

Pampa students get lift

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

Handicapped students at Pampa High School are getting a lift this year, thanks to the installation of a new elevator.

The elevator, complete with an array of safety features, was installed during the summer and was operational by the first day of school at a cost of about $39,500. Contractor for the job was Wiley Hicks Jr. of Amarillo.

It is intended for use by handicapped students or those who, for whatever reason, cannot climb the stairs to the second and third floors at the high school. Currently, the high school has one student who will use the elevator full-time — Chris Ely, who has cerebral palsy — but high school principal Oran Chappell said, at the start of school, four students with assorted leg injuries were being permitted to ride from floor to floor.

"We may have more using it by the time football season's over," he joked.

Chappell said the school nurse will make final determination on who is permitted to ride the elevator. She should be contacted anytime a parent or doctor thinks it's needed, he said.

Keys to the elevator are in the process of being made and will be issued to students upon approval of the nurse. She will also train students on how to operate the elevator, he said.

Pampa school officials are lauding the elevator as a step toward better serving the needs of the district's handicapped students. John English, assistant superintendent for instructional services, and board member Wallace Birkes both had high praise for it during a recent board meeting. Supt. James Trusty said he feels the elevator will better enable handicapped students to obtain a complete education.

"In a multi-level building such as ours, we certainly recognize the need for an elevator for our handicapped students," he said.

Chappell said in a case such as Ely's, without an elevator, the student would have to work in a tutoring situation for classes that meet on the third floor or third floor teachers would have to let several students out of class early to help the handicapped student to his or her next class, meaning all would miss at least several minutes of class time.

He conceded a small loss of class time could occur anyway if a high number of students begin using the elevator, which will not operate with more than 450 pounds.

With the elevator, he said, school computers can treat Ely as a normal student.

"It gives him the flexibility to be mainstreamed," he said.

Earl Meaker, head custodian at the high school, said the elevator is equipped with several safety features to prevent accidents and injuries. In addition to the 450 pound limit, the elevator will not move unless both the door leading to the shaft

Roberts County picks Lando Brown sheriff

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — After deliberating for less than one hour Wednesday, Roberts County Commissioners unanimously selected chief deputy Lando Brown, 62, to succeed retiring Roberts County Sheriff Ed Brines.

Earlier that afternoon, Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy placed Brown on a 90-day deferred adjudication and fined him $500 on a Class A misdemeanor assault charge stemming from a scuffle at a Pampa farm implement dealership in August. This means that if Brown follows the terms of his deferral for 90 days, the charges will be dropped. He also must pay restitution for any medical bills the victim sustained from the incident.

According to the charges, Brown hit Darrel Gibson, an employee at Crossman Implement of Pampa.

Appearing before the commissioners Wednesday, Brown admitted he "made a mistake" and assured commissioners that such an incident wouldn't happen again.

"As a sheriff, you hold office for 24 hours a day," Precinct 3 commissioner Don Morrison said. "What if this situation comes up again?"

"Sir, I believe I learn from my mistakes," Brown answered. "And I hope and pray it wouldn't happen again."

"It was something I did do," he added. "But I made restitution. I don't know if this cost me friends, but it has cost me sleepless nights and it has cost me financially."

Miami resident Bill Breeding, the only audience member to speak before the commissioners' decision, showed his support for Brown.

"You all know you're not going to be popular whatever your decision. But I want to speak up for Lando. I think he's a Christian man and I think he's an honest man," he said.

The incident put Gray County and Roberts County Attorney Robert McPherson in a dilemma.

As Gray County attorney, he was the one who filed the charges. But he is also legal advisor for Roberts County.

"I had to separate myself from the commissioners' decision," McPherson said. "If he violates the deferral, he goes before the judge and could be fined up to $2,000 or sentenced to a year in jail."

Pampa attorney Rick Harris said under the law, the candidate cannot be certified if convicted of a class A or B misdemeanor or felony.

Brown was Roberts County Deputy for seven years. Before that, he was chief of police in Sunray.

Sunray city manager Darce Foshee said Brown served for about a year-and-a-half and was "let go."

Brown also worked for 21 years at American Zinc Co., in Dumas.

Brines' resignation becomes effective Oct. 1. The successor will serve until the next general election in November, 1986. Brines was elected to a third four-year term in 1984. The sheriff elected in 1986 will serve the last two years of Brines' unexpired term until the next sheriff's election in 1988.

County seeks public input on budget

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

The Gray County Commissioners Court will be the scene of two public hearings Friday as the commissioners begin formal discussion of the 1986 county budget.

The commission meeting begins at 9:30 a.m. with the budget discussion slated to begin an hour later. County Judge Carl Kennedy said several groups are scheduled to appear before the commissioners to make budget requests.

"I feel confident in saying we are not going to exceed the effective tax rate" of 25.2 cents per $100 valuation, Kennedy said.

The current tax rate is 22.2 cents per $100 valuation and the effective rate is the rate that would be required to raise the same amount of revenue next year.

Legally, the commissioners are not required to hold formal hearings unless they plan to exceed the effective rate by more than 3 percent but Kennedy said "we want the public to know what we're doing."

The 1985 county budget totalled $4.03 million, with about $2.67 million expected to come from property taxes. Kennedy said he expects the total 1986 budget to be in the area of $4.2 to $4.3

million but added "that's just a guess at this point."

Preliminary budget computations show a $4.09 million budget figure for 1986 but Kennedy said that figure does not account for possible salary increases for county employees, special budget requests or the state's new indigent health care bill requiring counties to levy up to 10 percent of their total budgets for indigent health care.

Kennedy said the purpose of Friday's hearing will be to provide the public with a chance for input on salary changes and budget requests.

Another public hearing is scheduled for Sept. 24 to discuss the budget and set the tax rate, Kennedy said.

Also planned Friday is a public hearing on the use of federal revenue sharing funds. The county has been receiving about $156,000 per year and has used the money to pay for fire runs and to support local charitable and non-profit organizations.

If Congress eliminates revenue sharing in 1987 as indicated in its recent budget resolution, the county probably will receive three-fourths of the normal amount, about $117,000, because the federal government operates on a fiscal year beginning in October while Gray County operates on a calendar year.

Revenue sharing also will be taken up in a second Sept. 24 hearing.

The commissioners will also consider a request from District Attorney Guy Hardin to reimburse him about $212 for travel expenses. In a letter to commissioners courts in all five counties he serves, Hardin says he exceeded the state's $7,500 travel allotment prior to June 1.

Hardin wrote that he travelled 4,054 miles in June, July and August and spent $128.75 for meals, totalling $1,060 that he feels he is owed. He requests that this amount be split evenly among the five counties.

In other action, the commissioners plan to:

- appoint the 1985-86 election judges.
- discuss a request from the Texas Department of Public Safety for radar equipment for 1986.
- receive and vote on an independent auditor's report.
- pay salaries and bills as approved by the county auditor.
- consider the county treasurer's report.
- consider time deposits and transfers as recommended by the county auditor.

Rose celebrates record

CINCINNATI (AP) — Fifty-seven years to the day after Ty Cobb played his last game, Pete Rose lobbied a line drive over the shortstop to left field and shattered Cobb's career record of 4,191 hits.

Rose broke into tears as coaches and players streamed onto the field to congratulate the Cincinnati Reds player-manager Wednesday night following his

"Your reputation and legacy are secure," President Reagan told Rose in an on-field telephone call after the game. "It will be a long time before anyone is standing in the spot where you're standing now."

Reform coming?

South Africa may abolish 'pass laws' for blacks

By TOM BALDWIN
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A committee of the white-minority government took a dramatic step toward reforming apartheid today by suggesting that "pass laws" barring blacks from white areas be scrapped.

The 40-year-old laws "as applied at present are discriminatory and are in conflict with basic human rights," said a report by the President's Council Committee for Constitutional Affairs, which was made available to The Associated Press.

The committee's wishes will almost certainly be backed by President P.W. Botha, who appoints members of the council. To take effect, the reforms must be passed by Parliament, where Botha's ruling National Party controls 125 of the 178 seats.

No dates were recommended for the pass laws to end, and police today said they would still arrest any black who lacked documents necessary to be in a white area.

It was the second official move in two days to dismantle features of apartheid, the government's racial discrimination policies.

On Wednesday, Botha abandoned his party's long-held policy denying South African citizenship to blacks in so-called tribal homelands. The policy aimed at eventually isolating all of South Africa's 24 million blacks in homelands, and maintaining 87 percent of the country for the 5 million whites.

The government announced today that it was banning the Sept. 16 issue of Newsweek magazine, meaning it is illegal to sell the publication but not possess it.

The move came a day after one of the magazine's reporters, Ray Wilkinson, was served with a deportation order for coverage that the government said advocated "violence on the street." Newsweek said in New York that its reports from South Africa attempt to treat all sides fairly.

Police reported two new deaths in rioting overnight.

A police spokesman said a black policeman killed a man who was in a crowd stoning the

Miami doesn't act on gas rate request

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — A decision on a Consolidated Utilities request to increase base gas rates was tabled Tuesday by city officials, who want to study how the utility company spent a $12,000 refund from the previous year.

Consolidated Utilities is asking the city to raise the base gas rate six percent from $4.33 per thousand cubic feet (MCF) to $4.62 per MCF. Late payment charges, after the 15th of each month, would rise from $4.76 to $5.08.

Because of lower costs of gas purchased by CU, the present rate is less than the $4.95 per MCF approved by the council in 1984. The utility did not have to go before the council to request the decrease. The overall rates are subject to increases or decreases depending on the cost of gas CU buys.

According Pampa accountant Jerry G. Davis, who presented the rate request at the council's regular meeting, even with reportedly lower gas costs the utility will need revenues of $211,512 to operate. Of that, $121,807 would go for gas purchases and $63,597 for operations and maintenance. The utility is also seeking an $18,061 profit.

Under the proposed rate "adjustment," the utility expects to collect $26,640 next year from the $6 monthly service charge, and $184,943 from the $4.62 per MCF charge (estimating a yearly total of 40,031 MCFs).

City counsel Kent Sims wondered whether the $12,015 the utility received in prior year gas refunds would be passed on to the customers.

"They could have given us (the city) credit for the refund," Sims said.

Davis said that without the refund, the utility was left with an operating income of $2,000. He said that, at the end of the fiscal year ending March 31, 1985, the utility had $217,507 in total gas sales and spent $215,471. Of that, $152,057 went for gas purchases, $31,000 went to labor, $8,080 to taxes and $4,424 to depreciation. Combining the operating income with the refunds gave CU a net "income" of $14,851 at the end of March.

"The refund is not income," said a CU spokesman. "It is a deduction in the price of the gas we purchased. That's the discrepancy the city is wondering about."

Davis questioned the city's decision to table and study the request.

"Here it is, September. You're putting it off for a month and we don't get an effective rate for another month. By then you'll be in winter, he said. "What have you got to study?"

"The bottom line is that you want a 6.7 percent increase," council would "jump four percent," Bailey said, explaining that there would be a $25 per month increase for the city. The school rates also rise four percent.

"Nothing is going to be put on the books until all our cities are signed on," Bailey said.

The city tabled the request. In other business, city officials agreed to allocate $11,013 of its Revenue Sharing budget for an eight-block sealcoating project completed this summer. But they will not pay the contractors, Lewis Construction of Pampa, until they correct what the city feels are examples of substandard work.

Engineer Gene Barber, the city's consultant on the sealcoating project, asked that the city approve the project and pay the company $11,013, despite what he admitted were examples of below standard work.

"The asphalt has a few skips and overlays," Barber said in a letter to the council. Barber was not able to attend the Tuesday meeting.

"These are minor things I saw," Barber said Wednesday. "I'll talk with the city and the contractor and work things out."

"They finished the job," Barber said. He said that while the city didn't do anything wrong in withholding funds, it is unreasonable "for them to hold back the money for so long."

"This is the second month the contractors haven't been paid," he said.

Council members also agreed to install a stop sign on Wichita at its intersection with Mobettie Street. The Rev. Jerry Howe, pastor of the First Baptist Church which is located on the corner of the two streets, objected to the council's decision and noted that cross traffic is not the main problem at the intersection.

"The problem is the kids racing down the hill in go-carts, three-wheelers and cycles, and there's a lot of that," he told the council. "If you want to do something, get the kids off these mopeds and three-wheelers."

Close election for chamber

Seven new directors were elected to the Pampa Chamber of Commerce board following counting of election ballots this morning in the Chamber office.

Chamber President Phil Gentry said it was one of the closest director elections in the Chamber's history.

Elected to three-year terms were Warren Chisum, Omega Oil Co.; Jerry Foote, National Bank of Commerce; Bob Hart, Pampa city manager; Steve Jones, Citizens Bank and Trust Co.; Norman Knox, Coronado Community Hospital; Don Lehman, Celanese Chemical Co., and Jack Reeve, IRI International.

Gentry stated that 201 of a possible 783 members cast ballots for directors.

The new directors will take office on Oct. 1 and will be officially installed at a later date.

Gentry said just being nominated was an honor. "It showed the willingness of a member to spend the extra time necessary in making Pampa an even better place in which to live and work," he said.

"It is people like this that make Pampa great," he stated. "We are proud of all those on the ballot and know that they will be asked to serve in a greater capacity for the Chamber of Commerce in the coming year."

Soviets booted out of Britain

LONDON (AP) — Acting on information supplied by a top KGB defector, Britain today ordered 25 purported Soviet spies to leave the country in the biggest such expulsion in 14 years.

The Foreign Office said that in ordering out the six accredited diplomats and 19 business officials, journalists and embassy workers, it was going on the word of Oleg A. Gordievski, the chief operative in Britain of the KGB, the Soviet spy agency and secret police.

It said Gordievski, 46, posted in London since 1982 and officially listed as a Soviet Embassy counselor, had defected saying he "wishes to become a citizen of a democratic country and live in a free society." He was given political asylum, it said, without revealing when he defected.

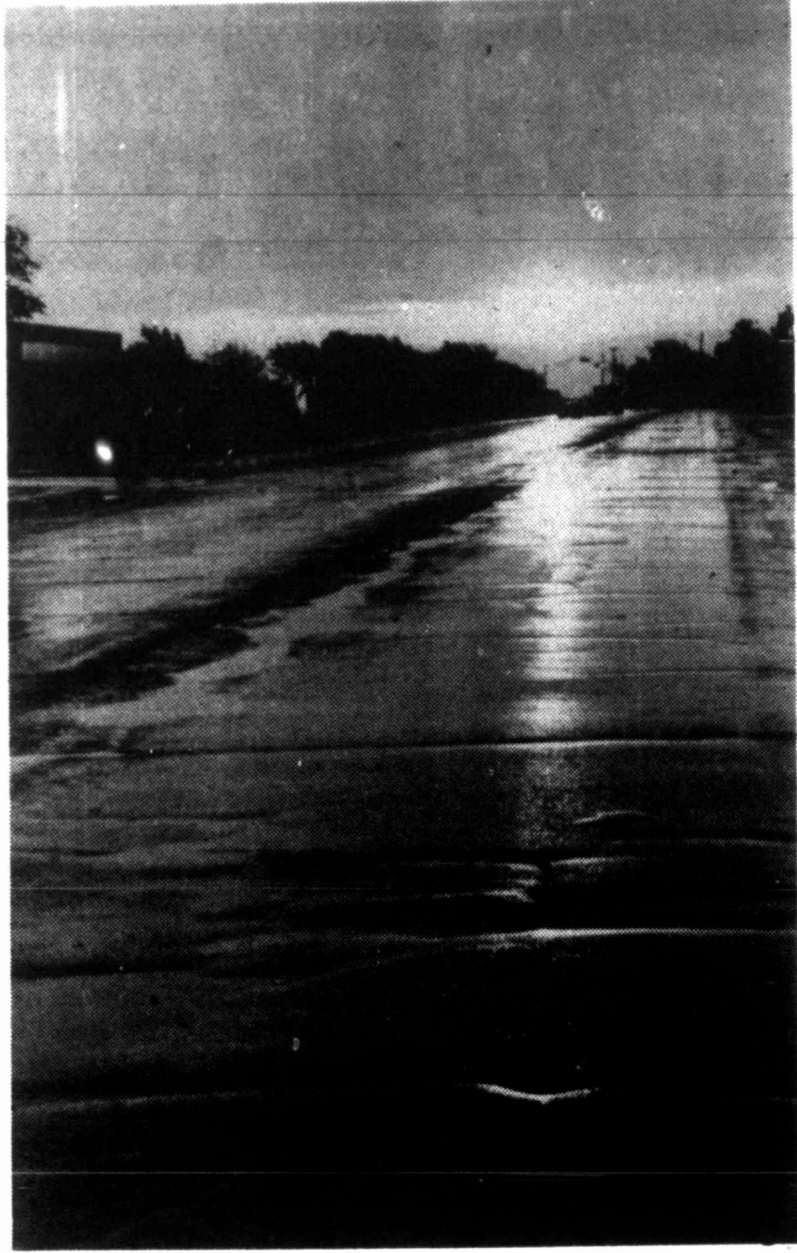

A Foreign Office statement said Gordievski was "in a position to know full details of Soviet intelligence activities and personnel in this country."

The Foreign Office dispensed with the usual diplomatic language and bluntly accused the 25 of spying. It gave them three weeks to leave Britain.

It said it summoned the Soviet charge d'affaires, Lev. A. Parchine, and told him "that a significant number of Soviet representatives in London have been engaging in intelligence activities which are of course totally incompatible with their status and declared tasks."

It did not spell out their alleged actions but said "the nature and scale of the activities are completely unacceptable."

Parchine's response was not known and the Soviet Embassy said no one was available to comment.

and the elevator gate are shut. Students using the elevator will be granted keys for both the door and gate.

In addition, any jarring of the gate will automatically stop the elevator. Once stopped, it must be re-activated with a key.

The elevator also is equipped with an exterior emergency bell that activates automatically and can be heard in the principal's office.

In the event of a power failure, Meaker said a braking system will lock the elevator in position. He said it can be hand-cranked to the nearest floor once locked.

Chappell said he did not have any problems with students misusing the elevator when he was principal in the Spring School district near Houston. He said he does not anticipate such problems in Pampa.

Brown

Jones, withdrew her application, noting to Roberts County Judge Newton Cox that there's "no way I can handle" the job.

Two candidates were dropped for statutory reasons.

Larry Gill, a juvenile probation officer for the four-county 31st district, was dropped because he is second cousin to Precinct 2 commissioner Ronnie Gill. Larry Gill ran against Brines during the last sheriff's election in 1984, losing to the incumbent by a wide margin.

Gill (Larry) contested the state statute by declaring that there "are some loopholes in the law."

One way, he said, would be to have Commissioner Gill resign temporarily until the next election in November 1986. Or the county can appoint someone to serve until the 1986 election, he said.

Another candidate, former Wheeler County deputy Bill Britton, did not meet the state residency requirements of being a Roberts County resident for six months or more.

Other candidates included Roberts County sheriff's deputy Billy Todd, who has served for two years under Brines and has served as an officer for the city of Seminole and former Roberts County sheriff's deputy Ron Wright.

Because of faulty telephone connections, Brown could not be reached this morning for comment.

Mattox to support efforts to broaden open meeting act for television crews

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says he will support efforts to broaden the state Open Meetings Act to make certain television news cameras can cover public sessions of governmental bodies.

However, he said, some groups likely will exclude cameras until the law is amended.

"I think it is entirely possible that video cameras will be barred from a number of public meetings," Mattox said Wednesday. "In some rural counties, I think we're going to see cameras excluded at times."

Mattox's comments followed a legal opinion he issued Tuesday saying the open meetings law gives Texans a right to make audio tape recordings of public governmental meetings but not video recordings.

Asked about that opinion at a news conference Wednesday, Mattox said he was only interpreting the law as it is written, not expressing his personal feelings about the issue.

He compared the situation to his negative feelings about a state law requiring clergymen to tell authorities about people who commit child abuse, even if they learn of it in confession. But his legal opinions must interpret whatever the law says, he insisted.

"It is an unfortunate thing I have to interpret the law this way. I feel very strongly about open meetings and open government. (But) we believe the law means what it says," Mattox said.

Several broadcasters already have voiced fears that city councils, county commissioners, school boards and others might try to use the opinion to force cameras out of their meetings.

As an author of the open meetings law when he was a member of the Legislature, Mattox said he hopes government officials won't see his opinion as a tool for blocking televised news coverage of their sessions.

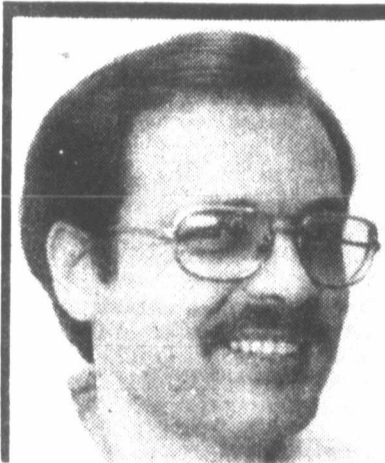

"I was one of the authors of the open meetings and open records acts, and I feel very strongly about the concept of allowing the public to understand what takes place within these meetings," Mattox said.

Mattox said he would support efforts to amend the open meetings law in the next legislative session to include television cameras, possibly having his staff draft a bill that would do it.

While the issue ultimately might be presented to the courts, Mattox said, "Probably the best thing for us is to try to get this law changed here in the Legislature."

On a sentimental journey

Saturday evening, just finishing up the work for the day, I headed out of the office, telling Wally I had to get ready to attend the community concert.

"Who's playing?" he asked.

"Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians," I said. "It ought to be really exciting." I added, some slight sarcasm in my voice.

"Oh, you'll probably enjoy it," he said.

"Uhhmm, sure," I said, and then headed home.

Well, I have to admit I was not overly enthusiastic at the prospect of hearing "the sweetest music this side of heaven," but the ticket was paid for.

Now, I like big band music, but Lombardo had never been one of my favorites from the period. All I could recall was his off-key "Auld Lang Syne," wondering how that had ever become a New Year's Eve tradition. Any other tunes of his I could remember seemed too schmaltzy, making Lawrence Welk appear to be the king of the big beat.

But fortunately, the new band played a lot of other big band hits from the '30s and '40s, and I actually found myself enjoying the show, my foot tapping away merrily, probably to the distraction of some of the "more mature" residents around me.

During the intermission, I had to put up with several — uh, not old, but old-er residents asking me how I was enjoying the show, then, before I could answer, saying, "But, of course, that was all before your days, so you probably don't remember most of the songs."

Well, sure, most of it was before I was born in 1946. I had just begun to listen to the radio when the big bands were fading to be replaced by Johnnie Ray, Frankie Laine, Patti Page, Fats Domino, Bill Haley and the Comets and, of course, Elvis Presley.

But through grade school and into junior high, I used to watch Saturday afternoon matinees (remember when they used to have those on TV?). There I caught many of the movies from the '30s and '40s with all the big bands and the singers and the dancers performing. So I learned to appreciate the big band music. And, of course, a lot of the songs showed up on all the variety shows on TV through the '50s and into the '60s, further exposing me to the music.

And while I was swinging with Presley, Pat Boone, Little Richard, Lesley Gore, Connie Francis, the Coasters, the Drifters, and so on, I still enjoyed the sounds of Glenn Miller, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Artie Shaw, Woodie Herman, the Andrews Sisters, Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra.

In high school and college, however, I found myself putting down the big band sounds. They just didn't sound so exciting compared to the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Bob Dylan, Janis Joplin, Donovan, the Doors and Jefferson Airplane.

But the years went by, and along came Blood, Sweat and Tears, Chicago, Quincy Jones and other assorted artists modifying, adapting and incorporating elements of the former big band sounds — multiple band instruments, varying beats, big arrangements.

And I found myself going back to the big bands, learning that they had beats and melodies and harmonies and variety, and a lot of really darn good music, both slow ballads and foot-tapping, danceable tunes.

So I found myself enjoying the "bouquet of memories" proffered by Art Mooney and the Royal Canadians, recognizing "Moonlight Serenade," "Sunrise Serenade," "The Woodchoppers Ball," "Begin the Beguine," "The 12th Street Rag," "A String of Pearls," "I'm Looking Over a Four-Leaf Clover," "Baby Face" and numerous others.

And I found myself wishing I had lived through the period, attending the concerts and the dance halls, swinging and jitter-bugging.

But I hadn't done so, only having seen the scenes from the movies of the period. Still, I had been through the dances and concerts of the '50s and '60s, doing the stroll, the twist, the jerk, the monkey, the frug, the mashed potatoes and on into the disco and new wave periods. And I have all those memories.

And while I listened to and bought albums by the Monkees, the Mamas and the Papas, the Grassroots, the Police, Michael Jackson, Sade, Madonna and numerous others, I found myself also buying collections of hits by the Mills Brothers, the Ink Spots and others. And now I'm looking for albums by the big bands themselves.

Good music is good music, whether it's current or 50 years old. Watching the Grammy Awards show earlier this year, I was really impressed by Leonard Bernstein, receiving a lifetime achievement award for his classical recordings and contributions to such musicals as West Side Story.

Acknowledging the award, he went on to say he's looking forward to the day when music is accepted as just music, without having to break it down into exclusive categories like classical, rock and country-western. Then, this probably most well-known classical conductor and composer today, he said he had said enough, bring on the soulful, rocking, sexy Tina Turner!

To younger people today, I would say, "Hey, listen to the music your parents and your grandparents grew up with. You'll probably be surprised to learn how much of it can be really good stuff, even without guitars and pounding drum beats and screaming vocals."

And to you parents and grandparents, I say, "Hey, listen to the music of today. Take time to hear it, learn to listen to it. Some of it is pretty good, even by your standards."

All it takes is a willingness to listen, to adjust expectations, to grow beyond the narrow realms of music that you accept as "the best" just because it is the music of your youth.

Music should be a language for all ages.

Perot tale on TV

DALLAS (AP) — Next month, an actor will play the part of a famous Texas billionaire for a television mini-series on just one of the Texan's many famous exploits.

Although no names for the leading role have been announced, H. Ross Perot will be portrayed in a five-hour mini-series based on the book, "On Wings of Eagles."

Filming will begin Oct. 10, according to Perot and NBC.

The project is based on the best-selling book by Ken Follett about Perot and the late Col. Bull Simon's rescue of Electronic Data Systems Corp. employees from an Iranian jail in 1978.

The story was to be a motion picture, but will instead be a two-part television program on NBC next spring, a network spokesman said.

Perot is the billionaire founder and chairman of Dallas-based EDS. He has been a consultant on the program.

But publicity surrounding the conservative businessman had boosted him to national prominence long before any television show.

Low-risk inmates released from cells

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — About a fourth of the 17,000 Texas prison inmates confined in a massive lockdown were allowed to leave their cells two days after officials began the emergency effort to quell a war among rival gangs.

The other 12,500 inmates will remain locked in their cells indefinitely, said Charles Brown, spokesman for the Texas Department of Corrections, the nation's second largest prison system.

"The situation is still very tense and until we feel the climate is conducive, they won't be let out," Brown said.

Some 4,500 minimum-security convicts were released Wednesday to help with various chores at the 13 units affected by the lockdown, Brown said.

"There are some things — like providing food and laundry — that have to be done to keep the place running," he said.

Prison Director O. Lane McCotter ordered the lockdown, the second in recent weeks, after four prisoners were stabbed to death within a 24-hour period.

Since the lockdown began Monday, guards have confiscated 85 weapons, mostly shanks made by inmates, Brown said.

He said there had been no incidents of violence since Monday. "It's been pretty quiet," Brown said. "We hope it stays that way."

Some death row inmates housed at the Ellis Unit, one of the 13 facilities affected by the lockdown, complained Wednesday that they are denied showers, recreation periods, access to legal materials and are only fed six sandwiches a day.

"People on death row had nothing to do with those killings," said Troy Kunkle, 19, who was sentenced to death for the 1984 slaying of a Corpus Christi man during a robbery attempt. "We know we're not entitled to ice cream and cookies, but we have a right to stamps, showers and drinks with our food."

Some previous lockdowns lasted for a couple of weeks before the security precautions were eased.

But prison officials have labeled the entire system, which includes some 38,000 inmates housed at 27 separate units, as very tense.

Most of the recent violence has been attributed to a recruiting war between two Hispanic gangs known as the Texas Syndicate and the Texas Mafia.

"Part of the initiation rite is that you beat someone or stab someone," Guthrie said.

Officials estimated about 800 inmates are participants in gangs but said the number was very conservative.

"It's the ones we don't know about that scare the hell out of me," said McCotter. "We've got to put a stop to this now. And I'll lock down every unit if I have to."

"I'm not going to let them (gangs) dictate how this unit operates," said Darrington Unit Warden Michael Moore.

Eight slayings, recorded in eight days, brought the number of homicides this year in the state prison system to 26, one more than the record set in 1984.

Three inmates were stabbed to death Sunday night at Darrington, south of Houston, in an attack that lasted no more than 45 seconds.

State launches two child support programs

AUSTIN (AP) — Two new programs to help speed up child support collections are being started, and state officials say they hope the time for processing payments can be cut from two weeks to a few days.

"The reason that it matters a great deal is that who you are dealing with here are children. When that money doesn't come, the child is the one that suffers," said state Treasurer Ann Richards.

Ms. Richards and Attorney General Jim Mattox said Wednesday that one program will be directed at non-custodial parents living in Texas and the second at those who live outside the state. Both will use modern banking processes to reduce delay, they said.

The Rapid Deposit Lockbox Program will utilize a central banking location in Austin rather than local child support offices for payments the state supervises from some 16,000 non-custodial parents, Mattox said.

The parents will be issued coupon payment books similar to those used for auto loan payments. They will mail a coupon and their check to the lockbox, from which collections will be made hourly, Mattox said.

Using computers, the bank and the attorney general's office will speed processing of the payment, and the comptroller's office will quickly issue the check, Mattox said.

"We think it will be a major improvement," Mattox said. "We would hope to see some dramatic increases in that area."

The second program, FAST, is the Family Assistance Speed Transfers program. It will use automated banking services, similar to bank cards now in use nationwide, to rush child support payments to children from parents in other states.

Ten other states have agreed to join Texas in the program, Mattox said.

Legislator says

Farm credit system in jeopardy

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A state legislator says midwest agriculture credit problems are costing Texas farmers money through high interest rates that may ultimately spell the demise of the state farm credit system.

"What's happening right now is that the farm credit system in Texas is overcharging its customers, taking the additional money and putting it into reserve to pump into the farm system in the Midwest," Rep. Steve Carriker, D-Roby said on Wednesday.

"The net effect is that it's costing Texas farmers a lot of money," he said.

Carriker participated in the first meeting Wednesday in Austin of a group assembled by Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower to study Texas farm credit problems.

Carriker, a farmer, is the only state legislator in the group.

Texas Congressman Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said earlier that the federal government may have to loan the federal Farm Credit Administration money to keep it afloat.

Last week, credit administration officials said economic conditions in U.S. agriculture have slumped so badly that the $74 billion farm-credit system, the nation's largest farm lender, can no longer absorb its losses and will seek outside help.

Farm Credit directors said the system may need a bailout within the next two years.

De la Garza said Congress would not let the credit administration go under.

"We're not going to let that happen," he said.

Man spots child floating in swimming pool

AUSTIN (AP) — The City Council today will honor two men who saved a child from drowning in the swimming pool of an apartment complex.

The two worked to revive Jonathan Mayberry until emergency medical personnel and Austin firefighters arrived at the northside complex on Aug. 28.

The child, almost 2, was taken to Brackenridge Hospital, where he was treated until he recovered a few days later.

Steve Zimmerman said habit led him to walk onto the balcony of his second-floor apartment the day he spotted the child floating in the bottom of the swimming pool.

"I used to work as the maintenance man, and one of my jobs was taking care of the pool," Zimmerman said on Wednesday.

"It was just force of habit."

Zimmerman and Czap will receive citations from city councilmen. Zimmerman, who performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation at the scene.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

What we're really telling the world

And so the United States is going to impose economic sanctions against South Africa after all.

President Reagan, who has previously opposed such action as harmful, has yielded to political pressure and imposed a limited set of sanctions by executive order. Politicians in both parties say his actions are not strong enough and they clamor for more.

Most of them agree that sanctions are unlikely to cause the South African government to abandon its apartheid policies. Even Jesse Jackson admits sanctions are likely to hurt black South Africans, but he magnanimously volunteers them to "suffer some pain now" so they can "enjoy pleasure" later.

Even though many of these uncompromising advocates of economic punishment for South Africa admit sanctions won't have much effect and will probably hurt the blacks they seek to help, they say the United States must send a message to the world that it won't do business with a nation that denies complete freedom to some citizens because of their race.

But what kind of message do the sanctions announced by President Reagan this week really send to the world? And what kind of message will be sent if the advocates of extreme sanctions have their way?

The message, it seems to us, is that the freedom we so fervently champion for South Africans does not exist in the United States of America.

In announcing his sanctions, President Reagan told the world that banks in the United States are not free to make loans to whomever they choose.

His sanctions reveal that computer manufacturers in the United States do not have the right to sell their merchandise to persons not favored by our government.

He has told the world that in the United States the government has the power to dictate to citizens what kind of gold coins they can purchase.

And if the extremists in Congress get their way on disinvestment, we will tell the world that our citizens are not free to invest their money where they choose.

In short, we are telling the world that in the United States individual freedom exists only at the whim of government. We are telling all people who hope for a world where human freedom reigns supreme that they will have to look somewhere other than the United States of America.

A Christian gentleman

Let me adjourn, if I may, the tribulations of South Africa and the international economy. I prefer to write of one man: dead, I grieve to say, because, despite having lived out his three score and seven, he was such a man as one hates very much to lose.

I saw his name on the obituary page. I blinked. The headline said: "Christian Ramsey." No, no, I thought, "Christian NORMAN Ramsey." "Norman" is what everybody called him; even those of us young enough to be his children.

Then I looked again. Yes, yes - what a positively divine oversight on the headline writer's part, "Christian Ramsey," because who better exemplified the ideals, the strength, of Christian devotion than this, my late friend?

A man whom in sounder times one wished to praise was said to be a Christian gentleman: a sublime compliment, boxing the whole compass of virtues. The late Christian Norman Ramsey was every inch the Christian gentleman, and on the day of his funeral I am minded to speak a parting word concerning him.

The 1980s, being uncomfortable with Christianity and gentlemanliness alike are not precisely knee-deep in men like Norman. Who, when they can be found at all, tend, like Norman, to have silver hair and a certain weight of years.

Norman's qualities will come as a surprise to most of the community, who will have had no idea of his existence. He was no collector of civic credentials; he lacked the genius for self-advertisement. Nor have I ever known a man better loved. This stood to reason: He loved others better than himself.

Norman had three passions - his wife Saint

Julienne and his three sons; the Episcopal Church; and the United States of America. I could appreciate this, remembering the passion of my late father - a man of Norman's generation - to have been the very same: family, church, country.

In our own time, is that hierarchy of values peculiar to the Depression-World War II generation? Is today's No. 1 passion self-gratification, or does it merely seem that way? Because manifestly it does seem that way.

Norman was Georgia-born - from the mighty metropolis of Louisville. He had a smile as wide as an acre of cotton, an accent as lazy as the Savannah River. Norman, when he would call my office to offer thoughts, suggestions, or comments, always titillated the secretaries. "Is Mistuh Muihhhhh-kusson theah?" they would drawl, in sly imitation.

Norman became a banker back when most Americans mistrusted bankers, for the somewhat understandable reason that banks all over the country were failing and depositors were losing their money. I wasn't there, of course, but I suspect that Norman, with his massive integrity, made bankers look good.

He made Episcopalians look good: That much I know. Norman did more than just go to church and receive the sacrament. He sought to mold his life according to Christian precepts. He loved his neighbor as himself and was the author of uncounted acts of Christian love and generosity.

A bitter feud over prayer books rends our church - to use a modernized book or go on using the traditional one. It didn't matter to Norman. A prayer book was about prayer. Norman just wanted to pray. Let the Church fix the language: He'd pray it as it lay.

I was slightly startled to learn that this gentle and lovable man was a decorated combat officer of World War II - a recipient of the Silver Star and the Purple Heart.

On the other hand, why the surprise? Because, remember Norman's third passion - country. You owed your country love and honor and even life: Such was the creed of Norman's generation. You didn't debate just war vs. unjust war. No, you went uncomplainingly and did your duty.

As it happened, Norman's sense of duty called forth invaluable exertions. Made military governor of Messina, Sicily, in August 1943, he saved the captured, devastated city from starvation and looters and commenced its rebuilding. A grateful city named a street for him - the Via Norman Ramsey. The post-fascist Italian government awarded him its highest military medal, the Pope Pius XII accorded him a special private audience.

And now he, Christian Norman, is dead, at age 77. And I am jiggered if I know how he - for that matter his generation - is to be replaced. Or, rather, yes, I do know, because it is so theoretically simple. Anyone can do it.

Near the bottom of your hierarchy of values, put self: all the inward preoccupations with what is today called Personal Fulfillment. At the very top, put family, religion, country - the externals that alone call forth the best in every created being. That is how to become a citizen and patriot, a Christian gentleman of the old school - a Christian Norman Ramsey, if you please.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Sept. 12, the 255th day of 1985. There are 110 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

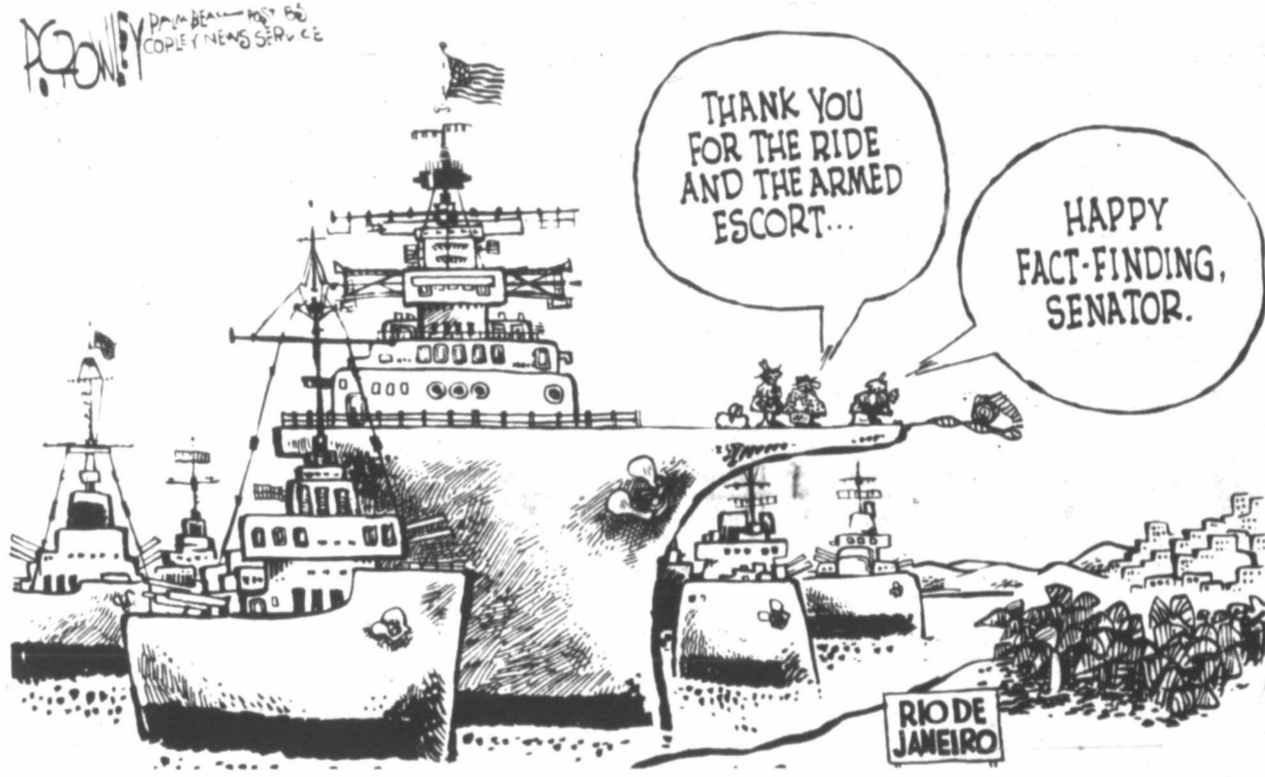

On Sept. 12, 1609, English explorer Henry Hudson sailed into the river that now bears his name.

On this date:

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford insisted in St. Louis he would continue to greet crowds, saying he would not be held hostage by the possibility of attempts on his life.

Five years ago: Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini issued four conditions for the release of the American hostages that did not include a previous demand for an apology from the U.S.

One year ago: The House ethics committee voted unanimously to investigate whether Democratic vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro had, as a member of Congress, violated financial disclosure requirements.

They get under your skin

(This is the fifth in a series of columns from Russia, where our columnist is visiting as part of an American Friendship Force.)

MOSCOW - I've been in the Soviet Union for just over a week, but I've already had my feelings hurt on a number of occasions. If you are an American traveling in this part of the world and you possess even the slightest amount of patriotic feeling for your country, getting your feathers ruffled is inevitable.

I can't read what they call newspapers in the Soviet Union because I can't make any sense out of Russian writing. The entire city of Moscow looks like a first-grader got loose with a set of crayons and went on a scribbling binge.

But I can see the cartoons and illustrations, and there is Reagan with his bombs, Uncle Sam with blood dripping from his hands, and all sorts of other illustrations portraying my country as a merchant of death and threat to world peace.

I also can listen to English-speaking Radio Moscow on my shortwave radio. You name it, and Radio Moscow blames it on us. Reagan is a warmonger, the United States ignored Soviet test ban initiatives, Reagan supports bloodthirsty factions in Central America, Reagan's mama wears combat boots. Radio Moscow even found a way to put partial blame on our president for the 747 crash in Japan.

I keep wondering where this anti-American campaign is going to end. Baseball is decadent and hot dogs and apple pie are an imperialist trick.

What has made me the angriest, however, are meetings with Soviet journalists and other government officials that have been arranged for the 120-member Friendship Force delegation from the United States with which I am traveling.

We went to a so-called "house of friendship" in Moscow, where Vladimir Proser - a slick-as-a-greased-eel Soviet journalist who has been on ABC's "Nightline" a few times and who speaks much better English than I do - gave us the entire treatment.

We are solely responsible for unrest in the world, according to Mr. Proser. All the Soviet Union wants is peace and to be left alone. Americans are inhumane to one another and we import slaves. I thought he would try to convince us pigs could fly.

At a meeting with two charming fellows from Radio Moscow, we were told Americans have no interest in culture, there is no censorship whatsoever in the Soviet Union, the Soviet Union is terribly misunderstood on the Afghanistan matter, and how could the Russian fighter pilot know he was shooting down the Korean 747 with innocent passengers abroad? It was dark that night.

Next time you get angry at your newspaper or criticize your government, remember this conversation I had with a Soviet journalist from Pravda.

"Are you free to criticize the Soviet government in your newspaper?" I asked.

"Of course."

"Do you do that?"

"No."

"Why?"

"Because there's nothing to criticize about my government."

Soviet officials are exasperating. They will ignore tough questions and when it comes to fancy verbal footwork, these people are world class.

I will be honest. I've wanted to punch out a few of these jokers. I didn't for two reasons. One, I'm a bit on the puny side, and I haven't tried to cream anybody since the fifth grade.

And even if I happened to land a blow for freedom, the Soviets would just say, "See, we told you how aggressive these Americans are."

But if I ever come back over here, I might ask Hulk Hogan, the wrestler, to come with me.

Sic 'em, Hulk Baby.

Does trade cause industry problems?

By Don Graff

Ronald Reagan rates very high at the moment in Doreen Brown's book.

The reason is shoes. The president, as you may have heard, has rejected a request by the U.S. shoe industry to curb foreign imports that in the past few years have captured the greater part - more than 70 percent - of the home market.

He did so for the right reasons, saying most of the right things, in the opinion of Ms. Brown, who is president of Consumers for World Trade, a Washington-based lobby opposed to trade restrictions.

The proposed curbs would have set quotas on imports of all but the lowest-priced footwear. Whatever the specific mechanism, the president said, it was still protectionism which "does more harm than good to those it is designed to help."

He estimated the probable cost of quotas in higher prices to American consumers at $3 billion a year, with those with lowest incomes hit hardest, and the damage to other U.S. industries, as a result of retaliation against American exports, at another $2.1 billion.

"As president," he said, "it is my responsibility to take into account not only the effect of quotas on the shoe industry, but also their broader impact on the overall economy."

There was more along the same line, every word of which could probably have been written for him by Consumers for World Trade, which sees any trade restriction as a hidden tax on consumers and ultimately most damaging to the economy that seeks their shelter.

There is no question, even Doreen Brown admits, that many American industries are in a bad way. In part, especially with older, labor-intensive industries such as footwear, this must be accepted as inevitable when an industrial economy matures. But that does not mean, she says, that we must or should allow all our basic industrial capabilities to go down the drain and become primarily a service economy.

It does mean we should focus our efforts in those industrial areas where our potential is greatest and we can compete most effectively without the prop of protectionism.

"I think," Ms. Brown says, "that eventually we will come to our senses and decide that there is something besides foreigners that is making trouble for us. It's not just the Japanese. They are taking advantage of the fact that there is something very wrong with our industrial sector, but they are not the cause of the damage."

Our worst problem may be, she suggests, that we prefer not to address the real causes of industrial problems because it is so much easier to put the blame on trade.

Welcome as it is, she doesn't think the president's refusal to blame trade for what's wrong with shoes is going to do much by itself to change that attitude. The tide of protectionist sentiment is running too strongly, especially in Congress.

"STOP, STUDENT LOAN DEFAULTER, IN THE NAME OF THE IRS!"

Rockport is training ground for aspiring young actors

By KAREN BRANDON
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

ROCKPORT, Texas (AP) — "In show business," Orson Welles once said, "you're a fruit picker. You go where the work is."

You may even go to the middle of Old Downtown in Rockport, a place that, from the hubs of the business in Los Angeles and New York City, seems very near the edge of the earth. But there is fruit to be picked from Rockport, and the season is 10 months long, guaranteed.

You go there to become of the the Alpha-Omega Players, the migrant actors who find work with Drexel Riley and his company, the Repertory Theater of America.

Rockport is the training ground. After six weeks of rehearsal, you are in one of the three troupes that cover both coasts and much of the ground in between. Performances may be in sports arenas, airplane hangars, cathedrals, clubs, biology labs or student lunge. (Once, a troupe performed in a church graveyard.)

You go around the country in a van that holds sets, costumes, you and your stuff, three other actors and their stuff. For 10 months. For 150 shows. For 50,000 miles. For 100 bucks a week. But mostly, for The Experience.

For this, 24-year-old Devon Dabbs took a leave of absence from her job at a San Antonio radio station and found a new home for her dog. "All my non-acting friends ask 'How can you just leave everything for 10 months?' Other actors say, 'Gee, you're getting paid,'" she said.

Riley, the owner and director of the company, used to tour himself. He says the job is as demanding as marriage. "It's the hardest thing that anyone can do because it's so constant. Everything is heightened — the good times are great times, and when it's bad, it's horrible," he says. "Acting is a small part of what you do every day. But one of the things you find out here is 'Do I want to make this a career?'"

What are you getting into? Ask a veteran, like 24-year-old Jeff Whitman, who is one of the four actors returning this summer to prepare for a second season on the tour. Near the end of last year's tour, he talked with a waiter who said, "Hey man, you make people laugh for two hours. Your reward is people right here laughing and having a good time." Whitman said, "It made me feel really good to hear something like that."

His last-minute decision to tour again broke up his engagement to his college girlfriend, he says. But he wanted another challenge. "I had never presented myself with that kind of challenge before," he said. "It became a thing for me that I could see something through to the end."

Not everyone is able to see it through. Last year, the Repertory theater of America lost four of its 12 actors. But over 19 years, about 200 actors have seen the tour through a total of nearly 2 million miles. One of the former members gave Whitman advice that he still remembers: "Everybody quits. You quit every day. There are some times when you quit four or five times a day, but you go on."

Whitman heard that from Paul R. Pierce, an actor who became Riley's assistant and now is managing director of the Harbor Playhouse, Corpus Christi's community theater.

"The road is crucible where the greatest and most positive aspects and the darkest, vilest aspects of your personality come out," he said, remembering his 2 1/2 seasons on tour. "It's all there for you and all your company members to see."

"I think you have to be really chomping at the bit to perform to do this. You have to want to find out everything you can about the business."

You find out about all of it because you do all of it. Members of the troupe are their own technicians for lights, make-up, props staging and sound. Even Riley answers the telephone and takes bookings while auditioning actors. "This is a living illustration of how all of us have to wear many different hats," he says.

Pierce said, "A kind of 'Mission Impossible' mentality develops in the unit, where everyone has specialties. It makes the unit feel sort of invincible in a way."

But you come to Rockport to wear the acting hat. Each troupe does three plays, usually comedies like this year's line-up: "Any Wednesday," "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" and "Twice Around the Park". Diana Kirk, a 25-year-old from Gainesville, Ga., is touring for the second year and says she is actually considering a third tour to do "Educating Rita" and "Same Time, Next Year," two plays that will be on next year's slate.

"Usually when you start out in professional theater, you're a crowd person, a spare character. You're lucky if you have a line," she said. "In these shows, you're guaranteed leads."

For John Clemo, 23, acting was the reason he left Michigan, turned down a scholarship to a master's program in theater, and risked alienating his parents. Clemo's father is an engineer, his mother, a computer analyst. "I thought at first I took the job to spite them," he said. "But then I decided, it's what I really want to do. I used a lot of emotional blackmail: 'If you love me, you'll understand.'"

Riley understands it all. Now 52, he was in his early 30s when he went to Hollywood to "be discovered." It didn't work out the way he planned. Riley, who at one time studied at a seminary and planned to become a Presbyterian minister, got a part in a company that pioneered bringing theater into the church. When the company folded, Riley took the bookings and started his own operation. He and his wife, Jackie, then brought the operation to the Texas coasts, near his hometown of Portland.

He could be considered the troupes' minister. He travels to several theater conferences each year to recruit his actors and once he gets them to Rockport he gives them quality attention. They get soft-spoken, sincere comments after each rehearsal. He may whisper further directions while giving a reassuring pat on the back. The actors carry books filled with notes from his comments, such as, "You know, I discovered many years ago, if you're dealing with absurdities, the more seriously you play it, the funnier it is."

Riley, who saw the last troupe begin its tour recently, will begin giving each company technical and motivational advice over the telephone several times a week.

If you are an actor, this is the stuff you thrive on. Kevin Murray, a 24-year-old theater graduate of Southeastern Oklahoma State University, said, "I want to see if I have the discipline to do theater night after night after night after night."

"I've done other jobs, but I was miserable. It's like a sickness. There's nothing you can do about it. Nothing else will make you happy, but theater."

Parents vent anger over AIDS victim being in school

SWANSEA, Mass. (AP) — Hundreds of worried parents were told "the risk is zero" that their children would be infected by an AIDS-stricken eighth-grader, but many remained afraid of the deadly disease and angry at school officials.

Meanwhile, in New York City a boycott entered its third day today as parents keep students out of school in two districts, protesting the admission of a juvenile AIDS victim.

"It's a deadly disease and I want to find out if they're going to guarantee my kid's safety," Len Cabral, whose son attends Joseph Case Junior High School, said during the meeting here Wednesday night. "I want to be sure my kid isn't going to get it or that kid isn't coming to school."

"You ain't going to have a kid going around with a match and a gallon of gas. That's what this looks like to me. Your kids don't live with this, they die with it," Cabral added to the applause of the crowd.

State health officials and school officials, however, sought to dispel the fears of parents and their anger over the decision to allow the eighth-grader to attend school unannounced since Aug. 27. The youth, who has not been identified, contracted AIDS while being treated for hemophilia.

"I still believe that if people are informed, most of the time they'll do the right thing," said Superintendent John E. McCarthy. "And in this case it's to keep their children in school and support the continuance of this student in a school setting."

Dr. George F. Grady, assistant commissioner of the state Department of Public Health, repeatedly assured the parents that "the risk is zero" that their children would catch AIDS through contact with the boy.

But several parents accused him of sidestepping when he declined to guarantee their children would not be stricken with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which affects about 12,000 Americans, mostly homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

Despite calls from parents and teachers, education and health officials have refused to bar the student from the 625-pupil school.

Massachusetts has adopted a policy allowing children with AIDS to remain in school if they do not have open sores or behavior traits that increase chances of transmission. Such traits include biting and inability to control bowels.

Meanwhile, in the two New York City districts, attendance increased to more than 80 percent on Wednesday, officials said. On Tuesday, 77 percent attended classes while 74 percent were in school Monday, the first day of classes.

The normal citywide attendance average is 89 percent.

"There's a return of children on a daily basis," said Schools Chancellor Nathan Quinones.

For fanciers of statistics, a forthcoming feast

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Anyone with an appetite for economic statistics will be served a banquet on Friday.

Figures are due out that morning on consumer behavior (retail sales and installment credit), industrial production, and inflation (the Producer Price Index).

Three, count 'em, three, government agencies will contribute to the data flow — the Commerce Department, the Labor Department and the Federal Reserve Board. For good measure, auto manufacturers will join in with their reports on early-September car sales.

Given this cornucopia of information, will all the recent questions about where the economy is headed be answered? Almost certainly not.

The optimists will declare that the economy is still forging ahead, with modest but steady growth and low inflation. The pessimists will assert that the "growth recession" that began more than a year ago is still with us, and quite possibly getting worse.

To the public, what do all these numbers mean? In effect, they provide a status report on an entire ocean, without giving much information about the particular waters any individual is trying to navigate.

The figures are subject to possible human error in the collection and compiling of raw data. They are often revised after the initial report has been made, when more of that data is available.

For the people who make their living interpreting them, the statistics are wonderfully pliable, capable of being worked into a shape that conforms to almost any point of view.

Imperfect as they may be, the economic statistics have a large following, apparently on Main Street as well as Wall Street. They may not always match an individual's first-hand experience, but they are important because they influence financial decisions large and small, government policies of many kinds, and the politics of today and the future.

On balance, advance estimates of the numbers coming out Friday are generally upbeat. Analysts at leading investment firms say retail sales, which declined in May and June and increased modestly in July, should show another gain in August — of as much as 1 percent, if Merrill Lynch economists are on the mark.

Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. says industrial production probably rose about 0.2 percent last month, maintaining the pace it has set since last spring.

The Producer Price Index, which is followed by many observers as a rough leading indicator of consumer prices, is expected to present no cause for concern about a resurgence of inflation. Smith Barney figures it will increase only slightly; Merrill Lynch says it may well be "flat."

Assuming there are no big surprises in the reports, they will be good enough to keep hopes alive that economic growth is reviving — but not so strong as to confirm those hopes, and silence the doubters and the worriers.

Mistake in checklist endangered satellite, crew says

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A mistake in a checklist aboard space shuttle Discovery last month led to a jammed thermal shield that threatened to damage an Australian satellite, members of an astronaut crew said Wednesday at a news conference.

Joe Engle, commander of the Discovery flight that landed Sept. 3 after a spectacular spacewalk rescue of a disabled satellite, said that hurried preparation for the salvage mission led to an error in the sequence of on-board crew instructions and endangered another satellite. The error caused a thermal shield to be jammed against a camera on the shuttle's robot arm and endangered an Australian satellite called Aussat.

Astronaut Mike Lounge, who was responsible for operating Discovery's robot arm, said the flawed checklist, or mission script, failed to call for the robot arm to be moved before the thermal shield was operated.

Normally, he said, the arm is rolled out of the way before the shield is commanded to move. "This trap was in our ... checklist all along and we had just never done a high fidelity simulation of that part of the mission," said Lounge. "The trap was that we did the sunshield operation first and then rolled the arm out and didn't think of the mechanical interference problem."

Engle said Lounge was not at fault.

"He was following procedures that we had on board," said Engle. "I think we were all victims of the short fuse that we had to prepare for this whole mission. The thoroughness that you normally have for a mission, we just didn't have that luxury." Preparation for the mission was hurried because only four months before launch a complex salvage operation for the disabled Syncom 3 satellite was added to the flight plan.

Engle credited Lounge with saving the Aussat by using the robot arm to force open the jammed shield, enabling the satellite to be launched. If it hadn't been launched, engineers believed it would have been damaged by the deep cold of space.

"Mike was able to recover a situation that looked pretty grim for a while," said the mission commander.

Aussat was one of three satellites launched by Discovery during a seven-day mission that was highlighted by the successful repair of the $85 million Syncom 3.

Spacewalkers Bill Fisher and James van Hoften captured and held the 7½-ton Syncom 3 by hand, and then installed electronic instruments and wiring that permitted the satellite to be commanded from the ground.

Their work restored life to a satellite that never turned itself on after being launched by another shuttle crew last April. The satellite is now being prepared for a rocket firing on Oct. 29 that will send it to its working station 22,300 miles above the Earth.

Both Fisher and van Hoften said moving the satellite by hand was more taxing than expected.

"It's a very massive thing," said van Hoften. "When you push on it, you have to stop it somehow. It's not the easiest thing to do. But at no time were we in any danger."

"Just trying to hold it still was more dynamic than I expected," said Fisher.

Researchers make big step toward common cold cure

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's not a cure for the common cold, but it could be the biggest step yet in that direction, as well as a ray of hope to finding cures for other more deadly diseases, researchers say. Scientists said Wednesday they had mapped the three-dimensional makeup of a microscopic cold-causing virus — the first time any human virus has been completely detailed — including tiny points of vulnerability where future vaccines or other drugs might be aimed. The composite image was produced from data fed into a "supercomputer."

Since viral agents are to blame for many human ailments, including the deadly as well as the annoying, the new findings could be significant in fights against diseases ranging from stuffy noses to multiple sclerosis to leukemia and even perhaps the mysterious AIDS virus, said the lead researcher, Purdue University Professor Michael Rossmann.

He told a roomful of reporters that many viruses can cause colds, meaning there may never be a one-shot, sneeze and sniffles-preventing vaccine.

However, he said that in light of his group's findings, "it may be possible to find a cure for the cold that may not be along the lines of a classic vaccine" — a drug, for example, that, instead of attacking the virus itself, would lure it away from areas where it might otherwise attach to healthy cells.

Seeing the detailed makeup of cold viruses — down to three hundred-millionths of a centimeter — makes chances of developing effective anti-viral drugs "much more possible, absolutely," he said.

Still, Rossmann emphasized that it would be up to others to develop drug-counter applications for his findings, which resulted from experiments done in collaboration with a Wisconsin group headed by Roland Rueckert and which depended heavily on high-technology machinery at Purdue and Cornell universities.

As for its broader significance, the work adds up to "a good basic piece of information," William Allen, a virology program officer with the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said in an interview following the news conference.

Allen said Rossmann and Dr. Robert Gallo of the National Cancer Institute were setting up another experiment aimed at similar three-dimensional charting of leukemia-linked viruses. And he said the virus that apparently causes the deadly acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS, could eventually be part of that project, though success in growing the necessary AIDS crystals "is very speculative."

Rossmann said the virus his group mapped, known as HRV-14, is a 20-sided, soccer-ball-shaped structure with a protein shell surrounding a core of the genetic material ribonucleic acid.

The National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health helped pay for the experiments, which relied on such modern technology as Purdue's supercomputer and the Cornell University High Energy Synchrotron Source.

Former governor is in shirt ad

AUSTIN (AP) — Former governor and one-time presidential candidate John Connally is showing up in advertisements again — not for public office but for shirts and ties.

Wearing an eye patch and a stern look, Connally was featured in a Hathaway shirt-and-tie ad in a men's fashion supplement to the New York Times Magazine last Sunday.

"Every man has his own management style," the ad says. "Take John Connally. Dynamic, determined, a national presence in law, government and business."

Connally, who posed with hands determinedly on hips, is the latest celebrity to lend his baron-of-the-boardroom appeal to Hathaway's two-year-old ad campaign.

Other ads have featured hotelier Bill Marriott, cable TV magnate Ted Turner, "Megatrends" author John Naisbitt, wine aficionado Michael Mondavi and jacuzzi inventor Roy Jacuzzi.

The ad featuring Connally will also appear in the December issue of Fortune.

"The campaign is based not only on celebrity, but people whose face and/or name is widely recognized," said Pete Penizotto, vice president of Chester Gore-Eric Mower and Associates, the New York advertising agency representing Hathaway.

But what is the deal with that black patch perched roguishly over Connally's right eye?

Penizotto told the Austin American-Statesman that the patch has "long been identified with Hathaway." The patch was the brainchild of advertising innovator David Ogilvy, who dreamed it up for a Hathaway ad in the early 1950s.

"John Connally, the man in the Hathaway shirt," proclaims the headline of the ad.

The advertisement was shot last October in the New York studio of fashion photographer Gideon Lewin. Connally was "a very, very good model," Penizotto said. "Very cordial."

Hairstyle and make-up artists did not labor over the famous Connally face because "he looked fine," Penizotto added.

"Part of the campaign is we're dealing with real people here." In advertising talk, that means nobody fluffed or sprayed Connally's hair or slyly added a touch of rouge or mascara.

Penizotto would not say how much Connally was paid. But he did say the former governor and 1980 Republican presidential candidate kept the red-striped shirt and tie he wore in the ad.

"Yes," said Penizotto. "Part of his compensation is in product, and we would certainly hope that he's a constant wearer of Hathaway shirts and ties."

Judge disallows claims to union

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge has nullified almost $650 million in union claims against Continental Airlines.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge T. Glover Roberts issued the ruling Tuesday as the first in a series of rulings on union claims.

The Houston-based carrier said Wednesday that the language of the judge's decision indicated he will also deny at least another $1.5 billion in wrongful discharge claims.

In his first ruling, Roberts disallowed about $500 million in claims by the Air Line Pilots Association and the Union of Flight Attendants for damages on behalf of striking employees.

The court also disallowed a separate claim by ALPA for about $144 million in damages under labor protection provisions imposed by the Civil Aeronautics Board at the time of the Continental-Texas International merger in 1982.

"Under well-established principles of federal labor law, striking employees are not entitled to back pay for the period of time they were on strike," Roberts said in his decision.

ALPA spokesman Jerry Baldwin and Linda Downing, spokeswoman for the flight attendants' union, declined to comment on the judge's decision.

Barry P. Simon, Continental vice president and general counsel, applauded the ruling.

"As we have repeatedly said, we believe that the unions' claims lack any support in law, logic or fact and will be denied in court," Simon said.

Simon said the judge also had adopted an expedited schedule for submission of briefs on the remaining claims and as a result "we are confident that Continental's reorganization plan will go forward quickly."

Continental already has filed a brief contesting a claims for wrongful discharge for about $1.5 billion. Another pending motion relates to the International Association of Machinists, which sought $600 million in contract rejection damages.

Two years ago, Continental, on the brink of collapse, shut down, filed for bankruptcy protection, dismissed thousands of employees, voided union contracts, and resumed flight three days later as a low-cost, non-union airline.

East Texas woman follows big game trail

By VALERIE CULP WILKERSON
Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — Deb Saxton of Lufkin holds the record for the second largest Asiatic Water Buffalo ever killed by a woman.

But she did it with a borrowed gun that knocked her down and she certainly doesn't plan to hang out her shingle as an expert.

"I don't want to give anybody the impression that I am a macho, super hunter," she says.

She and her husband, Dr. James Saxton, are big game hunters. The skill and the impressive trophies, though, she credits to her husband. Her involvement began with her accompanying him as a non-hunting companion. She took advantage of several opportunities to kill an animal, and now she, too, is listed as a hunter when they book their hunts.

Her kills include the water buffalo in Australia in 1984; a fallow deer in New Zealand in 1984; a Spanish Red Stag in Spain in 1980; a sable antelope, an impala, and a zebra in Africa in 1975. Last but not least, she names the "good white tail" deer that she has bagged in Texas.

"There's so much I love about it ... shooting animals is way down on the list. It's meeting people and seeing things that you'd never see otherwise," Mrs. Saxton says.

She spoke of making lifelong friendships, of discovering cave paintings in the outback of Australia, of buying damascene articles in Toledo, Spain. Too, their hobby is something that the couple can enjoy together.

She says she enjoys seeing the animals in their natural habitats. "Any kind of a stag is so majestic. They are regal. I'll get a chill watching them sometimes. It warmed my heart to see the kangaroo running across the fields in Australia.

"Just imagine riding in a jeep and you can actually see herds of zebra, impala, sable antelope, and kudu. They'll graze and eat — just like cattle."

She sees the contradiction in an animal lover hunting, but she says, "There are a lot of misconceptions about hunting. Hunting is not just going out and shooting animals. You wouldn't be a hunter if you didn't love wildlife. Hunters are conservationists."

She and her husband are very careful about which animals they take, she says. They may kill an animal from an area where that particular species is overpopulated, or a very old one. They do not seek out the largest young buck, but instead leave him to father future generations.

"Big game hunters will go for the trophy animals and the trophies are the old animals."

"We honestly eat everything we kill," Mrs. Saxton says, though she is not as enthusiastic an eater of wild game as some. "I don't eat everything whole hog, but I taste it."

Not long ago, she cooked a mountain lion that Dr. Saxton had killed. After their youngest son, Josh, 7, had eaten his helping, she said her husband asked him, "Do you feel like you can run faster and climb mountains? You just ate my mountain lion."

"Josh turned green," Mrs. Saxton said, laughing. Josh's report on the mountain lion meat was that it was "solid as bricks."

The Saxtons have two other sons, Jamie, 25, and John, 17.

The trophy room in their home is filled with evidences of their conquests. Two elephant tusks frame the fireplace. A "grand slam" display — the four types of large North American sheep — are mounted over the fireplace. Two hearthside stools are made of elephant feet covered with zebra hide.

Josh puts his toys away into the elephant feet instead of a conventional chest.

Guests rest their feet on zebra hides while sitting on the couch. One chair is made of kudu hide. The banisters beside the steps are intertwined elk antlers. The bear rug is complete with head and bared teeth and all the walls of the high-ceilinged room are covered with mounted heads, most boasting horns.

A Kodiak bear, a grizzly bear and a black bear stand erect in three corners of the trophy room, like wallflowers waiting to be asked to dance at the prom. Three bobcats are caught in action poses and mounted on wood in a group.

It is enough to make you think twice about going for a drink of water in the middle of the night.

Photography opportunities are another big attraction of hunting for Mrs. Saxton. Getting a good shot of an animal with a camera is as much of a thrill as getting a shot at one with a gun, she says.

"Mom," Josh interjects from the carpeted floor, "why don't you just get a gun camera? You get a picture and you also shoot them at the same time."

"I feel very fortunate," she says. "A lot of people aren't outdoorsy. It is in my blood. I love nature. I love the outdoors."

On safari, hunters start early, often while the night chill is still in the air. They usually start out in a jeep and then get out and walk when they get close to where they hope to find the animal. Eventually they will end up on their stomachs.

"You crawl a ways and you slither a ways," Mrs. Saxton says. "They have to get me closer than they would the average Joe."

It is an intense time. The surge of adrenaline is a feeling that she knows well. It starts when the animal is spotted and "it will last until I pull the trigger. A lot of times I'll feel like I could throw up." "But I get the same thrill looking at them through binoculars."

One night, Mrs. Saxton recalls, she got a little closer than that.

Their party had camped out on the ground and were surrounded by lions. They had placed a freshly-killed zebra in front of their blind for bait and planned to sleep there that night so that they would be in position when the lions came to feed at dawn. The blind was built on the ground, was about six feet wide and made of reeds.

But the lions came in the night instead of waiting until dawn.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, in accordance with an order of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice that on August 20, 1985, the Company filed tariffs which propose revisions to the Joint User Tariffs and implementation of Shared Tenant Services Tariffs.

If the tariffs are approved by the Public Utility Commission, the Company will grandfather existing customers to the Joint User Tariffs and totally withdraw the Joint User Tariffs one year after the date of approval of the proposed tariff revisions, with one exception. Even after the one year period, existing single-line customers subscribing to Joint User Tariffs may continue their service under certain conditions.

Also, if the tariffs are approved, the provision of shared tenant services will require partitioned switching equipment.

No new rates are being proposed in the aforementioned tariffs. As a result of the partitioning of switching equipment, some existing customers may require additional PBX trunks. If so, the Company's revenues may increase. The Company is unable, at this time, to estimate the additional revenues, if any, which would result therefrom.

The Commission received these tariffs as Docket 6450 and a prehearing conference will be held at 10:00 A.M., Monday, September 23, 1985, at the Commission's offices at 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, in Austin, Texas.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. Motions to intervene should be filed with the Commission on or before 4:00 P.M., Friday, September 20, 1985. A request to intervene, participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223, or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

Aviso Público

De conformidad con una orden de la Comisión de Servicios Públicos de Texas, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company anuncia el registro de nuevas tarifas, las cuales proponen ciertas modificaciones de las Tarifas para Usuarios Mancomunados (Joint User Tariffs) y la implementación de Tarifas para Servicios Compartidos por Inquilinos (Shared Tenant Services Tariffs).

De aprobar la Comisión tales tarifas, la Compañía mantendrá vigentes los acuerdos con usuarios actuales en lo que respecta a Tarifas para Usuarios Mancomunados, pero discontinuará tales tarifas a partir del primer aniversario de la fecha en que se aprueben las nuevas tarifas. Sin embargo, existe una excepción; aún después de tal aniversario, los clientes con líneas sencillas que actualmente cuentan con el servicio para Usuarios Mancomunados podrán seguir con tal servicio sujeto a ciertas condiciones.

De aprobarse las nuevas tarifas, las disposiciones correspondientes a los Servicios Compartidos por Inquilinos requerirán el uso de conmutadores separados.

Las citadas tarifas no proponen nuevas cuotas. Sin embargo, es posible que debido a la separación de equipos de conmutación, algunos clientes actuales requerirán nuevos troncales PBX. De ser así, los ingresos de la Compañía podrían aumentar. En la actualidad, la Compañía no puede determinar el monto de ingresos adicionales que resultarían de tales tarifas.

La Comisión ha registrado este asunto bajo el Docket 6450. Se llevará a cabo una audiencia preliminar para discutir todo asunto relacionado con el Servicio Compartido por Inquilinos el lunes 23 de septiembre de 1985, a las 10:00 de la mañana, en las oficinas de la Comisión, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, en Austin, Texas.

Toda persona que desee intervenir o participar en el presente proceso debe notificar a la Comisión lo antes posible. Las solicitudes de intervención deberán presentarse ante la Comisión antes del viernes 20 de septiembre de 1985 a las 4:00 de la tarde. Las solicitudes de intervención, participación o información deben dirigirse a: Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Para obtener mayor información debe llamar a Public Utility Commission, Consumer Affairs Division, (512) 458-0223, o (512) 458-0227, o al (512) 458-0221 si requiere teletipo para personas con impedimentos de audición.

Sign-up underway for Girl Scouting

Girl Scout registration is currently underway for all age levels of scouting in Pampa and other neighborhoods in Quivira Council.

Daisy Girl Scouts is the newest level of Girl Scouting for girls, five years of age or in kindergarten. Troops are now being organized for this one-year program. Brownie Girl Scouts is offered to grades 1-3; Junior Girl Scouts, grades 4-6; Cadette Girl Scouts, grades 7-9; and Senior Scouts, grades 9-12.

Activities for all age levels are exciting and varied, reports Jan Chambers of the local Girl Scout office. Coming up soon for Brownies is an all-day activity planned by neighborhoods called "The Best Part is the Fun" with events centered around balloons, she said. For Juniors, a trip to Oklahoma City, "Okie for a Day," is under consideration, she said. Cadette Seniors are to have a "Career Opportunities and Fun" day in Borger in November, she said. And the Atomic Energy Merit Badge Seminar is also available for older Scouts to take in Amarillo, Chambers added. The seminar is scheduled for Saturdays in October, culminating with a trip to Albuquerque and Los Alamos, N.M.

For more information on any of the above events or for help in joining a troop, contact the Girl Scout office at 669-6862, or stop by the office, second floor, City Hall.

Many volunteer positions are also available for those interested in the development of the Girl Scout program. Thorough training is offered at any time for any program level, scout officials say.

CONSTITUTION WEEK has been proclaimed in Pampa by Mayor Sherman Cowan, right, for Sept. 17-23. Maryl Jones, left, chairman of the local observance of Constitution Week, is a member of the Las Pampas chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR). Chapters of the DAR throughout the United States are joining to create a renewed appreciation of the Constitution and the United States. They are also asking that individuals and businesses fly the U.S. flag during the Constitution Week as an outward show of patriotism. (Staff photo by Larry Hollis)

Dear Abby

Overpopulation is problem we can't seem to outgrow

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Too few people are concerned about one of the world's most serious problems: overpopulation. At least 10 years ago, the father of six daughters wrote to ask if there was a foolproof way for him to get a son, and you replied, "Adopt!"

Your one-word response was followed by a wonderful letter about a couple who finally had a son after four daughters. Please run it again. That message needs to be heard again and again.

MAC IN MONTANA

DEAR MAC: I found the letter, and here it is:

Dear Helen and Bill: So you finally had a boy?

The only thing you can be congratulated on is your perseverance.

You can't be congratulated on your morality or unselfishness. Adding three "extra" children to a world already reeling under its population load can't be called either moral or unselfish.

You can't be congratulated on your fertility. After all, any clam, chicken or small furry animal can beat you at that.

You can't be congratulated on your fine family. A fine family is one that sets an example, and your example may kill us all in a few generations.

You can't even be congratulated on being able to afford five children, because you're not paying for them. Oh, you provide their food and clothing and shelter, but the rest of the world pays for their roads, schools, hospitals, air, water ...

You can't be congratulated on being patriotic citizens, for if anything destroys the United States it will be our "growth-mania" spiral through which this country even now gulps over 50 percent of the world's resources.

You can't be congratulated for carrying on the family name. Family names mean little unless people mean much, and your kind of growth rate guarantees that people mean less and less. Unless, of course, three of those children are adopted?

In that case, congratulations.

Rick and Sue

***

DEAR ABBY: I use the bus to get around town. Often a person will come along and sit beside me.

I am by nature a very friendly person, and I enjoy visiting with people. It makes the time pass, and I have met a lot of nice people on buses.

I usually begin the conversation by asking, "How far are you going?" Abby, you would not believe how many people say, "It's none of your business!" This hurts my feelings.

I never thought I was out of line to strike up a friendly conversation with a stranger on the bus. Why are people so rude?

OFTEN HURT

DEAR HURT: Some people don't want to talk to strangers on a bus. To ask "How far are you going?" may be construed as an invasion of privacy. If you feel inclined to strike up a conversation with a stranger, open with a comment on the weather. And if it evokes a chilly response, cool it.

Strong silhouette stars as suits stand out

By Florence De Santis

The recent fall Paris couture showings confirmed a trend that's been building for some time. Strong silhouettes again form the basis of design, and details are dramatic but sparingly used. There's a classic effect as the gimmicks of recent years are pared away.

For example, suits are back, and American collections feature them.

PLAID AND FLIP, a softly lean jacket with velvet collar and a long skirt with godet flare at the bottom, by Caren Pfleger of West Germany.

Silhouettes divide between the fitted jacket with short, slim skirt and the long jacket cut loose and broad-shouldered to hang straight. Both trends can be seen in the Anne Klein collection by Louis Dell'Olio. A marigold wool jacket, at hipbone length, tops a black suede short wrap skirt and high-neck white silk shirt. For a long look in a lean charcoal wool flannel skirt, he cuts a matching knee-length cardigan jacket. It is worn over a cowed white silk faille tunic.

Michael Kore does the bolero jacket in black wool flannel. It goes over a high-waisted slim skirt in black and violet tweed and a notched-lapel violet taffeta shirt. Gloria Sachs squares the bolero look in a wide-shouldered wool crepe jacket worn with a black pleated skirt and a bow-neck black silk jacquard blouse.

The anchor of both short and long jacket is the wide top, sometimes attained by cut alone, sometimes by padded shaping. Calvin Klein likes man-tailoring, with sharply defined shoulder construction melding smoothly into sleeve tops. Wide notched lapels are sometimes accented with welt seaming, and fitted waistlines may be closed with low-placed double-breasted buttons. Klein dramatizes his bold silhouettes with rich textures, in blue wool melton, brown velvet or paisley silk.

Fabric assumes new importance when silhouettes are simpler. An unmatched skirt and jacket is no longer considered sportswear, but as one kind of dramatic suit. Von Aesch's super-sleek suits come in such combinations as a long, straight, cardigan jacket in sections of ivory and gray wool, with a skimp skirt in box checks, or a white wool jacket with collarless cut curving down to black double-breasted buttons, with black shoulder bars as accent. Fabric interest comes naturally to some designers, who have always started their designing from the fabric work.

end. Koos van den Akker's specialty is called "collage" nowadays, but was once more plainly dubbed "patch-work."

New knits capture interest

By Florence De Santis

Whether in designer or sportswear collections, the most creative looks seem to show up in knits. Sometimes it's just in the colors, which are meltingly beautiful. All the liveliest patterns seem to come in knits, since no one seems to want to do much with woven fabrics. As for shapes, designers don't hesitate to use the latest in short or long, if it's a knit.

Many knit inspirations start in Italy, where the whole idea of knits as fashion was launched. Such designers as Missoni and Krizia are accepted as mainstream fashion leaders. The current Italian trend is to huge colorful intarsia motifs on pullovers with outside shoulders. Donna Teg for Tirelli does a white pinwheel on softly textured red wool. Another knit top in asymmetric halves of red and black Dalmatian dots and stripes, separated by a black cascade ruffle, wraps snugly in a red draped cummerbund around the hips and is worn over a slim black knit skirt.

Italian designers like to dramatize fall ensembles with knits. With a beige cavalry twill skirt and cream flannel blouse, Allieri does a brown wool, silk and angora-blend delicately scrolled cardigan. The ecru wool coat in quilted texture has a wide, ribbed tuxedo front and big ribbed cuffs.

American knit specialists such as Adrienne Vittadini have long been doing admirable fashion collections. Now other designers are including more knits in mainstream collections or creating large groups in couture knitting, as Cleopatra does for this fall.

Using neon jewel colors of ruby, emerald, sapphire and amethyst with black, Cleopatra produces separates outfits mixing solid-color jackets, vests in mosaic or collage prints, tunics and dresses with big ribbed shawl collars. Her second group of separates in gray and beige-white adds stirrup pants as narrow as leggings; a crystal-buttoned dress with a huge ribbed white shawl collar; and a skirt with godets that give a tulip flare to the hem.

Adrienne Vittadini combines fabrics in some of her ensembles such as a drop-shoulder coat in winter white wool over a dress that's knit in a diamond pattern of white and taupe, with an oversized accent V-band in snowflake motif. At Tric-Trac, Phyllis Keitlen combines a white wool oversized pullover with geometric motifs in bright colors and wool flannel pants in any of the colors. Gil Aimbez patterns a funnel-neck pullover in swirls of color on black to wear with black pants.

A simple tunic takes on drama when it's pink and worn over a brief skirt checked in pink and black, at Fenn, Wright & Manson. Mary Jane Marciano gives her dusty pink cotton/mohair tunic big sleeves and a turtle-neck to go over matching pants. Lengthen the tunic and it becomes a mini-dress to wear over tights. Rebecca Moses makes hers with dolman sleeves and an allover pattern of black paisley motifs against white. A ribbed deep hem, neck and cuffs in solid white set off the pattern.

Long dresses also come in knits, more frequently in solid colors than patterns. Michael Kors likes his in white, red or honey cashmere, turtle-necked, and in easy, simple cut with a shaping belt. A three-quarter knit coat with wide shoulders and in a contrasting color slips over the dress. Dalton, however, likes the two-piece knit dress in black and turquoise block plaid, with a dolman blouse top and skirt in unpressed pleats.

Beauty Briefs

By Florence De Santis

Hair color

New season, new fashions, perhaps a new hair color. Most women's natural hair color is medium to dark brown.

With maturity some of the hair goes gray and the original color fades. When coloring hair, don't try to match the hair color of your youth. Your skin tone has also changed, and the effect will look harshly unnatural.

Choose a lighter brown, with a hint of golden highlights, to look soft and flatter mature skin.

Fading tan

Don't try to artificially keep up a fading tan. Dermatologists say that tanning devices are as dangerous as excessive exposure to the sun.

By allowing the skin to resume its normal tone, you give it some months to recover from the damage done when acquiring a summer tan.

To combat the slightly gray cast a fading tan can give the skin, use a rose-beige foundation, plus a bronze gel blusher for accent. Makeup to simulate a tan glow is a lot safer than the real thing.

Hair flattery

Following hair fashion blindly can be very unkind to the face. Thus short, spiky, "punk" styles look best on thin, youthful faces.

For a round face, side hair should be brought forward in wisps or waves to narrow the contour. Bangs cut down face length, so look best on long faces, not on round ones, which need height. Never ape a hair style simply because it's worn by a model, actress or rock star you favor.

In the year ahead, your leadership qualities will become more pronounced. You'll be quite lucky in enterprises you originate or direct.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your first ideas are likely to be your best ones today, so take measures to implement your initial thoughts. Delays induce indecisiveness. Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's important today to know when to stop selling. Once you get a yes for an answer, either make an exit or change the topic of conversation.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Have fun and enjoy yourself with friends today, but don't try to match them dollar for dollar if they can afford to spend more than you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Where important goals are concerned, you're likely to be better able to achieve them early in the day than in the afternoon.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If others aren't supportive of your proposal today, it may be your fault. Tailor your presentation to their real needs.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Don't be too hasty to discard a project that hasn't yet produced a profit. The rewards are there, but you must be patient.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) Greater benefits will be derived from partnership arrangements than from solo efforts today, provided both parties have a harmony of purpose.

Aries (March 21-April 19) You may be productive only up to a certain point today. Once your interest wanes, you're apt to temporarily shelve whatever you're doing.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Unless the terms are spelled out fairly in advance, you might not reap all you should from a joint venture today. Start with a solid agreement.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) If you plan to make changes in the home today, be sure your mate agrees with your intentions. You might think your plans are good, but he or she may not.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Guard against a tendency today to blurt out comments that could be easily misinterpreted. If a slip occurs, apologize promptly.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Be doubly careful when shopping today. If you make a major purchase, be sure it can be returned if it should turn out not to be what you wanted.

President Reagan congratulates Rose.

Rose collects No. 4,192

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose passed Ty Cobb with a record-setting single to culminate 23 years of gritty determination, then christened the historic moment with his first tears as a baseball player.

Rose lined a first-inning single Wednesday night off San Diego's Eric Show to hustle past Cobb and put time alone atop baseball's all-time hit list with 4,192. The sharp line drive, a trademark of Rose's storied career, also touched off an emotional celebration that left him alone at first base, wiping away tears with his batting glove.

The Cincinnati Reds' player-manager has cried only one other time as an adult — at the death of his father Harry, the man he idolizes and credits for his hard-nosed style.

"I was doing all right, then I looked up and started thinking about my father," Rose said. "I saw him up there and right behind him was Ty Cobb — right BEHIND him. Regardless of what you think, he (Cobb) is up there.

"That's the only time I've ever cried on a baseball field."

The single was the first of several bold strokes by the 44-year-old Rose as he led the Reds to a 2-0 victory over the Padres before an uproarious crowd of 47,237 in his hometown.

Appropriately, it came 57 years to the day of Cobb's last plate appearance — a pinch-hit at-bat for the Philadelphia A's.

After going 0-for-4 before another capacity crowd at Riverfront Stadium the night before, Rose told himself to relax Wednesday and do what he does best — have fun playing baseball.

"I was just much more relaxed today," Rose said. "I just could tell I was going to get a hit. I approached the game differently. I didn't want to put everybody through another 0-for-4."

He ended that possibility on the fourth delivery from Show, a right-hander. With a blimp hovering above, the crowd screaming his name and flashbulbs popping all around, Rose cleanly lined a 2-1 slider toward left-center field.

From the instant it left his black Mizuno bat with an authoritative "crack," there was no doubt. He had THE HIT.

"It's like it was meant to be," said first base umpire Ed Montague. "It was like watching something from the movie, 'The Natural.' It was just meant to be."

Rose rounded first base as left fielder Carmelo Martinez retrieved the ball on one hop. Rose characteristically clapped his hands once and traded hand slaps with first base coach Tommy Helms.

Confetti and fireworks filled the air as 15-year-old Pete Rose Jr. led a parade of Reds to congratulate Rose while the stadium rocked with chants of "Pete, Pete!" Show walked over to shake his hand.

"It is the greatest moment in baseball history," said Reds first baseman Tony Perez, a close friend who shared the moment with a hug. "When I got there I said, 'It's about time.' Then Davey (Concepcion) and I picked him up. He was crying; I'd never seen him cry before. I cried, too."

Reds owner Marge Schott hugged Rose and waved a new Corvette onto the field, a gift for baseball's greatest hit producer. The ovation went on even after Rose's teammates left the field, lasting seven minutes.

Rose got teary recalling the moment long after the game had ended.

"I'm not smart enough to have the words to really describe my feelings," Rose said. "I didn't know what to do. I felt like a man looking for a hole to jump into. I was looking for someone to talk to."

"That was the first time I was ever on a baseball field and didn't know what to do. I can't explain my feelings. I've never had feelings like that before."

Rose said "It was like somebody wrote the script and I was playing the part."

He got an on-field call after the game from President Reagan, who assured him: "Your reputation and legacy are secure. It will be a long time before anyone is standing in the spot where you're standing now."

Kansas City widens lead on Angels

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

There's been talk lately in the valley of a "freeway series" between the Angels of Anaheim and Dodgers of Los Angeles.

But after losing two out of three to Kansas City, the road to the World Series seems just a little bit longer to Manager Gene Mauch and his California Angels.

Jamie Quirk singled home one run and pinch-hitter Jorge Orta hit a run-scoring double in the seventh inning to snap a scoreless tie Wednesday night as the Royals defeated California 2-1 to move 2½ games up in the American League West.

"This isn't the way we had it planned," said Mauch. "Now we really have to go to work. We hit a little snag, but we're going to be all right."

Kansas City's Danny Jackson, who was winless in his three previous outings, allowed six hits over seven innings for his 13th victory against nine defeats. Dan Quisenberry pitched the final two innings for his 33rd save.

California's Ron Romanick, 13-8, yielded seven hits in the seven innings he pitched.

"It was a tough loss for us," said Romanick. "We wanted to establish something against Kansas City because we haven't seen them too much and we have four games left with them."

The Angels and Royals play in Kansas City the last week of the season.

Elsewhere in the AL, Toronto edged Detroit 3-2, Texas defeated Oakland 6-3, Boston beat Baltimore 4-1, Milwaukee nipped New York 4-3, Chicago blanked Minnesota 5-0, and Seattle downed Cleveland 9-5.

Blue Jays 3, Tigers 2

In Toronto, Lloyd Moseby singled home Tony Fernandez from second base to snap a tie in the seventh inning as the Blue Jays sent Detroit to its seventh straight defeat. Reliever Dennis Linn, unbeaten this season, won his ninth game.

The victory lifted Toronto to a 2½-game lead over New York in the AL East. The two teams start a four-game series in New York tonight.

Brewers 4, Yankees 3

Cecil Cooper's soft single down the left-field line scored rookie Mike Felder from third base with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 4-3 victory over New York, snapping the Yankees' 11-game winning streak. The Yankees thought the ball was foul and argued with third-base umpire Vic Voltaggio, who made the call.

"He blew the play," a livid New York Manager Billy Martin said of Voltaggio's call.

"I started to pull my glove away, and the ball hit a good foot, foot and a half out," said left fielder Billy Sample.

The umpire "said Billy touched the ball," added Mike Pagliarulo, who was playing third base at the time. "I saw it foul, about five inches foul. It was a close call."

The Brewers snapped a seven-game losing streak.

Rangers 6, A's 3

Mike Mason and Greg Harris combined on a six-hitter and Ellis Valentine scored three runs as Texas sent Oakland to its seventh loss in eight games.

Mason, 7-13, yielded three hits in six innings, including Mike Heath's home run leading off the third. Harris recorded his career-high 10th save despite giving up run-scoring doubles to Dwayne Murphy and Heath in the seventh.

White Sox 5, Twins 0

Burns, 17-8, hurled his eighth complete game, striking out 10 and walking two. He is one win behind AL victory leader Ron Guidry

Area Football Roundup

'Black Death' defense still alive

That "Black Death" defense of a year ago is very much alive.

Wheeler's offense was temporarily put on hold in last week's 1985 opener against Stinnett, but its defense took care of matters until the Mustangs' offensive attack warmed up.

Wheeler climbed a couple of notches into fifth place in The Associated Press Class A rankings with the 21-0 win over Stinnett. The Mustangs were ranked No. 7 by AP going into the 1985 season.

Wheeler's defense limited Stinnett to 53 total yards. Last season, the Mustang defense shut out six consecutive opponents enroute to a 10-1-1 record.

"I was really pleased with our defense," said Wheeler coach Preston Smith. "They looked good out there."

Wheeler defenders include ends Dicky Saylor and Buford Meadows, tackles Ed Ellison and Carl Knutson, linebackers Charley Miller, Toby Collins and Richard Smith, and cornerbacks David Jones and Cody Wiggins, strong safety Robert Andis and safety Dale Hazel. Knutson at 205 is the biggest Mustang defender while Ellison and Meadows weigh in at 190.

Wheeler's offense overcame two fumbles and several penalties (95 yards total) to chalk up 200 yards and 13 first downs.

"I was disappointed with our offensive performance, but usually the defense is ahead of the offense at this time of year," Smith said.

Wheeler led by only 6-0 at halftime on a 70-yard punt return by Coby Wiggins, but added TDs in the third and fourth quarters on a three-yard run by Toby Collins and an eight-yard pass from Randall Hugg to Robert Andis. Collins racked up 120 yards to lead Wheeler's rushing attack.

Wheeler travels to Shamrock Friday night to play for the "County Championship," as Smith calls the annual meeting between the two schools.

"We're the only schools in the county that play football so there's quite a bit of pride at stake when these two teams play," Smith said. "And our kids like the challenge of playing a Class 2A school."

Shamrock, learning a new system under a new coach, lost its opener, 19-6, to Sundown last week.

"Shamrock had an opportunity to score when they were on the one-yard line in the first quarter," Smith said. "Had they been able to score, it could have been a completely different ballgame."

Smith said Shamrock is a rapidly improving team.

"I'm seen them in two scrimmages and against Sundown and all three times I've seen improvement," Smith said. "They run a real basic type offense and a basic 8-man defense, but they're very sound and getting better."

Wheeler reached the regional round of the playoffs last season, losing to eventual state champion Munday, 20-17.

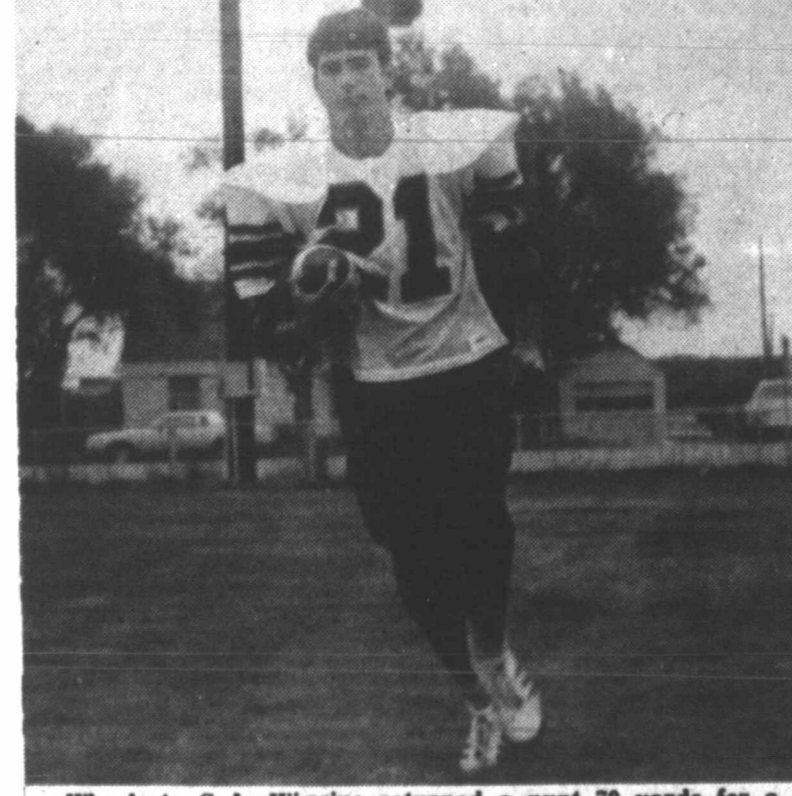

Other area teams — Canadian, White Deer and Miami — opened the season last week with impressive wins.

Junior quarterback Bobby White threw two touchdown passes to lead Canadian past Clarendon, 20-0.

The Wildcats entertain Stinnett Friday night.

Jeff Cox threw to Brent Bridwell for three touchdowns as White Deer shut out Spearman, 32-12. The Bucks entertain Claude Friday night.

Jeff Bass scored four touchdowns to pace Miami over Cotton Center, 50-40, in a six-man game. The Warriors visit Textline Wheeler's Cody Wiggins returned a punt 70 yards for a touchdown in the Mustangs' 21-0 win over Stinnett.

Booster angered at SMU directive

DALLAS (AP) — John Appleton, one of the nine Southern Methodist boosters involved in violations cited by the NCAA, described as "unconstitutional" the school's directive barring him from associating with coaches and said he will no longer contribute money to the athletic program.

Appleton's association with former SMU assistant coach P.J. Larsen on a summer vacation recently cost Larsen his job.

Appleton told the Dallas Times-Herald he is the SMU booster cited by the NCAA for providing $900 cash to former offensive tackle Sean Stopperich.

Stopperich was involved in an automobile accident in 1984 and Appleton said he provided the money after witnessing the wreck in front of Ownby Stadium.

"The young man said he had no insurance," said Appleton. "It was poor judgment on my part, an embarrassment to me and the university. Nevertheless, it was a spontaneous thing and I was willing to accept a certain amount of punishment from the university."

However, Appleton said he did not accept the university's move to keep him away from its coaches.

Appleton confirmed that he and Larsen and their families spent a week in early July at a lodge in Three Lakes, Wis., owned by Appleton's father.

The trip was taken some two months after Appleton and eight other SMU boosters cited by the NCAA received letters from the school barring them from further involvement with SMU athletes, recruits and coaches for varying lengths of time.

Appleton said he and Larsen have retained an attorney to consider a lawsuit over what they say is an unconstitutional restriction on who they can associate with.

"We have been told by his (Larsen's) attorney that we have good legal grounds, that it's an invasion of his First Amendment rights of free association," Appleton said, "and that the rule is unconscionable, meaning no one has the authority to place a rule on an employee that is impossible to follow."

Appleton also said he will no longer contribute to the Mustangs' sports programs.

The Dallas-based investor has given SMU athletics at least $7,500 per year and has provided the university close to $200,000 in donations and endowments since 1978, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

"There's no question — because of this incident and the fact that they have not offered to help Bootsie in any way, they're certainly not going to get anything more from me," said Appleton.

The NCAA recently slapped Southern Methodist with some of the harshest penalties ever given to a college for NCAA rules violations in recruiting football players, including reductions in scholarships, bowl games, televised games and penalties for some coaching personnel.

Schoolboy Honor Roll

SA Southwest quarterback ends Medina Valley winning streak

San Antonio Southwest High School football coach Sonny Detmer starts his son Ty at quarterback and noone worries about favoritism.

Ty's performance last weekend is a good reason why harmony exists on the Dragon team.

Detmer completed 10 of 15 passes for 347 yards including touchdown passes of 85, 64, 42 and 40 yards and an average of 34.7 yards per completion.

The victory snapped Medina Valley's 16-game winning streak, gave Southwest its first victory over the 3A power in nine years and earned Detmer and tight end-cornerback Dennis Ray mention in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll.

"We are a small school where there aren't four other guys real close to Ty in ability," Coach Detmer said. "The other kids and the people in the community have been real super to us."

"But it helps when he does something like he did last week."

Ray caught three passes for touchdowns of 85, 42 and 40 yards, intercepted two passes, one with 20 seconds left in the game to preserve the victory, and tied for the team lead with 16 tackles.

"It was just one of those nights when everything was in the seams," Coach Detmer said. "We read secondary coverages and take what they give us. Ty is great at doing that and has been since he's been playing."

"There were several times when he found the third receiver."

Coach Detmer said he normally signals plays from the sidelines but Ty called four plays against the Panthers.

"He pointed to himself, meaning he wanted to call a play," Detmer said. "Three of them were passes for over 40 yards each."

As for the performance of Ray, who also punts for Southwest, Detmer said "He just had an awesome game, the kind that you dream about."

Hamshire-Fannett had an equally effective pass-catch combination in quarterback Ricky Bayse and wide receiver Derek Deshotel. Bayse hit 12 of 17 passes for 327 yards and touchdown passes of 86, 52, 39 and 15 yards.

Deshotel caught nine passes for 217 yards and three of Bayse's TD passes in a 47-6 victory over Buna.

Hamshire-Fannett Coach Charley Wilson said Bayse and Deshotel both were outstanding athletes.

"Ricky can throw the long ball real well and Derek does a good job after he catches the ball," Wilson said.

In other outstanding individual performances:

--Perryton halfback Mike McKinley rushed 318 yards on 18 carries and scored on runs of three and 60 yards in a 26-6 victory over Borger.

--Lazbuddie linebacker Todd Daniel intercepted the first two passes of the game and returned them 45 and 55 yards for touchdowns in a 30-0 shutout of Melrose, N.M. Daniel also had 12 tackles, eight unassisted.

--In his first varsity start, Port Arthur Austin quarterback Kenny Ford rushed 211 yards on 20 carries and scored on touchdown runs of one and four yards in a 20-17 victory over Orangefield.

--Edwin Serrano was San Antonio Fox Tech's three-minute defense in a 17-14 victory over San Antonio Harlandale.

Carter wins bout

HOUSTON (AP) — Super middleweight Pancho Carter used a powerful left hook to score a second-round technical knockout over Fort Worth's Jay Strickland in the main event of the Houston Boxing Association's September card.

Carter, who had to run two miles Wednesday to make the weight limit for the fight at the Sheraton Hotel, gave up six inches in height to his opponent.

Carter, who fights out of the HBA stable, floored Strickland with a left hook in the first round and ended the fight with a left hook at the 1-minute, 21-second mark of the second round.

With the victory, Carter earned a shot at Murray Sutherland's United States Boxing Association title within 90 days.

"This is a dream come true," Carter said. "I've come too far to stop now. I'm just one step away."

Carter, at Wednesday morning's weigh-in, was 1½ pounds over the 169-pound limit and had to jog two miles to take off the weight. He also was six inches shorter than 6-foot-3 Strickland.

"Running the two miles was no problem," said Carter. "And I like fighting taller guys because I can use my hook more effectively."

Carter, ranked No. 9 in the USBA, is 14-0 with 13 knockouts. Strickland fell to 22-3-1.

Longhorns' Harrell injured

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' search for defensive tackles has suffered a setback with a knee injury to redshirt sophomore Newt Harrell, who had surgery Wednesday and likely will be out for the 1985 season.

Harrell, 6-foot-5 and 249 pounds, toke a ligament and cartilage in his left knee. He also missed spring training because of a shoulder operation.

Coach Fred Akers said recently "every big lineman we have" was being tried at defensive tackle. Out of 11, he said, he hoped to find four.

TRAINS COLLIDE — An express train loaded with immigrant workers bound for France slammed into a domestic passenger train near the central Portuguese town of Viseu Wednesday, killing at least 41 people. (AP Laserphoto)

Death toll 41 in head-on train crash

WISEU, Portugal (AP) — An express train trying to make up lost time collided head-on with a local train in mountainous central Portugal, and at least 41 people died in the blazing wreckage, news reports said today.

"People were being burned alive, shouting, jumping from the carriages and dying at the train windows," said Duarte Santos Correia, 37, one of the passengers who survived the wreck, the 13th this year in Portugal.

Local news reports at mid-morning today said 41 bodies had been recovered from the wrecked coaches or sighted inside. Rescuers worked through the night to free bodies pinned inside the twisted, blackened railway cars and transport them to three local hospitals.

A deputy fire chief, Delfim Azevedo, had estimated the death toll at 300, but a doctor said later that no more than 50 people had died.

The news agency Noticias de Portugal quoted Prime Minister Mario Soares today as saying at the crash scene, "Fortunately, I have come to the conclusion that the figures given originally were exaggerated."

The news agency Noticias de Portugal said between 140 and 150 passengers were hurt, but reported that some were treated from minor injuries and released.

More than 500 firefighters, 100 ambulances, air force helicopters, paramilitary police and the Portuguese Red Cross converged on the disaster site in the mountainous Serra de Estrela region 150 miles northeast of Lisbon.

Railway officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the eastbound international express and the local train were traveling on the same track in opposite directions when the crash occurred.

ANOP, the Portuguese domestic news agency, quoted the railway officials as saying that the seven-coach express, bound from Oporto to Hendaye, France, with hundreds of migrant workers, was behind schedule and did not wait for the Coimbra-bound train to move onto a siding.

The wrecked coaches tipped off the rails and burst into flames, setting fire to a pine forest, firefighters and witnesses said. Some of the cars burned for as long as three hours.

Abilio Travessas, who had been vacationing in the region, told ANOP he was walking along the tracks when the wreck happened.

"The first carriage was on fire. There was a deathly silence, no one talking or crying," he said. "The migrant train fell to one side and the regional one to the other. From the cars people were coming out, some with broken legs, arms, heads. There was blood everywhere."

Police in Mangualde said five foreigners on the express were being treated for injuries. They identified them as a West German, a Malaysian, a couple from Italy and a Luxembourgier.

Senate Democrats claim Republican filibuster won't stop anti-apartheid bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic leaders say they will keep the issue of tougher economic sanctions against white-ruled South Africa constantly before Congress, attaching it to measure after measure "until we win."

But Republicans accuse the Democrats of waging a politically motivated campaign to embarrass President Reagan, whom they said should be given credit and support for revamping his administration's policy toward South Africa.

Reagan on Monday issued his own list of sanctions aimed at South Africa's apartheid system of enforced racial separation.

Having failed Wednesday in their second assault on a filibuster preventing consideration of the Anti-Apartheid Act of 1985, Democrats scheduled a third vote today.

But Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Alan Cranston of California said there was virtually no way to build a winning coalition of 60 votes needed to end the debate.

Instead, Cranston said supporters of the legislation will use today's vote to keep the issue alive and will seek to attach the legislation to the pending debt limitation bill, a measure which requires only a majority vote for passage and which President Reagan would likely find difficult to veto.

"I believe we have a majority that will stick on a substantive vote," Cranston said. "We will get that on a bill that is tough to filibuster and is very difficult to veto."

"We are going to keep this issue before the Congress and the country until we win," Cranston said.

The second attempt to end the filibuster failed, 57-41. An earlier bid to stop it failed, 53-34.

"This is no longer an issue of what's good for South Africa; it's a raw political issue," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas said in an appeal for GOP senators to close ranks.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., who had voted with the Democrats to end the filibuster the first time around, switched sides on the second vote, explaining that he believed Democrats were engaged in a "calculated effort ... to embarrass the president."

"I wanted no part of that," Stafford said.

Dole promised to seek a final vote on the sanctions measure if the administration is not resolute in pursuing its new sanctions policy.

"I give my word to this body that if there is any slippage, any turning back on the part of the president, this senator will call up (the sanctions bill) and will support it," Dole said.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., a GOP supporter of the sanctions legislation, complained of "arm twisting" by the Republican leadership and said: "I think the president made monkeys out of the Senate of the United States on this one."

However, Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., told her colleagues she voted against ending the filibuster because she supports Reagan's "belated decision to move American foreign policy onto a new course."

Administration moving from charmed life

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's people once had a remarkable way of making things work.

There were the usual reports of intramural bickering, power struggles and the office politics so often associated with places where very ambitious people compete for the attentions of their very important boss and the perquisites of their very coveted offices. But through it all, the staff usually made Reagan look good and the Reagan White House function effectively.

The president's relations with Congress were generally excellent; he dominated the news media at will; and he managed to control the agenda and public debate right through his 49-state landslide re-election last November.

But many of the people surrounding the president then, including former White House chief of staff James A. Baker III and most of his key aides, have gone on to other jobs outside the White House. And things just don't seem to work very well anymore.

Some of the problems during Reagan's second term are reminiscent of the Carter White House, which was the target of constant complaints from disappointed allies whose pet projects always seemed to get lost in the shuffle.

The errors in judgment can be serious, such as the mishandling of information about Reagan's skin cancer, which made an otherwise minor news story seem a much bigger event than it was and cast dark clouds on the credibility of the president's staff.

But the little things often hurt too.

One of the reasons Reagan got on so well with Congress in the first term was that, despite the pitched battles over major issues such as the budget or foreign policy, someone in the White House tended to the details that keep lawmakers and their staffs happy.

Earlier this week, however, a key Senate committee chairman and Reagan supporter was asked not to disclose Reagan's appointment of a commission the senator was interested in before 2:30 p.m. on a certain day because Reagan wanted to announce it himself.

The senator, aware that Reagan's personal involvement would get the commission more attention than it might otherwise capture, was happy to oblige.

But the senator's aides were dismayed to learn that the announcement came not from Reagan at 2:30 but in a routine personnel news release passed out without fanfare or background two hours earlier, guaranteeing it would receive little public notice.

Many more Senate Republicans, including Majority Leader Robert Dole, were openly infuriated when Reagan walked away from their plan to reduce the deficit by freezing Social Security increases, a politically risky step they had taken only after winning the popular president's backing.

Man dead in blaze

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A 46-year-old woman remained in serious but stable condition today following a blaze that raced through her small frame home, killing her husband.

Le Roy and Sally McClain, both 46, were pulled from separate bedrooms of the house after firefighters brought the blaze under control on Wednesday night.

McClain was in cardiac arrest when they carried him from the smoldering house, said firefighters. He was taken to Hendrick Medical Center where he was pronounced dead at 10:52 p.m.

Reagan asks GOP tax unity

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has appealed to top Republicans to unite behind his campaign to overhaul the tax system, despite their warnings that Capitol Hill fervor for trade protectionism could derail the administration's drive.

The president made the plea for solidarity during a White House meeting with GOP congressional leaders on the eve of another campaign-style, stump speech for his tax reform plan.

Reagan was to put his program before 3,000 senior citizens in Tampa, Fla., a group billed as a "Senior Citizens Forum on Tax Reform."

Since Reagan began his travels on behalf of his program in Orlando, Fla., on Memorial Day, he has visited more than a dozen states trying to whip up interest in tax legislation.

Some members of his own party say, however, there will be little backing for the president's plan unless the administration does more to address the nation's trade problems.

"If we don't act on trade before we act on tax reform, I don't think there will be any tax reform bill," Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., said following Wednesday's meeting with Reagan. "If we don't have an aggressive trade policy, I feel it will cost momentum and possibly even votes on the tax reform bill."

Heinz, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, which deals with tax and trade legislation, said his constituents are interested in jobs lost to unfair foreign trade practices, not in tax reform.

"Interest in tax reform at this time is probably at an all-time low since the president made his tax reform proposal," Heinz said.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole said, "people don't get too excited about taxes."

"We don't find ourselves in disagreement with the president's general philosophy as far as free trade is concerned — open markets," Dole said. "But we do have a number of cases we can recite where they're (foreign markets) not open on the other end. So that's the kind of legislation we're looking at."

Dole said he doubted action to open selected foreign markets will be enough to stem the protectionist tide on Capitol Hill.

"I don't think we can conceive of any plan that would, in effect, stop all the action because it has become, in addition to an economic issue, a highly charged political issue," he said.

Lawmakers returning from their summer recess say the public is concerned about the nation's growing trade imbalance. Some have worried aloud that they may suffer at the polls in next year's congressional races if no action is taken.
