Plane carrying 524 crashes

Disaster could be worst in aviation history

TOKYO (AP) — A Japan Air Lines 747 jumbo jet with 524 people aboard crashed on a domestic flight today in mountainous country after reporting that it had problems with a cabin door and was going to make an emergency landing.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. said a Self-Defense Force helicopter had spotted wreckage on a mountainside in the Japan Alps in the central part of the country.

Initial reports from authorities gave no sign of survivors in what could be history's worst single plane disaster. The worst previous one-plane crash was that of a Turkish DC-10 near Paris in 1974, in which 346 people perished.

Pilots of two other aircraft had reported seeing a plane afire in the air before the crash.

The Japan Defense Agency said rescue teams had not yet reached the crash site, on the north side of 6,929-foot Mount Ogura, about 6 miles east of Saku

City and 70 miles northwest of Tokyo. However, at about 8:25 p.m., Isao Shimozaki, a Nagano prefectural police officer, said in a telephone interview that police, firefighters and Self Defense Force personnel were at or near the crash

Tudor said the passenger manifest included at least 21 non-Japanese names, but there was no immediate identification of any of them by nationality

The JAL plane was on a flight from Tokyo's Haneda Airport to Osaka in one of Japan's busiest holiday travel seasons. The jetliner carried 509 passengers, including 12 infants, and a crew of 15, said Geoffrey Tudor, a Japan Air Lines spokesman.

Tudor said the pilot reported "trouble with a door" and U.S. officials at Yokota Air Base, an American base about 21 miles west of Tokyo, said the pilot asked and received permission to make an emergency landing

However, the plane disappeared off radar screens near Saku, a city in Nagano prefecture (state), about 100 miles west of Tokyo. It crashed at about 6:54 p.m. (5:54 a.m. EDT)

A Ministry of Transport official, who asked not to be named, said the location of the crash had been pinpointed about 34 miles from Yokota

Japan Broadcasting said there was a thunderstorm in the area about the time of the crash, just before dark.

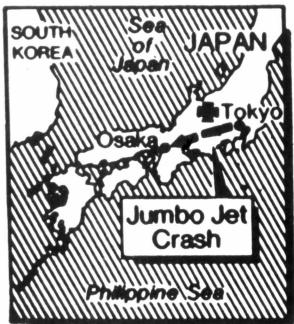

Kyodo News Service quoted unnamed witnesses as saying they saw a plane make a long turn and then saw "red and black flames.

Japan Broadcasting said witnesses in the Nagano area, about 100 miles northwest of Tokyo, telephoned the network to report they heard a loud crash and saw a "mushroom cloud.

The 747 appeared to be well off course between Tokyo and Osaka when it reported that it was in Tudor said in a telephone interview that the plane's captain, Masami Takahama, 49, radioed that "there was trouble with a door on the deck of the main cabin," and the door appeared to have been on the right rear side of the fuselage.

Japan Broadcasting said the first message from the JAL pilot was sent at 6:39 p.m

Nearly half of wells still failing RRC tests By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer dropped from the testing schedule The number of Panhandle Field because no gas connection was production purposes. oil wells failing to meet gas to oil present or because no low ratio standards under Texas Railroad Commission ordered testing still hovered under the 50 percent mark after retests completed last week.

Of the 508 wells tested since the end of July, 232 (or 46 percent) have not passed the gas-oil ratios needed for classification as an oil well, District 10 Director Bob Blakeney reported this morning.

According to prepared statistical reports sent to the RRC office in Austin today, district personnel completed 54 tests last week, with 27 or 50 percent failing the test.

Last week the office had reported 45.6 percent of the 454 wells tested by Aug. 2 had failed the tests.

Of the estimated 1135 wells originally scheduled for the tests, only about 40 remain for testing. But this is only an estimate, Blakeney said, since some wells in the count of 508 are retests and will have to be counted separately when the testing is completed later this month

The office has 46 tests scheduled this week, six over the estimated remaining wells, according to the temperature extraction units (LTX units) were being used on the lease.

Forty-seven additional wells were removed because no LTX units were in use, making a total of 386 that have been dropped from the schedule based on original estimates. Last week the office reported 339 wells had been taken off the schedule for that reason.

The number of wells reporting no gas connection for gas production purposes remained at 225.

Of the original estimated 1135 wells to be tested, 611 or 53.8 percent have now been removed from the schedule. Blakeney reported.

Those wells failing the test have shown a higher gas to oil ratio than permitted under RRC field regulations for classification as an oil well. Rules require a well to produce no more than 100,000 cubic feet (Mcf.) of gas per barrel of crude oil.

Wells producing more than the allowed Mcf. of gas will be subject to reclassification as a gas well, which will have a significant impact on those independent oil operators' production being sealed and closed for

The classification of a well as gas or oil producing has important significance in the Panhandle Field because of the unique contract provisions separating oil and gas rights throughout the field.

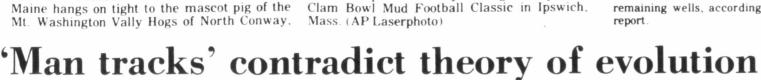

Most of the independents have only oil rights based on their wells being classified as oil wells. If classified as gas wells, those wells cannot be operated by the independents under the contract separation terms

Most of the gas rights in the field belong to generally out-of-state owned corporations, the so-called

The retesting of the independents' wells is the result of a RRC order issued in May and implemented in June. The order was based on a staff examiners' recommendation following a series of hearings and studies initiated after Phillips Petroleum Co. filed a complaint in September, 1981. regarding the use of liquified gases obtained from the LTX units.

Phillips contended many independents were wrongfully counting the resultant liquids

GLEN ROSE, Texas (AP) - Evolutionists disagree, but a Glen Rose archaeologist says he has found "man tracks" alongside dinosaur tracks near here that indicate dinosaurs and man co-existed on earth.

PIGSKIN PASSION—Del Bean of Gorham,

Carl Baugh came to Glen Rose, home of the Dinosaur Valley State Park, from St. Louis three years ago at the suggestion of his mentor. He was working toward an archeology degree. and he wanted to excavate a dinosaur track.

At what is known as the McFall site, along the Paluxy River, Baugh's team removed a foot of limestone and, during two days of excavation in March 1982, exposed 19 dinosaur

"Then we came across a man track. When I realized what it was, it really blew my mind, Baugh said. "I never expected anything this revolutionary

He now claims to have uncovered about 50 man tracks

Carl Baugh points to depressions in the rock "Here was a perfect 16-inch left footprint (of a man)," he said.

'Erosion has distorted it totally. But everything is in perfect proportion to the Baugh's molds resemble large human prints, with distinctive toes. He displays molds of tracks, the largest of which is 25 inches long, in his Creation Evidences Museum housed in a small field shed near the McFall site.

At the site, the rectangular depressions are much less distinct, which Baugh attributes to

Many of the "man tracks" are elongated depressions stemming from the heel of dinosaur tracks. Baugh suggests that man or dinosaur stepped on top of one another's

But the theory that man and dinosaur lived together debunks a major premise from the theory of evolution - that man existed at least 50 million years after the dinosaur disappeared from Earth

Among the skeptics is Ron Hastings, chairman of the science department at Waxahachie High School and a frequent visitor to the Glen Rose site since 1982.

"We are saying this is part of a dinosaur trail," he said of a depression near a dinosaur track that Baugh claims is a human footprint.

A report compiled by Hastings anthropologists John Cole and Laurie Godfrey and geologist Steven Schafersman concluded that the man tracks were the result of vivid creationist imaginations, conjuring up a "Fred Flintstone bestiary.

Hastings said the purported man tracks are distorted dinosaur tracks, or were left by bits of debris lodged in the limestone which eventually rotted out

"We're very excited about creationists uncovering dinosaur trails," Hastings said. "But we think the creationists are scaring off good scientific interest (at Glen Rose)

The evolutionists say the mantracks have no of respect for him. He's intelligent," said Gary Tarpley. district supervisor for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department in Fort Worth. "We've been keeping score. The score's seven to nothing in his favor.

The latest failure came Saturday when the 6-to-8 foot gator, known variously as Wally game wardens' goats used as bait and snapped off the 240-pound-test fishing line that was meant to reel the reptile in.

> We go into town and people want to know if we got the alligator yet," Tarpley said. When we say no, they laugh.

The hunt began after Chris and Fred Brenner discovered the alligator in a stock pond near their new country home near Aledo, west of Fort Worth. That was in late June

Since then, two to four game wardens have been setting makeshift traps in the one-acre pond week after week and are becoming more and more embarrassed at their failure.

Chautauqua to offer more arts, more fun

Artists and craftspeople are honing their skills and crafts in preparation for the Labor Day showing of their works at the '85 Chautauqua in Central Park.

Sponsored by the Pampa Fine Arts Association, the fourth annual Chautauqua is the result of a goal of the association to bring more of the arts to the public and to have some fun at the same time The communitywide festivity will offer educational and informational opportunities, exhibits, displays, games, entertainment, food booths and arts throughout the Central Park complex in the day-long celebration.

The annual town festival offers a showcase for area artists, craftspeople, actors and musicians to display and demonstrate their talents. Arts and crafts to be exhibited this year include dough art, stained glass, oil and pastel paintings, wooden folk art, weaving and afghans, with many of the items being for sale

James Harre of Borger will be exhibiting dough art, wood items and handmade dolls. Jack Towles of Pampa will display his stained glass creations

Betty Renner of Pampa will be exhibiting her oil paintings and tole paintings. Karen Hester, another Borger resident, will be displaying Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy dolls, clowns, knit dolls and other

Palo Duro Handweavers of Amarillo will provide a display and action booth of weaving skills

Boy Scout Troop No. 413 will offer knickknacks and other small, inexpensive gifts. The Proud Republicans of Pampa will be exhibiting flags. The Pampa Harvester Booster Club also will have an arts and crafts booth

The arts and crafts exhibits are only part of the activities available for the Chautauqua event.

At least 30 events are designed for children in the Carousel and Funtier area, with games, art participation activities, puppet shows, stories, athletic events, pony and wagon rides, and informational opportunities.

Displays will be presented by a number of civic clubs, service organizations, churches, businesses, health care and social agencies, Texas National Guard, Pampa Police Department, and other associations. Food booths will offer a variety of foods and drinks for refreshments throughout the Various entertainment performances will be presented on the main stage, including acting groups, musicians, dancers, gymnasts and McGruff the Crime Prevention Dog.

Union Carbide warning system fails first test since installation

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) - An emergency system failed miserably in its first major test since it was put into place at a Union Carbide Corp. plant here after a chemical leak killed more than 2,000 people in India, local residents say Six plant employees and about 125 nearby residents went to hospitals Sunday with lung, eye, nose and throat irritations after a chemical used to make pesticide leaked. Thousands of people were asked to stay in their houses for several hours, until the chemical dissipated.

The chemical cloud spewed from a unit that uses methyl isocyanate, the substance that leaked last December in the Indian city of Bhopal Plant spokesman Dick Henderson said the substance that leaked here, aldicarb oxime, is made from MIC, but the MIC is consumed in production.

Company officials said a cloud of aldicarb settled on nearby homes after leaking from the plant when a gasket on a storage tank failed.

Many people living near the plant said their homes already were engulfed in fumes when they first heard the plant's emergency siren. "Carbide's got to do something better than this," said Donna Willis, one of nearly 300

Main Street program aims at revitalizing downtowns

By BOB HART Pampa City Manager

I want this week to again review the Main Street Program and the interest of the city commission in submitting an application to be considered as one of the five Main Street Cities for 1986

The decline of the Main Street has been a nation wide phenomenon since World War II, when housing patterns drastically altered the shape of most towns, scattering homes and businesses to the outlying areas.

Throughout the nation in town after town, the story repeated itself. Businesses closed or moved to outlying commercial strips or regional malls.

In many communities merchants and business owners tried to halt the downward spiral by using decorative arrangements, which included such things as aluminum, plywood, multi-colored tile and other facade efforts. City participation was typically in the form of superficial beautification.

All of the efforts did not address the full range of downtown problems, including the need to build public and private partnerships and to manage a, market of the downtown as a distinct entity with its own unique assets. The city and the merchants, in trying to save Main Street, denied the qualities that had made

In 1977 the National Trust for Historical Preservation, concerned with continuing threats to Main Street's commercial architecture. and being aware of the need to stimulate economic activity in small-city downtowns, launched its program - the Main Street Program - to develop a comprehensive revitalization strategy that would encourage economic development within the context of historic preservation.

A partnership was developed between the National Trust and the State of Texas to apply the Main Street concept to a wider range of communities and to develop state level support systems to assist local revitalization efforts.

Within Texas, the Main Street Center is a branch of the Texas Historical Commission. The program is funded primarily through contributions from private foundations and major corporations within the state. Participating cities fund the local program.

The foundation of the Main Street approach is preservation. It emphasizes the use of Main Street surviving assets to build a lasting, positive physical and emotional image for everyone who uses the downtown area.

The approach also relies on unified management, similar to that in modern shopping centers, although participation is voluntary. Four elements are carefully orchestrated to create a positive, marketable identity for the downtown:

1. Organization - Establishing a consensus and cooperation by building partnerships that will allow the development of consistent revitalization programs and permit the emergence of effective management in advocacy of the downtown. Diverse groups bankers, city government, merchants, the chamber of commerce, civic groups and individual citizens - must work together to improve the downtown.

2. Promotion - Creating a positive image of the business district to attract customers and investors and to rekindle community pride. Promotion includes the development of sophisticated sales events and festivals and the creation of a and media presentations. 3. Design - Enhancing the visual quality of the downtown. Attention must be paid to all elements of the downtown environment: buildings, storefronts, signs, public improvements, landscaping, merchandising displays and promotional materials.

4. Economic Restructuring -Strengthening the existing economic assets of the business district while diversifying its economic base. Activities include recruiting new stores to provide a balanced retail mix; converting unused space into housing, offices, entertainment or cultural facilities; and sharpening the competitiveness of Main Street's traditional merchants.

The key to the success of the Main Street approach is its comprehensiveness.

Too often downtown revitalization efforts focus on only one or two of these areas.

By carefully integrating all four into practical strategy, the Main Street approach produces dramatic short-term improvements, particularly in appearance, while causing fundamental changes to occur in leadership and the downtown's economic base, changes that are critical to long-term revitalization

I will provide details of the program to the Downtown Business Association at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 13, in the coffee room of the First National Bank.

If you are interested in Main Street, I would encourage you to attend the meeting.

Further, if you feel this program would be a benefit to Pampa, I would appreciate receiving a letter stating that the program would be beneficial to Pampa and that you

Administratión says Reagan not able to block sanctions

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) - The Reagan administration says it is now up to South Africa to make a move away from apartheid, following a warning to the white-ruled government that President Reagan may be unable to hold off congressional sanctions.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Sunday that National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane had laid out the realities of the situation in a meeting with South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha last week in Vienna

McFarlane told South African officials Reagan would be unable to sustain a veto of sauctions legislation pending in Congress unless there is "accelerated movement' away from the apartheid policies of racial separation, Speakes confirmed.

The South Africans were told there was a "lack of in-depth understanding in the United States of the complexities of the South African problem," Speakes said. He said a veto override hinges on the mood of Congress and how well the public has come to understand the South African situation. But Reagan's decision on vetoing the sanctions will depend on his "own personal opinion as far as the pros and cons of sanctions — the advisability of the legislation." House and Senate negotiators agreed on a package of limited economic sanctions including: banning the sale in the United States of Krugerrands, the South African gold coin; barring the sale of goods used in nuclear production and computers; and requiring American companies with 25 or more employees in South Africa to follow a code of conduct for equal treatment of blacks.

Speakes made his comments to reporters aboard Air Force One as President Reagan flew to Santa Barbara, Calif., to begin a three-week vacation.

"We have told them the realities of the situation and of the lack of the in-depth understanding in the United States of the complexities of the South African problem and the distinct possibility that the sanction bills (in) Congress will come to the president," Speakes

While both the House and Senate overwhelmingly approved legislation imposing economic sanctions on South Africa in an effort to pressure Pretoria to ease racial restrictions, the Senate delayed final action until it returns from its August recess

More than $1.5 million has been spent in the past three years researching the potential of 'high-speed rail' in Texas, and some analysts believe the concept is practical not only for the Dallas-Houston corridor, but also from Houston to San Antonio and Dallas to San Antonio.

Financing for part of the project is already under consideration, and a $375,000 federal grant has been issued for a feasibility study, the Waco Tribune-Herald reported Sunday newspaper that his company has been studying the possibility of high-speed rail in Texas since 1983.

He said he expects to meet soon with Gov. Mark White, the Texas Railroad Commission and the Texas Highways and Public Transportation Commission to present the findings of a feasibility study his company began last January.

"It shows that a high-speed line can be built together as a public and private enterprise," he said.

'But it has to be operated as a private business that must show a profit every year. And it can show a profit every year," Eisele added

Eisele said his study estimates the Dallas-Houston line could be completed for $1.8 billion to $2.5 billion, considerably less than the $7 billion to $10 billion a recent Pennsylvania feasibility study estimated as the cost for a high-speed system connecting Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, Pa.

West Texas dam okayed

Voters throughout the state went to the polls over the weekend, paving the way for a $68 million West Texas dam project and trimming down a list of contenders for a vacant Texas House seat.

About 97 percent of ballots cast in three West Texas cities favored the Stacy Dam and reservoir project, which officials say will meet the area's water needs into the next

The $68 million dam is expected to begin providing water to Abilene, Midland and San Angelo in the 1990s

"I think the democratic process shows that if you shoot square with the people, they are going to support you, and this is what happened in San Angelo and Midland and Abilene," said Owen Ivie, general manager of the Colorado River Municipal Water District, a partner in the project.

The vote was 18,831 for and only 658 against the proposed dam and reservoir, which will be built on the confluence of the Colorado and Concho rivers about 30 miles southeast of Ballinger.

Each city will pay $11 million toward the project, with the water district picking up the remainder.

Meanwhile Saturday, Harris County voters forced a runoff between a Democrat and a Republican seeking to fill the House District 140 seat vacated by Rep. Gene Green.

Democrat Walter Hinojosa and Republican Eugene R. Haney beat out five other contenders and face a runoff because neither candidate received the 50 percent of the ballots needed to cinch the seat.

Green resigned to make his successful bid to replace former state Sen. Linden Williams. D-Houston, who vacated his Senate seat to become a Harris County justice of the peace.

DALLAS (AP) - A Dallas woman has become the first county resident to die of heatstroke this summer, the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office reports.

The death came only days after more than 40 people were stricken with heat-related problems at an area amusement park and more than 100 people were treated for similar problems at an air show at nearby Fort Worth

The woman, 43, had a body temperature of 109 degrees when she arrived at Methodist Medical Center early Sunday, according to hospital spokeswoman nancy George. The woman died about 30 minutes later, she said.

The victim's father told investigators that his air conditioning unit stopped working Saturday and the woman had kept a window open and was using a small electric fan to cool the room.

'It was hot in the house," the father said. He told investigators that his daughter had been sleeping when she sat down in front of the fan and slumped to the floor.

It was the second heatstroke death of the summer for the area, the medical examiner's office said. The first was a Collin County resident who died June 10, officials

The heatstroke death in Dallas came two days after 47 people were treated at area hospital after they became ill while waiting for a pop concert at Six Flags of Texas.

Our allegiance to Pampa

Longtime Pampans have to labor under a couple of curses.

Due to a number of factors no one can control, our little patch of Texas falls considerably shy of fitting the description of paradise. People who have chosen to be permanent residents of our fair city always end up in the position of defending the honor of the place. We have the less than happy task of being apologists.

Believe me, that's no easy chore. I get the chance to practice all

Inevitably, someone will ask me how long I've been here. When I say I have been here nearly five years, the reaction varies in direct proportion to the amount of time the questioner has spent in Pampa. So I quickly add that this is the third time I have lived in Pampa during the past 30 years and that I am a native of the area. I also note that both times I left Pampa was because I was transferred to other papers in the Freedom Group and I eventually managed to return. New residents usually stare at me as if I belong in a carnival sideshow and say something like, "Your're kidding, aren't you? In response to such remarks, I've developed a routine of mentioning the friendly people, a thriving economy, great sunsets and the advantages of living in a place where you can be on first-name basis with just about anybody in town including judges.

criminals and millionaires who might be bankrupt next week Depending on the time since the last sandstorm, newcomers seldom swallow the whole package of bull. To retain some semblance of honor, I've had to eliminate the economic part of the spiel But, those first impressions are hard to overcome.

Over the years I have seen many journalists come to Pampa to spend time in the local newsroom. Usually, during the first months here, they spend equal amounts of time complaining about the Pampa area and praising where they came from. Most of these journalists have been young people who bitterly complain about nothing to do. When various local activities which young people enjoy have been pointed out to them, they weren't interested.

Eventually some of these young people have become involved in one or more of the activities and even have reached the point of complaining no more often than the "oldtimers" before eventually moving on to a larger paper, usually at a better pay scale.

Once a person has become involved in some aspects of the community, the job of convincing them that Pampa is a viable place to live gets much easier.

The longer a person stays, the more he or she begins to notice the intangibles. The people are fiercely independent, yet quick to band together when the going gets tough. And most new residents with anything to offer the community will be accepted in rapid fashion.

That's probably due to the fact that Pampa has come to live with population turnover. Residents realize the culture shock weeds out a lot of people. Naturally, someone has to come here to replace those who flee, and

But, a lot of Pampans arrived, gave the place a chance and stayed. A surprising number of curreent residents are natives who escaped at the first chance, then later returned with a different view Pampa is not embraced with open arms. I doubt if anyone could those transitions are simpler when you make friends in a hurry truthfully say they took an immediate liking to the place Perhaps it would be fair to say Pampa grows on people Those who are itching to leave won't understand that statement. Maybe some of the ones who got hooked won't either. Many of us are painfully aware of Pampa's shortcomings. Our longevity gives us license to poke fun at our chosen home. We gripe and complain, but we endure. Thats's the other curse

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anorchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Social Security part of budget

Social Security is such a political hot potato that the Reagan administration proposes to violate one of its budgetary principles to cool it off.

The president wants to put Social Security 'off-budget," which would take it out of the federal budget and set it up as a separate entity. Actually itis supposed happen anyway in 1992, but Reagan wants to speed it up. By oing so now Social Security would effectively be isolated from controversy over budget deficits during the remainder of the president's term. Reagan already has been embroiled several times in the argument over whether to cut back on retirement benefits to reduce the budget deficit.

But taking the program off-budget runs contrary to Reagan's previously expressed view that all government spending programs should be part of the budget.

In fact, the White House came out strongly for a 'unified budget' earlier this year. It condemnded a congressional tendency of past years to put spending programs off-budget and recommended that those outside be brought in next year. Off-budget outlays now total $12.5 billion, mostly in government loan programs. but including such items as the strategic oil reserve, the Synthetic Fuels Corp., and the government's payment to the Postal Service.

Social Security has had a checkered budget status. It was an off-budget item until the late 1960s when President Lyndon Johnson recommended including it and Congress went along. The program was running big surpluses then, and by including them. Johnson was able to hold down overall budget deficits while he was spending heavily on the Vietnam war.

When Social Security financing was overhauled in 1983. Congress decided to remove the program, again from the budget, effective in 1992, as a means of shielding it from budget-cutting pressures.

We think that was a mistake and we think Reagan is making a mistake in trying to speed up the program. In his fiscal 1986 byudget message submitted to Congress in February, the president said the budget is "a basic part of a comprehensive financial plan" and argued for comperehensive coverage of programs within that document "to inform the public to the full extent of how much the government is spending both in total and for particular purposes.

Removing the massive Social Security program-which no constitutes about one-fourth of all government spending—does violence to that expressed principle

A boost for tax reform

A great many prestigious economists on both the Left and the Right are arguing that because President Reagan's tax plan raises the effective corporate cost of capital by about 6 percent, it will slow down economic growth.

But one of this country's most distinguished students of the economics of corporate tax rates, Don Fullerton of the University of Virginia, disagrees. He told the House Ways and Means Committee. "Too much attention has been paid to the issue of whether these tax reforms increase or decrease the overall cost of capital, or the effective tax rate

He added, "We know very little about how businesses react to these incentives. As a consequence, I would not put much stock in any claims about the total level of capital

Fullerton is much more concerned about the inefficiency of using the tax code to promote SPECIFIC kinds of investment - as a form of "industrial policy," giving tax subsidies to some industries and not others, instead of letting the market decide

Over the last thirty years, for example, U.S. taxpayers have paid out more than $22 billion in both tax and direct subsidies to help the maritime industry - yet that industry has almost died.

In an April 1985 paper for the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER), Fullerton found that as a result of the 1981-82 tax changes, corporate tax rates now vary enormously not only on types of investment (equipment and buildings) but on investments from industry to industry, from 7 percent for the automotive industry all the way up to 24 percent for petroleum refining

In another paper for the American Enterprise

Institute he shows that the "marginal effective total tax rate" varies from 19 percent on services and 21 percent on transportation, communication, and utilities, up to 37 percent for refining.

Fullerton told Congress that the advantage of the Reagan proposal is that it cuts this huge variation in tax rates at least by half, which produces "a much more uniform treatment of different assets and sectors (industries)...Under these conditions even with no additional capital formation a given stock of capital can be used to produce more output."

The reason? "Investment decisions will be based on productive returns rather than tax returns. The plan would also eliminate (through indexing) the interference of inflation, and make for a more rational adherence to the intended effects of tax policy.'

Fullerton is also arguing something that many supply-side economists have long maintained: Corporate tax breaks, so generously given to the heavy 'rust-belt' industries in 1981, and often used by states to "lure" specific kinds of industries, are inefficient and, more often than not, counterproductive.

Professor Fullerton comes by this view after a 300-page 1983 study of the corporate tax rates of four countries, the U.S., West Germany, Sweden, and the United Kingdom, which tries to assess the "efficiency" of varying rates of corporate capital taxation.

His book, THE TAXATION OF INCOME FROM CAPITAL (NBER of Chicago) caused quite a stir when it was published last year, because it argued not only that there was NO correlation between corporate taxation rates and capital formation and economic growth, but that, if anything, that correlation was NEGATIVE

Fullerton found that in the period from 1960-1980. West Germany had the fastest rate of corporate capital formation, and also by far the HIGHEST effective corporate tax rate of nearly 50 percent - while the worst economic and capital formation performance was in Great Britain, which has steadily CUT its corporate tax rates down to only 4 percent in 1980.

More important, Fullerton found that the countries (U.K. and Sweden) with the most specific tax breaks, and the greatest variation in rates between industries and forms of capital (called "rate dispersion") also had the LOWEST capital growth.

Britain's "coefficient of rate variation" was a huge 2,315, while West Germany's was the least at 111, and the U.S. was next best with 141. Fullerton made no attempt to infer direct "causation" from this astonishing finding, but it is clear that the two countries, U.S. and Germany, which had, until 1981, been the least generous in passing out specific and variable corporate tax breaks, had the BEST economic performance, while the one that had pursued "industrial policy" most with its tax breaks had the WORST.

So while he admits that Reagan's tax reform would raise the overall effective corporate tax rate from 31 percent to 34, the fact that it would cut the "rate dispersion" in half means that "capital will tend to allocate itself to the most productive uses instead of to the most lucrative tax breaks.

Fullerton's research confounds all those corporate economists who have contended you get "more bang for the buck," by corporate tax breaks instead of individual income tax rate reductions - and has given a big lift to the Reagan tax reform proposal.

The trials of Rock Hudson

Rock Hudson had many long days before these last longest ones. From the periphery of his private world, I'm going to tell you a little more

The rich and the famous are not larger than life-size; they are our size

However, a good actor or actress - capable of seeing, feeling and portraying a number of lives from the inside out - inevitably is more than ordinarily sensitive. And that makes hurts hurt

And if, in their private lives, some closeted skeleton is eating away at them.

And if they must be constantly on guard, protecting their public image from their private preferences - that can be physically devastating. So one must become too callous to care - or pay with relentless stress for caring too much.

As for Rock Hudson.

The gay life is not. It should not matter what he is, but I guess now it does. Too many people who should be at that lonely bedside are not - one in particular. And he knows

I do not know Rock Hudson personally, but I would be proud to.

The actor's pilgrimage to Paris. His frustration there and his return here must be pieced together from a smattering of handouts from paid publicists and sparse, cautious, clinical utterances of intimidated hospital spokespersons.

It speaks with angry eloquence: "Let's try Paris - we hear encouraging things from the Pasteur Institute there.

'So American Hospital, Paris, is unwilling to do anything beyond more testing...get me to that military hospital where they are willing to experiment.

'What do you mean, the doctor agress and the Defense Ministry is unwilling. 'No more evasiveness. I can't take more evasiveness

"Now the last-hope doctor is unwilling, says I am too weak to tolerate the new drugs.

"Take me home, please. Just take me home. It's a long ride home. Now between fitful rest some impersonal somebody is saying that "new experimental drugs are about to be released for testing by our own government.

Again you hear the word "promising. And somebody is saying that your suffering is accelerating worldwide search for a cure...and again you hear the phrase, "It will take time."

Now, in your total aloneness, you try to remember the good days - then you try not to. For no memory of having starred makes up for later disregard - nor keeps the end from being hard. (c) 1985, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Keeping a close watch on the right

By William A. Rusher

Group Research Inc. is a liberal Washington outfit that keeps tabs on the conservative movement and the more extreme right. From time to time it publishes a newsletter called Group Research Report, summarizing the activities of various conservative organizations and individuals, presumably for the benefit of other liberals concerned about their evil antics. I enjoy reading the Report myself, however, just for the encouragement it gives me. Without it, I would never suspect how well we're doing. Usually, the Report maintains a fairly clinical tone, skipping unnecessary editorializing and letting the grim news of conservative progress speak for itself. Thus, a recent issue discusses John A. Svahn, who has been President Reagan's chief advisor on domestic policy since the middle of 1983. "What is not generally known," the Report adds darkly, "is that Svahn was, in the '70s, the staff director of the American Conservative Union's task force on welfare reform.

We scarcely have time to digest the ominous implications of that piece of intelligence before being advised, a little further on, that Secretary of Education William Bennett recently appointed, as one of his own special assistants, "William Kristol, a neoconservative like his father, Irving." And horror piling on horror - that 'Grover Rees, a former leader in Young Americans for Freedom and similar groups and assistant to several conservative congressmen, is the new deputy assistant attorney general for selecting judges." By the time we learn that "Marshall Breger, the White House liaison with Jewish groups, went there from the rightwing Heritage Foundation," the reader is ready for a swig of either hem-lock or champagne, depending on his politics.

I confess, though, to being somewhat mystified by another bit of news in the same issue: "A small conservative think-tank, the Institute for Human Studies at Menlo Park, Calif., conducts a program for writing "Op-Ed articles" - i.e., those signed opinion pieces that many newspapers these days run on the page opposite the editorial page. Well, OK, now we know about this little institute and its scheme for getting conservative opinions on Op-Ed pages. But the Report then adds, "Here are the newspapers which have carried them" - and proceeds to list 50 of them, ranging from the London Daily Telegraph to the Anchorage Times Now, what is being suggested here? I don't know anything about the Insti-tute for Human Studies or its "conservative" views, but in the absence of any pejorative adjectives in the Report we are entitled to assume that there is nothing extreme about the institute or the opinions it has managed to propagate in those 50 papers. And if the Report's point was simply to highlight the ingenuity or success of the little institute's program, surely it would be enough just to mention the number of newspapers that have carried Op-Ed pieces generated by it.

But instead, all 50 newspapers are named in a list that is splashed over an entire half of one of the Report's four pages. That suggests that what the Report really wants to do is put a little heat on the papers in question - or, in other words, exercise a bit of amateur censorship. Why else bother to tell readers all over the country that the Colorado Springs Gazette-Telegraph has carried one or more of the institute's articles?

Education, research are keys to prevention, cure of AIDS By Abigail Van Buren

no interest in AIDS, what it is, how people get it, how widespread it is, and how to protect yourself from becoming a victim, skip this column. In an effort to get the facts, I consulted Dr. Michael Gottleib, the eminent UCLA immunologist who discovered the AIDS syndrome in 1981. The information in this column was confirmed by an information officer at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

What is AIDS? It is the name for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, a virus that attacks and destroys the immune system, leaving its victims vulnerable to infections and innumerable diseases, including types of cancer. How widespread is AIDS? The epidemic is almost worldwide. Since 1981, over 12,000 cases have been diagnosed in the United States alone, of which nearly half have died from it. It is epidemic in Central Africa and Haiti, and has also spread to Europe and Australia. It is estimated that 500,000 to 1 million people have already been exposed to the virus. All individuals exposed do not necessarily succumb to AIDS, but they do have an increased risk of developing it. There can be an incubation period of several years between exposure to the virus and the development of AIDS, but the exact period of time is not known. How is AIDS transmitted? The most significant route is by anal sex, oral sex and "old-fashioned" sexual intercourse with a person who has been infected by the AIDS virus. While most cases have occurred among homosexual or bisexual men who have had multiple partners, AIDS is not exclusively a homosexual disease. An increasing number of cases is being found among heterosexual (straight) men and women. All sexually active men and women, gay or straight, should be concerned.

shared contaminated needles through blood products given to hemophiliacs and other recipients of blood. Some good news: Transmission through blood is expected to decrease since the screening of blood donors to detect the AIDS virus began in early 1985.

How AIDS is not spread: There is absolutely no evidence that

DEAR READERS: If you have AIDS is spread by casual contact with infected individuals. It cannot be spread by sharing towels, food or eating utentils with a person who has AIDS. Neither can it be spread by touching, hugging or body contact other than sexual intimacy.

What can be done about AIDS? A massive national program of public education as well as continuing research for a vaccine is now under way.

All sexually active people should avoid sex with multiple partners. They should also avoid contact with semen. (Condoms, for example, may offer some

It is important for all of us in the human family to show compassion and understanding to the victims of AIDS. They should not be avoided or ignored. I repeat, AIDS cannot be "caught" by touching or contact other than sexual. And although about 70 percent of the AIDS victims are homosexual men, it is not strictly a homosexual disease.

AIDS victims should be visited by their friends and relatives. There is no danger to anyone who visits or cares for a person who has AIDS. I repeat, AIDS is transmitted by sexual interaction with a person who has it. Hugging, caressing, holding, shaking hands with or being in close contact with a victim will not put one at risk of being contaminated.

Don't assume that every person who has AIDS is sexually promiscuous. One contact (even years ago) with someone who had it is sufficient to infect a person. A wife can get it innocently from a bisexual husband who had been infected years ago by an AIDS victim.

How can one obtain more information about AIDS? A national hotline with an informative recording can be reached by calling (800) 342-AIDS. Many cities have a local AIDS information hotline. Your telephone operator can advise you.

Now, you know as much about The virus is also spread by AIDS as I. And if you know someone who can use this inamong drug abusers. Also formation, please pass it along.

QUIET!

There was a time when Jesus was with His disciples on the Sea of Galilee. A sudden storm threatened to swamp the boat in which they were sailing. Fearful for their lives, the disciples woke Jesus. The Savior spoke to the wind and said to the waves, "Quiet! Be still!

When sudden and terrifying storms arise in our lives, this same Jesus who had the power to control the forces of the universe can calm our lives too.

The Hebrew writer said of Jesus, "For we do not have a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but we have one who has been tempted in every way, just as we areyet without sin."

Tap into the Master's strength and hear him say to you, "Quiet. Be still."

Black South African soldier stoned to death

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Mourners at the funeral of a prominent apartheid foe attacked a truck carrying soldiers of a black homeland, and one of the soldiers died in a hail of stones as he tried to run.

In a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview Sunday, Winnie Mandela said her husband, jailed black leader Nelson Mandela, almost certainly would resume leadership of the outlawed African National Congress and press his fight to end apartheid if he were freed.

President P.W. Botha has offered Mandela and other ANC prisoners freedom if they renounced violence. Mandela refused, but on Saturday the foreign minister, R.F. Botha, said some members of the Cabinet think Mandela should be set free.

The South African Press Association said an Indian school was burned Sunday in Chatsworth, near Durban. It did not say who was to blame, but National police headquarters said Indians set fire to 10 houses and a bus, and shot and wounded a black man in KwaMashu township in retaliation.

Hospitals and police in Durban reported 12 deaths. late Saturday and Sunday, bringing to 65 the number of blacks officially listed as killed since Wednesday in violence against apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation. About 600 have been injured.

The soldier's death Sunday occurred after services for civil rights leader Nonyamezelo Mxenge in the black township of Rayi, a Ciskei community four miles from King William's Town. Mrs. Mxenge, 43, Durban, was killed Aug. 1. She was a defense lawyer in the treason trial of 16 members of the United Democratic Front, South Africa's major anti-apartheid organization. Many blacks blame her death on pro-government death squads, which the government says do not exist.

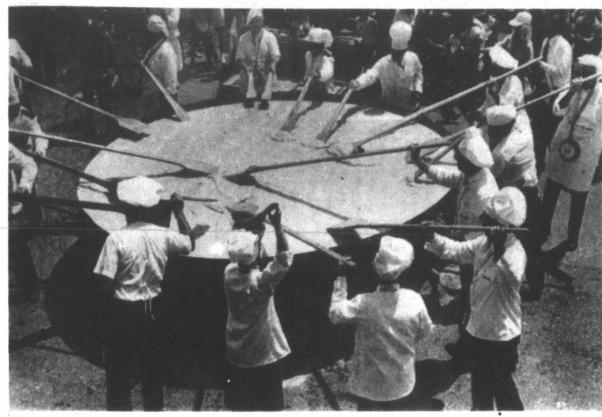

"If we have to shoot to get our liberation, we are going to shoot," militant Steve Tshwete told 10,000 mourners at the funeral on a field, near flags of the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla

As mourners began walking to a cemetery a half-mile away, a truck carrying three black soldiers approached, apparently en route to another destination. The crowd stoned the truck, breaking the windows.

A soldier jumped out and tried to run away, but died as stones rained down on him. Youths piled branches over his body and burned it, pushing back reporters and yelling, "No photographs!"

The other soldiers, armed with automatic rifles, drove to safety. The soldiers belonged to the forces of Ciskei, a tribal homeland declared independent by South Africa but not recognized by the rest of the world

More than 500 people — almost all blacks — have been killed in 11 months of racial strife. More than half were killed in battles with police, and the others died in assaults on blacks seen as collaborators with the government, or in fights between anti-apartheid groups.

Downed Delta plane's pilot wasn't given weather report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Transportation Safety Board is still trying to determine why air traffic controllers did not relay a fresh weather forecast to the pilot of a Delta Air Lines plane that crashed in Dallas on Aug. 2.

The jumbo jet, carrying 163 people, crashed during a heavy thunderstorm, killing 132 passengers and one person on the ground.

Safety board member Patrick Bursley, who is heading the probe, said weather "is very much involved in the accident," but investigators still had not determined whether the phenomonon of wind shear was a factor in the crash. "We're certainly exploring it," he said.

"There is an indication of a weather forecast being delivered to the controllers some 10 minutes before the accident, and that was not passed along," said Bursley, who appeared Sunday on the CBS show, "Face the Nation."

"We are looking into whether it was required to be passed, and what the implications of that might have been."

"It appears that both controllers involved and the pilots involved in this accident were not concerned about the immediate conditions," he added.

NTSB investigators at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport said last week that tower controllers were advised about 15 minutes before the crash that cumulo nimbus clouds had formed north of the airport. Such clouds often are associated with thunderstorms which could contain violent wind shears.

The latest weather forecast the pilot had received before the crash was an hour old, the investigators

The controllers did describe actual weather conditions at the north end of the airport, where they told the crew of a shower with variable winds The pilot responded that he was "out here in the rain. Feels good." Moments later, the plane crashed.

Federal Aviation Administrator Donald Engen, also appearing on "Face the Nation," said the nation's air traffic control system is safe even though there are more flights and fewer experienced controllers monitoring takeoffs and landings.

Engen acknowledged that fewer air controllers are handling a record number of flights. But "we have every controller we need at this time. If I had more controllers today, I literally couldn't use them."

Most crash survivors ride in rear

DALLAS (AP) — People seated in the rear of an airplane may have a greater chance of surviving a crash, according to National Transportation Safety Board reports on the worst airline crashes since 1970, The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story. According to a study by The News, the forward sections of News, the forward sections of downed jets generally have suffered more extensive destruction than the rear sections. And in most crashes, the majority of survivors have been sitting toward the rear, the newspaper said in today's editions.

said in today's editions.

In the Delta Air Lines jet crash Aug. 2, no one seated in front of Row 29 lived, the NTSB report said. The L-1011 jumbo jet crashed on final approach to the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport killing 132 people on board and one person on the ground. Thirty-one people survived the crash.

The News' study was based on NTSB reports on the 16 worst airline crashes during the past 15 years in which some passengers and crew members survived.

The reports indicated that in nine of the crashes, the majority of survivors were sitting toward the rear, the News said. In only three of the crashes were the majority of fatalities sitting in the back of the plane, the study said.

The newspaper said that the reports also revealed another pattern: In the majority of the crashes, the initial impact did not kill most of the victims. More passengers died after collapsing cabin furnishings and debris prevented or delayed escape from a burning or sinking jet, the News said.

But researchers who conducted a test crash last year disagree with, the theory that rear seating is safest.

In a Congress-approved test crash program last December, a 24-year-old Boeing 720 clocked at 170 mph plunged into the Mojave Desert. The jet's 73 passenger seats were occupied by

Impact-measuring devices hidden in the floor and fuselage of the four-engine jet and in 13 of the 73 mannequins, provided researchers with information that will be included in a report to be published next spring.

Although conclusions drawn from the crash have not been revealed, researchers apparently haven't decided that the safest seats on a doomed aircraft are in the rear, the News said.

"I don't think you'll see that in our report," said John E. Reed, program manager.

Another unnamed program official was quoted as saying, "That theory is hogwash."

NTSB officials said the agency has never conducted a study of the role that seat placement plays in crash survivability.

"We don't have a statistical data base, and until we do, we can't make any analyses or any conclusions," said NTSB spokesman Bob Buckhorn.

But the Federal Aviation Administration requires airlines to store flight voice and data recorders "as far aft as possible."

"Most of them are placed in the tail," FAA spokesman John Leyden said. "I guess they figure that's where they would be the safest from damage."

Another FAA official said that pictures of airplane crashes show the tail section to be the largest intact piece.

"It seems logical in most crashes that the front goes in (to the ground) first," said Gus Sarkos, manager of the FAA's fire safety office. "But it is only a common-sense thing."

However, John Galipault, founder of the Aviation Safety Institute of Ohio called it folly to worry about seat selection.

"An airplane is just not meant to stay in one piece when it strikes the ground," he said. "Our argument is that we had better do more about making sure it doesn't strike the ground in the first place."

Galipault and others believe that seat selection is unimportant because fire can spread to any section of an aircraft's cabin.

Both got easy birdies and Trevino's attempt to seize the momentum had been doused. A heavy putter weighed Trevino down on the back nine, and Green emerged with his second major golf title, capturing the 67th PGA Championship Sunday by two strokes

Green closed with a steady 1-over-par 72 for a total of 6-under 278 and pocketed $125,000.

'That was a very important shot," Green said. "When you play with The Mex and he gets hot, you've got to do something to dampen his coals quick. If he gets away from you, he'll run and hide and you won't catch him.

Trevino, the defending champion who began the final round three shots behind Green, drew into a tie after getting an eagle on the fifth

Playing in the same group, they dueled neck-and-neck until Trevino three-putted for the fourth time, at the 15th hole, giving Green a 1-shot lead he never relinquished.

Trevino's final bid for consecutive PGA titles and a seventh major ended at the par-5 17th, where he drove into the rough, was unable to get his second shot out of the deep rass, pitched over the green, chipped back and two-putted for bogey, giving Green a 2-shot edge heading into the final

"I didn't feel very comfortable with the putter today," said Trevino, 45. "The greens here got a little fast for me. I use a heavy putter, and it doesn't have a good history on fast greens. I found myself getting very defensive with the putter.

Last year, Green reached a low point, finishing 135th on the earnings list.

"It's nice to go in the locker room again and have guys pat you on the back," he said.

Trevino, with a final round of even-par 71, was at 280 and earned $75,000 for second place. Andy Bean, who finished with a 68, and Tze-Ming Chen, older brother of U.S. Open contender Tze-Chung Chen, tied for third at 281. Chen had the day's best round of 65.

Another shot back at 282 was South African Nick Price. At 283 were Tom Watson, Fred Couples, Corey Pavin and Buddy Gardner.

The victory, the 19th of his career, earned Green a spot on this year's Ryder Cup team. It also gave him $2,023,240 in career earnings, making him the 10th player in history to reach $2

Cowboy rookie crop looks good

By DENNE H. FREEMAN AP Sports Writer

IRVING - The 1985 rookie crop of the Dallas Cowboys is shaping up as one of their best since the famed "Dirty Dozen" Super Bowl bunch of 1975.

Rookie heroes were abundant in Saturday night's 27-3 National Football League preseason thrashing of the Green Bay Packers.

Linebacker Jesse Penn, a second round choice from Virginia Tech and running back Robert Lavette, a fourth round selection from Georgia Tech, each scored a

Defensive tackle Kevin Brooks, the first round pick from Michigan, had two sacks and Leon (Speedy) Gonzalez, an eighth round wide receiver from Bethune Cookman, made two spectacular receptions

"It was great to see the young guys out there making plays like that," said All-Pro defensive tackle Randy White. "They made some big plays and that's always a

Penn returned an intercepted pass 77 yards for a fourth period touchdown and Lavette dashed seven yards for another in the same period

"It was one of the best rookie nights we've had" said

Lavette, a fourth-round pick, averaged 6.2 yards per carry on 8 runs for 50 yards in holdout Tony Dorsett's spot. Ron Springs also had a productive night in his first start at tailback, gaining 47 yards on 7 carries.
"People chased me all the way into the end zone and I couldn't figure it out," said Penn. "Than I realized it was my own players. All the way down the field I just thought about running faster because the sooner I got there the sooner I could stop. It was hot.

Temperatures were 95 degrees at kickoff and over 100 degrees on the field.

Landry said he knew Penn was fast, but not that fast. "I was really surprised at his speed," said Landry. "It was amazing.

Penn said "I've always had speed, I've just never had to use it before. All I wanted to do was get to the bench. I was tired. Landry said Lavette was impressive.

"Lavette is a game player," said Landry. "He doesn't look good in practice. He's quick and he has shown some real good qualities "He was the same way at Tech. He had a fantastic record there and you can tell why when you see him." Brooks said he was very happy to produce after a slow start in training camp.

"I knew I needed to work on my pass rush and that work has paid off," Brooks said. "That first sack was the biggest high of my life. I didn't know how to react." Gonzalez graded his night as "pretty good."

"It was my first game and I think I did some of the things I needed to do," Gonzalez said. "I'm just glad to get that first game over.

The game may have marked the debut and end of Bill Bates punt return career. He was knocked out returning a punt in the second half.

'Bates was very fortunate,' said Landry. "He could have really been hurt. Sometimes a collision like that is the best teacher. He won't go into those big guys like that

The Cowboys returned to Thousand Oaks Sunday and their next game will be Saturday night in San Diego against the Chargers.

'It was a good start," said Landry. "We've been having a good camp after a good rookie camp. There was a lot of things that were good that happened to the rookies. I think we played well for an opener.'

Verplank still hot

ABILENE, Texas (AP) - Scott Verplank, the amateur who won the Western Open last week, fired the best competitive round of his life Sunday — a nine-under-par 63 - to rally from four shots off the pace and capture the LaJet-Pelz National Amateur for the fourth straight year.

The Oklahoma State golfer finished with a 14-under-par 274, two shots ahead of third-round leader Brian Nelson, a University of Texas golfer who had a closing Doug Thompson was third, one stroke behind Nelson at 277, after posting his second consecutive 68.

"He could have easily have shot a 59," said Nelson, who watched Verplank from virtually every fairway as he played in the final group of the day.

Verplank will play for the U.S. Walker Cup team this week before defending his U.S. Amateur title the following week.

Verplank parred his first four holes before he birdied the fifth hole. After missing a short birdie putt on No. 6, Verplank birdied the next four holes to take a lead he never relinquished.

Verplank made a run on the course record of 61, set by PGA tour veteran John Mahaffey in the pro-am of the 1982 LaJet Classic. However, a missed birdie putt on 16 and a missed eagle putt on the final hole left him with a 63.

Thompson sank a 15-foot uphill birdie putt on the 16th hole to cut Verplank's lead to one shot.

But Verplank quickly moved two shots up again on No. 17 when he sank a 15-foot birdie putt while Thompson was missing a birdie putt of approximately the same

"I think that may have taken some of the steam out of Doug,' said Verplank. "He still had a chance going into 18, (a par 5 that most of the players were able to reach in two shots), but I had a two-shot lead.

However, Thompson hit his drive out of bounds on 18 and had to sink a 15-foot putt to save par. Verplank safely reached the green in two and two-putted from 18 feet for a birdie. His first attempt ended a couple of feet short of the hole.

"It probably wasn't my worst putt of the day," said Verplank. "If anybody saw me on the first four holes, they wouldn't have thought I was putting very well. On Thursday, I had a chance for a 63. but I jacked it three times (three-putted). I really wanted that putt. It's the lowest round I've ever had in competition.'

On Saturday, after an even-par round, Verplank had downplayed his chances of overtaking Nelson or

Lopez winner by record margin

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) -Nancy Lopez used her record-setting victory in the Henredon Classic to become the LPGA's leading money winner this season, something she thought might not happen after Alice Miller's fast start. "She was just so far ahead of everybody, I just didn't think I could catch up with her," said Lopez, who posted a 20-under-par 268 to take a 10-shot victory over Val Skinner and shatter the LPGA mark. "Being able to go ahead this week and be where I am now is real exciting for me.

Miller rushed off to four victories before the midway point of the 1985 season.

While her season has tailed off. Lopez has begun to soar. Her 268 total at the Willow Creek Golf Club was three shots better than the mark set by Hollis Stacy in the Rail Charity Classic in 1977.

It was also Lopez's 33rd career triumph and leaves her two shy of the number necessary to qualify

Mike Rozier lone Oiler bright spot

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Coach John Robinson of the Los Angeles Rams found his first National Football League preseason victory of the summer proved his team still needed a lot of polishing.

"It struck me that we need a lot of work," Robinson said after the Rams defeated the Houston Oilers 7-3 in their preseason opener Saturday night. "We have a ways to go to get ready for the regular season, but we knew that."

Running back Barry Redden, filling in for holdout Eric Dickerson, scored a third-quarter touchdown and ran for 94 yards on 17 carries to lead the Rams. "I'm not going to spend my time comparing Barry Redden with Eric Dickerson," Robinson said. "We all know Eric is a great running back. I think Barry Redden established himself as a running back tonight.

Houston, which could only muster a fourth-quarter field goal by Joe Cooper, had a lot of problems with its offense. "Basically, we executed poorly," said quarterback Warren Moon, who completed 8 of 15 passes for 105 yards. "We had some big plays called back by penalties and that hurt us. The Oilers, now 0-2 in preseason play, could only come up with 205 yards in total offense, but Coach Hugh Campbell did find one bright note - running back Mike Rozier.

Rozier, signed this summer as a free agent after two years in the United States Football League, gained 21 yards on his first carry and also caught three passes for 19

"He's a good talent," said Campbell of Rozier. "In the end, he's going to be a big player for Rozier said he's beginning to feel comfortable with his new team. "I think I played better than last week," he said. "My transition is coming along real well. The first few weeks were tough but things are starting to smooth themselves out now.

Campbell said Rozier has had a lot to overcome in adjusting to the Oilers

"He's had four offenses in the last three years to learn and master and know what everybody wants," Campbell said. "I think if he had two in three years, he could deal with that, but he's had a lot of things go through his head and I think he's doing really well.

The Rams, who traded Vince Ferragamo during the offseason, went with Dieter Brock as their quarterback for the first time. Brock was signed as a free agent last spring after 11 years in the Canadian Football League.

Brock completed 5 of 12 passes for 49 yards before being replaced in the second quarter.

"I thought Dieter Brock did a good job playing early," said Campbell. "In the details you have to execute to play quarterback, I think he played very well."

Brock said he was not nervous in his first game.

"I was mostly nervous during the day," said the quarterback, "but once I got on the field I felt OK. Overall, I knew what was going on. Some of the defenses confused me

The Rams also got a good performance from running back Charles White, the former Cleveland Brown signed as a free agent during the offseason. White gained 79 yards on 16 carries

"It's been a while for me running the football," said White, a Heisman trophy winner at Southern Cal. "It seems that at Cleveland I got to touch the ball once every blue moon.

First AL wins bit different

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

Joel Davis and John Candelaria have won their first American League games . . . but that's where the similarity ends. Davis, a 20-year-old right-hander making his major-league debut, held Milwaukee to five hits and one run in seven innings, striking out six, as the Chicago White Sox ended the Brewers' winning streak

Meanwhile, Candelaria hurled five scoreless innings in his second AL appearance, scattering five hits, as the California Angels pounded the Minnesota Twins 12-0. However, the 31-year-old lefty, a 10-year veteran, won 124 games with Pittsburgh in the National League before the Angels acquired him on Aug. 2.

Davis, who had lost five straight games with Buffalo in the American Association, said he was stunned when the White Sox called him up on Saturday. "I had five losses in a row," he said, "but I just want to thank God that I was able to go on the field and do what I did today.''

In other AL action, Toronto turned back Kansas City 5-3 in 10 innings, New York downed Boston 5-3, Seattle beat Oakland 9-6. Cleveland trimmed Detroit 7-2 and Baltimore trounced Texas 9-4. Angels 12, Twins 0

Candelaria, who was made into a short reliever by the Pirates this season, is happy to be back as a starter - and also back in a winning situation.

"I feel I never should have been taken out of the starting rotation," he said.

Candelaria and Stu Cliburn combined on a seven-hitter and the Angels supported them with 16 hits off John Butcher and three relievers. Brian Downing and Dick Schofield each had three RBI as California opened a 31/2-game lead over Kansas City, four over Oakland.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 3 Al Oliver and Garth Iorg hit 10th-inning home runs off Joe Beckwith as Toronto ended a two-game skid and snapped Kansas City's four-game winning streak. George Brett of the Royals homered in the eighth to tie the game 3-3. Hal McRae singled and pinch runner Lynn Jones was cut down at the plate for the third out of the inning after Steve Balboni Shortstop Tony Fernandez, whose strong relay nailed Jones, keyed the Toronto attack with a game-tying two-run double in the fifth and a triple in the seventh.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 3 Ron Guidry became the AL's first 15-game winner with help from two relievers as the Yankees completed a three-game sweep in Boston and stretched their winning streak to six games. Guidry, who has lost only four times and has won 14 of his last 15 decisions, allowed seven hits and three runs - two of them unearned - in 7 1-3 innings.

The Yankees scored two runs in the sixth and two more in the seventh off Steve Crawford. Ken Griffey and Don Mattingly each had a double and two singles. Mariners 9, A's 6

Dave Henderson and Al Cowens each drove in two runs in an eight-run third inning as Seattle overcame a 6-0 deficit and snapped Oakland's five-game winning streak and their own five-game losing streak.

Rookie Billy Swift allowed all six Oakland runs and six hits in the first inning but held the A's to three more hits over the next seven in snapping a personal five-game losing streak.

Indians 7, Tigers 2 Neal Heaton scattered 11 hits for his first victory since July 8 and struck out a career-high 10. Loser Randy O'Neal, 5-5, was tagged for four runs in 5 2-3 innings.

Heaton's fielding error helped the Tigers take a 1-0 lead in the first inning. But Cleveland tied the game in the second on a sacrifice fly by George Vukovich and took a 2-1 lead in the third on Julio Franco's RBI single. The Indians made it 4-1 in the sixth on Tony Bernazard's sacrifice fly and a single by Mike Hargrove. They scored in the seventh on a wild pitch by Doug Bair and added two runs in the eighth on Joe Carter's RBI double and Chris Bando's single

Orioles 9, Rangers 4

Mike Young slammed a three-run homer among his three hits, while Sammy Stewart allowed two hits over the final 4 1-3 innings in relief of starter Dennis Martinez. With Baltimore ahead 6-4. Young hit his 15th homer of the season off Dave Stewart in the Pitcher Cecilo Guante threw the pitch he wanted and got Andre Dawson to strike out. Later in the game, it was Dawson's turn, and he got the pitch he wanted

"I just wanted to get one more shot at him," Dawson said after slugging a three-run, ninth-inning home run to propel the Montreal Expos to a 6-5 National League victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Sunday

"I was hoping he would try and come in on me," Dawson said. "To my fortune, he did come in with the pitch I wanted.

Dawson, who had two home runs in Saturday's victory over the struggling Pirates, now has 14 homers this season.

first-place Mets in the East race. Virgil opened the fourth inning with his 15th home run of the season. An inning later, Schmidt connected for his 19th homer.

Dodgers 4, Reds 0

Jerry Reuss pitched a six-hitter and Enos Cabell drove in two runs and scored another as Los Angeles blanked Cincinnati. The victory gives the Dodgers a seven-game lead over the Reds and the San Diego Padres in the NL West.

For Reuss, 10-7, it was his third shutout of the year and the 37th of his career as he faced only 31 batters.

It was the host Dodgers' 17th shutout of the season.

Schroeder smile removes doubts about operation

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Seeing the smile on William Schroeder's face as he visited with his grandchildren made the strain of the ups and downs since he became the world's second mechanical heart recipient "all worth it," his son said at a homecoming celebration.

Schroeder, 53, the longest-living recipient of a mechanical heart and the first to live outside the hospital, took the quarter-mile ride to the specially equipped apartment Sunday in his van, "The Heart & Spirit of Jasper," named for his Indiana

He visited with family members Sunday during the first day of his return to life outside Humana Hospital Audubon, where the device was implanted

'To see him just get a smile on his face and to get to see the grandkids, it's all worth it," Schroeder's son, Stan, said of the latest turn in his father's up-and-down path to recovery

Schroeder spent a restless night before leaving the hospital, according to his son, the father of 5-month-old Lucas William. "He was kind of itchy about getting going.

The patient returned to the transitional apartment on his 260th day with the device. He and his wife, Margaret, had resided in the same apartment for a month before he suffered a stroke on May 6, and she had lived there during his latest hospital stay.

Schroeder's surgeon, Dr. William DeVries, who has implanted four of the world's five permanent artificial hearts, watched from inside the hospital's main entrance as his patient was helped into the Schroeder waved at about 30 reporters from a terrace behind the apartment and, when asked if it was good to be getting out of the hospital again, said only: "Yeah. Doctors expect to visit Schroeder every day or two, to check on the patient and collect information for research purposes, hospital spokeswoman Donna Hazle said.

Speech therapy and physical and occupational rehabilitation, which involves shaving himself and brushing his teeth, are to continue for Schroeder, Hazle said. He will return to the hospital once or twice a week for walks because of the limited area available at the apartment, she said.

A system linked to the apartment would call an ambulance in case of an emergency, and nurses will be in the Schroeder's apartment or in the building at all times, Hazle said.

Sunday's move came a week after Schroeder made a one-day trip to Jasper, about two hours from Louisville, where he led a festival parade in his van. He also has taken short trips around the Louisville area in recent weeks, including visits to a fishing lake, a picnic and a minor league baseball game.

"I think we'll have to go through some trial periods of going back and forth and seeing how he does on a few outings," Stan Schroeder said of the possibility of his father's permanent return to

He said he still saw the visit to his hometown as his father's high point since receiving the heart, even when compared to his release from the hospital. "That's what it was all about. ... That's what he was working for all the time.

Crime fighting funds (G) Subtract 1984 M&O taxes used to regain lost 1983 levy (Data 14) short, report claims

WASHINGTON (AP) -Police, prisons and courts were given less than 3 cents of every federal, state and local dollar in 1982, suggesting the justice system gets short-shrift treatment in America's budget priorities, a new government report says.

Out of a combined federal, state and local spending total of $1.2 trillion in fiscal 1982, $18.6 billion went for police services. That translates to only 11/2 cents of every federal, state and local dollar

Only 2.8 cents of every 1982 federal, state and local dollar — or $34.7 billion — was spent on the overall criminal and civil justice system

Besides the roughly 11/2 cents out of every dollar spent for police services, seven-tenths of a cent went to prisons and jails and six-tenths of a penny was used for the operation of civil and criminal courts.

The report released Sunday by the Bureau of Justice Statistics furnished fresh evidence that America's criminal justice system ranks near the bottom of the ladder in governmental spending priorities, eclipsing only space research and technology.

"This is considerably less than we spend in many other areas," said Steven R. Schlesinger, director of the bureau. "We spend more than twice as much on housing and the environment, more than four times as much on education and more than five times as much on national defense.

Among other findings were these:

-From 1980 to 1982, even though spending on criminal and civil justice systems lagged behind other programs, 3 Personal expenditures for police protection did rise by 23

spending went up by 30 percent. —Close to 1.3 million people were employed in the nation's criminal justice system in 1982, with a total payroll of $2

-Nearly 590,500 of the nation's police and employees of police agencies — or 81.6 percent were working at the local level.

In contrast to the roughly 3 cents per dollar spent on criminal justice programs in 1982, the report said, nearly 22 cents of every federal, state and local dollar went to "social insurance" programs such as Social Security, unemployment insurance compensation, retirement benefits and other so-called "entitlement programs."

Approximately 16.6 cents of every dollar went to national defense and international relations.

BUSINESS REVIEW & FORECAST

COMPARE THEN DECIDE

The folks at Nicky Britten Pontiac, Buick, GMC and Toyota believe you should compare then decide before making your automobile purchase decision. They know you need all the facts and options available in order to make a rational auto purchase that is just right for your needs.

Since November 1983 Nicky Britten and his 25 employees have been helping people in this area make those important decisions for their automobile needs. Britten does business at 833 West Foster. Surrounding his showroom and service department are many shiny new autos and trucks.

The service department is open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and has the complete facilities for any service problem. GM quality service parts are available from the vast inventory maintained at the firm.

Nicky Britten has a complete line of new and used cars, trucks and vans to make your selection easy. The sales department is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. The firm has built a solid reputation for quality and service since 1983 and is constantly finding new ways to serve you better.

If you're interested in leasing, Nicky Britten has just the plan for your particular requirements. They will be happy to explain their leasing plans and provide the necessary information to make things easy for you.

Compare Nicky Britten then decide. You'll know you made the right decision for all your
