

Reagan backs down on sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, backing away under pressure from his longtime opposition to imposing sanctions against South Africa, announced today he will take immediate steps to punish the white-ruled regime economically for its continued enforcement of apartheid laws that discriminate against the nation's black majority.

The abrupt shift to avoid an embarrassing foreign policy defeat in Congress came as the Senate prepared to move toward adoption of a sanctions bill.

Reagan said his executive order taking many of the steps Congress was moving toward requiring was "designed and aimed against the machinery of apartheid without indiscriminately punishing the people who are victims of that system — measures that will disassociate the United States from apartheid but associate us positively with peaceful change."

He pledged to veto sanctions legislation if it reaches his desk.

Reagan said he is:

- Banning all computer exports to South African law enforcement agencies;
- Halting all exports of nuclear technology until Pretoria agrees to meet the terms of international non-proliferation agreements;
- Prohibiting loans to the South African government, except for those going to programs helping blacks.

—Taking steps to ban the importation of the Krugerrand, the South African gold coin, in the United States. He also directed the Treasury to consider minting a gold coin he said could serve as an alternative to the coin, held by investors and collectors.

But he warned Pretoria to take clear steps to end unequal treatment of blacks and said, "The American people are impatient. We all feel very strongly about the changes needed."

Reagan announced he was sending Ambassador Herman Nickel, recalled three months ago, back to Pretoria with a presidential letter expressing growing impatience with South Africa's resistance to grant equal political status for all its residents.

The president insisted he was not abandoning his policy of "constructive engagement," the administration's term for its efforts to bring change in South Africa through negotiations, rather than economic or military pressure.

But he said he might now use the term "active, constructive engagement."

Reagan said, "The problems of South Africa were not created overnight and will not be solved overnight, but there is no time to waste."

He said the United States can exert only "limited" influence in South Africa. He once more called on South African President P.W. Botha to negotiate with "responsible" black leaders with a view toward assuring "political participation by all citizens of South Africa."

But he added that, "You have to see intent, and see whether steps are being taken in a forthright manner or ... trying to hold off from the ultimate result."

Imposition of sanctions would amount to a retreat under fire for Reagan, who has pursued a policy of "constructive engagement" designed to produce political reform in South Africa through negotiations only.

But with the Republican-led Senate expected to give final congressional clearance this week to sanctions legislation, and House and Senate leaders warning publicly that any presidential veto would be overridden, the administration decided over the weekend to effectively abandon that policy.

The White House had no comment on the reported switch, but Secretary of State George Shultz met over the weekend with key Republican leaders, and telephoned Democratic Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia on Sunday to tell him there would be an announcement.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas indicated that if Reagan went through with his announcement, GOP leaders would seek a delay in final passage of the sanctions legislation until next spring. But it was not clear whether Democrats would agree.

These include Reagan's call for a comprehensive tax reform, his determination to resist protectionist trade legislation and his call for reduced federal spending.

Reagan's decision appears to end a difficult debate both within the administration and between the White House and its Republican allies in Congress.

City to study garbage rate hike Tuesday

The Pampa City Commission will hold a public hearing on the fiscal 1985-1986 budget and discuss an increase for garbage collection rates during its regular meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Copies of the proposed budget will be available in the city secretary's office from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday and Tuesday for anyone wanting to look at it before the public hearing.

The commission will consider on first reading two ordinances relative to the proposed budget. One will be for the official adoption of the budget, with a second reading scheduled for Sept. 24.

The second ordinance would set the property tax rate at 64 cents per $100 valuation, a penny less than last year's 65 cents. The total proposed tax rate includes 50.59 cents for maintenance and support of the general government (General Fund), 3 cents for the Lovett Memorial Library fund and 10.41 cents for the interest and sinking fund.

Commissioners also will consider on first reading an ordinance establishing new sanitation collection rates for residential and commercial customers.

The proposed rates would increase from $6.50 to $8.50 monthly for residential rates and from $8.50 to $13 monthly per container for commercial rates.

City Manager Bob Hart said a study of the operating costs for the Sanitation Department revealed it was operating at a loss of $249,000 per year, due to depreciation of capital assets, overhead charges and a note for equipment purchased in prior years.

The new rates would allow the department to pay for the operations of the collection system, the city landfill and the flatbed truck used to pick up large items in the community. The increase also would be sufficient to handle operations costs for several years into the future and build up funds for future increased costs, including replacement of equipment and dumpsters, Hart said.

Commissioners also will consider on first reading an ordinance concerning the zoning changes for the Sanders Park North Addition, a matter which has been under discussion for the past couple of months.

The city staff has prepared four different ordinances on the proposed zoning change from Agriculture District for the different portions of the proposed development east of Duncan and Perryton Parkway and north of current existing developments.

The differences among the ordinances concern Block 15, located east of Duncan and between 29th and 30th Avenues, and Block 13, bounded by 30th and 32nd Avenues and Aspen and Beech Streets.

Block 13 would be Multi-Family District in three of the ordinances, with Block 15 being either Agriculture, Office or Single Family 1. The other ordinance would have Block 13 as Single Family 2 and Block 15 as Single Family 1.

Commissioners will decide on only one of the submitted ordinances, with four affirmative votes required.

Commissioners also will consider on second and final reading an ordinance on home occupations. The ordinance will allow beauty shops, barber shops and retail sales as a home occupation, with garage sales permitted twice a year for consecutive days without obtaining a permit.

Another ordinance to receive second and final reading concerns standards, procedures and fees relative to petroleum or gas well collection systems.

In other business, the commission will consider:

- a contract with City Ball Club, Inc. for the construction of a batting practice facility at Hobart Street Park;
- a resolution relative to study of a rate increase proposed by Southwestern Public Service;
- the removal of inoperative traffic signal lights at Somerville and Foster; and
- declaration of old water storage tanks at the former Pump Station No. 1 (located on the triangular-shaped tract between Hobart and Ward) as surplus property.

Commissioners also have scheduled an executive session to discuss personnel and other matters.

Thailand rebels crushed in coup try

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Government forces crushed a coup attempt today by 400 to 500 soldiers led by former top military officers who attacked key army installations with tanks, officials said.

Authorities said at least four people, including two members of an NBC News crew, Bangkok bureau chief Neil Davis, an Australian, and American soundman Bill Latch, were killed in a battle at an army compound that followed proclamation of the coup.

Starting at the government's surrender deadline of 3 p.m. (4 a.m. EDT), rebel soldiers manning tanks in the Supreme Command compound, which served as the rebel base, began to throw down their arms. Government officers said all rebel soldiers agreed to surrender and rebel leaders were under house arrest.

Radio Thailand said Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda hurried back from a trip to Indonesia and had an audience with Thai King Bhumipol Adulyadej. The king is the single greatest unifying symbol in Thailand and has figured prominently in the success or failure of previous attempts to change power.

Gen. Tienchai Sirigumphon, acting head of the armed forces, told reporters the coup attempt was engineered by former Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanand, once a top military man; former armed forces commander Gen. Serm Nanakorn and former army deputy commander Gen. Yod Thephadasin.

He said the three had "deceived" or forced junior officers to join the plot.

Tienchai said 59 people, 29 of them soldiers, were wounded in a tank-led rebel attack on a loyalist stronghold. Also reported killed were a soldier and a civilian Thai woman.

Bangkok's international airport remained open, but government offices and schools were closed today. The capital's streets were normal.

Acting Prime Minister Prachuab

Suntrangkoon declared a state of emergency as of noon (1 a.m. EDT) to suppress the coup attempt.

At 6 a.m. (7 p.m. EDT Sunday), rebel soldiers seized Radio Thailand, and government television Channel Nine. They announced they had seized power and dissolved the Parliament and Cabinet.

While Serm proclaimed the "Revolutionary Army's" takeover of power over Radio Thailand, the rebels moved tanks to the compounds of the Supreme Command, Government House, the First Army Division Headquarters and the public relations department, the national media center.

But loyalists reported they regained control of all official and military media by early afternoon. Maj. Gen. Uthairat Sanitvong Na Ayuthaya of the Supreme Military Command told the rebels at 2 p.m. to turn themselves within the next hour or be "crushed completely."

The men charged in today's coup attempt also had been accused of involvement in the April 1981 coup attempt by "young Turks," a group of reformist-minded army officers.

NBC's general manager for Asia and the Pacific, Bruce Mac Donell, and witnesses said Davis was killed in the fighting near the compound.

Trade top topic in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — An independent-minded Senate goes back to work today with leaders saying President Reagan's move against unfair trading practices in Europe, Japan, South Korea and Brazil has done little to satisfy the appetite in Capitol Hill for protectionist legislation.

As the Senate ends its August recess — the House convened last week — trade is just one aspect of a developing tug-of-war between Congress and the White House over the autumn legislative agenda.

In his regular Saturday radio address, the president said he ordered investigations into whether unfair trade barriers had been raised against exports of U.S. information technology to Brazil, tobacco in Japan and insurance services in South Korea. Reagan also threatened to take action against trade practices of Japan and the European Common Market.

"I don't think we ought to start this protectionist derby up in the Congress, but I do believe that he's going to have to do more. ... We believe that this will not be enough," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Sunday.

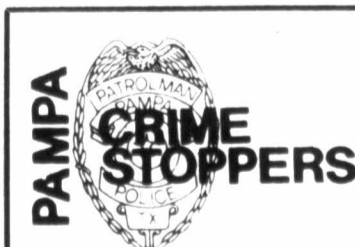

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the top Democrat on the Finance subcommittee on international trade, said on ABC's "This Week" that the president's actions "really involve very minor ... volumes in trade. So I think they're mostly cosmetic."

Sunday fires may be arson

Pampa Fire Marshall Tom Leggett suspects that two fires that caused extensive damage to a Haliburton Co. warehouse at 500 W. Brown this weekend may have been deliberately set.

The first fire broke out at 4:45 p.m. Sunday and caused extensive fire damage to a washroom and upper floor offices and smoke and heat damage to the rest of the complex. Leggett waited until 5 p.m. Sunday to survey the scene.

He added that the fire "either reflared or was reset" at about 2 a.m. Monday.

Since its inception in February, 1983, Pampa Crime Stoppers has been instrumental in obtaining information regarding crimes committed in Pampa through citizen involvement and a cash reward incentive offered to those citizens who anonymously volunteer information.

Due to anonymous tips received through Crime

Stoppers, the Pampa Police Department has been able to clear a significant number of offenses and recover an appreciable amount of stolen and illicit drugs.

Citizens may witness all or part of a crime without being aware of what they have seen. And, in some instances citizens do not contact police with information out of fear of retaliation by the criminal if their identity were revealed.

Crime Stoppers is the answer. Cash rewards of up to $1,000 are available for information leading to the arrest and indictment of persons committing crimes in Pampa.

Parts of bodies found in bags

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man who spotted a dog dragging a human head along a road in northeast Harris County made a gruesome discovery of three trash bags filled with human parts, a sheriff's investigator said.
Weldon Dobbs saw the small black dog dragging what appeared to be another animal Sunday afternoon, said Deputy C.M. Patberg.
"I stopped the truck, and when I looked, I saw it was a female head," Dobbs said.
Dobbs shooed away the dog, covered the head with a workshirt and flagged down the next driver, he said. He instructed the surprised but cooperative man to guard the head until he called police.

American is among those injured by car bomb blast

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A car bomb exploded on a downtown Madrid street today as a van full of paramilitary soldiers passed by, police said. Nineteen people were injured, including an American businessman.
Police said the car bomb was detonated by remote control near the Plaza de la Argentina at about 7:30 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EDT).
The van was carrying 24 members of the civil guard to several embassies, including the Soviet Embassy and consulate, to relieve other embassy guards, police said. Sixteen of those hurt were civil guard members, and the other three were civilian passers-by, officials said.

Eight of the guards and one passer-by were taken to the Red Cross hospital and the others were rushed to a provincial hospital, police said.
No group has claimed responsibility for the attack, but police said they suspected the Basque separatist group ETA.
An employee of a Madrid hotel said an American businessman jogging in the area at the time of the blast was one of those injured.
Police identified the man as Eugene Brown, 40, a New Jersey resident employed by Johnson and Johnson. Doctors at the Red Cross hospital said he was in serious condition.

The hotel employee said Brown had arrived Sept. 6 and had planned to leave today.
Four of the civil guard also were in serious condition, doctors said.
The explosion shattered windows in nearby apartment buildings and partially destroyed several cars parked in the area.
The news agency Europa Press said two men and two women fled in a taxi after forcing the driver to take them out of the area. The taxi driver was found in the trunk of the taxi later, the agency said.

Three prison inmates are stabbed

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Three Texas inmates were stabbed to death Sunday, prompting prison director O.L. McCotter to call an emergency lock down at 13 units, a prison spokesman said.
"Officials suspect that the recent violence is part of what appears to be warfare between two Mexican-American gangs, namely the Texas Syndicate and the Mexican Mafia," Charles Brown, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman, said about Sunday's stabbings.
The stabbings occurred at 7:30 p.m. at the Darrington Unit in a day room where about 50 inmates were exercising, Brown said.

The victims were identified as Lloyd Jacquez, 24, who was serving a 7-year sentence for burglary and attempted burglary; Jose Arturo Garcia, 24, who was serving a 12-year sentence for aggravated robbery; and Albert Carrillo Jr., 28, who was serving a 12-year sentence for burglary, Brown said.
All three died Sunday night of multiple stab wounds, he said.
Two inmates were in custody in connection with the stabbings. The Brazoria County Sheriff's Department is investigating the deaths.
An eight-inch long flat piece of metal and a boning knife were recovered at the scene, Brown said.

Including Sunday's stabbings, a total of 25 inmates have been killed at Texas prisons so far this year, he said.
On Sunday night, McCotter ordered an emergency lock down for all inmates in maximum, medium and close custody at 13 units around the state, Brown said.
The units included Darrington, Coffield, Eastham, Ferguson, Wynne, Ellis II, Huntsville, Clemens, Retrieve, Ramsey I, Ramsey II, Ellis I and Beto I.

City departments are staying busy

By BOB HART
Pampa City Manager

I want to begin by briefly touching on the activities of several of our departments.

Over the past week the Sanitation Department has been spraying dumpsters for flies.
The Waste Water Collection Department (sewer) has been cleaning various sewer lines around town that frequently get stopped up. We hope that this periodic preventative cleaning will reduce the number of stoppages that will occur later in the year.

The Streets Department has been busy cleaning drainage ditches in various areas of town.
Our library has now shifted to winter hours. The hours are as follows: Monday — 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Tuesday — 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Wednesday — 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Thursday — 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Friday — 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Saturday — 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Reed Kirkpatrick, our new Parks and Recreation Department director, has completed one week of service, and I am excited about the job that he will be doing for us in maintaining our parks system. As you visit with Reed, I think that you will agree with me that we are very fortunate to have such a fine young PARD director and look forward to great things from him in the future.

Charlie Smith did a great job serving as our temporary parks and recreation director over the past two months and is now back in the Engineering Department trying desperately to catch up on all the work that went undone while he was helping out in the parks department.
A reminder to everyone of the very fine facility that we have as a community at the Senior Citizen's Center. The meals that they serve are excellent. I have always enjoyed the opportunity to visit with the many fine people that participate in that program.

If you are not active in the Senior Citizen's program, I would certainly encourage to inquire about the program and take part in the very fine programs that they have available.

The city commission will be conducting a public hearing and reviewing the proposed budget for the 1985-1986 year on Tuesday, Sept. 10.

We are following the general concepts of accounting guidelines in establishing funds for the various operations in the city. We do this essentially to insure that those user fee base services are covering their own costs.

We had received indications about five or six months ago by a private company that it appeared our Sanitation Department was operating in a deficit position in excess of $200,000. In preparing the budget and isolating that particular department, we found that was indeed the case and that the actual projected deficit based on current rates would be about $249,000 annually.

The reason for this is threefold:
(1) The department had not been charged depreciation expense in the past. We feel that it is important that a depreciation schedule be set up so that funds are set aside annually for the replacement of capital assets that we have. This includes dumpsters, heavy equipment and land, if and when we need a new landfill site.

(2) The overhead charges should be properly allocated to the Sanitation Department. This includes the data processing and a portion of the cost of the mailing of utility bills.

(3) We are paying off a note for equipment purchased five years ago.

These three factors together prove the deficit.
After reviewing the analysis, the commission has determined that the Sanitation Department should be supported by user fees and will be considering an ordinance to adjust the sanitation rates, effective in October.

The proposed rates will be $8.50 per month for residential use and $13 per pickup for commercial use. The sanitation fees collected will pay for the operation of the collection system, the operation of the landfill and the operation of the flatbed truck that we have available to pick up large items in the community.

Further, it is our opinion that this proposed rate increase will be sufficient to handle the operations for several years into the future, primarily because of the debt retirement schedule for equipment purchased in prior years. That is, as the debt is paid off, the remaining funds can be absorbed into any future cost increases associated with state regulations imposed at the landfill and fuel costs for the truck and the replacement of equipment and dumpsters.

If you have any questions on these rates or on the budget itself, I would encourage you to attend the city commission meeting on Tuesday at 6 p.m. in City Hall.

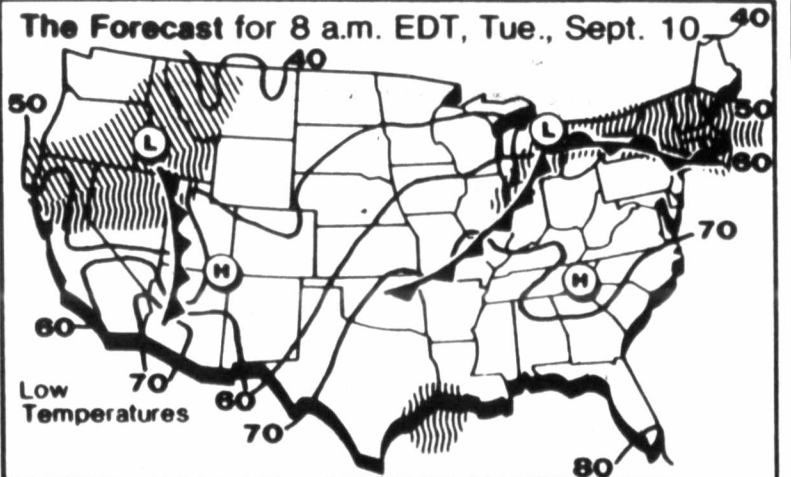

We will also be having a public hearing on the use of Federal Revenue Sharing Funds at the same time.

Parolees will get job aid

AUSTIN (AP) — A pilot program designed to reduce crime by increasing employment among ex-convicts is about to get underway at Texas Employment Commission offices in Dallas and Houston, state officials say.

The program was inspired by a recent Board of Pardons and Paroles study that found that five times as many unemployed ex-offenders wind up back in prison within a year of their release as do ex-convicts with steady jobs.

"It's just common sense," said John Byrd, executive director of the board. "Employment is a critical element in recidivism."

TEC staffer Paul Russell said the new program will provide intensive job services for parolees, such as helping them fill out applications and finding employers willing to hire ex-offenders.

"Sometimes their confidence has been shattered. Sometimes they are embarrassed by a background of being in the penal system," Russell said. "They need help and encouragement to face the job market."

The project will add eight staffers to Texas Employment Commission offices in Houston and Dallas.

Byrd said the program will enable the parole and employment agencies to work together on the problem of finding jobs for inmates newly released from the Texas Department of Corrections. Currently, the only assistance for inmates in finding jobs comes from parole officers or outside organizations.

"We want to ensure to the greatest extent possible that a person will come out to a job direct from confinement in TDC," Byrd said. "We know the first three to six months is the most critical time for a person to get his feet on the ground."

The parole board study found a direct tie between employment and recidivism. A year after being released from Texas prisons, 6 percent of those ex-inmates with steady employment were back in prison.

Another 13 percent with sporadic employment and 29 percent with no jobs had returned to prison, according to the study.

Hershel Meriwether, Gov. Mark White's corrections expert, said the study caught White's attention.

"He felt it made sense that if you were going to try to reduce crime and reduce the likelihood of individuals ending up back in TDC, we needed to target efforts to get these guys employed satisfactorily," Meriwether said.

Block-long painting pleases Victoria, baffles pigeons

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — In the world of French art, the technique of using shadows to create a three-dimensional perspective is known as "trompe l'oeil," meaning "fools the eye."

Houston artists Susan and David Frye have done just that in downtown Victoria, turning an 80-year-old brick wall into a colorful representation of a turn-of-the-century street scene.

The effect is so authentic that pigeons flying into the nearly block-long scene try to land on the "windows" of the wall and instead get stunned when they bump into a flat surface.

"It was intentional, with shadows and things like that," Susan Frye says. "If we fooled the birds, we must have done a pretty good job."

The effect is enhanced with the placement of three old-fashioned street lamps along a sidewalk in front of the mural.

The lights and sidewalk are real. The dozen businesses depicted on the 3,000-square-foot mural are real-looking, complete with a dog walking toward a fire hydrant and a boy tossing a paper airplane out of a second-story window.

Victoria Bank and Trust Co. commissioned the project last year after some old buildings across the street from the bank were razed for a parking lot, leaving a blank wall in the heart of town.

"We wanted to do something as a salute to the business community of the early days," says Jimmy Traber, the bank's executive vice president. "So we selected 1910, did a bunch of research as to the type of businesses that were here and came up with a design that was representative of that period."

The project then went to Houston-based Flat Lizard Graphics, an illustration and design studio.

"We did several sketches of different ideas," says owner Dan Glidden. "They (the bank) selected the old storefronts, which gave them the opportunity to show a replica of their original building."

"You can tell from the street that it's painted, but if you don't really know, you accept it as storefronts," he said.

Glidden's firm constructed a three-eighths-scale model of the project, then let the Fryes bring the model to life on the wall. They started in October and finished in May. The work, done with house paint, should last at least 10 years, according to Glidden.

"We would like to do more of this," David Frye says. "It's the most unselfish form of art. Everyone enjoys it. You don't have to wait for visiting hours to enjoy it. You just walk up to it."

Lucy Arrington, who operates a variety store across the street from the mural, says tourists stop at the parking lot and get their pictures taken in front of the wall.

"It's more than a conversation piece," Susan Frye adds. "The people are so proud of it. We feel we put a lot of people in there."

Voters stayed home during this special runoff election

HOUSTON (AP) — In an election that attracted only 8 percent of the voters, Republican Eugene R. Haney defeated Democrat Walter Hinojosa in a special runoff election for a vacant house seat.

Haney claimed victory Saturday with 54.4 percent, or 1,514 votes, to Hinojosa's 45.6 percent, or 1,270 votes, in the contest for Democrat Gene Green's seat in the legislature.

Haney, a 33-year-old insurance salesman, attributed his victory to his strong stand on moral issues.

"The moral issues are very important to the people of this district. This district led the fight against massage parlors. We made a clear-cut stand on these issues, on abortion, on pornography," he said. "I am adamantly opposed to gay rights, abortion, pornography and sexually oriented businesses."

Haney also says he opposes any increase in taxes and fees.

Haney's victory gives him the unexpired portion of Green's term, which ends before the Legislature convenes for its next regular session. Another election for a full term representing District 140 is scheduled for November.

Haney and Hinojosa went into the runoff as the top vote-getters in a field of seven candidates that competed on Aug. 10. Hinojosa had 25 percent of the August vote and Haney had 19 percent.

Since then, Hinojosa, 35, has been trying to fend off charges that he had not lived in the district long enough to run for office and that he didn't mention he had been fired from his job as a teacher in the Houston Independent School District.

Hinojosa, who now works for the Texas Federation of Teachers in Houston, denied the residency charge and said he had filed a lawsuit seeking to regain his HISD job.

The District 140 seat was vacated when Green won a special election to replace state Sen. Linden Williams, D-Houston. Williams resigned his seat to become a Harris County justice of the peace.

Police puzzled by rise in murder rate

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — What police described as an alarming rise in the city's murder rate is being blamed on everything from growth and an influx of illegal aliens to drugs and the weather.

"Sure, we're alarmed at any increase. We don't like it if there's just one murder," said homicide Lt. Jack Summey. "But there's no real pattern in homicides in San Antonio. We go through ups and downs in our murders, just like any big city."

San Antonio is facing a 30 percent rise in its murder rate over the first eight months of 1985. As of Sept. 1, the city had recorded 130 homicides, compared with 97 reported for the first eight months of 1984. A total of 166 homicides took place in San Antonio last year.

Summey said part of the increase is attributable to an increase in the number of illegal aliens from Mexico and Central America.

"We're seeing a greater number of illegal aliens than before on both ends of the picture, both as victims and suspects," Summey said. "It's a conservative guess that about 15 to 20 percent of the homicides this year involved aliens."

Another factor is San Antonio's growth, police say. Since 1980, San Antonio has experienced a growth rate of 10.8 percent, increasing its population by more than 80,000.

Drinking, narcotics use, poverty and the weather also are factors, Summey said, but what prompts people to kill remains elusive.

"Friday and Saturday nights are our heaviest homicide nights. That's when folks are off, they've been paid and they're drinking," Summey said. "Most of the homicides occur in the lower-income areas. And the biggest increase in homicides this year occurred during the last three months, when it got hot."

But Summey said there's "no such thing as a typical homicide."

"You can't say what will trigger it. We're dealing with people. And where people interact, there's a potential for violence," he said.

Despite the increase, San Antonio still has a relatively low homicide rate compared to the rates of other large Texas cities, Summey said.

According to FBI statistics, Houston, with a population of 1.8 million, recorded 473 murders during 1984.

Dallas, which has a population 12 percent larger than San Antonio, reported 294 murders, or 77 percent more than the 166 killings in San Antonio, according to the FBI.

Summey said that a city's violent streak is better measured by the number of aggravated assaults reported.

"While homicide has so far jumped up this year, there's been no significant increase in our aggravated assaults over the same period last year," Summey said. "And on any given weekend, out of 35 aggravated assaults, 10 could easily have been murder."

Anti-communist groups convene in Dallas

ADDISON, Texas (AP) — Resistance leaders from seven countries are expected to attend the U.S. Council for World Freedom's 18th annual International Freedom Fighters Conference that begins today, organizers of the event said.

The four-day conference is designed to "generate financial and moral support for the active democratic resistance movements in Afghanistan, Angola, Cambodia, Laos, Ethiopia, Nicaragua and Vietnam," organizers said.

The conference also aims to increase "awareness of the fact that there are millions of people now under the communist system who feel they're better off dead than Red," said retired Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, head of both the U.S. Council for World Freedom and the World Anti-Communist League.

He said the Dallas area was chosen because "it is a communications center... with a population more conservative than we'd find in Bangor, Maine, or Boston, Mass."

Texans, he said, have been

"major contributors" to his anti-communist cause.

The controversial Singlaub attracted attention recently when he said White House national security officials advised him on raising money for resistance movements last year after Congress stopped CIA aid to Nicaraguan rebels.

Three congressional subcommittees have scheduled hearings on his contacts with U.S. National Security Council officials.

At least two groups, the London-based, anti-communist World Affairs Circle and the Dallas Chapter of the U.S. Committee in Solidarity With the People of El Salvador, said they plan protests during the conference.

The groups have accused Singlaub's organizations of anti-Semitism and involvement with right-wing death squads in Central America. Singlaub denies the charges.

"This group is infinitely more sinister and dangerous than it at first might appear," World Affairs Circle chairman Geoffrey Stewart-Smith said of Singlaub's World Anti-Communist League.

Lawyer says he'll seek to move night stalker trial from California

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An El Paso lawyer said he has been retained to defend suspected California "Night Stalker" Ricardo Ramirez, and another local lawyer is considering helping in the case.

Lawyer Manuel Barraza said he will go to Los Angeles this week to talk with Ramirez at the request of the accused's family. He said he hopes to associate with El Paso criminal defense attorney Joseph "Sib" Abraham in the case.

Abraham confirmed late Sunday he is considering joining the defense of Ramirez, 25, an El Paso native who moved to California about seven years ago.

Ramirez was charged last week with one count of murder and seven other felonies stemming from two early-morning attacks in Los Angeles County during May.

The "Night Stalker," blamed for a series of attacks on people in their homes at night, is thought to be responsible for 14 slayings in California since February.

Barraza said his first priority would be to seek to have Ramirez' trial moved out of Los Angeles.

"That shouldn't be much of a problem," he said. "The public sentiment there is just too great against this guy. It's the classic thing about free press against fair trial."

He said if it would not be possible to move the case out of California, he would seek to move it to a community where the coverage has not been as intense as in Los Angeles.

Barraza said he was retained by the Ramirez family because of his reputation for defending others in the Central El Paso neighborhood where Ramirez lived as a child.

He said he has spoken to the suspect's sister, Rosa Flores, who told him her brother wants his help.

"The sister is there right now," Barraza said, "and she called and said he is interested."

Life is full of mysteries

Everybody likes a good mystery.

One recent weekend, about 100 "thriller" freaks paid $325 each — or $495 a couple — to spend a weekend at the Adolphus Hotel in Dallas trying to sort out the sordid details of a make-believe murder.

The would-be sleuths watched professional actors and a number of amateur recruits act out the scenario. The fun of deciding which of the six suspects did the dastardly deed kept the weekend guests quite busy.

The answer was revealed at the end of the day and the mystery buffs went home with a good feeling because they had the murderer pegged, or wondering why they made the wrong assumption.

Mystery stills sell well on television and in the bookstores. Agatha Christie's work continues to be popular. Plenty of people get a kick out of "Columbo" reruns to this day as they watch Peter Falk bumble his way to the conclusion.

But why would anyone need those artificial puzzlers when life itself has plenty of little mysteries?

Sticklers for details can find enough questions to keep themselves busy scratching their heads indefinitely.

Who treats your doctor when he or she gets sick? Who works on your dentist's teeth? Who cuts your barber's hair? And if all those other people are good enough to be trusted by professionals themselves, why aren't you going to the other people instead of your current doctor, dentist and barber?

Who was the joker who invented the process that puts all those darned loose advertising leaflets in magazines? And why hasn't he or she been arrested and placed in a dungeon somewhere?

Why would a bottle of medication, ordering that four tablets be taken at a time, contain 50 pills? After 12 applications, two tablets remain. Do you suppose that's a diabolic plan designed to make you go out and buy another bottle so the numbers come out even?

Who is really responsible for all those "Inspected by No. 12" tags that show up in clothing? Should one worry when they discover a new shirt or pair of pants without one of those tags?

What happens to lost writing instruments? Those elusive things disappear all the time, but no one seems to be able to locate them once they've crept out of pockets and desk drawers.

How come momentary cable television interruptions always happen at crucial times in movies, as a big putt looms in a golf tournament or when the Cowboys have a fourth-down-and-one situation? Has anybody even seen one of those dumb "ring around the collar" commercials cut off in mid-jingle?

Why does everybody assume that people on the other end of the telephone recognize voices? You know the deal: "Well, I called you a couple of years ago. I thought you'd remember me." And why are such people so reluctant to volunteer their names?

Why can't somebody create a permanent press road map — one with creases that would cause it to fall back into original condition without a lot of fussing?

What causes discarded bubble gum to end up exactly where you step? Does the gum have a reproductive system that causes it to multiply at a horrific rate once it touches the sole of a shoe or boot?

Last of all, why do we let these things bother us so much?

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

The effective way to fight poverty

President Reagan may have overstated the case slightly when he said that a decline in poverty of nine-tenths of a percentage point was "further proof that the greatest enemy of poverty is the free-enterprise system. A one-year decline does not necessarily constitute proof, and the economic system of the United States is still too heavily shackled by government to be called a genuine free-enterprise system. Still, the president had a point.

The point had been made more elaborately of late by Charles Murray in his path-breaking book, "Losing Ground," and was made more generally some years ago by Henry Hazlitt in "The Conquest of Poverty." Poverty may never disappear entirely (especially since it is a relative concept), but in most societies about which we have enough records to draw conclusions, the trend is clear. The more free an economy is of government rules and regulations, the fewer people living in grinding poverty and (this may surprise some) the more equally wealth is distributed.

A graphic on the front page of the newspaper, USA Today, illustrated another point: Government programs designed to battle poverty have been conspicuously less successful than what some have called "benign neglect." Last year's decline is trumpeted as the first since 1976 and the largest since 1968, but that is a short-term view.

Government figures showed 22.4 percent of Americans below poverty levels in 1959. That percentage declined steadily through 1968, when it was around 12 percent, leveled off, then began climbing in 1977 to 1983's figure of 15.3 percent.

The federal government's big anti-poverty push began with legislation in 1967, the year after a decline more dramatic than last year's. And the heyday of government "anti-poverty" spending coincided with an INCREASE in poverty.

Most authorities believe that last year's decline in poverty is related to economic growth, more "baby boomers" finding jobs and reduced inflation. The public policy implications seem clear.

If we want less poverty, we should reduce taxes, reduce government spending and reduce regulation of the economy.

The reason that what some would call neglect is more effective than government spending in reducing poverty is apparent. People, in whatever circumstance they find themselves, are better able to take care of themselves than government is. The freer they are to take advantage of whatever opportunities come their way, the more effectively they will be able to help themselves.

It's a lesson few government enthusiasts want to learn, but the rest of us should absorb it—thoroughly.

'Private courts' growing fast

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. - Individuals and businesses are increasingly seeking private alternatives to a judicial system plagued by high costs and grinding delays, according to a report in the September issue of Reason magazine. The investigation by freelance writer Paul Gordon is the first extensive survey of the growing move toward "alternative dispute resolution," or ADR.

On a small scale, Americans have been taking their conflicts to private mediation, arbitration, and other alternative methods of dispute resolution from the time of the first settlers in the 1600s, Gordon found. And "Americans today are returning to their ADR roots in ever-greater numbers," he reported.

Gordon noted that the annual caseload of the 59-year-old American Arbitration Association almost doubled between 1970 and 1984. ADR innovations that didn't exist 10 years ago, such as neighborhood "community boards" and corporate mini-trials, are spreading. And the American Bar Association is busily conducting seminars and workshops in ADR.

"One of the reasons why private ADR looks so good is that traditional litigation these days looks so bad," noted the article in Reason. "But investigation of the scene from Los Angeles to New York," wrote Gordon, "reveals that in a growing number of places and an increasing range of circumstances, the private sector is providing a way out" of overloaded dockets, complexity, and expense. He discovered that divorces, neighborhood disputes, even multi-million dollar corporate cases, are finding resolution through a variety of organizations.

"Perhaps the least court-like alternative to the courts is to be found in San Francisco," Gordon noted. There, in 25 neighborhoods, Community Boards provide an informal dispute-resolution apparatus.

Community Boards' founder Ray Shonholtz gave examples of the problems that trained neighborhood volunteers have been helping residents resolve since 1977: landlord-tenant and merchant-consumer disputes, gay versus Hispanic conflicts, and protest over a high school's off-campus policy. San Franciscan Matilda Razzo, for example, told Gordon she has become an ardent supporter since the Boards solved a barking-dog problem.

At the other end of the spectrum is the ADR being used by big corporations. For example, after two years in litigation of a $200-million anti-trust suit between the Borden Corporation and Texaco, and two companies resorted to a "mini-trial." As Borden's Walter Kocher explained to Reason, "You could have expected four to six years of additional litigation. There was so much at stake that neither side would have accepted a negative decision until all avenues for appeal had been exhausted."

But with a private mini-trial handled by the New York-based Center for Public Resources, a decision was reached in two months, no money changed hands, and the two companies negotiated a new gas-supply contract that hadn't even been an issue in the case. Kocher figured that the two companies saved "millions of dollars" in legal fees.

The Center for Public Resources, with a roster of attorneys and legal scholars who can be hired to preside at mini-trials, is just one of the ADR organizations Gordon discovered. Lawyer Jonathan Marks and colleague Eric Green set up EnDispute after a private two-day hearing between corporate executives settled a complicated patent dispute they'd been litigating in 1977. Today, EnDispute has offices in four major cities, and the corporate mini-trial is only one of its ADR services.

"Others are running the trail blazed by EnDispute," wrote Gordon, "including Dispute Resolution in Hartford, Civcourt in Phoenix, and a handful of small firms, often with a single retired judge, in California."

Gordon found another area in which "private courts" are growing by leaps and bounds: divorce cases, where ADR can provide an "alternative to often bitter and unsatisfactory court battles over custody and property." Mediator Joel Edelman said that divorce mediation "works best when the people are basically sane and no one's off the wall."

Edelman, an attorney and law professor, cut his teeth as a mediator in 1969 during the Columbia University student strikes. He's been hooked on it ever since, he confided - "as if mediation was one of those rare novels you just can't put down once you've started reading it." In 1977 the Los Angeles County Bar Association asked Edelman to set up the first mediation center in Southern California.

After surveying the field and consulting with the University of Wisconsin's dispute Processing Research Program, Gordon reported in Reason that ADR often costs less than using the traditional legal system and almost always takes far less time.

People who are getting involved in providing ADR "are not doing it because they want to erode the government's old monopoly on dispute resolution," concluded Gordon. "They just want to meet people's need to work out conflicts."

Reason is a monthly magazine of commentary and analysis on issues of current interest. It is published by the Reason Foundation, a "think tank" based in Santa Barbara, California.

Today in History

Today is Monday, Sept. 9, the 252nd day of 1985. There are 113 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 9, 1776, the second Continental Congress made the term "United States" official, replacing "United Colonies."

On this date:

Ten years ago: New York City schoolteachers went on strike, charging that contract provisions on class size had been violated. A settlement was reached a week later.

Five years ago: President Jimmy Carter declined to participate in a debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters that would have included both Republican Ronald Reagan and Independent candidate John Anderson.

One year ago: Pope John Paul II became the first pontiff to visit Canada as he began a 12-day tour of the country.

Today's birthdays: Former Kansas Gov. Alf M. Landon is 98. Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder is 66.

A poison in our society

Certain animal research at the University of Pennsylvania has involved torture of baboons. Research funded by our government - by you.

July 17 - Individuals and organizations concerned with animal rights demonstrated in protest.

July 18 - Health Secretary Margaret Heckler withdrew government funding for that research project.

She says she was not influenced by the demonstrators but by an internal NIH investigation which revealed that the university's experiments did not comply with Public Health policy.

This conclusion after viewing 60 hours of videotapes of those experiments on baboons.

Further convincing Mrs. Heckler is evidence she should have had a long time ago.

Documentation showing that the head-injury research at the University of Pennsylvania was redundant, repetitive and, thus, useless.

Because General Motors in its laboratories has been able to accomplish the same medical objectives without the use of live animals.

And the G.M. research uses sophisticated computerized mechanical dummies which are even more human-lifelike and results are thus more consistent and more precise.

And without torture to any creature.

One thing does lead to another.

Americans, anxious about cruelty to animals, do not need to justify that empathy - but they can.

Because cruelty of that kind does lead to cruelty of other kinds.

One policeman will so affirm.

Beyond that, as we begin to tolerate any cruelty we become less sensitive to all cruelty.

A filmmaker in Illinois is marketing tapes for the video rental market - graphic scenes of actual animal killings - and human killings.

He calls them "a hot item."

He says, "People like the blood and guts stuff."

Obviously, some people do. Thirty-thousand copies of two of those films are presently in circulation.

Five years ago black market films - made in Mexico - became available in the United States showing actual killings and dissections of humans - including children.

But now we have a United States producer and distributor openly advertising. "It's terrible; it's gross; it's phenomenally profitable."

And the inability of our courts to define pornography - though any rational man or woman knows it when he sees it - forces us legally to allow distribution of the toxic material.

We disallow lesser poisons, but not this one.

Tax prosecution procedures troubling

By Robert Walters

DENVER (NEA) - The appalling drama of the Justice Department investigation that ran amok has concluded its four-year run in the federal courts here and now moves to Washington.

In late September, a Senate subcommittee will hold hearings on the bungled prosecution of a tax fraud case that includes the only known instance of a Justice Department attempt to suppress a federal judge's decision.

The saga began in early 1981, when the department began presenting evidence to a federal grand jury here relating to the activities of William A. Kilpatrick, a tax-shelter promoter living in the Denver suburb of Littleton.

Kilpatrick, six associates and the Bank of Nova Scotia were indicted by the grand jury in autumn 1982 on 26 counts of mail, securities and tax fraud and conspiracy. In addition, Kilpatrick was charged with obstruction of justice.

Although the Justice Department touted the case as the largest tax fraud prosecution in its history (Kilpatrick and his clients were charged with conspiring to defraud the federal government out of $122.5 million in taxes) all 26 fraud and conspiracy charges were dismissed without a trial in early 1983 by Judge John L. Kane Jr. of the U.S. District Court here.

Kilpatrick was convicted of obstruction of justice in spring 1983, but that summer Judge Fred M. Winner of the U.S. District Court here ordered that he be retried because of the prosecutors' systematic abuse of the grand jury process.

In a scathing opinion, Winner sharply criticized the "repeated excess" and "misconduct" on the part of Justice Department lawyers and Internal Revenue Service agents.

The prosecutors, he noted, conjured up the title of "agent of the grand jury," which they then awarded to various IRS agents serving as "prosecutors' helpers." They also, Winner said, improperly granted immunity to some witnesses and attempted to intimidate others.

Winner's opinion charged that, in addition, the prosecutors illegally imposed secrecy requirements upon lawyers who had represented the defendants while allowing secret grand jury testimony to be improperly disclosed to IRS agents.

Alleging that Winner's opinion was riddled with "impertinent, defamatory and scandalous matters," the Justice Department claimed that his criticism by name of three overzealous prosecutors was a "slandorous" action.

Although Winner's decision initially was distributed in a preliminary format, the department sought to prevent its inclusion in the bound volumes of federal judges' opinions used as a standard legal reference by judges and attorneys.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here acceded in early 1984 to the department's extraordinary request for a judicial order temporarily barring publication. Two weeks later, however, the appeals court refused to issue a permanent censorship order and the opinion was subsequently published.

In late 1984, Kane dismissed the final charge against Kilpatrick, citing "the frequently rude, consistently arrogant and occasionally obnoxious conduct of some of the government attorneys assigned to the prosecution of the case."

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., who requested the forthcoming Senate hearings, wants to know if "this is an isolated case" or representative of a pattern of reckless prosecutions. The answer to his query could be disturbing.

The Justice Department, for example, claims that extra-legal "agents of the grand jury" have been used in federal courts in Georgia and Florida as well as in Colorado. Similarly, Kane several years ago dismissed indictments in a Wyoming tax fraud case because of grand jury abuse.

Moreover, one of the prosecutors in the Kilpatrick case says the practices denounced by two federal judges here are "standard procedure in all criminal cases, tax and otherwise."

Dear Abby

Priceless memories worth more than expensive wedding party

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please print this for "In Love in W.Va.," the two 18-year-old Christian virgins who want a big church wedding but can't afford it, so they came up with the idea of having a Dutch-treat wedding. They're charging $32.60 a couple and expect no gifts—just the money to pay for the wedding.

Now is the time for you to learn a very important lesson. What you can't afford, do without. A wedding you cannot afford is no way to begin a marriage. Someday you will realize that the things you can't afford are not worth the headaches that result from going into debt to acquire them, or asking other people to give them to you.

I'm sure your friends do not want to pay for your wedding any more than you do.

We had a $5 wedding 50 years ago.

FRUGAL BUT SOLVENT IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR FRUGAL: According to my mail, the Dutch-treat wedding idea went over with a dull thud. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: To "In Love in W.Va.": I've been married for 22 years, and whenever I see something we received as a wedding gift, I think of the giver. I cherish the rolling pin from a young cousin, and the rotary egg beater my late grandmother gave us. You can't put a price tag on memories. My husband's brother took movies during the ceremony, and in front of the church where family and friends gathered afterward. What a priceless gift! If my life depended on it, I couldn't name the people who gave us money.

My grandmother made fruitcake, and my mother baked our wedding cake, which a neighbor decorated. Family and close friends prepared the refreshments. We didn't have a band. We played taped music on a loudspeaker.

If you are determined to have a church wedding, you can do it. I don't believe churches make a profit by holding wedding ceremonies. Clothes can be borrowed or bought secondhand at a thrift shop. Flowers grow in gardens. Receptions can be held in backyards, parks, basements or church social halls.

I'd rather accept a wedding invitation that was handwritten on a postcard than buy a ticket to a farce.

ALICE C. HENGY, CARLETON, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: There is a chap in our office who is 35 years old, lives at home and seems perfectly happy. His mother packs his lunch every day, does his laundry and cuts his hair. He says he never invites a young lady out until he introduces her to his "Mum."

Abby, he likes the way he lives, but is it healthy for a grown man to depend on his mother so much?

OFFICE CHUMS IN VICTORIA, B.C.

DEAR CHUMS: If he likes the way he lives, it's healthy, and will probably continue to be until he loses his mother, or she loses him.

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Designers rarely have the opportunity to launch a major fashion change. Chanel, Dior, Balenciaga are some who did, but the list is short. Their impact, in each case, occurred as much because of social upheaval as their talent. Other designers just as talented have refined and interpreted fashions rather than originated them.

It's been 30 years since Balenciaga introduced the last big fashion change, the chemise, and it's still with us, whether in the stark minis of the '60s, or this fall's curvy versions.

At the Madison Avenue Design Group, a purple wool chemise is lightly shaped to the body, kept knee-high and detailed with a dropped notch collar. Michael Kors likes it front-zipped and sleeveless as a new version of the "little black dress," whose ancestry can be traced all the way back to Chanel in the '20s.

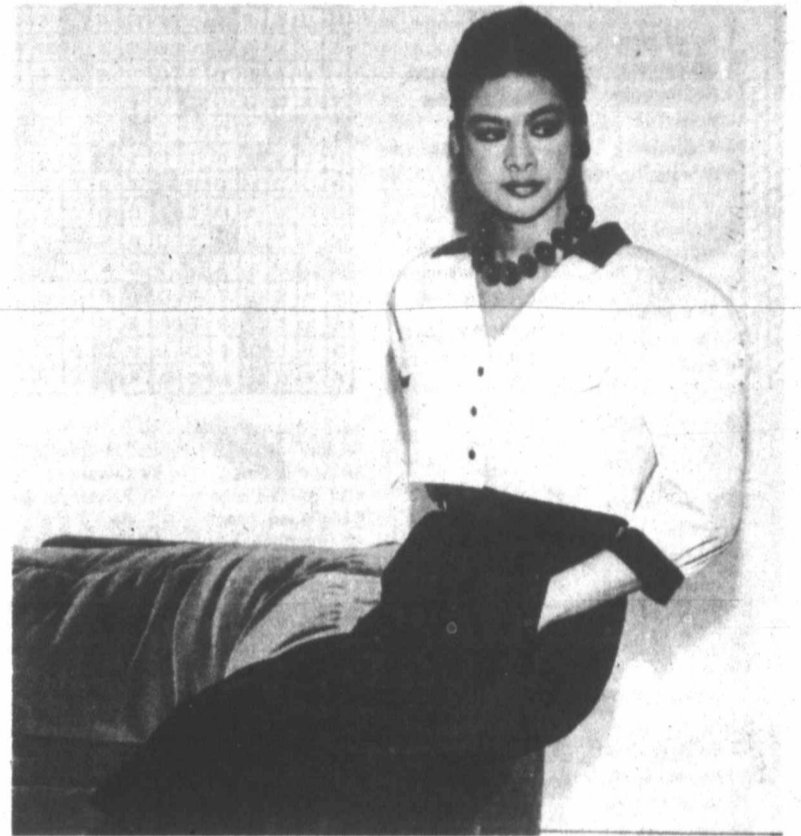

The easy simplicity of the chemise, slipping unbelted over the figure, now has an addition from the '40s, the padded wide shoulder. Lynn Tepe does it in vivid purple wool accented with body-following seams. Kay Unger for St. Gilian lightly curves a wide-shouldered chemise in bold awning stripes of navy and teal silk down to the thigh, where a checkerboard band marks off the pleated flip skirt.

Yeohlee's wide-shoulder chemises are often asymmetrically sliced into color segments, such as black and champagne rayon matte jersey, with an attached black scarf for accent. Other designers use separate scarves. Ellen Raines Martin's gray wool jersey has an asymmetric neckline filled by a boldly striped scarf that sweeps around and over one shoulder.

The chemise, even in Balenciaga's originals, revived the spirit of another time, the '20s, and the second current fall dress trend definitely recalls the 1940s. However, its intricate, body-shaping drapery is credited now to Emanuel Ungaro, who began to work in this style several seasons ago.

His fall couture collection includes every kind of figure flattery, from basically simple bias cutting to asymmetric, wraparound, crossover and vertical draping. Other Paris designers are not quite such all-out advocates of draping but even Givenchy and St. Laurent are using it.

Ungaro's influence has already become obvious in this country among designers whose customers look for glamour in dresses. Constance Saunders drapes from one shoulder to the opposite hip, then across to the other side on a black jersey dinner dress for Richard Warren. Sidney Carven Milliken's purple jersey is draped from one shoulder across the bosom and asymmetrically across one hip.

Some designers combine current details with their looks of the '40s. Design for Rod Owens makes the wide top in dolman style on a gray silk dress printed in big white tulips. It is pleated vertically for draping to a fitted, peplum waistline. Deborah Kuchme's dolman black and white printed silk drapes asymmetrically to the side for a wrap glamorizer. Gail Blacker uses a black wool draped cummerbund to shape the midriff of her rose-printed challis with dolman fullness.

One variant stands out in the rush to chemise or draped styles — the little fitted dress with a bolero. Mary McFadden channel quilts a yellow silk, wide-shouldered bolero and accents it with black scrollwork embroidery for her jewel-neck semi-fitted black wool dress. Bob Mackie fits a gold wool bolero jacket with black velvet sleeves and rich jet embroidery over a slim little black dress. As a daytime look, Abrizzi for Rod Owens does a one-piece that looks like two, its bodice a yellow bolero over a front-buttoned belted slim skirt.

Smart Money: don't buy insurance on a whim

By Bruce Williams

DEAR BRUCE — My husband and I are going on our first vacation in 12 years and will be traveling by air for the first time ever.

We have two small children, and I have told my husband that I will not travel unless he buys a substantial amount of life insurance on us for the time that we are traveling. He says that air travel is so safe that that is not necessary, but I'm not flying unless there is adequate insurance on our lives.

I've been told that I can buy it at the airport at a very reasonable price. How much would you recommend that we buy, and is this a good place to buy it? — Z.D., WATERPORT, N.Y.

DEAR Z.D. — At the risk of making the people who sell insurance at airports angry with me, airports are not the place to purchase life insurance.

If you need life insurance, then you should buy it, but only after carefully surveying the marketplace and determining whether term, universal life or indeed whole life insurance best meets your needs. To purchase it for an airplane trip only is not only expensive; it is usually unnecessary.

With most major credit cards (bank, travel and leisure), you are given, without charge, $100,000 in life insurance (sometimes more) for each person traveling, if you purchase your tickets by charging on the cards.

This ought to tell you that the risk is minimal since the card companies (and their insurance companies) would not make such an offer unless they considered the risk to be very slim indeed.

Perhaps the reason you are so concerned about this trip, however, is that you are aware that you do not have enough life insurance. If so, the trip may have started you thinking in a very positive direction. I suggest that you review your life insurance estate and then, if need be, that you correct it through traditional means.

One final aside: Don't be talked into buying double-indemnity, a policy that pays double in the event of accidental death. If you feel that much insurance is necessary, then by all means purchase it, but don't shoot craps on the possibility of an accident.

DEAR BRUCE — Three years ago, I filled out my 1040 income-tax form. I calculated that I had approximately $1,800 due me in refunds and filed my tax return in a timely fashion. In due course, I received the refund.

But last week, I received a letter from the Internal Revenue Service saying that I owed $1,800 plus interest for that year. When I called the IRS, I was told that the computer showed that I owed the money.

When I told them that I had copies of my return showing a refund was due me and that the refund had been paid, the clerk I spoke to said she would look into it.

I know that I don't owe them any money, but you can imagine how it is to live with the idea that the IRS is liable to come pounding on my door, demanding money to which it is not entitled.

The amount may not seem like a lot to some people, but it is an awful lot for us on our present budget. Is there anything we can do to protect ourselves? — P.C., CASPER, WYO.

DEAR P.C. — First of all, relax. Chances are that someone punched the wrong button on a computer. And an occasional mistake isn't too surprising considering the millions of returns that the IRS handles.

As long as you still have a copy of the original return, I think you have very little to worry about. If the matter cannot be resolved by some simple paper reshuffling, you should get in touch with the problems resolutions officer in your local Internal Revenue office. He or she will get on the case and stay on it until there is a just conclusion.

Concert review:

By BILL HALEY
Guest Reviewer

The Pampa Community Concert Association opened its new season somewhat prematurely Saturday night with Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians under the direction of Art Mooney.

Described as the "sweetest music this side of heaven," the organization is certainly among the first and foremost of the big bands. Lombardo, of course, has been dead for several years, but the group of 14 mostly young and quite talented musicians which played in Pampa seems intent on holding itself together under the Lombardo name.

Prior to this performance, the band had appeared here two times. This one was a little different in that there was an excellent piano soloist who substituted for the popular "twin pianos."

The program turned out to be an anthology of big band music. Besides Lombardo, the audience heard top-flight arrangements of

Artie Shaw's "Begin the Beguine," Woody Herman's "Woodchopper's Ball," and Glenn Miller's "String of Pearls."

Imitating various styles is risky business and usually brings out an "Aw! Go on," response from knowledgeable people. But Art Mooney and his gang brought the house down with these particular arrangements.

The rest of the program was filled to the brim with old favorites. Among them: "Always," "Sunrise Serenade," "Easter Parade," "Johnson Rag," and "Twelfth Street Rag." Also included were narratives of famous people and nostalgic references to such places as the Astor Hotel and Glenn Island Casino.

Mooney proved to be a charming master of ceremonies even to the extent of coaxing the audience into a fairly respectable rendition of "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover." Those attending were reminded of how really good the big bands were.

OH, MY ACHING BACK

If you're like a lot of people, you may have occasional or persistent back pain and wonder what caused it. You try to think of some incident in which you may have strained your back, and come up with nothing. But there must be some reason why you have back pains. The truth is that even the simplest of incidents may be the cause, such as reaching high on a shelf to get something. Or stooping suddenly to pick up something that has fallen. Or maybe you need some tips on good posture.

Whatever the cause, the problem may be that your spinal column is out of alignment...No pain-killing drug can cure the CAUSE. It can dull the pain for awhile and give you temporary relief. But if your back is out of alignment, the pain will probably not go away unless you get the treatment you need. No symptom can be more depressing than persistent back pain. Don't delay treatment when help is readily available.

U.S. satellite on collision course with 'G-Z' Comet

GREENBELT, Md. (AP)— At 7 a.m. EDT Wednesday, 44 million miles from Earth, an American satellite will slice through the head of a comet, becoming the first human creation to contact one of the most fascinating heavenly bodies.

The encounter, however, is not with the glamorous Halley's, the royalty of comets, which makes its heralded return next March. This space traveler is called Giacobini-Zinner, a comet with a head 45,000 miles in diameter, a third the size of Halley's, and with a mere tail of 435,000 miles — 10 times shorter.

The Giacobini-Zinner mission, with a 7-year-old, well-used satellite, is the U.S. answer and one-upmanship to the far more ambitious and expensive flights the Soviet Union is sending to Halley's.

If all goes well, the 1,034 pound satellite called International Cometary Explorer — or ICE — will pierce "G-Z" 4,900 miles behind its mile-wide iceball nucleus to study the interaction between the comet and the "solar wind." The solar wind is a flow of protons and electrons streaming from the sun.

From the returns, scientists hope to learn more about what comets and comet tails are made of, a subject of informed conjecture so far.

"The chances of our surviving the encounter are 50-50," said Dr. Robert Farquhar who thought up the idea of diverting the satellite, slinging it around the moon five times for momentum, and placing it in position to intersect the comet.

"Other people working on the thing are far more optimistic than I am but I think the real answer is that no one knows what our chances are," said Farquhar, the flight director for the mission and an expert in orbital motion at the Goddard Space Flight Center here.

The comet is traveling at 86,400 mph; the satellite at 45,000 mph. It can't be seen with the naked eye.

Engineers at Goddard, sending radio commands that require four minutes to reach the spacecraft, made a final, 500-mile change in the satellite's path Sunday by firing small steering thrusters shortly after noon on Sunday.

Farquhar worries not that the satellite might be overwhelmed by the ultra-fine dust particles in the comet tail, but that its solar cells might become broken or clouded to the point that there would not be enough electricity to send data back home.

"We are going right through the head of the comet," he said. "we are going on the tail side of the nucleus. The reason we are going 5,000 miles downstream, is we want to get far enough so that the tail has fully formed at that point."

Pontiff issues challenge to 'swim against the tide'

VADUZ, Liechtenstein (AP) — Pope John Paul II challenged Roman Catholics in Liechtenstein to "swim against the tide" by rejecting abortion, divorce, and extramarital sex.

John Paul spoke Sunday during a one-day visit to the tiny mountain principality, his 28th foreign trip since becoming pope in 1978.

His denunciations of abortion were some of his strongest yet on the subject.

"Abortion and taking the child's life are repulsive crimes," the pontiff told government officials in the medieval castle of 79-year-old Prince Franz Josef II. "The unborn being's right to live is one of the inalienable human rights."

The pope raised the issue of abortion and other moral questions earlier in the day at an outdoor Mass before 30,000 people, about 4,400 more than the population of Liechtenstein. Many in the crowd were from Switzerland, Austria and nearby West Germany.

He repeated the church's condemnation of couples living together outside marriage, "unfaithfulness in marriage, the increasing divorce rate, the misuse of marriage and abortion."

"I know that it requires a lot of courage to swim against the tide," John Paul said during an outdoor meeting with young people near the end of his visit. But he asserted that the church's principles "are appropriate to the dignity of the human person and therefore ultimately serve your happiness and everlasting wellbeing."

"Experience shows that premarital sexual relations hinder rather than help the choice of a partner," John Paul said.

A light rain fell as he spoke in a pasture overlooking Liechtenstein, which covers about 61 square miles and is sandwiched between Switzerland to the west and Austria to the east. The pope spoke German throughout the visit.

Many of the pope's words during the nearly 10-hour visit were aimed beyond this predominantly Roman Catholic country, where abortion is illegal and Roman Catholicism enjoys the status of a state church.

"Material wealth, which has taken place here over the past years and decades to an unimagined degree and ensures you a high standard of living, indicates the ability of the citizens of this country," he said on his arrival.

"However, it also demands a high moral maturity and responsibility," he added.

Liechtenstein derives its wealth from tourism, industry, the sale of postage stamps prized by collectors, and from the thousands of "letter box" companies registered in the country to escape taxes.

Officials in Liechtenstein said the visit will help boost the country's standing in international politics.

disclosure of pilot dialogue until a transcription was made, Burnett said.

The cockpit recording includes a sound of "the stick shaker," described as an audible warning of imminent stall, he said. The recording also included a ground-proximity warning that alerts a pilot that a plane's altitude is too low.

Investigators were hampered at the crash site by heavy rain.

Jetliner engine was damaged before plunge: investigators

MILWAUKEE (AP) — One engine of the Midwest Express Airlines DC-9 was already damaged when the plane crashed after takeoff, killing all 31 aboard, but the plane should have been able to land with only one engine, a federal investigator said.

Flight 105, heading for Atlanta, crashed Friday a half-mile south of Milwaukee's General Billy Mitchell Field, where investigators were still searching for signs of why the twin-engine plane crashed.

Metal detector sweeps of the runway had turned up 20 compressor blade pieces and 13 other parts from an engine like the DC-9's, National Transportation Safety Board Chairman James E. Burnett said at a press conference Sunday.

While it was not certain that all the pieces came from the plane, he said, "there is damage to the right engine where the compressor blades would have come from" and no reports that any other aircraft had a similar problem at the site.

Earlier, Burnett said investigators had determined that the right engine was not producing power at the time of the crash, but he said the plane should have been able to fly on one engine.

Board investigators in Washington, D.C., have listened to the cockpit voice recorder, but board policy prevented the

White leader as Cowboys meet Redskins

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas - There will be three things different about Dallas quarterback Danny White when he starts against the Washington Redskins tonight in a National Football League opener.

White will be the starter for the Cowboys, which he wasn't last year until midway of the season.

He also will be wearing a flak jacket for the first time in his career to protect tender ribs.

White also will replace Tony Dorsett as offensive captain of the team in a vote by teammates.

"If I've had any differences with the players, they've been resolved one way or the other," White said. "Coming from the players, it's an honor to be named captain."

White has a 7-2 lifetime record against Washington as a starter while the Redskins' Joe Theismann is 6-9.

"Danny is back into the leadership role," said Dallas wide receiver Mike Renfro. "He's more relaxed now than he has been. You can see he has respect in the locker room now."

Dallas' game plan is simple: Stop Theismann.

"We have to stop Theismann to win the game," said Cowboys safety Michael Downs. "John Riggins just kind of bothers you. But Theismann kills you."

The Cowboys go into the National Football League opener as one-point favorites based on the homefield advantage.

However, Dallas hasn't beaten Washington in Texas Stadium since 1982. The Redskins have the second winningest record (16-5) in the NFL on the road over the last three seasons.

The Redskins have beaten Dallas three consecutive games, their longest victory streak in the 50-game history of the series.

The Cowboys and Redskins have opened Monday Night Football on ABC-TV twice before and Dallas won on both occasions at RFK Stadium.

On a third occasion in 1978, the Cowboys nudged the 'Skins 9-5 in the highest-rated Monday Night Football game in the series history, a 26.8 rating.

For the Cowboys, it marks the fourth year in a row they have been invited to play the opening Monday Night game and the sixth time in eight seasons.

"No matter how you look at it, Monday night games have to be something special," said Theismann. "There is a little extra charge that goes through you. You get a chance to show your wares to an entire nation."

Dallas owns a 28-20-2 series lead over Washington but the Redskins have been taking a lot of scalps lately.

Both teams went undefeated during the preseason. Although the game is a sellout the Cowboys' officials are taking steps to see that the crowd is an unusually noisy one: Some 35,000 megaphones will be given away at the gates.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry and Washington Coach Joe Gibbs are battling .500 against each other with four wins and four losses in their eight confrontations.

For Landry, the second winningest NFL coach in history, it's his 26th season.

Gibbs begins his fifth year with the Redskins. He has led Washington to three straight playoff appearances and is 47-18 in the NFL.

HAPPY WARRIORS—Houston running back Mike Rozier (33) is shown in the arms of quarterback Warren Moon Sunday after scoring the winning touchdown against Miami.

Both teams surprised by Houston's victory

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

HOUSTON — The natural order of things did not occur in the AstroDome Sunday and neither the Miami Dolphins nor the Houston Oilers seemed able to accept the facts.

The facts were that Miami, which won 11 straight games last season and gained a Super Bowl berth, lost its National Football League season opener 26-23 to the Oilers, which lost 10 in a row last season and finished 3-13.

Miami isn't accustomed to losing to the lower echelon teams and the Oilers haven't had a winning season since 1980 and hadn't won a season opener since 1981.

"To get a win this early in the season, it almost feels like November," offensive tackle Bruce Matthews said in the jubilant Oiler dressing room. "We were ready to play and we didn't panic."

Houston Coach Hugh Campbell found it difficult to believe the manner in which the Oilers started the 1985 season.

"If you'd told me before the game we'd beat Miami with those turnovers, I wouldn't have believed it," Campbell said.

Houston's Steve Brown intercepted two passes that set up scores.

Butch Woolfolk, who made his regular season debut in an Oiler uniform a successful one, said, "When a team comes back to win, it means more than a victory to a team that's been down."

The Dolphins, who permitted the Oilers to drive 80 yards for the winning touchdown, were just as unaccustomed to accepting the loser's role.

"It wasn't that they did any great blocking," linebacker Charles Bowser said. "We just weren't as aggressive on defense. In the past, we've had guys that stepped in and got the job done and we didn't worry about it. That wasn't the case today."

The game marked the return of Dolphin quarterback Dan Marino following a 37-day contract holdout. But Coach Don Shula replaced him with Don Strock in the fourth quarter.

"The things he missed (during holdout) are the things you've got to have when you are reading coverages and moving around to throw the ball," Shula said.

"To get timing, you have to work hard. You can't just come off the shelf and get it automatically."

Marino left the game briefly in the first quarter when his elbow took a blow but he returned to lead the Dolphins to a 16-9 lead.

"I was making the right reads and decisions on where to throw but I wasn't stepping up and throwing the way I should," Marino said.

Fuad Reveiz kicked field goals of 33, 36 and 23 yards and cornerback William Judson returned an interception 61 yards for a touchdown.

The Oilers scored on an 80-yard pass play from quarterback Warren Moon to Woolfolk, and 35-yards field goal by Tony Zendejas.

Zendejas added a 46-yarder in the third quarter and Mike Rozier scored his first NFL touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter with a 3-yard run that put Houston ahead 19-16.

But Rozier fumbled later in the period and safety Bud Brown recovered at the Dolphin 33. That's when Strock returned to the game and hit Mark Duper on the first play for a 67-yard touchdown bomb with 8:43 left in the game.

Houston's winning touchdown drive started on the Oilers' 20 and included a 48-yard pass from Moon to Drew Hill. The key play, however, was a penalty call against Miami's Fulton Walker, who interfered with Woolfolk on a fourth down pass into the end zone.

The Oilers got the ball at the one yard line, setting up Rozier's run around the left side with 25 seconds to play.

"I was hoping to get the ball again so I could make up for that fumble," Rozier said.

Marino finished with 13 completions on 24 attempts for 159 yards. Strock hit six of seven passes for 132 yards.

That doesn't mean Strock is any closer to starting Sunday's home opener against Indianapolis.

"If Dan has a good week of practice, he'll be the starter," Shula said.

The Oilers, meanwhile, must ponder the possibility of defeating the Washington Redskins and going 2-0 for the season.

NFL champions hit rough road in openers

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The championship teams — San Francisco and Miami — and their glamour quarterbacks — Joe Montana and Dan Marino — saw the other side of the National Football League on opening day. Taking their places at the top of the QB heap, at least for one week, were Mark Malone, Jim McMahon, Bill Kenney and Eric Hipple.

The defending Super Bowl champion 49ers and the team they vanquished last January, the Dolphins, were upset losers Sunday. San Francisco fell 28-21 at Minnesota and Miami dropped a 26-23 decision in Houston, with both games being decided in the final moments.

Malone, McMahon and Kenney made sure that their teams didn't have to worry about late rallies by the opposition, however.

Malone threw for five touchdowns, tying a Pittsburgh record, and ran for another as the Steelers overwhelmed the Indianapolis Colts 45-3. McMahon tossed a pair of TD passes and ran for two more scores as Chicago took Tampa Bay 38-28, and Kenney had 379 yards and three touchdowns through the air in Kansas City's 47-27 victory over New Orleans.

Elsewhere, it was St. Louis 27, Cleveland 24 in overtime; Detroit 28, Atlanta 27; Los Angeles Rams 20, Denver 16; New England 26, Green Bay 20; Seattle 28, Cincinnati 24; New York Giants 21, Philadelphia 0; Los Angeles Raiders 31, New York Jets 0, and San Diego 14, Buffalo 9.

Vikings 28, 49ers 21
San Francisco, which lost only one game last season, equalled that in the first week with a sloppy fourth quarter. The 49ers led 21-14 when Wendell Tyler's third fumble of the game was scooped up by Doug Martin, who ran 29 yards to the 49er 1. Alfred Anderson scored, then Derrick Harmon fumbled the ensuing kickoff.

Ted Brown's 10-yard run with 1:49 to go then won it for the Vikings, who were 3-13 last year, prompting the firing of Les Steckel as coach and his replacement by his predecessor, the popular Bud Grant.

Steelers 45, Colts 3

Malone, the fourth starting QB for Pittsburgh in four opening days, hit Louis Lipps three times for scores and nine times overall. John Stallworth had a 6-yard scoring catch and Rich Erenberg added an 119-yarder as Malone hit 21 of 30 attempts for 287 yards in his best day as a pro. It made Indianapolis Coach Rod Dowhower's debut a disaster.

Bears 38, Bucs 28

Chicago overcame a 14-point first-half deficit behind McMahon, playing for the first time since the 10th game of last season, when he lacerated a kidney.

On the second play of the second half, Leslie Frazier intercepted a Steve DeBerg pass and rambled 29 yards for a TD to cut the Bucs' lead to 28-24. McMahon, who completed 23 of 34 passes for 274 yards, hit Matt Suhey from nine yards out to give Chicago the lead.

"Physically I feel great," said McMahon. "The injury didn't bother me a bit."

Chiefs 47, Saints 27

Kenney ripped apart New Orleans' defense, which had been ranked No. 1 in the NFL for two years, with scoring strikes of 31 yards to Walt Arnold and 37 and

Lendl had nothing to lose—and he didn't

The loser's hurting

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl had said from Day One of the U.S. Open that he had nothing to lose.

He never did lose.

And with his victory Sunday over two-time defending champion John McEnroe, Lendl gave Czechoslovakia a virtual sweep of the American national tennis championships.

Virtual because while Hana Mandlikova, the women's champion, still calls Czechoslovakia her homeland and is fiercely proud of that fact, Lendl, although a Czech citizen, lives in pastoral Greenwich, Conn.

"I love my country and I never said anything wrong about my country and I wish they could see this over there," Mandlikova had said following her 7-6, 1-6, 7-6 victory over Martina Navratilova, somewhat of a non-person in Czechoslovakia since her defection in 1975.

"I can't even describe it," Lendl said after he beat McEnroe 7-6, 6-3, 6-4. "because this is the tournament I was saying I think is the biggest of the year, the one I want to win the most and finally did it."

"It's the championship of the country where I enjoy living very much. I have won the championship of Czechoslovakia three times, but I don't think it means nearly as much as this one."

Lendl's victory here was the first by a foreigner since Guillermo Vilas of Argentina did it in 1977. Mandlikova's was the first for a foreign woman since Margaret Smith Court of Britain beat Australian Evonne Goolagong in 1973.

With his victory, the 25-year-old Lendl shed the second of two big monkeys which had clung to his back.

For years he had failed to win a Grand Slam tournament. Then he beat McEnroe in the French Open last year. But when he showed up at the National Tennis Center 2½ months later, already a two-time loser to Connors in the finals of the U.S. Open, the victory in the French was an afterthought.

Why, he was asked, couldn't he win this one?

He didn't have an answer — especially after going out and losing in the finals to McEnroe.

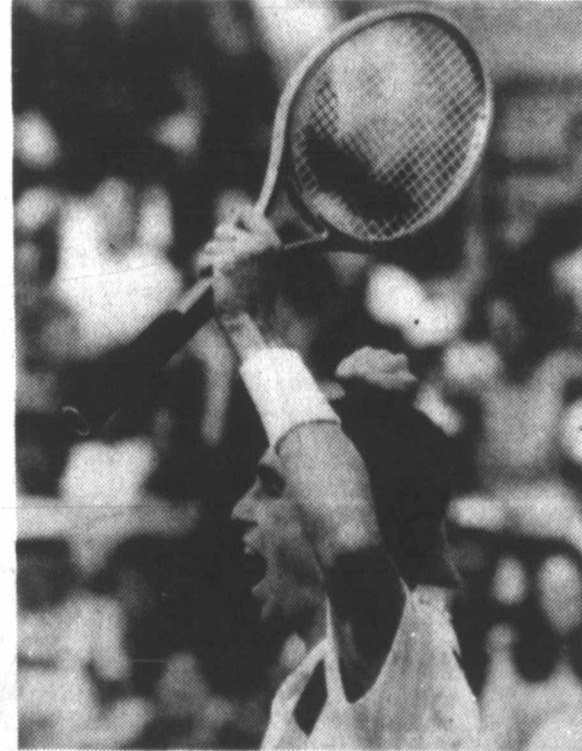

"I think many trips into the finals, not just here but other places, have helped me," Lendl said Sunday. "I came here (this year) and said, 'I can win it. ... If I lose, it's just another one.'"

He was in danger of losing for all of a half-dozen games.

In the first three games, Lendl managed one point. His serve was broken his first time at the line. McEnroe didn't give Lendl a point off any of his first four serves.

But in the ninth game, Lendl broke back at love. After that set, he said, "I was flying out there. I thought, 'There is no ball I'm not going to get to; there is no shot I can't hit.'"

The set went to a tie-breaker and Lendl swarmed through it 7-1.

Rose ties Ty in Chi

CHICAGO (AP) — The lights went out on Pete Rose's latest opportunity to break the 57-year-old record of Ty Cobb, sending him back to Cincinnati with one more hit to go.

With two hits in five at-bats Sunday against Chicago, the Reds player-manager tied the record of 4,191 lifetime hits, set by Cobb in 1928. Tie became the order of the day when the game was halted after nine innings because of darkness with the score tied 5-5.

"I'm happy he tied the record," Reds shortstop Dave Concepcion said. "And I'm happy he will break it back in Cincinnati."

Rose got his second hit of the game, the tying hit, off emergency starter Reggie Patterson in the fifth inning. Like the first-inning hit, No. 4,191 was a line single.

Rose had two more chances to break the record, but he grounded out to Cubs shortstop Shawn Dunston in the seventh and struck out swinging at a Lee Smith fastball in the ninth.

The Reds already had scored a run to tie the game when Rose came up in the ninth. The game had been delayed in the bottom of the eighth by rain for 2 hours and 3 minutes, and when the teams completed nine innings, umpiring crew chief Bob Engel halted the proceedings at about 6:10 p.m. CDT. Without lights at Wrigley Field and under a heavy cloud cover, it had become too dark to continue.

"I thought we would win it right there," Rose said of his ninth-inning at-bat. "It was getting kind of dark, but I could see the ball."

Rose hadn't even expected to play because the Cubs had selected left-hander Steve Trout as the starting pitcher. Rose, who shares time at first base, restricts himself to starts against right-handers, with Tony Perez getting the call against lefties.

But Trout fell off a bicycle Saturday night and hurt his shoulder and elbow. So the Cubs went to right-hander Reggie Patterson, who came into this season with just 100 days major league service, and Rose started Rose.

"It's all part of the game," the 26-year-old Patterson said of the record-tying hit. "It's just another hit to me."

No. 4,191 came on a 3-2 pitch from Patterson, a 6-foot-4, 185-pound beanpole, and went into right-center field, where it was scooped up by Keith Moreland. Moreland tossed the ball in to first baseman Leon Durham, who gave it to Reds first base coach Tommy Helms.

Rose said he didn't speak with anyone after the hit, but he said Durham told him, "Don't move. I want to get some TV exposure here."

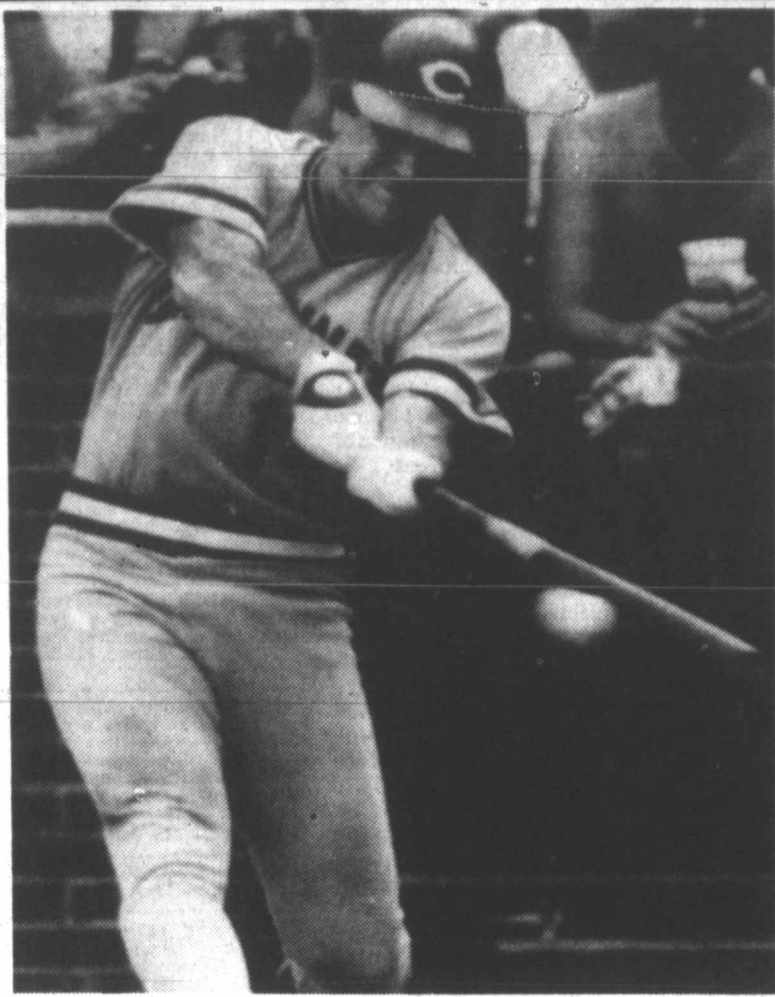

Patterson said Durham came over to him "after the hit and said, 'Pete is going to buy you a steak.'"

"He's the greatest ballplayer that ever played the game," Patterson said of Rose. "It was a history-making event, and everybody wanted to see him do it here."

Everybody, that is, except Rose, his teammates and the fans waiting in Cincinnati.

Rose said he was sure the fans in Cincinnati would be "revved up like the fans were here. It was a very nice reception they gave me here."

Each time Rose came to bat Sunday, he was greeted by a standing ovation from the crowd of 28,269.

Rose gets the big hit

Score cause of celebration

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

The Rio Vista Eagles celebrated in their field house, even though they were pounded 33-6 by the Glen Rose Tigers on the opening week of the 1985 Texas high school football season.

Just scoring Friday night was a moral victory.

When John Howe galloped 83 yards for a touchdown on a fake pass play in the third quarter, it was Rio Vista's first touchdown in almost two years. The Eagles hadn't crossed their opponents' goal line since Nov. 5, 1983.

Last year, Glen Rose led 54-0 at the half, Rio Vista senior wingback Kyle Minnick recalled. "It was like we got run over by a freight train. This year, we had a lot of things to prove to the fans."

"We scored," sophomore cheerleader Brenda King said. "We could see it coming because we scored twice in a scrimmage."

There also were celebrations in Odessa, Tomball, Hempstead, Electra and Munday, as the top-ranked teams in The Associated Press' Top Ten lived up to their billings.

Odessa Permian opened the 1985 season as it has the 12 previous ones — by beating El Paso Coronado. The Mojo, co-state champions last year in Class 5A, scored 21 points in the third quarter and went on to post a 28-0 victory.

Tomball drubbed Rosenberg Terry 48-12 behind all-state running back Bubba Greely, who ran for touchdowns of 14, 10 and 80 yards and caught a 21-yard pass for another TD. Greely retired for the night early after personally accounting for 232 yards — 135 yards on nine carries and 97 yards in three receptions.

Hempstead, the No. 1 team in 3A, rolled past Caldwell 32-12 behind super tailback Harvey Williams, who many college coaches say could be the state's most sought-after schoolboy next spring.

The 6-2, 205-pound senior, who gained 2,076 yards in 1984, scored Friday night on runs of 90, 20 and 43 yards. Quarterback Michael McDade passed for one touchdown and ran for another.

Scott captures Celanese crown

Defending champion Maxie Scott breezed to another victory in the Celanese Women's Championship Tournament Sunday.

Scott finished the tournament with a 36-hole total of 157, well ahead of runnerup Sharon Crosier, who had 173. Shirley Stafford's 147 won the low net prize in the championship flight.

Elaine Riddle won the first flight with 176, followed by Joyce Epperson with 186. Vera Williams had low net with 149.

Laura Stephens took the second-flight title with 203. Lavada Warner was second with 223. Ginger Loeffler's 154 was low net.

Andrea Walling won the tournament's chipping contest and Maxie Scott won the putting contest.

Boosters to meet

The Pampa Harvester Booster Club will meet to elect officers at 7:30 p.m. Monday night in the high school football fieldhouse.

Representatives of every sport, both boys and girls, have been requested to be present.

The meeting is open to the public.

Victories difficult for SWC teams

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Three SWC teams posted hard-earned victories Saturday night but the Houston Cougars proved once again they can't get fired up until the championship race starts.

Third-ranked Southern Methodist fell behind 17-14 in the third period before outlasting surprising Texas-El Paso 35-23; Texas Tech overcame a 31-10 deficit to beat New Mexico 32-31; Baylor bounced Wyoming 39-18 with the help of Thomas Everett's 75-yard punt return; and Houston, which hasn't won a non-conference game on the road since 1979, fell 31-24 to the Tulsa Golden Hurricane.

SMU, recently slapped hard with NCAA sanctions for illegal recruiting and payments to athletes, looked like a team that was distracted.

"The flatness was from within," said tailback Reggie Dupard, who scored on two touchdown runs and gained 131 yards on 20 carries. "We prepared hard but we weren't ready to play the game."

Halfback Gerald Bean's two-point conversion in the final two minutes gave Tech its first victory over New Mexico in four years. Bean broke three tackles to score the game-winner.

"I knew I had to do it," said Bean. "I saw three of their jerseys I had to get through."

Tech Coach Jerry Moore said "There was never any doubt we were going for two. We never considered anything else."

Timmy Smith, a native of New Mexico, uncorked touchdown runs of 31 and 42 yards to help the Red Raiders come from behind.

Everett's punt return for a touchdown was Baylor's first such score since Don Huggins ran 73 yards against TCU in 1970.

"My run seemed to spark our offense," said Everett. "I knew we had to do something big to get our guys going."

Wyoming Coach Al Kincaid said "You have to credit Baylor. They came up with the big plays."

Houston had a massive defensive failure as Tulsa rushed for 335 yards and passed for 146 more.

"We just weren't pulling together," said Houston tackle T.J. Turner.

Rice, Arkansas, Texas Christian and Texas A&M get their seasons underway this week after the Southwest Conference opened the football season by winning three of four games.

Two games involving SWC teams will be on national television.

The Texas Aggies play Alabama at 6:45 p.m. Saturday in Birmingham, Ala. with ESPN cameras on hand.

The Baylor Bears are at Georgia for an 11:30 a.m. game with the Bulldogs which will go nationally over WTBS, the Turner Network.

In the other games, Miami is at Rice in a noon game, Texas Tech is at Tulsa at 7 p.m., Arkansas and Mississippi meet at Jackson in a 7:30 p.m. game and Tulane is at TCU at 7:30 p.m.

15 yards to Carlos Carson. Nick Lowery kicked four field goals for Kansas City, which stymied New Orleans' Dave Wilson. The Saints' starting quarterback was a miserably 2-for-22 for 30 yards before being replaced by Richard Todd in the fourth quarter. Todd threw for three TDs in a late rally.

Lions 28, Falcons 27
Eric Hipple redeemed himself after throwing two interceptions and being sacked twice in the first half with three second-half scoring passes. Darryl Rogers was victorious in his NFL coaching debut.

Atlanta's Billy "White Shoes" Johnson became the career leader in punt return yardage when he ran five punts for 58 yards, giving him 3,012 yards to move past Rick Upchurch, who had 3,008 yards.

Cardinals 27, Browns 24, OT
Neal Lomax led a last-ditch rally, guiding St.

Louis 63 yards on four plays in only 34 seconds to tie the game with four seconds remaining on a 5-yard toss to a wide-open Pat Tilley. In overtime, the Cardinals marched 46 yards to set up Neil O'Donoghue's 35-yard field goal.

Cleveland had gone ahead 24-17 with 38 seconds left on Gary Danielson's second TD pass, a 25-yarder to Ozzie Newsome.

Rams 20, Broncos 16
Former Heisman Trophy winner Charles White scored on an 8-yard run with 2:07 remaining to win the game for Los Angeles. White, signed as a free agent during the offseason after being released by Cleveland, was playing only because Eric Dickerson, who set an NFL rushing record last season, is a holdout, and Barry Redden suffered an ankle injury.

Volleyball league seeking entries

The City of Pampa Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring a volleyball league for men's, women's and mixed divisions.

The league is open to any area resident, provided they don't have a league in their own town.

League officers plan to have a meeting of all volleyball players in the near future, and information will be released prior to the meeting.

No definite fees have been set, but league officials would like to know how many teams are interested in joining a league.

Entry deadline is set for Sept. 20.

Each league consists of two separate divisions as follows:

Division One: This division is basically the power division for people who have the ability and desire to play competitive volleyball.

Division Two: This division is basically for people who are purely interested in the recreational aspect of volleyball. They are mainly interested in playing for the exercise, fellowship, or the pure fun.

Tax reform questions cloud business, investment planning

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's becoming more and more apparent that President Reagan's vaunted skills as a salesman may be severely tested this fall on the subject of tax reform. Nobody expected the plan put forward by his administration to sail smoothly and smoothly through Congress and into law. The power of the "special interests" to object, obstruct and delay was well known. But according to pollsters and legislative leaders of both parties, the proposal has failed to stir enthusiasm among the general public, whose backing it was hoped would give great impetus to the push for overhauling the tax system.

In a typical reading, the accounting firm of Ernst & Whinney found in a survey of 2,500 people that the great majority — 63 percent — want a new, simpler tax code. But only 37 percent said they liked the one Reagan has put forward. Leading lawmakers ranging from Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., have said in recent days that the plan has engendered little excitement. Appraising the outlook, the Value Line Investment Survey, the nation's largest investment advisory service, said: "We think that tax reform efforts will not result in the passage of any legislation until 1987 at the earliest. "Passing the annual budget has become so time consuming that Congress would probably have trouble bringing about such a sweeping change in the tax code in a single year. "Few in Washington now think there's any chance for passage in 1985, and in 1986 the elections will be prominent on the minds of those in Congress. We doubt that our representatives will be inclined to offend such broad swaths of their constituencies in an election year, even if the overall plan benefits the majority of them." It may, in fact, look like a sensible idea to take some extra time to weigh the consequences before embarking on any drastic change in the tax rules. The trouble is, the debate does not take place in a vacuum. It creates uncertainties for businesses and individuals trying to plan for the future. For that reason, Jonathan Frank, Value Line's assistant research director, suggests it might be beneficial if the administration backed off for the time being.

Striking Continental pilots find other work

HOUSTON (AP) — Some veteran Continental Airlines pilots are taking on other business ventures while the pilot's strike lingers. When Continental announced it was filing for reorganization in federal bankruptcy court two years ago, pilot Doug Fletcher decided to leave the industry and open a transmission shop franchise with a fellow pilot. "I made that decision day one," said Fletcher, 45. "I wrote it off right there. I said, 'Well, that's the end of that.'" to go to work for other carriers since they're not young enough to be desirable hires. Another striking pilot, Jim McCartney, said he applied to other carriers for jobs after the strike began Oct. 1, 1983, but "they want younger ones," he said. Fletcher and his business partner, Frank Sonnier, determined the service industry was "where the money was," and "it became apparent a specialty type service was the way to go." They opened their shop in Clute in July and plan to open five more in the Houston area. McCartney, who was a pilot for 26 years, opened a new auto repair shop last summer in southwest Houston. Like other active strikers, McCartney, 47, walks the picket line and receives $2,400 a month in strike benefits from ALPA. That amount, however is small compared to the $50,000 he made annually prior to the strike.

U.S. wool producers are hurt by imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cotton farmers aren't the only ones suffering from imports. Wool producers also are feeling the pinch, according to the latest figures by the Agriculture Department. This year, says the department's Economic Research Service, wool use by U.S. textile mills is expected to drop to 120 million pounds, down from 142.1 million pounds in 1984. "Imports of worsted apparel from the Far East, together with other wool textile imports, have been a major factor depressing mill demand," the agency said in a new outlook report. Consequently, wool prices paid to growers are expected to drop about 15 percent this year, averaging around 68 cents per pound, compared with 79.5 cents in 1984. "Domestic and imported wool prices, generally, did not rise this spring as the new clip became available, because of weak mill demand," the report said. "A strong influence on domestic wool prices is the currency exchange rates with other producing countries." If the U.S. dollar grows weaker compared with other currencies, that could raise prices of imported wool. "Since 60 to 70 percent of mill consumption is imported raw wool, higher foreign wool prices could allow U.S. wool prices to rise also," the report said. Imports of raw wool this year are expected to drop about 10 percent to about 85 million pounds from 94.2 million pounds in 1984. U.S. domestic production, comparatively, is expected to decline again to 84.8 million pounds from 92.9 million pounds in 1984, the lowest since USDA began wool records in 1909. There has been a steady increase in the wool content of imported textile products. In 1984, the report said, those imports contained about 210.2 million pounds of wool, compared with 149.8 million pounds in 1983. WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department economists say a government decision to reduce the amount of lead in gasoline has not made the fuel noticeably more expensive at the farm. The Environmental Protection Agency on July 1 reduced the amount of lead permitted in leaded gasoline to 0.5 grams from 1.1 grams previously. A further reduction to 0.1 grams is scheduled on Jan. 1, 1986. According to the Department of Energy, these restrictions will add 1 cent per gallon to gasoline prices as of July 1 and another cent per gallon on Jan. 1. The USDA said in a recent report that gasoline prices at the farm the U.S. average price of gasoline delivered to the farm this year is expected to average $1.16 per gallon, down from $1.18 in 1984. Officials said the farm price of gasoline was $1.09 per gallon in the first quarter of this year and then jumped to $1.17 in the second before easing back to an estimated $1.15 in the third and $1.13 in the fourth. The figures take into account the impact of reducing the lead content, the report said.
