tightest in 10 years, would add money for welfare, prisons, mental hospitals, public schools and highways. Higher education would receive average decreases of 4 percent, and many state agencies would suffer heavy cuts.

The governor said the budget "is not exactly the way I would have drafted it," and indicated he will wait on the conference committee version before making any final decisions.

White indicated he could support a compromise proposal that would quadruple state college tuition over the next two years, then allow the 1987 Legislature to consider possible future increases.

"It's a compromise I would be in a position to support. I'm pleased to see that there is going to be additional money for scholarships and for needy students," he said.

"Even with the increases, we'll still be the least expensive tuition of any of the states in the nation."

White discounted complaints of some students, particularly medical and dental students who will face even larger tuition hikes, that the increases will cost them their educations.

"I dare say, there will not be a single soul who will have to drop out of their school because of any change in the tuition pattern," he said.

State employees have been angered at the failure of lawmakers to approve a pay raise for them.

The House bill includes a possible 3 percent raise for the 180,000 state workers — if seven revenue-raising bills also pass. Senators say there is no money to fund a raise.

"I like what they (the House) have done. But the Senate has not," White said, adding that he will work with the conference committee "actively trying to help them find a way to at least make some provision for increased salaries."

The governor also joined Democratic lawmakers who criticized freshman Rep. Kelly Godwin, R-Odessa, who voted against raising state fees and then pleaded with colleagues to keep money for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin, which is located in Odessa.

"It's important that those people who ask for services from state government are willing to vote for the revenue to see that those services are going to be dispensed," White said.

White and Mattox threaten EPA with burning lawsuit

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Amid a bombardment of speeches, skits and songs opposing toxic-waste burning in the Gulf of Mexico, federal officials were also warned they would be sued if the Gulf isn't eliminated as a proposed site for at-sea incinerations.

Gov. Mark White and Attorney General Jim Mattox, stressing the Gulf's importance to Texas, said Thursday they would sue the federal government if the Environmental Protection Agency approves plans to burn toxic wastes there.

The EPA has designated two sites for the burning of liquid toxic wastes. One is 200 miles off the Texas-Louisiana coast and the other off the New Jersey-Delaware coast.

But Mattox and White, testifying before EPA hearing examiner Edwin Johnson Thursday, said companies wanting to do off-shore burning are not held fully liable for any accidents.

"The only reason these people want to do it offshore is that they have limited liability in federal statutes and that they won't be having to respond when an accident occurs," White said.

About 3,000 other people attended the hearing, including area congressmen, state legislators, farm workers, students and officials of companies wanting to burn the toxic wastes.

A group of Texas Southmost College students performed a skit to the theme of "We Are the World," and student body president Clifford Gillard told the EPA that the message was clear.

"We are the children of this area," he said. "We're the only ones that can make this a brighter place. Our choice is no more PCBs and nothing else."

One man put his opposition into a Spanish song, but most of the opposition was through speeches.

"I have already filed a lawsuit on this matter and the EPA should understand and know that I am prepared to act again unless EPA listens to the people and gives us fair treatment," Mattox said. "There must be no rush to judgment."

Mattox tried suing once before to stop at-sea incineration, but a judge rejected the suit as premature.

The EPA is proposing to grant 10-year permits to companies, such as Chemical Waste Management Inc., for ocean incineration. White urged the EPA to consider three-year permits with annual reviews.

"These people are trying to avoid the law of liability and they're doing it for profit," White said. "The profiteers of this operation are putting this nation and our government at risk."

IRS supervisor orders many tax documents destroyed

AUSTIN (AP) — A supervisor at the Internal Revenue Service regional center here ordered tax documents from as many as 6,000 businesses in six states destroyed because of what a union attorney called an "obscene emphasis on quantity and speed," the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

Bob Branson, public affairs officer for the center, said Thursday that an investigation of the destruction, which took place late last year, is under way.

"A first-line supervisory employee instructed another employee to destroy certain taxpayer-related correspondence," an IRS statement said. "Management confronted the supervisory employee with the charges, and the employee resigned."

Branson told the American-Statesman he didn't know how many documents were destroyed.

Employee union officials put the number between 5,000 and 6,000 separate case files — some with as many as 20 pages of attachments such as receipts.

"It's this obscene emphasis on quantity and speed," said union attorney Ann Ellzey. "They're actually generating extra work to get errors undone. (The supervisor) had too much to process so she threw the excess away. It may be she did it without authorization, but we wonder about that."

The incident came to light in the wake of reports earlier this month of the shredding of as many as 20,000 income tax returns and checks by overworked IRS employees in Philadelphia.

Roscoe Egger, commissioner of the IRS in Washington, angrily denounced the reports as "sheer, utter nonsense."

Thursday's statement identified neither the supervisor who ordered the destruction nor the employee who did it. Branson said he would have no further comment until an investigation is complete.

The Austin center is one of 10 regional IRS centers in the United States. It serves Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and Kansas.

Thousands of businesses in the six states may have increased problems with the IRS because their requests for adjustments of their taxes were destroyed, the American-Statesman reported.

Darla Pittman, president of local No. 72 of the National Treasury Employees Union, which represents a third of the center's 5,500 employees, said union officials were told there is no way to find out to whom the destroyed documents belonged.

She said the supervisor had ordered the destruction during a late-1984 shift in computer hardware, and that the computer tracking system was shut down. "We think that's probably how she thought she could get away with it," Ms. Ellzey said of the supervisory employee who ordered the destruction.

Ms. Pittman said the supervisor apparently was trying to keep her unit of the center's Business Master File section first in efficiency by reducing an overwhelming backlog.

"To get her volume down," Ms. Pittman said of why the employee did it. "To look good. We work under constant pressure out there. It's a terrible thing that she felt she had so much pressure on her to do something like that."

Ms. Pittman said management discovered the destruction only after a young woman employee charged with destroying the documents became worried about it and reported what she had done.

He's wrong on Nicaragua

When Congress and President Reagan disagree, I usually feel the president is closer to being right than Congress.

But not this time. Not on Nicaragua. The president, of course, wants $14 million to provide aid to Nicaraguan rebels attempting to overthrow that country's Sandinista regime. And, he is requesting another $28 million in aid for fiscal 1986.

Congress has balked and, so far, hasn't given the president a dime. Mr. Reagan views the Nicaragua rebels as freedom fighters and the Sandinistas as a totalitarian regime. He says he wants to help "the people of Nicaragua" achieve freedom.

It is, of course, commendable for anyone to want to help a people yearning for freedom to attain liberty.

But the problem here is determining who "the people" of Nicaragua are and what they want.

A majority of the people apparently want to keep the Marxist Sandinista regime in power. A minority wants it overthrown. Does the United States have the right to tell that majority it can't have a Marxist government if it is stupid enough to want one? You know we don't.

Do we have the right to help a minority overthrow the type of government favored by the majority simply because we don't like Marxism? Of course not. That would be like the government of Cuba financing a revolution by Mondallian Democrats after last year's election.

It is patently ridiculous for a government based on majority rule to declare that the minority in another country has the right to overthrow the majority.

But there's more.

The United States celebrated the overthrow of the Samozza government which preceded the Sandinistas, and we helped bring it about. Many of the current rebels were followers of Samozza. Do we now assist in putting them back into power. How many governments must we overthrow until we get it right?

The argument is advanced that the presence of a Marxist government in Central America will export revolution into nations which are friends of the United States, enable Marxism to spread like a cancer through this hemisphere and endanger our own national security.

That is sheer nonsense.

The United States is perfectly capable of stopping Nicaragua from exporting violence into any nation that wants us to stop it. And we'd be on sound moral grounds in assisting our friends. There is a difference between stopping the spread of Marxism into areas where it isn't wanted and wiping it out where it is wanted.

The worries about Marxism spreading throughout Central America once it is firmly established in Nicaragua is also nonsense. The ultimate economic failure of such a government would stand as a constant reminder to other countries in the region of the danger of embracing Marxism.

And I can't buy that stuff about a tiny country such as Nicaragua posing a threat to the security of the United States. The biggest threat to our national security is the inability to keep our nose out of other countries' business. It looks like we would have learned that by now.

Appeals judge upholds Blue Law

HOUSTON (AP) — A state appeals court has upheld the Texas Blue Law, rejecting arguments by Handy Dan hardware stores that the 24-year-old Sunday closings statute is unconstitutional and vague.

The 1st Texas Court of Appeals on Thursday reversed a lower court's ruling in finding the law does not violate the state and U.S. constitutions.

The statute bans the sale of 42 items on consecutive weekend days. Violators can be assessed up to a $200 fine. The state Supreme Court has upheld the law as constitutional three times.

Last October, state District Judge Thomas Philips of Houston ruled in a lawsuit filed by Handy Dan that the Blue Law was unconstitutional.

Philips' decision was appealed by the state attorney general's office and Houston's Retail Merchants Association, a group of representatives from local businesses.

The merchants group sent shoppers to several Houston area businesses to collect evidence showing the shops violated the Blue Law.

The appeals rejected Handy Dan's arguments that the law is the due process and equal protection clauses of both constitutions. Assistant Attorney General John Miner said.

Miner said the three-judge appeals panel rejected Handy Dan's arguments that the merchants' group enforced the law selectively.

"The main issue was whether evidence produced by Handy Dan during the trial established that the statute was unconstitutional," Miner told the Bryan-College Station Eagle. "The appeals court found the evidence was insufficient."

The court also ruled the 24-year-old law does not violate the interstate commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution, Miner said.

Last November, Academy Corp. of Houston successfully challenged the Blue Law in court.

Senate goes on temporary bill-passing roll

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate was on a bill-passing roll Thursday until two coastal senators brought the proceedings to a halt with repeated attempts to beat back a measure regulating shrimp and oyster fishing.

The spurt of lawmaking included approval of more than 50 proposals, including one that would authorize the Legislature to create indigent health care districts, which would have the power to levy property taxes.

The proposed constitutional amendment was sent to the House on a 26-0 vote. If it is approved by the Legislature, the proposal would go on a statewide ballot in November.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, also won approval of a bill that would create a health care district in Jefferson County. The bill was advanced to the House on voice vote.

The Senate approved 28-0 and sent to the House a bill aimed at wiping out a redfish "black market."

Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris' bill requires that redfish and speckled trout be purchased only from a holder of a commercial fishing license, wholesale fish dealer's license, or shrimp house operator's license. Each fish must be accompanied by a bill of lading up to the final sale.

The measure stemmed from a highly controversial measure passed by the 1981 Legislature that prohibited the commercial taking of redfish and speckled trout in Texas waters but also made lawful the importation of redfish from other states.

Opinion

Federal program destroys family

During the Black Family Summit meeting in Nashville, Tenn., last year, numerous black leaders concluded that the number of single black mothers has reached crisis proportions. But these leaders should remember the results of the ill-fated War on Poverty and be wary of calling for a federal remedy. Federal remedies are, in large part, what caused the problem in the first place.

Consider this: When Lyndon Johnson left office in 1968, approximately 12 percent of Americans were poor, according to the official definition. During the next 12 years, in constant dollars, federal spending on all welfare programs quadrupled. Yet despite the vast expenditures of public money and the best of government intentions, the poverty rate in 1980 was 13 percent. And many of the poor are worse off today because these programs have undermined values, institutions and ambitions.

Aid to Families with Dependent Children, for example, discourages couples from marrying. By making the mother's fertility the main source of income, this program encourages childbearing out of wedlock and also leave the father with little incentive to take a low-paying job and adds only marginally to the family's income. Yet that job could lead the family out of poverty.

The AFDC encouragement to illegitimacy has been staggering: In 1950, 17 percent of all births among blacks were illegitimate; today it is 56 percent. White illegitimate rates have increased from 2 percent to 11 percent during that same time. Today, nearly three out of every five black children are being raised by a single parent.

Private, voluntary community efforts have made modest beginnings in strengthening the traditional family structure. And they are certainly preferable to yet another costly federal program that perpetuates the destructive cycle of welfare dependence.

International hypocrisy

Short memories and an absence of comparative analysis of events leads to distortions in handling of the new and the spread of international hypocrisy involving news developments.

One is reminded of this in reading about the death of 19 persons in a clash with South African police. The incident, which is under judicial investigation in South Africa, has caused the television networks to treat it as a veritable holocaust. Many governments, including that of Nigeria, have called for international condemnation and sanctions.

One wonders where the networks were on the numerous occasions in recent decades when Indian police and troops shot and killed rioters. Doesn't it occur to the networks to compare the latest South African incident with the killing of hundreds of Sikhs when the Indian army invaded the Sikhs' Golden Temple, their most sacred shrine? Closely related is the question: How much regular coverage do the networks give to the Soviet war in Afghanistan, which has resulted in 500,000 people killed and wounded.

Consider the hypocrisy aspect. Nigeria had the audacity to condemn the killing of 19 people near a black African township in South Africa. Yet The New Columbia Encyclopedia reports that more than one million people are thought to have died of severe malnutrition in the war that Nigeria waged against the state of Biafra from 1967 to 1970.

Has everyone forgotten about Biafra? This state was created out of Nigeria because the Ibo people did not believe they could develop - indeed survive - inside Nigeria. When they declared their independence, as other African peoples had done, they were subjected to the most pitiless repression. They came under air, sea and land attack. They were starved into submission.

At the same time, the Western world was very aware of the "starving Biafrans." The Nigerian central government had no compassion for the people of Biafra, however. They died like flies because of the cruelty of the Nigerian regime. Now, 15 years later, Nigeria has the nerve to point the finger of blame at another country, and no one cites the record of Nigeria's inhumanity to man.

The international media make no effort at comparative analysis of conditions in other African countries.

If they were to do so, they would have to give the American people facts which are now not made available to them. For example, they would have to describe conditions in Zimbabwe, the former Rhodesia, where a Marxist dictator, Robert Mugabe, is attempting to establish a one party state. He has jailed opposition leaders and sent his North Korean - trained 5th Special Brigade into the countryside to terrorize elements opposed to his rule.

If the U.S. public is to make a balanced appraisal of conditions in South Africa, it needs comparative information and analysis on conditions in Nigeria, Zimbabwe, Uganda, Ethiopia, and other sub-Saharan African countries. It's unconscionable that the American people are deprived of this much-needed information and analysis and are subjected to distortion of the news and hypocritical statements that go uncorrected.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, April 26, the 116th day of 1985. There are 249 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On April 26, 1607, an expedition of English colonists, including Captain John Smith, went ashore at Cape Henry, Va., to establish the first permanent settlement in the New World.

On this date:
Ten years ago: Young protesters disrupted a Washington D.C. rally by tens of thousands of labor union members who were demonstrating for more jobs.

Five years ago: Iran announced the American hostages had been taken from the U.S. embassy and would be scattered among different cities and towns to thwart any other attempts to rescue them.

One year ago: President Reagan arrived in the People's Republic of China for a five-day visit.

Today's birthdays: Nazi war criminal Rudolf Hess is 91. Seismologist Charles Richter is 85. Author Bernard Malamud is 71.

What about modern art?

You are seeing and hearing some goofy stuff defended by writers and artists claiming a "right to innovate."

Nobody merits recognition for innovation until he has demonstrated traditional talent.

The greats of the past won their "right to innovate" the old-fashioned way - they earned it!

The composers of yesteryear built on the years before them, passed the mantle from generation to generation gracefully.

Russian composer Prokofieff wrote music which seemed to some discordant, cacophonous. But he had earned the right to write it by first composing the "Classical Symphony," an excellent composition in the accepted tradition.

Prokofieff proved he could play by the rules before breaking them.

Similarly each of the great composers achieved his own credibility - his own worthiness to be heard - by showing his colleagues and his audiences that he was capable of respecting and reproducing the music that came before him.

In literature, the same.

Only after you have learned and demonstrated proper grammar have you a "right to innovate."

You can use the word "ain't" only when you know better.

When I hear abstract poetry I want to know if that poet can also write a coherent sentence, can actually communicate to everyone the some feelings and ideas which he apparently chooses to communicate only to a few.

Granted, in art and literature, if there are enough "customers" willing to purchase nonsense, then artistic validity becomes secondary to commercial viability.

But what of the art you and I are forced to buy?

When your tax dollars are used to pay for some mashed-up hunk of junk metal pedestaled in your town square - have you not the right to demand artistic credentials of the person who put it there?

Ought he not first be able to reproduce Michelangelo's "David" before dumping garbage on your front lawn in the name of "art"?

Chagall and Picasso earned the right to raise eyebrows with their later work because they had proved with earlier work that they did know how to paint and illustrate photographically, precisely.

Today in Italy an "artist" named Manzoni filled 90 jars with his own excrement - labeled each "Artist's Excrement" - and one of those jars, auctioned in Milan, sold for $1,400!

Manzoni confirms what many of us have suspected all along about "modern art."

Immigrants priceless asset

The 10th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam War is an appropriate moment to note one of the few beneficial consequences of that dismal affair: the immigration of nearly half-a-million Vietnamese refugees to the United States.

America's greatness is very largely owing to the talents and hard work of the successive waves of migrants from other nations who have come here, fleeing from poverty or oppression, to start a new life. But in the past 30 years the United States has been the beneficiary of successive inflows of refugees from countries wracked by communist aggression, and they have proved very high-grade ore indeed.

The first to arrive in large numbers were the Hungarians in 1957 - most of them devout Catholics who detested Hungary's Soviet-backed communist despotism. They participated eagerly in the rebellion that flared in Hungary in the autumn of 1956, and when it was ruthlessly crushed by Red Army tanks they fled across the border to neighboring Austria.

I was in Vienna in that chaotic December of 1956, and I will never forget the mood in a refugee collection center set up by the Austrian government in suburban Traiskirchen. Hundreds of men, women and children were warehoused temporarily in double-decker bunks in the huge mess hall of a former military academy, in the glare of a few bare light bulbs. "Not very comfortable, is it?" somebody remarked sympathetically to an elderly refugee. "Listen," the old fellow snapped back, "this is the first decent night's sleep anybody here has had in years." That spirit infused the hundreds of thousands of Hungarians who reached America.

Then, after 1960, came the Cubans: half-a-million of them - almost the entire middle class of the nation, fleeing Castro's communist grasp. The Cuban influx centered, inevitably, on southern Florida, and inevitably caused severe temporary dislocations and a certain amount of ill feeling locally. For one thing, the Florida school system, both public and private, was simply unprepared to cope with the huge numbers of Spanish-speaking children. For another, the sudden fierce competition for low-paying jobs threw many native-born Americans, especially blacks, temporarily out of work. But gradually Florida adjusted to its new residents, and they are now among its most vigorous citizens - and, not incidentally, some of this country's most passionate anti-communists. Their votes last November went to Ronald Reagan in a proportion of about nine to one.

But in many ways the most remarkable refugee tide has been the Vietnamese, who fought beside us to save their country from communism and had no choice but to leave when South Vietnam collapsed in 1975. These people were not Europeans like the Hungarians, and were forced to flee, not just across 90 miles of water like the Cubans, but from Southeast Asia to a strange, cold land 10,000 miles away. English was not even their second tongue, and their first task therefore was to learn enough of it to scrape by. Americans with the room to spare generously took them in. (I know of one Vietnamese family of five who huddled on the top floor of a New York residential brownstone for six months until the father was able to launch a newspaper for his fellow-refugees, in the Vietnamese language.)

Such people are priceless assets to a nation like ours, that sometimes seems in danger of forgetting just how precious freedom is, and what gumption and hard work can accomplish even when almost everything has been lost. In the grim contest called the Cold War, the Soviet Union is far ahead in sheer yardage gained; but measured in the subtler terms of human assets acquired, America has not by a long shot always been the loser.

Viet refugee awaits marrow transplant

CHICAGO (AP) — A Vietnamese refugee whose battle for survival prompted unprecedented cooperation between the United States and Vietnam might die before he gets a bone-marrow transplant from a brother traveling halfway around the world, doctors said.

Vo Tien Duc was in critical condition today in sterile isolation in the intensive care unit of the University of Illinois Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Gloria Raleigh.

Duc suffers from aplastic anemia, a disease in which the bone marrow stops making essential white blood cells. He was being kept alive by transfusions of more than two pints each day.

Duc's brother, Vo Hoang Van, 18, who lives in a Mekong Delta village, left Ho Chi Minh City and was scheduled to arrive tonight in Chicago, culminating an effort that overcame political, bureaucratic, geographic and logistic hurdles.

Doctors at the University of Illinois facility will conduct a second blood compatibility test to determine if Van is a suitable donor, a process expected to take five days, said Dr. Melody Cobligh, the oncologist treating Duc.

"We're just thrilled everything has worked out so far ... we just hope he makes it long enough now to have a successful transplant," Ms. Cobligh said at a news conference.

Duc's wife, Lang Phung, said through a translator, "I'm happy to see everybody doing something to treat and help him come back to his family."

The couple's four children, ranging in age from 5 months to 4 years, sat nearby.

Hoa Truong, a family friend who borrowed money to raise the $5,000 needed to finance Van's trip to Chicago, said he did so "for the children. You can look at them and see they want their father back."

Truong said Duc came to Chicago in 1979 after settling in Michigan and has been unable to find steady work since. He said the family has been living on public aid.

Duc entered a community hospital a month ago complaining of a sore throat and was transferred to the university facility after it became apparent the infection and fever were symptoms of a more serious disorder.

Doctors determined the only way to save him was marrow transplants from a sibling with a compatible blood type.

After some searching, Ms. Cobligh was put in touch with an old classmate, Dr. Judith Landinsky, the new chairman of the U.S. Committee for Scientific Cooperation with Vietnam, which sponsors scientific exchanges.

GOP guerrilla theater is continuing on House floor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Having forced the House to adjourn early this week, Republicans are threatening more guerrilla tactics to disrupt proceedings because of Democratic plans to fill a disputed Indiana congressional seat.

"The Republican Party is united on this. I think we can keep it up for a long, long time," Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn., said after Democrats voted to adjourn early Thursday because of Republicans' parliamentary roadblocks.

The House was not scheduled to meet again until Monday.

The Republicans staged such tactics as objecting to routine motions, refusing to give unanimous consent to bring up measures, and voting by paper ballots instead of the faster electronic machines.

"It's clear to me and most members that ... it's not going to be possible to proceed in an orderly way," said Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., as he called for adjournment.

That was unfortunate, Foley added, because the House was working on a State Department authorization brought to the floor at the request of the Reagan administration.

"The atmosphere between Republicans and Democrats may now be so poisoned we will have a difficult time accomplishing anything of substance for a good part of the 99th Congress," said Rep. Ellwood Hillis, R-Ind.

Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., said Republicans agreed at a closed caucus to a "unanimous declaration of war." He mentioned such tactics as "walking out when the wrong guy is seated."

Democrats claim Republicans are only hurting themselves because it is the administration's legislative agenda that is being delayed.

The Republican ire was prompted by a House-conducted recount in Indiana's 8th Congressional District. It found incumbent Democratic Rep. Frank McCloskey a four-vote winner over Republican Richard McIntyre, reversing earlier counts that had favored McIntyre.

The Republicans sang the civil rights anthem "We Shall Overcome" when they gathered on the Capitol steps Thursday for a picture-taking session with McIntyre.

"I'm going to operate within the rules and be orderly but our displeasure about what's taken place will come through," House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., told reporters.

McIntyre was certified the winner of the Nov. 6 election by the Republican secretary of state by 34 votes. He won a state recount by 418 votes, but Democrats claimed inconsistent counting procedures then left many votes in doubt.

Republicans claim inconsistent procedures were followed in the House-conducted recount.

DEAR ABBY: This is regarding your answer to "Deceived," the young wife who was upset when she found some girlie magazines her husband had hidden from her. She said that she was a good-looking woman and couldn't understand why her husband would want to look at pornographic filth like that.

I was surprised at your answer. You said, "Please get over the notion that only men with unattractive wives read girlie magazines. What you look like has nothing to do with your husband's desire to look at what you call 'filth.'"

Then you defended the husband's right to read whatever he wanted to, and told the wife she had a lot to learn about why men enjoy looking at stuff like that.

Abby, I don't understand why a happily married man would want to look at pictures of naked women, so I asked my husband, and he said it was normal and natural for men to enjoy pictures of beautiful naked women regardless of what they have at home.

Abby, I consider myself normal, and I have absolutely no desire to look at pictures of naked men, no matter how well-built they are. Why?

PUZZLED IN CHICAGO

DEAR PUZZLED: Because most women do not respond to the visual the same way men do. (Women respond more to the spoken or written word.) But let's get something straight: All pictures of partially or fully unclothed women are not pornographic—some are beautiful though erotic, and are considered museum-quality art.

Not having seen the "girlie" magazine in question, I'm unable to make an informed judgment, but let me go on record to say that pictures that portray women as objects to be used, abused, humiliated or degraded in any way are totally unacceptable to me.

DEAR ABBY: I was pleased to note your approval of using "Yes, sir" and "No, ma'am" when addressing people.

I have heard people say, "Don't 'sir' me—I haven't been knighted!" (I ignore it as though it hadn't been said.) Addressing people as sir and ma'am is a matter of simple courtesy and has nothing to do with one's age or station in life.

Thank you, ma'am.

POLITE IN ST. CHARLES, LA.

DEAR POLITE: You're welcome, sir.

DEAR ABBY: I am an Englishman teaching psychiatry in the Alabama University School of Medicine, and I was prompted to write by the letter from "Bitter and Brokenhearted" (the widow of the smoker who was forced by relatives to go outside in sub-zero weather to smoke and subsequently caught pneumonia and died). I noticed that you published that letter without comment, judging, no doubt, that the tragic story was comment enough.

Apparently, in the opinion of the relatives with whom the smoker and his wife were staying, smoking is a moral issue and has the status of something close to a crime.

Interestingly, King James I, after whom a version of the English Bible was named, wrote a famous pamphlet titled, "Counter Blast to Tobacco." He would have liked to have made the use of tobacco both sinful and criminal, but in spite of his throne and his title of Defender of the Faith, even King James could not make smoking either a crime or a sin.

Many thanks for your constructive, entertaining and often puzzling column.

The Friends of the Library will have their annual used books sale this weekend in the auditorium of the Lovett Memorial Library.

The sale will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday, according to Glenna Miller, president.

Miller noted there will be literally hundreds of books for sale at bargain prices.

"The cheap prices are one of the best features of the sale," she said. Most hardbacks will be priced for less than the price of many magazines today. And most paperbacks will cost under $1.

The books have been donated to the Friends by Pampa and area residents and organizations. In addition, former library books which are being replaced by later editions or being deleted from the circulation shelves will be available.

Also available at the book sale will be magazines, records and other items.

Proceeds from the sale will be used to help fund projects for the library and its patrons, Miller noted. "The main purpose of the Friends is to get things for the library that it should have but that the city budget has not provided for," she explained.

The city has limited funds for the different departments and can't always fund everything the library would like to have, she said. So the Friends try to help obtain other items and services.

Items in the past acquired from the Friends' fund include strollers for children, a piano for the auditorium, special shelving, drapes, rugs, carpeting, McGuff's tapes and other items for the children's story hour program. In addition, the Friends helped pay for some landscaping items, including the garden on the south side of Lovett Library.

A current project is the acquiring of funds to help with the new computer system currently being developed through the Harrington Library Consortium.

The Friends also offer demonstrations for the public during the year, including holiday candymaking and ideas for Christmas gifts and decorations.

The book sale is "such a popular event," Miller said. "People are lined up waiting for the doors to open. And they exit carrying literally boxes full of books." Many people come from out of town to look for books, she noted.

"It's a marvelous way to add to one's personal library or to start building your own library," Miller stated.

She related one story about a woman who came over from Borger one year "and literally filled up a pickup with books to start her library."

Several years ago on the last day of the sale a young mother with her young children in tow came in.

"She couldn't believe the cheap prices; she left with several boxes of books," Miller said. The woman came up to the cashier desk and said, "You have saved my life," Miller related.

The woman was getting ready to move to an isolated part of New Mexico, 75 miles from the nearest town, with no television set. She said she was getting the books for her children - and herself - to read and be entertained by, Miller said.

Children's books are popular sale items, she said. "You need to get there early to get children's books."

Other popular books are crafts books, cookbooks, religion books, paperback romances and special interest subjects.

Often younger people planning to go off to college purchase used textbooks "to get a head start," she said. Others purchase them just to further educate themselves.

There's a wide variety of other books to choose from: general fiction, history, reference works, science fiction, fantasy, politics, classics, biographies and philosophy.

Food for finals new school twist

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Pacific University has found a delectable and profitable way for parents to give their son or daughter away at college a boost to get them through their finals, while at the same time helping the Parents Club Scholarship Fund.

Helen E. Lewis, Pacific's director of university relations, sends an invitation to all parents of current students a few weeks before examination time suggesting they send $10 for a "care package" to be given out during finals week.

Mrs. Lewis usually receives quick responses from many parents and sometimes grandparents. Messages are then sent to the students telling them when and where to go on campus to receive "a special package that has been delivered in your name."

The package bears a note saying "The attached Care Package was purchased for you by (name) from the Pacific Parents Club, so that relief for your exam time and study hunger pangs will be close by."

Mrs. Lewis and her crew assemble the packages containing home-baked cookies, as well as snack crackers, oranges, apples, caramel apples, peanuts, pepperoni, cheese, candy bars and fruit drinks.

The contents are purchased locally by Mrs. Lewis, who also buys attractive shopping bag-type containers for all the goodies.

"I'm pleased with the program," Mrs. Lewis says. "Students are served, and leftover funds from the project, usually about $150 each time, are placed in the Parents Club Scholarship Fund."

Gray history book deadline Tuesday

Final deadline for the family history stories for the Gray County History book is Tuesday, April 30. This is also the deadline for club and feature stories for the general history section of the book.

Material may be turned in at the White Deer Land Museum every afternoon except Monday, or mailed to Gray County History Book, Box 2196, Pampa.

Work sessions for volunteers are scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday, April 30 and May 2, at 2132 Mary Ellen from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Volunteers are need to type, collate, count words, highlight and prepare the genealogical index.

Almost 600 family stories have been turned in to date and about eight steps are required for processing each story.

Determined survivors populate Panhandle

By GIL BROYLES
Associated Press Writer
SLAPOUT, Okla. (AP) — The heavily laden cattle trucks and the oil trucks rumble through this Panhandle hamlet without slowing, leaving in their wake miniature dust storms and the pungent smell of money.

From his service station on the north side of U.S. 270 and Oklahoma 3, Frank Lemmons watches them come and go along the road now marked as the Northwest Passage. So did his father before him. And when it is time, Lemmons will leave the station to a son.

Laurence Drake lives on the spot where he was born 78 years ago. His diversified farm, sheltered by a stand of spreading bois d'arc trees near Gate, is nurtured by water from the Cimarron River at a place where the Panhandle begins.

Paul Hitch's great-grandfather drove a herd of longhorn cattle into "No Man's Land" 101 years ago, then decided to stay. The sturdy stone house built by James K. Hitch is still a part of his great-grandson's home north of Guymon. And now the Panhandle's fourth generation of the Hitch family operates one of the largest cattle feed lot operations in the world.

Lemmons, Drake and Hitch belong to the Panhandle. While others took flight before the dual onslaughts of the Dust Bowl and the Great Depression 50 years ago, these men and their families took root and thrived.

"The people who remained and fought their way through the Depression, they're certainly a very hardy breed," said U.S. Rep. Glenn English, whose district includes the Panhandle and much of western Oklahoma. "They're people that have a lot of determination."

The winnowing process reduced the population of the three Panhandle counties by one-third in the decade between 1930 and 1940. The population declined from 30,960 to 21,198 in those years. In the 1980 census, it stood at 27,816.

"It kind of purged the area. The weaker ones left," Hitch said.

The Hitch family stayed put and grew to become a huge factor in the economy of Texas County. Hitch Feeders has a seat on the Mercantile Exchange and its modern, computerized headquarters occupies the center of a north Guymon office complex.

The Hitches have more than 150,000 feeder cattle at feed lots north and south of Guymon and in Kansas. The feed lot where 65,000 cattle are being fattened for market north of Guymon is one of the largest in the world. The Hitches entered the feed lot business in 1953.

"Before 1950, there was nothing but dryland farming out here," Hitch said. "But we're fortunate to sit on top of two fabulous natural resources — the Hugoton gas field and the Ogallala aquifer."

Wells drilled into the Ogallala provide Panhandle farmers with the water necessary for irrigation and ranchers with water to supply their cattle.

"Water out here is our lifeblood. There's no substitute for the water," Hitch said.

But depressed farm prices and increased energy costs have served to alter the Panhandle landscape. Where windmills once stood as lonely sentinels on the prairies, they now find ample company in drilling rigs and pumping jacks.

Texas County is No. 1 and Beaver County is No. 2 in the state in natural gas production, and drilling throughout the Panhandle is on the increase. The Hugoton field is the largest natural gas reservoir in the western hemisphere.

Texas County's 2,157 gas wells produced better than 300 thousand cubic feet of gas per day in 1984, while Beaver County's 1,739 gas wells produced more than 274 thousand cubic feet per day last year.

Major companies and large independents are keeping the play hot in the Panhandle region — completing 432 wells of all kinds in the three counties last year, according to state Corporation Commission figures.

Per capita income tops $17,400 in Cimarron County, highest in the state.

"There aren't too many people out here, but they're pretty prosperous," Hitch noted.

It was Laurence Drake's 28th birthday when the worst storm of the Dust Bowl roared across the Panhandle on April 14, 1935. For the next few years, the Panhandle was a place where both the soil and the people drifted away.

Drake, who was farming 400 acres at the time, said people were "too thick" in the Panhandle 50 years ago.

"It wasn't possible to farm on a quarter section," he said.

An avid conservationist, Drake planted shelter belts and employed new farming techniques. Now, he has 2,100 acres of diversified farming and ranching. He runs a dairy as well as raising cattle, wheat and alfalfa.

Standing atop a hill on a road that marks the 100th meridian, the eastern border of the Panhandle, Drake can survey his domain. He can look north into Kansas across the Cimarron River and west into the Panhandle as curlew wheels overhead in the cool April breeze.

It is hard to imagine dust swirling across the fields now sprouting a green sea of ankle-high grain. Some of the land, allowed to go back to soil-securing buffalo grass, is sprinkled with yucca plants.

The geography spreads for miles in alternating shades of green, the brown of carefully tilled soil and the burnished glow of rugged hills that continue to defy agriculture.

"There's all kind of places to look around here ... Lots of room," Drake said.

Frank Lemmons, 44, is one of only two people ever born in Slapout, a town his father founded in 1932 when he opened up a store and gas station to serve traffic largely comprised of migrants headed west on the rutted road.

Now the town is located on an 80-mile stretch of arrow-straight highway about midway between Woodward and Guymon. Texas is eight miles south and Kansas 30 miles to the north. Of the half-dozen buildings, Lemmons' service station and a small store across the street comprise the business district.

Soviet bloc leaders gather

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, on his first trip outside the Soviet Union since becoming the Kremlin leader, is meeting six other Communist bloc leaders today in a summit to renew the Warsaw Pact military alliance.

The seven-member pact, established 30 years ago in response to the creation of NATO, binds East European states to the Soviet Union militarily and serves as a foreign policy coordinating body. The treaty expires May 14.

Gorbachev brought with him Soviet Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Defense Minister Sergei L. Sokolov.

The commander of the Warsaw Pact forces, Soviet Marshal Viktor Kulikov, was on hand for his arrival at the airport.

Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish prime minister and Communist Party first secretary, is the host of the meeting.

In half-hour intervals at the airport Thursday, Jaruzelski met Czechoslovak leader Gustav Husak, Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania, the Hungarian delegation led by Communist Party leader Janos Kadar, Bulgarian leader Todor Zhivkov and Erich Honecker of East Germany.

They each brought with them senior government and Communist Party officials, including defense and foreign ministers.

The welcoming ceremonies at the military field at Warsaw airport were closed to Western reporters but were shown on the evening news on state-run television Thursday night.

A light snow was falling as Gorbachev stepped off his Aeroflot plane and talked animatedly with Jaruzelski.

As Gorbachev walked to a waiting car, he stopped to shake hands with people waving tiny Soviet flags and exchanged greetings with one woman who spoke to him in Russian.

"Let our friendship live long," Gorbachev said. The woman repeated the phrase. "These are great days in Warsaw," Gorbachev added.

Police patrols of two and three men, many armed with Soviet-made Kalashnikov semiautomatic rifles, were posted on nearly every street corner along major thoroughfares. Traffic police stopped drivers for document checks.

The Warsaw Pact originally was valid for 20 years and was automatically renewed for another 10 years in 1975. It cannot be extended without formal agreement, because it was set up on May 14, 1955, under the stated principle that military alliances should be done away with and the Warsaw Pact would be dismantled if NATO was disbanded.

The NATO treaty, signed in Washington, D.C. on April 4, 1949, has no expiration date.

Albania was among the original Warsaw Pact signatories but withdrew in 1968, the year the alliance's forces invaded Czechoslovakia to put down a move toward democracy in that country.

Braniff Inc. reports profit

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff Inc., which recast itself in November as a discount carrier, says that during the two months ending March 31, it recorded its first operating profit since it resumed flying 13 months ago.

Braniff, formed from the ashes of Braniff International, said Thursday it earned $1 million during the two-month period and attributed that to a 72.5 percent load factor.

"The profitability attained in February and March is very gratifying and is a tribute to the loyal Braniff employees who have refused to quit in the face of adversity," president Ron Ridgeway said.

The airline said its measure of inventory — available seat miles, or the number of seats traveling a mile — was 436 million during the two months. It flew 316 revenue passenger miles — those flown by paying passengers.

Ridgeway said Braniff benefited from expense reductions, including the return of unused planes it leased from a trust established by secured creditors of its bankrupt predecessor.

Passenger loads could be affected by redeployment of aircraft serving Florida.

First lady: parents still the strongest drug war weapon

ATLANTA (AP) — A tearful Nancy Reagan ended a first ladies summit on drug abuse by urging students to be "clear-eyed and clear-minded" and telling parents that they are the most effective weapon in the fight against drugs.

Mrs. Reagan, addressing 1,500 students and the wives of 15 foreign leaders, was moved to tears Thursday when a Kansas teen-ager put his arm around her and sang her a song to thank her for her interest in fighting illegal drugs.

Mrs. Reagan's appearance at the Parents Resource Institute for Drug Education conference marked the final day of her "first ladies summit" on drug abuse, which began Wednesday in Washington.

She invited the first ladies to the United States to discuss common problems and solutions regarding drugs in the different nations. Fifteen of the first ladies traveled to Atlanta on Thursday; 17 attended the first day of the conference in Washington.

Steve Courtney, 17, of Overland Park, Kan., provided the highlight of a 30-minute student song and dance performance when he put his arm around Mrs. Reagan as he sang the line, "We can move mountains together, you and I."

Mrs. Reagan and Courtney embraced at the end of the song, and he escorted her from the stage after she regained her composure and spoke briefly to the crowd.

"You are our future," Mrs. Reagan told the students. "We need you and we need you clear-eyed and clear-minded and I know that's how you'll be."

Clutching a single rose which she and the other first ladies were given at the conclusion of the conference, Mrs. Reagan said, "I can't thank you enough."

Speaking at the Georgia World Congress Center, Mrs. Reagan said she "wanted the first ladies with me today to see what I saw on my first trip here, because conferences like this are possible in their homelands, too."

She said she first became acquainted with PRIDE, a private, non-profit anti-drug group, three years ago. She said her first visit to a PRIDE conference then helped her understand that parents were the strongest weapon in the fight against drug abuse among children.

Mrs. Reagan and the other first ladies returned to Washington after the conference. Later, she bade them farewell and said the summit achieved something important — inspiration to continue the fight against illegal drugs. "We've heard about the effects of drugs on our young people, their health, their future, their families — we heard stories of pain and confusion," she said.

The airline said its measure of inventory — available seat miles, or the number of seats traveling a mile — was 436 million during the

U.S. seeks to revive Contra aid proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is examining its legislative options with a view toward reviving its bid to resume assistance to anti-communist rebels, U.S. officials say.

"The Sandinistas shouldn't be too smug," one official said Thursday, alluding to the House vote Wednesday night that brought an end — at least temporarily — to efforts to reach a compromise on assisting the Contra insurgents.

The official, who asked not to be identified, shared a view held by other government sources that a revised approach could muster majorities in both houses because of what they described as powerful anti-Sandinista sentiment in the Congress. Key officials will spend the next few days trying to come up with such an approach, the sources said.

But House speaker Thomas P.

O'Neill, D-Mass., said the collapse of the administration's proposal reflected public sentiment on the Nicaragua issue.

O'Neill, who has derided the Contras as "maimers and butchers," said Thursday that mail and calls to his office were running 1,000-to-1 against the president's policy.

Publicly, Vice President George Bush and White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the Wednesday night vote did not mean U.S. abandonment of the rebels.

"We will be back and back and back until America does the right thing," Bush said in a television interview.

"We are not going to turn our backs on those who are fighting for democracy in our own hemisphere to the favor of those who are trying to establish a Marxist-Leninist dictatorship in Central America," he said.

Halfway house helps troubled adults

By MARIBETH JONES
Beaumont Enterprise
BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Lawrence Dunlap and Ronald Coward are only two faces among 30 at Land Manor's halfway house for mentally restored adults.

Articulate and witty, Dunlap has been at Land Manor four months, having come from Houston and a strained family relationship. He has two years of college and job experience with a state agency in Houston.

Coward is a rough, tattooed 19-year-old former drug and alcohol abuser on parole for trying to steal a car. He came to Land Manor a few days ago to make a new start, to escape a gnawing cycle of homelessness, alcohol and marijuana.

They are worlds apart to the casual observer, but Dunlap and Coward share a critical bond — they are hard-to-place people yearning for hard work during hard times. Though they've found the firm hand of adult supervision at Land Manor helpful to their re-entry into society, they've also found some employers whose stigmas about social rehabilitation keep these residents at arm's length from a paycheck. But it isn't for lack of trying.

"Once they're here, they're not babied and coddled anymore," says Annie Lester, Land Manor job placement coordinator. "They are given responsibility. They are given a certain amount of freedom, for which they are accountable, and they are given the chance to get a job. They've got to get out there, be competitive..."

"...and be reliable," says Ace Davenport, a 27-year-old resident who has recently acquired a job. On parole from the Texas Department of Corrections for attempted burglary, Davenport has Land Manor, his employer and his own honesty to thank for putting him back in circulation after three years behind bars.

Referrals to Land Manor halfway house come from various state and local agencies, including the Texas Employment Commission and Texas Rehabilitation Commission. Private citizens can refer family members here; doctors can send clients.

Davenport, now realizing that "it's easy getting in (to prison) and not easy getting out," did not wait for his employer to ask about his past; he volunteered the information. The reward: admiration among his co-workers and from his boss for his honesty. Lester credits the day-to-day respect for authority at Land

Manor as part of Davenport's success.

Ronnie O'Neil never got in trouble with the law, but a stressful family life and a weakness for "blowin' money on chicks" brought the dark, reserved 20-year-old to Land Manor. Now, for the first time, O'Neil has a savings account, thanks to the job he landed by thumbing through the phone book two days after his previous job folded.

But most jobs don't come that easily, especially to residents here.

Spouting good corporate sense like a chairman of the board, Dunlap explained point-by-point how employers can benefit from hiring a mentally restored person and suffer in the long run if not, by continuing to support through tax dollars agencies that send people who are halfway there to halfway houses like Land Manor.

Roadside dinosaur park fulfills a carpenter's dream

By STEVE BLOW
The Dallas Morning News
MOSCOW, Texas (AP) — Donald Bean will admit that he didn't wrestle with the question: Does East Texas need a roadside dinosaur park?

"Because I was enthusiastic about it, I thought other people would be, too," he said.

So at a time when roadside attractions were disappearing from the American landscape, Bean — a 53-year-old carpenter — was spending his life savings on Dinosaur Gardens. "It took 20 years to save the money to build it," he said.

Dinosaur Gardens is on U.S. Highway 59 in the East Texas town of Moscow (rhymes with "Bosco"), about 30 miles south of Lufkin. A tyrannosaurus stands beside the highway, beckoning passers-by to venture behind the red board fence where 11 more fiberglass dinosaurs repose among the pines.

"I've had only one person go through who didn't think much of it, and I don't think he knew anything about dinosaurs. Anybody that knows anything about them is amazed," Bean said.

Bean's dream to be the owner of a dinosaur park was born 25 years ago when his family toured such a park while vacationing in Oregon.

When he returned to his job as a carpenter in Texas City, everything he could save went into the dinosaur fund. In his spare time, he added to the fund by repairing dilapidated houses. In whatever free time was left, he studied dinosaurs. "I never even finished high school, but the Texas City library was my standby," he said.

When he had $100,000 saved, Bean and his wife, Yvonne, left Texas City and bought eight acreshaioquizzell-traveled U.S. 59. They spent the next two years building the park and their home next door. Except for the dinosaurs, they did it all themselves.

Four years ago, after much sweat and sacrifice, they swung open the front gates — and the public trickled in. Dinosaur Garden almost went broke.

"I had to go back to Texas City and work as a carpenter part of two more years after we opened. My wife ran the park while I went back and worked," he said.

"But we've got it now. We're not getting rich, but we make ends meet. My wife works at a little grocery store in Leggett, and I run the park by myself," he said.

Bean figures that he simply miscalculated the appeal of a dinosaur park. "Before we opened I used to sit out by the highway in the evenings and count cars. I figured we could easily get just one-half of 1 percent to stop," he said.

Instead of getting 150 visitors a day, as he had expected, he is lucky to get more than 100 a week.

"Everybody is in a hurry to get somewhere, it seems like. Nobody wants to take the time to stop," he said.

So Bean, who still dresses like a carpenter in overalls and work shirt, spends many quiet hours behind the cashier window at his park. Occasionally he wanders down the path through the park, stopping to wipe the pine pollen from his dinosaurs.

"Look at his eyes," Bean said, pointing to his triceratops. "Anywhere you walk along the trail, he is looking right at you." Bean regrets that his wife must work for them to get by.

Shell first quarter earnings are down

HOUSTON (AP) — Citing reduced prices for oil and petroleum products, Shell Oil Co. reported 1985 first quarter earnings of $296 million, down $30 million from the same period in 1984.

"Earnings for this quarter were below our planning objective, but several factors point to possible earnings improvement in the periods ahead," said Shell President John F. Bookout.

But, he said, recovery in the industry will not bring the company's profits up to 1984 levels.

"The depressed earnings in the first quarter will make it difficult to exceed 1984's record earnings," Bookout said.

Earnings per share were 96 cents for the first three months of 1985, down 9 percent from $1.05 for first three months of 1984, officials said.

"Earnings declined in all major operating segments," Bookout said. "Lower selling prices for crude oil, refined products, chemicals and natural gas liquids more than offset the benefits of lower windfall profit tax, lower material costs and higher crude oil production."

Revenues were $4.7 billion compared to $4.9 billion last year, the company reported.

Church group provides clothes for needy

By JEAN BURNS
The Laredo News

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — The telephone rings at the home of a member of First Christian Church's Evening Circle. The call might be from a foster parent needing shoes for the two abused children she's taken in, or from a school nurse requesting jeans for the little girl who wears shorts on the coldest day of the year, or from an abandoned wife whose four children have no coats.

The door of the "clothes closet" at First Christian Church opens. Within a day's time, the children have the shoes, the jeans, the coat.

The clothes closet was established in 1981 when an Evening Circle member worried out loud. A large number of children from poverty-level families attended the school inadequately clothed and some, for lack of warm clothing, missed school on cold days.

Betty Wilkins, Evening Circle president and wife of the Rev. Leslie L. Wilkins, suggested that the circle operate a clothes closet similar to the one at her husband's previous pastorate. Undaunted by the fact that the circle had only five members (two of whom have since moved from Laredo), the ladies set to work.

"We limited the closet sizes for elementary school children because we felt they had the greatest need," Mrs. Wilkins said. "Older students usually can find some kind of job to help buy their own clothing."

Soon sturdy racks made by church member Phil Gillham lined the walls of an unused Sunday School classroom. Clothing poured in from the congregation. Children attending the United Vacation Bible School sponsored by the Christian, Presbyterian, Methodist and Episcopal churches were invited to donate things they had outgrown.

"The children really responded," Wilkins recalls. "There were so many bags of clothing that our small circle was almost overwhelmed at the prospect of sorting, sizing and hanging it all. But other women of the church pitched in and we got it all organized."

The Evening Circle is part of Christian Women's Fellowship, which has helped in many ways. As individuals and as a group, CWF members have provided financial aid. They have supplied health kits of toothbrush, tooth paste, comb, soap and wash cloth.

"You should see the reaction of the children when we give a health kit to each one who comes to the closet for clothing," Mrs. Wilkins said. "They act as if we'd given them a Christmas or birthday present."

The closet stocks good second-hand dresses, shirts, blouses and slacks.

"If shoes or jackets are needed, we take the children and mother to a discount store to make a purchase," Mrs. Wilkins said. "Jackets and coats seldom turn up in the donations we receive. I suppose these are recycled within the family."

As for shoes, circle members feel that new shoes are healthier, physically and psychologically, than hand-me downs. A new pair of shoes does wonders for the ego of a kid who's seldom owned anything new.

Socks and underwear, two pairs to a package, hang in neat rows on a pegboard in the closet.

"If the children do not have decent outer clothing, then you just know they need underwear, too," Mrs. Wilkins said.

When a circle member finds a bargain on socks, underwear, or jeans — another case where demand exceeds donations — she will fill a shopping cart or two.

After one such shopping spree just before Christmas, when the cash register tap totaled nearly $200, a call came from an elementary school counselor. She and an aide had compiled a lengthy list of children who desperately need clothing. A circle member met them at the church and the three very nearly stripped the clothes closet of the latest purchases, plus packing bags with other clothing. The next day the member returned to the sale, gladly, to load up another shopping cart.

"School counselors and school nurses have been our best allies in helping needy children," Mrs. Wilkins said. "They are very caring people. I remember when the temperature dropped into the 20s two winters ago. A school nurse asked us for coats for two brothers. One had gone to school in his shirt sleeves, and the other in his father's coat which completely enveloped him. The closet had no coats and because of our jobs, we weren't able to shop for coats before the school class ended. But we were able to get cash to the nurse that morning. The nurse spent her lunch our buying the coats so that the little boys could wear them that afternoon."

The circle also has filled requests for non-clothing items, such as food and a typewriter.

Two years ago, the evening before schools closed for Thanksgiving, the circle learned of several South Laredo families who faced a bleak Thanksgiving with no food.

Unfortunately, the Evening Circle's treasury was as bare as the families' cupboards. Acting on faith, a circle member sent her husband to the supermarket to buy groceries enough to fill their station wagon. While he shopped, she telephoned church members who each pledged $10 to $25 toward the food baskets.

The typewriter was for a cerebral palsy student who could type more easily than he could write. During school hours, he had access to a typewriter, but he needed one at home for class assignments.

"One of our members had a portable electric typewriter in need of minor repairs," Mrs. Wilkins said. "She donated the machine, the circle paid for the repairs, and the student had his typewriter."

How does an organization with only three members come up with enough money to run a clothes closet? It comes from donations, most of them anonymous.

To insure that money will continue to be available, the circle recently staged a rummage sale.

It began with the generosity of one of Laredo's major department stores. The manager made an offer too good to turn down — display tables and racks, like new stereo cabinets, rolls and rolls of gift-wrap paper, a microfiche reader. The bonanza filled four pickup trucks and two station wagons.

First Christian Church's Evening Circle spent about $1,500 this year on its clothes closet. Members have faith that the rummage sale would raise enough money to clothe even more needy children in the coming year.

INSURANCE WANTED

What we would not give to protect this innocent girl of ours from the hurts and pains of life. If there were an insurance policy that could do this we would pay any premium. There is, however, no such policy, for God has not made the world that way. God has made a world in which pain and suffering are always a part of life, but never forget, He pronounced that world, all of it, good. It is our failure to trust in God that makes us want to keep part of life from ourselves and from our children. We think part of life is bad and would rule it out. Only trust in God will enable us to deal adequately with life's sufferings and hurts. This is the divine life insurance which guarantees life eternal, believe in God! Be sure you make it to Church this week to learn of Him and praise His Holy Name.

Is something wrong with your life — an inner restless dissatisfaction? The answer to every human problem comes only from God our Maker. He alone can forgive and reassure. Through the church God has committed the provision and proclamation of His forgiveness and redeeming love. Without a church relation no one is securely related to God. Everyone should be in the Church and the Church should be in everyone!

Methodist church to present musical Sunday morning

As part of its regular morning worship services, the music ministry of the First United Methodist Church will present the musical "Side by Side" by Shelton Curry at 10:30 a.m. Sunday. The work will bring together two of the church's choirs: the Bethlehem Choir, made up of second through fifth graders, and the newly formed Senior Adult Choir. "It has been amazing to see how these two choirs, though separated by many years of age, have come together during the weeks of rehearsal," said Director Ken McDonald. "The musical makes the point that age doesn't matter, and these two choirs have proven that point," he said. Pastor Dr. Richard H. Whitwam invited the public to attend the special presentation. There will be no admission charge.

Charismatic movements widespread

By George R. Plagenz
After hearing a woman "speaking in tongues" in church recently, it occurred to me that I had not read in a long time about this phenomenon which was made headlines in the 1960s and early 1970s. I called an old seminary classmate who was one of the initial leaders of the charismatic movement in the Episcopal Church. "The reason you haven't been hearing about it," said the Rev. William Worman, rector of St. Andrew's Church in Mentor, Ohio, "is that the movement is now so widespread that it is no longer news." Once associated primarily with the Pentecostal churches like the Assemblies of God, the charismatic movement today has large followings, he said, in mainline denominations such as the Episcopal, Lutheran, and Methodist churches as well as the Roman Catholic Church. "And it is still growing," said Worman although, he added, it is somewhat disguised today under the title of "the church-renewal movement." Those who "speak in tongues" consider it the sign of their having been "baptized in the Holy Spirit." Both things are referred to in the Bible. John the Baptist spoke of being baptized in the Holy Spirit, and Jesus said one of the signs of a believer would be that he "shall speak with new tongues." It is in the Book of Acts, however, that the full story comes out. On the first day of Pentecost the disciples, according to the narrative, "were all filled with the Holy Ghost and they began to speak with other tongues" (i.e., in languages they had never spoken before). The charismatic movement ("charismatic" is a Greek word referring to "gifts of the Spirit") died out after a time in the early church. It was revived in the latter half of the 19th century by Protestants who felt their churches were too cold and uninspiring. They wanted to recapture the fire of the first disciples on Pentecost. "Holiness" groups began to spring up. Some of these churches are still flourishing today. Traditionally they have appealed to the poor and to those with little education. The new Pentecostal movement, which draws from middle-class, educated Christians of all denominations, dates back to the late 1950s when the Rev. Dennis Bennett created a stir in Episcopal circles by announcing at fashionable St. Mark's Church in Van Nuys, Calif., that he had spoken in tongues. Like a lot of other Episcopalians, Bennett had bridled himself on his "cool approach to the faith." He considered tongues-speaking "some kind of offbeat emotionalism" — until it happened to him. It can happen to anybody, said Bennett. He referred his listeners to Acts 8 where Peter and John came to the Samaritans who had been converted to Christianity and "prayed that they might receive the Holy Ghost... They laid their hands upon them and they received the Holy Ghost." It happens the same way today, said Bennett. You pray for the Holy Spirit to come into your life or those who have already received the Spirit will place their hands on your head. When you've "got it" you may start speaking in tongues. Words you have never heard before may start flowing out of you in a steady stream and you will have a marvelous sense of well-being. Others may not speak in tongues, but will experience a new-found joy in living. Others find they are able to perform healings. Jesus said this too would happen: "They shall lay their hands upon the sick and they shall recover." The Pentecostal movement still has its skeptics. They don't doubt the results in the believer's life, but they consider it something psychological, not supernatural. A study in tongues-speaking conducted by the National Institutes of Mental Health concluded that "speaking in tongues is an overflowing kind of emotion so overpowering that it gives rise to speaking in non-conscious language. It provides release from tensions and brings great feelings of peace and relaxation which are apparently lasting."

Retired Israeli spymaster writes thrillers, grows roses

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Isser Harel, the spymaster who built Israel's secret service into an organization respected for daring and precision, now spends his time pottering among rose bushes and writing thrillers.

The retired chief of the Mossad intelligence service and its longest-reigning head is as nondescript as John Le Carre's fictional British spy chief, George Smiley.

Even though the wizened, 5-foot-2 Harel is the antithesis of the dashing James Bond, the Russian-born Israeli personally took part in many operations.

"It wasn't a desire for adventure that brought me into that business," Harel said during a three-hour interview at his home in suburban Tel Aviv.

"What propelled me all those years was a feeling of a mission, a duty," said Harel, whose career began before Israel was founded in 1948.

He said he was convinced that all means were justified to safeguard the Jewish state against the Arab and other enemies who sought to destroy it, but he is proud of what he called "the moral standards" he set in Mossad's early days.

According to newspaper accounts, Harel once fired an operative for using free tickets to take a girl to the movies, tickets that the man was supposed to use to eavesdrop on Soviet agents meeting at the theater.

Harel has been retired for 22 years, but he is almost obsessed with several of his old cases that were never closed, especially that of Nazi arch-criminal Dr. Josef Mengele, who slipped out of Buenos Aires just a few weeks ahead of Harel in 1960.

His best-known caper was the abduction from Argentina of Adolf Eichmann, the officer in charge of Nazi Germany's liquidation of six million Jews.

Harel and his men located Eichmann in Buenos Aires, kidnapped him and flew him to trial in Israel, where he was convicted and hanged in 1962.

It was not the most complicated or dangerous operation he took part in, said Harel, but one of the few that ever became known. By law, even the name of the Mossad chief is kept secret. The Israeli public only discovered Harel's name several years after he resigned.

Harel stepped down in 1963 after a dispute with his patron and then-prime minister David Ben-Gurion. "I was forced to leave. I could not work against my principles," he said.

He won't talk about the exact reason he quit, but newspaper files indicate that he and Ben-Gurion disagreed on how Israel should deal with former Nazi German scientists working in Egypt on rockets and atomic weapons.

Harel advocated all-out war against them and the West German government, while Ben-Gurion insisted the leaders in Bonn were innocent of collusion with what was a private German enterprise.

Harel does not deny that Mossad was responsible for several letter-bombs mailed to the scientists. "The Germans were a threat to Israel," he said with a shrug.

Several years after retiring, he was elected to the Knesset (Parliament). But when his term ran out in 1974 he turned to lecturing, writing — including two thrillers — and indulging his passion for opera and Chinese food.

The only thing he regretted, Harel added, was having to end his search for Mengele when he resigned. "I had invested more efforts in looking for Mengele than I did for Eichmann," said Harel.

The Israeli plane which flew to Buenos Aires to pick up Eichmann brought, on Harel's orders, an armed commando unit which was to infiltrate the house of an American family to find out whether its members were "on the level" or were covering for Mengele.

But on the same day, Harel recounted, "we got information that the Americans were bona fide and Mengele had left the city several weeks before."

The search for the Nazi doctor who performed cruel genetic experiments on Jews at the Auschwitz death camp led Harel's agents to the jungle area where the borders of Argentina, Paraguay and Brazil meet. They pinpointed a heavily guarded mansion in the Paraguayan town of Encarnacion as Mengele's refuge. "They waited outside for weeks but didn't see him," he said.

Several futile attempts later, Harel decided that the only way to get a positive identification of Mengele would be to lure him out of South America to Europe, where he has close family.

"He is still alive. If he weren't, his family and friends would make sure they brought convincing facts—that is a body—to prove he was dead so we would leave them alone," said Harel.

Costumed 'Uncle Sam' speaks on getting the most out of life

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Several times a week, Budd Miller puts on a blue velvet coat and a top hat ringed with stars, and goes to talk to children.

He tells them how they can overcome obstacles and take charge of their lives, and how they can find their unique places in this world.

With the costume, the white-haired, bearded Miller is the spitting image of Uncle Sam.

When he talks, people listen. "Sam is amazing," said Miller, a Scottsdale resident. "I can say things as Uncle Sam that I could never say as myself."

Miller also tours the country, giving motivational speeches at conventions or company meetings. And he hosts a radio program and a cable television show that also help spread stories of how ordinary people found their special niches.

"The thing we all want to do is to be unique," said Miller, who himself admits a desire to be different from other talk show hosts. People who have beaten the odds are his special favorites.

"They're all motivational-type stories," he said.

One example is Pete Studwick, a man who runs uphill marathons. Studwick has no arms or feet — he runs on the stumps of his legs "in considerable pain and difficulty," Miller said.

But those kinds of people are Miller's heroes. Miller said he had become interested in motivational stories while he was traveling as a professional speaker. Everywhere he went, he said, he met people who had stories of personal triumph.

"I never got tired of those stories," he said.

Miller began incorporating them into his speeches and found that other people loved them, too.

Miller described his speaking style as evangelistic. Even grownups like his Uncle Sam speeches, he said.

Miller's Uncle Sam impression grew out of a comment by a guest on his television show that he looked just like the character. Now, when he puts on the costume made by a Scottsdale tailor, he assumes many of the characteristics attributed to our national symbol.

The year ahead should be a very fortunate one for you where love and romance are concerned. If you haven't met Mr. or Ms. Right, there's a chance you will in this time frame.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Being your own person and doing your own thing has its merits, but don't push it to extremes today. Others may find you offensive if you do. Trying to patch up a romance? The Matchmaker set can help you to understand what it might take to make the relationship work. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Guard against tendencies today to anticipate the outcome of events in a negative fashion. If you think you're a loser, you'll be one.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A crafty acquaintance who knows how to manipulate you and your generous nature may try to pull something cute today. Be on guard.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) To achieve your objectives today, you must plan out your moves in advance. Without a blueprint, you are apt to stumble.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Self-doubts and caution are not one and the same, so try not to confuse the two today. Tread warily but keep hope in your heart.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you function well in partnership arrangements, but today joint ventures may not work out to your liking. Play it solo.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A cool head is essential today to make sensible decisions. If you allow yourself to be pressured, your judgment will be impaired.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Keep in mind today that duties you now shove aside will eventually require attention. They won't be as easier later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not take financial gambles today on little-known ventures. Your ignorance could cost you a pretty penny.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you and your mate have a disagreement today, try to resolve it between yourselves. Do nothing that could involve innocent bystanders.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is not a day to be overly critical of others. Even if you feel you have constructive suggestions, keep them to yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to restrict your shopping today to small cash purchases. Don't let your extravagant impulses propel you into new debts.

Larry Bird (33) leads a Celtics' fast break.

Celtics, Trail Blazers advance to semi-finals

By The Associated Press

What do Boston's Larry Bird and Portland's Audie Norris have in common?

Well, at least for one night they shared the spotlight, leading their teams to the National Basketball Association conference semifinals.

Playing despite a painful right elbow, Bird returned to the Celtics lineup to score 34 points Thursday, including two free throws with 23 seconds to play to snap a 115-115 tie, and led Boston to a 117-115 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers in Game Four.

Norris, a seldom-used forward, was an unlikely hero as Portland eliminated the Dallas Mavericks, 115-113, in four games.

"I wasn't really hampered by the elbow at all," said Bird, who didn't play in the Celtics' loss to the Cavaliers on Tuesday because of persistent bursitis and bone chips in the elbow. "Once I got in the game, I think the excitement drove me over the limit."

Bird also paced the Celtics with 14 rebounds and seven assists as Boston captured the best-of-five games.

The Cavs, in the playoffs for the first time since 1979, were surprisingly tough in the series, losing the first two games in Boston 126-123 and 108-106 respectively, before winning Game Three 105-98.

Forced into action when both Portland centers, Sam Bowie and Mychal Thompson, fouled out, Norris scored on a layup with 22 seconds to play to give the Trail Blazers a 113-111 lead. And when Brad Davis of Dallas sank two free throws to knot the score again, Norris sank a 10-foot baseline jumper to win the game.

"I never know how many minutes I'm going to play," Norris said, "so I try to make the most of them."

Norris finished with nine points — seven in the final period. Kiki Vandeweghe paced the Blazers with 27 points, while Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 39 points.

"I would like to think Portland won this series, we didn't lose it," Mavericks' Coach Dick Motta said.

"We played about as well as we can play and they answered every challenge."

"It was a magnificent series," said Portland Coach Jack Ramsay. "I give huge credit to Dick Motta and the Mavericks. They played great basketball."

In games tonight, Milwaukee travels to Chicago, Philadelphia is at Washington, Houston is at Utah and Denver is at San Antonio for the fourth game in each of those series. Earlier this week, Detroit ousted New Jersey and the Los Angeles Lakers eliminated Phoenix to advance to the conference semifinals.

"Bird came through from the time he came out on the court," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "I think the elbow was bothering him a little, but he's a gutsy person."

Cleveland had three chances to tie or win the game following Bird's final points, but John Bagley missed a three-point attempt, smark West failed on a tip-in attempt and World B. Free's three-point shot was blocked by Dennis Johnson.

NL roundup

Dodgers move into first place

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

According to their manager, the Los Angeles Dodgers aren't doing many things right these days. As a matter of fact, winning is about all they can do.

"Things have been going very good for us despite the problems," said Tom Lasorda said after Thursday night's 6-3 victory over the San Diego Padres put the Dodgers into first place in the National League West over the defending league champions.

For the first time this season, the Dodgers scored as many as six runs. And for a change, they didn't make as many errors as they usually do. Along with the offensive and defensive deficiencies, the Dodgers have also been hit with a rash of injuries.

"The guys have been playing hard," Lasorda said. "Everybody is chipping in. We're getting the clutch hits and the pitching has been exceptional."

In other NL action Thursday, Atlanta edged Houston 3-2; Montreal tripped St. Louis 4-2, and San Francisco stopped Cincinnati 7-3.

Rick Honeycutt earned his first victory of the season, scattering four hits in eight innings, and Mike Marshall and Mike Scioscia drove in two runs apiece to key the Dodger win.

With the score tied 1-1, the Dodgers broke it open with a three-run sixth, the first on a run-scoring single by Al Oliver and the other two on Scioscia's two-out, bases-loaded single.

The Dodgers got their final two runs in the seventh off reliever Luis DeLeon on run-scoring single by Pedro Guerrero and Marshall's fielder's-choice grounder. Reliever Tom Niedenfuer gave up a run-scoring single to Terry Kennedy and a sacrifice fly to Carmelo Martinez before shutting the door on the Padres in the ninth.

Honeycutt, who had surgery during the off-season, said he's still not 100 per cent.

"Overall, it was good," he said of his performance. "I need to keep getting a little stronger. As the game went on I was able to get better control of the sinker.

"I'm pleased with the way I'm throwing. It'll come with time. I'm just learning my arm all over again. Never having had surgery, you don't know how it's going to respond."

Braves 3, Astros 2

A throwing error by shortstop Dickie Thon allowed the tie-breaking run to score and Terry Harper's run-scoring single capped a two-run 10th inning, leading Atlanta over Houston.

Brad Komminsk scored from first base on an infield single by Dale Murphy and an error by Thon, snapping a 1-1 tie. Harper, pinch hitting for winning pitcher Zane Smith, 2-1, then singled in Murphy for a 3-1 Atlanta lead.

That turned out to be the winning run for Atlanta, when the Astros scored in their half of the 10th on a home run by Phil Garner.

Bruce Sutter picked up his fourth save by pitching the 10th for the Braves. Dave Smith, 2-1, was the loser.

Expos 4, Cardinals 2

Andre Dawson drove in two runs, one of them with a homer that triggered a two-run fourth inning, to lead Montreal over St. Louis.

With one out in the fourth, Dawson hit a 1-2 pitch by Danny Cox, 1-1, for his third homer of the year and the Expos' first hit of the game. Dan Driessen then doubled and scored one out later when Tim Wallach singled, giving the Expos a 3-2 lead they never relinquished.

Winner Bill Gullickson, 3-1, allowed six hits and did not walk or strike out a batter in 6 2-3 innings. He was replaced by Jeff Reardon, who earned his fourth save with one-hit relief.

"That's got to be the best start I ever had," said Reardon. "But it's the fact we're 9-6 that's even better. Everybody's been picking us to finish last, and the guys are pumped up about it. I think we've surprised some people so far."

Giants 7, Reds 3

Chili Davis drove in four runs with two homers and a sacrifice fly and Jose Uribe scored the go-ahead run from second on an error by first baseman Pete Rose as San Francisco beat Cincinnati.

Uribe broke a 3-3 tie in the seventh inning when Rose, Cincinnati's player-manager, dropped an infield pop fly.

Mark Davis, 1-1, got the victory in relief of Jim Gott, who did not allow a hit until opposing pitcher Frank Pastore doubled in the sixth.

Denny McLain sentenced

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — After telling a judge he's suffered "shame, disgrace and humiliation," one-time major league pitching star Denny McLain was led from the courthouse in manacles to begin a 23-year sentence for racketeering, extortion and drug dealing.

"I'm guilty of greed, avarice ... bad judgment. I've been selfish but also a loving husband," McLain said during a sentencing hearing Thursday.

"I don't know how you get to where I am from where I was 17 years ago," he said, adding: "I'll pay for my conviction the rest of my life."

For baseball's last 30-game winner, it's been a long slide from the glory days of 1968 when he pitched the Detroit Tigers to a world championship.

In a packed courtroom, U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich admonished McLain for "failure to admit to yourself your own guilt," and sentenced him to eight years each for racketeering, conspiracy and extortion, to run concurrently.

And she gave the 41-year-old two-time Cy Young Award winner the maximum 15 years for trying to deal three kilos of cocaine in 1982, and fined him $8,900.

Marshals led McLain from the courtroom to a holding cell where he was permitted time with his wife, Sharon, their two daughters, who sobbed when sentence was imposed.

In golf regionals

Jett's injury hurts Pampa's chances

Clay Jett...broken hand may keep him out of regionals.

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa High golfer Clay Jett would like nothing better than to shed the restraints of a plaster cast and join his teammates for the Class 4A Regional Golf Tournament in Brownwood.

Jett, the lone senior and the No. 1 golfer on the Harvesters' team, broke his hand in a fall last Friday and missed out on Pampa's final district round at Borger. Jett is also likely to miss the Harvesters' trip to Brownwood April 30 and May 1, but not if the spunky senior can help it.

"I guess it all depends on what the coach says, but I'm going to try and play," Jett said, staring ruefully at his cast. "I just may take it off and see what happens."

Jett, who was the No. 3 medalist in the district race when the mishap occurred, did enter the singles division at district and shot a 94.

"I can drive a pretty good distance, about 170 yards, but I don't know where the ball is going to go," Jett said.

Head coach Mike Brent is pleased the Harvesters qualified for regionals, but he wasn't particularly happy with their play in the final round. The Harvesters shot a 330 to finish nine strokes behind first-place Canyon. Brent, however, feels that Jett's absence had a negative affect on the team.

"Clay not being there is one reason we didn't play like we're capable of playing," Brent added.

Jett was named to the first all-district golf squad ever picked by the league coaches. Other Harvesters selected were Jeff Langen, Dyran Crosier and Johnny Snuggs.

Brent, who is in his final year as Harvester coach, coached the Harvesters to their first ever state golf championship in 1984. Without the possibility of Jett in the lineup, Brent is hoping the Harvesters can at least make a good showing in the regionals this year.

"We hope we can get in there among the top four or five teams," Brent said. "I think the kids are going to go out and do their best, but they're actually getting ready for next season. That's when everybody is going to be back except for Clay."

Chief's Crown Derby favorite?

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Chief's Crown is virtually certain to be the favorite for the Kentucky Derby after an impressive victory in the $171,600 Blue Grass Stakes, and at least one trainer is awed by what could happen at Churchill Downs May 4.

Chief's Crown, unbeaten in three starts this year after winning the 2-year-old championship in 1984, turned his final Derby prep into a 5 1/2-length romp Thursday, covering the 1 1/8 miles of the Blue Grass in 1:47 3/5, just a fifth of a second off the track record.

Floating Reserve overcame Banner Bob by a head for second and Under Orders was another 11 lengths back in the four-colt race at Keeneland.

"I don't care who he's going to go against, he's going to whip them. He just played with those horses today," said trainer J.J. "Bud" Sarnier, whose Banner Bob won the Jim Beam and Hutcheson stakes this year. "Can anybody beat him in the Derby? No!"

Banner Bob broke on top, but Chief's Crown and Don MacBeth caught him in a few strides and never trailed again. Banner Bob was right with Chief's Crown as they turned for home, but the winner pulled away with ease in the stretch as Floating Reserve overtook Banner Bob for second.

With win betting only, the winner returned the minimum $2.60. Already a millionaire, he earned $111,540 and picked up a $16,200 Breeders' Cup premium Thursday.

Chief's Crown, was the odds-on choice of the 18,364 fans Thursday, and just about nailed down that role for the Derby.

MacBeth, who said he decided to take the lead when Banner Bob didn't seem to want it, showed the spirited son of Danzig his whip a few times, but didn't use it.

MacBeth called the Blue Grass a "nearly perfect" prep for the Derby.

Pampa hosting district meet for middle schools

Both Pampa seventh and eighth graders will be the teams to beat in a middle school boys' district track meet Saturday at Randy Matson Field.

Field events begin at 10 a.m., followed by the running events at 11.

"I feel like both our teams have a good chance to win," said coach Steve Porter. "Our seventh and eighth graders won the Pampa Invitational last weekend."

Valley View, Canyon, Dumas and Borger are the other teams entered in the district meet.

"It should be a very close meet, especially in the seventh grade division between Pampa and Canyon. Pampa beat Canyon by one point in the invitational," Porter said.

Canyon swept both divisions in last year's district meet. Pampa finished second in both divisions.

Red Raider Day planned at Pampa Country Club

The Top O' Texas Red Raider Club will hold its Red Raider Day Tuesday, May 14 at the Pampa Country Club.

Registration begins at 12:30 in the pro shop for the Florida Scramble Shotgun golf tournament. The scramble will be followed by cocktails and dinner at 6:30 p.m., and a program by the Texas Tech coaching staff at 7:30 p.m.

An auction for the Tech scholarship fund will also be held. Entry fee is $50, which includes the golf scramble, cart, cocktails, dinner and prizes.

Entry deadline is Sunday, May 12. Entries can be mailed to Elmer Wilson, Box 2337, Pampa, Tex., 79065, or Mickey Piersall, Pampa Country Club pro shop, Box 2835, Pampa, Tex., 79065. Call Wilson (806-669-2471) or Piersall (806-665-8431) for more details.

The golf scramble is for men only, but women are invited to the evening session, which will be $25 per person.

Checks should be made payable to Red Raider Club. All contributions will be tax deductible.

Stewart leads Houston Open by one stroke

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — If Payne Stewart makes any more trips to the fried chicken concession near the 18th fairway, he hopes it's only for lunch.

Stewart fired a 6-under par 66 over the Tournament Players Course at The Woodlands Thursday to take a one shot lead over four challengers after the first round of the $500,000 Houston Open.

His only unpleasant experience over the 7,042-yard course was on the tough No. 18 when he drove his tee shot off the fairway near a tent concession.

"I may go back for lunch, it spelled pretty good," Stewart said.

His six-iron shot plopped into the water hazard in front of the green leading to his only bogey of the day. But it was good enough for a one shot lead over Mike Nicolette, Calvin Peete, David Frost and Keith Ferguson.

England's Ken Brown and Buddy Gardner were another shot back with 4-under par 68s and 15 others finished at 69.

"I just got too quick with the six-iron on the last hole and hit it in the water," said Stewart, a former Southern Methodist University golfer. "It was kind of a bad way to end the day."

Stewart's last tournament victory was in the 1983 Walt Disney

Classic but he finished 11th on the tour money list last year with $288,795. It was the most money ever won by a golfer who didn't win a tournament.

Stewart ripped up the front nine with four birdies, including long putts of 25, 14 and 15 feet. On the back side he scored birdies on 12, 13 and 16. He parred No. 17 before suffering his only lapse of the day on the final hole, which was the second toughest hole of the day.

Stewart's highest finish this year was a tie for fifth place in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

"I've just got to keep knocking at the door (for a victory)," Stewart said. "I feel comfortable with my game right now and this is my last chance to get into the Tournament of Champions."

Frost, a rookie from South Africa, birdied three of the final four holes en route to his best tournament start this year.

Peete missed an ace by 4 inches on the par three No. 16 hole that would have given him a share of the first round lead.

Fifty-five players broke par under perfect playing conditions and 22 more equaled par.

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, trying to win his third consecutive tournament, shot a 2-under 70.

Legends of Golf

Wright, Whitworth more than gimmick

AUSTIN (AP) — Mickey Wright and Kathy Whitworth proved they weren't just a publicity gimmick for the $500,000 Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament.

There were some red faces in the men's clubhouse Thursday after the Wright-Whitworth team posted a 5-under par 65 playing from the back tees.

It was the first appearance for women in a PGA-sanctioned event against men in head-to-head competition.

Defending champions Billy Casper and Gay Brewer were among five teams to beat the women in the opening round of the 72-hole, better-ball event. They shot an 8-under par 62.

"I'm elated," said the 45-year-old Whitworth, winner of 87 professional events, the most in golf history.

"I'm delighted," said Wright, 50, a winner of 82 tournaments who came out of a five-year retirement to play here.

The boys in the locker room were almost speechless.

"Were they playing from the same tees?" asked Bob Goalby. "I didn't think they could do that to be quite honest."

The teams of Ken Still and Roberto DeVicenzo and Charlie

Sifford and Jim Ferree were locked in second place with a 7-under par 63.

Art Wall and Doug Sanders and Orville Moody and Billy Maxwell were at 6-under 64.

Tied for fifth place with Wright and Whitworth were Peter Thomson-Kel Nagle, Fred Haas-Dick Mayer, Miller Barber-Goalby, and Don January-Gene Litter.

The women were paired with January and Litter today.

Whitworth birdied four of the first six holes and chipped in a 30-footer from off the green on the 18th hole. Wright saved par on two holes Whitworth had bogied.

However, Brewer, who had six birdies himself, predicted the women weren't going to win.

"I don't feel they are capable of winning the tournament but they are going to beat some teams out here," said Brewer. "Their score is fantastic."

Wright said she was a "nervous Nellie" on the first tee.

"On the first tee, I felt like a teen-ager who never had a club in her hand," Wright said. "I was frightened to death."

Whitworth said, "I was really nervous but I can imagine how nervous Mickey had to be."

Gunslingers change owners briefly

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A court battle between rancher-oilman Clinton Manges and Aztec Petroleum Co. has resulted in a short-lived ownership change for the San Antonio Gunslingers USFL team.

Manges owns the United States Football League franchise.

But earlier this month, he transferred ownership of the team to Bud Haun, president of South Texas Sports, the Gunslingers' holding company.

As Manges' attorney Marynell Maloney explains it, Haun's ownership of the team was for legal purposes only in the Manges-Aztec dispute.

"This has zero to do with football," she said.

Haun had his brief flirtation with owning the Gunslingers after Manges lost a lawsuit with Aztec.

Manges' natural gas line company ManGas Transmission, had a contract to pipe natural gas for Aztec.

Aztec officials say ManGas never paid for some of the gas, so the Dallas firm filed suit in Maverick County, where the wells are located.

After a December trial there, a judge ordered ManGas to pay $1.7 million in damages.

Manges decided to appeal, because Mrs. Maloney said ManGas was not liable for the payments.

To delay paying the judgment until the appeal was handled, Mrs.

Maloney said Manges attempted to post a $5 million bond.

Haun attempted to post part of that bond, and in his filings he entered a sworn affidavit claiming full ownership of the Gunslingers had been transferred to him.

SMU officials called to testify

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University officials say the institution's president, athletic director and football coach are to testify this weekend before a NCAA committee investigating alleged football infractions.

The Dallas Morning News reported in today's editions that SMU President L. Donald Shields, Athletic Director Bob Hitch and Coach Bobby Collins were expected to appear before the NCAA committee on infractions in Kansas City.

The panel would hear cases from today until Monday afternoon.

officials said. They said the closed-door meeting involving SMU's football program was expected to be completed before Sunday, the News reported.

The officials — Shields, Hitch, Collins and school attorney John McElhaney — checked into a Kansas City hotel Thursday night, the newspaper said.

The NCAA has focused, since SMU was notified in March 1983 that it was the subject of a preliminary investigation, on the recruitment of certain university players, the role of Mustang boosters in recruiting and the financing of players' automobiles.

David Berst, the NCAA director of enforcement, said that some type of punishment is levied in about 90 percent of the cases heard by the committee on infractions.

"In the vast majority of cases, once it gets to a point where it's going before the committee on infractions, then we've got some kind of penalty against the school," said Berst.

Less state controls in India, greater private sector role

By BRAMA CHELLANEY
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A quiet, capitalist revolution has been taking place in Indian economic policy since Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi assumed power more than five months ago.

The emphasis in the Gandhi economic strategy is on less state regulations, a greater role for the Indian private sector and the lifting of curbs on high technology imports.

The aim of Gandhi and his market-oriented economic advisers is to rapidly develop this country of 750 million people, 51 percent of whom live below the poverty line.

"The new policy is clear: The government should no longer be the power above the people, to be lobbied, petitioned and propitiated for favors," said Nani A. Palkhivala, fiscal expert and former ambassador to the United States.

The Gandhi approach is viewed with concern by public sector-oriented economists who believe the prime minister is dismantling the socialist policies of his predecessors — his mother, Indira Gandhi, and grandfather, Jawaharlal Nehru, who governed India for all but five of the 37 years since independence.

"The new economic policy that is emerging will promote inequities and break the tradition of self-reliance which has helped us to build a powerful technological base," said economist Raj Krishna.

Gandhi has said his government will follow a liberal economic policy to accelerate Indian modernization with the help of private capital and sophisticated foreign technology.

Some of Gandhi's recent moves, especially the slashing of corporate and wealth taxes and cutting government regulations, have prompted commentators to compare his initiatives to those of President Reagan. Like Reaganomics, the Gandhi approach is based on investment and productivity.

Economic liberalization already has encouraged many Western and Japanese companies to reconsider business opportunities in India.

The U.S. soft drink giant, PepsiCo, recently signed a joint-venture pact to invest $125 million in the local manufacture of its famous beverages. And IBM and Coca-Cola are said to be interested in returning after a seven-year lapse.

According to the prime minister, if India is to progress, "to keep up with the world," it needs to rapidly modernize its electronics industry. "Electronics is really like the nervous system of a nation," he said.

No funds for probe

AUSTIN (AP) — The state can't afford to undertake an in-depth probe of conflicting claims made by convicted murderer Henry Lee Lucas about the number of people he killed, Gov. Mark White says.

Lucas at times has confessed to some 360 murders.

Attorney General Jim Mattox, saying Lucas' confessions may have allowed real killers to go free in some cases, has sought an investigation of Lucas' claims. Mattox and White discussed it on Wednesday.

TROUBLED BRIDGE—The Poughkeepsie Railroad Bridge, first used in 1888, was damaged by fire on May 8, 1974 and has not been used for rail traffic since then. The freight-only bridge is 212 feet high. Conrail sold the 6,767-foot-long bridge for $1 to a group of investors.

Preservationists at odds with owners of 1888 bridge

By STEPHEN W. BELL
Associated Press Writer
POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — Railroad buffs call it the Golden Gate of the East and an American Eiffel Tower, but a rusty railroad bridge across the Hudson River is now more orphan than celebrity.

The Consolidated Rail Corp. recently sold the 6,767-foot-long bridge for $1 to developers, but preservationists are worried about the future of the 31,000-ton iron and steel Poughkeepsie Railroad Bridge.

Local groups learned after the sale of the 97-year-old bridge that the purchasers' agent had served 10 months in federal prison for misappropriating bank funds.

The bridge, 212 feet high, is on the National Register of Historical Places. It was completed in 1888, about the same time as the Eiffel Tower, and resembles that structure in design and construction, preservationists said.

Conrail said it sold the bridge, damaged by a fire almost 11 years ago, because it had no railroad function.

The double-track bridge, with its latticework span, began as a proposal by a local newspaper columnist in 1868. Twenty years and $10 million later, it was a reality.

Steel baron Andrew Carnegie joined Vassar College founder Matthew Vassar in dedicating the freight-only span, which was designed to connect New England manufacturing plants with Pennsylvania coal mines. It crosses the Hudson about 70 miles north of New York City.

But since that May 8, 1974 fire, the bridge has been a headache to this city of 30,000. The city sued Conrail after the fire and forced the railroad to spend $300,000 for maintenance. Richard Cantor, the city's corporation counsel, said maintaining the bridge represents "a massive obligation" for its owners.

Donald Pevsner, a Miami lawyer who said he had an option to buy the bridge in 1984, said he believed that Conrail sold the bridge to avoid responsibility for an accident and to save the cost of insurance.

Conrail solicited bids for the bridge's destruction and received offers ranging from $1.6 million for demolition to $17 million for dismantling, said Joseph Steiniger, co-chairman of the local Committee to Save the Bridge. Conrail was leaning toward dynamiting the bridge at the time of sale, he said.

But Steiniger and others said Conrail had faced the lengthy task of obtaining permits before demolition could begin.

"(Now) nobody knows exactly what they are going to do with it," said Steve Tkazyk, a 68-year resident who said he watched troops bound for the Pacific in World War II cross the bridge.

The bridge's owner is Railway

Management Associates, a partnership based in St. Davids, Pa. whose 15 members were not identified in the sale deed.

The group is represented publicly by an agent, Gordon S. Miller.

"There's a certain mystery that surrounds Mr. Miller, I guess because of his background. There were a great deal of worries about the sale," said Ann Loedy, the bridge committee's co-chairwoman.

Miller served 10 months of a two-year sentence in Allenwood (Pa.) Federal Prison Camp on a felony conviction for misappropriation of bank funds involving a bank in Wellsville, Pa., according to prison spokesman Boyd Searer. Miller stayed at the minimum-security prison from June 1974 until his parole in March 1975, Searer said.

Miller did not respond to repeated telephone calls and messages. A visit to his office, a taxi stand in the Philadelphia suburb of St. Davids, yielded a promise from an associate to contact The Associated Press to answer questions about the bridge owners. However, Miller never responded.
