Nebraskan Directs Campaign to Save Rice for China's Hungry Millions

SHANGHAI (REAP) — An American farmer, who learned to fight bugs in Nebraska, and a Norwegian agricultural expert are trying to save from two to five hundred thousand tons of rice this year for China's hungry millions.

For a year now Horace C. Traulsen of Paxton, Neb., and Frederick S. Gulbransen of Oslo have led China's war against a tiny worm, no bigger than a cutworm, which every season does enormous damage in the fertile rice fields of Kiangsi province.

On the average these rice-borers destroy 100,000 tons of rice a year. But every seventh year they get especially bad and do from two to five times their average damage. This is the seventh year.

The borer is small, and he does not live long. But he is hard to fight because he crawls inside the hollow stem of the rice plant where insecticides can not reach him. When UNRRA agricultural rehabilitation experts tried to help Chinese farmers return their war-ravaged farmlands to top production, their first problem was how to get at the borer.

Two or three weeks after the first rice planting, moths come out of the stubble of last year's crop and lay eggs on the leaves of the new seedlings. When these eggs hatch, there is a brief interval before they can eat their way inside the new plants. For that short time they can be reached with insecticides.

So the UNRRA men blended DDT powder in the UNRRA-sponsored National Pesticides Manufacturing plant here. They persuaded Kiangsi farmers to leave narrow rows unplanted, through which men armed with spray guns could walk to spray the young plants and kill newly-hatched larvae.

But this was not enough. They could not get them all, and they knew that those that escaped would be back next year, breeding again.

So they spent last winter persuading farmers to dispose of the old rice straw, which always had been saved, to get rid of larvae hiding in its stems. Proverbial legislation is now pending to require that this straw be destroyed after each harvest.

The program's success can not be told until all of Kiangsi's three rice crops have been harvested this year. But if the borer scourge can be held down in this dangerous seventh year, UNRRA and local experts are convinced that, within a few seasons, the borer can be destroyed entirely.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER
IF HE IS COMMUNIST

NEW YORK (AP) — Throughout the right of Congress to ask a witness whether he is a Communist, it has been argued that most of those who doubted this right never have been disturbed over enormous damage in the fertile rice fields of Kiangsi province.

When Congress asks a man whether he is a Communist, the question actually means "Are you a sworn enemy of the United States?"

In most, if not all cases, the Thomas committee on un-American activities had proof that the witness actually was a member of the Communist party at the time of their testimony. The Communist party is commonly believed to have a legal right to exist in the nation whose destruction by treachery and force is the party's purpose for existing. Some of our people think it is just cute or amusing — our quaint American way — that this is so, but a glance at other places in the world shows that it is terrible folly. Those who believe in the party's purpose for existing remark with pious condescension for our fears. "We are big and strong enough to keep our political health and ignore such a little infection." That is like arguing that it is a good thing to pick up a few germs on your bodies. The bugs are small and few, but that was so in Russia in 1917. It has been so in all the other countries which the Moscow conspiracy has conquered.

We have a right to wipe out the party and to execute the death sentence on those who join it. If the Constitution does not authorize this penalty, we can remedy that. It is our Constitution and we have found it necessary to pass certain amendments from time to time to accommodate new needs.

The purposes of our Constitution are to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense and secure the blessings of liberty. Certainly that statement cannot be distorted so as to shield the agents of a hostile foreign power; or to forbid us to protect our United States from scheming and violence against those purposes.

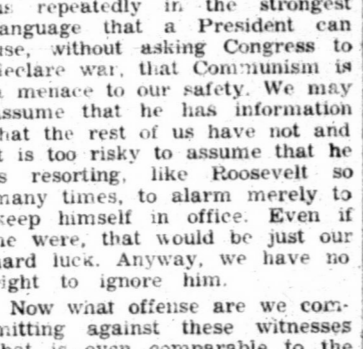

It is our own judges who have to be our own judges as to whether a member of the party or a fellow traveler who gives evidence of his devotion to the party's purpose is guilty of this hostility. Conceivably, a mistake might be made in some particular case, but after all, our justice is a human institution and we can do no better than our best. We try to be fair, but a man who goes along to a stickup just for the ride always takes risks.

During the recent hearings in Washington we were told that the question "Are you a member of an infringement of political freedom? But politics is the science

GRACIE REPORTS

By GRACIE ALLEN
Well, girls, I see that a lady orthopedic surgeon at the University of California says that if our high-heeled shoes hurt us, it's because our feet still are too much like those of our tree-climbing ancestor, the ape.

George, of course, pounced on that right away. He said women were making evolution move backward instead of forward, since no ape was ever silly enough to wear high-heeled shoes.

However I stopped that dead by pointing out that men are obviously closer to the ape than we are.
Their feet hurt even when they wear bedroom slippers.

Personally, I don't think this is where the shoe really pinches. In considering our possible resemblance to apes, I don't think it's the ape type of foot that's causing the trouble in the world today. It's the gorilla type of mind!

It is said that the five odors best liked by Americans are rose, pine, lilac, violet, and lily - of the valley.

How Many of Us Will Show Our Brand?

A fine old gentleman came into the office the other day and said he wanted to see "the editor." (There is always a certain ubiquity in the way the phrase is pronounced upon these occasions.) After he had been shown in, introduced, and so on, he pulled from his pocket a half-finished letter in longhand.

"I said to the editor," he said, "I want you to read this," he said, "and if you think you can publish it, I'll finish it." There were wrinkles in this citizen's face, and he was bent with age. He had a nice smile, and nothing much seemed to be bothering him—except probably the fate of his country. Many people know him, for he has lived in Pampa many years.

Yes, we told him, we would print it if it was not libelous and was in good taste—the two tests such mail is put to by editors if they are fair.

Of course, we added, we would have to have his name on it, either for publication with the letter or for our files—as he wished.

He leaned forward on his cane, said: "I don't believe in writing things I won't sign." Just like that.

Maybe that is one of the things wrong with us Americans. So many of us will give a sort of off-the-record lip-service support to freedom, but will we put our names on a demand for freedom's justice? Here was a Pampa man who had lived a good deal more than a half-century, and he held the simple philosophy that he would not sign anything he would not sign.

Offhand, we wonder just how much better world we might have if more of the "common people" didn't mind to sign their names to something they felt. Many are the times people approached "the editor" to get him to "write a piece" for some purpose—the kind of writing that would cause people to do certain things.

Often times they say something like this: "Now that's the idea. I don't want my name used, so you just write what you want to. But that is the idea."

"We wonder whether an idea is any good if the man who proposed it says 'leave my name out of it'."

Mexico Fighting Drug Business

MEXICO CITY.—Federal Attorney General Francisco Gonzalez de LaVega said last night he had been assured by the governors of the states of Sonora, Sinaloa, and Durango that they would "cooperate" in the government's campaign to wipe out illicit drug business.

The attorney general, Health Department officials, and War Department officers, after completing a tour of the northern states last night announced arrest of "several" persons dealing in morphine and opium, among them "several police officers."

THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE?

At a time when we desperately need to elect a president who will not compromise with the forces of Marxism and the associated minority pressure groups, it looks as if every man in the running on either ticket is compromising.

The New Deal of Stassen and Dewey, their catering to union bosses and other minority blocs, is too well known to need repeating here.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

news behind the news

WASHINGTON Members of Congress got a few grains of comfort from the European situation from off-the-record assurances that American aid should restore the principal western nations to a stronger position industrially and economically than they occupied before Hitler's 1939 invasion.

Again and again, Secretary Marshall and other Administration spokesmen were asked how confident they were that the plan had not been correctly described as "operations rahole," a phrase which so many M.C.'s have employed.

Although he did not give absolute assurance of its success, he thought that the anti-Communist bloc of Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg and France would become going nations again by 1951 as result of any long-term recovery program.

In fact, his comparison of de-stabilization in France, the pivotal country on the continent, and her present state surprised those of his listeners who, not having served on the Herter-Eaton Committee, did not make an on-the-ground study. Here is a revealing account from a confidential report on France as it lay prostrate on Liberation Day in May of 1945 and as it stands now:

FRANCE — "France emerged from the war with her economic system badly distorted in comparison with the stability of her prewar economy. Prior to 1929, food represented only ten percent of her imports, and France was nearly self-sufficient in basic food requirements.

Other raw materials, however, including such things as coal and almost all of her petroleum, constituted seventy percent of French imports. On balance, France had a substantial trade deficit, which was usually covered without difficulty by corresponding earnings from commercial sources such as shipping services, tourist trade, etc.

The United States in 1938 supplied eleven percent of French imports.

HAVOC For the first time, French statesmen, economists and military leaders disclosed to foreign investigators the real extent of the havoc which the Germans wreaked on their country during the invasion and occupation.

The loss during the war as a result of destruction and seizures of the enemy has been estimated as high as $21,000,000,000, but this takes no account of the capital deterioration due to lack of maintenance and raw materials, and general dislocation of economic relationships.

The extent of the shock to French industry is graphically illustrated by the index of industrial production (1935=100) which averaged 41 for 1944 and stood at only 60 even at the end of 1945. (Incidentally, 1938 was not a prosperous or productive year — Ed note.)

DAMAGE — "In terms of physical damage, it is estimated that in France one building out of twenty-two had been destroyed or damaged, as compared with one out of twenty-five in Holland, one out of thirty-eight in Belgium, and one out of sixty-five in England and occupation by the French Government.

"The damage may well be overestimated, as war damage usually is. But it is critically serious. The effect on the productivity of the labor force has been equally striking. The French general average being 75 percent of the prewar base."

COMEBACK — The French comeback, as well as the Paris planners' eventual hopes under the by substituting such a man as Sen. Byrd for Harry Truman; Ike would make a good vice-presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket — and maybe he but they know they can't. So far, Henry Wallace, on the extreme end of the spectrum, has worked his Red bluff to keep the party from returning to the people — who have shown in popular polls a definite turn toward conservatism.

WALLACE LIKES IKE If Harry Truman could tie on to his train as vice-presidential candidate, his present chief of staff, Eisenhower, he doubtless would throw up his hat and let out a holler; because Ike would drag in many a mother's vote. And Ike might possibly accept such an offer if he found that he could not have the Republican nomination for the No. 1 job.

Here again, we are threatened with a candidate who seems only too happy to play ball with minority pressure groups. Eisenhower has been so long in the lead that it is not reasonable to expect him to think otherwise. If his politics had been objectionable to the late Great Red father Ike never would have had a top flight appointment. These top jobs aren't filled just by accident.

The leftingers go for Ike. Wallace says he would suit him on any ticket. Claude Pepper says was hinting that if he should be

Individuality and Well Being

Since we have so generally discarded the rights of an individual and are so much inclined to run to the state for our well being, I am continuing to quote and comment on the opinions of John Stuart Mill in his essay "On Liberty." I quote:

It is useful that while mankind are imperfect there should be different opinions, so it is that there should be different experiments of living; that free scope should be given to varieties of character, short of injury to others; and that the worth of different modes of life should be proved practically, when any one thinks fit to try them.

It is desirable, in short, that in things which do not primarily concern others; and that the worth of different modes of life should be proved practically, when any one thinks fit to try them.
