

Governor reconvenes Legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Legislature adjourned at midnight Monday — but within an hour was called back for a special session after many lawmakers blamed Gov. Mark White for the last-minute death of a health care plan for the poor.

The $70 million medical care plan died in the House when time ran out during debate, and the bill's supporters were angry.

"All along, Gov. White has been wishy-washy on this issue. ... He has to call a special session on this issue. He can't ignore it," said Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, a leader of the House Mexican-American caucus.

The House ended the 1985 regular session at midnight, but less than an hour later White signed a proclamation convening the special session at 10 a.m. today.

Before the Legislature ran aground on the indigent health care issue, lawmakers approved a $36.8 billion, two-year budget. Senators voted 28-3 for the spending plan, while the House endorsed it on a 132-11 vote.

"I am told it is a certifiable bill," said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd, noting the requirement that the state comptroller must guarantee the budget will balance.

The budget includes spending $953.5 million for the state's prison system, and a 3 percent annual pay raise for state employees.

Despite the frantic, last-minute activity, one of the biggest impacts made by the lawmakers' 69th biennial session was felt on Sunday, the day before the Legislature adjourned.

Even though White hasn't yet signed the bill to repeal the Sunday-closing Blue Law, hundreds of shoppers headed for the stores as two of the state's largest retailers jumped the gun and opened for business.

The Foley's and J.C. Penney stores were open Sunday, and some smaller stores in Texas shopping malls followed suit.

White last week said he intends to sign the repeal bill, but even when he does, the current law isn't supposed to expire until Sept. 1.

In listing their accomplishments, legislative leaders pointed to passage of a comprehensive, statewide water plan that will be put before voters in November as a key accomplishment of the session.

If voters agree, the $1 billion bonding program will provide funds for water conservation and use projects across Texas.

The fee increase bill was passed Sunday and sent to the governor. It would affect a wide variety of Texans — including those who want to drive a car, file a civil lawsuit, drill an oil well or dump hazardous wastes. The new fees are to take effect Sept. 1.

The increase that caught most taxpayers' eyes was a hike from the current annual $5.25 motor vehicle inspection fee for all cars to an annual $7.75 fee for cars two years or older. New car inspection would cost $15, good for two years.

Driver licenses, good for four years, jumped from $10 to $16.

Filing a civil law suit in a district court will cost $75 instead of the current $25, except there will be no increase for filing child custody cases.

Also, personalized auto license plates would increase from $40 to $75 a set; drillers of oil and gas wells would have to pay a special $50 fee to get their permit expedited through bureaucratic red tape, and the Department of Water Resources would be authorized to charge $2,000 to $50,000 for hazardous waste permits.

In addition, the governor said last week he likely would sign into law a bill that will triple state college tuition this fall, with additional increases later.

The plan to boost the current $4 per semester hour tuition rate to $12 per hour sent some 2,000 college students marching on the Capitol this spring. But lawmakers said the state's budget crunch and need to raise revenue overrode the students' concerns.

White also indicated he will sign one of two bills that would raise the legal age for drinking liquor in Texas from 19 to 21, a move being made under pressure from the federal government.

Federal pressure also was behind a bill that would require drivers to buckle up their seatbelts, legislation White hasn't yet decided whether to sign.

A big loser in the 1985 Legislature were the forces backing pari-mutuel gambling.

A bill that would have allowed legalized horse race gambling made it through a House committee, but was voted down on the House floor. Last-ditch efforts in the Senate also failed.

City postpones action on oil well regulations

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners this morning deferred action on granting a Specific Use Permit and adopting an ordinance regarding proposed drilling of new oil wells within city limits.

The commission held a public hearing on the request by Triple J Oil Co. on the permit for wells in the Tumbleweed Addition, located southeast of the Price Road and Kentucky intersection.

Triple J currently has one existing well on the land within city limits and plans to drill two new wells. The first well had been drilled after the land was annexed into the city, but no permit had been obtained for the drilling.

Commissioners deferred action on the proposed ordinance after Joe Curtis, co-partner of Triple J, and Joe Dickey, president of J. R. Development Co., complained they had not had time to study the proposed ordinance properly. J. R. Development owns the surface rights of the land in the dispute.

The ordinance had been prepared over the weekend by City Attorney Don Lane at the request of City Manager Bob Hart.

In the public hearing on the matter today, Curtis said the Triple J lease rights had existed since 1937, long before the land was annexed in two parts in the late 1970s and the early 1980s.

"Oil and gas lease was prior to all ordinances" later adopted by the city in regard to zoning regulations concerning oil and gas wells within city limits, Curtis said.

Amarillo attorney Howard Sanders, representing Triple J, said he realized the city has the right to properly regulate oil and gas production in the city to protect the health and safety of its citizens.

But he questioned application of zoning restrictions on annexed land where producing wells already existed. He said the separation of mineral and surface rights had long been accepted under state laws.

The surface rights are "subject to the (mineral) lease already there," Sanders claimed.

Sanders said the development firm bought the land fully aware of the existing wells in the area and of plans for future drilling operations.

He objected to the proposed restrictions placed on the drilling of new wells. The restrictions create a situation in which the oil company "is being deprived of that which is theirs and has been theirs," he stated.

Sanders said the proposed ordinance, which would establish limitations, restrictions and standards for the drilling of the wells, creates "onerous burdens" which "are unreasonable" economically for the oil company.

David Holt, local attorney representing J. R. Development, said he had no disagreement that the oil firm's lease had been in effect for a number of years.

But he said it was his opinion that the city zoning codes on nonconforming use, cited by Sanders, referred only to wells existing and in use at the time of annexation. The zoning codes do not give an unlimited right to future drilling under the nonconforming status, Holt claimed.

He noted that Triple J had drilled a well on the land within city limits in 1982 by ignoring city regulations and seeking no permit "completely in violation" of zoning codes in effect at the time.

The commission has a right to be concerned about the health and safety of residents, Holt said. If the commissioners do not impose strict standards on the operation of the new wells, "you are derelict to your duty" to city residents, he declared.

Holt said Triple J had had its lease rights for 50 years, with more than enough time to have developed additional drilling operations. "They just sort of sat on their hands when they should have done something earlier," he said.

He said he objected to an ordinance relating to a specific tract of land for drilling purposes. Instead, he said the city should adopt a general, comprehensive ordinance relating to all property within the city.

Moos and music will ring out in Miami at annual cow calling

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — Moos and music will fill the air again Friday and Saturday at the annual National Cow Calling Contest and Frontier Follies Friday and Saturday.

Follies director and contest spokesman Max Faulkner expects between about 2,000 people at the Cow Calling Contest which will be held Saturday afternoon.

"We've had between 1,800 and 2,200 in the past and we expect that this year," Faulkner said, adding that good weather is a key to a good turnout.

The Follies will be held at 8 p.m. Friday at the Miami School Auditorium. Director Faulkner said this year's Follies will have a "Hee Haw" theme and will feature town-folk singing current country-western hits and some "golden oldies."

"We'll feature some silly jokes, have people popping out of the cornfield, have salutes," Faulkner said, comparing the Follies to the syndicated TV program "Hee Haw."

Saturday festivities begin with an Old Timers' Reunion at 9 a.m. Saturday in the Roberts County Park. The pit barbecue will commence at noon with the Cow Calling to follow at about 1 p.m.

The Miami Volunteer Fire

Department is handling the barbecue. Faulkner said that more than 2,000 pounds of beef will be used.

"They should be digging the pit Tuesday or Wednesday, start the fire Thursday and begin the slow cooking Friday," Faulkner said.

The cow calling contest will be divided into three categories, men's, women's and Grandmas. The winners in each category will be awarded $50 each for first place and $25 for second place.

Another contest will be the Little Miss Miami contest which is sponsored by the Miami High School Cheerleaders. The contest is open to girls from grades kindergarten through third grade. The kids will model dresses at the Follies Friday and short sets Saturday immediately before the calling. Although only one girl will be crowned Miss Miami, all contestants will receive a prize. The girls will be judged by people who do not live in Miami.

The cheerleaders will also sell balloons and candy.

A new feature this year will be the city softball tournament, which will begin at 7 p.m. Friday and will run through Sunday at the city baseball diamond. A spokesman for the tournament said ten teams have entered.

President to call for tax 'revolution'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will call on the nation tonight to join "a new American revolution" he hopes will spark the economy through an overhaul of the federal tax code that lowers individual rates, eliminates various deductions and increases the burden on big business.

The initiative, being announced in a nationally broadcast address from the Oval Office at 8 p.m. EDT, also is a high-stakes political gamble for the president, who is trying to reverse a string of congressional setbacks he has suffered in the first four months of his second term.

Setting the stage for his broadcast speech during a Florida visit Monday to Disney World's Epcot Center, a 260-acre showcase of futuristic technology and foreign cultures, the president told an audience that included many teen-agers, "It's a proposal intended to launch a new American revolution and to give to you young people, as you come of age, a nation of even greater freedom, vitality and strength."

He added, "Just as the American people rebelled against oppressive taxation some two centuries ago, the reform that I will announce tomorrow will represent a dramatic effort to make our tax code more simple, efficient and fair and place more resources into the hands of your families and, ultimately, you yourself."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president will give examples of how the changes will affect various income groups and describe incentives for business, "particularly small business and their entrepreneurial efforts."

However, the administration is not releasing the full details of the package — and presumably some of its less attractive aspects — until Wednesday in order to fix the spotlight on Reagan's upbeat broadcast presentation.

The plan Reagan is sending to Capitol Hill is a softened version of a sweeping proposal the Treasury Department drafted.

American hospital manager kidnapped on Beirut street

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen kidnapped the American manager of the American University Hospital today as he walked to work in Moslem west Beirut, a university spokesman said.

David Jacobsen, 54, of Huntington Beach, Calif., became the sixth American kidnapped in Beirut since March 1984.

There was no claim of responsibility for the abduction. Islamic Jihad, believed to be an extremist Shiite Moslem group with links to Iran, has claimed responsibility for the other kidnappings.

Jacobsen was walking from the American University of Beirut campus, where he lives, to the hospital complex a block away when was abducted at gunpoint, said the spokesman, who declined to be named.

An eyewitness, who also refused to be identified, said the six kidnappers climbed out of a blue van as Jacobsen stepped out of the hospital's medical gate.

They fired one pistol shot at the feet of an unidentified doctor who was walking with Jacobsen at about 8 a.m., the witness said.

He said Jacobsen told the gunmen in broken Arabic: "Okay, I'll go, I'll go." Jacobsen then stepped into the back seat of the van with the gunmen and it sped away, the witness added.

In Washington, a spokesman for the U.S. State Department said: "We can confirm that the kidnapping took place and the man was in fact David Jacobsen. We have no further comment at this time."

Jacobsen was appointed director of the university hospital last December. He worked in Saudi Arabia before his Beirut assignment and has three children living in the United States. He is divorced.

The other Americans still missing in Beirut are: William Buckley, 56, the U.S. Embassy political officer; the Rev. Benjamin Weir, 60, a Presbyterian minister; Peter Kilburn, 60, an American University of Beirut librarian; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, 50, a Roman Catholic priest; and Terry A. Anderson, 37, The Associated Press' chief Middle East correspondent.

Pockets empty, stomach's full

Maybe it was the anchovies. About 11:30 p.m. Monday, a hungry thief proved that he'll do most anything for a pizza.

Tina Sue Parks, 25, a delivery driver for Domino's Pizza, 1423 N. Hobart, told police she was robbed late Monday.

The booty? A large pizza. The employee said she took the pizza to 1145 Huff Rd., where she was met by a black teenager, Parks reported.

"How much is it?" the thief reportedly asked.

But the bandit wasn't really interested in the price, because he "attacked" the driver and absconded with the warm pizza, according to reports. The suspect also tried but failed to get a money bag, the reports said.

Police said the Pizza thief fled the scene on foot.

Abortion clinic licensing okayed, health facilities agency abolished

AUSTIN (AP) — "Pro-life" advocates, frustrated time and again in the Legislature, won on the final night a partial victory in a session-long effort to clamp state regulations on abortion.

In the closing hours before the Monday midnight deadline, the House and Senate voted for Texas Department of Health licensing and regulation of abortion clinics.

The measure came as part of a compromise that would extend the life of the Department of Health but would kill the Texas Health Facilities Commission, which controls the construction of hospitals and nursing homes.

House-Senate conferees worked Monday night to salvage the health department bill. Senators agreed to let the Health Facilities Commission die, but they wanted to maintain a measure allowing the Department of Health to assume the facilities regulation functions.

Federal health care funds to Texas could be cut if there is no regulation of health facility construction.

The sticking point among the conferees was who should make the decision to shift that authority to the Department of Health. Rep. Brad Wright, R-Houston, wanted that authority to rest with federal officials.

Washington, who had threatened to filibuster against abortion regulation, made the motion to allow abortion regulation and keep the governor in charge of deciding whether to reinstate health facility regulation.

problem of the "proverbial can of worms we're about to open," Holt said.

Sanders said the preparation of new ordinances would only delay the planned drilling operations. But he later said he had no objections to deferring action on the matter to allow further study of the proposed ordinance.

Eska Miller, representing the nearby Westside Church of Christ, said the church was concerned with increased traffic problems, problems of well leakage and other matters regarding the health and safety of those attending the church.

He beseeched the commission "to consider the safety and welfare of the city."

Dickey said the development firm had been aware of the oil lease and had considered land development in relation to city zoning codes. He said the firm had considered seeking residential zoning, "but the city staff had advised the commercial zoning."

He said the company had not objected to the 1982 well since it was not on its property and no development was planned there. But the two new wells would interfere with mobile home park development, he said.

Holt said the city should consider imposing the restrictions to avoid problems which have developed in Borger, Stinnett and other cities. Pampa "has always been a town with a reputation of being clean," he said.

Hart said he had been checking with other cities to see how they handle drilling operations within the city. He said the trend has been to tightly control the wells to protect property values, appearance and the health and safety of residents.

The ordinance will be considered at the June 11 meeting at 6 p.m.

Boulter schedules

Panhandle meet

PANHANDLE—Congressman Beau Boulter will hold a town hall meeting at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Panhandle War Memorial Building.

Boulter, continuing his series of meetings throughout the district, invited all Carson County residents to attend. He will hold additional meetings in Dalhart, Stratford and Dumas on Saturday.

"Over the past months, these meetings have been central to keeping me in touch with the people of the 13th District," Boulter said. "We've talked about everything—from the problems on the farm to the Cost of Living Adjustments for Social Security recipients."

"While I'm in Panhandle, I want to talk first about the 1986 budgets, then get into whatever the folks want to talk about."

Millions of Americans pay tribute to nation's war dead

By SCOTT WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans jammed highways to the beach and countryside in the first bash welcoming the return of summer, while in public ceremonies and private remembrances, millions more met on the green grass fields of Memorial Day to honor the dead of bygone wars.

The holiday that began as Decoration Day to honor the dead of the Civil War has since become the kickoff to the summer vacation season. And beautiful weather on Monday had people flocking to the parks and beaches for a day in the sun.

In Connecticut, a Coast Guard official said Long Island Sound was "nothing but wall-to-wall boats"

At Georgia's Tybee Island, on the Atlantic Coast, police dispatcher Willie Steele said weekend crowds surpassed last year's.

Thousands of people jammed New York City's beaches.

And in small towns and big cities, in private ceremonies and public gatherings, the real meaning of the day was not forgotten.

For Christopher Scalise, 36, the holiday was a two-hour vigil in the rain at a small cemetery in central Michigan, at the grave of Mark Daniels, killed in Vietnam combat in March 1969.

"We knew the hills were 'hot' and that it would be a miracle if even one of us would come out alive," said Scalise, who served with Daniels in the Army's 4th Infantry Division and has visited the grave for 15 years.

"So we promised that if something happened to one of us, the other would take his personal belongings and go back and see his parents and visit the grave."

President Reagan, who laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery in Washington D.C., appeared to brush a tear from his eye as an Army bugler played "Taps" during a brief ceremony.

Reagan and his wife, Nancy, then left the cemetery where 192,000 are buried and flew to Orlando, Fla., for a reunion with some of the high school bands that missed marching in his second inaugural parade in January, canceled by frigid weather.

Texans flock to area lakes

By The Associated Press
At Big Bend National Park, in far West Texas, Memorial Day was a popular place for people taking advantage of the long weekend.

Officials of the National Park Service said the three major campsites in the park were filled to capacity, with an overflow campsite near the Rio Grande also near capacity.

"Most are leaving now," a spokesman said. "It's been a pretty good weekend."

Other Texans took advantage of the holiday by heading for beaches, lakes and other parks, while state lawmakers labored through a long day Monday as the clock ran out on their regular legislative session.

Holiday-seekers crowded the beaches of South Padre Island and Galveston, officials said.

About 55 arrests, mostly for public intoxication or disorderly conduct, were made over the weekend, said Galveston police officer Mark Fisher.

"Overall, I'd call it an average weekend for Memorial Day," Fisher said.

Cloudy weather cut down on the usual flock of sun worshipers at Barton Springs Pool in Austin, officials said.

"If you'd have called yesterday I probably wouldn't have had time to talk to you," said David Quisenberry, a worker at the popular natural spring-fed pool.

Quisenberry said the pool had about 9,000 visitors Friday and Saturday, but only about 1,000 swimmers came Monday.

In Dallas, normally packed Central Expressway, the city's major north-south freeway, was virtually empty during rush hour Monday, other than for travelers making last-minute excursions.

But Monday was not a holiday in the state capital as Texas lawmakers scurried to beat a midnight deadline for the 140-day regular legislative session.

The constitutionally set deadline for the biennial session fell on Memorial Day, forcing the House and Senate to meet in hopes of avoiding a special legislative session later. A key legislative proposal fell victim to time, however, and Gov. Mark White called a special session beginning today to deal with the problem.

Legislators give White $36.8 billion budget

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas legislators have finally passed a $36.8 billion no-new tax budget for the next two years after wrestling for 140 days with declining state revenues, caused mostly by the oil and gas economy dip.

The measure goes to Gov. Mark White, an expected candidate for re-election who has maintained all along he would never accept tax hikes.

But first, Comptroller Bob Bullock must certify that expected state revenue in 1986-87 will be enough to cover the planned costs of state government, up more than 5 percent from the 1984-85 spending bill.

"I am told it is a certifiable bill," Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, head of the House budget writers, said before the House approved the measure 132-11.

Earlier the Senate approved it 28-3 without debate. Legislators on Sunday approved $146 million in state fee hikes, including higher price tags for drivers' licenses, vehicle inspections and oil well drilling.

Also helping finance the appropriations bill is a $285 million measure raising state college tuition, which is on the governor's desk along with the fee bill.

The appropriations process began with a predicted $1 billion deficit.

Rudd said, "I hope to have shown the people of the state that by cutting back on what some people call fat — I call it services — we are balancing the budget."

Voting against the bill in the Senate were Sens. Craig Washington, D-Houston; Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin and Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas.

"I had planned to ask a question about a provision that would allow private prisons," said Washington. "But I got distracted, and when I looked up the bill had passed."

"There's not enough for dependent children, for the handicapped, for the elderly and state employees," said Barrientos.

"Too much for prisons, not enough for the poor," said Mauzy.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby told the chief Senate negot. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, that: "The chair, the members of the Senate and the people of Texas thank you for the hard work you have put in for the past eight months on this."

Jones said the $36.8 billion total, from all funds, including federal grants, is a 5.5 percent increase over the previous two years.

The measure, which becomes effective at the start of the state's next business period, Sept. 1, called for $25.9 billion from the state's general revenue fund that is largely supported by the state sales tax.

House-Senate negotiators reached their compromise last Wednesday after a week-long stalemate over a state employees pay raise and higher education financing.

The House had passed a $36.4 billion bill with an employee pay raise and the Senate a $36.8 billion bill with no employee pay raise, but more money for higher education.

The deadlock was broken with the help of a $48 million settlement of a lawsuit with out-of-state insurance companies over a 1983 tax increase. The settlement added that much to state revenue for the next two years.

The last-minute agreement included:
— A 3 percent pay raise each year for state employees, with 1 percent of the second year being financed by eliminating two state holidays — Columbus Day and general election day — or by savings in each agency.

— About $24 million more for state colleges and universities not in the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems and therefore do not share in the Permanent University Fund.

— A $85 million advanced technology fund to finance university research projects. Only two thirds of it could be used by the University of Texas and Texas A&M, the big backers.

— A $4 monthly increase for needy children on welfare, as recommended by the House, and $8 million more than the House recommendation for child abuse services.

— Tuition equalization grants for students in private universities got $5 million less than current grants.

— No money was provided for the Coastal and Marine Council and two other small agencies.

— Money for the UT-Permian Basin and Texas A&M at Galveston, which were phased out in the House bill, were restored for another two years.

— Prisons were given $956 million, including money for 18 low-security work camps, one new maximum security prison unit and seed money for a second.

Several big issues died

AUSTIN (AP) — As always, there were winners and losers in the 69th Texas Legislature. This time, there were some big losers.

Horse racing advocates, backers of school reform changes and opponents of Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower all had big plans before the session began on Jan. 8.

All were disappointed at midnight Monday when lawmakers adjourned, leaving those issues among the hundreds of bills that never got considered or were voted down.

A rundown on some of the major losses:

HORSE RACING

When the Legislature convened, the state faced a serious budget shortfall between anticipated revenues for 1986-87 and what was being spent over the past two years.

Supporters of legalized pari-mutuel gambling wagered that this was their year. They figured the budget crunch — along with favorable public opinion polls and the lure of new taxes on the horse racing business — were a perfect combination.

After hearings in which supporters testified about how much money the sport would bring and opponents testified about the crime that they believed would accompany it, the bill made it to the House floor.

Following extensive debate, the House killed it overwhelmingly. The vote against was 96-52.

LOTTERIES

The same budget logic used by horse racing proponents was used by those who wanted the state to start operating a lottery game: the games would raise needed millions for state government and the public favors the idea.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, introduced a bill to establish the games. But his number never came up and it died.

PESTICIDE REGULATION

The Texas Farm Bureau and the chemical industry, among others, weren't happy with Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower's new efforts at controlling pesticide use on the farm.

The new rules that went into effect earlier this year set time limits on when farmworkers could re-enter sprayed fields, required notification of some neighbors when spraying would take place and put other safety rules in place.

Opponents of the rules vowed to "get" Hightower. Bills were introduced to take away or dilute his authority over pesticides.

When the shouting died down, nothing changed.

INCOME TAX BAN

Lawmakers sought to place before voters a constitutional amendment that would prohibit the state from enacting a personal or corporate income tax.

Backers of the idea said it would guarantee Texans would continue to enjoy the low-tax life, but the House-passed measure died in the final days when Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, blocked its consideration in the Senate with a technical motion.

OPEN CONTAINER BAN

In recent years, Texas has joined other states in cracking down on drunk drivers, but much to the chagrin of anti-liquor forces drinking while driving still isn't illegal.

Bills were introduced to outlaw "open containers," but failed.

Lawmakers did approve a measure that would stiffen penalties for those drivers caught with an open container while driving drunk, but it remains legal to drink while driving if not intoxicated.

SCHOOL REFORMS

After their historic special session last summer in which they enacted sweeping public school reforms, many lawmakers came to Austin this year with the idea of making some small changes — "fine tuning" — in the new law.

But a feud between the House and Senate left a Senate bill hanging for weeks in a House committee. Last-minute efforts sought to revive it. They failed.

Teen surrenders

HOUSTON (AP) — A 16-year-old boy who allegedly fired shots at Harris County sheriff's deputies from a post office lobby surrendered to officials after the 90-minute ordeal, authorities said.

The boy walked out of the post office at 11:05 p.m. Sunday after his father talked to him with a bullhorn, sheriff's Sgt. Russell Samson said.

Special legislative session on health care opens today

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers filed back into the Capitol today for a special session after the clock ran out on closing-night efforts to pay for a plan to provide health care for poor Texans.

The House clock was stopped briefly to squeeze additional minutes to take a vote, but Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Richardson, succeeded in talking away the final minutes of the 140-day session.

Gov. Mark White, blamed by some for the bill's failure, took less than an hour to announce the special session.

"I was terribly disappointed to learn that there was not a bill passed for the indigent health care package as was very artfully designed by the leadership in the House and Senate," said White.

Legislators trying to put together a $100 million health care program said they had planned to pay for it by picking up part of the federal cigarette tax that is scheduled to be rolled back by Congress.

White at the last minute refused to go along with the plan and threatened a veto, lawmakers said. "Contingency cigarette tax was at one time the route that we had proceeded to take ... up until the 11th hour when obviously that particular scenario was derailed," said Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

Under the compromise, the health care program would be trimmed from $100 million-plus to $70 million in 1986 and 1987.

The Senate approved the measure, but House rules prevented it from coming to the floor until 11:57 p.m., three minutes before the end of the Legislature.

Several Hispanic and black lawmakers gathered around the House microphone to stave off debate on other bills to get to the health care bill.

Indigent health care bill sponsor Jesse Oliver, D-Dallas, got to the microphone at 11:56. Speaker Gib Lewis said, "Wait 'til 11:57, and we will be sure nobody can raise a point of order."

"My watch says you've got it. Go," Lewis told Oliver.

Oliver finished in seconds. Ceverha then rose to speak against the money bill. Many House members hissed.

"I think it should be done at some other time," said Ceverha. "Even if it calls for a special session."

Let's have qualified judges

In the interest of fairness, we would like to offer a different view of the annual Cow Calling contest. Today's columnist is area cow calling expert, Mr. Claude Cowrooth. Claude?

I am writing to tell of a gross unfairness at the annual Cow Calling Contest this Saturday in Miami. Each year about this time, the town opens its arms to folks from all over the country. They come from big cities in the east coast and California to marvel at how "quaint" this dear little Panhandle town is. (Course, it ain't quaint to the folks who live here).

But townfolk seem to forget to invite the folks who have the most at stake (is that spelled right?) — us cows.

We never get officially invited to the event that bears our name. Oh sure, some of us — about 2,000 pounds worth — have shown up at the barbecue, but no one ever goes for a return visit.

The one thing I have the beef about is the cow calling itself. Each year, otherwise respectable young men, young women and grandmas are pulled from the audience, put onstage and asked to holler their heads off for prize money. That, I do not object to.

What makes the whole thing wrong is the judging. It's done by a bunch of fellows who are hanging around a bridge about a quarter mile away. I'm talking about people. Now come on folks, what better judge could there be for a Cow Calling than a cow. By a simple flick of a tail or a swift and sure "moo," we could tell which calls are most effective.

The (gag) people who judge the event base their decisions on how well the call carries, the more high-pitched the better. But us cows know there's more to calling than meets the ear. We look for such things as style, motivation and, above all, sincerity. Face it, if there's no valid reason folks would call us — if they have nothing to offer — we won't come.

Like the finest in theater, cow calling is an art. It doesn't matter if it's "technique" calling or Method calling. We have stiff judging standards. Our motto is: Many are calling, but few are chosen.

This is a scandal, an outrage! It would make fine material for an episode of "Miami Vice."

What are the folks in Miami afraid of? Do they think we're going to stampee the place if we hear a really outstanding call? Are they worried we'll do some voluntary fertilizing work on their city park? For goodness sake, we have more class than that. We'll only send a couple of our more community-minded cattle to the contest. The rest of us will keep grazing in our pastures.

But Roberts County isn't alone in such discrimination. We also get snubbed at the Groom Days Pet Show, where not one child has ever entered a pet cow. At least Pampa and White Deer invite us to their rodeos, even if we do have to help out with the entertainment.

Belittling bovines is an insult to a proud heritage. Our ancestors are a virtual Moo's Who of animal celebrities.

The most famous is one of my forebears, owned by a Mrs. O'Leary of Chicago. With one swift kick against a lit lantern, that cow back in 1848 performed one of the most effective urban renewal projects in history. Think of how much time and your tax dollars it would take for Chicago city fathers to remodel the city today.

Currently, one of the most prominent businesswomen in America is a cow. Elsie. She and her husband Elmer, the glue magnate, have a family that really sticks together.

With talent and history like that, I would think a town would be honored to have us visit.

And that's no bull.

Mr. Cowrooth is a crossbreed steer who told his tale to Cathy Spaulding, a staff writer of The Pampa News.

Paying for study of dirty pictures

The federal government's on the loose again, spending the taxpayers' money on pornography.

That's always been a favorite topic in Washington, and the politicians never fail to find a way or two to bring the subject up each year. This time they're spending more than $700,000 so that "scholars" at American University can read 660 back issues of Playboy, Penthouse and Hustler magazines.

Actually, the "study" isn't new. Proposed in 1983, it will examine explicit pictures and cartoons of children "with fairy-tale characters" and with "influential adults" such as police officers, doctors and clergymen.

The idea, according to the project description, is that this comprehensive content analysis will lay the groundwork for future research concerning specific aspects of erotic-pornographic materials as it relates to child exploitation and-or juvenile delinquency.

Wow. All that just to get the taxpayers to pay for someone to look at dirty pictures. Naughty, naughty.

Perhaps there is some scholarly value to the study. Perhaps the researchers will find a correlation between the portrayal of children in Playboy cartoons and sexual abuse of children. But at what cost? Taxpayers dollars are not the best source for this. Taxpayers usually do not demand accountability; they rarely get it. But this type of study begs for exactly that.

In fact, most of the initial $153,000 the government gave to the study was not spent on primary research. It was spent responding to questions and criticisms from Congress, the media and others. Small wonder. The next $550,000 supposedly will be spent on the dirty-picture research. We wonder.

"Hey, how's Mike Deaver, formerly BELEAGUERED Mike Deaver?"

Anthony Harrigan

Misunderstanding history

Recent events commemorating the 40th anniversary of V-E Day revealed the extent to which the history of modern times is unknown or misunderstood. From historical ignorance or misunderstanding flows confusion as to choices in the contemporary world.

Undoubtedly many readers were reminded of this in reading a syndicated column by Ellen Goodman, who usually writes from a feminist perspective. Miss Goodman was writing from Leningrad's Piskarioskoye Memorial Cemetery where 460,000 Soviet dead are buried. She said that what the Soviets call the Great Patriotic War "forged a nation out of its diverse nationalities" and referred to the 20 million Soviets who died in the conflict against Nazi Germany. She concluded by saying, "What a cemetery this would have been for a presidential visit."

What an unfortunate misreading of history. First of all, Miss Goodman fails to note that Soviet Russia was a partner with Nazi Germany in an infamous "non-aggression" pact that involved the partition of Poland. The Soviets were silent about Hitler's evils while Britain and France were under Nazi attack.

Miss Goodman's reference to the forging of "a nation" also is mistaken. The Soviet Union is an empire, not a nation. The Soviets "forged" that empire by deporting hundreds of thousands of Latvians, Lithuanians, Estonians, and other captive peoples to Siberia. Those who were deported have never been allowed to return.

One wonders whether Miss Goodman is aware of the books of Nikolai Tolstoy, of the famous Russian literary family who chronicled the forced return to the Soviet Union of Russians who knew they would be sent to slave labor camps, including White Russians who had never lived inside the USSR - a crime against humanity in which the allies share complicity by cooperating with the Soviets.

In referring to the 20 million Soviets who died fighting the Germans, Miss Goodman fails to note what the great Russian novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn wrote in "The Oak and the Calif," namely that 50 million Soviet people were killed in Soviet purges and deportations. The hideous Nazi extermination camps have been closed for 40 years, and the world is aware of the horrors that took place there. The Soviet concentration camps, the so-called Gulag Archipelago, continue to operate to this day under Gorbachev, as they did under Andropov, Brezhnev, Krushchev, Stalin and Lenin.

Miss Goodman would not be able to visit a cemetery in the Soviet Union for the "zeks," the political convicts who were sent to the sub-Arctic because the commissars deemed them "enemies of the state." Millions of starved, beaten and murdered "zeks" were tossed into pits like so much hardwood cut on the banks of the Volga Canal, an early Soviet slave labor project.

These victims of Soviet communism are nameless. They are without monuments except in the hearts of Russian patriots like Solzhenitsyn who know what unspeakable cruelties the Soviet communist regime has imposed on captive peoples for almost 70 years.

Tragically, the story of the "zeks," the victims of Soviet communism, doesn't seem to interest many people in the West. Miss Goodman seems unaware of these victims. The American television networks aren't interested in presenting the story of the Soviet prison camps. Instead, there are studied attempts to portray the Soviets as the moral equivalent of the Western allies. Thus is history distorted.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, May 28, the 148th day of 1985. There are 217 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On May 28, 1934, the Dionne quintuplets - Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne - were born to Elzire Dionne in Callender, Ontario.

On this date: Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford arrived in Brussels, Belgium, for a meeting of NATO, saying the U.S. commitment to the alliance would not falter.

Five years ago: U.S. Rep. Raymond F. Lederer of Pennsylvania became the second House member charged in the Abscam political corruption investigation. The day before, similar charges were returned against fellow Pennsylvania Democrat Michael Myers. Both were subsequently convicted, and both received prison sentences.

Today's birthdays: Actress Carroll Baker is 54. Singer Gladys Knight is 41.

Stretch out and get rich

If I were a kid, I would make every effort to become a tall person. Then I would practice slam dunking a basketball into a goal frontwards, backwards and even with my head.

After playing a couple of years of college ball with Double Dribble A&M, I would tell the boosters who brought around a few paltry bucks in a shoebox to stick it, and I would declare myself eligible for the pros.

I would sign a contract for $200 million or $300 million with the lucky National Basketball Association franchise that won the right to draft me in a lottery. Then I would change my name to Mohammed Mercedes and learn to precede everything I said with the phrase, "You know."

All this occurred to me after the recent hoopla-pun intended - over the NBA's lottery to determine which team would be given the privilege of making 7-foot Patrick Ewing (no relation to J.R.) of Georgetown filthy rich.

The New York Knicks won that distinction, incidentally, and the Knicks' management and Ewing's agent currently are discussing just exactly what Ewing will be paid. A sum that certainly will dwarf the Gadsden Purchase.

So you're a kid and you're reading this and you say, "Fine and dandy, but what can I do to make myself tall?"

I'm not sure, but if Elizabeth Taylor can lose all that fat, there must be a way for a male child to make himself taller.

Maybe the first thing I would do is hang upside down off a tree limb. That should strengthen and stretch the legs if you did it often enough, such as 10 or 12 hours a day.

"Come down out of that tree and do your homework!" your mother would scream at you.

"I don't need to do my homework, Mom," you would reply. "I'm going to be a tall basketball player and make millions of dollars, and I'll buy you and Dad a new house."

I saw one of those faith healers on television perform a miracle on a woman who had one leg that was shorter than the other one.

The faith healer pulled the woman's short leg and I'm a son - of - a - gun if it didn't look like it stretched out even with the other one.

So you might try getting in touch with your local faith healer to see if he could yank on both your legs and make them longer.

I know all this sounds like a lot of trouble, but it would be worth it in the long run. Look at the alternative of not becoming a tall, millionaire basketball player.

You actually would have to study in college, and after college you would have to go out and actually work for a living. So become a doctor. Big deal. Even doctors don't make what most professional and likely some college-basketball players make. Besides, if you should happen to fail in your attempt to become a rich basketball player, don't waste your time studying to be a doctor.

Study to be a faith healer. There's about as much money to be made there as in basketball, and you don't have to sweat nearly as much.

There the Demos go again

NEW YORK (NEA) - If you suspected all along that the Democrats' concern over the size of the federal deficit was as phony as Japanese wartime occupation currency, you were absolutely right: Now that the budget is actually being drawn up, the Democrats are out there hustling every interest group in sight, demanding more and more federal subsidies for their little darlings and shedding torrents of tears over those cruel Republican proposals to reduce expenditures. The only deficit the Democratic Party really gives a hoot about is the one that showed up in their vote totals on Nov. 6. If there's going to be any fiscal responsibility seen in Washington this year, it's going to be up to the Republicans to display it.

Early last week's most demagogic performance was the Democratic reaction to farm bloc pressures for continued or even increased federal aid. The crisis in American farming is largely the product of earlier Democratic demagoguery on the subject, which addicted farmers to government subsidies and thereby set the stage for all that has followed. But now, when enormous pressures are at last compelling the government to reconsider and reduce this largess, the political heirs of the dead politicians who hooked America's farmers on federal angel dust in the first place are so cynical that they will actually call for more of it while the Reagan administration is trying to persuade farmers to kick the habit.

To the hue and cry of the Democrats on Capitol Hill is now being added an impressive barrage of tendentious pseudo-information from various suspect quarters. Is it pure coincidence, do you suppose, that something called the "Physicians' Task Force on Hunger in America," consisting of 22 "prominent doctors and public health experts," has chosen this precise moment to release a report charging that "hunger in America" has reached "epidemic proportions"? For the sake of the blind, the doctors spell out their political point in words that deserved to be, and probably were, in the 1984 Democratic national platform: "The recent and swift return of hunger can be traced in substantial measure to clear and conscious policies of the federal government." The study predictably calls for increased welfare and food stamp benefits and eased eligibility requirements; restoration of free and low-price meal programs to the schools (apparently without the slightest reference to the income of the children's parents); expanded nutrition programs for women, infants and children; and still more meals for the elderly.

The study abounds in the usual anecdotal horror stories, and received a buildup on the NBC Evening News recently that would have been more appropriate to the announcement of the imminent end of the world. A man interviewed in shadow described how, down to his last quarter, he had luckily used it to phone a suicide hot line and thereby saved his life. There were descriptions of Peoria, Ill., that made it sound not much better off than Ethiopia. When the investigators looked inside a refrigerator in Hollister, N.C., they found "the remains of an omelet, some government commodity cheese and nothing else. There was no milk."

Why all these people, and the others described in equally heart-rending terms, don't qualify for food stamps, welfare and all the other subsidies that this generous nation provides for the truly needy wasn't explained.

It is going to take steady nerves and grim determination for the American people to battle their way, under the leadership of Ronald Reagan, through the matted ranks of the subsidy recipients and their huge escort of professional mourners, political hypocrites and freestyle guilt-trippers. As for the deficit, as far as the Democrats are concerned you can forget it. It served its purpose - and not very well, at that.

Texas' richest community? It may not be what you'd think

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer
WESTOVER HILLS, Texas (AP) — OK, trivia buffs, the richest community in Texas per capita is: (a) Dallas' Highland Park, (b) Houston's River Oaks, (c) San Antonio's Alamo Heights, (d) Austin's Lakeway, (e) the Big Bend's Terlingua, or, (f) none of the above.

According to the government's latest census figures, 1981-1982, the mecca of Texas affluence is not among the state's familiar pockets of opulence, but is instead Westover Hills in Tarrant County.

A tiny slice of wooded hills and valleys west of downtown Fort Worth, Westover Hills, population 700, is the home of several members of the ultra-rich Bass family and a slew of other prosperous and prominent Texans.

There are no duplexes or high rise apartments in either "new" or "old" Westover Hills but roughly three square miles of magnificent homes and manicured grounds and a private police force to keep things quiet and secure.

Scenic Roaring Springs Road separates the old from the new and while Old Westover has more tradition, New Westover has Shady Oaks Country Club and Ben Hogan as a neighbor.

Society columnist Cissy Stewart says land is so scarce in Westover that a Dallas builder once constructed a $2 million house there on speculation, with no buyer lined up.

"How about that," she laughed. "Isn't that crazy?"

Perhaps not. Your neighbor might be a past or present owner of the Texas Rangers baseball club, the widow of a newspaper publisher, an oil millionaire, a banker, a real estate entrepreneur or maybe even an heir to the vast Charles Tandy-Anne Windfohr Tandy estate.

The U.S. Bureau of the Census says the estimated 1981 per capita income of Western Hills was $60,210, which made it the runaway winner in the big bucks sweepstakes.

Alamo Heights residents in Bexar County struggled along on $16,665 per capita, Highland Park made do with $29,001 and Lakeway in Travis County bit the bullet with $26,169. Terlingua is a ghost town with only a phantom income.

River Oaks may be Houston's most prestigious address but it is not a governmental unit as such and therefore not among the census listings. But sister communities in Harris County trailed only Westover Hills in affluence.

Harris County, with a 1982 population of 2,674,074, laid claim to Hunters Creek Village, $39,913; Piney Point Village, $38,871; Bunker Hill Village, $33,605; and Pearland, $31,506.

No other Texas townships exceeded the $30,000 mark.

The most affluent county in the state was sparsely populated, energy rich Loving County in far West Texas. The census bureau said the Loving population dropped from 91 to 70 between 1980 and 1982 but per capita income increased from $21,673 to $23,596.

Midland County counted a substantial number of oil and gas millionaires among its 100,000 residents in 1982 and ranked second with $12,904 per capita.

Since the oil industry slide began in 1981, and realizing the margin for error was already great, it's a safe assumption that some of the census figures would not be valid today.

And there are those who argue also that the wealth of the billionaire Bass family distorts the financial image of Westover Hills.

"There's some big-time bucks out there but the Besses have made it (the per capita income figure) swing that way," said a Fort Worth oil company executive familiar with the Westover Hills populace.

Perry Bass and two of his four sons live there, and they've contributed mightily to the Westover wealth. But their neighbors have hardly been slouches.

They've included the late Kay Kimbell (Kimbell Museum), Amos Carter Jr. (Fort Worth Star-Telegram), Charles Tandy (Tandy Corp.) and Anne Burnett Windfohr Tandy (6666s Ranch, oil).

"We're talking major mergers there," quipped the oil executive of the Tandy-Windfohr marriage that united two great Texas fortunes.

Although both died in recent years, their Westover Hills home remains a showplace of the Southwest. Designed by renowned architect I.M. Pei, the home was featured anonymously this year in Connoisseur magazine.

The Tandy heir, Anne Tandy's granddaughter, Anne Sowell, is a Westover resident.

Former Texas Rangers owner Brad Corbett lives in Westover as does current club owner Eddie Chiles.

Among the other prominent residents are Bill McKay (car dealer), Kelly Young (oil), Hayden Cutler (real estate), Jenkins Garrett (construction), Bayard Friedman (banking), Dewey Wagner (oil), Elton Hyder (real estate investments), Joe Pace (supermarkets), William Colley (groceries) and A.M. Pate Jr. (Texas Refinery Corp.).

Westover people don't talk about their neighbors but outsiders love the story of the oil millionaire and former resident who tired of his mansion and "spent a mint" remodeling.

Still unhappy, he tore the whole house down and began again from scratch.

With his new house in progress, his marriage turned sour. He wound up selling his unfinished home, which the new owner altered dramatically.

"That's the way they do things out there," said columnist Stewart. "They buy a house, tear it down and build their own house."

One homeowner discovered he could not add a wine cellar because the limestone terrain precluded excavation. So he converted his ground floor into a wine room and built a new level on his house.

Another story concerns a second wealthy oilman who added so many rooms to his home that it finally covered the entire lot. Feeling cramped, he offered his neighbors on either side a million dollars apiece for their houses.

Both turned him down.

Blood drive planned tomorrow

In an effort to aid Coffee Memorial Blood Center in meeting the needs of 23 area hospitals, Pampa's First Christian Church is sponsoring a blood drive Wednesday from 5 to 8 p.m. in the Genesis Classroom of the church, 18th and Nelson streets.

The blood center, a non-profit organization, not only provides blood, but also blood components such as plasma, platelets, and clotting agents which are needed by many patients to save or prolong their lives.

Because less than five percent of the eligible donor population are attempting to meet the blood needs of these hospitals, the center's primary goal is to encourage more physically healthy persons to become volunteer blood donors.

Here are a few things potential blood donors should know for their own comfort.

—Before donating, get a good nights rest — at least six hours sleep.

—Eat breakfast, even if usually omitted.

—Donors must weigh at least 110 pounds.

—Donors must not have a cold, sore throat, flu or active allergy symptoms.

—Donors must wait at least 24 hours before donating if they have had dental work (other than cleaning or tooth filling.)

—If donors have had their ears pierced less than six months ago, they must be evaluated by a Blood Center nurse on the day of the blood drive.

technician (one who performs the procedure many times daily) prepares to take your donation. The technician will check temperature, pulse and blood pressure.

The procedure is quite simple, consisting of the application of a tourniquet above the elbow, a skin "wash" to the site which turns the area a "yellowish" color, and then the actual stick.

Each person has about 10 to 12 pints of blood. The blood center collects about one pint per donation from a donor. A scale attached to the donor chair measures the amount of blood removed and will automatically shut off the donation process so that no more than one pint is collected.

The actual donation takes about seven to 10 minutes. After that, the donor will be asked to remain in the donor chair for a few minutes to give the body time to relax and readjust itself after the donation process.

Now the donor gets refreshments to help replace the fluid lost. The entire process from start to finish lasts about 20 minutes.

PETS OF THE WEEK — These three six-week-old kittens would be happy to make some families nice pets. They're available for adoption from the Pampa Animal Shelter, Hobart Street Park. Also up for adoption are several purebred animals such as a one-year-old female Afghan hound, a two-year-old Brittany Spaniel and a six-month-old male shepherd. ### Dear Abby

Wife struggles to cope with husband's shameful history

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just found out that my husband sexually abused our daughter when she was an emotionally disturbed teen-ager on drugs. This went on for several years but she never told me at the time, because she feared physical violence, which she knew he was capable of. When she became emotionally stronger (she's fine now), she put a stop to it.

When I became aware of this, I demanded that he see a therapist, knowing there had to be something terribly wrong with a father who would do this to his own daughter. He refused, so now we are separated. I have two other daughters who refuse to allow their children to see their grandfather because of his abnormal behavior. (When I left him, I told our children why.)

Once before I had heard that he was having incestuous relations with his sister, but I pooh-poohed the whole thing. Now I realize it was probably true.

Abby, please let me know if there is any legal redress against this man I called "husband" for 36 years, but never really knew.

HEARTSICK

DEAR HEARTSICK: The man you called "husband" for 36 years, but never really knew, is guilty of a crime. Your lawyer can advise you about the statutes of limitations in your state.

He should also be psychiatrically examined. If he is mentally disturbed, he could be a threat to society unless treated. Please act at once.

***

DEAR ABBY: As a result of your recent column, our security department has been inundated with calls from people claiming to have lost the "diamond" ring that was found in the ladies' restroom of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Chicago. So far, no one has been able to establish ownership.

Contrary to the finder's impression, the ring contains no real diamonds. According to the appraisal we had made, the ring is valued at approximately $200.

We regret that the woman who found the ring was misinformed by the assistant manager on duty. If an article has not been claimed by its owner after one year, it becomes the property of the person who found it. I hope you will print this to restore confidence in the fairness of our lost-and-found policy.

DEAR ABBY: What are the odds of a 31-year-old man who had German measles at age 18 becoming a father? Please rush your answer.

THREE WEEKS LATER
IN KANSAS

DEAR LATE: Never mind what he told you. Don't play the odds. He should see a urologist for a sperm count. Fatherhood is no gambling matter.

DEAR ABBY: Here is another reply to "Missing Link." Being the self-appointed family historian, I told my father one year that the only Christmas present I wanted from him was an autobiography. At first he refused, explaining how painful it was for him to remember his childhood.

The next year, I asked him again, so he reluctantly began. As he searched his memories, he had to confront his bitterness, and as he wrote he came to terms with it. It took him two years, but in the end the most valuable gift was not to me in the 200 pages he typed out—but to himself. The pain of the abuse and deprivation, the anger toward the people who had hurt him and the bitterness that rose up in him at the mention of his childhood melted away as the words poured out.

He is at peace with his past at last. And we, who are privileged to have his story, are in awe of the wonderful man who has grown from such a poorly cultivated seed.

We all have things we would like to hide—but they are what make up what we are.

D.H., SILVERTHORNE, COLO.

DEAR D.: Eureka! That's how psychoanalysis was born.

SCHOLARSHIP WINNER — Renee Sprinkle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Sprinkle of Pampa, is the recipient of the $500 1985 scholarship given by the Pampa Business and Professional Women's Club. Sprinkle plans to use the scholarship money towards attending Mid-Western State University in Wichita Falls this fall.

Grant to finance summer program

The Carson County Square House Museum in Panhandle has been awarded a grant from the Texas Commission on the Arts to support the expansion of its annual Summer Youth Arts program.

Now in its sixth year, the project offers more than 30 classes and workshops to youth in Carson County this July.

With Amarillo instructor, Steve McDaniel, for instance, local junior high and high school age students will learn the basics of researching, writing and producing short videos of their own. Or, under the guidance of Roberta Speer, the supervisor of the Kilgore Archeological Research Center at West Texas State University, children throughout the county will learn about the history of their region by examining original artifacts and participating in archeological digs.

"Not all our instructors are paid professionals," said Kay Brizzolara, curator of education at the museum, "though all of them are experts in their field. One of the most remarkable things about our Summer Youth program is the number of persons in our communities who come forward and volunteer their time and knowledge for the benefit of the county children. The overwhelming majority of our instructors will be volunteers. Their dedication is really inspiring."

Classes are to be offered in Panhandle, White Deer, Skellytown, Groom, and Claude this summer, covering a variety of topics from doll history to the basics of pottery. The classes are free and open to all children, thanks to the support of county club and organizations.

Anyone interested in enrolling children in the program or in volunteering their time to assist instructors should contact Brizzolara at P.O. Box 276, Panhandle, 79068 or call 537-3118.

Calling All Home Makers

Brought To You By Aline Johnson

DO YOU REALLY HAVE ENOUGH TABLES?

A national agency took a homemaker's survey recently and one of the findings they reported was that the average home lacks sufficient tables.

They said that there were not only a lack of tables themselves, but also a lack of variety of tables in many homes.

Actually, there are several decorating guidelines to use concerning tables.

First, if you want to have a really comfortable, easy-to-live-in home, you should have tables near most of your seating pieces—and that's easier to accomplish these days because there's such a tremendous selection of shapes and sizes of tables. It's not difficult to find just the "right" table to fit by any chair or sofa.

Secondly, although tables are practical and necessary to hold lamps, refreshments, etc., they also have an important role to perform in making your rooms beautiful. All by themselves, tables can add decorator touches if you pick the proper looking tables for the different parts of your room.

Look around your home. Ask yourself these two questions: Do you have enough tables? Do you have pretty tables? If you'd like to improve on either of those points, we can help. Stop in.

Fifth graders collect pop tops to help famine relief

AUSTIN (AP) — One thing a group of Austin fifth graders learned this year is that a million is hard to come by.

Linda Elliot, a teacher at Smith Elementary School, said she brought in 81 pop tops on the first day of school last fall to start a drive to collect one million aluminum pull tabs by the end of the year.

The pupils finished up with 390,000 of them, 436 pounds that filled 40 cardboard boxes.

Hauled to a recycling center, the pop-tops were cashed in for $109, which was donated to an African famine relief organization.

Scavenging through plastic bags, paper sacks, jars and coffee cans, the students brought their treasures to school where the tabs were stored in cardboard boxes. Ms. Elliot kept a daily tally in a notebook.

Primary excavation spots were ballparks, roadsides, highway rest areas and convenience store parking lots. Eventually the entire school joined in the project. Ms. Elliot said.

As the school year ended, the students knew they wouldn't pull enough tabs to reach a million, so they enlisted the help of a roadside bar in southeast Austin that collected tabs in a container in a bar.

The students also received help from the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Moose lodges, which also saved tabs.

Using their creativity, one student scraped up 700 pop tops from a single trip to a local racing speedway. Another convinced a grocer to open up a vending machine so she could collect all 28,000 tabs inside.

Translators easing language barrier

CONROE, Texas (AP) — When Montgomery County officials and local hospital personnel run into a language barrier, the Language Bank comes to the rescue.

The bank, formed by Teri Suehs in 1980, has more than 40 volunteers who can translate 24 spoken languages and sign language for the deaf.

The object is to keep the service as easy and economical as possible and volunteers usually render their services by telephone, Ms. Suehs says.

"If they do have to go somewhere, I think it is only fair that someone pay for their transportation, but otherwise everything is free," she said.

Eugenia Puig, who speaks Spanish and English, says she's been called to help several times. Once she was asked to translate a notice for the Montgomery County Health Department. Another time she had to tell a Hispanic teen-ager she was pregnant.

"The nurse needed to know what the girl wanted to do," Ms. Puig said. "She was Mexican and had been abused by the men who brought her into this country."

Like many in the language bank, Ms. Puig, a native of Chile, speaks English as her second language.

Mariam Daftary is French, but because her father was a foreign affairs officer she lived in many countries during her childhood, she learned to speak seven languages — Greek, French, Italian, Turkish, Persian, German and Russian.

She once spent several hours with a woman who found a packet of old family letters, all written in French.

Ms. Suehs said a Language Bank list of translators is posted in all Montgomery County Sheriff's Department offices and the bank has also sent lists to local hospitals, county offices and schools.

Besides Spanish and the languages Mrs. Daftary speaks, the bank now has translators for Vietnamese, Portuguese, Cambodian, Japanese, Hindu, Dutch, Swedish, Hungarian, Lithuanian, Chinese, Czech,

Survey: Baptist clergy switching to GOP

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Many Southern Baptist ministers have deserted the Democratic Party in favor of the Republican Party during the past five years, according to a survey by a Furman University professor.

"Like the rest of the South, the Southern Baptist ministers were, at one time, overwhelmingly Democratic," said Dr. James L. Guth, a political science professor.

"But now the ministers are overwhelmingly Republican, and most of the party realignment has taken place since the 1980 election."

In 1984-85, Guth sent more than 1,700 surveys concerning social issues and party alignment to a random sample of Southern Baptist pastors. He got nearly 1,000 of them back and compared his findings to those of a similar survey he conducted in 1980-81.

According to Guth's 1980-81 poll, 29 percent of Southern Baptist clergymen called themselves Republican, 41 percent were Democrat and 30 percent were independent.

But by 1984, 66 percent of the clergy were Republican and the Democratic percentage fell to 25 percent, Furman University said recently in a release. Guth said the margin of error in the poll is 3 1/2 to 4 percent.

Guth said the most dramatic changes have occurred in Deep South states such as South Carolina, Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi, where half of the ministers have shifted their allegiance from the Democrats to the Republicans.

Guth said there were many reasons for the switch.

"I believe this is occurring largely because the Republican Party is addressing social issues that are relevant to the ministers and that the rift inside the Southern Baptist Convention is, for the first time, forcing ministers to choose sides."

The survey found that the new

Republicans overwhelmingly favored conservative issues. Eighty-eight percent were against the ERA, 84 percent were for an abortion amendment, 78 percent favored the Moral Majority and 98 percent preferred Reagan.

Guth said the new Republicans also tend to support the Southern Baptist Convention's conservative faction and its causes.

Seventy percent strongly agreed that the Bible is inerrant and 56 percent felt that women should not be ordained.

Guth presented his findings at the annual meeting of the Midwest Political Science Association in Chicago in April.

Railroad reopens the tracks where fiery crash occurred

EASTLAND, Texas (AP) — Union Pacific System tracks through Eastland are open again today, four days after an explosive collision between a truck and freight train that devastated this West Texas city.

Union Pacific spokesman Mark Davis said that most of the damaged cars had been removed from the area and the railroad reopened late Monday afternoon.

A tanker of propylene gas burned itself out earlier Monday.

More than 1,000 people in this West Texas town after 25 cars derailed when the truck slammed into a train loaded with hazardous materials.

The evacuation area was reduced to five blocks by late Sunday, fire officials said. Police Chief Lyndell Underwood said Monday that residents of about 15 homes were still being kept out of the area.

Meanwhile, work crews finished moving the 25 derailed cars and the touchy task of transferring containers of dangerous chemicals to other vehicles.

Mayor Charles Marshall issued a plea to Gov. Mark White to declare Eastland a disaster area. Marshall declared a disaster about 5 p.m. Friday.

"It appears, at this time, damage will run into millions of dollars, not counting business losses for several days and evacuation of population from their homes," Marshall said in a statement to White.

The derailment occurred after an empty water-hauling truck, driven by Gaylon Nelms, 42, and owned by B.C. Construction Co., slammed into the second of four engines of the 99-car Union Pacific System train.

The locomotive's diesel fuel tank ignited while freight and tanker cars piled on top of one another, puncturing a liquid propylene tanker. When the gas hit the flames from the locomotive, the explosion rocked the city and shot a 500-foot fireball in the air.

Several of the derailed cars contained hydrochloric acid, hydrofluoric acid and sulfuric acid.

Thirteen people were taken to Eastland Memorial Hospital. Six were hospitalized and seven were released following treatment for burns.

Nelms, who was pulled from the demolished cab, was in serious condition at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene with first- and second-degree burns over 25 percent of his body and internal injuries, hospital officials said Monday.

Another Union Pacific train derailed Saturday about 40 miles southeast of Eastland in Dublin, on track being used as an alternate because of the Eastland crash.

Decomposing bodies on islands; survivors are afraid and hungry

URIRCHAR, Bangladesh (AP) — Navy ships are plucking bodies from the Bay of Bengal and air force planes are dropping food packets to survivors in the aftermath of a hurricane that news reports say could claim tens of thousands of lives.

The official government count of the dead today was 1,569. But the International Committee of the Red Cross in Geneva, Switzerland, put the death toll from Saturday's storm at 3,000.

Unofficial reports from the hardest hit offshore islands and the devastated southern coastal areas said 25,000 people may have perished in the Saturday storm. Hardest hit were the islands of Pirbakhsh, where 10,000 people reportedly died, and Urirchar, with 7,000 to 8,000 reported fatalities.

Another 3,000 people were said to have died in the Noakhali district along the southwestern coast. About 5,000 people were feared dead on Sandwip Island, and 1,000 fishermen from the island also were missing and presumed dead.

Authorities estimate 5.5 million people in the coastal area were affected by the hurricane, which washed away entire communities with huge waves and flooded large areas of cropland.

In a helicopter tour of the stricken area Monday, reporters saw decomposing bodies lying on the islands and in channels of Bay of Bengal.

In Urirchar, survivors were crouched under broken bamboo roofs, their crops destroyed, clothing tattered and faces pale with fear and hunger. During a walk on Urirchar this reporter counted 97 bodies, and found only a few houses and trees standing on the western side of the island.

Sixty families were completely wiped out, 20 families have only one surviving member, and 23 families have two survivors. Survivors said none of the families on Urirchar escaped the devastation.

Abul Khair, sitting on a raised piece of ground where his home once stood, began sobbing when he recounted the loss of seven members of his family, including his wife.

"Ask Him (God) what He has done," Khair said, looking at the sky. "Today even He must be crying over the tragedy."

An elder on Sandwip Island, Abdul Momin, told The Associated Press that residents and farm laborers on several neighboring islands did not move to shelters for fear their cattle and other property would be stolen.

Laborers piled up earth to make shelters, but the tidal waves demolished them and washed away many of the people, Abdul Momin said.

Victims are faced with a shortage of drinking water, medicine and food. Survivors were living under scorching sun and frequent bursts of monsoon rain. Army medical teams were working to prevent an epidemic caused by the decaying bodies.

The Red Cross said Monday its local workers "report cadavers of people in the sea, cadavers of animals in the sea, the crops completely destroyed, washed out."

Several islands have become completely denuded of people, of houses, of cattle, of dwellings. The situation on the ground is pretty desperate."

It said winds had reached 140 miles per hour during the storm, and that "Dwellings, crops, cattle and people in coastal areas and offshore islands have simply disappeared."

Agca again refuses to testify

ROME (AP) — Mehmet Ali Agca, the state's star witness in the papal plot trial, disrupted the proceedings for the second day today with ramblings about being Jesus Christ and then by refusing to answer questions.

It was not clear how his performance would affect the explosive trial of three Bulgarians and four Turks for conspiracy in the May 13, 1981, shooting of Pope John Paul II. All seven defendants face life sentences.

Today, the second day of the trial, he asked Judge Severino Santiapichi to be allowed to make a statement, and repeated his Monday claims that he was Jesus Christ and was not crazy.

He added: "In this generation the days are counted. No one — not even the Americans or the Soviets — can save us from this. There will be total destruction."

He called on the Vatican to "reveal the third mystery of the blessed Virgin of Fatima."

The Vatican has refused to disclose the so-called third secret of Fatima, which some say is a prophecy of another global war or the end of the world.

The judge tried to make Agca respond to his questions.

"I cannot respond. I want to continue tomorrow. Today I am awaiting a reply from the Vatican. If the Vatican contradicts me I cannot do anything. I cannot continue," he said in slow clear Italian.

The judge then called a recess to give Agca time to decide if he would testify. After the recess, Agca again refused to answer the judge's questions and was taken off the witness stand.

Agca, 27, a Turk, is serving a life sentence for the May 13, 1981, shooting in St. Peter's Square, but has repudiated his original story that he acted alone. His testimony led to the seven indictments, plus a new charge against Agca of illegally importing the pistol into Italy.

Lawmaker serves in both houses

AUSTIN (AP) — Houston Democrat Gene Green saw his proposed bill pass in the House, and after a victory there he followed it to the Senate to argue it to passage there.

The bill to allow court reporters to be paid in child custody cases was the last Green sponsored as a representative on the final day of the session and the first action he took up in the Senate. Lawmakers said it was the first time they could remember a legislator sponsoring a bill in both houses.

Green, a seven-term House member, won a special election earlier this month to replace retiring Sen. Lindon Williams, D-Houston. He was sworn into the new post at noon, becoming one of the first people ever to serve in the House and Senate on the same day. He will have to stand for re-election to the Senate in 1986.

Williams gave up his seat to take a $60,000 a year post as a Harris County justice of the peace.

Fellow Senate members initiated Green as new kid on the block by voting 1-30 against granting him permission to introduce his bill for debate. After the hazing, senators approved the bill on a voice vote.

"I'm so glad to have you here," said Sen. Cindy Krier, D-San Antonio who has been the newest member until Green's arrival.

The new senator won the District 6 seat in a runoff election by defeating fellow Democratic Rep. Anthony L. "Tony" Polumbo.

Green, 37, said that by staying in the House Monday morning, he was able to wrap up work on several bills he had introduced earlier in the session.

"I wanted to finish up everything I had started in the House," Green said. "I also had to wait for the election and for the canvassing."

Green almost didn't make it to the Senate before the 69th Legislature adjourned Monday because a Harris County Clerk wasn't sure how long it would take to canvass final votes from the runoff. The clerk had thought the work wouldn't be finished before the session ended, Green said.

Williams wasn't able to escape without being the subject of a practical joke played on him on Sunday by other senators.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, introduced a bill to do away with two justice of the peace positions in the state — including the position Williams planned to fill when he submitted his resignation.

The Senate voted in jest to approve the bill, but Gov. Mark White responded with a good-natured "veto" of it.

"The effect of this bill would be to place into immediate unemployment one distinguished state senator from Houston," White said in his veto message.

"As governor of the state of Texas I believe in encouraging full employment and diversifying job opportunities for legislators to include more than that of a lobbyist," White said.

Study links hormone levels to adolescent misbehavior

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boys and girls are more likely to misbehave during puberty depending on the levels of hormones in their blood, says the first study to show what may seem obvious to many parents.

If further research also shows behavior actually changes as hormone levels change, "It gives both the adolescents and the parents something to talk about in terms of getting through this period," said developmental psychologist Editha D. Nottelmann of the National Institute of Mental Health.

"We don't want to get into the business of saying we can blame the hormones" for all parent-child problems, Ms. Nottelmann said Monday. "But if we do establish the biological basis for some of our actions and emotions in adolescence, there will be greater understanding of why misbehavior happens."

For example, she said, a parent might realize, "It's not that my child is being tough on me, but (he or she) is having trouble adjusting to changes in the body."

Ms. Nottelmann, who outlined her findings for reporters Monday, was scheduled to present the preliminary study today at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

She and her colleagues at the NIMH and National Institute of Child Health and Human Development measured the blood levels of seven hormones in 56 boys and 52 girls between the ages of 9 and 14. At the same time, the researchers assessed the youngsters' social adjustment and behavior by having them and their parents fill out standardized questionnaires.

"We found that there are significant relations between hormone levels and many of our psychological measures," Ms. Nottelmann wrote in a summary of the study.

"For instance, we found that boys with a profile of lower testosterone and higher androstenedione levels were likely to exhibit more delinquent behaviors," she wrote. "For girls, we found that lower dehydroepiandrosterone sulfate levels were associated with more delinquent and also with more depressive characteristics."

Testosterone is one of the major hormones stimulating boys' physical maturation during puberty, including development of the testicles. Ms. Nottelmann said the roles of androstenedione and dehydroepiandrosterone aren't fully known, but they contribute to growth in height and of pubic and underarm hair during puberty in girls and boys.

She emphasized that the misbehaving youngsters were not serious delinquents, but were normal adolescents who at times engaged in such misbehavior as cheating, truancy, rebelliousness, failure to follow rules, disobeying parents, poor grades and talking back to teachers.

Cemetery is caught in urban sprawl

DALLAS (AP) — More than 250 people, mostly from northern Dallas County farm families, are buried at McCree Cemetery, which dates at least to 1862.

Once a neat rural graveyard, the cemetery is now in the midst of urban sprawl and overrun with trash, poison ivy and weeds.

Residents of nearby apartments say the cemetery, nestled behind a Southwestern Bell substation in north Dallas, has become an after-dark gathering place for beer-drinking teen-agers.

Many of the 70 or so remaining tombstones have been vandalized.

A Boy Scout troop in northeast Dallas wants to clean up the plot, but can't find anyone to ask for permission.

"The people buried there have the right to be in a place that is nice," said Louis Hollo, leader of the troop. "Personally I think it is a pretty sick thing to tear up someone's gravesite."

The 2½-acre McCree Cemetery is only one of about 65 abandoned graveyards in Dallas County, said Frances James of the Dallas County Historical Society.

Nurses tend to first aid at baseball games

By GENE ABRAHAMSON
Grand Prairie Daily News
GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — If you go to a Texas Rangers game and drink too much beer, eat too many nachos or fall and scrape your knee, there's a good chance you'll meet two Grand Prairie nurses who work in the first aid stations at Arlington Stadium.

Madelon Banks and Lee Purvis take care of stadium employees and fans who get sick or suffer minor injuries at Ranger home games.

Mrs. Banks, 65, who has been a nurse at the stadium for 11 years, is in charge of the first aid station for the infield seating sections of the stadium. Mrs. Purvis, who admits to being "50 plus," has worked at the stadium for six or seven years and is in charge of the first aid station for the outfield seating sections of the stadium.

Each first aid station has five beds, oxygen, wheelchairs and other medical items to help relieve any discomforts fans or stadium workers might incur. The nurses arrive at the stadium two hours before a game and don't leave until the parking lot clears after a game.

Two golf cart ambulances staffed by paramedics, including Mike Booher of Arlington, a 1969 graduate of Grand Prairie High School, stand by to transport people to the first aid station. A regular ambulance is at the stadium in case of serious medical problems that require immediate transport to a hospital.

Team physician Dr. B.J. Mykoskie or one of his sons, Mike or Phil, who also are doctors, are on call if the nurses need their help.

"We have a lot of people who come in with headaches and we take care of the concession stand people if they get abrasions or burns," Mrs. Banks said. "People come in who have contusions from falls and we get people suffering from heat exhaustion in the summer. We've had cardiac arrests in the stadium and people have been hurt when struck by balls, especially in the infield.

"People come to first aid for everything," Mrs. Banks said. "Some want a pencil and some just need a place to change a baby's diapers."

The nurses said they have seen all kinds of injuries and ailments, but so far they have not been called on to help deliver a baby.

"Thank goodness we haven't," Mrs. Banks said with a chuckle.

"We haven't even come close," Mrs. Purvis added.

The nurses haven't been too busy so far this year, but they expect more people to come to the first aid stations as the weather becomes hotter.

"This time of the year we're not too busy, but during the summer when the sun hits the outfield stands we'll have a lot of people with heat problems and upset stomachs and all of the things that go with eating hot dogs and drinking beer," Mrs. Purvis said.

The nurses usually deal with people who've had too much to drink by "pouring a lot of water down them," Mrs. Purvis said.

"That's unless they're being hauled out by the police," Mrs. Banks said. "We usually don't get people who are really drunk or been hurt in fights. The police just take them away."

Mrs. Banks, who has lived in Grand Prairie since 1943, and Mrs. Purvis, who has lived here since 1969, agreed that different visiting teams affect the number of people coming to the first aid station. They said they are usually busiest when the New York Yankees or Detroit Tigers are playing the Rangers.

Their busiest day came during a doubleheader between the Rangers and Tigers two years ago when youngsters were given free bats and more than 85 people sought treatment at the first aid stations, the nurses said.

"The heat and excitement and the noise from the kids beating the bats on the stands got to a lot of people," Mrs. Purvis said.

The nurses don't treat the players, but they have met many of their families and both list outfielder Larry Parrish and former Ranger catcher Jim Sundberg (now with the Kansas City Royals) as their favorites.

The women even have their own fans. "We've had a lot of people who have come through here that have sent us letters to thank us for our kindness and treatment," Mrs. Banks said. "Sometimes our friends or family will come by and say hello. When I worked at the station in the outfield I had a woman who came in to let me see her daughter and see how she had grown."

When they're not treating sick or injured fans, the nurses, who both said they enjoy baseball and other sports, listen to the game on the radio in their first aid stations.

"I listen to the radio so I'll know if we're winning or losing and sometimes I'll run out and see what happens when I hear the crowd yelling," Mrs. Purvis said.

Mrs. Purvis comes to work at the stadium after work at Whitten Medical Supply in Arlington. Mrs. Banks retired in 1982 after 18 years as an industrial nurse.

Texas beekeepers are dreading arrival of killer bees

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas beekeepers are dreading a potentially serious crisis — the arrival of the so-called "killer bees" from South America, a crisis worse than the invasion of bee-attacking mites which infiltrated the industry last year.

Although the aggressive species of bees are at least three years away by natural progression through Central America, some observers say the bees could arrive in the United States sooner than expected.

"They could be here tomorrow," said Tom Rinderer, a scientist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Baton Rouge, La.

Pointing out that swarms of the species, known as Africanized bees, are often found on ocean vessels, Rinderer said, "All they have to do is jump ship."

Rinderer said the public danger posed by the bees is minimal but it could mean bankruptcy for many marginal beekeeping operations.

Honeybees are vital in the pollination of many crops. An estimated $19 billion worth of crops benefit directly or indirectly from bee pollination each year, he said.

"We could live without the honey, but not the pollination," he said.

Beekeepers in Texas are aware the state will likely be the entry point for the Africanized bees, and they are pressing for action from state and federal authorities before the crisis point is reached.

"They have only a few years to come up with something," said David Briden of Washington-on-the-Brazos, president of the Texas Beekeepers

Association. "If they don't, it will make beekeeping very difficult to carry out."

Since their accidental introduction in Brazil in 1975, killer bees have forged a grim story of domination over the formerly prevalent European bee strain, which has been absorbed by the African species.

From a mere 26 queen bees taken from Africa to Brazil for study, the killer species now occupy all of South America except Chile, shielded from their advance by the Andes Mountains, officials say.

From their origin, the bees have progressed to central Nicaragua.

Binford Weaver of Navasota, one of the nation's largest dealers in queen bees, said the "killer" label is misapplied to the Africanized bees.

Austin's municipal airport is cocaine route

AUSTIN (AP) — Commercial flights into the city's municipal airport is the route drug runners use to smuggle in almost half Austin's cocaine, police say.

"It's a wide open place for it. They're using it, and we know it, but we just can't work the way we'd like," said Lt. Pete Taylor, police narcotics detail commander.

Police said a tight budget, too few narcotics officers and the narrow legal grounds allowed for searches prevent police from stopping the cocaine flow through Robert Mueller Municipal Airport.

Taylor estimated that 40 percent of cocaine in the city is hand-carried, undetected, by commercial airline passengers.

"I personally think there's a heck of a lot brought in that way, and a heck of a lot goes out that way. But with our limited intelligence reports, we just can't estimate it," he said.

Without a warrant or probable cause, officers can't search passengers or baggage, Taylor said.

Police do not have a drug-sniffing dog, and X-ray machines used to detect weapons only can spot metal and bulky objects in luggage.

Cases can be built by "profiling" suspicious passengers, Taylor said. But that takes time. With only 14 narcotics officers handling all the city drug cases, he can't afford to station someone at the airport just for surveillance.

Officers profiling suspects watch for a combination of suspicious actions that, added together, could form enough evidence to support a legal search, Taylor said.

Insurance drying up as bars and hosts lose lawsuits

By LAURA WILKINSON
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The victims of drunken drivers and the rivers themselves are suing tavern owners, party hosts, bosses who dispense holiday cheer and even friends who buy them "one for the road." The flood of suits is drying up liquor liability insurance in many states.

In Minnesota, where insurance is needed to operate, the Legislature is underwriting coverage for those who serve liquor by the drink, and Massachusetts is considering doing the same.

"The liability seems to be spreading, and the question of who is the supplier seems to be changing," said Mary Zavada, a spokeswoman for the Insurance Information Institute in New York, which represents 300 insurance companies and provides information to the public.

"It's changing from just taverns to an employer who serves liquor at the office Christmas party to a host in a home," Ms. Zavada said.

Coverage is tougher to get or to keep because the insurance industry is worried about increasing risk, running as high as the $3.9 million finding against a restaurant near Cope Cod that served a final drink to a driver involved in a fatal accident.

Tales of such suits have sent liability rates skyrocketing — when insurance can be found. Premiums for a bar owner in Franklin County, Pa., have gone from $300 in 1981 to $3,100 this year, said Dennis Nicholson of the Pennsylvania Tavern Association.

"The whole ground rules behind how you wrote that policy are being challenged," said Ronald A. Krauss, spokesman for the American Insurance Association in New York, which represents 175 property - casualty insurance firms nationwide. Restaurants that serve liquor and bars are "looked on as darn near uninsurable in many cases," he said.

Twenty-three states have specific "dram shop" liability laws for damages or injuries incurred by customers who downed their drinks at certain establishments. Twelve states have common law liability established by the courts; 15 states have no liability laws. Massachusetts established third party liability in 1968 on a court ruling in a lawsuit brought by the family of a man struck and killed by a drunken driver who'd been served at a Waltham bar.

"I feel it's unfair," said Maurice E. Hart, who owns a reception hall in Randolph, Mass. Hart had been paying $4,000 a year for special liquor liability coverage along with a $27,000 general insurance policy. His insurance was not renewed last month, partly due to a claim against the hall.

Hart, who is president of the Massachusetts Restaurant Association, is negotiating with another company for a full policy that will cost $100,000 for coverage he says is less complete than what he had.

Wisconsin was the first state with a dram shop law in 1949.

The first time a court found liability without using a specific law came in 1959 in New Jersey, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

New Jersey set a precedent again in 1984 when the state's Supreme Court ruled a host could be held liable for injuries in a motor vehicle accident caused by a guest served at the party.

The state appeals court expanded the high court's ruling last August, saying businesses could be held liable for accidents involving people who become intoxicated at office parties.

Last month, residents of Indiana who buy drinks for intoxicated friends became liable under a decision by the state Court of Appeals.

The rash of lawsuits has been encouraged by courts reacting to pressures from victims' rights groups such as Mothers Against Drunk Driving, according to Charles T. Alagero, a counsel to the Massachusetts Joint Legislative Insurance Committee.

In an effort to protect those who sell liquor by the drink, the Massachusetts Legislature has been considering a bill that would relax some liabilities and create a two-year insurance underwriting authority.

Minnesota set up a similar underwriting authority earlier this year after some bars and liquor stores were forced to close when they could not get policies, which state law requires. Massachusetts does not require coverage.

But opposition from MADD and similar groups forced Massachusetts lawmakers to drop provisions to limit an establishment's liability to $1 million per accident and impose a 90-day statute of limitations.

The revised bill, scheduled for a final vote in the Massachusetts Senate on May 28, has no caps on liability awards except for municipalities, hospitals and churches, and no time limits on when lawsuits must be filed.

The bill would also set up a state underwriting authority that would either underwrite liquor liability policies itself for two years or force a few companies to do the underwriting.

Massachusetts lawmakers took several steps last year that they hope will decrease drunken driving and related lawsuits: they banned "happy hours" in bars, passed legislation to raise the minimum drinking age from 20 to 21, effective June 1, and set up a "killer bar" registry. The registry is a list of establishments where more than 12 motorists arrested and convicted of drunken driving claim they drank their last drink.

Other states offer insurance discounts to taverns that send their bartenders to courses that teach them how to recognize tipsy patrons and keep them off the road.

South Dakota has acted against the trend toward wider liability. Despite waging a vigorous campaign against drunken driving, Gov. Bill Janklow last winter signed a bill that exempted bars and restaurants from liability lawsuits, joining 14 other states.

George R. McCarthy, chairman of the Massachusetts Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, has little sympathy for many bar owners who have lost their coverage and are calling for damage caps.

Americans harsh on drunk drivers

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans support harsh penalties for drunken drivers but do not believe bartenders and social hosts should be responsible for alcohol-related accidents, a Media General-Associated Press poll says.

The poll also found that 15 percent of the respondents have had a family member injured or killed by a drunken driver, and almost half of those who drink admit driving after drinking too much.

Bartenders can be sued for damages by victims of drunken driving accidents in many states and the New Jersey Supreme Court last year ruled that social hosts may be held liable for drunken driving accidents caused by their intoxicated guests.

An estimated 23,500 people were killed in drunken driving accidents last year, according to U.S. Department of Transportation. Few issues have galvanized the public as strongly in recent years, and most states have either toughened their drunken driving laws or are considering doing so.

In the Media General-AP poll, 72 percent of the 1,402 respondents said bartenders should not be legally responsible for drunken driving accidents caused by their customers. Sixty-five percent disagreed with the New Jersey ruling on liability for social hosts. The poll has an error margin of 3 percentage points.

But the respondents came down hard on the drunken drivers themselves. If someone is convicted of drunken driving once, they should be required to attend an alcohol rehabilitation program, according to nearly three-fourths of the respondents in the nationwide telephone poll.

Twenty-three percent said a mandatory jail sentence should be imposed on the first conviction, while 39 percent said a second conviction should carry a mandatory sentence. Nine percent said a drunken driver should be convicted three times before going to jail.

Twenty-six percent said sentencing should be left to the discretion of the judge, and 3 percent were unsure.

More than six in 10 of the respondents said they drank alcoholic beverages. Among the drinkers, 49 percent admitted driving after they'd had too much to drink.

Younger people were more likely to drink and drive than older people, and men were more likely to drink and drive than women. Women were also more likely than men to support stiffer penalties for drunken drivers.

In recent months, many states have been toughening raising their drinking ages in response to a federal law that requires them to have a legal drinking age of 21 by Oct. 1, 1986, or risk losing their federal highway funds.

Some states have cracked down on drunken driving by imposing stiff penalties like mandatory jail sentences, and others have been setting up road blocks to routinely check for drunken drivers.

Drunken drivers also face stiff penalties in other parts of the world. In the Netherlands, for example, offenders can be sentenced to six months of weekend service in hospitals and old-age homes. Drunken drivers in Britain automatically lose their licenses for a year.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,402 adults across the country May 1-7.

TIPS teaches how to cut drinkers off

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Slumped against the bar, the customer lifted his head just long enough to ask the bartender to pour him and his friend another shot of tequila.

The bartender instead offered them coffee and snacks, then discreetly whispered, "Why don't you let me call you a cab?"

"Nah," the friend replied. "We need a drink. If we can't get one here, we'll go down the street."

As the two stumbled out of the tavern, the bartender shrugged.

This common late-night bar scene was staged recently by a group of beer wholesalers and Anheuser-Busch Inc. employees learning how to recognize signs that someone has had enough to drink.

The two-day course — called TIPS, for Training for Intervention Procedures for Servers of Alcohol — is one of several that have emerged across the country in response to concerns about alcohol abuse and drunken drivers.

The participants must pass a written test at the end of the second day to become certified as TIPS instructors. They then can teach the course to bartenders, waitresses and waiters.

Developed by the Health Education Foundation of Washington, D.C., TIPS approaches the problem of alcohol abuse through the people who serve it rather than those who consume it.

At one point, participants play the roles of servers and customers. The bartender was played by Dave Nelson, who works for Anheuser-Busch. The customers were played by Eric Luecke, a beer wholesaler from Poplar Bluff, Mo., and Adam Chafetz, who was teaching the course.

Chafetz, whose father, Dr. Morris Chafetz, designed the course, said in an interview he had trained about 1,000 liquor wholesalers, bartenders and restaurant employees over the past 18 months. And Delta and KLM airlines have made preliminary inquiries about teaching the course to their flight attendants.

"It takes the bull by the horns," said Steve Jones, a beer wholesaler from St. Louis. "You learn to notice things that you didn't before."

But selling the idea to tavern and restaurant owners in some areas might not be a simple task. Luecke said.

"I'm from the backwoods of southeast Missouri," he explained. "Most of the tavern owners aren't as sophisticated as they are in the big cities. They don't believe overdrinking can be controlled."

Celtics overwhelm Lakers in record-breaking style

BOSTON (AP) — It was the runners against the gunners.

The Boston Celtics solved the puzzle that baffled so many Los Angeles opponents. They showed, in record-setting fashion, that the way to slow down the Lakers' fastbreak is to keep hitting shots.

With Scott Wedman and Danny Ainge connecting with long-range bombs, the National Basketball Association's defending champions overwhelmed the Lakers 148-114 Monday in the opener of the best-of-seven championship series.

"After we got up by 30 points, I thought it was a dream," said Boston forward Cedric Maxwell.

"Not in my wildest dreams would I have thought this would happen to us," said Los Angeles guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson.

"It was like a nightmare." The Lakers, who had scored 153 points to beat Denver by 44 in their previous game, lost Monday by 34, their biggest deficit in a championship series.

It came on the anniversary of Los Angeles' 115-109 victory over Boston in the opener of last year's finals. Since then, the Celtics are unbeaten in 12 home playoff games.

Los Angeles also was on a roll, averaging 131.2 points per game in building an 11-2 playoff record this year before Monday's contest.

"We're a good running team when we rebound, but you have a hard time fastbreaking consistently when you're taking it (the ball) out of your net," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley.

"Not in my wildest dreams would I have thought this would happen to us. It was like a nightmare." -Earvin "Magic" Johnson come off good defense and long rebounds and we didn't have it."

"We controlled the boards, we showed patience on offense, moved the ball around and looked for the good shot," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones.

"We are not going to shoot like that every night. Hopefully, we will be the same Thursday (in the second game), but I know better than that."

In the first half, Boston had 21 fastbreak points to just eight for Los Angeles.

"Their team is a fun-loving team that likes to play offense," Maxwell said.

"We created situations that made them play defense. We took them out of their game somewhat."

The Celtics did it by hitting 60.8 percent of their field goal attempts, breaking the championship series record of 60.6 percent set by the Lakers in 1970, and by building a 63-43 rebounding advantage.

They also set championship series records for most points, largest halftime lead, most points in the first half and most field goals, 62.

The old marks were 142 points by Boston against Los Angeles on April 18, 1965, a 27-point halftime lead by New York against Los Angeles on May 8, 1970, and 76 points in the first half and 61 field goals, both by Boston against St. Louis on March 27, 1960.

Wedman made all 11 of his shots, including four three-pointers, to set a championship series record for players making a minimum of eight shots. James Worthy of Los Angeles and Bill Bradley of the New York Knicks shared the previous shooting mark of .917 with 11-of-12 marksmanship.

Kevin McHale had 26 points to share scoring honors with Wedman, who played 23 minutes as a substitute. Ainge and Larry Bird added 19 apiece. Los Angeles was led by Worthy with 20 and Johnson with 19.

After Thursday night's game, the series moves to Inglewood, Calif., for games Sunday and June 5. A fifth game, if needed, would be at the Lakers' home June 7. Games 6 and 7 would be in Boston.

"We'll study the films for a long time and see what we did wrong," said Laker center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who was held to 12 points and three rebounds. "We were just playing terrible."

Astros topple Pirates, 4-2

HOUSTON (AP) — Pittsburgh pitcher Jose DeLeon would like to get onto some of the luck that Houston's Bob Knepper has been enjoying this season.

If he doesn't do something soon, he may find himself back in the minor leagues.

While Knepper benefitted from a four-run cushion in the second inning that led to a 4-2 victory Monday night, DeLeon lost for the 16th time in his last 17 decisions over two seasons.

DeLeon, 0-7 this season, has received only 17 runs from his teammates in his last five starts. Last season, the Pirates averaged 3.21 runs in games DeLeon started.

Knepper, at 5-0, is off to his best start as an Astro despite a pair of off-performances in the recently completed road trip.

"I won three games on the last road trip and I didn't pitch all that well," Knepper said. "But I was lucky and had a few runs so I was able to work out of it."

Terry Puhl's two-run double, a triple by Phil Garner and Craig Reynolds' single scored Houston's four runs in the second inning and could signal a trip to the minors for DeLeon.

"We've talked about it (sending DeLeon to the minors)," Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said. "But it will be up to Joe (Brown, general manager). He pitched well his last time out but tonight Jose got the ball up and couldn't get it down."

"We know he has a great arm (and) it's just a matter of learning to keep the ball down. He's learning the hard way."

The Astros were breaking away from a string of two straight losses to Chicago when they blew leads.

"We had some tough games in Chicago when it looked like we had the games locked up," Astros manager Bob Lillis said. "But you never have enough runs in Chicago."

The Astros set about getting the lead Monday night when Harry Spilman led off Houston's big second inning with a single to centerfield and scored the first run on Phil Garner's triple off the center field wall.

Mark Bailey walked, went to second on Knepper's sacrifice bunt and brought up Puhl, who sliced a double down the leftfield line scoring Garner and Bailey.

Pirate reliever Rod Scurry then came on to retire the next two batters and end the inning. He retired 12 batters in a row before Spilman singled through the middle in the sixth.

Pittsburgh got one run in the third inning when Bill Almon singled to leftfield and scored when former Astro Scott Loucks banged a double off the centerfield fence.

Knepper yielded a double to Tony Pena and single to Steve Kemp to start the ninth, and a fielder's choice grounder by Marvella Wynne off reliever Dave Smith allowed Pena to score the second run.

Spend A Buck wins Jersey Derby

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Spend a Buck had about a quarter of a mile left to run in his quest for a $2.6 million paycheck, and his chances of collecting it were looking golden.

Just past the quarter pole, Spend a Buck, the Kentucky Derby winner, gave up the lead to Creme Fraiche in the Jersey Derby Monday at Garden State Park.

"I got up to Spend a Buck, and my horse may just have stuck his nose in front for five strides," said Eddie Maple, who rode Creme Fraiche.

Once he quickly regained the lead, Spend a Buck, ridden by Laffit Pincay Jr., held on to win by a neck over Creme Fraiche, with El Basco another head back.

Spend a Buck looked to have nothing left after struggling over the final quarter-mile in 27 3/5. His final time was 2:02 3/5 for the 1 1/4 miles under scale weight of 126 pounds.

"He ran on guts," said Pincay, who was riding Spend a Buck for the first time in a race. "He's just a great horse, believe it."

"He's a game little fellow; he's got a lot of heart," said owner Dennis Diaz, who bought Spend a Buck for $12,500 as a yearling and has watched him earn $3,998,509 in 13 career starts to become second to only John Henry in all-time earnings. John Henry, a gelding, has earned $6,597,947 in 83 starts.

By winning the Jersey Derby, Spend a Buck earned $600,000 from a $1 million purse plus a $2 million bonus for sweeping the gherrie Hillumile, the Garden State Stakes, the Kentucky Derby and the Jersey Derby. It was horse racing's biggest payoff ever.

Spend a Buck turned in a front-running, 5 1/4-length victory in the Kentucky Derby May 4 in 2:00 1/5, the third fastest of 111 Derbies. That effort sent him off as an overwhelming favorite in the Jersey Derby — he paid $2.10, $2.10 and $2.10 — over a track on which he won the Cherry Hill and Garden State by 9 1/4 and 10 1/4 lengths, respectively.

Pincay got the mount on Spend a Buck when Angel Cordero, who rode him in his last two starts as a 2-year-old and his four previous races this year, decided to keep a commitment to ride Track Barron in the Metropolitan Handicap Monday at Belmont Park. Track Barron finished third.

Pincay picked up $260,000 for Spend a Buck's fourth straight win, which gave the colt a single-year money-winning record of $3,330,524. His career record is nine wins, two seconds and two thirds in 13 starts.

Completing the order of finish after El Basco were Purple Mountain, Skip Trial, Huddle Up, I Am The Game, Bolting Holme and Ah So Tony.

San Jacinto remains unbeaten in Junior College World Series

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — When San Jacinto pitcher Steve Bowden blew three fast balls past Trinidad slugger Scott Jaster with the bases loaded in the fifth inning, it ended Trinidad's hopes of staying alive in the National Junior College World Series.

Bowden was protecting a 5-2 lead when Jaster came to the plate.

At some point, said San Jacinto Coach Wayne Graham, "you need to give the pitcher the ball and the pitcher has to go out and do it."

San Jacinto went on to beat Trinidad 11-3 and is the only remaining undefeated team in the national tournament.

San Jacinto earned a bye in Tuesday's games, which will match Triton, Ill., against Pima, Ariz., and Santa Fe, Fla., against Morris, N.J.

Bowden, 15-0 preserved his victory in the eighth inning, when he again loaded the bases with two out, but got Kit Dennis to ground out.

Doug Messer, 9-4, the first of three Trinidad pitchers, took the loss.

Trinidad coach Rick Zimmerman, who was ejected by the umpires in the sixth inning, said Jaster's strike out was the turning point of the game.

"We would have been right in it with a base hit there," said Zimmerman, whose team was the first from Colorado to play in the national tournament in 15 years.

Earlier Scott Cote's two-run double broke a 13-to-13 tie in the bottom of the eighth to push Triton of Illinois to a 15-13 victory over Santa Fe of Florida. Pima of Arizona defeated Connors State of Oklahoma 9-3 and Morris County of New Jersey defeated Indian Hills of Iowa 17-12 to eliminate both of the losers.

In the Triton victory over Santa Fe Triton scored nine runs in the eighth. Contributing to the comeback were Bud Willis, who had a two-run single, and Crig Heakins, who had a two-run homer.

Santa Fe had come from behind earlier with a five-run fifth inning for an 8-5 lead. Doug DeKock blasted a grand slam home run in that rally.

Frank Thomas, 14-0 was credited with the win, while Greg Merians, fourth of Five Santa Fe pitchers, took the loss after pitching to only three batters.

John Engelbreton tossed a five-hitter through seven innings for Pima and Armondo Tellez mopped up in the eighth and ninth to preserve the victory.

George Bargfreed's three-run homer capped a five-run, 10th inning assault that gave Morris County its victory.

Indian Hills had taken a 4-1 lead after six innings before Morris County jumped to a 9-6 advantage with its 8-run seventh inning, led by Mike Maksudian's grand slam homer.

Sullivan grateful to Andretti

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A grateful Danny Sullivan is willing to pop for a steak dinner, but he won't give Mario Andretti any part of the record first prize from the richest purse in automobile racing history.

"It was just our day," the smiling, relaxed Sullivan said Monday night as he accepted a check for $507,662 for winning the Indianapolis 500 a day earlier.

Sullivan wasn't being stingy; he just figured he worked too hard, and came too close to disaster, to give up any part of his earnings from the narrow victory over Andretti, the man he beat in a dash to the finish line.

His gratitude to Andretti, the runner-up by a narrow 2.477 seconds, stemmed from a spin-out 300 miles into the race. Sullivan passed Andretti for the lead, but his car suddenly fishtailed and went into a 360-degree spin just in front of the former winner.

Andretti, envisioning a collision for the fourth year in a row, managed to avoid Sullivan's car and regained the lead temporarily. Sullivan, meanwhile, got the car back under control and continued on in the race.

"It was too close for comfort," Sullivan recalled at Monday night's Victory Dinner, where shares of the record $3,261,025 purse were awarded to the 33 starting drivers. "It was close enough that I owe Mario a steak. It was one of those things where we were both lucky."

Luck or skill, both drivers survived the scary incident, preserving their duel that went down to the final lap before Sullivan pulled away to victory.

"I knew he had things all together at that point," Andretti said of Sullivan's final charge to the checkered flag. "It was a matter of time before he got me. The (air) turbulence didn't seem to be bothering him as much as it did me. I drove as hard as I could from the very beginning, but I just lacked that little bit that might have made the difference."

Andretti's second-place winnings totaled $290,362, almost $85,000 more than he got for winning the race in 1969.

Andretti said the spin by Sullivan lasted "a very brief moment, so there's not much to tell about it. The man upstairs must have been in a good mood, because he smiled on both of us."

This year's victory was the fifth for the Penske Racing Team — previous triumphs came in 1972 with Mark Donohue, 1979 with Rick Mears, 1981 with Bobby Unser and 1984 with Mears again. The Penske earnings in those five victories total $1,730,015.

Royals' Gura may sign with Cubs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Larry Gura, the veteran Kansas City Royals pitcher placed on waivers May 18, will sign on with the Chicago Cubs to help bolster the National League team's ailing pitching staff, according to a published report.

The Kansas City Times reported Monday that the 37-year-old Gura, a left-hander with a 126-94 career record, will sign with the Cubs today after expiration of waivers on him at midnight Monday.

The Cubs starting rotation has been recently disrupted by injuries to Rick Sutcliffe, who is suffering from a pulled hamstring, and Steve Trout, out with an inflamed nerve in his elbow.

Gura is in the second year of a guaranteed three-year contract with the American League Royals, making $650,000 this year and $675,000 in 1986. The Cub would need to pay him only the major league minimum salary of $40,000, with the Royals being responsible for the rest of his contract.

Gura worked out with the Cubs before Sunday's game with Houston at Chicago. Cubs manager Jim Frey, who formerly managed the Royals, said he was impressed with the way he threw, but would not confirm that the team planned to sign him.

Gura, twice an 18-game winner for the Royals, was moved to the bullpen last August and finished the season with a 12-9 record. This season, he appeared in only three games for the Royals.

Stallions take command in East

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A remarkable catch and a little razzle-dazzle allowed Cliff Stoudt to engineer a 24-point spurt in the second period, and now the Birmingham Stallions are tops in the East.

The 41-17 Birmingham triumph over Orlando Monday night moved the Stallions to 10-4, best in the United States Football League's Eastern Conference, with Tampa Bay and New Jersey tied for second at 9-5.

Stoudt, with good protection all evening, threw for two touchdowns in that quarter, a 50-yarder on which Joey Jones outran the ball for a diving catch at the goal line, and a 7-yarder to Jim Smith.

"It seems like I've been touched back there," said Stoudt, 15 of 21 for 213 yards. "I've been given all day to throw it. I've been getting great protection and the receivers have been running great routes."

He has 29 scoring passes this season.

The Birmingham defense had three sacks for 18 yards and held Orlando to only 63 yards rushing and 170 passing.

In Sunday's games, Jim Kelly of Houston, whose 44 touchdown passes last season set a USFL record, tore a ligament in his right knee during the Gamblers' 41-20 romp over the Arizona Outlaws. He may be out five weeks.

New Jersey slipped past Tampa Bay 30-24 in overtime as a prospective field-goal try by Roger Ruzek — who had forced the extra period with a 40-yarder — wound up as a 9-yard scoring sweep by holder Rick Partridge.

Chuck Fusina threw three TD passes as Baltimore beat San Antonio 28-10 before 8,633 fans, their smallest crowd for a home game in the three-year history of the Stars' franchise and nearly 6,000 fewer than the season's previous low.

On Saturday night, the Portland Breakers intercepted Mike Kelley six times and beat the Memphis Showboats 17-14. Also on Saturday night, Jacksonville downed Los Angeles 21-7. On Thursday night, Oakland defeated Denver 31-16.

Cunningham quits as Sixers' coach

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Billy Cunningham, who helped the Philadelphia 76ers to a National Basketball Association championship as a player and led them there as coach, announced today that he has resigned as head coach.

"I leave with a smile on my face," said Cunningham, who has coached the 76ers for eight years since taking over on Nov. 4, 1977.

"I made this decision with my family and friends," he told a news conference. "I've been fortunate enough to be connected with pro basketball as a player and coach for 20 years. It's time to go on to other areas of my life."

During his career, Cunningham won 454 games and lost 196 for a .698 record. He led the 76ers to the NBA title in 1982-83 and twice took them to the league finals. As a player, he helped the team to the NBA crown in 1967.

Cunningham, 41, reached 200, 300 and 400 victories faster than any coach in NBA history. He accumulated 66 playoff wins, second only to Red Auerbach in NBA history.

Cunningham was introduced at the news conference by 76ers General Manager Pat Williams, while club owner Harold Katz sat nearby.

"It's not a day for tears," Cunningham said. "I've been a very fortunate person to be in a position to coach this great basketball team."

Cunningham promised support for his successor. Among the people believed to be under consideration are 76ers assistant Matt Goukas and Chuck Daly, coach of the NBA's Detroit Pistons who once was an assistant to Cunningham.

Cunningham's resignation came a week after the 76ers lost to the Boston Celtics four games to one in the Eastern Conference final series of the NBA playoffs.

Cunningham had one year remaining on a contract that would have reportedly pay him about $400,000 next season.

After the Sixers lost their final playoff game to Boston Wednesday, Williams had said Cunningham was "wrestling" with a decision about finishing the final year on his contract.

Five Longhorns on all-tourney team

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas, which captured the NCAA Central Regional Baseball Tournament, placed five players on the all-tournament team.

The Longhorns were led by pitcher Greg Swindel, the tournament's most outstanding player. Swindel was the winning hurler in two of the Longhorns' four victories in the tournament.

Other Longhorns selected included first baseman Rusty

Richards, second baseman Bill Bates, outfielder Dennis Cook and designated hitter Doug Hodo.

Lamar placed two players on the team — third baseman Jerald Clark and shortstop Eric Heinlein.

Others named to the team were catcher Pat Hewes of Houston, pitcher Gary Eave of Grambling and outfielders Joe Pat Simms of Houston and Tim Sossamon of Louisiana State.

Softball information needed

Game results in the Pampa Summer Softball Leagues may be called into the Pampa News sports department at 669-2525 before 10:30 a.m. weekdays and after 4 p.m. Saturdays.

Written results may be turned in at the sports desk or by placing the information in the mail slot located in the newspaper office door. Results should include the score, first and last names of the winning pitcher and players who hit home runs. Other information, such as the game's leading hitter and outstanding defensive plays, could also be included.

A more active social calendar is in the offing for you in the year ahead. Numerous involvements with friends, both old and new, will provide welcome relief from your mundane routines. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Instinctively, you'll know how to make everyone happy today and, because of this, you're apt to be the center of attention. Let go and be yourself. Major changes are ahead for Gemini in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 485, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will be more effective today if you guide a delicate situation from the background. Maintain a low profile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) The more people you have around you today, the more you're apt to like it. Seek out spots where the action is and plan to be part of it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Lady Luck will be especially attentive to your career and finances today. Devote as much time as possible to these areas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're prepared to accept life's happenings philosophically today, everything will ultimately work out to your advantage. Be hopeful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You possess a remarkable faculty today for making the most out of the least. Associates will be aware of this and try to hop on your bandwagon.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're now in a cycle where your popularity will be ascending. People you know casually will begin to think of you as their special friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Major achievements are possible for you today because you will be endowed with both confidence and the wherewithal to get done anything you desire.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) To bring out your finer qualities, you'll require some form of stimulating challenge today. It could be a game or a business deal.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Focusing your attention on your family today will enhance your feelings of belonging and, at the same time, contribute to their sense of well-being and security.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you can derive considerable pleasure by being brought up to date on people you like. Ring up your favorite pals for some chitchat.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) For the next few days your earning ability will be considerably heightened. If you're prepared to produce, the compensation will be there.

Defense to begin in suit

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The defense in the trial of a $50 million libel lawsuit was scheduled to begin presenting its case today after plaintiffs' attorneys wrapped up their side with the reading of several depositions. Real estate developer Joe Foster and former Mayor Ray Salazar contend they were defamed by several articles and one editorial published by the El Paso Times during 1979 and 1980 and statements made by Tom Westfall, another ex-mayor, when he was mayor-elect.

Lawyers to fight Isles testimony

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Prosecutors have gotten Claus von Bulow's former lover to return from Europe to appear at his trial, but defense lawyers are trying to block testimony from the woman who has already once helped convict the socialite of attempted murder.

Defense attorneys were expected today to ask Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande to bar Alexandra Isles' testimony, claiming it is not relevant and would prejudice the jury against von Bulow.

Mrs. Isles, who gave damaging testimony against the Danish-born socialite at his 1982 trial, is one of two prosecution witnesses remaining in the case against von Bulow, charged with twice trying to kill his heiress wife. Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, with insulin injections.

Von Bulow's 1982 convictions were overturned by the Rhode Island Supreme Court on state constitutional grounds. Von Bulow, 58, faces up to 40 years in prison if convicted on the two counts.

Mrs. Isles, a former soap opera actress who left for Europe two months ago and so avoided testifying, flew into Boston's Logan International Airport on Monday, one day before a court-imposed deadline for the prosecution to put her on the stand.

Assistant Attorney General Henry Gemma said Monday night Mrs. Isles returned voluntarily through negotiations between her New York attorney and Assistant Attorney General Marc DeSisto.

The state had obtained a criminal warrant to force Mrs. Isles back, but Gemma said it was not used.

"She's here. She came voluntarily. And she came because she wanted to," Gemma said. But von Bulow, reached at his Providence hotel room Monday night, said he assumed the warrant was used to get her back.

"I would just say that in view of the fact that the Rhode Island authorities applied for a federal warrant for her arrest on a criminal charge, I'm not surprised" she has returned, he said.

The state contends von Bulow, driven by desire for Mrs. Isles and greed for his $14 million share of his wife's $75 million fortune, induced in Mrs. von Bulow one coma in 1979 and a permanent one a year later with insulin injections.

Scientist blames world hunger on his colleagues

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Scientists and others working to end world hunger often use complicated, close-minded solutions rather than finding out what the poor really need, according to one of their colleagues.

Robert Chambers, a fellow of the Institute of Development Studies at the University of Sussex, told a Monday conference on water and food supplies that solutions to world hunger require "professionalism that above all puts poor people first."

Chambers, who has extensive experience in irrigation systems and management in Africa and Southeast Asia, spoke to about 40 delegates from 38 nations.

Man is in the business of 'healing' troubled companies

By SHEILA ALLEE
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Thomas Neff says it would be hard for him to think of a bigger waste of money in the business world than the billions that venture capitalists are pouring into high-technology industry.

Better those billions go to saving established companies who are "bleeding from the jugular" and need an influx of cash and expertise to turn them around.

Following his own advice, Neff has formed TBN Capital Management Corp., a firm that will buy controlling interest in failing companies.

Neff and his associates could be likened to business doctors. Once they get control of a company, they write prescriptions for what ails it, then see the firm through a recovery.

TBN targets smaller companies, ones with $5 million to $100 million in annual sales, ones in industrial manufacturing, ones at the low to medium technology range of the industry.

"I'm not talking about public companies. I'm talking about finding privately-owned companies whose owners are willing to sell. Companies that have been losing money for several years," he said.

Neff figures there are hundreds of firms that are candidates for TBN's money and talent. But these businesses are being overlooked by the investors who have the ability to breathe new life into them, he says.

"I'm incensed. Venture capitalists are putting billions in computer software that's going to be obsolete before it goes on the market," he says.

Venture capitalists, according to Neff, are playing the odds — betting that two out of 10 companies will make them a fortune. They accept that the remaining eight will go down the drain.

Neff says he is not suggesting that the money flow to high-tech development be cut off.

"We need to subsidize inventors. But there's a terrible imbalance going on," he says. "The economy would be a lot better off if we were putting more money in established companies that already have employees, equipment, families depending on those employees for an income."

Venture capitalists dispute Neff's contentions.

Michael Bell of Southwest Venture Partners said Neff is right in saying much of venture capital goes to high-tech businesses that produce items obsolete by the time they hit the market.

But Bell says venture capitalists are backing losers, as well as winners, and even if a company goes under, the investment is not wasted since funds are still pumped into the economy.

"Venture capital is involved in high return businesses. Not all companies are high return," Bell said.

Neff has spent his career in the turnaround business — only when he started out it was called "fixing."

He got his first taste of turnaround work when he joined Raytheon, an electronics corporation, in 1957. At the time, it was manufacturing a diverse line of equipment — radar, marine, medical, communications and smaller items — all under the umbrella of one division.

"Every one of those production lines needed management attention to grow. So I split them into three," he said.

Neff then went to work for ITT and handled turnarounds for several subsidiaries in Mexico and Puerto Rico.

Later, Neff set up a business consulting firm called TBN Associates Inc.

The company employs a stable of about 18 freelance business experts, all former chief executive officers of declining companies, who provide hands-on advice to struggling firms.

Through TBN Associates, Neff said he became chief executive officer for Given International, a California machine tool company that went through bankruptcy, changing fields altogether and ended up profitable.

Within a year, the new company had recovered all of the losses of Given International, he said.

The new sister company, TBN Capital Management, uses TBN Associates freelancers to do the actual turnaround work.

TBN Capital Management is financed by a limited partnership, with a beginning pool of about $10 million for the friendly takeovers Neff envisions.

TBN's turnaround philosophy involves everyone in a company.

"You need a good marketer and a good scorekeeper. A turnaround is nothing more than efficient leadership and a great deal of vision," he said.

"You define your problems and your opportunities. You get at those causing the patient to bleed to death first. You can't put a tourniquet around the jugular and get a quick fix," he said.

Once the business has recovered, Neff says TBN will either hold onto them, sell them off to an interested buyer or the members of TBN's limited partnership, or go public.
