Hearing slated on home business ordinance

The Pampa City Commission will hold public hearings at its regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday on proposed ordinances regarding home occupations, zoning changes for the Sanders Park North Addition and guidelines for oil and gas well permits.

The Planning and Zoning Commission has recommended an ordinance to amend the definition and criteria for a home occupation that would restrict the types of home businesses allowed and regulate garage sales.

The action came from a Board of Adjustments decision in which it had allowed a woman to add a structure to her home for a beauty shop operation structure to her home for a beauty shop operation.

Her request for a permit had been turned down by city personnel initially, based on interpretations of the current ordinance. But the board decided the ordinance could be interpreted broadly enough to allow her to expense the business.

allow her to operate the business.

The board members, however, recognized there were problems of interpretation with the current ordinance and recommended it be studied for revision. The zoning commission undertook that review and has recommended amendments that would tighten up the definition of permitted home occupations, in effect severely restricting the types of home businesses in a residential area.

The proposed ordinance defines a home occupation as one "customarily conducted in a private, residential dwelling by a member of the occupying family as an incidental use, which customary occupation is conducted without structural changes" except in very limited situations.

The recommended ordinance says, "An incidental use is such as an artist's studio, musician's studio, and a home office where solicitation is done outside of the home without clients, patients or customers making routine visits to the office."

See related editorial, Page four

Vol. 78, No. 109 3 sections, 38 pages

Under the proposal, the business must not be the primary use of the property but only the secondary and incidental use.

The ordinance states: "The incidental use shall not:

"(1) require the installation of machinery or additional equipment other than that customarily incidental to normal household operations:

(2) require the employment of personnel other than a resident member of the household;

an a resident member of the household; ''(3) assume a commercial or public character;

"(4) involve retail sales;
"(5) constitute a health or safety hazard to the abutting property.

"No advertising signs will be permitted."
The ordinance would specifically exclude a carpentry shop, electrician's shop, plumber's shop, tinner's shop, radio, video and television repair shops, auto repair and painting, furniture repairing and sign painting.

But the ordinance states, "A home occupation shall include a beauty shop or a barber shop with only one operator or barber who is a resident member of the household. The shop must be housed in a building attached to the dwelling by at least eight feet (8') into the roofline of the existing dwelling structure."

State laws permit beauty shops and barber shops in homes as long as they meet required health standards and licensing standards.

The ordinance would permit garage sales only if they are not conducted more than once in each 12-month period and are not conducted for a period exceeding two consecutive days. A permit fee of $5 also must be paid with an application filed with the See HEARINGS, Page three

City, county won't be pinched badly by revenue loss

By PAUL PINKHAM Staff Writer

City and county officials are predicting local taxpayers won't suffer too greatly when federal revenue sharing funds are cut off in 1987, thanks to the way that money has been spent over the years.

The $4.5 billion federal revenue sharing program was the lone domestic spending program Congress agreed to cut in its entirety during recent budget negotiations. It will remain fully funded through next year but will be terminated in 1987, according to U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter (R. Amarillo) of the House Budget Committee. The program has often been criticized for spreading money the federal government does not have among local taxing units.

Since 1970, the City of Pampa has used most of its funds, hovering around $200,000 each year, for water line replacement, although in recent years city officials have turned their attention to streets. City Manager Bob Hart said this year the city is using the bulk of its revenue sharing money to upgrade equipment.

"That's going to show up in long - term productivity gains and that's important," Hart noted. He said about 50 percent of the city's equipment could be considered obsolete and called upgrading equipment one of the city's major short - term problems.

Hart explained the city's past and present policy of using revenue sharing funds "to help overcome some short - term deficiencies" rather than as a "substitute for taxes" will keep taxpayers from feeling too large a pinch as a result of losing federal dollars. Replacing water lines, for example, can usually be recovered through user fees.

rather than tax dollars, he said.
"Pampa, generally, has used the money a little more responsibly than most of the communities I've seen." Hart said. "The city hasn't really been dependent on it."

Nevertheless, Hart indicated the city will not be able to escape feeling some effects from the loss of close to $200,000 in federal funds. Money spent on streets will have to be absorbed somewhere, he said.

"You don't take $200,000 out of a budget without feeling it somewhere," the city manager

Revenue sharing cut may cost Lovett libraries funds

Private gifts may have to fill void

Almost all the private groups now receiving federal revenue sharing money from the county hope to increase private donations when the revenue sharing program is terminated in 1987.

Congress voted to eliminate the program, which spreads federal dollars among local communities, as part of this year's budget resolution. It was the only domestic spending program cut entirely.

Gray County has been using the bulk of its federal revenue sharing funds, averaging about $170,000 each year, for fire and ambulance runs. But a substantial amount, estimated at close to $30,000 this year, has been spread by the county among private and charitable organizations.

"Wherever there's a deficit, we'll just have to fill it in with something else," remarked Ann Loter, director of Meals on Wheels in Pampa. She noted her program is not federally - funded and relies on the community for support, which comes from churches, civic groups, private donations and the United Way.

Since 1983, the county has given $3,000 of federal revenue sharing money to the group. Loter said the money will definitely be missed. She said she is hoping private donations can pick up the slack but wondered, with the economy slowing, whether or not the group can count on increased donations.

"That type of money is hard to replace with one other source,"

she commented.

In basically the same situation are the local chapter of The Salvation Army, which, with $8,500, received the biggest chunk of revenue sharing money in 1984, and the Pampa Community Day Care Center. Barbara Kirkham, director of the day care center, which receives $1,500, said her group will seek increased private donations or additional funding from the

Roberts to study ambulance petition

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

MIAMI — Roberts County Commissioners will study a 200-name petition calling for a locally supported ambulance service Monday at their regular meeting.

Wayne Bright, an employee of Natural Gas Pipeline, began circulating the petition in mid-July after an Amarillo man was apparently electrocuted while working on an annex to the Roberts County Museum. Witnesses to the accident say residents administered cardio-pulmonary resuscitation on the man until an ambulance arrived — 45 minutes later — from Pampa. The man died that afternoon at Coronado Community Hospital.

"And we've had other accidents since then," Bright said, referring to Amarillo truck driver Louis Vidotto, who suffered head injuries while unloading a truck at Bailey Grocery Store in Miami.

Bright's petition asks the Roberts County Commissioners to help provide an ambulance service, equipped with a two-way radio and medical supplies and that there be a paid paramedic on

Bright said Saturday that he has 205 signatures from Miami residents, Roberts Countians and people who work in the county. He said he plans to check back Sunday with people who were undecided about signing the petition.

Since starting the petition drive, Bright has studied other area ambulance services and checked with ambulance companies on how much one would cost.

"They range up to $36,000" he said, estimating that it would take $15,000 "for a good set-up with a good used ambulance."

He also met with members of the Lefors Volunteer Fire Department, who operate a volunteer ambulance service.

"I've talked to the judge and he said the commissioners would be open minded about it." he said.

Wife Starlet Bright said she's encountered only "a handful" of people who would not sign the petition "A majority of the petition signers live in Miami," she said.

Mrs. Bright said there is a possibility of getting the ambulance service funded in part through donations. She added that she knows of several qualified Emergency Medical Technicians in Miami and that school principal Phil Barefield, whose wife Lynette is an EMT, has expressed hopes of incorporating CPR into school health classes.

Barefield confirmed that he has thought about incorporating CPR and that he "definitely" supports efforts to begin an ambulance service.

"It takes a minimum of 25 minutes for an ambulance to get here from Pampa," he said. "If Lefors can support a quality ambulance service, then it's really time for Miami to have one"

The school district contracts with

Pampa Medical Services to provide an ambulance at all home football games. Still. Barefield said, if there is an emergency in Pampa, ambulance service to Miami cannot be guaranteed.

"I am aware of two situations at the school where we had to call an ambulance," he said, adding that they were not major emergencies.

The Barefields were two of 39 people who voiced support of an ambulance service during a multi-question city referendum in December. 189 residents voted against the service. While some respondents commented that such a service was needed, some were concerned about the legal liability and costs of the service.

Barefield cited several incidents in which he felt a local ambulance would have made a difference.

"We had a woman who was critically burned who had to lay on the driveway of a filling station for 30 minutes "vaiting for an ambulance," he noted. "Another time, a woman had a heart attack, but was in stable condition. But rather than wait, we loaded her up in my van and met the ambulance half-way there."

RRC charges ruling undercuts state rights

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission says a federal agency ruling in a Panhandle case would "have the practical effect" of regulating gas production in Texas, which Congress has expressly reserved for the state.

The commission commented Friday in asking the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to reconsider its order that 37 independent Panhandle oil operators illegally sold natural gas from what the commission had classified as oil wells.

The Railroad Commission's motion for a rehearing said the July 12 FERC opinion "creates an unworkable conflict between state regulation of oil and gas production" and the FERC's authority.

The FERC order favored out-of-state natural gas purchasers who said the independents were illegally diverting gas from interstate commerce and federal pricing regulations.

egulations. The Railroad Commission said "findings and definitions" adopted by the FERC would have "the practical effect of regulating completion and production practices in Texas," which has been expressly reserved for the state's jurisdiction.

"For the FERC to rule on what practices constitute compliance with RRC rules is inconsistent with FERC's mandate to leave regulation of production to the states," the commission said.

"It is clearly the intent of Congress that the individual states regulate natural gas production. While the order in this docket purports to apply Texas law and Railroad Commission rules, it actually preempts state examination and resolution of various state regulatory issues 'applying Texas law' to them before the various state regulatory issues, which have only recently been raised, have been resolved by the state."

Appraisal District approves budget lower than last year By CATHY SPAULDING attributes the reduced budget to

Staff Writer

Directors of the Gray County Appraisal District Thursday approved a 1986 budget that is lower than that of 1985.

Chief Appraiser Charles Buzzard

said. But, he added, the city is better off than communities that used the money to supplement their general fund budgets, thereby keeping taxes artificially low for a few years.

Hart said he is grateful to know a year in advance of the plans to eliminate revenue sharing because it will give the city time to initiate several money - saving strategies. The city has already instituted cost - saving measures at the water - wastewater plant and savings are planned in other departments as well, Hart said. In the 1985 - 86 fiscal year, the city is budgeting $145,000 for revenue sharing, he said.

Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy said the impact of the loss of revenue sharing money on county taxpayers "should not be that great." Gray County has spent an average of $165,000 revenue sharing money the past two years and this year plans to spend about $193,000, county budget figures show.

County budget figures for 1984 show the county spent about $143,000 of $170,000 revenue sharing fund expenditures on fire and ambulance runs in Pampa, Lefors, McLean, Groom and Mobeetie. The remaining money was donated to charitable organizations such as libraries. senior citizens groups and the Salvation Army money we receive is use it to pay for the fire runs and ambulance service, principally. That's where the big chunk goes,' Kennedy said. "There's no question that we can and we will absorb these costs (in the general budget). Speaking of the remaining money. Kennedy added: "We basically have spread that money around the community. The impact on the county is not going to be that great.

The judge said the impact on the private groups that now receive money probably will be greater than on the taxpayers. He said he does not think the county has authority to raise taxes for private groups.

Kennedy said the county is lucky it did not receive a large enough amount of revenue sharing money to become dependent on it. He indicated the elimination of the program was anticipated by county officials.

"The general attitude of the commissioners court has been that if doing away with revenue sharing will help the financial position of our federal government, then we're willing to do away with it," he commented. "We haven't always had it, we didn't expect to always have it and now the time has come to give it up. We've tried to use it to help people.

There were reductions in both the district's operating budgets and in the collection budget, which is charged for collecting taxes for the city of Pampa and the Pampa school district. Buzzard explained that in the appraisal district budget. allocations of costs were made according to each taxing unit's proportional amount of the local taxes levied by the taxing units.

The district's operating budget is $339,582 compared to $345,000 for 1985. The collection budget is $86,970, compared to $89,000 for Salaries for 1986 appraisal functions are $182,192. with $31,200 of that going to the chief appraiser and $24,264 going to the administrative assistant. The nine-member staff includes three records clerks, two real estate appraisers a records co-ordinator and a personal property appraiser. A $5,300 salary increase for the staff was included in the budget.

Travel allowances in the operating fund total $11,400, with $3,000 going to the personal property appraiser, $6,000 to the two real estate appraisers and $2,400 to the chief appraiser.

Hearings scheduled

office of the Planning and Zoning of the city for conducting a garage sale.

In another hearing, the commission will hear public comments regarding proposed zoning changes in the Sanders Park North Addition, located east of Duncan and Perryton Parkway and north of existing developments.

The zoning board has recommended the following changes from the present Agriculture District for the area: Single Family 1 for the eastern portion of the development, extending from Dogwood to Cherokee; Single Family 2 for the lots between Beech and Dogwood and for two lots in the southern portion between Duncan and Beech; Multi-Family for a lot between Aspen and Beech and north of 30th Ave.; and Commercial for two lots north of 30th Ave. and between Perryton Parkway and Aspen

The zoning changes and plat for the proposed development drew a number of citizens comments at previous hearings before the zoning commission.

In plat matters, the zoning board accepted the construction of cul-de-sacs - basically dead-end lots which prevent through-traffic - on Aspen, Beech and Chestnut despite staff comments that such cul-de-sacs would be in violation of current city subdivision ordinances.

The staff noted that the ordinance requires streets within designated subdivisions must connect with streets already dedicated in adjacent subdivisions.

Lois Steele at the Genesis House in Pampa, receiving $1.500, said her group anticipated the end of revenue sharing and realizes it means the possibility of trying to raise more local donations

'We've tried very hard to keep our costs down," Steele said.

Also receiving revenue sharing money are Lovett Memorial Libraries in Pampa and McLean. Dan Snider, head librarian at Pampa, said he would like to work with the commissioners court to try to make the library a regular part of its budget.

Currently, he said, the bulk of the library's funding comes from the City of Pampa, supplemented by gifts and endowments. The county donated $3,700 in 1984 and estimated 1985 donations at $6,700, money Snider said was used for a much - needed air conditioning system.

HOUSTON (AP) - A teen-ager convicted of smothering her 8-day-old son was sentenced to 63 years in prison after jurors heard testimony that she laughed and joked about killing the child.

A state district court jury that convicted Leanne Pitts of murder in the April 10 suffocation of her son, Michael Dean Pitts, deliberated almost eight hours over two days before deciding Friday how to punish her.

Ms. Pitts' attorney, Jimmy James, pleaded with jurors to give her a suspended sentence, saying the 19-year-old woman needed the psychiatric help she would not get

You know that she was saying, "I need help.' She delivers a child. She tried to figure ways around the dilemma, but she figured the wrong way," James said.

However, prosecutor Joe Magliolo argued Ms. Pitts; deserved at least 60 years in:

'What kind of person could hold' their hand over a child's mouth while it's kicking and crying until it turns blue?" Magliolo asked.

"This is a beautiful healthy boy. There are poeple in this country who would give their hearts and souls to have this child," he said.

During the four-day trial, jurors heard a tape recording in which Ms. Pitts called a constable's office and told a dispatcher, "I've killed my baby." According to the recording, Ms. Pitts said she held her hand over the baby's nose and mouth until he turned blue.

Psychologist James Ray Hays testified that at the time of the killing, Ms. Pitts suffered a "brief reactive psychosis" produced by stress from her parents and a failed marriage and childbirth. Hays said Ms. Pitts needed to be hospitalized six months to a year.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anorchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Home businesses ordinance wrong

A man's house, they say, is his castle. But that won't be quite true in Pampa if the city commission approves a proposed ordinance amendment following public hearings this week. The city government will become one of the masters of the household.

The ordinance under consideration would increase the city's power to regulate what citizens can and cannot do in the privacy of their own homes, giving it authority to forbid most types of home businesses except barber shops and beauty shops. It would also require that any citizens having a garage sale must first receive permission from the city, which would charge them $5 for that permission.

Why has such an ordinance been proposed?

There are two reasons.

The immediate motive is that the city has had difficulty in interpreting the home occupations section of a city zoning ordinance that has been in effect in the past. The Planning and Zoning Commission has proposed amending the existing ordinance to make sure there's no doubt about what it means.

Beyond that, cities and other government entities routinely pass and enforce ordinances such as this in the expressed belief that they are "protecting" residentially zoned neighborhoods from exposure to some sort of danger, although we've never really understood the exact nature of that danger. We fail to see, for example, how a garage sale threatens the integrity of a neighborhood, even if (heaven forbid) someone decides to have more than one in a year, which would also be prohibited by the ordinance.

Nevertheless, those who support such restrictive laws will tell you they are doing it for "the public good," or "for the benefit of all citizens."

But it is not difficult to shoot holes in that claim.

First of all, how could city officials possibly know if all "the public" objects to some sort of home business next door to where they live? It is not difficult to imagine that some citizens wouldn't mind having a television repair shop next door if their TV set went on the blink during the Super Bowl, and that a neighbor who knows how to fix cars would be a definite asset when the old jalopy won't start on a cold morning.

We could get sarcastic and note that since the ordinance prohibits any business involved in retail sales it would "protect" neighborhoods from such deadly menaces as the Avon Lady, the Mason shoe salesman and the Amway distributor.

We could wonder out loud about the fairness of permitting barber and beauty shops to operate in residential areas, but excluding most other types of businesses.

And we could ask what sort of twisted logic is used to arrive at the conclusion that the city has the right to charge citizens a fee for the privilege of selling their own property?

But the only reason anyone really needs for opposing the ordinance is, simply, that it is wrong. There can be no justification for government regulating activities in private homes in any society that wishes to call itself free.

If this country is to retain any semblance of freedom, what a person does in his own home must not be be subject to the whims of a city government, or any other level of government for that matter.

Each time a government entity passes this kind of restrictive law, another chip is hacked away from the rights of United States citizens to decide what to do with their own property, and all the good intentions and pious platitudes about protecting "the public" won't bring it back.

The Planning and Zoning Commission took the wrong route in its efforts to make the home occupations ordinance understandable. The only way you can do that it to abolish all restrictions on home businesses.

If one resident feels that another person's home business damages his property or his quality of life, he is perfectly free to go to the courts and seek redress. A blanket law that attempts to anticipate and prevent all activities that anyone might find objectional is unwise, unneeded and contradictory to the concept of a free society.

If you believe that old adage about a man's house being his castle; and if you object to government telling you what you can do in your own home, then you might want to attend a public hearing on the proposed ordinance Tuesday night and share your feelings with members of the city commission.

The commissioners, we understand, have not decided whether to accept or reject the proposed ordinance. They would, perhaps, welcome your comments.

We think every citizen who cherishes liberty, even if they don't have a home business or plan to hold a garage sale, should think long and hard before they support such laws, or even decide to remain unconcerned. We should remember that we cannot give government the power to regulate our neighbors' activities without also giving it the power to regulate our own.

Hance running—for sure

I vacationed last week in deep East Texas and visited the election-night watch held in Linden by the congressional campaign of Republican candidate Edd Hargett.

A familiar looking fellow was working his way through the crowded hall, shaking hands and talking with the Hargett supporters. It was former Democratic congressman turned Republican, Kent Hance of Lubbock.

What was he doing in that part of the world?
"Guess," he said as an aide handed out a card asking support for Hance for governor in the Republican primary.

That, I suppose, should dispel any speculation that former governor Bill Clements' entry into the governor's race might cause Hance to change his mind. And, he is saying privately his formal announcement will come in about a month.

I am not sure, though, that Hance can help himself very much in the primary by campaigning in East Texas, at least in Linden, which is my hometown.

Just because several hundred people were at Hargett headquarters that Saturday night doesn't mean that the city or area has several hundred people who will vote in the Republican primary. They were there because a native son was a candidate for Congress. If as many as 30 of them forsake the Democratic Primary when election time rolls around, it would be a major turnout for the GOP.

Hance would probably be a popular candidate in that area in the general election, but the Democratic primaries still draw the voters in East Texas. He is going to have to find support elsewhere if he hopes to beat out Clements and Tom Loffler for the GOR nomination.

However, Hance was being escorted by one of Northeast Texas' wealthiest and staunchiest Republicans—a fellow who has supported Bill Clements in the past. So his trip probably wasn't wasted.

And the fact that Hance was out beating the bushes in a small town in East Texas does indicate that his opponents are going to have to overcome an all-out effort to beat him for the nomination

As for that congressional race between Hargett and Democrat Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs, I doubt that it proved what either political party says it proved.

The GOP claimed that the close outcome (Hargett lost by around 2,000 votes out of over 100,000 cast in an area that has never elected a Republican to anything) proves that the "Republican revolution" has finally reached East Texas, a stronghold of "yellow dog Democrats" ever since the civil war.

Democrats claimed that the victory by Chapman in spite of over $1 million pumped into Hargett's campaign, proves that the area is still unshakably Democratic.

The truth of the matter is somewhere in

That fact that over 50,000 East Texans voted for Hargett may give the Republican Party some respectability in an area where it once had none—where few people have ever supported a Republican in the daylight. But the Chapman victory shows that when the Democrats can get the blacks and elderly to go to the polls, any Republican is going to have a hard time winning.

If there was an issue in the campaign, it was Social Security. Chapman managed to convince a lot of elderly people that since Hargett was a Republican, he favored cuts in Social Security benefits

"If Hargett wins the election, my checks will be stopped," one elderly East Texan told me. Even though such a view is totally illogical, it was enough to put Hargett on the defensive throughout the campaign, forcing him to spend much of his time trying to convince voters he wasn't for Social Security cuts rather than attacking Chapman.

And, unlike most residents of the Panhandle, who generally vote for candidates who promise less government, many people in that area support the congressman likely to get the most government goodies for their district. They have not yet learned that they ultimately pay for these goodies. Money from Washington, many still think, is free.

se ca ca G

Those attitudes reach back to the tenure of former Congressman Wright Patman, who represented the First District for somewhere around 50 years. Many East Texans were convinced that if Patman were ever defeated they would lose their Social Security checks and that Red River Army Depot, a munitions plant that provides employment to hundreds of East Texans, would be closed. Any anytime a constituent wanted something from the federal government, Patman pretty well saw that he got it.

Patman's influence was so pervasive that once when a civics teacher asked his students to name the governor of Texas, many said it was Wright Patman.

Friends laughed when the teacher told them about it.

"It may be funny to you," he said. "But I was almost afraid to mark their answers wrong."

There were maybe 30 of us who put into the river with Hughes for the 100-mile ride through the southern belly of Idaho.

There was a group of Californians, a family from Boston, another family from North Carolina, a former Marine still hungering for adventure from Washington, D.C., who soon became "Rambo III."

We got the word about President Reagan's cancer the morning before we left. But after rounding the first bend of the river and pounding through the first whitewater rapid, after getting soaked in the clear and pure emerald water, concern for matters outside the canyon around us began to dwindle.

"Wonder how the All-Star game came out?" somebody would say at dinner one night.

"Who cares?" was the universal reply.
We saw longhorn sheep come down for a drink in Truth about protectionism

Before you decide whether or not you SHOULD buy something, it's always a good idea to know what it's going to cost. And you had better believe the only thing surer than death and taxes is costs.

With the dollar up in international markets, causing Americans to go on a foreign goods buying spree. Congress is developing a protectionist mood. They're constantly talking tariffs, quotas, and even surcharges on imported goods to protect American markets from the likes of Japanese auto makers, Taiwanese textile mills, and Italian shoe manufacturers.

But does protectionism protect Americans in general, or just some Americans at the expense of others?

Let's look at it. When an American buys Italian shoes, is it exploitation? Not hardly, because he could have purchased a domestically produced shoe. The American purchased Italian shoes because HE deemed them the best choice. We haven't seen Japanese or Taiwanese merchants corralling Americans and forcing them to purchase foreign cars and textiles. Obviously, Americans freely chose these goods.

The pressure on Congress to raise the cost, and restrict the presence, of foreign goods doesn't come from irate customers having just driven away from a Honda showroom with a bargain. Yes, you've got it. The pressure comes from hundreds of special-interest groups that go to Congress saying, "Unless you restrict American freedom by raising the cost of WASHINGTON (AP) — Half a century ago, President Franklin D. Roosevelt instructed five trusted aides to find ways to give Americans bent low by the Depression some "security against the hazards and vicissitudes of life.

After barely six months' work, the Committee on Economic Security sent Congress a blueprint to alleviate the misery it found. Seven months later — on Aug. 14, 1935 — Roosevelt signed the Social Security Act into law.

It spawned a panoply of social programs for the young and old alike: unemployment compensation for people without a job; aid to families with dependent children, the bedrock American welfare program; grants for the Public Health Service and programs to safeguard maternal and child health; relief for the blind and other handicapped, and, not least of all, benefits - what most people think of as "Social Security" - for those too old to work.

As it celebrates its golden anniversary, Social Security is the New Deal's most enduring legacy, a monument to the idea that those who are earning a living have an obligation to those who because of age or

It has paid $1.7 trillion to 110 million retirees, disabled workers and their kin. The program takes more than $7 off the top of every $100 that Americans earn and redistributes the proceeds — more than $15 billion a month — to 37 million of their neighbors.

By itself, Social Security accounts for $1 in every $3 that the federal government raises, and $1 in every $4 that it spends.

AFTER LEADING an almost charmed existence for four decades, back-to-back financial crises in the 1970s and early 1980s shook workers' confidence in the system and made the old worry about whether their checks would still arrive on the third of each month.

The steadily rising payroll tax likely would have sown the seeds of that discontent, even without any talk of insolvency. Now, thanks to the robust economic performance of recent years, the system is back on a sound footing - so sound, in fact, that President Reagan and others eyed its annual cost-of-living increases in the search to narrow the huge deficits in the rest of the federal budget.

Just the talk of cutting Social Security is enough to incite a sizable segment of the public and to send politicians to cover. It has been called the third rail of American politics. Two presidential candidates who 'questioned it - Alf Landon in 1936 and Barry Goldwater in 1964 - paid a price on Election Day. And it has given Reagan, who once talked of making Social Security voluntary, recurrent political fits.

Reagan, in a statement marking the 50th anniversary, called Social Security "one of the most successful and popular programs ever established by the federal government."

With the changes passed in 1983, he said, "the Social Security system's financial soundness has been assured, both in this decade and for many decades to come. Our young people can feel secure in the knowledge that Social Security will be there to assist them in providing for their families just as it has done since the first benefits

WHEN THE COMMITTEE on Economic Security - four members of Roosevelt's Cabinet and his relief czar, Harry Hopkins surveyed the American landscape in 1934-35, they found "insecurity in every stage of life."

Eight million children and 10 million other people subsisted on emergency handouts. Unemployment ranged as high as 25 percent. And in the midst of widespread deprivations, it was doubly tragic to be old, the committee said.

At least a third and possibly half the nation's 7 million elderly had nothing to live on except what family or friends provided.

Only 150,000 to 200,000 drew pensions. One million received public charity. For countless thousands, a lifetime of thrift produced nothing: one bank in five had failed. At age 65, the average man still had 12 years to live and the average woman 15 years. The 'poorhouse'' or the "poor farm" was the grim reality awaiting many at the end of the road.

FDR and his brain trust were not the only ones with dreams and schemes to improve the lot of America's aged.

In 1933, a 66-year-old country doctor from Long Beach, Calif., named Francis E. Townsend became furious at the sight of three

The Pampa Social Security Office will have an open house from 2 to 4 p.m. Wednesday in celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Social Security program.

Refreshments and decorations will be provided by the local staff, who have invited the public to visit the office at 125 S. Gillespie.

The Social Security Act was signed Aug. 14, 1935. Thiry years later, on Dec. 20, 1965, the first Social Security office opened in

The first office was located on the ground floor of the Hughes Building. It had four employees, including Billie Bruner, who is still working in the office.

The Pampa office was one of many that opened in 1965 and 1966 because of the start of Medicare.

The office was moved to 1541 N. Hobart in 1971 and relocated to its present position at 125 S. Gillespie on Dec. 10, 1979.

The local office presently has 10 employees serving the counties of Carson, Collingsworth, Gray, Hemphill, Hutchinson, Lipscomb, Roberts and Wheeler. About 14,400 Social Security beneficiaries and 850 SSI recipients reside in the service area.

elderly women scavenging for food in garbage cans. Townsend, down on his own luck, penned a newspaper article calling for universal pensions of $200 a month — a huge sum — for everyone 60 or older. The messianic doctor and his clubs gained millions of followers and remained a political force into the 1940s.

In 1934, Huey Long, the Louisiana senator, was stumping for his "share the wealth" plan to break up millionaires' fortunes and use the proceeds to guarantee every family a $5,000 homestead, free college education and stipends for the elderly. Roosevelt's White House regarded the Kingfish as a potential rival for the presidency, but Long was cut down by an assassin's bullet in Baton Rouge in r 1935, a few weeks after he filibustered to tie un funds for the fledgling Social Security Board when Germany's "iron chancellor," Otto von Bismarck, proposed the first state-run system of workers' compensation, old-age pensions and other insurance. Bismarck wanted to douse workers' fervor for socialism.

By the mid-1930s, 28 nations had programs to buffer workers against the uncertainties and hardships that attend the loss of a steady income. All but six were in Europe.

For decades Americans had bucked that trend, secure in their belief that the path to prosperity followed the course of rugged individualism and laissez-faire capitalism, not through any state-enforced thrift or, worse yet, a dole. One senator warned that Roosevelt's scheme would "end the progress of a great country and bring its people to the level of the average European.

But the stock market crash of 1929 and the ensuing dislocations of American life — from the soup lines to the Hoovervilles to the bank failures - had strengthened the hand of those who had long sought to erect a social safety net.

The territory of Alaska had enacted the first plan to assist people in their old age in 1915; by the mid-1930s, 28 states had old-age assistance programs. Wisconsin, a laboratory for social reform, enacted the first unemployment insurance program in 1932.

The chairman of the Committee on Economic Security, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, was a veteran of settlement work in the slums of Chicago. She accepted Roosevelt's offer to become the first woman to serve in the U.S. Cabinet, as secretary of labor, only after securing his promise to seek both unemployment compensation and

The final word belonged to the Supreme Court. On May 24, 1937, the high court upheld the constitutionality of the payroll tax (5-4) and the old-age benefits (7-2). Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo put the imprimatur of the judicial branch on the welfare state:

'The hope behind this statute is to save men and women from the rigors of the poorhouse as well as from the haunting fear that such a lot awaits them when journey's end is near ... Only a power that is national can serve the interests of all."

Crop yields above average in southern areas of state

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Above-average yields are reported for grain sorghum, corn and cotton in central, coastal and southern portions of the state as summer reached its halfway mark, says Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The mid-summer temperatures, which often exceed 100 degrees Fahrenheit, are hastening harvest operations in much of Texas, and also are causing stress to hay crops, ranges, pastures and livestock, Carpenter said in his weekly report on the state's agriculture.

Most irrigated cotton in the Rio Grande Valley has been defoliated and the harvest is in full swing there with yields reported to be outstanding. The dryland cotton harvest is winding down in the McCook area of Hidalgo County. In the Coastal Bend, above average cotton yields are ranging from one-and-three-quarters to two bales to the acre. The sorghum harvest also has recorded above average yields in South Central and Central Texas, Carpenter rapidly in the lower part of the state and in Southwest Texas, where excellent yields of high quality corn are being reported. The corn harvest is past the halfway mark in South Texas and the Coastal Bend, with most yields well above average.

Corn harvests are moving ahead

The continuing hot, dry weather is placing hay crops under stress, and more moisture is needed to boost growth for additional cuttings, Carpenter said. Yields have been good for second cuttings of hay in many areas. Some counties of the Panhandle are presently harvesting third alfalfa cuttings for the season. Pastures and ranges are turning brown in many moisture-deficit areas. Southwest Texas ranchers are moving some of their herds since forage production is at a standstill and grasses are deteriorating. Some cattle in South Central Texas are receiving supplemental feeds and other cattlemen are trimming their herds as the weather continues dry, Carpenter added.

The hot weather also is hurting young lambs in Far West Texas and generally taking its toll on agriculture in West Central and other portions of the state. Some scattered thunderstorms were reported in parts of the Panhandle, South Plains, Far West and Upper Coast areas, and have helped brighten ranges and crops in those

Fire hazards are being created in many parts of the state as dry conditions continue. Irrigation systems continue to pump water to boost crop production in some

The rice harvest is progressing along the Upper Coast and the crop is about 10 percent harvested in the Coastal Bend where yields are reported to be good.

directors showed these conditions. PANHANDLE: Corn and sorghum crops are making good progress where irrigation has been adequate. Dryland crops need moisture and yield potentials being reduced daily by lack of moisture. Some areas are harvesting their third alfalfa cutting of the season. Cotton is fruiting heavily although some insect problems are being observed. Cattle are in good condition but movement sluggish due to depressed markets. SOUTH PLAINS: Irrigation of crops continues. Aphid activity in cotton and greenbugs in sorghum are increasing. Corn is in good condition, and vegetable harvesting is under way. Pastures and livestock are in good condition. ROLLING PLAINS: Producers of small grains continue to work their land in anticipation of fall seeding. The hot, dry weather is providing excellent growing conditions for cotton where moisture is adequate. Grain sorghum is reported about 10 days away from the harvest in Jones County. Most summer gardens have completed production, and the peach harvest also has ended.

NORTH CENTRAL: Land preparation has begun for wheat. Some good sorghum yields are being reported, and hay is still being baled. Ranges and livestock generally are in good condition although the market is low. The peach harvest continues and the pecan crop is looking good. Hay is still being baled.

NORTHEAST: Field crops are doing well but could use some rain. Additional hay cuttings are under way. Recent moisture has improved pastures and the general condition of livestock. Fall garden preparation is progressing, and early harvests of sweet potatoes are indicating good yields. Farmers' markets continue to operate with good supplies of vegetables and fruit. HZalso are reported in late peach varieties.

FAR WEST: Some areas recgived appreciable rainfall yothers remained hot and dry during the past week. Cotton is looking good, with spraying continuing to control bollworms. Cattle are being sprayed to control hornflies. The hot weather is hurting young lambs. Aphids are increasing in vegetables and pecans.

WEST CENTRAL: Extremely hot daytime temperatures, with little cooling at night, is taking its toll on agriculture. Sorghum is turning color and along with cotton is progressing. Baling of sudan and alfalfa hay continues with excellent yields reported. Ranchers are shearing goats and drenching sheep. Some producers are shipping lambs and others are CENTRAL: The sorghum harvest is nearing completion with above average yields, and the corn harvest will start soon. Dry conditions are affecting the third cutting of hay, with more moisture needed to boost growth. Aphids continue to be a problem on pecan trees. The peach harvest is winding down after a successful season.

EAST: Fair hay supplies have been reported from recent cuttings. The peanut crop is in fair to good condition and production of vegetable gardens is declining due to hot temperatures. Range grasses are beginning to get short due to dry conditions.

Kansas has Disneyland of agriculture

EDITOR'S NOTE — It is a shrine to the American farmer, first conceived as a "Disneyland of agriculture" by a man who felt it was unfair that halls of fame honored professional athletes while farmers went unrecognized. Since it opened 20 years ago, 1.5 million people have visited the Agriculture Hall of Fame, but it still has some growing to do.

- Before he left the family farm at Grandview, Mo., former president Harry Truman could "plow the straightest row of corn in the county," his mother once boasted.

Truman's 1908 steel-bladed walking plow was the first of thousands of artifacts donated to the Agriculture Hall of Fame and National Center.

Since it opened twenty years ago more than 1.5 million people have toured the hall, located in rolling prairie along Interstate 70 about 20 miles west of Kansas City. Mo. Another 30,000 have donated agriculture artifacts.

Harold Adkins, director of the hall, figures recent national attention focused on the financial plight of America's farmers could create more interest in agriculture and help boost attendance even

The Ag Hall, chartered by Congress in 1960 and built five years later, contains a potpourri of agriculture memorabilia, most featured in two buildings.

The Museum of Farming features a 1903 Dart, the first farm truck ever made; a rare flow blue china collection; a replica of an 1831 McCormick reaper; a saddle once belonging to Calamity Jane, and tools, machinery and gadgets of every description.

An art collection featuring rural paintings, sculptures and murals is growing and Adkins says he hopes a separate building can be built to house the art gallery.

A collection of barbed wire, along with the Truman plow, is the envy of the Smithsonian Institution, Adkins says.

A miniature train carries tourists past a replica of a one-room school, a blacksmith's shop, a farm pond and nature trail, and an exhibit of antique farm machinery whose simplicity is in stark contrast to today's air-conditioned, stereo-equipped tractors and 24-row corn planters.

Wheat farmers are reminded to get soil samples collected and sent off for fertilizer recommendations. It seems that we are seeing response for frequent fertilizer usage on dryland wheat. This is a

Now, I grant that in a few instances where leaf rust was real bad this spring fertilizer may have had a negative effect on wheat yields. However, this negative effect was generally caused by the fact that a fertilizer caused the wheat to have more growth, which in turn created a better rust environment

Nevertheless, I still believe a lot of wheat fields will profit from a soil test and then following the test recommendations. The Gray County Extension office has soil sample boxes, information sheets and mailing cartons. The Extension Soil Testing Lab at Lubbock can make reliable fertilizer recommendations for our area. The cost is $6.00 per sample and is a small investment considering the probable dividends that it can pay TOMI SUBJECTS FOR AUGUST

Letters to the editor

Stinker off a tale

Dear editor,

I went to work expecting the day to be like any hot summer day. I was mistaken.

I arrived at work at 9 .a.m. and soon discovered that my job duties could be better carried out with the aid of four or five empty packing cartons, so I went in search for just

The first place I attemped was the Pampa Mall rear parking lot. However, the city of Pampa, in their pursuit of daily duties, had beat me to it. As I turned to leave, I noticed the unmistakable aroma of a "pole cat," better known as a skunk, and better still known to others at a distance

Sure enough, there it (he or she) was under the rain gutter behind Walden's book store.

Before continuing my search for boxes, I decided to phone the animal control board. To my dismay, while trying to prevent injury or chemical assault on my fellow Pampans, I was robbed. My car was vandalized and valuables taken were in excess of $200.

I returned to my office to call the police. The officer listened very patiently and with genuine concern as I described each missing article. He bid me good-day and began the tedious task of dumpster-to-dumpster search.

I returned to the scene of the crime only to discover that the hairy black and white rascal responsible for the day's sad occurences was still sleeping it off in the shade. I decided then and there with the help of local mall proprietors to wait it out. The skunk and I sat for approximately three hourse in the early morning heat. At high noon, Animal Control officer Jackie Denham and trainee Lucinda Mann arrived with nooses to apprehend the animal. I've never had quite such a day and I would like to thank these Pampans for their good samaritan

Officer Turgeson who never once shook his head in disgust at the predicament I had gotten myself into, and resisted the urge to league me on the virtues of locked

Also, the people who called the animal shelter repeatedly; the Mall official for rendenring assistance; the animal control workers for their expert handling of the situation and last, but not least, the thief or thieves who helped themselves to my purses, my clothes and other personal articles. May they find a skunk under their doorstep.

Thanks to KSZN

To the editor:

This is a thank-you letter to radio station KSZN for broadcasting all night long.

On Wednesday night when the tornado sirens went off, it woke me up and threw my household into a momentary panic.

I turned to channels 4, 7 and 10 and they were off the air. I tried tuning in to the radio for news but could not find what I thought to be a local station. I even tried calling the police and fire dsepartments whose lines were busy, no doubt from hundreds of other people

Then I remembered that KSZN was broadcast over Channel 6 and very shortly was informed that the siren blasts were a false alarm.

It was a big relief...not just for the news but to know that that late at night I could find some answers to a potentially frightening

KAYLA RICHERSON Parking place woes

To the editor.

How many times have you thought to yourself this would be a pretty good time to go down to the post office and mail a letter, or check your mail, and just when you thought maybe you'd found a parking space you see some inconsiderate person has parked on top of the parking line and has taken up two parking places? I cannot see why people pull in between those lines with the front of their car parked on the right lines like they're still turning a corner. And maybe, just maybe, the rear will nearly be where it is supposed to be.

I don't think some of these people could park right if parking blocks were there to guide them in.

Well, after you drive around the block a time or two, you finally find a place to park and get inside. And you find several businessmen or women huddled up around this one table sorting out their mail to see what checks they got in today. It looks like they could do their visiting and mail sorting elsewhere so the flow of traffic and people would be a little easier on foreign products, we cannot charge what we want for our domestic goods." Tariffs and quotas are pro-- business, but anti-consumer.

Businessmen and labor unions correctly point out that many foreign countries will not allow U.S.-made goods to enter their countries on favorable terms. They sound the mindless cliche, "We believe in free trade, but fair trade." They say America should not allow Japanese goods into our country until Japan allows U.S. goods into their country. What they're really saying is, "Americans should not be free to purchase what they wish until Japan (or some other country) allows its citizens to have the same freedom." Should American freedom depend on that allowed elsewhere? Or should Americans be free, period?

Another argument for protectionist measures is to protect jobs. On the surface this sounds reasonable. But protectionism just shifts unemployment. If we keep Japanese autos out, surely employment in Detroit will rise. But suppose the Japanese were buying lumber with the dollars earned from selling Hondas. Fewer dollars from Hondas sales would mean the Japanese could not buy as much lumber. Result: unemployment in the lumber industry. Now there MIGHT be an argument for protection. But shouldn't we know what protectionism costs us. Congress doesn't want to face up to that question. They would much rather ignore or pretend there's no cost in order to appear God-like by passing out "free" miracles. If American industries need protection, the costs of that protection ought to be explicit and above board.

For example, Lee Iacocca should be asked by Congress, "How much money do you need to maintain full employment and profits at Chrysler?" He might say $2 billion. Then a bill should go to the Appropriations Committee calling for $2 billion for Aid to Dependent Auto Factories. Then, Congress, in full view of the voters, would have to vote it up or down. Americans would have the advantage of knowing the cost. What's more it'd be a cheaper way of giving handouts. The question: Can Congress handle that level of honesty with the American people?

Debt ceiling battle expected

Congress will be asked to push limit above $2 trillion

President Reagan is about to ask Congress for another increase in the government's line of credit, a move that would push the national debt limit beyond $2 trillion. That's $2,000,000,000,000.

'Unless I just misread it, I think that's going to be the donnybrook of the year," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said last week.

Treasury Department officials are scheduled to appear before a Senate Finance subcommittee Sept. 10 — the day after the Senate returns from its summer recess to officially request an increase in the current debt limit of $1.824 trillion.

As of last week, the debt had reached $1 810 trillion

John Niehenke, acting assistant Treasury secretary for domestic administration will be seeking the increase because the government likely will hit the limit of its authority to borrow money by the end of September.

Niehenke has declined to say how much of a boost will be sought. Asked if the request would be for a limit beyond $2 trillion, Arthur

Siddon, a Treasury Department spokesman, said, "I think that's fair enough" to assume. The red-ink budget Congress adopted Aug. 1 estimated the government's borrowing needs would require a debt limit of $2.078 trillion for next year and up to $2.5 trillion by 1988. Since 1975, the national debt has created over the years by the federal government spending more money than it takes in. Raising the debt limit gives the Treasury authority to borrow to pay the bills.

The national debt is the

The government now spends more than $140 billion a year just to pay the interest on the debt. Last year, legislators temporarily denied debt limit increases as demonstrations of anger over persistent budget deficits and as attempts to build pressure for action on other issues.

This year, growing resentment over the deficits — running at an annual rate of $200 billion already has members of Congress vowing they will block another debt limit increase until more is done to close the gap between what the government takes in and what it

Official death toll hits 53 in latest South Africa riots

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) -Rioting ebbed in Durban's black and Indian townships Saturday with the official death toll at 53 in South Africa's worst anti-apartheid violence in nearly a year.

. In Cape Town, a hand grenade exploded among police who were charging mourners at a black funeral, injuring six police officers and a South African technician for CBS, the U.S. television network. No one was seriously hurt.

The official toll from four days of bloody rioting in Durban's townships included 36 people shot fatally by police and 17 found mutilated in riot areas. Press reports said two more people were

The townships were relatively calm Saturday as black and Indian vigilante squads patrolled neighborhoods.

Police arrested a top anti-apartheid leader, the Rev. Allan Boesak, and 18 others earlier in the day who were trying to enter Cape Town's Guguletu black township for the funeral of a 17-year-old youth killed by police in a riot two weeks ago. Boesak is a leader of the United Democratic Front, the main organization fighting South Africa's system of race segregation, or apartheid. He is of mixed race, known in South Africa as "colored." Arrested with him were nine other people of mixed race and nine whites

All 19 were charged with attempted illegal entry into the township under laws that enable police to ban non-blacks from entering black townships in times of tension.

Most, like Boesak, were clergymen planning to officiate at the funeral. All 19 were released on

Witnesses said the hand grenade was hurled over a fence at police charging a crowd of about 150 angry blacks ordered to disperse after the funeral. The police officers and CBS sound technician Anton van der Merwe, a South African, suffered minor fragment wounds

Police and troops sealed off Guguletu and banned political posters, marches and processions. The township is not among 36 towns and cities covered by a three-week-old state of emergency.

Boesak and his group left the city's Wynberg Magistrate's Court singing, "What Have We Done?" Witnesses said police charged into a crowd of mixed race supporters outside the court and arrested five.

'We all went (to the funeral) as a matter of conscience ... to show solidarity with the people," Boesak said as he left the court. "As ministers of the Gospel, we will not be told by the government what to

In Johannesburg, Foreign Minister R.F. Botha returned from talks in Vienna, Austria, with U.S. and other Western officials. The talks prompted widespread speculation the white government is about to make concessions to the 24 million voteless black majority. Whites in South Africa number about 5 million.

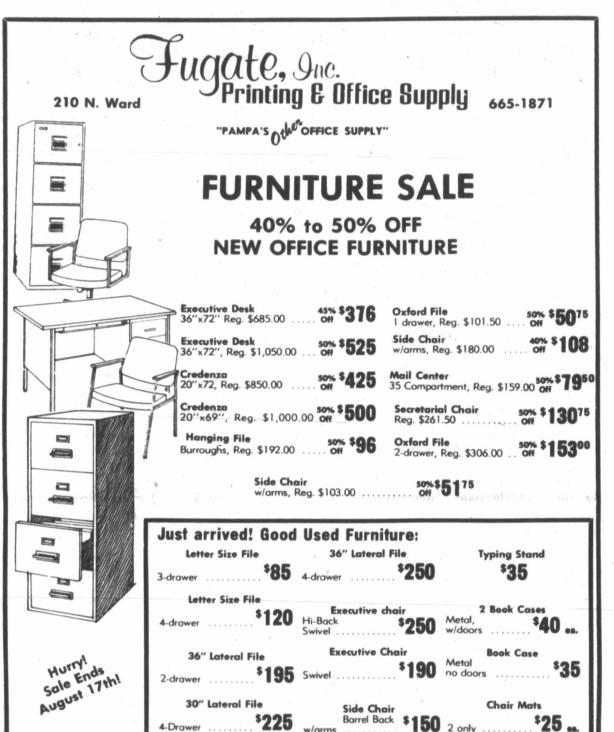

Botha said the Western officials 'were well satisfied,' adding some in the Cabinet were eager to release Nelson Mandela, the black dissident leader jailed for life in 1964 on sabotage charges.

The government offered in February to release Mandela, leader of the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla group, if he renounced violence. Mandela refused. He said the government must first legalize the African National Congress and begin dismantling apartheid.

Botha said the government still expected Mandela to renounce

The violence in Durban broke out Tuesday and was the first in Durban in nearly a year of unrest throughout South Africa. More than 500 blacks have perished.

Finally, A Reason to Smile About Home Financing.

Early Approval.

Until now, home financing has always been a backwards process. You find the home you want, then worry over financing. And that means more anxious frowns than exuberant smiles.

That's why Security Federal hatched the idea for its new Early Bird Approval Program. We'll help you decide what financial options are available before you set out in search of your dream home. And we'll guarantee your loan (and interest rates!) for 90 days.

If you'd like to know how Early Bird Approval can turn homebuying around for you, give us a call. Then relax. Your new home is just a smile away.

Wiley Post death major aviation loss

By GIL BROYLES Assoc' ed Press Writer

CLAREMORE Okla. - Wiley Post tinkered with his infatuation for flight until he became the premier aviator of his time, a setter of records, the inventor of the pressurized suit, the discoverer of the jet stream.

His death at age 37 left the question of what might have been. "He had a natural inborn ability to fly," said his brother, Gordon

Post, 75, of Oklahoma City. "He was probably 20 years : head of his time.

Post died 50 years ago Thursday in a crash off Point Barrow, Alaska, that also took the life of fellow Oklahoman Will Rogers. The death of Rogers, an internationally known humorist, overshadowed that of his pilot. But in aviation circles, the loss was

"There couldn't have been any comparison of the notoriety of the two men at the time they died," said Joe Cunningham, a spokesman for the Oklahoma Aviation Hall of Fame doubly felt.

But Cunningham noted that Post had flown twice around the world in his barrel-shaped Winnie Mae once solo - and established new altitude records with the help of the pressurized suit he had devised.

"He did it all in five years," Cunningham said. A memorial gathering is scheduled at the Aviation Hall of Fame on the anniversary of Post's death Wiley Hardeman Post was born Nov. 22, 1898, in Grand Saline, Texas, but his family moved to southwestern Oklahoma in 1907. He claimed Maysville as his home. As a young mechanic, Post became interested in flying in 1917 and by 1926 was making parachute jumps. He also made his first solo flight in 1926

Later that year, as Post worked on oil rigs to earn enough to buy a plane, a metal sliver lodged in his left eye, which became infected and had to be removed. Undeterred, Post spent hours in a darkened hangar memorizing airplane instruments to make up for his lack of depth perception.

"He became perfect at it - 99 percent of the people would have quit flying," recalled Clarence Page, 88, an old Post friend and now the primary benefactor of the aviation hall of fame

Post used his $1,698 in worker compensation to buy his plane. In 1930, he won the Los Angeles-to-Chicago Air Derby in Vega aircraft

In 1931, Post and Harold Gatty made a record-breaking, eight-day around the world flight. It was also the year he met Will Rogers, also an aviation booster.

In 1933, Post flew solo around the world, also in eight days. The next year, he began to attack the stratosphere.

"His greatest contributions to the science of aviation were his experiments with high altitude flight," said his brother

World War I ace Eddie Rickenbacker called Post "the man who found the border of the great new frontier." Amelia Earhart called him the "bravest of aviation forward in great leaps.

Post tried four times to set high altitude records. An early attempt to surpass 40,000 feet was nearly

Sherlockians follow detective's footsteps

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP) - Master detective Sherlock Holmes may or may not be keeping bees in his native England, but he's certainly keeping the attention of more than 130 amateur sleuths attending a workshop here at the ripe old age of 131, crowned a mountain of lesser facts compiled by the "Sherlockians" who gathered for a three-day meeting on their favorite subject.

The exclusive focus of the "Sherlockians" are the 60 stories believed to have been penned from 1887 to 1927 by a British eye doctor, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

Believed, that is, by out but not by experts led by the Baker Street Irregulars, the 275-member American society of arch-Sherlockians.

The Irregulars, named after Holmes' London flat at 221-B Baker Street, know that Doyle was only the literary agent for Dr. John Watson, the detective's faithful friend and storyteller, said conference organizer John Bennett Shaw, a senior fellow at the University of Minnesota. The workshop, held on the campus of Stevens Institute of Technology across the Hudson River from New York City, ends Sunday.

According to "the writings on the writings," as Sherlockians call their massive body of analytical literature, the good doctor himself chronicled the exploits of his clever companion, Shaw said Saturday. "Once you lose sight of the fact it's a spoof, you'll probably be locked up ... or maybe you'll get in Congress," said Shaw, who's running his 17th Sherlockian seminar. "We're not quite as crazy as we appear. Sherlockians tend to wear T-shirts with slogans like "Sherlock Lives." They send each other Sherlockian Christmas cards and spend their vacations trying to find places like Tredannick Wollas, where Holmes' "Adventure of the people sane," said Herbert P. Tinning, a business executive from Weehawken who is also known as Dr. Leon Sterndale, a character from "The Devil's Foot.

Holmes, of course, had his faults, Shaw quickly admitted. The detective was often nasty, seemingly afraid of women and fond of cocaine.

"It's fantasy," he admitted.

He said two factors account for the fanaticism shared by him and his colleagues: Holmes' heroic genius and the way the tales evoke

And how does Holmes himself view all this attention, surviving as he did a fall from a cliff with archenemy James Moriarty in "The Final Problem?"

The great detective enjoys it as a break from his beekeeping in Sussex, England, Shaw said with confidence. The Sherlockian said he received a jar hand-labled "'Holmes Honey" a few

SEEKING THE THINGS THAT ARE ABOVE If then ye were raised together with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is seated on the right hand of God. Set your mind on the things that are above, not on the earth. For ye died, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall be manifested, then shall ye also with Him be manifested in glory." (Colossians 3:1-4.) The "things" that are above are the "things of God" which Paul refers to in I Corinthians 2:9. They are the blessings that God has prepared for His children. The language of Colossians 3 indicates that Paul was speaking of those who had by faith, obeyed the Lord, and thus, had become children of God (Galatians 3:26-29.) The "things" which are above are those things of eternal life. We seek and obtain those things by becoming the children of God and then by maintaining that relationship through this life.

Paul seeks to divert our attention away from those things of this life which so many times become all-things of an eternal nature. John tells us that those who do the will of God abide forever (I John 2:17.) Therefore, we have the simple choice of doing the will of God and enjoying eternal life of refusing His will and suffering eternal death (Matthew 25:46.)

Inspiration records examples of in-dividuals who considered the things of this life more important than the things of God. Aachan considered the forbidden treasures of Jericho worth more than obedience to God (Joshua 7:16-21.) Therefore, he took the silver, gold and the garment when he knew the Lord God had forbidden them to take any of the spoil for themselves (Joshua 6:17-21.) The rich man of Luke 12:13-21, put his hope for his future in his possessions. The rich young man of Matthew 19:16-22 was not willing to give up his possessions in order to have eternal life. So it is with many of us today. Only when eternal life means more to us than anything slee will we truly and deanything else will we truly and de-votedly, seek the things which are

Saudis attempt to raise fish

HOFUF, Saudi Arabia (AP) - A peculiar new weekend recreation has begun in the oasis community of al-Hasa — people go fishing in the drainage ditches.

Fish, unknown here until recent months, are escapees and descendants of experimental fish-raising projects run by the Arabian-American Oil Co. (Aramco) and King Faisal University

Fish survival in the drainage ditches, through which water runs from the oasis' irrigated fields, is evidence that fish projects can succeed in the kingdom's irrigated farming areas, said Rafik Saliba, supervisor of Aramco's poultry and fish Extension units.

The fish belong to a species the Saudis call tilapia, which inhabit brackish or fresh water

Every week, Aramco's fish farm sends about 200 fish to the oil company's dining hall at its Dhahran headquarters where, according the Saliba, the supply can't keep up with demand.

The program began in 1982, when Aramco agriculturists pondered what to do with the water that drained off the irrigated fields of al-Hasa. It flows through the drainage ditches to ponds in the desert outside the oasis. Because the water picks up salt from the fields it irrigates, it cannot be used to irrigate a second time

Aramco scientists settled on tilapia because the species can withstand the water's moderate salt content and the wide variation of water temperature - 15 to 30 degrees Celsius.

The first fish were brought from the Saudi Arabian National Center for Science and Technology near Riyadh, the Saudi capital. But last year, the fish farm began its own hatchery after Aramco agriculturists decided the five-hour drive from the center was too hard on the baby fish

At the fish farm, fish live in large, cement tanks filled with water that flows in from the ditches. Most fish, when they reach a little under a pound, are placed in a a tank from which water is drained away. The fish are then scooped into refrigerators and sent

Some fish are kept in separate tanks for breeding. Saliba said that, while some private farmers may be able to develop their own fish farms and some natural breeding may take place, they may not be able to set up their own high-production fish operations.

College costs climb for fifth straight year

NEW YORK (AP) - The average cost of a year at college will climb 7 percent in 1985-86, the fifth straight year such costs will outpace the overall inflation rate, according to an annual survey released Saturday by The College

Bennington College, a small, selective liberal arts school in Vermont, will be the nation's most expensive college, with total annual costs of $17,210, replacing the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which had been the most expensive the previous three years. M.I.T. will rank second this coming school year with total costs of $17,030.

College officials generally have defended the rapid rise in tuitions in the 1980s because increases lagged behind the inflation rate for several years in the 1970s. In that period, officials have said, double-digit inflation eroded professors' salaries and forced schools to postpone building maintenance and repairs.

"This year's increase is just one point above last year's 6 percent rise," said George H. Hanford, president of the board. "But it is still below the 10 and 11 percent annual increases in average total college costs that occurred during the early 1980s.'

The board's annual survey defines total college costs as including tuition and fees, books and supplies, room and board, personal expenses and transportation. Complete survey results will be published Sept. 1 by the board in the 1985-86 edition of "The College Cost Book." The survey of 3,087 of the nation's colleges and universities found:

- Total average costs up 8 percent at four-year public colleges, to $5,314 for students who live on campus, to $4,240 for students who live at home;

- Costs at four-year private colleges up 7 percent to $9,659 for resident students, up 8 percent to $8,347 for commuting students:

- Average costs at two-year public colleges up 5 percent to $3,627 for commuting students. The board said costs for resident students at two-year public colleges were not calculated because the number of reporting institutions was too small to be meaningful.

Besides Bennington and M.I.T., the most expensive four-year schools in terms of total cost are Barnard College, $16,842; Princeton University, $16,790; Yale University, $16,650; Harvard and Radcliffe Colleges, $16,500; Sarah Lawrence College, $16,285; Stanford University, $16,193; Tufts University, $16,133, and Dartmouth College, $16,120.

The board also listed the top 10 four-year public colleges in terms of total costs for in-state students: the University of Illinois at Chicago Health Science Center at $8,285; Maine Maritime Academy, $8,265; Colorado School of Mines, $7,800; University of California at Berkeley, $7,344; University of Vermont, $7,290; University of California at Irvine, $7,236; University of Rhode Island, $7,089; Vermont Technical College, $6,626; College of William & Mary, $6,400, and Medical University of South Carolina, $5,850.

The College Board is a private. non-profit, educational association whose members include more than 2,500 colleges and other institutions of learning.

Chain link

leighborhood schools get high

NEW YORK (AP) - Americans give high marks to the neighborhood public schools their children attend, with nearly three-quarters granting grades of "A" or "B," according to a Gallup poll released Saturday. The 17th annual Gallup poll of public attitudes toward schools revealed a continuing rebound in public confidence since educators began responding to calls for tighter standards from President Reagan and others in the last several years.

The poll, to be published in the September issue of "Phi Delta Kappan'' magazine, showed respondents giving high marks to neighborhood schools they are most familiar with, but taking a far dimmer view of public schools in the nation generally — a pattern that has held true since the poll was first taken.

For the first time, the 1985 poll asked parents to rate schools their oldest child attended, the schools

they would presumably be most familiar with, and 71 percent gave those schools grades of "A" or

"B." Nineteen percent gave those schools "C's," and 7 percent rated the schools "D" or "F.

Bull market birthday finds market subdued

NEW YORK (AP) - The mood is 300,000 tons of gin, you get a a bit subdued on Wall Street as the third birthday of a powerful bull market approaches.

On Aug. 12, 1982, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 29 to 776.92, in a quiet midsummer session that seemed typical of the weakness that had prevailed for a year and a half in the stock market.

As it turned out, however, that marked a major turning point. Just two months later the average reached 1,000 on its way to record highs.

The Wilshire Associates equity index representing the market value of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks stood at 1.05 trillion at the August 1982 low. Last month it briefly topped 2 trillion.

Boxcar numbers that defy comprehension are everywhere these days - $200 billion government budget deficits, $20 million contracts for baseball players, nine-digit zip codes. But anything that adds almost a trillion dollars to the nation's wealth is still a phenomenon worthy of note.

As Raymond F. DeVoe Jr., analyst at Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., explained the concept of a trillion in a different context: "You take a supertanker capable of holding 300,000 tons of oil and fill

"You put just enough vermouth into a shot glass to cover the bottom - less than one-tenth of an ounce. When you add that to the trillion-to-one martini.

Like a generous serving of that very dry libation, the trillion-dollar rise in stock prices has had an intoxicating effect on a lot of investors. But these days some people are worrying about how much longer the party can last.

Joseph Feshbach, technical analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities, says he thinks the market is headed for a "correction" — a decline that wrings some of the enthusiasm out of stock prices

Investing institutions are low on cash reserves that might fuel further market gains, he says. And utility stocks, a popular investment with individual investors, have lately taken a beating.

Caution was the dominant theme in the past week. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 32.26 to 1,320.79, taking its sharpest drop of the year on Tuesday, when it tumbled 21.73 points.

Other readings for the week showed the New York Stock Exchange composite index down 1.79 at 109.06, and the American Stock Exchange market value index down 2.46 at 232.58.

Big Board volume averaged 93.65 million shares a day, down from 106.35 million the week before.

One cause for concern among market analysts is that big budget deficits show no sign of going away

Mexico's long-entrenched party faces new challenge

EDITOR'S NOTE - For more than half a century, the Mexican government has been in the hands of a single political entity — the Institutional Revolutionary Party whose support has ranged from peasants in donkey carts to the tycoons in limousines. But the party's fortunes now may be in for a change

By CAM ROSSIE Associated Press Writer

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) -The Institutional Revolutionary Party's long-running political machine is showing signs of corrosion, although its pervasive hold over the country could keep it going on momentum for some time to come

Since 1929 the PRI, its Spanish initials, has controlled Mexico's government, politics and economy through an extensive grassroots network reaching from the smallest village to teeming Mexico

PRI has become synonomous with government. Its colors are the red, green and white of the Mexican flag.

The basis of the Mexican system has been the PRI's ability to integrate into the political hierarchy the leaders of organizations of workers, peasants and the poor, according to political analyst Octavio Paz.

As such, the leaders assure that their followers remain loyal to the PRI either through the granting of favors or through direct coercion.

With rare exceptions, the government exerts considerable influence over the press, largely through the so-called "embute," the money stuffed into a reporter's or newspaper's pocket for printing stories favorable to the government

The "PRI-government," as it is known, also has managed, up to now, to keep potential critics especially the business community and the Roman Catholic Church out of its way on the political front.

It does so through laws prohibiting the church's direct involvement in politics and through an unwritten pact that, until President Miguel de la Madrid changed the rules, had given business substantial influence over government measures in return for remaining silent

The PRI was founded on the principles of the Mexican Revolution of 1910-1921. Social peace and democracy have been its slogans

And, the political stability the party brought to Mexico following centuries of strife has been unmatched in Latin America.

But the PRI version of democracy means that serious opposition parties, most recently the National Action Party, or PAN. will be tolerated so long as they remember who is in charge.

Some other political parties have been created by the government itself in an attempt to legitimize the system and to divide and thus conquer opposition power.

For many Mexicans, especially the growing class of middle-income, politically conscious northerners, that philosophy seems to be growing tiresome. Political analysts say the PRI's glory began to fade in 1968. with the massacre of student-led protestors in Mexico City before the Summer Olympics were held there that year.

In response to massive dissatisfaction among leftists, the PRI "opened up" the system in the 1970s to allow minorities a voice in the government. But it failed to incorporate the conservative PAN, which has gathered increasing support from those wanting to express opposition to the one-party system.

Widescale government corruption blamed for the country's economic crisis and the poor performance of de la Madrid's economic reform program have caused further disenchantment.

The results of the July 7 elections for the governors of seven states, the lower house of the federal Congress and for some state legislatures and mayoralities, came as the last straw for some normally silent sectors of Mexican society.

Allegations and evidence of frauds committed by the PRI on election day — following a vociferous pledge by de la Madrid to assure clean elections - have sparked criticism and protests.

In the largest protest seen in more than two decades in this highly industrialized northern city and capital of Nuevo Leon state on the Texas border, a crowd of more than 40,000 people jammed the central plaza to protest electoral

The PAN and other opposition parties that consider themselves cheated out of victories are not the only ones riled

In a rare show of discontent, Javier Livas Cantu, the son of a former Nuevo Leon state governor, resigned from the PRI after the elections and has proposed that opposition parties engage in civil disobedience, such as refusing to pay taxes and utility bills.

'The PRI ideology has become distorted," he wrote in a letter of resignation published in local newspapers. "The party's propositions have gone mad. Its political practices have been irreparably corrupted.

'The party has shut its doors to any honorable Mexican."

Livas had served as municipal secretary of the Monterrey suburb of San Pedro under a PRI mayor. The PAN, Mexico's major opposition party, made significant gains in local elections in the north following the start of the economic crisis in 1982. Based on its growing support and all-out campaign efforts, the party had predicted it would win the gubernatorial elections in Nuevo Leon and in Sonora state on the northwestern border with Arizona. The PRI's response was to claim a sweep of the elections, even before the polls closed.

Few here anticipated the PRI's blatant show of force in refusing the PAN a fair showing in the congressional and legislative races and in taking back PAN-controlled mayoralties. In Sonora, for example, PRI-controlled electoral boards barred PAN poll watchers by canceling their credentials at the last minute.

Because of its entrenchment in society, the government rests easy knowing a widescale protest is highly unlikely.

Who are in the perfect situation to rise up?" writer Gabriel Zaid asked in a recent essay. "Those that have nothing to lose. But the impotency, the hunger, the imprisonment, the torture, the violence, the humiliation don't raise up the spirit: they crush it."

The majority, he said, "have something and they want more; they are capable of uprising. They don't, he maintained, because "they are in the PRI's

sealed its unspoken commitment to maintain it dominance

In an essay published in the June issue of the national magazine Vuelta, political analyst Paz contended that the system failed to institute a true democracy.

'Until a few years ago I believed, like many others, that the remedy was an internal reform of the PRI. Today that is not sufficient," he wrote.

In one extraordinary act, some Monterrey business and industry leaders boycotted the recent inauguration of Jorge Trevino as governor of Nuevo Leon state and issued a statement assailing the PRI-controlled government.

"What the chamber has requested is that (the government) explain the evident irregularities of July 7," said Gerardo Garza Sada, president of Monterrey's National Chamber of Commerce. Failure to do so, he said, "will create disorder and hand over to Jorge Trevino a deceived and discontented state.

An even stronger denunciation came from the business community in the state of Puebla, just to the east of Mexico City.

Private enterprise there broke its pact of confidence with the state and federal governments as a result of alleged electoral fraud.

"The fraud was the drop that overflowed the vase, following situations like increasing control of the government over business, the peso devaluation ... and other circumstances that leave the red light on in the economic scene," said Herberto Rodriguez Concha, president of the Puebla Business Coordinating Council, at meeting July 12 of 1,200 business leaders.

In an unprecedented political statement, the Roman Catholic bishop of Ciudad Obregon in Sonora state demanded "a serious and responsible investigation to ferret out the real facts' concerning "inconformity across the country over the results of the recent elections.

"Authorities promised clean elections, but there have been reports that this was not the case, at least in some parts of Sonora,' Bishop Luis Cervantes wrote in a statement published by the English-language newspaper The News of Mexico City.

ONE GOOD RESULT OF THE myriad of problems within the NCAA this past year is the miniscule list of rule changes in football. The powers that be have been so pre-occupied with salvaging some authority from the school presidents, leading the athletes into academic and moral salvation, and searching for stray dollar bills to finance programs that they have pretty well left the playing rules alone. The changes are mostly technical, visible mainly to officials

But that doesn't mean that folks lack ideas of what they would like to see in the future. Each summer the NCAA issues a press kit filled with quotes from players and coaches who will be in action on the fields that fall. Here are some rule variations offered by the coaches

Dave Currey, Cincinnati: "The two rule changes I would like to see are adopting the pro hash marks to help the offense and re-starting the clock after the ball is spotted following an incomplete pass. George Welsh (Virginia) and Mack Brown (Tulane) agree on the Vince Dooley, Georgia: "Have Division I kickers kick off from the 35 and those in II and III continue to kick off from the 40. Also, I think it would be good to eliminate the kicking tee and have kickers kick off

C. Tom Sawyer, Western New England: "The name of the game is 'foot'-ball. It would add much to the game if all kicks had to be returned as in Canadian football." About the foot.

Jerry Clark, Cornell (Iowa): "I feel we give too many points to the field goal. It should be cut to two."

Dick MacPherson, Syracuse: "Narrow the goal posts." Rich Brooks, Oregon: "Look at the scoring value of field goals in relation to their distance. A 19-yard field goal should count more than a 54-yarder." (Eds. note: Brooks feels a team should get credit for having moved the ball the closer to the goal line.)

Bill Yeoman, Houston: "The rules are fine. I don't want to mess with the goal posts or the hash marks. Always the option and throwing the football will be the focal points of college football."

Don Read, Portland State: "As long as the football is shaped the way it is and rules encourage passing, the ball will be in the air.'

in October, if all goes well, the Grambling State University Tigers will win for the fourth time this season and give Eddie Robinson the 324th victory of his 43-year coaching career.

Since Bear Bryant, the current record-holder, won 323 games, Robinson is on the verge of passing a legend. And in all the years the normally loquacious Robinson has een coaching and selling rambling football from coast to coast, the record seems to be the only thing, that makes him uncomfortable.

"I ain't at my best talking about winning those four games," Robinson said Thursday at a news conference promoting Grambling's game against North Central at Yankee Stadium Sept. 21, the 15th annual game to benefit the New York Urban League's Whitney M.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometime Young Jr. Memorial Scholarship

That the 66-year-old Robinson will break Bryant's mark this season is virtually a foregone conclusion. The last time a Grambling team failed to win at least four games was in 1951, one of Robinson's three losing seasons.

With the record on the horizon, Robinson conceded that "this has not been a typical summer for Eddie Robinson. I keep telling myself there's no pressure football-wise, but it looks like things outside of football will have a tremendous bearing.

Translation: Everyone wants some of Robinson's time, mainly

Mets pound Cubs

NEW YORK (AP) - Dwight Gooden extended his winning streak to 12 games, longest in the National League this season, as the New York Mets beat the Chicago Cubs 8-3 Saturday for their sixth victory in a row.

The victory kept the Mets in first place in the NL East and extended the Cubs' losing streak

George Foster hit a two-run homer, his 17th, for the Mets, and Darryl Strawberry drove in the go-ahead run in the third inning with a single.

Gooden, 18-3, allowed nine hits and struck out nine. His winning streak, a club record, is one game longer than the winning streaks put together this season by LaMarr Hoyt and Andy Hawkins of San Diego, and it equaled the longest string in the majors this year, by Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees.

Mustangs open football season

DALLAS (AP) - Southern Methodist on Saturday became the first Southwest Conference school to get the 71st SWC football season under way, with freshmen and transfers reporting for the start of workouts.

The rest of the Mustang squad is due to take physical exams and draw equipment on Thursday.

Elsewhere, newcomers report at Baylor, Houston, Rice and Tech Tuesday, with returning squadmen due Saturday; TCU newcomers check in Wednesday, followed by upperclassmen the following Monday; Arkansas and Texas A&M welcome their new faces Friday and their returning team members the following Wednesday; and Texas welcomes newcomers a week from Tuesday, with returnees starting work four days later

The date that teams are allowed to begin fall workouts depends upon the start of fall classes and the date of their first game.

Dorsett blasts news

DALLAS (AP) - Tony Dorsett, the holdout Dallas Cowboys tailback who has been in hiding for three weeks, said recent news coverage about him has been lopsided

In a brief telephone interview Friday, Dorsett said he had been wronged by reporters and by Cowboys management.

"I'm much better off not saying anything," Dorsett said. "That way nothing can get twisted out of shape the way it has. The coverage has been pretty lopsided, don't you think? I'm the fall guy in all this."

Dorsett didn't report to training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif., and reports surfaced that he was heavily in debt and owed the Internal Revenue Service thousands of dollars. Later, Cowboys officials said Dorsett's agent was holding out for a better contract.

Last week, the IRS said an agreement had been reached on how much Dorsett owed them, while the Cowboys management continued to say publicly they want their star tailback to return and they are willing to help him through his financial troubles.

In the last three weeks, Dorsett has remained elusive, avoiding contact with all but a chosen few.

"How would you like it if your personal affairs were all over the newspapers and TV? It's embarrassing," Dorsett told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "Tex (Cowboys president Tex

Friday's Major League results

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer

Speed, defense and pitching is the hallmark of the St. Louis Cardinals. And when their defense failed, the Cards turned to a rarely used weapon - the home run - to stay within one-half game of the the National League East Division-leading New York Mets.

'We long-balled 'em, didn't we?" Manager Whitey Herzog said after his Cardinals slammed three homers to edge the Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 and make Joaquin Andujar the first 18-game winner in the major leagues.

For the second straight game, Andy Van Slyke and Terry Pendleton hit consecutive homers. In other NL games Friday, San Diego swept a double-header from Houston, 6-4 and 2-1; Montreal stopped Pittsburgh 7-2; New York defeated Chicago 6-4; Los Angeles downed Cincinnati 3-1, and Atlanta edged San Franciso 6-5.

St. Louis has only 55 home runs this season, five in the last two

Mets 6, Cubs 4 Wally Backman's single in the seventh, his third hit, scored pitcher Roger McDowell from second to give New York its 26th victory in the past 33 games. McDowell, 6-4, was the winner in relief of starter Ron Darling, who allowed three solo homers - two by Jody Davis and the other by Keith Moreland.

Warren Brusstar, 2-2, the third of four Cub pitchers, was the loser. McDowell started the rally in the seventh with a single and scored on singles by Lenn Dykstra and Backman. Padres 6-2, Astros 4-1

Miguel Dilone, called up from the minor leagues earlier in the day, scored the winning run on Steve Garvey's bunt as San Diego completed a double-header sweep of the Houston Astros. In the first game, Dilone had three hits, stole two bases and scored twice.

In the opener, left-hander Gene Walter, who like Dilone joined the Padres from their Triple-A Las Vegas farm team Friday, pitched the final three innings to gain the save in his first major-league appearance.

Nolan Ryan, 8-10, was the loser, allowing nine hits and five runs, striking out seven and walking four in 52-3 innings

Expos 7, Pirates & Bryn Smith and Jeff Reardon combined for a five-hitter, while Tim Raines and Hubie Brooks each stroked two hits and scored two runs to lead Montreal over Pittsburgh. Smith, 13-4, went 7 2-3 innings for the victory, giving up four hits, and Reardon picked up his major league-leading 29th save. Pittsburgh starter Rick Reuschel, who left the game after the fourth with a blister on his right finger, took the loss, dropping his Welch, 8-1, scattered eight hits, including Pete Rose's first-inning single. The Reds player-manager now needs just 21 hits to surpass Ty Cobb's all-time mark of 4,191.

Guerrero slugged his league-leading 28th homer after Mariano Duncan and Enos Cabell had opened the inning with singles.

Braves 6, Giants 5 Terry Harper singled home the tie-breaking run as Atlanta scored five runs in the eighth to come from behind and nip San Francisco.

The Giants had only six hits, the first three off Atlanta starter Steve Bedrosian. Reliever Jeff Dedmon, 5-1, got the victory and allowed only one hit, a two-run homer by David Green in the bottom of the

Baseball bypassing Washington,

WASHINGTON (AP) - The baseball players' strike may be over, but there is no baseball in Washington today, and there will be no baseball for the foreseeable future in the nation's capital.

That is, unless the National League decides to expand or a franchise is snatched from unfortunate fans in the San Francisco Bay area or someplace else where attendance is slipping.

The odds are long, and the Sun Belt cities - places like Tampa Bay, Fla., and Phoenix, Ariz. beckon. They would be new to big league baseball, and before the novelty wore off, skyboxes stretching to the outfield would sell like hotcakes. An enterprising owner could turn a handsome profit, fast, even with a subpar

What can Washington offer? A real ballpark, with real grass, and a pretty good subway system. It would be easy to get to the game. But RFK Stadium appears destined to remain the exclusive domain of the Washington Redskins, the National Football League team that has undisputed possession of the city's soul.

All the gimmickry, including escrow funds and special committees, and promises by ex-commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who operated the scoreboard as a boy in old Griffith Stadium and swore he

One night every summer, the likes of Early Wynn, Harmon Killebrew, Hank Aaron and Sandy Koufax are rounded up to stumble through a good-natured Old-Timers game.

Ticket prices are high, so are the concessions, and the stands are barely half-filled. But the old ballplayers and the fans have a good time.

The aftertaste is bitter though The Crackerjack Game and the nostalgia are aching reminders of what was lost - probably forever when the Senators headed for Texas following the 1971 season.

Like a number of other cities, Washington is a victim of the entrepreneurs, the big-buck boys who move franchises around like pizza parlors, working the new neighborhoods, reaping the tax breaks and then selling out for huge profits.

Boston, New York, St. Louis and Philadelphia - all old cities with traditions wrapped around the Braves, Giants, Dodgers, Browns and Athletics - lost those teams too. Never mind the haunting spirits of John McGraw, Mel Ott and Christy Mathewson, Dazzy Vance and Babe Herman, Pete Gray, Connie Mack and Jimmie

When it came time for the owners to pack up and seek their fortunes elsewhere, they moved on. Coogan's Bluff was turned into a housing project.

New Englanders rallied round the Red Sox, the Mets took up some of the slack in New York, and luckily for old Browns and A's fans the Cardinals and Phillies have been pennant contenders often enough to ease some of the pain. But there is still a void. And except for the Washington fans willing to adopt the Baltimore Orioles as a home team, despite the 35 miles and cultural chasm between the two cities, there is no substitute for the old Senators.

Futile as they usually were, the Senators still were a lot of fun, and dearly loved. How could anyone turn his back on a team which boasted one year, "We'll win plenty with Sam Dente."

The Senators didn't, and infielder Dente remains obscure to everyone except members of his family and Washington fans with long memories.

But, then again, who can recall the members of Gerald Ford's Cabinet.

Pampan's 10 year search for son finally ends

By DEE DEE LARAMORE Lifestyles Editor

Ten years of heartbreaking search and frustration finally ended this summer when Peggy Hillman of Pampa brought home her 15-year-old son, James Osgood.

Tragic circumstances led to the mother and son's separation years ago, Hillman says - the death of a daughter who had cancer, a housefire and divorce, and ultimately, accusations of child Neighbors accused Hillman of abusing their children when they saw James with a black eye, she remembers.

James explains that he got the black eye from falling in the bathtub. "I took a flying leap into it," he adds. He was about six years old at the time:

However, the North Carolina welfare department took James and his sister, Anne, who was then seven, from Hillman and placed them in separate foster homes. For two years, they were not allowed to see either of their parents, James says, and only saw each other for a total of two weeks during that time.

At the end of the two years, their father, who had remarried, retrieved the children, moving them to Alahama

In the interim, Hillman, a native of Germany, had moved to Pampa, having lost track of her children while they were in foster care. Hillman suspected they were somewhere in Alabama, but had not been able to get in touch with them, she says.

"I could feel the pain. I knew something was wrong," she

Life wasn't easy for James in that 10 years. Within four years, he ran away 15 to 20 times, he says. In March 1981, James was placed in a foster home. Days later, he was placed in the Birmingham University Hospital because he was believed to be mentally

"The doctor told my parents that I could not make more than a 'D'," James says. "I flunked out that year because I was gone so much. But the next year I made As and Bs. I went up to the hospital to show that doctor my report card, but he was gone.

In the summer of 1984, family problems led to James again entering the foster care system. And about this time, he talked with his mother again, after no contact

Hillman had tried every avenue she could think of to reach her children, she says. Often the Red Cross has mailed Christmas packages to them, she says, but the presents were always returned. The Red Cross had tried to get in touch with the children for her through the Army, (her husband was enlisted) but each time the Army would answer that they had no information to give, Hillman

She placed an advertisement telling of her search for her children in The Pampa News about five years ago, and another in the paper in the town in Alabama where she felt her children were, she says.

Sometime later, Hillman says she received an anonymous letter telling her "If you want to get in touch with your children, call this Shaking with number. excitement, Hillman called the number. Her former husband answered, and when she asked to speak to James and Anne, he hung up on her, she remembers. Plagued with the problems of language barrier and inter - state politics, Hillman could not seem to reach her children. A visit to State Representative Foster Whaley last summer, helped smooth the way, she says. When she explained her problems to Whaley, he immediately wrote to the judge in Alabama who had been handling the legal actions concerning James. When that did not achieve the results Hillman wanted, she says, Whaley wrote a letter to Alabama Governor George Wallace. This time, Hillman says

The ecstatic mother placed a phone call to James' caseworker Cindy Lusk. Lusk told James that his mother wanted to see him again, but he says he was not exactly overjoyed at the prospect.

she was able to contact James.

"I didn't want to see her." James says. He had heard a lot of things about his mother through the years, he says, and really did not have a high opinion of her

In fact, James admits to some murderous thoughts as he waited to see his mother after so many years. "I wanted to show her I didn't need no mother,"

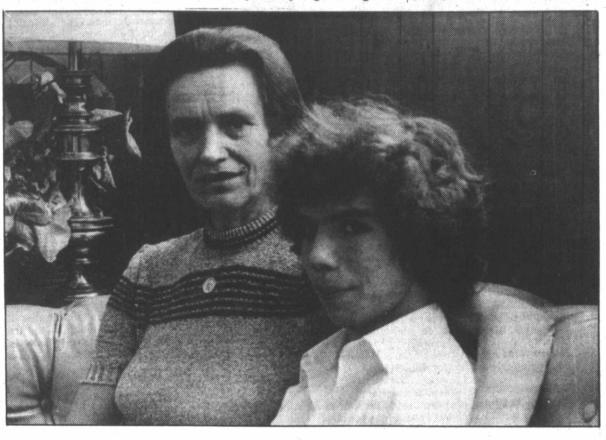

But when Hillman enveloped her son in a bear hug, despite his sunburn, James' resolve melted. "She just seemed so helpless," he explains with a shrug of his shoulders.

James wanted to get to know his mother better, he says, but he was still wasn't ready to come live with her. Several months passed before he says he felt ready for that.

Then on June 2, the Alabama judge allowed James to finally go home to his mother. "It was a wonderful reunion!" Hillman says in her heavily accented English.

In September it will be decided whether he will stay with her permanently or not, James says. "I try and try to get through his mind... I never deserted him," Hillman says emphatically. "I just want him to be happy and live a normal life."

Despite the pitfalls of the 10 year search, Hillman admits that though many times she was discouraged, "in my heart, I never

Freezing sweet corn and yellow squash

By DONNA BRAUCHI County Extension Agent

With the gardening season at its height of production now, my office has been receiving many calls with questions on preserving various foods. Two vegetables in particular have received the greatest attention. Therefore, today I want to share with you the USDA recommendations for freezing sweet or field corn and yellow squash.

In general, USDA recommends blanching most vegetables before freezing. It is necessary to blanch vegetables before freezing to slow or stop the action of enzymes. Until vegetables are ready to pick, enzymes help them grow and mature. After that, they cause loss of flavor and color. If vegetables are not heated enough, the enzymes continue to be active during frozen storage. The vegetables will then develop off-flavors in a few months and may discolor or toughen. Too long a heating period will result in softening of texture and an unnecessary loss of water-soluble vitamins and minerals.

Corn is a delicious vegetable utilized by families in a number of ways. The most popular forms are whole grain, cream-style, and corn-on-the-cob. Freezing is a popular method of preserving corn. To freeze corn, select ears with plump, tender kernels, and thin, sweet milk.

Whole Grain Style Corn - Husk, silk, trim and wash. Heat in boiling water four minutes. Cool and cut kernels from cob at about two thirds the depth of the kernels. Package and freeze

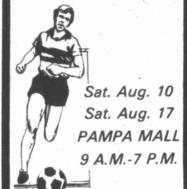

Cream Style Corn - Husk, silk, trim and wash. Heat in boiling water four minutes. Cool and cut kernel tips once or twice, no deeper than the center of the kernels. Scrape the cobs with back of knife to remove the juice and heart of the kernel. Package and freeze.

On-the-Cob - this is probably the method about which the most questions are asked and the most non-recommended methods of freezing are used. USDA recommends the following: Husk, silk, trim, wash and sort ears according to size. Heat in boiling water - small ears, seven minutes; medium ears, nine minutes; and large ears, 11 minutes. Cool and drain. Making sure the ear of corn is cool is the key to success. Make sure the cob as well as the kernels are cool before packaging. This will prevent soggy ears. Package and freeze. USDA does not recommend freezing corn in the shuck, blanching corn in a dashwasher, or freezing corn without washing or blanching.

One of the most abundant vegetables grown in this area is yellow squash. It is prepared in a number of ways from casseroles to fried slices. Many individuals ask about a good method of freezing squash for frying. The best answer we have for that question at this time is that there is not a "best" way. Squash or okra frozen for frying is not top quality any way you go. However, we recommend the following method for both squash and okra. Freezing Squash and Okra for Frying: Wash and slice the vegetables. Meal, but do not salt. Spread one layer on a cookie sheet and heat in 350 degree oven for 3-5

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Michael Byars, 21, son of a former Pampa resident, recently participated as a featured dancer for the New York City Ballet in a trio of works, including a world premiere.

Byars, son of James and Janita Byars and grandson of Ross Byars, has been with the ballet company for a year after training since he was 12. His father, who is a 1959 graduate of Pampa High School, plays first oboe in the company's orchestra.

Byars, who grew up in New York, was one of six featured dancers in the ballet presented in June at the New York State Theater and in July at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center at Saratoga Springs. The three works, all set to piano music by Stravinsky, were "Eight Easy Pieces," "Eight More" and the world premiere of "Eight Miniatures," all choreographed by Peter Martins

According to a review in an area New York newspaper, The Times Union, "About 5,400 fans enthusiastically cheered these crowd-pleasers." Another newspaper, The Saratogian, said of the premiere performance, "The result is sublime. The partners . . . perfectly complement each other, and each pair complements the other two. The dancing is by turns playful, energetic, delicate.'

The New York magazine noted the three men, including Byars, "are all accomplished fellows. . . Good fellowship abounds among the trio" in "Eight More.". audience, mind you, is wild for the Michael's father said the young man's performance in the trio works is his "biggest opportunity to date, with the dancing choreographed on his strengths'

as a dancer. James Byars recalled his musical training at PHS under band director Bill Tregoe, whom he credited for his influence and inspiration which took Byars "from the dusty Panhandle town" to Manhattan.

Colorado is always a favorite vacation spot. Jessie and George Newberry and their son Richard, a dentist in San Antonio, and his children, vacationed there as did Marilyn and Jim McClure, Pat and the Rev. Joe Turner.

Verlene and Wayne Lemons were busy from morning 'til night on the last Sunday of July, their last one in Pampa. Wayne, minister of the Oklahoma Street Church of Christ for many years, accepted the same position at the Peoria and Young Church of Christ in Tulsa. Their daughter Maggie (Mrs. Artis) Betts hosted an all-church reception. An ice cream supper followed the Sunday evening service at Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ preached by Wayne. He and Verlene were presented with a money tree and a book. They will be greatly missed by people all through Pampa. Good luck and best wishes. Verlene and Wayne, in your new home.

Dear Abby

Mom thinks daughter needs more than money from dad By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have an adorable 2 1/2-year-old daughter who has seen her father only once, when she was 6 months old at the blood testing that determined this man as her father. (I'll call him John.)

Since then we have been to court to determine child support, which John pays faithfully. At the time of our hearing, he requested that I direct any and all inquiries regarding our daughter to his attorney. The judge left visiting rights open in hopes that he would one day wish to see her again.

It has been two years and I am heartsick for my daughter. I know she is suffering emotionally from the absence of a father. Someday she will want to know who he is, and I had hoped he would come around before this happens. However, any effort by me to make contact is thwarted by John's attorney, who threatens me with court action if I 'harass" him.

I believe all children have a right to know their father. I am fighting for this right for my child. How can I reach this man before it is too late? Emotionally I am drained. Is my daughter destined to be forever fatherless? I cannot accept this. MOTHER OF A FATHERLESS CHILD

DEAR MOTHER: I understand your pain and disappointment, but there's no way you can force John to see his daughter if he chooses not to.

You say you can't "accept" it. say, you had better get counseling and learn to accept it because your bitterness is not only affecting you, it's bound to affect your daughter. In the absence of a father, she needs a mother who is at peace with herself. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to be married when I turn 21. (I'm 18 now.) When I was about 8 or 9 years old, a friend I'll call Lydia and I made a pact to be each other's maids of honor. We were good friends until junior high school, but now we're not all that close.

Lydia knows I'm engaged, and every time I see her, she says she can't wait to be my maid of honor. I don't want Lydia to be my maid of honor. I don't even want her in my wedding party.

Can I be held to a pact I made when I was 8 or 9 years old? STUCK OR NOT?

DEAR STUCK: Don't waste any energy worrying about what will happen three years from now. Besides, you can't be each other's maids of honor even if you wanted to. After one is married she can be a matron of honor-but not a maid of honor.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I need help in solving. Every time my boyfriend and I are alone together, he always starts touching and kissing me, and we end up making love. I am not saying I don't want to, but he never wants to talk or do anything else.

would like to slack off for a while, but I don't know how to tell him. I'm afraid he might get mad or stop seeing me.

Please tell me what to do. FEELING USED IN PRESCOTT, ARIZ.

DEAR FEELING: There is only one good reason to make love, and that's because you feel like it. If you give in because you're afraid he'll get "mad" or stop seeing you, you are allowing yourself to be used.

Tell him in plain language what you told me, and if he gets mad and stops seeing you because you won't accommodate him every time he gets the urge, you'll be lucky if you never see him again.

Birds and their control

By JOE VanZANDT

County Extension Agent This time of the year it seems like almost everyone has a garden. Without a doubt, it is one of the favorite pastimes of many Texans. Most like to grow tomatoes in their gardens. Tomatoes are the number one crop grown in gardens across the United States and it's obvious why. Everyone enjoys the great taste and flavor of garden fresh, vine-ripe tomatoes.

Unfortunately, not only do home gardeners look forward to enjoying a red, ripe tomato from their gardens, but so do birds. Birds are not much of a garden problem until tomatoes start to ripen. Then, they are a real nuisance. Often birds find the ripe tomatoes before the gardeners do. It would not be so bad if they would just eat a few holes in a few tomatoes. But, what

Brush pastry with milk. Make four well. Bake in a preheated

400-degree oven until edges are golden - 30 minutes. Serve warm, do they do? They eat holes in every tomato about the time it starts to turn red. These holes or damaged spots end up being infested by various types of insects and rot-type diseases. The result is quite obvious, there is a whole lot less tomatoes for the dinner table.

Various methods are used by home gardeners in an attempt to prevent bird damage on tomatoes. Scarecrows, aluminum pie plates, strings of brightly colored ribbons and various types of noise makers are used. Unfortunately, in a very short period of time, the birds are resting on the shoulders of the scarecrows, swinging on the strings of ribbons, ignoring the noise makers and looking at themselves in the reflective aluminum plates.

What can be done about bird damage? Well, one method that does work is to make use of old stockings or panty hose. This is done by cutting the nylon stockings or panty hose into about 15 to 20 inch lengths. Then one end should be tied shut. Next, the resulting tube should be slipped over a cluster of tomatoes. The open end is closed by using a twist tie or a short piece of string. If the tomatoes are not full size, the elastic nature of the panty hose or stocking will expand as the fruits enlarge. When the fruits ripen, they can be easily harvested by untying the closed end and removing the red tomatoes. Its of utmost importance to place the hose or stocking tube over the cluster of tomatoes well before the tomatoes ever start to turn red. If the problem is not anticipated, the birds will get there before the gardener does.

Another method of protecting tomatoes from bird damage is to harvest them when they are pink rather than full red. Most gardeners will not believe it, but a tomato picked at the pink stage and ripened at room temperature has exactly the same taste and flavor as one fully ripened on the vine.

So, if gardeners want vine-ripe tomatoes, encourage them to protect their fruit with panty hose or stockings. It is one sure way to put more vine-ripe tomatoes on the dinner table

Agony and ecstasy of home exercise

By ERMA BOMBECK

You've all read the famous passage from the Gospel of Fitness: "And it came to pass that as more people became conscious of exercise, millions of them climbed into cars and buses and made their way to aerobics classes, jogging paths and gyms. Some boarded planes for spas where they attended a famine.

"And life was good.

"But traffic became unbearable and time-consuming and spas were expensive and one day 20,000 of them decided to grow their own gyms and spas. They planted stationery bicycles in their bathrooms and muscles came up. They planted treadmills in the hallways and sweat appeared. They planted rowing machines in the carports and harvested healthy

"And the word 'fit' was made

My conversion to home fitness is not a pretty story. Like the rest of the world I wanted all the gain with absolutely no pain whatsoever. I wanted to roll out of bed and onto something that moved me before I woke up and realized what I was

Bear with me through the agony and anatomy of a home trampoline.

Day I: Trampoline is removed from box and search is conducted to find out where is the best place for it. It has five sides, six legs and is 36 inches across. Since the point is to exercise without thinking about it, I put it directly in front of the TV set in the family room so I can watch David Hartman. I absolutely love it!

End of Week II: The trampoline is not working out in present spot. Every time I walk through family room, I must walk (ital) around (unital) trampoline. This involves eight extra steps one way going and one way coming back. Multiply this by about 36 trips a day and 365 days a year and we're taling (ital) miles (unital). . Week IV: Trampoline has been in kitchen for over a week now, but is not working out. I tripped over it three days ago and have not been able to work out since there is painful swelling. Besides, it's black and clashes with dishes. Am moving it back to bedroom.

Week VIII: Opened up the hall closet today and guess what? The trampoline almost killed me. I would use it more, but I have to drag it out from behind the skis and the card table and by the time I lug it to the center of the room, I'm exhausted.

Week XII: Don't get me wrong. I love the trampoline and its benefits, but getting to the attic to use it is a real trip. I have to pull down the stairs and be very careful not to fall through the parts of the attic that aren't floored. And when I bounce, I take my life into my hands as the open beams are right

Month VIII: As I told my friend at the garage sale, "I really hate to part with the trampoline. It's like an old freind, but getting dressed and coming out to the garage in the dead of winter to use it is risky. Our family has a history of pulmonary weaknesses." In her kindness, she offered me the use of it whenever I was in the neighborhood.

Year I: It's an eight-mile drive tomy friend's house to use the trampoline, but it's worth it. My heart rate escalates and there's a certain discipline about getting up at 6 a.m. and doing something wonderful for your body. I'm thinking of getting a rowing machine. 1' would be a lot more

Program aims at areas needing vision care

In all of the Pacific Islands, there are only 10 doctors of optometry, according to the Pacific University

Mariana Islands, Palau, Guam, second and third years of pre-optometry studies will be brought to Pacific each summer College of Optometry in Forest Grove. Eight are practicing on Guam, and two optometrists are in American Samoa

Many young people with potential, in that area and elsewhere, would like to enter the optometry profession but lack the prerequisite education and basic encouragement from their communities, says Dr. A. Richard Reinke, assistant dean of the college, which plans to do something about this situation.

A $155,000 "Underserved in Sight'' grant will assist disadvantaged students from areas with a shortage of vision care providers in studying optometry and earning the doctor of optometry degree. The grant, renewable for two more years, is a Health Careers Opportunity Program under the U.S. Department of Health and Human

"The young people who complete this program will then be able to provide vision care to the underserved populations they represent," says Reinke.

The target populations to be served are Pacific Islanders, Native Americans and Hispanics. These groups underrepresented in the optometry profession, and the geographic areas they represent are underserved as to vision care, he

The Hispanics will be from the West Coast states, including some from Pacific's own back yard. For a number of years. Pacific has provided optometric care for a large local Hispanic population through the Virginia Garcia Clinic in nearby Cornelius.

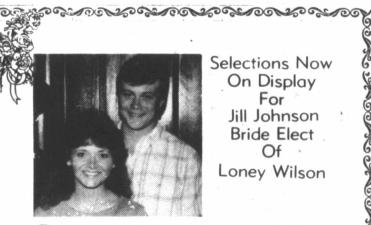

Pacific is now initiating what it calls Education Assistance Agreements with universities and colleges. These will provide preliminary optometry education to ease students' entry to the College of Optometry.

These agreements have been made with the Pacific College of Arts and Sciences on Pacific's own campus, the University of Guam and the Navajo Community College in Arizona. Others are still being negotiated.

Deaf balloon pilot enjoys the high life

GOSHEN, Ohio (AP) - The drifting peacefulness of a hot-air balloon trip is a quiet experience, but it's always soundless for balloon pilot Clinton Glancy.

Deaf since birth, Glancy earned his balloon pilot's license from the Federal Aviation Administration. and takes to the skies when time and weather permit.

His biggest challenge is persuading his mother, Carrie Glancy, to keep her promise to go up with him to celebrate the 60th wedding anniversary she marked recently.

"I have never gone up. I've been afraid," she said, laughing. "They asked me when I was going up, and I said my 60th wedding anniversary. They wrote it down.'

In fairness to Mrs. Glancy, her maiden trip has been postponed seven times since the anniversary date because of weather.

When he isn't off floating on a balloon full of hot air, Glancy, 39, runs an auto body repair shop. He keeps a watchful eye on a wind sock atop his backyard garage, well aware that it is inadvisable to take a balloon up in winds of 10 knots or more.

Glancy got interested in ballooning five years ago through a friend, and studied to pass the FAA written test for a private pilot's license. He then went to Lexington, Ky, to pass the FAA flight inspection test.

"I never saw him work so hard," Mrs. Glancy, a retired teacher who helped tutor him, said of her son's studying for the written exam. "He had to take it twice before he Glancy, whose wife of 12 years, Rita, is also deaf, is accustomed to working hard to achieve his training. He worked in an auto body shop for 10 years before losing his job, then enrolled in a training program to learn more about the business before opening his own repair shop.

Many people wonder how a travel agent can give free travel service and still make money! How can the customer get 'something for nothing"? A travel consultant sells the travel which various companies offer. Travel agents represent the airlines, the cruise lines, the tour companies, the hotels, the rental car companies. Therefore, they sell these companies' wares and the airlines, cruise lines, etc. pay the agents for this representation. Pampa Travel Center represents all airlines, cruise lines, tours and other travel entities at NO COST TO THE CUS-TOMER! Our slogan is true-free service, priceless advice. We are in a position to find the best values for the customer's needs, whether it be a simple flight or a complicated trip itinerary.

Don't wait until you decide to take an international trip to get a PASSPORT. September to February is the best time to apply for a passport. U.S. passports are valid for ten years for adults and five years for travelers under eighteen. Applications are available at Pampa Travel or at the district clerk's office on the third floor of Gray County Court House. The fee for a new passport is $42 for adults and $27 for those under eighteen. Renewal of adult passports less than eight years old is $35 and can be done by mail. Applications for all new passports and for children's renewals must be presented in person to an authorized passport agent in Pampa, the district clerk. Children's and new applications must be accompanied by a certified birth certificate, two pictures the proper size and for adults another ID, preferably a valid driver's license. The district clerk's office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. It is a good idea to keep passports current. Remember: it takes from two to four weeks to process a passport application. One never knows when he will want to go on the spur-of-the-moment international trip! Pleasant Journey!

Middle Tennessee expects its boom to roll on

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) -Tennessee's midsection has tickled the fancy of entrepreneurs who have dotted the rolling hills with new plants, offices and housing.

GM's $3.5 billion Saturn plant was the big one, but state officials feel confident it won't be the last. And despite some grumbling about rapid development and increasing highway congestion, the state is moving quickly to capitalize on the Saturn coup to lure even more industry.

"We decided to strike while the iron was hot," said Debbie Koch, assistant press secretary to Gov. Lamar Alexander

The governor personally wrote

A study released in June by Alexander Grant & Co., a Chicago-based accounting and management consulting firm, ranked Tennessee 10th among the 48 contiguous states in ability to attract manufacturing plants in 1984, up from 14th a year earlier.

A $592.2 million manufacturing investment throughout Tennessee in 1979 jumped to $1.1 billion in 1983. A year later, 22,130 new manufacturing jobs were created statewide - second in the College's aviation program trains pilot-mechanics

DOUGLAS, Ariz. (AP) - Scott Taylor, who caught the flying bug when he was a youngster, is taking no chances.

After completing his associate's degree in airframe and power-plant technology at Cochise College recently, the 23-year-old Globe native is back in class, working toward a commercial pilot's license

"I've had three or four offers for a mechanic's job," Taylor said,

'but I really want to be a pilot." Taylor, like his 175 fellow aviation students here, is taking advantage of Cochise College's unique flight program. The community college is the only public institution in Arizona to offer training in both the mechanical and piloting aspects of aeronautics - and one of a very few such schools in the country.

The campus even has its own paved and lighted airstrip and ground facilities.

Lee Oppenheim, aviation-division chairman at the college, said the program started in 1968 with 15 student mechanics. a few student pilots, three Beechcraft airplanes - and no airfield.

"We flew out of Bisbee-Douglas International," Oppenheim said. "But the distance from campus was too great and caused unacceptable waste of time.

Bisbee-Douglas International Airport, on U.S. 666 north of town, is about 14 miles from the campus, which is west of Douglas.

So in 1969 a dirt runway was bladed out of college-owned land adjacent to the technology building, Oppenheim said. The 9,000-foot strip was paved in 1972 The college now owns 13

"flyable" single-and twin-engine aircraft and about 10 others used for ground training. Some of the planes have been donated to the school. The largest is a land-locked Convair 340 airliner, once used as an executive transport by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Oppenheim, who grew up in New from the University of Illinois, where he was a flight instructor.

"I started flying for pleasure," said Oppenheim, who graduated from the University of New Mexico and went on to graduate work at the University of Phoenix and the University of Arizona. "I got my commercial certificate and was offered a job.

He began teaching and charter-piloting for a New Mexico flight operator and aircraft dealer. Oppenheim, who also was a certificated flight mechanic, was obvious: Vincent Price.

Despite a half-century of playing everything from Ibsen to T.S. Eliot, Price sticks in everyone's mind as a sinister figure.

"Out of 100 movies I've appeared in, only 20 have been in the category of horror pictures," he sighed. "From the very beginning of my career, I played all kinds of roles, but one picture changed all that: 'The House of Wax.'"

As the mad proprietor of the wax museum, the ordinarily gentle actor scared millions in the 1'53 movie. In the years that followed, he went through the Edgar Allen Poe catalog ("The Raven," "The Pit and the Pendulum'') and did his thing in such films as "The House on Haunted Hill," "Scream and Scream Again" and "The Abominable Dr. Phibes.

At 74, Vincent Price, who lectures on fine art to the nation's universities and who appears in concert with symphony orchestras, views it all with an air of bemusement.

At this point in his life, Price believes in doing what he likes to do. That includes the lectures — 60 a year - often in residency at colleges; cooking (his cookbook has sold 350,000 copies in 17 years); introducing the PBS "Mystery" series, and other activities.

Price occasionally returns to the theater, recently with a one-man show about Oscar Wilde, "Diversions and Delights." He has sometimes appeared with his third wife, the noted Australian actress Coral Brown ("An Englishman Abroad'').

His suave manner convinces many people that Vincent Price is British. He was born in St. Louis. Mo., and attended Yale University Long considered the rock world's odd-man-out because he could never be put in a musical niche, Lofgren has been a favorite of critics and something of a cult idol with such tunes as "The Sun Hasn't Set on This Boy Yet," and "White Lies." However, during his 17-year career, he never reached commercial success.

But that's beginning to change

ALL MY CHILDREN--Det. Young and Langley identify the snuff box that Eugene lifted. Eugene disappears and Det. Young petitions Jesse to help by going undercover to find out information on a planned heist. He accepts since he has nothing to lose but is pledged to total secrecy. Palmer pressures Hines for a way to obtain Nina's divorce but his attempt to have Nina sign papers is thwarted at Oak Haven. Edna learns from Erica that Barton is looking for an important cassette disk and informs Andrew. Together Tad and Dottie deduce it was the same disk that Kristie was searching for and send Andrew to Pine Valley to find Tad's jacket. Andrew delivers the papers to Cynthia who waits for Adam at Kirby's. Adam must leave after Josh alerts him to Jeremy's whereabouts. RYAN'S HOPE-Laslo asks Siobhan if she knows Chessy and plants a

AUSTIN - Texans who quickly soured on their new cars are turning to the state Motor Vehicle Commission for some lemon aid.

A commission examiner, operating under the state's new Lemon Law, has recommended refunds in the first two cases to come down the road - an odorous Dodge and a leaky Buick.

Patsy Martin of Irving complained that her 1984 Dodge 600 smells of gasoline. Larry Miley of Longview says his 1984 Buick Century has an engine coolant leak. Both want their money back.

They should get it, examiner Henri ten Brink said in his recommendations to the commission, which could rule next month.

"It's the only way I could get any satisfaction. Chrysler wouldn't help me," Ms. Martin said of the

Lemon Law

The 1983 Legislature approved the law, intended as a last recourse for new car buyers convinced they've got a lemon. Chrysler went to court to challenge the law, and won. But a federal appeals court reversed that decision and the Lemon Law was put back on the books in April.

The Martin and Miley cases were heard by ten Brink, a commission assistant director who drives a 1973 Buick with 98,000 miles on it and has a radio-controlled scale-model Porsche in his office.

Ten Brink's reports say refunds are in order even if the defect seems minor. In the case of the Miley coolant leak, he said he was "not persuaded that a vehicle must be rendered completely immobile before the use and market value are substantially impaired.'

Miley had a long list of complaints about his 1984 Buick Century.

"No matter if all the problems are eventually corrected, which doesn't seem very likely, the 'new has worn off and we haven't had a happy day of ownership, nor will we," Miley said in a letter to the commission.

The car was in the shop 23 times the first year. "I do not want this car," Miley told the commission. "I have 44 more payments left and I'm already soured on the vehicle. Miley, an office manager for Brown & Root, took his complaint to the local Better Business Bureau, which said there was fault enough to go around. "They cited me for not catching the defects before taking delivery of the car," Miley said in a telephone

Unsatisfied with the BBB action, he turned to the Ten Brink, Miley and Buick officials rode in the car as part of the hearing. Ten Brink found no defects during the drive, but noticed the coolant leak afterward. That was enough to make Miley's Century a certifiable Texas Lemon Law lemon, he

"Constant monitoring and refilling the engine coolant by Mr. Miley requires him to substantially alter his enjoyment and use of the vehicle compared to an owner who got a 1984 Buick without an engine coolant leak," said ten Brink.

Under the law, a purchaser can get a full refund -

If your car's a lemon...

... you can now get help

minus an allowance for any driving done before the first complaint. In the Miley case, ten Brink recommended a full refund, minus 20 cents per mile for the first 2,895 miles.

He also said Beavers Buick of Longview, which sold the car to Miley, could be required to cover 25 percent of the refund.

Buick officials refused to comment on the Miley case, saying they have not seen the ten Brink report. Company spokesman Tom Roberts of Dallas also said the automaker has no solid feeling on the "It's too new to form an opinion at this time," he

Miley has talked to lawyers about suing for "mental anguish."

"This has really beef eating on me ... the frustration of going through this 23 times and still not having a car that I don't have to put radiator fluid in every week," he said.

Ms. Martin said she bought her Dodge in May 1984 because it had lots of extras and filled a particular

"I liked it. I'm a very short, fat woman and I could drive it," she said. She paid $10,500 to North Loop Dodge in North Richland Hills.

Among her complaints were a malfunctioning horn, a leaky windshield, sporadic air conditioning and a gasoline odor so offensive that Ms. Martin won't let her pregnant daughter ride in the Dodge.

"The last time I talked with them they said their computer said there was nothing wrong with my car." she told the commission.

In October, Ms. Martin wrote to Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca. She said she never heard from him. In all, the car was returned to the dealer for service 32 times, she said.

Ten Brink tested the car during the Martin

"A strong petroleum product odor was detected, although it did not smell exactly like raw gasoline. It was strong enough to cause irritation and discomfort, especially if extended exposure were to occur," he said in his report.

Give the lady a full refund, minus 20 cents a mile for the first 853 miles, ten Brink recommended. Russell Harding, the commission's director, agrees with ten Brink's calls in the Martin and Miley

"We have to proceed on the basis that this is legislation designed for the benefit of the consuming public. If a person pays $9,000, $10,000, $12,000 for a new car, they are entitled to reasonable use of that vehicle. Reasonable use means you don't have to worry every morning about filling it with coolant or driving the darned thing with a gas odor," he said. A Chrysler spokesman said the company wouldn't comment on the recommendation until the commission acts. The dealer tried to help, but couldn't find a problem, he said. "When she took it to the dealership, the problem could not be duplicated," said Larry Lash, spokesman for Chrysler's service and parts operation in Detroit. Chrysler's district manager also saw no evidence of a problem, Lash said.

"The first time we at Chrysler experienced the problem was at the time of the hearing. At the time of the hearing, yes, there was a problem," Lash said in a telephone interview.

Of the Lemon Law generally, Lash said, "Our comment is we will abide by the law and the court's

The Texas Automobile Dealers Association likes the law. It is better than the company-by-company or local Better Business Bureau complaint system that some auto business people favor, said TADA executive Tom Blanton.

"If it's done on a local basis, no one will ever know what's wrong with cars, generally speaking," said Blanton. "By running it through one agency, the light of day will shine on them for all to see.

Taste will tell if it's a real Pecos melon

By JUDY GIANNETTINO Associated Press Writer

PECOS, Texas - It's a fact of life that when something works, and works well, others will try to imitate it. But in the case of world-famous Pecos cantaloupes, the attempt to emulate the mouth-watering melons has gone one step further, farmers and agriculture officials say.

"It happens all the time. People are being told they're eating Pecos melons, and they're not," said A. D. Foster, cantaloupe grower and owner of Pecos Produce farmers in this area began picking their succulent melons a few weeks ago. The cantaloupes generally are planted each year in May, when soil temperatures reach between 65 and 70 degrees, said Pecos County agriculture agent Zan Matthies. The melons then usually are ready to be picked by mid-July, he said.

But other melon-growing areas in the state have been selling since June what they contend are Pecos melons, Foster said.

"The joke around here always is that you have to go somewhere else in Texas to get Pecos melons in Matthies said the name "Pecos melons" never has been patented "so worlds of melons are identified as Pecos melons.

"But if people think they've been eating Pecos melons in June, they need to taste these." he said. "Real Pecos melons just now are beginning to come

Pecos County is not as large a melon producer as neighboring Reeves County, of which Pecos is the county seat, but Matthies said he doesn't think there's a dispute between the two over melons.

"If you talk about a Pecos melon, you're talking about a West Texas melon," he said. "The imitators come from other areas."

Mike Mallett, agriculture agent for Reeves County, agreed, saying that all melons picked in the area are Pecos melons and that they all are brought to Pecos for processing.

"About the first of July, people in other areas were advertising Pecos melons, but here, they hadn't been picked," Mallett said. "Maybe someone had planted seeds from a Pecos melon, but it's not the

The secret of Pecos melons, according to Mallett, Matthies and Foster, is growing conditions.

"It's not the variety. It's just the soil and climate," said Foster.

Matthies said Pecos cantaloupes "are grown in a high-heat unit deal with salty water and low humidity

The combination provides the sweet taste of the Melons from the California coast and the Rio Grande Valley of Texas "are a mushier-type melon with less firmness and not the same sugar content," Matthies said.

With the "real" Pecos melon season now in full swing, Matthies said, "I feel comfortable saying it's as good as it's ever been. The yield looks good.'

But neither Matthies nor Mallett could predict what the two county's yields would be, saying they would have to wait until the end of the season another four to six weeks - before determining how well farmers had done.

"It's going on fast and furious," said Mallett. "Last year's yields were real good, slightly above average, and it's comparable this year.'

Foster said his crop was good this year. From the 700 acres he planted, he said, he yielded about 400,000 cartons with an average of 15 melons per box.

Foster said despite his productive crop, "the price hasn't been anything fantastic."

AMARILLO SUNDAY NEWS-GLOBE AUGUST 4, 1985 23-A

For a royalty owner, 'straight up, straight down'

By AL LEWIS Globe-News Energy Write

Gilbert Haiduk of White Deer can remember Panhandle Dust Bowl days during the Great Depression, but he can't remember much about the piece of paper his father signed then. In the 1930s, Haiduk's father leased his oil and gas rights to a company called Hagy, Harrington and Marsh.

Now, after many years and a few transactions, Dorchester Oil Co. holds Haiduk's lease. "I don't have any idea what that lease said because I never saw it," he said.

In the 1930s, Haiduk saw dusters sweep his father's fields clean of topsoil. For three or four years in a row, the Haiduks never got a return on their seed money. Gas was worth very little and whatever money could be scrounged sometimes would make the difference between sink or swim.

"At that time if anybody would have offered them a nickel they'd have taken it and said thank you," Haiduk said. "They were literally in a bind. They didn't realize what this would one day amount to and they were willing to take next to nothing for it because of the times. When his father died in 1969, Haiduk inherited his royalty property - at one-sixteenth of the total production from one gas well, it wasn't a fortune. "That well made more money for dad 30 years ago than it does for me now," Haiduk said. "My checks haven't been over $100 at any one time all year long and most of them have been under $10." According to Haiduk's check receipts, Dorchester paid him of $449.52 in 1984 for well over 12 million cubic feet of gas. If an average home consumed 129,000 cubic feet of gas per year, Haiduk's gas lease would serve more than 93 households for an entire year. Yet his 1984 royalty payment was only about $100 more than the average Amarillo consumer's yearly gas

But Haiduk's luck changed shortly after 1982 when independent oilmen took an interest in developing his property. They struck oil and something else: "white oil. White oil is condensate that falls out of natural gas as it cools, either naturally or with help from a refrigeration unit. Almost every oil well produces some gas. For years, the Texas Railroad Commission allowed oilmen to produce 100,000 cubic feet of this gas (called casinghead gas) for every barrel of oil that comes with it.

Regular natural gas from the Panhandle Field is dedicated to interstate markets and must be sold at low prices, but casinghead gas can be sold at whatever price the market will bear

The independents who developed Haiduk's property realized, like other independents, that mixing white oil with black oil means lots of oil. The more oil, the more casinghead gas can be sold.
Independents claim the prospect for casinghead gas and white oil is an incentive to explore areas that are otherwise too risky. If a well doesn't produce enough oil, an oilman can at least make his investment worthwhile by selling the Major oil companies, on the other hand, contend that what the independents call casinghead gas is actually their gas being diverted through a loophole. State and federal regulatory agencies recently have upheld many of their complaints.

Haiduk did well when the independents first developed his land. They paid him royalties of $6,000 and $8,000 per month.

"It was like a dream come true," he said. This was the first time the royalty owner ever got a fair shake for anything." Haiduk decided he could afford to retire early. He had worked hard all his life and raised five children. He and his wife, Evelyn, were hoping to help their youngest daughter, Karla, through med-ical achool. They also wanted to travel and visit. their children now living in other parts of the coun-

But then something happened to Haiduk's royal-

"It went just like a temperature draft," he said, "straight up and straight down."

Three weeks ago the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission told 135 independent operators - including the three on Haiduk's lease - to cease their operations.

The commission ruled that the operators were diverting gas dedicated to interstate markets. Dor-chester had complained that the operators were producing from a strata above the gas-oil contact, a place where there is only interstate gas, they

David Nall, President of Ezekiel Oil Co., was are of three independents who developed Haiduk's se. He said he had never even heard of the gasoil contact until Dorchester went to the FERC with its complaint.

According to Nall, there is nothing illegal about his operation on Haiduk's lease. Nall said the Texas Railroad Commission told him the Panhandle Field was a common reservoir, which meant he could produce from any strata he pleased as long as he satisfied the gas-oil ratio.

A spokesman for the commission, Ray Grasshoff, said the Panhandle Field never was declared a common reservoir. Rules on the books since the 1930s say clearly that an oil well can't produce from strata where there is no oil, Grasshoff said.

Grasshoff could not explain the discrepancy between what the Railroad Commission is now saying and what Nall and other independents claim the Railroad Commission said in the past.

"Our legal staff has taken the position that what's on the books is what's on the books." Grasshoff said. Haiduk said he feels betrayed by the Railroad

"The independents never would have drilled had not the Railroad Commission said this is fitting and proper," he said.

The FERC order "all comes down to one judge's decision: Brenda Murray's," Haiduk said. 'And she doesn't have any idea what goes on in Haiduk hasn't seen a dime from the independents' production since the FERC case began. Kerr-McGee and Getty Oil, the companies that buy the casinghead gas from Haiduk's lease, have put his royalty payments into escrow until FERC comes to a final decision.

Haiduk doesn't expect to see that money since FERC is now deciding how the independents will pay for the gas it has ruled was diverted illegally from the interstate market.

Meanwhile, Haiduk is being taxed for royalties he won't receive. He probably won't even make a third as much as the $4,800 royalty tax he will be

"They're taxing me on an appraised value which is just a big fat zero," Haiduk said. Dianne Lavake, Carson County's chief appraiser, said, "We know that (the FERC order) is going to hurt bad . . . the independents are our tax base."

Independents paid almost $2.5 million in Carson County taxes in 1984. In that same period, major companies paid $561,145.

Lavake said royalty owners and independents must pay taxes on the basis of the assessed value they have held until recently.

'We know how much is on the tax rolls for this year, but whether or not we can collect it, we don't know," Lavake said.

Next year, assessed value of independent oil properties will drop, Lavake said. But taxes aren't Haiduk's biggest worry. If the FERC decision stands, Haiduk won't get anyone to produce his oil ever again. All he'll ever receive is a $7 to $100 a month from Dorchester.

POSTAL EXAM WORKSHOP

CLERK-CARRIER (Starting Pay: $9.48/hr)

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Clerk-Carrier Examination at the Pampa Post Office as well as many other Post Offices in the 790 Zip Code Area when it is announced. [Last given in 1983 and since it won't be offered again for at least 3 years, don't miss out!]

4-HOUR WORKSHOP

Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded! MOW is the time to prepare. The pressure is on to score as high as possible to get the job. Career-Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,532 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan; men and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%. This workshop is being offered now, prior to the formal announcement of the examination dates, to give you adequate time to prepare for the test. Many post offices begin testing within a week of the announcement which isn't enough time to prepare properly. By starting now, you'll be ready to attain high scores using our methods when the test is given. Come to the workshop. If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition to the in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weeldy newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only The Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like

* You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal exam review. * You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional

Cowboy humorist died 50 years ago

By GIL BROYLES Associated Press Writer

CLAREMORE, Okla. (AP) - It is as though Will Rogers still saunters down Claremore sidewalks, adding to the ranks of the millions he befriended in a life ended in an Alaska plane crash 50 years ago this week

"He was a great hand to visit up and down the streets of Claremore," remembers John F. McClellan, 71. "I didn't know he was famous. I like to never got that through my head.'

McClellan is a volunteer host three days a week at the Will Rogers Memorial, a sprawling ranch-style building packed with memorabilia from the cowboy humorist's several careers.

From his start as a skilled roper on the family ranch near Oologah, Indian Territory, Rogers evolved into a philosopher whose homespun views of politics and the popular culture helped see America through the hard times of the Great Depression

Rogers is buried here in a tomb overlooking eastern Oklahoma hill country. Inside the memorial, the base of a bronze statue of Rogers bears one of his best-known sayings:

"I never met a man I didn't like.

It is Rogers' universal appeal as a vaudevillian, a motion picture actor who made 71 films, a newspaper columnist and a satirist that made his death at age 55 a national tragedy.

Rogers and fellow Oklahoman Wiley Post died Aug. 15, 1935, when their nose-heavy seaplane crashed in shallow water off Point Barrow. Alaska. It was an ironic end for two men whose fervor for aviation helped make commercial air travel routine. Post, a barnstorming pilot from Maysville, Okla, twice made around-the-world flights and set new altitude records while wearing the pressurized suit he invented. The suit and his airplane, the Winnie Mae, are at the Smithsonian Institution. He was 37.

Oklahoma's loss was shared by the nation. Thousands paid tribute to Rogers from Washington, D.C., where a statue was erected after his death to "keep watch on Congress," to California, where Rogers' Pacific Palisades ranch has become a state park.

Dr. Reba Collins, director of the Will Rogers Memorial, said the interest in Rogers has continued unabated. About 500,000 people a year visit the memorial - an estimated 20 million since it opened

"It's pretty amazing after this many years," she said. "They come from everywhere."

Rogers dined with presidents and common folk, and poked fun at both with an Oklahoma drawl and a crinkle-faced style that made him one of the top personalities of his

"He was somebody that the world needed," said veteran actor Joel McCrea. "He was a great man, a great American. You keep looking for somebody like him, but they don't come around.

McCrea, retired at his ranch near Camarillo, Calif., made his first films with Rogers. He compares the oft-quoted Rogers to author Mark Twain.

309 W. Foster

"Will had a wider appeal," McCrea said. "With the common man, Rogers was unbeatable.

"First of all, he was aware of everything. He was always interested in everything and he had a brilliant mind," McCrea said. 'Seventy-five percent of the things he said will fit very well today. He had an advance intuition.'

Mrs. Collins says Rogers was a tremendous communicator who played a major role in the political history of the country in the 1920s and 1930s

'He was tremendously influential in the world of that time, yet he's not even mentioned in the political science history of the time," she said.

His words have been compiled from the storehouse of material at the memorial into 22 volumes by Oklahoma State University. Copies of his movies, 21 of them "talkies," are still being collected. "I'm an educator first of all," Mrs. Collins said. "My goal is to get him into the stream of education.

"I'm sure people think I'm almost deifying him, but I'm not." she said. "He was taking a very complex situation and simplifying it so the man in the street could understand it.

Will Rogers Jr., the eldest of three surviving Rogers children, said his father's humor was quite

"He was much slower than other comedians," said Rogers, who lives on an Arizona ranch. "There was no malice. There was no hate to his humor. Satirists normally hate rather deeply. Today, so much of our humor is left wing or right wing. He was unique in that he balanced it very easily."

"No one took offense," McCrea said. "He never wore thin.

"He was one in a million."
