

RRC to consider probe of illegal perforations reports

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

AUSTIN - The Texas Railroad Commission (RRC) will meet June 3 to consider whether to investigate allegations of illegal perforations in wells of Panhandle independent oil producers.

E. Ray Grasshoff, RRC information specialist, said in a telephone conversation Thursday that the commissioners had discussed the allegations at their regular Monday meeting and considered the possibility of investigating the claims.

Questions about the perforations arose during recent testimony before the commission concerning the "white oil" conflicts between the majors and a number of independent oil producers.

Grasshoff, clarifying reports in another area newspaper, said the commissioners have not yet made the decision to investigate the perforation issue.

"They just plan to talk about it" at the June 3 meeting, he said.

The commissioners did direct the staff to put the matter on the next agenda for consideration.

The discussion last Monday concerned whether to publish notice of the intention to consider the issue at the June 3 meeting, he explained. The commissioners decided to publish the notice, but they have not yet directed examiners to begin investigations into the alleged perforations.

The RRC commissioners will make that decision at their next meeting, Grasshoff said.

The commission usually meets every Monday. But they will not meet this coming Monday because of the Memorial Day holiday.

In other action regarding the Panhandle Field controversy, the commissioners directed the legal staff to write a letter to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) requesting a status report on the federal agency's pending decision in the Dorchester Gas Producing Co. vs. Stowers Oil and Gas Co. case.

The matter of alleged perforations into gas-producing strata has already been brought up before FERC and a district state court trial.

The issue came up before the RRC during a discussion of a statewide rule about how oil wells are perforated, Grasshoff said.

The commissioners, meeting with members of the Oil and Gas Division, asked the staff if they knew of problems in the Panhandle Field involving any illegal perforations.

In testimony during a hearing on the Panhandle Field conflicts over the counting of liquefied hydrocarbons as crude oil for well classification purposes, witnesses for Phillips Petroleum Co. claimed some of the independents' wells in question had been perforated in different places than listed on reports to the commission.

In testimony at FERC hearings and at the Dorchester vs. The Harlow Corporation trial last summer in Lubbock, spokesmen for the majors made similar claims.

At issue is the large amount of gas the independents have been pumping from their oil wells.

The independents have claimed they have been pumping only casinghead gas, a natural by-product of oil production. But others have testified the independents could not be producing such large amounts of casinghead gas from their oil wells.

The independents' rights to casinghead gas production have been upheld by former District Judge Robert Montgomery in the Harlow trial and by the federal administrative judge in her recommended decision following the FERC hearings.

But Dorchester and other majors have claimed many of the independents have perforated into gas-producing formations in the well bore above the oil-producing strata to increase their gas production rate.

In Lubbock and Washington, D.C., Dorchester had argued they had the rights to any natural gas in the Panhandle Field on their leases. But in both places, Dorchester was told they had no claim to casinghead gas, only to natural gas in other than oil-producing strata.

The independents had tried to argue that any gas coming from an oil well should be classified as casinghead gas. At one point

Fee increases one vote away from approval

AUSTIN (AP) - Senate-House compromises on the 1986-87 state spending bill and a $150 million increase in state fees to help pay for it are ready for a final vote by legislators.

The fee increases would affect a wide variety of Texans, whether they want to drive a car, file a civil court suit, drill an oil well or dump hazardous wastes.

Approval of the $36.5 billion general appropriations bill and about $700 million in revenue-raising proposals, including the increased fees, would clear the way for adjournment of the 69th Legislature on Monday - without a tax bill.

An agreement on the spending bill was reached Wednesday and the finishing touches put on the measure Thursday.

The jump in cost of state fees and permits came Thursday night as negotiators worked out the differences between a $225 million Senate bill and the $106 million House measure.

The vote was unanimous in the 10-member conference committee after little more than an hour of discussion.

The new and increased fees approved included:

- Increasing the annual motor vehicle inspection fee from $5.25 to $7.75 for used cars, plus a new two-year fee of $15 for new cars and trucks. Earlier the committee had approved a drivers license fee increase of $10 to $16.

- Raising the filing fee for civil suits in district courts from $25 to $75, with $10 going to the county where filed. Child custody suits could be filed for the current $25.

- Setting a hazardous waste permit fee from the Department of Water Resources at $2,000 to $50,000 and raising the water permit fee from $5,000 to $25,000.

- Raising the cost of personalized car license tags from $25 to $75 a year.

- Raising the examination fee for emergency medical aides from $15 to $25 and the permit for fleets of EMS vehicles from $500 to a maximum of $2,000.

- Setting fees of $300 to $750 for home health care facilities.

- Establishing surface mining fees of $120 per acre and charging $50 fee for expediting oil and gas well drilling permits.

- Setting a new fee of $250 to $750 for the attorney general's review of bond issues.

"We're through," Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, said of the 1986-87 appropriations bill after two meetings Thursday to iron out remaining technical differences in a $36.4 billion House bill and a $36.8 billion Senate bill.

The Thursday session added more than $1 million to the compromise announced Wednesday, if several legislative measures that have passed at least one house are finally approved.

Jim Oliver, director of the Legislative Budget Board, said there is still no exact "bottom line" on the spending bill, but that they are confident it could be covered by expected state revenue over the next two years.

In addition to present revenue sources, the Legislature has counted on three other revenue-producing issues in 1986-87 to avoid any new taxes.

The supplemental financing plans are:

- Increased state fees and permits.

- Increased tuition for state college and university students totaling $285.8 million for the next two years. The measure has been sent to Gov. Mark White who said he intends to sign it.

- Reduction of the state's contribution to teachers' and state employees' retirement funds for a two-year revenue gain of $80 million.

Local grads receive diplomas

By LARRY HOLLIS

Ending their 12 grades of public school, 209 graduating seniors received their diplomas Thursday night during Pampa High School's commencement exercises in the McNeely Field House.

Marching in to the strains of the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance" played by the Harvester Band, the graduates took their seats before families and friends who had crowded into the field house.

Presiding over his final graduation program, retiring Principal Paul Payne said, "Let's make this a nice occasion for the graduating Class of 1985."

In her commencement address, salutatorian Michelle Eakin noted, "Tonight we gather with many thoughts and feelings" in preparation for taking "one giant step into our adulthood."

Eakin recalled the memories the students had of their school years, but advised, "We should all be looking forward to our tomorrows."

She encouraged the graduates to keep their memories and recounted some specific accomplishments and activities of individuals and groups during the school year. Those making significant accomplishments "are all people who pursue excellence," she said. Their examples "can be an inspiration to us," she stated.

Eakin recalled activities in which students had banded together, sometimes in victory, sometimes in defeat. But "when we stand together, we are all winners," she declared.

Specifically mentioning the numbers of friendships that had grown among the students, she said, "Our friendship is so valuable," forming a gold chain of links, strong and pleasant ties that can endure forever.

Eakin ended her address by singing "Friends Are Friends Forever," receiving a standing ovation from her fellow classmates.

Senior Class President John Tarpley observed that goals of varying sorts had enabled the seniors to reach the moment of graduation. The efforts of three main groups had served as major influences upon those goals: "our teachers, our parents and ourselves," he said.

Teachers had exerted the major influence on the academic success of those seniors receiving their diplomas, Tarpley said. Referring to the recent education reforms imposed on the school systems in the state, Tarpley said teachers and students had worked together in the past year.

"It seems this year teachers and students were closer together" in implementing and adapting to the changes, he said.

Parents had helped with projects and assignments throughout the school years, aiding their children to reach their goals.

Judge orders psychiatric exam for child sexual abuse suspect

By JEFF LANGLEY
Senior Staff Writer

31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany has ordered a psychiatric examination for a Pampa woman charged on four counts of sexual abuse of children.

Gloria Dawn Killough Rogers, 31, of 631 S. Ballard, who also uses the name Gloria Dawn Vargas, was scheduled to plead guilty to one of the sex-abuse charges Wednesday morning, according to Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton.

The prosecutor, the defendant and her lawyer, James M. "Rowdy" Bowers, were present for a hearing at 10 a.m. Wednesday, when Judge McIlhany ordered a recess. After talking with the lawyers for about a half hour, the judge delayed the proceeding at least until the completion of the examination.

The judge ordered Rogers to be examined by Dr. Hugh Pennal of Amarillo at 1 p.m. June 3.

The suspect was indicted April 19 on the four counts of sexually abusing children. Rogers is accused of having "deviate sexual intercourse" with both a boy and a girl on March 8. The children were under age 17, according to the indictments.

The suspect, a cab driver, has been free on bonds totaling $12,000.

Rogers (Vargas), was comforted at Wednesday's scheduled court proceeding by a man identified as Junior Vargas.

Vargas is the woman's husband, Hamilton said. The man rubbed her arms, patted her on the shoulder, and whispered encouragement as the pair waited for the hearing to start.

After the hearing was called off, the couple stayed inside the small courtroom, trying to avoid a Pampa News photographer waiting in the hallway. Hamilton said Vargas asked him what would happen if the husband broke the photographer's camera. The prosecutor said he told Vargas that he likely would go to jail.

A woman who sat with the couple during the aborted hearing asked the photographer to leave. The woman, who refused to identify herself, said the suspect didn't want to be photographed for the newspaper because she wanted to "protect" some children involved in the case.

The couple finally left the courtroom and stepped into the hallway. Vargas led the way for the suspect, who shielded herself from the camera behind the rotund man.

As the couple walked past the photographer, the man grabbed the camera's lens.

"I better not see that picture in the newspaper, or I'm gonna..." he said.

While shielding her face with her hands, the woman then bolted from behind the man and ran down the stairs leading away from the third floor of the courthouse.

Miami graduates celebrate

By CATHY SPAULDING

MIAMI — With an original song for graduation and a brewery slogan — "Bring Out Your Best" — for a class motto, 17 high school graduates skipped the solemnities and turned their commencement Thursday into a celebration.

Retiring Miami School superintendent Bill Vestal was honored at the commencement by school board president Charles Clark, who presented him with a silver tray. Clark said that Vestal has "been in school since the first grade." Vestal has served nearly 35 years as a teacher, coach or administrator, with 28 of those as a school superintendent. He was Miami superintendent for five years.

Also honored was Valedictorian Cassandra Bailey, who was presented a $500 scholarship from Baylor University, where she plans to enroll this fall. She is also eligible for a scholarship from Texas state universities. Miami Principal Phil Barefield presented Bailey with a plaque and a certificate "to remember us by."

Kara Bengé, who plans to attend West Texas State University, was awarded a $150 scholarship from the Miami chapter of the Association of Texas Professional Educators for pursuing a career in education, the Miami Lions Club "Super Senior" award and a scholarship from the Delta Kappa Gamma sorority. Salutatorian Lara Gill was presented with a certificate for qualifying for state University Interscholastic league competition and for graduating second in her class.

Gill echoed the near festive mood of the commencement in her address. By merely mentioning such memories as milk souring in lockers, pickle fights and being "thrown out of the Homecoming Dance in Higgins USA," she brought assorted snickers and laughs out of her classmates and most of the audience.

"No one will forget us," she said, adding that she will not forget the friends she made of her classmates, teachers, community residents, administrators, parents and fans.

Bailey also waxed nostalgic in her commencement speech, recalling some of the feelings she had in the first grade, as a high school freshman and as a graduating senior.

"But it's time to step out in the world and give of ourselves," she added. "I feel we are all just beginning something new. This is not an ending but a beginning."

Accompanied by his wife Sharon, English teacher David Thweatt sang a song he had written for the occasion.

Graduation

Tarpley said. "They push us and expect so much of us" in helping students to reach the moment of graduation, he stated.

With the influences of teachers and parents, the graduates also owe their success to themselves, he said. "We stuck with it" amid all the activities and responsibilities at school, at home and, for some, at work, he explained.

Teachers offered guidance, knowledge and patience, and parents gave love, understanding and a desire for our success, Tarpley said. Now the graduates can move on to other goals, using the resources of the education they have gained, he urged.

Valedictorian Cami Dunham said the graduates "are ready to take our step into the big game of life."

Using the game metaphor, Dunham said parents had first acquainted the students with the rules of the game and provided continued guidance.

Teachers and administrators had been the coaches, giving additional guidance and providing the skills needed to play life's game, she said.

Friends made at school have offered support and encouragement, helping each other to learn the rules and skills, providing cheers for each other, Dunham said.

But the individuals themselves are the most important participants in the game of life, she observed. "We should believe in ourselves... follow our own individual dreams."

Dunham encouraged the graduates, as they leave high school behind, to have "the courage to stand alone in our beliefs" as they participate in the game.

She asked them to "turn to the very best in us" to win the game no matter what position they play in their careers, homes and other roles throughout life.

Following the commencement addresses, Principal Payne said "This class has met the requirements as set forth by the State Board of Education" and presented the class to Supt. James Trusty to receive their diplomas.

Supt. Trusty told the seniors, "You have had to contend with many changes" this past year, but "you have taken them in stride" and had a successful year, he said.

The graduates then filed by to receive their diplomas. Assisting Trusty and Payne were Vice Principal Tim Powers and Assistant Principal Jane Steele.

Receiving special recognition were 22 honor graduates. In addition to Dunham, Eakin and Tarpley, they included Michelle Black, Angela Brown, Cory Cameron, Kerri Carter, Elizabeth Genung, Kimberly Gross, Michelle Harpster and Melissa Harris.

Other honor graduates were Wiley Kennedy, Worley Kennedy, Brian Kotara, Ken Marak, Brianna Marsh, Danny Palmer, Lisa Ratzlaff, Sheri Stanley, James Stevens, La Donna Welch and Kim Wilson.

Rebecca Dunn delivered the invocation, with Arcadio Rivera offering the benediction. Sheri Rogers and Clay Jett led the graduates in singing "The Alma Mater," "Dear Old Pampa High School."

The band and choir performed "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" after the invocation, and the band played the traditional "Recessional" as the students filed out of the field house.

Serving as honor guards to guide the seniors to their seats were Stacy Bennett, Chris Gustin, Denise Chapman, John Stevens, Ann Duncan and Kenny Stewart.

Following the graduation program, seniors attended an all-night party at M. K. Brown Auditorium, with a dance, videos, bingo, prizes and food available for the celebration.

RRC activities

during the FERC hearings they contended gas in the Panhandle Field was really only vaporized oil and thus should be considered belonging to oil production.

But federal Administrative Judge Brenda Murray denied the claims, instead citing the RRC's definition of casinghead gas as setting limits on the gas to which the independents could claim rights.

Statewide conservation rules for the RRC defines casinghead gas as "any gas and/or vapor indigenous to an oil stratum and produced from such stratum with oil."

Judge Murray ruled evidence indicated many of the independents must have perforated into the higher gas producing formations and thus must have been illegally pumping natural gas rightfully belonging to separately in most instances, creating a unique situation.

At the Lubbock trial, witnesses for Dorchester had testified Harlow must have perforated into gas producing strata. The jury upheld Dorchester's claims in ruling against Harlow.

In efforts to head off the impact of the pending FERC decision and the precedent set in the Harlow trial, representatives for the independents have supported attempts to get a new definition of casinghead gas adopted by the state Legislature.

A bill introduced by El Paso state Sen. Tati Santiesteban and co-sponsored by Canyon Sen. Bill Sarpalis would define casinghead gas as "all gas produced from a well classified by the (Railroad Commission) as an oil well."

White Deer, Lefors graduation set

Graduates of the Class of 1985 will receive their diplomas tonight at Lefors and White Deer.

Seventeen graduates will be honored at 8 p.m. in the Lefors High School auditorium, with Ricky Palmer, former head coach at Lefors, delivering the commencement address.

Class valedictorian is Dondi Rothwell, with Kandi Jo Ashford as salutatorian. Russell Taylor has served as Senior Class president for the 1984-1985 school year.

At the White Deer High School auditorium, 38 seniors will participate in the commencement exercises beginning at 8 p.m.

White signs water bill; voters next

AUSTIN (AP) — The governor and legislative leaders want voters to follow their example and approve a $1 billion water plan which they say balances the interests of all parts of Texas.

Gov. Mark White stood on a stone footbridge over a small creek Thursday and signed the water plan, but noted it will do nothing unless voters give it their OK.

"This is only the halfway point in bringing this plan to life. Our work will not be complete until the citizens of Texas approve this plan next November," White said.

The comprehensive plan includes financing for water use projects and moves to boost conservation efforts across the state. All the funding provisions must be approved by voters in the November general election before taking effect.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who attended the signing ceremony, recalled that voters rejected three previous plans. But he predicted this one might make it because lawmakers tried hard to balance competing regional interests.

"This water plan is different in that it does address all those needs," Hobby said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis agreed.

"After numerous failures at trying to adopt a statewide water plan, I think this year we were finally successful in doing so," Lewis said.

The plan passed both the House and Senate by large margins. Among its provisions are:

— $980 million in bonds for water supply, quality and control projects.

— $200 million in loans to farmers for water-saving equipment.

— A $250 million state insurance fund to guarantee water bonds.

— Mandatory conservation plans in cities seeking state water aid.

— Local elections to create special districts for groundwater control.

— Research and education programs to promote conservation on farms.

— Limits on reservoirs to preserve water flow to coastal wetlands.

The plan, White said, "addresses the concerns of every community, every region and every sector of Texas society."

White said Texas desperately needs a water plan to ensure growth and future prosperity.

"All our efforts to provide first-class education and transportation systems will count for nothing if Texas loses the ability to produce the water necessary for industrial, agricultural and consumer use," he said.

White immediately began the campaign for voter approval of the water plan, saying everyone stands to gain something from it.

These measures represent the bridges of common interest that have been built by upstream users and downstream users.

House okays March primary

AUSTIN (AP) — House Democrats have rolled over Republican opposition and tentatively approved a bill calling for a March presidential primary, a move they said would give Texans a louder voice in national politics.

"It will put Texas in the forefront and give Texas the chance to take the lead in presidential politics," said Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston.

"It's time they (candidates) come here, and that we see nationally televised debates not just from the stages of New Hampshire and Massachusetts — but also from stages here in Texas," Hackney said during Thursday's debate.

The bill, tentatively approved 90-56 with Republicans opposing it, differs from a Senate-passed plan. It would make several other major changes in the way Texans vote beginning next year.

It would wipe out the complicated Democratic presidential caucus system. It would move primaries in non-presidential election years from May to March, shifting runoff elections from June to April, and move city elections from April to May.

By holding its presidential primary election on the second Tuesday in March, the so-called "Super Tuesday," the nation's third most populous state could force candidates to discuss issues important to Texans, the bill's backers argued.

Noting that the 1984 Democratic ticket was made up of two northerners, Rep. Tommy Adkisson, D-San Antonio, asked: "Do you think we'd have had two candidates — one of whose homes was in Minnesota and one was in New York — if we'd had an early primary?"

But opponents said the present May date is good because the presidential field is narrowed by then and the candidate Texans vote for has a real shot at winning his party's nomination.

Besides, the state's size gives it automatic clout on the national scene, said Rep. Chip Staniswalis, R-Amarillo.

"Texas is the third-leading delegation (to national political conventions). California is first, and they don't have their primary until June," Staniswalis said.

"Political animals, being the critters that we are, are going to shake hands and kiss babies the same way in May as we do in March," he added.

Republicans also said the changes would be costly, and they argued that the bill really is a way to require primaries and help Democrats escape the weeks-long caucus system that they haven't been able end.

Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan, also argued that the public would view moving the primary as a bid by incumbents to shorten the primary season and give challengers less time to campaign. "This bill will be perceived as an incumbent protection plan," he said.

Abortion effort dies in the House

AUSTIN (AP) — The state agency that dictates who can build hospitals and nursing homes died in the House Thursday, dragging with it the abortion regulation push.

A bid to salvage the Texas Health Facilities Commission by adding an abortion regulation measure flopped, succeeding only in raising the ire of pro-life legislators.

Cleburne Rep. Bruce Gibson, a commission supporter, tried to lure conservative votes with an amendment to let the commission license abortion clinics.

But the House voted 98-49 against considering the bill that would have kept the three-member commission in operation through 1989. Barring any change before the session ends Monday, the commission disappears Sept. 1.

Commissioner Dora McDonald contended that unregulated health care will be costly, adding that there will be "hospitals like 7-Elevens, on every other street corner."

The abortion issue became tangled with the commission after pro-life lawmakers decided against offering an abortion regulation amendment to a Department of Health bill.

Pro-life lawmakers said they were insulted that their issue was being used to make a deal on the facilities commission.

Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, called it a bid to "salvage what's a lousy bill in the first place."

Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Cleburne, said the abortion regulation amendment was an attempt to lure votes from conservatives who don't like the Health Facilities Commission, but favor abortion regulation.

As a result of the strange legislative twist, abortion foes who came to town confident they could score a big win this year wound up voting against abortion regulation.

The Health Facilities Commission and abortion proved to be a combination of controversies that produced the year's most earnest debate in the sometimes raucous House.

Since 1975, the commission has controlled the health care industry by doing out "certificates of need." To build a new facility or make changes in an existing one, applicants have to persuade the three-member commission that the additional service is needed.

The idea was to prevent costly duplication of service. Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston, said all the commission has managed to do is protect people already in business and produce work for Austin lawyers.

Gibson said the commission is the only hedge against overbuilding of hospitals. Free enterprise has lost control of health care because of health insurance, he said.

"When we get too many hospitals and the occupancy drops, there is pressure on doctors to admit more patients. There is pressure on hospitals to make sure they stay there as long as they possibly can," he said.

Health care deregulation will produce the same results as airline deregulation, Gibson predicted.

"There's first class, coach and a lot of people who can't afford to fly," he said.

When the commission goes under on Sept. 1, "We're going to see an explosion in health facilities in this state. We are going to see waste. It's going to cost the Texas economy," Gibson said.

Mrs. McDonald agreed "The only health care containment effort anywhere in the state of Texas has just been voted down. The people are going to bear the brunt of increases in costs when beds are overbuilt," she said.

Baby turtles released off Texas

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — The release of about 1,000 endangered Kemp's Ridley baby sea turtles into the Gulf of Mexico was a rousing success despite the weather, a marine scientist says.

"It went well. It got a little rough out there, but it went well," said Charles W. Caillouet, head of the National Marine Fisheries Service in Galveston and in charge of the Kemp's Ridley Headstart Project.

The baby turtles, about the size of silver dollars, were lowered into the Gulf waters Tuesday about 15 miles off the coast of Mustang Island near Corpus Christi, Caillouet said.

The project, a federally funded effort to stave off extinction of the small, leathery reptile, has been in existence since 1978, he said. The project is expected to end in 1988 but Caillouet says he will ask for a five-year extension.

The bad weather in the Corpus Christi area kept the group's chauffeur — the U.S. Coast Guard — busy with emergency rescue. But the group managed to drop the turtles one by one.

At stake, Caillouet said, is the turtle's survival. The American scientific community has tackled the project by making annual excursions into Mexico, where biologists gather the ping pong size-turtle eggs on beaches near the coastal fishing village of Rancho Nuevo in the state of Tamaulipas.

The baby turtles, which have been raised in captivity for the past 10 months, became the seventh graduating class of the project's 10-year experiment. The study was undertaken to determine whether the turtles can and will nest along the Texas coast.

The turtles, which weigh up to 100 pounds, are the world's smallest and most endangered sea turtles, Caillouet said. The fisheries agency has released more than 3,000 Kemp's Ripleys in 1978.

The long-term objective is to establish a new nesting site on South Padre Island by "imprinting" the baby turtles in a "Padre Island sand" environment soon after birth, Caillouet said.

Is city really that dry?

There is apparently no end to the kinds of laws citizens of this country can be forced to endure.

Did you see that story out of Abilene a couple of weeks ago? The city is apparently worried about the possibility of a water shortage this summer, so the city council rode to the rescue with a new ordinance.

Are you ready for this? The new law makes it illegal for restaurants to serve customers glasses of water unless the customer first asks for one.

I am not sure I have ever heard of a more ridiculous ordinance. If that city's water situation ever gets so bad that a few hundred glasses of water will make a significant difference, I suspect that Abilene is a goner anyway.

But in addition to being ridiculous, that law is going to pose some interesting enforcement problems.

How are they going to do it? Surely the city can't afford to station uniformed policemen in every restaurant to make sure no unsolicited glasses of water are dispensed. So, then, what are the alternatives?

Well, they could simply send officers around to cafes questioning all customers with a glass of water on their tables on whether they asked for it or not. Can you imagine a waitress telling a customer, "Here comes the cops. Remember, tell them you ASKED me for the water."

Obviously, most customers wouldn't squeal on a hard-working waitress who was simply trying to please him, so that approach might not work.

The only solution I can think of is to bug the waitresses' uniforms with hidden microphones. The police could monitor the mikes and if they ever heard the sound of water splashing without first hearing a request for water, they could close in for the kill.

Some Abilene residents, as you might have guessed, don't think much of the new ordinance. One fellow said it would give a black eye to the image of Abilene. Another said West Texas has a reputation for being dry, and restricting water in restaurants would be like admitting the sin.

What if a tourist from a more arid state happens to stop in an Abilene cafe and, after placing his order, has to say "What do you have to do to get a glass of water around here?" When he finds out, he's going to have an interesting story to tell when he gets back home.

It'll go something like this: "You may not believe all you've heard about how dry Texas is, but let me tell you what happened when I stopped at a cafe...."

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

The parent must remain in control

A hue and cry has resulted from a recent Federal Communications ruling that allows tie-ins between toys advertised during children's TV programming and content of the shows.

There is great consternation in some quarters about the propriety of Saturday morning children's shows being developed around a toy. Usually, the show comes first, the toy second. But the latest play has a manufacturer of children's toys marketing and advertising the latest doll each little girl should have, then creating a Saturday morning kids' show starring the doll.

The FCC's ruling allowing great discretion, the critics say, is proof positive that this federal agency doesn't give two hoots about kids in their formative years.

But if the FCC is responsible for such matters, what are parents for? Should some government agency or parents be responsible for selecting the kids' TV fare?

Of course many shows are blatantly commercial. What parents hasn't heard little Johnny say he just has to have the latest G.I. Joe accessory and little Suzy say she needs Barbie's new clothes? Indeed, many of these shows are hard on parents' pocket books and good nature, but neither the TV set nor the FCC have yet been granted loco parentis. Saying no remains the obligation of parents.

Some pundits also have accused the FCC of not mandating enough educational TV programming for children. There have been calls for Congress to set educational programming standards to assure us that our children are educated as well as informed on Saturday morning. What chances to a program on the evolution of a butterfly have against He Man?

This is an area that requires no federal agency or Congressional mandate. All that is required is that parents take seriously their child-raising responsibilities. Those who are offended can turn off the set, read their children a book or send them outside to play.

There are no 'loopholes'

As Congress approaches the delicate subject of serious reform of the tax laws, we would do well to remember that there is in fact no such thing as a "loophole." Every instance of favoritism presently on the books is there because a majority of both houses of Congress and the president in the White House at the time believed it was in the best interest of the country as a whole not to impose a tax in that particular case.

Should mortgage payments on a home be deductible? A person who rents an apartment could well be forgiven for regarding such a deduction as an outrageous piece of favoritism — a classic "loophole." And so it is, in the sense that it is granted only to a certain category of taxpayers (i.e., home-buyers). It is there because Congress has historically regarded it as sound public policy to encourage home ownership.

Similarly, a person fortunate enough to be able to live off the income of his capital can invest his nest egg entirely in tax-free municipal bonds and not pay a cent in taxes. Is that a "loophole"? If it ventilates our envy of him, we can say so. But the fact is that Congress quite deliberately left that option open to everyone who has capital to invest, in order to make sure that our municipalities will be able to sell the bonds needed to finance such local necessities as sewers, etc.

On April 15, I watched a television reporter on New York's independent (Metromedia) station, Channel 5, tell his audience that certain "hugely profitable" corporations "pay no taxes" for "years on end." This shocking datum was accompanied by a picture of an unidentified corporate executive being sworn in, like an apprehended culprit, before a congressional committee. As nearly as could be told from anything the reporter said, that corporation's failure to pay any taxes was either a sly abuse of unspecified but apparently enormous "loopholes" or the result of a simple and cynical flouting of the applicable laws.

Patently I waited for some acknowledgment — in a parenthetical remark, perhaps, or at least in a throwaway subordinate clause — that there are perfectly logical reasons, embodied in sound provisions of the Tax Code, why a profitable corporation might pay no taxes. But, to my amazement, there was nothing whatever: The segment was quickly followed by another, in which a different Channel 5 reporter described the effort of Harlem residents to compute their taxes — while their "benefits," as he carefully noted, were scheduled to diminish.

Actually, there are at least three reasons why a profitable corporation may pay no taxes. In the first place, a multinational corporation often makes large profits in a foreign country. Those profits are taxable here, but the government sensibly allows the corporation to deduct first the taxes it was obliged to pay to the government of the country where the profits were actually made.

Second, a corporation engaged in a long-term contract (typically, for the manufacture of large defense items like aircraft carriers, which may take a good many years to complete) may be entitled, under the contract, to partial payment year by year — obviously, to finance the project. But the IRS allows the corporation to defer taxes on these "profits" until the contract is completed and the tax actually due can be computed precisely.

Finally, of course, a corporation can usually deduct from its taxable income profits that are not distributed but plowed directly back into the business, thereby generating new jobs (and new tax revenues).

Not a word of all this, however, escaped the lips of Metromedia's "reporter." He preferred to whip up anti-business resentment and ignorant envy.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, May 24, the 144th day of 1985. There are 221 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On May 24, 1844, Samuel F.B. Morse transmitted the words, "What hath God wrought!" from Washington to Baltimore as he formally opened America's first telegraph line.

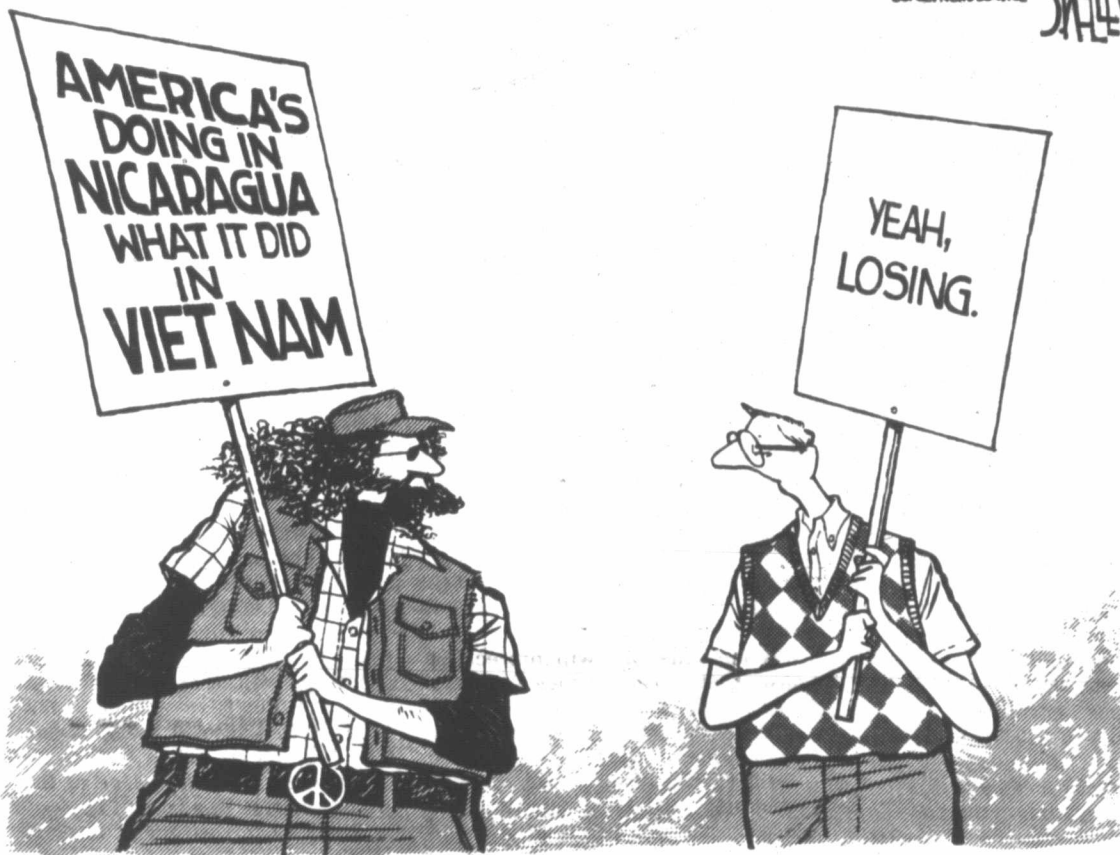

On this date:

Ten years ago: Secretary of State Henry Kissinger told a news conference the U.S. might propose its own Middle East peace plan if President Gerald R. Ford were unable to narrow differences between Egypt and Israel during a trip abroad.

Five years ago: The World Court in The Hague ordered Iran to release the American hostages. The Iranians rejected the call.

One year ago: A court in El Salvador found five former national guardsmen guilty of murdering four U.S. churchwomen in December 1980.

Today's birthdays: Former congressman Wilbur Mills is 76. Actress Lilli Palmer is 71. Singer Bob Dylan is 44. Actor Gary Burghoff is 42. Actress Priscilla Ann Beaulieu Presley is 39.

Missing a special sight

Americans, hiding their eyes, missed a beautiful sight.

Mike Vachon, a Nordic skier, competing on the slopes above Park City, Utah, three feet from the finish line - fell.

Mike Vachon of Moosup, Conn., 22, had successfully negotiated the two-mile downhill run - was ahead - was winning - when he fell.

But quickly he struggled to his feet in time to cross the finish line - not first. He missed the gold medal by three seconds. But he won the second-place silver medal and then - skiing into the arms of his parents - Mike beamed, "I did it! I did it!"

Mike's silver medal means more than gold. He skis with one pole.

Mike's Vachon's entire right side is totally paralyzed.

This was this last March's International Winter Special Olympics.

Mike was one of 800 mentally retarded who competed.

Tommy Calloway, 13, figure skater from Alabama, used to be teased by his classmates because he was mentally "slow." Now back home with his demonstrated prowess in figure skating - he is a local hero.

If we'd been paying attention we'd have seen one young skier finish first and insist on giving his medal to a friend who finished last.

And we'd have seen a girl skier who struggled across the finish line last - and broke into tears.

But then she saw the crowd around her distraught and crying and she dried her own tears to comfort them: "It's okay. I gave it my best. Next year, okay?"

The Winter Special Olympics got some attention; a few minutes of TV time and a reception for the winners at the White House.

There, President Reagan said, "The best of the world's athletes from the Sarajevo Games have to tip their hats to you. Some posted faster times but none demonstrated more heart."

Preparation for each Special Olympics begins in 20,000 communities in 50 states and in 50 other countries.

A million retarded athletes compete. Half a million volunteers coordinate the competition. Then, every four years, the "finals."

Corporate and private donors pay the costs of the Special Olympics.

In most athletic competition spectators are inspired only by the winners. In the Special Olympics some of the most inspiring performances harvest no gold.

But the participants take home more independence, more self-esteem, more joy in living, more community - even more family acceptance.

And the rest of us, inclined to confuse mental retardation with mental illness, learn better.

Reagan's clout slipping?

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Four months into his first term, President Reagan seemed incapable of doing anything wrong. But now, at the same point in his second term, he's finding it difficult to do anything right.

"Reagan has been in one of the steepest post-inauguration job-approval declines of any president in the last 50 years," notes Kevin Phillips, a respected conservative political theorist and editor-publisher of the American Political Report, an authoritative Washington newsletter.

"Reagan's slippage from the 65-70 percent range in late January to the 50-55 percent range in late April is second only to (former President Richard M.) Nixon's erosion during the unfolding Watergate investigation in early 1973," adds Phillips. "It's now becoming critical for Reagan to arrest his downturn."

But there are few apparent opportunities available to the president to stage such a recovery. Indeed, the item atop his agenda — fashioning a 1986 federal budget mutually acceptable to Congress and the White House — is rapidly becoming a source of considerable grief for Reagan.

In late April, the president sought to expedite legislative approval of his budget package by turning to a tactic that seldom failed during his first term — a nationally televised address to galvanize public support for his cause.

At a news briefing immediately prior to that speech, Reagan's most senior advisers spoke confidently of gaining swift approval in the Senate. Indeed, they talked of securing a crucial parliamentary victory by late the following day.

But the vote Reagan sought did not come until six days later — and it was a largely symbolic 50-49 victory in a Senate that the Republicans control by a 53-47 margin. The president's public appeal had been an uncharacteristic failure.

In the following days, the Senate began to dismantle Reagan's budget, rejecting both his proposal to limit cost-of-living adjustments to Social Security payments and his plan to continue massive annual increases in defense spending.

While his budget was being picked apart, the president was in West Germany, attending the annual meeting of the world's seven major industrial democracies and commemorating the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II in Europe.

Reagan was forced into a defensive posture throughout much of that trip because of the continuing criticism of his visit to the military cemetery in Bitburg, West Germany. That controversy arguably was the longest and most debilitating Reagan has faced during his presidency.

Although the president routinely dominated economic summit meetings during his first term, he was hard-pressed to avoid humiliation at this year's session.

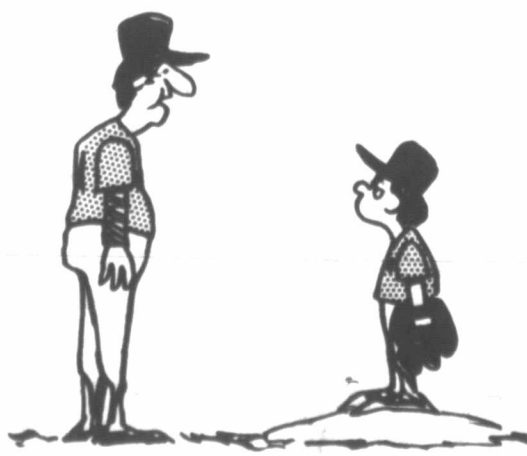

Instead of the strong endorsement sought by Reagan for this country's negotiating position at the new round of arms control talks with the Soviet Union, the final communiqué of the conference offered only vague and tepid approval.

Although the trade embargo imposed by Reagan against Nicaragua was not on the meeting's official agenda, a majority of conference participants openly criticized the timing and questioned the efficacy of that action.

Fearing an embarrassing defeat, the United States did not even seek a formal conference endorsement of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly known as "Star Wars."

Teacher lunch period and holiday approved

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has given teachers something to look forward to next school year — a lunch period. It also voted Thursday to make the late Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday a state holiday.

John Cole, president of the Texas Federation of Teachers, said, "While it may not seem like a big thing to the general public, teachers in the state of Texas ... will go back to school in September knowing that they will be able to take a much needed mid-day break."

Cole said the federation had worked for 10 years to give teachers time off "in their hectic school day to relax and eat lunch." The bill provides for a 30-minute duty-free lunch period.

School districts could require teachers to supervise students during lunch only in the event of personnel shortages, "extreme economic conditions, or an unavoidable or unforeseen circumstance."

The measure was sponsored by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, and Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

The third Monday in January would combine King's birthday and Confederate Heroes Day as a state holiday under a bill that was returned to the House 30-1. The bill also would eliminate two state holidays — Columbus Day and Election Day, but state employees would be given "adequate time off" to vote.

Eliseo Medina of the Texas State Employees Union referred to the bill as "hostile legislation," and said it would fight the measure "every step of the way in the House."

Senators approved 28-3 and returned to the House what Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, referred to as a "Sportsman's Bill of Rights."

When the bill was originally approved in the House, sponsor Messer said it would stop "Greenpeace-type activities we've seen in Canadian provinces and other states." Greenpeace is an environmental activist group that has used various means to try to stop hunting and fishing activities it opposes.

The bill would prohibit anyone from harassing or interfering with hunters, trappers of fishermen while they are lawfully hunting or fishing. It also would be illegal to disturb wildlife in order to prevent the animal's capture.

Violators could be sent to jail for six months and fined $1,000.

Senators refused to debate a proposal that would allow students to stay with their class as they advance from school to school.

The bill would encourage school districts to keep classes intact as they are promoted from elementary to middle school and from middle school to high school. It states that if fewer than 30 percent of the students advancing are assigned to a single school, a student may transfer schools and go with the majority.

Sponsor Ed Howard, D-Texas, said testimony had shown that splitting classes is a "traumatic experience" that can lead to drug abuse and even suicides.

A 16-11 vote was two votes short of what Howard needed to suspend the rules and debate the bill.

White to stores: don't jump the gun

AUSTIN (AP) — Merchants ought not jump the gun and immediately start opening on Sundays, even though he "intends" to sign a bill repealing the Blue Law, Gov. Mark White said.

"I would hope they obey the law. I think it would be a good example for others, and I would hope they would not break the law in anticipation of the signature on that repeal," White said Thursday.

The governor left little doubt during his weekly news conference that he would endorse the measure to end the 24-year-old Sunday sales ban and bring the state an estimated $24 million in additional sales tax revenue annually.

"I intend to sign the bill," he said. "I have not made a complete review of all the details of that bill, but I've found nothing in it so far that would prevent my signature from being affixed to it."

The Blue Law prohibits the sale of 42 items — ranging from kitchenware to appliances — on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays, effectively banning Sunday sales.

Almost as soon as the House completed action on the repeal bill Monday, stores began announcing they will start opening Sundays, even though the repeal law won't take effect until Sept. 1.

Asked about those decisions,

White said he wanted the stores to follow present law.

"I would expect our law enforcement officials to take whatever action is appropriate," White said.

Asked about the failure of many police departments in the past to arrest Blue Law violators, White passed the responsibility to local authorities.

"That's a decision that'll be made by the local officials," he said.

The governor said the repeal legislation appears to satisfy his concerns about forcing Texans to work seven days a week or preventing them from observing religious services on Sundays.

"I believe the law will protect against that circumstance," he said. "I am pleased with the protections that are given for the respect of our religious holidays."

On other topics, White: — Refused to say how the state will fund a $125 million program to provide health care to poor Texans. "I am continuing to work with the lieutenant governor and the speaker (of the House), and every indication is that funds are going to be set aside for that purpose," he said.

But when asked specifically where the money would come from in a year when it took lawmakers months to write a balanced budget, White said, "I'm not going to tell you."

— Defended his record on taxes this year.

During a special legislative session last summer, White pushed through a $4.8 billion tax hike for roads and school reforms. However, he said, "We haven't increased taxes during this session. I don't see any need for increased taxes."

Cloud seeding project is under way in South Texas

UVALDE, Texas (AP) — A cloud seeding project sponsored by the city of Corpus Christi has been launched and a second could be under way soon.

Officials of North America Weather Consultants began dropping silver iodide crystals into clouds over Frio and Atascosa counties Sunday, said Bob Swart, a meteorologist for the company.

The project is aimed at beefing up the water supply for Corpus Christi, hit hard last year by a severe drought that forced mandatory water rationing.

The Edwards Underground Water District, which provides water for San Antonio and four surrounding counties, has asked the Texas Water Commission to approve a permit for a second cloud seeding project.

A hearing on that permit has been set for June 3 in Austin.

Swart said if the permit is approved, it would take his company about a week to obtain another cloud seeding plane and begin the operation.

The Corpus Christi project includes most of Frio County and portions of Zavala, LaSalle, McMullen, Medina and Atascosa counties.

The San Antonio cloud-seeding effort would cover Real, Bandera and portions of Edwards, Kerr, Kendall, Medina, Uvalde and Kinney counties.

There has been strong opposition to the San Antonio project, expected to cost about $400,000.

Farmers from Uvalde County have opposed the plan, saying they fear heavy rains might damage crops.

The city of Kerrville also is against the Edwards project because of fears the damaged Guadalupe River Dam might be further harmed by heavy rains.

The dam was damaged when heavy rains forced an overflow New Year's Eve. Officials said it is too early to tell if the current cloud seeding effort has produced results.

SCARED — A tearful Palestinian woman screams, left, as Shiite Moslem militiamen and her daughters have been hiding for four days. Palestinian guerrillas fight Thursday in Chatilla camp around the shelter where she and her daughters have been hiding for four days. (AP Laserphoto)

Syria proposes cease fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria proposed a three-point cease-fire plan today as Shiite Moslem militiamen pressed their bloody assault on Palestinian guerrillas in Beirut's refugee camps.

Police said 25 people were killed and 198 wounded overnight, raising the five-day toll to 226 dead and 1,363 wounded.

Dozens of bodies littered the streets of the camps and rumors of massacres filtered from the camps.

Five shells from the fighting exploded at Beirut airport, about two miles south of the camps. One hit as passengers left a Middle East Airlines flight from Paris. Witnesses said two airport employees were wounded and two Boeing 707s were damaged by shrapnel. Officials closed the facility.

Palestinian gunners in the hills unleashed another barrage of long-range artillery and Soviet-made Grad and Katyusha rockets on Shiite residential districts ringing the camp.

Lebanon's state radio reported that Syrian Vice President Abdul-Halim Khaddam had negotiated terms of a cease-fire between representatives of the Palestinians and Shiites in Damascus. Syria is the main powerbroker in Lebanon.

Dissidents call for restraint

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Two leading dissidents today urged restraint on student protesters who have barricaded themselves in the second floor library of the U.S. Information Service building and vowed to "fast to the end."

The students are protesting a 1980 military operation in the southern city of Kwangju in which at least 191 people died.

An anonymous caller to offices of foreign news organizations, who identified himself as a spokesman for the students, demanded the government identify within 72 hours the person directly responsible for the military operation that crushed the Kwangju uprising.

Unless the demand is met, a "grave situation" will arise, and the government will be responsible for the consequences, the caller said. He said the protesters expected the United States to pressure South Korea to meet the students' demands.

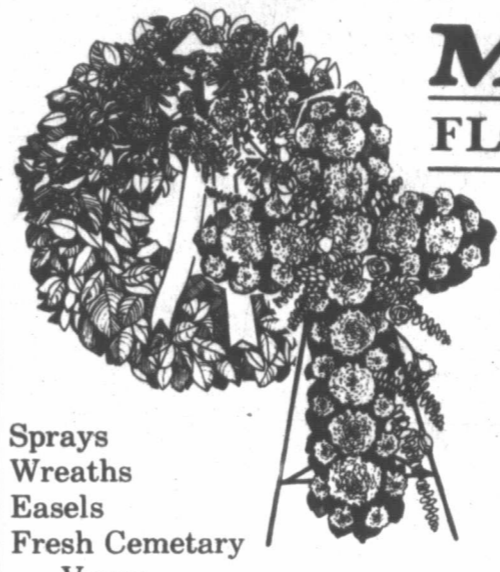

At least 60 South Korean students took over the library on Thursday, demanding the United States withdraw support of the government, apologize for an alleged role in the crackdown on the 1980 uprising, and "withdraw all economic measures disadvantageous to the Korean people," according to leaflets they distributed.

U.S. officials have repeatedly denied there was any U.S. involvement or responsibility for what occurred at Kwangju.

Unconfirmed reports said South Korean authorities had suggested action to end the library occupation. However, one U.S. embassy official said: "We are not asking any intervention by any Korean authorities."

Opposition lawmaker Shin Ki-ha told reporters that popular dissidents Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam sent envoys to discuss the student siege with Korean and American government officials.

CONFUCIUS' KIN — Descendants of Confucius buried at Qufu, ancestral home of China's most famous clan. (AP Laserphoto)

Confucius' home town is a favored spot of tourists

By RICK GLADSTONE
Associated Press Writer
QUFU, China (AP) — Kong Fanlung grows wheat, sorghum and corn, lives in a poor village and wears ordinary faded blue cottons, but he will be buried near Confucius, China's greatest sage.

"I am a 77th-generation descendant of Kong the master," the 19-year-old peasant told a visitor.

"Kong the master" is Kong Fuzi — Chinese for Confucius, who lived from 551-479 B.C.

Kong Fanlung is one of an estimated 100,000 locals with Confucius' surname entitled to burial in the 500-acre "Confucius Forest," perhaps the world's largest family cemetery, on the outskirts of Qufu where Confucius was born.

While visitors flock to the grave of Confucius, few roam among the thousands of burial mounds where his latter-day descendants are entombed amid ancient cypresses and junipers.

Kong, his three brothers, three sisters and two uncles lunched on flat baked bread after burying Kong's father, a 50-year-old peasant they said had died of tuberculosis.

Asked if they were proud to be Confucian descendants, the youth said, "Yes, but we are just farmers."

Red Guards labeled Confucius a vestige of feudalism during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution and rampaged through Qufu. Now rehabilitated, the city of 500,000 is a favorite of tourists.

"I wanted to see the birthplace of Confucius because our country's leaders are trying to raise our cultural level," said a young electronics worker from Nanjing.

An old peasant and his wife, who made the four-day train trek from Manchuria, said, "We just wanted to have a look."

Pedicab drivers cajole foreigners to tour the tree-lined streets, while others squat and stare at those who come to stroll through the Confucius residence and temple, historical landmarks.

"Forty fen to take you around, 40 fen, OK 30 fen, how about 30 fen?" the drivers shout. Three fen equal one U.S. cent.

"We do not mind all the tourists, we welcome them," said a woman operating a tea stand at the bus depot, where travelers sit on rough wooden stools and drink tea for 3 fen a glass.

Qufu — "crooked mound" — is in the heart of eastern China's Shandong province, a mix of green fields, irrigation canals and brick villages. The nearest rail station is Yanzhou, 5.6 miles to the east.

Foreigners and privileged Chinese can rent rooms in a state-run lodge, once a wing of the Confucius family mansion.

Guests dine on Shandong spring rolls and roast chicken in the lodge canteen, where bootlegged tapes of Lionel Richie and Stan Getz are played on a Japanese stereo.

For budget-minded travelers there is the Qufu guesthouse, a 1950s-vintage, concrete-floored, dingy dormitory where for the equivalent of a few dollars patrons get a hard mattress, greasy blanket, hot water flask and dirty spittoon.

In January the government announced it would refashion Qufu to lure more foreign tourists.

Rainfall too late for some Texas farmers, ranchers

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — West Texas farmers and ranchers say heavy rains welcomed by drought-parched pastures and cropland may not have come soon enough to douse concerns about dwindling herds and falling profits.

Scattered thunderstorms, one of the region's primary sources of water, have returned after two years of drought, agricultural officials said.

"It looks good now, but two weeks of bad (dry) weather and we'll be back in the same situation," Michael Sturm, Concho County executive director for the Agriculture Stabilization Conservation Service, told the San Angelo Standard-Times. "It's important not to get too optimistic."

One rancher told the newspaper he has already sold most of his cattle herd because of bad grazing land.

"What we've had is a hand-to-mouth situation," said Buddy Clark of Menard. "What we're banking on now is trying to get the grasses up in any quantity at all to get us through the winter months."

He said he reduced his cattle herd by 75 percent last year and cut sheep flocks by 40 percent.

"I decided to reduce," he said. "I could have held on, but I wanted to get off before I damaged the grass to where it died."

"We're down to the nitty-gritty," he said. "We're talking about animals with a lot of breeding behind them, and when you have to sell them, it hurts."

Sturm said herds are now half the size of what they were in May 1984.

"We had quite a lot of stock sold off last year," he said. "There wasn't any grass in the pasture, and they couldn't afford to feed them. It would be real easy to go under if it decides to quit raining and get dry."

But he said the rain should nourish wheat and milo crops and help the cotton crop, which will be planted next week.

Farmers, faced with uncertain weather and increasing costs, are not buying seed and herbicide in as great a quantity, said Miles Co-op Gin Manager Ruby Ullrich.

"People are more cautious about buying supplies, seed, fertilizer, and herbicides," Ms. Ullrich said. "You hate to have the weather undo in a few minutes something that you spent all that money and time on."

"I thought sales were down from last year," said Ms. Ullrich. "We didn't handle that much wheat seed, and there wasn't much milo seed sold."

Bankers will be looking more closely at bottom lines, and accepting fewer hard luck stories than before on farm loans, said Tom Galloway, vice president of Pecos County State Bank.

Hotel with famous namesake set to open

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Emily Morgan probably never realized she would go down in history, much less create a 1985 marketing campaign, when she became involved with Mexican General Santa Anna.

But the beautiful mulatto woman, who legend has was the "Yellow Rose of Texas" that distracted Santa Anna while Texas freedom fighters overwhelmed the Mexican army, now has a hotel named for her.

The Emily Morgan Hotel, which opens Friday, is basing its marketing campaign and its image on the Emily Morgan story.

"It's a totally fun hotel," said General Manager Dick Smallenberger.

The facility, adjacent to the Alamo, offers jacuzzis in 100 of its 177 rooms and breakfast in bed to all customers.

"This building was not designed for a convention, obviously."

Smallenberger said. "We feel there is a need in the marketplace for people who want to combine business with pleasure."

The hotel will cater to honeymooners, people on second honeymoons, tourists and people on business trips who want to bring their families, he said.

The hotel is owned by Landmark Partners, Ltd. of San Francisco, which remodeled a 60-year-old neo-gothic building that once was a hospital and later an office building into the new inn.

The hotel is basing its marketing program around the story of Emily Morgan, who Santa Anna took from the town of New Washington while in pursuit of Sam Houston's Texas forces after the fall of the Alamo.

Emily Morgan, known as "The Yellow Rose of Texas," sent a servant boy to Sam Houston with information about Santa Anna's forces, according to history books.

WARREN HASSE

Deposed Amarillo College men's basketball coach Mark Nixon, in comments of frustration over the AC Regent's decision to drop both the Badger and Badgerette cage programs, stated the obvious: Amarillo won't support athletic programs.

History substantiates his statement. A great professional minor league baseball program which sent (and still has) many players to the major leagues, is no more. Once moved, the same team became an immediate success in the Gulf Coast Golden Triangle area. Golden Gloves boxing, a major wintertime activity culminating with the regional championships, adios. The one-time kingpin of all pro sports (and blamed for non-support of other events), professional wrestling has fallen from the sold-out Thursday night free-for-alls at the Sports Arena to infrequent Sunday afternoon picnics in the comparatively sterile Civic Center Coliseum.

Others to come and go include professional hockey, spots on the pro golfers tour, pro tennis exhibitions, professional boxing matches, some rodeo action. A professional football franchise was rejected. And deep-sixed off the annual tours have been great family entertainment like the Ice Capades, Harlem Globetrotters and Ringling Brothers Greatest Show on Earth.

West Texas State athletic programs have had to drop from top-level competition. And the home folks even refuse to grant solid support to their public school athletic teams. The list can continue.

So, in the face of all this, someone would have to visit their favorite shrink for even considering investing a quarter-million in a professional basketball team that would call Amarillo home. But there are those who think that person (or persons) exists, and that the timing is perfect. Dropping into the Lone Star Conference in the 1986 school year is expected to send the Buffalo basketballers back to the more-than-adequate campus Fieldhouse, leaving the Panhandle's Queen City...and supposed business, industry and entertainment leader...with nothing to represent it on the national scene.

So there has been behind-the-scenes activity the past two months to place the Amarillo Armadillos (Blue Northerners? Dusters? Dry Holes? Journeymen?) in the 38-year-old Continental Basketball Association. The entry would be part of the Western Division of the league that is the first step below the NBA. There it would presumably join such teams as Albuquerque, Wyoming, Cincinnati, Evansville, Detroit and others who performed there this season. Two Sunflower State cities are also strong candidates for next season, Kansas City and Wichita.

The league rostered great names like Campy Russell, Sam Worthen, Freeman Williams and Russell Cross this year, all hoping for a call back to the NBA parent club. Great coaching names included Dave Cowens, Cazzie Russell, Herb Brown, Bill Musselman, and even former WTSU mentor Ron Ekker (Louisville Catbirds).

"It's a fun league, a play thing for the owners," Ekker tells us. "Chances of making money are very slim. But an owner who enjoys sports, especially basketball, can have a lot of fun as well as have a useful tax aid."

Amarillo had the investor seven years ago, when a wealthy businessman verbally agreed to field an entry. However, he could not put together the management team that he wanted, so backed down. Now, a strong effort is being made once again to stir interest, taking advantage of the lack of sports promotion in the area, and utilizing collegiate talents at Texas Tech (Bubba), WTSU (Terry Adolph), and all the SWC players with eligibility completed as a feeder system.

Are there any George Steinbrenners, Charley Finleys or Lamar Hunts around the Panhandle that are interested? Is anyone willing to try to remove the "non-support" label from Amarillo's otherwise reasonably respectable image?

NOTES: Former Pampa Harvester coaching genius Clifton McNeely retires from the school business this month, following wife Peggy, who took the action last year. McNeely, who guided PHS cagers to four state championships in the only coaching job he ever held, has been assistant superintendent of the Irving School District in recent years. In another administrative change, Bill Mayfield has resigned after eight years as Panhandle HS principal to become superintendent of the Happy schools. The one-time WTSU footballer is the younger brother of Gene, athletic director and head football coach at Leveland. Former Pampan Gary Stevens, now regional PR man for Ma Bell, has been president of the Canyon Eagle Booster Club this past year. That group, for the second season in a row, honored Phil Behrens as athlete of the year. Behrens, who will attend West Point, missed football and basketball competition against Pampa this year due to a shoulder injury. His father, Jerry, was a great athlete at Clarendon and WTSU, where his granddad also served as sheriff for many years. The 160-member field for the Tri-State Senior Golf Tournament's 51st annual event is filled, with a waiting list. It is scheduled July 21-26 at the Pampa Country Club. That young whippersnapper from Amarillo, Bob Giese, is president. John Reneau, a Texas Tech grad by way of Spearman, has been chosen to succeed Steve Bailey as trainer at PHS. Bailey is returning to his alma mater in Wichita Falls. Meanwhile, AD John Kendall seeks to fill a half-dozen coaching positions in the system. With the state legislature about to put on its usual rush to the finish line, the paramutual horse racing bill has obviously again come up lame. Too many "neigh" votes.

Oilers even Stanley Cup series with 3-1 victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Edmonton Oilers, the highest scoring team in the history of the National Hockey League, are showing their critics that they can do more than just put the puck in the net.

The Oilers held the Philadelphia Flyers to 18 shots on goal — tying Philadelphia's season low — as they won 3-1 Thursday night and tied the Stanley Cup finals at one game apiece. The victory was Edmonton's first here since Nov. 13, 1982.

The best-of-seven series resumes Saturday night in Edmonton, where the Oilers haven't lost (7-0) in the playoffs this year. Games four and five also are in the Canadian city Tuesday and Thursday.

Edmonton Coach Glen Sather has objected all year to the inference that the Oilers are strictly an offensive team.

"I don't like to think of us like that," said the coach of the defending Stanley Cup champions. "We're a good hockey team and we do what we have to do to win." Flyers' Coach Mike Keenan agreed that Edmonton's defensive effort in front of goalie Grant Fuhr was the difference in the game.

"They checked extremely well. I thought they showed a great resemblance to how we played the first game, real tight defense, particularly in their own zone.

"They closed off the lanes better than any team we've seen this season. We did not skate as well as we did in game one."

Keenan said the Oilers probably will play a more offensive game when they get back home.

"Home-ice advantage and the last (line) change will help them."

Willy Lindstrom, who scored the game-winning goal at 16:06 of the second period, added: "We did to them what they did to us in the first game. We did what the coaches told us to do this time. Everyone knew we needed a better effort than the first game."

Ward leads Texas to 7-6 win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Gary Ward put on a show Thursday night with a grand slam, two singles, a walk and a stolen base to lead the Texas Rangers to a 7-6 win over the Boston Red Sox.

Ward also threw out the potential go-ahead run at the plate from left field in the top of the ninth inning. "(Gary) did everything we asked of him tonight," said Ranger manager Bobby Valentine. "We asked him to make a throw, and he did. We asked him to hit, and he did. We asked him to steal, and he did. He's an outstanding ballplayer."

The Rangers scored the winning run on four walks in the ninth inning. After Cliff Johnson started the inning by popping out, Boston reliever Mark Clear, 1-1, walked Ward. Ward stole second and the Red Sox intentionally walked Larry Parrish.

Bob Ojeda relieved Clear and got Pete O'Brien on a long fly ball to right, but Ward and Parrish tagged and moved up. Ojeda then intentionally walked Glenn Brummer, bringing up Curtis Wilkerson, who walked on four straight pitches to pick up his first game-winning RBI of the season.

"I'll take them all," Wilkerson said. "A walk or a single, both of them count. Either way, that was the game-winning ribbie."

The run made a winner of Dave Rozema, 2-2, who pitched the last three innings in relief of starter Burt Hooton.

The Red Sox took a two-run lead in the first inning on a single by Wade Boggs, a double by Dwight Evans, a passed ball and a sacrifice fly. Ward then started his show with a grand slam in the bottom of the first to give Texas a 4-2 lead.

With Toby Harrah, Buddy Bell and Cliff Johnson aboard, the right-hand hitting Ward went the opposite way with a homer over the rightfield fence.

"The pitch I hit was a fastball up and away," Ward said. "He had thrown me three fastballs that I had good swings on but fouled back and the fourth one I got pretty good."

Boston added a run in the third on a single by Jackie Gutierrez and Evans' run-scoring double into the gap in right center, but Texas answered with a run in the bottom of the inning on a walk to Johnson and singles by Ward and O'Brien.

The Rangers took a 6-3 lead in the fourth when Bell doubled in Harrah, who had walked.

But the Red Sox tied the game with three runs in the seventh. Mike Easler and Rich Gedman led off with singles, forcing Valentine to bring in Rozema to relieve Hooton. Marty Barrett greeted Rozema with a double to score Easler, and Gutierrez grounded out to second, scoring Gedman. Boggs then singled to left, scoring Barrett with the tying run.

The Red Sox had a chance to take the lead when they got Barrett to third with one out in the ninth. Boggs hit a fly ball to left, and Barrett tagged up. Ward made the catch and threw to Brummer, who was applied the tag while guarding the plate.

"All I thought about was letting the ball go and I hoped it would get there in time," Ward said. "I know that Brummer likes to take a hit and that he would stay there in front of the plate."

Longhorns edge Grambling, 4-3

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A 12-inning marathon in the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament came down to a controversial call at home plate as Grambling catcher Ira Tieucl tried to tag Texas' Doug Hodo on a drag bunt.

Umpire Ron Graham ruled Hodo safe, and the host Texas Longhorns finally snared a 4-3 victory Thursday night.

Texas moves on to face Houston at 7:30 p.m. today while Grambling plays Oklahoma at 4:40 p.m. Lamar and Louisiana State were paired in a noon contest.

Houston defeated LSU 11-4 and Oklahoma beat Lamar 9-1 in Thursday's other first-round games.

"We played extremely well but Texas played better," Grambling coach Wilbert Ellis said.

Texas, 57-12, had been struggling all night against Grambling's Gary Eave, and the game was still tied 3-3 going into the 12th. Pinch-hitter Doug Hodo led off the 12th with a single and was sacrificed to second by Coby Kerlin.

Bill Bates advanced Hodo to third before Dennis Cook delivered the winning bunt. The call at the plate "was close," Ellis said.

"I questioned the umpire, but he said he was on top of it. We don't like to get into controversies with umpires. We thought he was out, but the umpire said he was safe. We are true champions. We won't quit, we'll be back tomorrow."

Tieucl said, "I thought I tagged him (Hodo) somewhere on the shoulder. I thought about throwing to first base, but I saw the runner coming from third and I thought I had a chance."

Texas coach Cliff Gustafson offered, "I think he missed the tag from where I was. Hodo went around him. It wasn't a squeeze bunt situation. He (Cook) was on his own to drag bunt for a base hit."

Sixth-seeded Grambling, 36-15-1, earned the respect of Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson, who was forced to bring in his ace Greg Swindell with one out in the seventh. Swindell, 16-1, replaced starter Mike Poehl and held the Tigers to two hits while striking out six in 5-2-3 innings of relief.

Final signup slated today

Final signup for the Babe Ruth, 16-18 year-old Baseball League are scheduled today from 5:30 to 6:30 at the Optimist Club.

Interested players can call league president Gary Graves at 665-2244 if they're unable to sign up those three days.

Carter promises smooth start

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Pancho Carter is promising the perfect start to Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

"You'll see one of the better starts you've seen. No silly mistakes," Carter said after Thursday's final practice before the race.

Carter, a veteran of 11 previous Indy 500s with six top 10 finishes, set a four-lap qualifying record of 212.583 mph in winning the first Indy-car pole of his career, and he is well aware that it is his responsibility as the driver on the inside of the front row to set the pace for the start of the race.

Carter vividly remembers a wild false start that marked the opening of the 1982 Indy race.

That year, pole-sitter Rick Mears brought the field to the starting line at a very slow speed. As the 33 starters began to pick up speed near the starting line, Kevin Cogan — in the middle of the front row — suddenly veered right, bouncing off a car driven by A.J. Foyt, then careening back across the track and slamming into the side of Mario Andretti's racer. At the back of the field, rookie Dale Whittington and Roger Mears collided.

The melee brought out a red flag and instant criticism of Rick Mears.

Carter, who started in the fourth row in 1982 and finished third, says that won't happen to him.

Carter, whose father, Duane Carter Sr., once finished fourth here, said he isn't intent on leading the first lap.

Simons, Hinkle share Memorial golf leaf lead

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Jim Simons, a Memorial Tournament co-leader after the first round, had a request for host Jack Nicklaus.

"I'd like to have three days to work on my game before the second round. This is the most inconsistent I've been this year," said Simons, whose 5-under-par 67 earned him a share of the opening-round lead Thursday with Lon Hinkle.

Simons had two one-putt bogeys, a chip-in for a par and one shot left in a bunker — a round uncharacteristic of a PGA Tour leader.

"I don't have an abundance of confidence," Simons said. The 1978 Memorial champion divides his career these days between the tour and a North Palm Beach, Fla., brokerage firm.

Nevertheless, Simons ranks 29th in 1985 winnings with almost $98,000 in 13 starts.

"I felt like a yo-yo out there today. I holed three shots from off the green. How often do you do that? Every four or five years," said the 35-year-old from Pittsburgh.

He holed his ball from a bunker for a par at the fourth hole, sank it from 50 feet for a birdie at the second and chipped in for an eagle 3 at the 15th hole.

"I would prefer to play a round where I was putting from 15 to 20 feet rather than like today. That's why I need the practice," Simons said.

The co-leaders are in the final stages of recovering from injuries. Hinkle dislocated his shoulder in a Las Vegas, Nev., auto accident in 1981. Simons hurt his neck in January.

Owners reduce NFL rosters to 45 players

LINCOLNSHIRE, Ill. (AP) — National Football League owners voted Wednesday to reduce team rosters to 45 players for the 1985 season, down from the 49-man squad size the league had maintained since the strike-marred 1982 season.

In Washington, Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, called the decision "a tragedy for the fans, bad for the players and something which will hurt the quality of the game."

He also said he wondered "if the owners are sending a signal to the union that collective bargaining is going to be tough" when both sides try to negotiate a new contract to replace the one which expires after the 1986 season.

The 45-man roster is part of the collective bargaining agreement in effect since 1982. But because of the strike and the impending emergence of the rival United States Football League, the NFL expanded its rosters by four players on each of its 28 teams.

"The owners decided to go with the collective bargaining agreement," Joe Browne, the NFL's director of information, said following the vote at the two-day owners' meeting which continues Thursday.

"Basically, there were two reasons for staying with 45 than, say, 49.

"First, there is the traditional argument that it benefits the 'have-nots,' the poorer teams who have a chance to pick up the last four players cut by the good teams.

"Second, there's the matter of money. Economics entered into it. It's tough to put an exact dollar amount on how much we're talking about, but with the average salary being $160,000 and another $50,000 in benefits per player, that gives you some idea," Browne said.

"Of course, there are those who will say it's not a true barometer since the last players cut probably wouldn't be making the average salary."

Browne said the proposal technically was whether to maintain the 49-man rosters and that it was defeated 19-9.

The league refused to disclose a breakdown of the vote, but sources reported that among those teams opposing the reduction were Dallas, Washington, Pittsburgh, the Los Angeles Raiders, San Francisco, Miami and Atlanta.

"Basically, according to the collective bargaining agreement, I guess they had the right to reduce their rosters," Upshaw said. "But from the standpoint of what it would do for the game, I think it hurt. We're talking about the injury rate increasing, about younger players not getting a chance to learn. I think the quality of play, the quality of the game, is going to be hurt.

Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers, had said before the meeting began: "Here we are, talking about negotiating a new TV contract, labor relations, a good football product and the need to help the game. I don't think this is the time to start cutting back."

"I agree with Dan," Upshaw said. "It looks bad.

There are other ways to save money other than to cut the squad size." One way he said was to cut back on the number of free agents brought into training camps.

"There are some teams who fly in 110, 120 players, feed them, house them, keep them around for four or five weeks, then cut them," Upshaw said.

McHale honored as best sixth man

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston's Kevin McHale, continuing the off-the-bench tradition of former Celtics Frank Ramsey and John Havlicek, has been named the winner of the National Basketball Association's Sixth Man Award.

It was the second year in a row that the 6-foot-10 McHale, a five-year pro and late-season starter for the Celtics, has been voted the award. He received 57 of 78 votes by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters — three from each franchise city and nine national members of the media.

"Being on the Celtics, it means more because this is the team that started it," McHale said in Boston. "I think it's great that a role that Red Auerbach started years ago is recognized by the league."

Asked whether he'd rather start or come off the bench, McHale replied, "I really don't care. The over-riding concern on this team is winning and that's the role I like best. It's who's going to win. That's the bottom line."

McHale became a starter for 26 games when Cedric Maxwell suffered a knee injury that required arthroscopic surgery. In those games, McHale averaged 24.5 points and 10.6 rebounds. In one of those games, he scored 56 points, which stood briefly as a Boston record.

"You get prepared earlier if you're a starter," McHale said. "When you're on the bench, you get the chance to watch what is happening, how the flow is going. You see if you need rebounding, if you need scoring. Then you go out and do what you have to do."

Despite his reserve-role status most of the year, McHale was the Celtics' second-leading scorer with a 19.8-point average and third-leading rebounder with 6.1 per game. He also finished the season seventh in the league in field goal percentage at .570.

"Even though it puts pressure on the other team because he is so big and they have to match up against our bigger starting lineup, I would prefer to have Kevin on the bench," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said. I like having 'Max' start and do his damage and then throw in McHale."

Auerbach, the Celtics' former coach and now the team's president, established the "sixth-man" concept that helped Boston become an NBA dynasty. "In the old days," he said, "every team used to start its best players and then come in with players of lesser ability. I wanted to change the concept of the game so the finishing lineup became a team's best."

"But it took a while because this extra starter, this sixth man, has to be a special player," Auerbach said.

CUT MX PROGRAM IN HALF — Senate majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas, right, and Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia look over some papers Thursday night on Capitol Hill after the Senate voted overwhelmingly to cut President Reagan's MX missile program in half unless the Pentagon finds a new home for the much-debated nuclear weapon. (AP Laserphoto)

Senate votes 50-missile MX deployment cap

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rebellious Senate majority that forced President Reagan to slash his MX missile fleet hopes to force the White House to find ways to shield the vulnerable weapon from Soviet nuclear attack.

Lacking the votes to change the outcome, the President on Thursday accepted a clearly unwelcome compromise that adds up to the most serious setback any component of his military modernization plan has ever suffered.

The Senate ratified the compromise, which calls for a 50 percent reduction in MX deployment, on an overwhelming 78-20 roll call vote after three days of intense negotiations between the White House and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Thirty-five Republicans and 43 Democrats voted for the amendment, with liberal MX opponents joining die-hard conservative MX supporters in the final balloting.

The White House scrambled to portray the development in the best possible light. Reagan called the vote on Nunn's amendment to the pending $302 billion defense authorization bill "a bipartisan expression of continuing support for our strategic modernization program." He said it proves senators have accepted MX as an important component of that program even though they are unhappy with its vulnerable basing mode. Some senators scoffed at that. And there were a host of varying interpretations of the ultimate significance of Nunn's success.

"Some will say it's a gap, some will say it's a pause, some will say it's the death of MX," said Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas. "You can interpret it any way you want to."

The compromise Reagan accepted provides that only 50 MX weapons can be deployed in existing Minuteman silos in Wyoming and Nebraska. Any MXs over 50 would have to use a different basing method.

The compromise also scaled back MX production to no more than 12 missiles during fiscal 1986 instead of the 48 Reagan had sought and the 21 the Senate Armed Services Committee had approved.

Congress already had approved 42 of the weapons, and the compromise provides that any MXs over the deployment limit of 50 can only be used for tests and as spares.

Reagan has sought a fully deployed force of 100 MXs. He

Walker said to have begun spying while on submarine

WASHINGTON (AP) — A retired Navy communications specialist began spying for the Soviet Union while serving aboard a U.S. nuclear missile submarine 19 years ago, according to U.S. intelligence sources.

The intelligence community sources, who asked not to be named, disclosed that John Anthony Walker Jr.'s alleged spy career began in 1966, as much as four years earlier than previously acknowledged by the government.

From August 1965 to April 1967, when he allegedly was recruited by the Soviets, Walker was stationed on the U.S.S. Simon Bolivar, a nuclear submarine armed with strategic missiles such as the Polaris and later the Poseidon, targeted on the Soviet Union.

This disclosure came after a top FBI official said Thursday the bureau expects to arrest more Americans in the alleged spy ring. Walker's 22-year-old son, Michael, a seaman on the nuclear aircraft carrier Nimitz, already has been charged with supplying documents for his father to give to the Soviets.

Also on Thursday, State Department sources said the Soviet Union has recalled a diplomat involved in the case. The Soviet official, who is expected to leave this country soon, was spotted Sunday by FBI agents near a rural drop site outside Washington.

At this drop site, the elder Walker allegedly left 129 classified Navy documents. Walker, 47, who now runs three Norfolk, Va., detective agencies, was arrested hours later in a suburban motel and charged with espionage.

A drop site, or "dead drop," is a common espionage tool. It is usually a secluded spot where one agent can leave information or instructions to be picked up later by another agent.

One intelligence community source said the government's estimate of when the father began spying was based on "very good information."

Previously, a federal prosecutor had said in court that two sources, corroborated by lie detector tests, told authorities the father had been spying for 15 to 18 years.

After the elder Walker left the Simon Bolivar in 1967, he spent more than two years in Norfolk running one shift at the message center that controls the U.S. submarine fleet in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean.

His next two years were spent supervising the most sophisticated Navy radio school in San Diego.

His final two years in the Navy were in Norfolk as a communications officer — first for the commander of all U.S. amphibious ships and then for the commander of all U.S. surface ships in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean.

"Based on the duration of the espionage and the access of those who have been charged," Assistant FBI Director Bill Baker said, "you have to assume the damage they caused is substantial."

'No smoking village' reported in China

PEKING (AP) — Xuying village in central China may be unique in this nation of 250 million smokers.

Following a 25-year campaign against smoking, none of the Henan province village's 150 adults smoke, and cigarettes are banned. This has earned Xuying the nickname "no smoking village," the official English-language China Daily reported today.

China is the world's biggest consumer and producer of tobacco.

Camp provides fun, learning

Being "different" can make childhood a lonely time. When that difference is diabetes, a child definitely feels different; he often resents the fact that he is the only one among his classmates who has to take daily insulin injections and what his friends eat desserts in the cafeteria, knowing that those desserts are forbidden to him.

It doesn't have to be so!

Diabetic children can enroll in one of the three sessions at Camp Sweeney for Diabetic Children this summer. Each session lasts three weeks, and can help diabetic children find new independence, new friends who share the same feelings, and a new way of eating that allows "treats" without upsetting that special diet that diabetics must follow in order to survive.

Camp Sweeney, located 10 miles northeast of Gainesville, in North Texas, is nestled in a picturesque, 346-acre site near the Oklahoma border. It has offered the diabetic child, ages 6 to 18 years of age, all the camping fun and activities of a regular camp, plus the extras of learning proper care for diabetes, since its first year in 1950.

A medical staff, skilled in the knowledge of juvenile diabetes, gives campers round-the-clock supervision and attention when needed. A dietician gives them recipes, menus and information on balancing their insulin intake and their diet, and how to substitute foods when a party is on their schedule so they can enjoy the fun without endangering their health.

Camp activities include arts and crafts, horseback riding, archery and riflery, swimming, tennis, soccer, sailing and fishing. Dances, talent shows, movies and other events such as an "all-camp Olympics," gives campers a full range of camp experiences.

Campers stay in one of six air-conditioned cabins, divided according to age groups. All cabins are staffed with several counselors at all times. Some of whom are former campers themselves, who know the problems and anxieties facing their charges. Parents are also given up on meal planning and caring for their diabetic youngster — tasks that often seem awesome.

Jim Campbell, a retired school administrator, has been the camp director since its beginning. The camp, sponsored by the Southwestern Diabetic Foundation, and funded in part, by the United Way, was founded by Dr. J. Shirley Sweeney, as an answer to helping diabetic children enjoy normal childhood activities as well as understand their illness better. Camp Sweeney opens its 36th year of operation with the first session to begin on June 2 and end on June 21; session two will be conducted from June 23 to July 12; and the final session is set for July 14 to Aug. 2. The first session is already full, and the others are filling fast.

During its many years of operation, the camp has cared for more than 9,000 children. Last year, Camp Sweeney served almost 300 children from 63 counties in Texas and from 10 different states and Mexico.

For parents who cannot pay the three week's tuition (costs available by contacting the camp), and aid program is offered, and application forms may be obtained from the business office. A booklet answering all questions about the camp will also be sent to prospective campers.

"Children of all races and creeds are admitted to the camp and no one has ever been turned away because of an inability to pay," said Campbell. "These children have as much right as any to the fun of a summer camp — we give them that — plus a little extra to help them understand themselves better."

Parents wishing to enroll their child for either the second or third session should call the business office immediately. About 100 children attend each session and space is limited.

For more information and/or application forms, write or call Southwestern Diabetic Foundation, P.O. Box 918, Gainesville, 76140; (817) 665-9502.

New law gives single mothers a hand in collecting support

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a single mother who has had difficulty getting child support for the last 10 years. I became so desperate, I even took my ex-husband back to court, but it didn't do any good. I spent hundreds of dollars on legal fees. Finally, I just gave up.

I recently discovered that there is a new federal law for child support enforcement. There are state and local agencies that collect child support for women in my situation, and their fees are very small compared to what most lawyers charge.

Abby, not many women are aware of this, but they do read your column. Please let them know about this new law.

HELPED AT LAST

DEAR HELPED: Thanks for wanting to help others as you have been helped.

In investigating the problems concerning child support, I came upon a wonderful new handbook titled, "Handbook on Child Support Enforcement." Some questions that are answered:

— My boyfriend and I are still in high school, and our baby is 6 months old. Why should legal paternity be established if the father has no money to support the child?

— What if he denies he is the father, or says he's not sure?

— The father of my child is in the Army, but I don't know where he's stationed. Can the enforcement agency find him?

— My ex-husband is in the Navy. Can I get his child support payments deducted from his paycheck?

— My ex-husband has a good job and he's willing to have the support payments deducted from his paycheck, but his employer won't do it. Now what?

— Can I force my children's father to include them under the group health insurance where he works?

— My ex-husband has remarried and has another family to support. How will this affect the support of my children?

— How can I get my child support increased?

— I think the child's father is still in the area. What information will the enforcement office need to find him?

— What if I don't have his Social Security number?

— The father of my child is in jail. Can I get support?

— I heard that my children's father is buying a very expensive car. He owes over $5,000 in back support. Can the credit agency be told this?

— As soon as my children's father is notified about child support enforcement, he moves. What should I do?

— My children and I need financial assistance now. Their father left us 10 years ago. Will they still try to find him, or is it too late?

For a free copy of the new "Handbook on Child Support Enforcement," write: "Child Support Handbook," Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. This helpful booklet is free to anyone who requests it. Be sure to include your name and address, clearly printed.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Hurt," whose husband never gave her presents on special occasions. I had the same trouble with my husband, so for Valentine's Day I bought myself a beautiful pair of earrings and enclosed a card that read: "To Miriam with all my love... Miriam."

My husband got the bill.

Gena on Genealogy

Last week I mentioned "marriage banns" and bonds and license for marriage as being three completely different items. I will try to explain the difference in this column.

Marriage banns were a practice used during the colonial period of churches reading an intention of a couple to marry to the public. This usually occurred on three consecutive Sundays and often the notice was posted in public places. This was done so that anyone who objected to the marriage could say why it should not be permitted. If no objections were made, the marriage usually was performed the following month. The posting of banns or intentions was eventually replaced by the license.

Marriage bonds were a way to protect the woman if a marriage should have to be declared null and void. Divorce during this period was possible but very difficult. The prospective groom was required to post a bond indicating that he knew of no reason the marriage should not occur. Occasionally, a couple married and then the following year or several years later a woman and children arrived by ship from Europe establishing the fact that she was the legitimate wife. The bond acted as a deterrent to prevent this from happening.

When you find a marriage license be careful in assuming the marriage actually occurred if the dates are not completed.

Much has been written in recent years about premarital contracts leading people to believe that Hollywood and actors and actresses invented this type of agreement. This is definitely not true.

Marriage contracts, although not common, have been used for many years to protect the widow entering into a second marriage. If the first husband left her and their children a sizable inheritance, a marriage contract was a way of protection. Without an agreement, all of the woman's property became the property of the man upon marriage and he would do whatever he wanted from that time.

Since we have no uniform policy as to marriages during the early periods, it is important that when researching an area you become familiar with the local laws, traditions and customs.

Monday is Memorial Day and while honoring our dead, remember the living with love and kindness.

Diabetic retinopathy leading cause of blindness

The leading cause of blindness in people ages 20 to 64 is a disorder that strikes diabetics.

Diabetic retinopathy robs the sight of about 5,000 Americans each year, says the Texas Medical Association.

The loss of sight results from the death or leakage of small blood vessels of the retina, the inner lining for the back of the eye where visual images are formed. The leaking blood reduces vision and can produce scar tissue on the retina, leading to permanent loss of vision.

But if the disorder is diagnosed early, laser treatment can reduce the risk of severe visual loss, says the American Academy of Ophthalmology, whose members are medical doctors specializing in eye care.

Treatment is usually effective in controlling retinopathy. Although the disorder tends to recur, repeated treatments can maintain existing vision.

Makin' Things: appliances with kitchen cozies

By STEVIE BALDWIN

What do you do with a toaster that works like a dream and looks like a nightmare? I suppose if money is no object, you can throw it out and buy a pretty, new one. But if money is very much an object, as it is to so many of us, the next best thing is to make an attractive cover-up to head that ugly-but-still-useful small appliance. These colorful kitchen cozies will add a refreshing country touch to your kitchen. They're so easy to put together that you'll probably want to make a few sets as gifts for friends and family.

You can stitch up one or more kitchen cozies in record time using our detailed plans. They include full-size patterns for a can opener cover, oven mitt and toaster cover. Also included are full-size designs for the appliques: a rainbow and cloud, a country scene, a kitchen scene, and a fruit and vegetable arrangement. Our plans feature detailed cutting and assembly diagrams, a complete materials list, and step-by-step instructions.

If you would like to order the plans, please specify Project No. 1233-6 and send $3.95. We are also offering plans for our barnyard potholders which feature four adorable designs: a cow, a pig, a cat, and a setting hen. Please specify Project No. 1519-2. If you would like both plans, please state both project numbers and send $7.90. All prices include postage and handling.

Our color catalog features hundreds of additional projects for you to make and enjoy. The projects range from stuffed-fabric dolls and toys to wooden and PVC furniture. If you would like a copy of the catalog, please send $2.95 with your order. Mail your order to Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

The appliques are attached to the fabric pieces before the cozy is assembled. I used bright yellow quilted fabric for the covers, and coordinating solid color fabrics for the appliques. I used yellow, red, and blue for the rainbow, and white for the cloud. You will also need to cut a matching piece of iron-on fusing material for each applique.

To make the toaster cozy, first trace the outline of your toaster onto the quilted fabric, allowing about one inch of margin around the design. Cut two pieces, a front and a back. Sandwich the fusing material between the applique and the front cozy piece, and press with an iron, following the manufacturer's directions.

Stitch around the outer edges of the appliques using a narrow zigzag stitch, changing thread color when necessary to match the applique. If you prefer hand stitching, use a closely spaced blanket stitch.

The front and back cover pieces are joined by an inset that is as wide as your toaster, and runs the length of the front and back pieces. Cut an inset piece. With wrong sides together, pin the long curved edge of the front piece to one long edge of the inset piece. The raw edges should be even. Stitch the seam, and trim the seam allowance to 1/4 inch. Stitch the inset to the back piece in the same manner. Encase all raw edges in double-fold bias tape.

I added a plastic curtain ring across the top for a hanger. To do this, simply thread a three-inch length of bias tape through the ring, and place it across the top center of the inset piece. Stitch the ends of the tape to the cozy along each seam line.

Cute kitchen cozies

An organized closet is worth the trauma

NEW YORK (NEA) — It's time for a little spring organizing. Time to make room in your closet for hot-weather fashions. Most of us drag our feet about the shift in seasonal clothing. But now that it's warm, we can peel off the layers of winter clothing, put away the boots, mufflers, gloves and heavy sweaters and be comfortable.

Simplicity is the key for spring and summer dressing. We wear less so we need less. But before you go shopping for anything new, you have to get your closet ready.

A clean, organized closet makes it easier to get dressed quickly. When all your things are in "ready to wear" condition, not all jammed together so that they get wrinkled, you'll be surprised how many things you really have to choose from. Here are some simple tips:

Set aside one hour just for you. Use a full-length mirror with daylight or good lighting nearby.

Get plastic bags in two sizes. Large garbage bags are great and work for most things and vegetable-size storage bags for smaller items. Cardboard boxes are also useful. Don't forget mothballs.

Take out every single thing in your closet one by one and really, honestly, examine it.

Try on anything you haven't worn for a while to check the fit, both front and back.

Separate clothes into four piles on your bed, floor or dresser. These are:

Storage pile: These are clothes that are in perfect condition and fit well and you want to see again next winter. Never, never put away dirty clothes. A simple spot on a jacket could become permanent after a long hot summer. Clean or wash it before storing.

Repair pile: Check carefully for loose or missing buttons, broken zippers, holes in seams, spots, loose hems, hooks barely hanging by a thread, shoes with worn heels, sweaters with balls, soiled collars, ripped handbags or those with broken straps or zippers and on and on. Just think how nice it will be to have all of your things like new again.

No hope pile: Sad but true, you just can't wear that favorite blouse one more time. The pants that fit 20 pounds ago must go. Get rid of all of these things that cause stress. If you have something that has stayed in the back of the closet for at least four seasons, say goodbye. Take out the things that are beyond repair or totally out of style and you know will never come back.

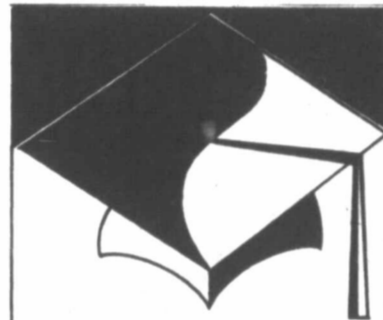

Forget sentimentality. You'll never wear the bridesmaid dress again or that crazy thing you bought in a tourist shop on vacation.

Great buys pile: Anything that has passed these tests was a smart purchase and goes back into the closet to start wearing right now. Save winter blouses. They can go with summer skirts. Silk, polyester and cotton can be worn all year long.

One word of caution. If a two-piece dress or a pantsuit or any outfit with more than one piece is left, be sure all the parts are in good condition. If not, don't get rid of the whole thing. Keep the parts that are wearable and match them up to something new.

When you put these good clothes back into the closet, group them together. Put all the blouses in one spot and do the same with pants, skirts and dresses. Don't keep wire hangers around with snags in them. They could tear your clothes. Try the plastic type.

Now. One last detail. Make a list of what's hanging in your closet, including the color of each item.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

★ KEEPING UP

These are serious times. Communism is all around us, and threatens to stamp out our freedom of worship. We should keep ourselves informed on the world situation at all times. We should know more of the threats that they make, and we should know more of what they are trying to take away from us.

Attend church "and take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God: Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Religion Roundup

NASHVILLE (AP) — A committee working on a new United Methodist hymnal and worship book says a churchwide survey finds two hymns are run away favorites, "How Great Thou Art" and "Amazing Grace."

In third place is early Methodist leader Charles Wesley's "O for a Thousand Tongues to Sing."

Others in the top 10 are "The Old Rugged Cross," "Blessed Assurance," "Holy, Holy, Holy," "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," "All Hail the Power," "In the Garden," and Martin Luther's "The Church's One Foundation."

Noting that the findings indicate many people want hymns to remain familiar, the Rev. Carlton R. Young, editor for the new hymnal, says: such hymns "represent the memory and community in a way other styles don't."

"It is not the doctrine of these hymns so much as it is the feeling behind them, and that is important."

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, Roman Catholic archbishop of Chicago, says the church has concentrated in recent years on changing structures but now needs to concentrate on "changing minds and hearts."

In a new book published by St. Anthony Messenger Press, "Christ Lives in Me," Bernardin says "renewal's basic purpose is not structural change but more zealous proclamation of the Gospel."

Americans have more respect for organized religion than for any of the country's other major institutions, according to a poll by the Princeton Religious Research Center, a branch of the Gallup Poll.

1st Assembly to conduct kid's crusade

A Kid's Crusade with Evangelist and Mrs. Harold R. Stone will be held at the First Assembly of God Church, 500 S. Cuyler, Sunday through Thursday.

The crusade programs will begin at 6:30 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. during the week.

Evangelist and Mrs. Stone have specialized in children's ministry for more than 10 years. During that time they have been children's directors and children's pastors. In the past two years they have been involved in fulltime evangelistic ministry for children.

In their crusade program, the Stones use puppets, gospel magic, object lessons, felt stories, gospel clowns and numerous other things of interest for children, Pastor John Farina said.

The stone family has traveled throughout the Southwest region of the United States telling thousands of children about Christ.

Pastor Farina invited the public to come "and share in the excitement of this special time for children."

Local church sets Bible school dates

Pampa's Central Baptist Church, corner of Starkweather and Browning, will begin its Vacation Bible School on Wednesday, May 29.

The school will be held from May 29 through May 31 and from June 3 through June 5, with classes lasting from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. daily. A parents night will begin at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, June 5.

The school will be for children from age 4 (by September, 1984) through sixth grade. There will be no cost for any child to attend.

Rev. Norman Rushing, pastor, invited all children to attend.

For more information, call 665-1631.

Hi-Land Christian sets vacation school

Vacation Bible School will be conducted at Hi-Land Christian Church, 1615 N. Banks, from Monday, June 3, through Friday, June 7.

The school will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon daily.

Theme for this year's school is "In the Footsteps of Jesus." There will be a variety of activities, including crafts, music, games and Bible stories.

The school programs will be available for children in kindergarten through the sixth grade, with visitors welcome.

For further information, call 669-6700, 665-0475 or 665-6266.

St. Matthew to change morning worship time

St. Matthew's Episcopal Church, 727 W. Browning, will change its Sunday morning worship time to 10 a.m. in June.

The Holy Eucharist service has been held formerly at 10:30 a.m. The time change will begin June 2.

Former guide for pilots guides parishioners as priest

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — The Rev. Ernesto Rios uses himself as an example that God works in mysterious ways.

Staunchly religious since his childhood days in the Bronx, N.Y., Rios took the path to priesthood after spending 14 years guiding pilots and their passengers safely through the skies.

The former air traffic controller also says he is the only Puerto Rican priest in the Orthodox Church in America which has an estimated 1 million members. The Orthodox Church, however, consists of a federation of Christian churches found primarily in Greece, Russia, Eastern Europe and Western Asia.

"That's how God works," says the jovial priest.

When Rios arrived here in 1980 several months after he was ordained, he helped finish construction of the St. James Orthodox Church across from the city hall of this growing retirement city. He is not discouraged that his basic congregation consists of only 21 parishioners.

"The land and church are already paid for," he boasts as he explains where he plans to build a church hall and a dozen condominium units for retired members of the Orthodox Church.

"This will be the nucleus of a living orthodox community — a magnet that will draw people to church," he says enthusiastically.

The only sadness Rios shows is when he talks about his father, who died two years ago.

"Papa prayed every day of his life. He took people into his house, fed them and clothed them," he adds.

Rios also remembers his father's mixed emotions when he converted from a Roman Catholic to the Orthodox Church. His conversion began in the early 1970s when he encountered the Byzantine Rites while still a Roman Catholic. The attraction, he admits, was the liturgy, which has remained almost unchanged since the early centuries of Christianity. Rios explains that the division between Eastern and Western churches came to a head in A.D. 1054. For hundreds of years the two churches had drifted apart because of political, cultural and geographical factors.

He decided to become a priest in 1977 when he experienced what air traffic controllers refer to as "burnout." For him, "burnout" came when he became concerned he might cause a plane crash. He was decertified soon after.

After high school, Rios joined the Air National Guard in 1959 while living in Puerto Rico and became a radar maintenance technician. While on active duty he met and married his wife, Marta Gladys. They've been together 25 years and have four children.

"I courted her by mail for five months and we had only six dates. The seventh was at the altar where we were married," he recalls. In 1964, he joined the Federal Aviation Administration and served in Puerto Rico, New York City and Rochester, N.Y.

After his separation from the FAA, Rios attended St. Vladimir Seminary in Crestwood, N.Y. He was ordained a deacon in April 1979 and was made a priest November of that year.

ELDER DAN PALMER

Mormon elder awaiting visa

Elder Dan Palmer of Mesa, Ariz., is currently serving on a mission in the Pampa area for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons).

Elder Palmer has been in Texas for about five weeks and in Pampa for two weeks. Prior to coming to Texas, he received training at the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah, for two months.

A Spanish language missionary, Elder Palmer is awaiting a visa waiver clearance before he serves the rest of his mission in the Venezuela Caracas Mission.

A 1984 high school graduate, Elder Palmer attended Brigham Young University at Provo for one semester. During the summer he worked with his grandfather's plumbing company in Mesa.

After arriving in Texas, he was in Dallas for two days and then served as a missionary in Big Lake for about two weeks before being transferred to Pampa.

Here he will be working with his missionary companion, Elder George Hamil. Elder Hamil of Shingle Springs, Calif., has been in Pampa for about five months. He has about three months left on his missionary tour.

The two elders visit with residents in Pampa and surrounding communities to discuss the gospel of Christ and the tenets of the Latter-day Saints. They are among approximately 25,000 LDS missionaries currently serving on missions throughout the United States and other nations throughout the world.

Muleshoe takes exception to comments from Arlington about women's looks ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Muleshoe city officials are miffed over an Arlington city councilman's suggestion that if they failed to enter a contestant in the Miss Texas pageant, no one would notice.

After the city of Arlington agreed to provide Arlington's entrant with a several thousand dollar wardrobe, Councilman Bill Snider quipped, "It's not as if she was Miss Muleshoe. It's not as if we wouldn't be missed" at the Miss Texas pageant.

Miss Arlington started a controversy last week when she tearfully asked the city for $4,000 to buy a wardrobe for the state contest and Mayor Harold Patterson consented. On Tuesday, however, Patterson announced that $3,000 in pledges from private businesses would take the burden off taxpayers.

Snider had made the Muleshoe remark in justifying the city's expenditure for the wardrobe.

Residents of Muleshoe, a farming community of 5,000 in the Panhandle, said they didn't appreciate the comment.

"We may be stuck off up here, but we're proud of what we have," Clayta Williams, editor of the Muleshoe Journal, told the Dallas Times Herald.

Snider has "thrown a slur on a proud and friendly town," said Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce manager Toni Eagle.

"He made it sound like a Miss Muleshoe would not be very important. I assure you, our little girls up here are just as pretty as anywhere else in this big state."

Several Muleshoe residents insist Snider owes the town an apology — a suggestion Snider has already taken to heart.

"Muleshoe just jumped out of my mouth," he said Wednesday. "I certainly would apologize if they took offense."

"It's not like I'm from New York and just happened to hear of Muleshoe and took a shot at them," Snider said. "It could just as easily have been Dallas or Abilene or anywhere else."

CHAMP — Bill Smith, right, of Dallas sits with Horseshoe Casino owner Jack Binion and his World Series of Poker in Las Vega, Nev., Thursday. Smith outlasted 40 other players in the Hold 'Em event to capture the money.

Texan wins $700,000 first prize in poker world series

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A Dallas man who says he began playing poker to avenge the losses of his father, a notoriously poor gambler, knocked off 139 other gamblers in the four-day World Series of Poker to walk away with a $700,000 first prize.

With $1.4 million in cash and chips on the table, Bill Smith, 51, unveiled his full house Thursday to beat the three 5s held by his last opponent, fellow Texan T.J. Cloutier, also of Dallas.

Cloutier, who lost $350,000 in the hand, settled for $280,000 second prize.

Smith said he began playing poker full-time in New Mexico in 1958, vowing to win more money than his father had lost in his lifetime.

"I've done that and then some," he said.

"I'm not sure there's ever been a bigger hand than this," the former oil company draftsman said after winning the record prize at Binion's Horseshoe Club.

"Whoever held a card was going to win it." A crowd 10-deep had watched play at the club's tables.

Not all the money will go to Smith, though.

Like many players in the field, he had to find sponsors to put up the $10,000 he needed to buy in to the game. Typically, sponsors are given a cut of the prize money.

Cloutier, a former professional football player in the Canadian Football League, said he would use his prize money to play more poker.

"I've won some other tournaments but this is the biggest money I've ever won," he said.

When the last day of play started Thursday, six players were still around the table. But Jess Alto of Dallas and Hamid Dastmalchi of Las Vegas were eliminated in the first hour of play.

Smith, who had the lead with $404,000 going into the final day, had stretched his winnings to $900,000 by the time Scott Mayfield of Grants Pass, Ore., was eliminated.

But Smith caught some losing hands and at one point during play he, Cloutier and Berry Johnston of Oklahoma City all had between $400,000 and $500,000 in chips.

In one of the biggest pots of the tournament, Cloutier and Johnston faced off for $868,000 in a pot won by Cloutier's three jacks. The loss eliminated Johnston, bringing it down to Cloutier and Smith.

Savings and loan progress

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — You hear a lot about the bad news, the savings and loan man said. You hear about the high-flyers who took too many risks and crashed, leaving their depositors to pick up the pieces, he said. And, he said, you hear about the outfits that just don't want to come into the modern world of finance.

"But this industry has made a lot of progress in the past few years," said Robert O'Brien Jr., chairman of Carteret Savings and Loan Association, whose 84 offices in New Jersey and Florida represent $5 billion in assets.

"You don't hear much about the progress," he lamented. The high-flyers who crash get the publicity and produce a negative image. They give the impression of an industry on the ropes. It isn't so, he said.

What is true is that the old-time thrift industry, limited mostly to small savings accounts and home mortgages, is becoming a modern, computerized industry able to handle almost all its customers' financial services.

"Nothing happens overnight," said O'Brien. "Give us two more years." Then, he predicted, as the industry exploits the freedoms resulting from lessened federal regulation, the consumer will be impressed by what he sees.

—An industry that finally is released from the burden of those old 6 and 7 percent home mortgages that were made way back in the 1950s, when depositors were paid only 5.5 percent for their money.

State can't keep building prisons

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The state must start considering other means to incarcerating some non-violent prisoners or else risk returning to court to deal with more overcrowding problems, the chief attorney for the Texas Department of Corrections says.

"We can't continue to build prisons to keep pace with growth," said attorney Steve Martin during a Sam Houston State University seminar.

"If we don't get a hold of the growth, then we'll be right back at the courthouse, in litigation over the crowding issue," he said.

Martin, along with TDC Director Raymond K. Procnier, last week negotiated a settlement in a 13-year legal battle over prison overcrowding.

The settlement given preliminary approval Tuesday by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice does not limit the number of people the state can imprison, but puts a cap on the number of inmates in the state's 26 prisons.

The present prison population will have to be reduced by about 5,000 inmates by Sept. 1, 1989.

But if the prison population continues to grow at its current rate, TDC will add 11,500 inmates in the next four years and grow to 49,500 prisoners from the present 38,000.

The growth would require 25 new dormitories and five more maximum security prisons.

The Legislature did not allocate money for the extensive growth program, which could cost up to $250 million more, Martin said.

Legislators did, however, earmark about $100 million for construction of prison bed space, including $18 million to build 10 prison work camps for 200 inmates each.

The prison work camps will be built on existing TDC property and be surrounded by high barbed-wire security fence, but no guard towers.

"We're going to place the cream of the crop of inmates in these camps," Martin said.

If the camps prove to be successful, Martin said they conceivably could be moved closer to communities where prisoners could get jobs and help feed their families.

In a critique of the prison reform lawsuit filed in 1972 by inmate David Ruiz, Martin attacked what he called the TDC's old legal strategy of denying any problems existed and hoping reform efforts would go away.
