Independents' brief blames RRC

FROM STAFF AND WIRE REPORTS

AUSTIN - Lawyers for "white oil" operators in the Panhandle Field say the Railroad Commission led operators to invest hundreds of millions of dollars in wells and equipment, then adopted an order that could shut down the wells.

A 101-page brief submitted to State District Judge Harley Clark this week spelled out the operators' complaints about the May 13 commission order that requires white oil wells to be retested.

The brief was prepared by Austin lawyers Ivan Hafley and Lloyd Broussard. The deadline for the commission to respond is Aug. 19. The white oil trial is set for Sept. 6.

White oil is a water-white liquid that is produced by chilling vapor through the use of mechanical 'LTX' units. LTX is an acronym for "low temperature extraction.

White oil operators in the 1.5 million-acre

Panhandle Field have allegedly counted the liquid as crude oil to meet the test ratio for an oil well one barrel to less than 100,000 cubic feet of gas.

Phillips Petroleum Co. challenged this procedure before the commission in September 1981, but it was not until May that the regulatory agency issued its order. "Oil wells" that fail to meet the oil-gas ratio would be sealed.

Phillips and "their allies" own gas rights in the field, the brief said, but the oil rights are primarily owned by families and individuals.

Phillips alleges that white operators are draining gas that belongs to them since an "oil well," under commission rules, also can produce up to 500,000 cubic feet of gas a day. Also, an oil well can be drilled on 10 acres, a gas well on no less than 640

"The oil rights owners are just as entitled to produce this gas through their oil wells, as the major companies are to produce the vaporized oil hydrocarbons through their gas wells," the brief

The Panhandle Field, northeast of Amarillo, has produced more than 26 trillion cubic feet of gas and more than 1.3 billion barrels of oil since it was discovered in 1918.

"Together, this cumulative production clearly makes the Panhandle Field the largest associated oil and gas field in Texas. Viewed separately, it would be the largest gas field and second largest oil field in Texas," the brief said.

It said operators have relied on the commission's "action and inaction" in investing perhaps $250 million on LTX wells since 1978.

The brief said the economic impact of the commission order on the Panhandle region would be

Millions of dollars a year in tax revenues would be lost to the state and local communities, and the order would create a "rippling effect of tidal wave proportions on the economy" of the Panhandle, the brief said

"In sum, the commission has ignored the common law, misconstrued the statutes, ignored and violated its statutory duties, miscrued its own rules, and applied an unlawful standards to plaintiffs by the order," the brief said.

It asked the trial court to reverse the commission order, hold it null and void, and issue a permanent injunction against its enforcement by the

Since "this battle has been fought for four long years, has cost the parties millions of dollars in legal fees and other expenses, and has put investment of hundreds of millions of dollars in jeopardy, simple justice demands a final decision, not further proceedings," the brief said

Rehearing by FERC requested

AUSTIN - The Texas Railroad Commission has made another request for intervention with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission regarding the oil and gas disputes in the Panhandle Field.

E. Ray Grasshoff, RRC information specialist, reported in a telephone conversation with The Pampa News' today that the commission about 6:15 p.m. Thursday sent off a motion to intervene and a request for a rehearing in the Dorchester vs. Stowers

FERC issued its order July 12 against 35 independent oil operators in the Panhandle, ruling they were in violation of federal interstate commerce and pricing regulations from their production of gas from their oil wells

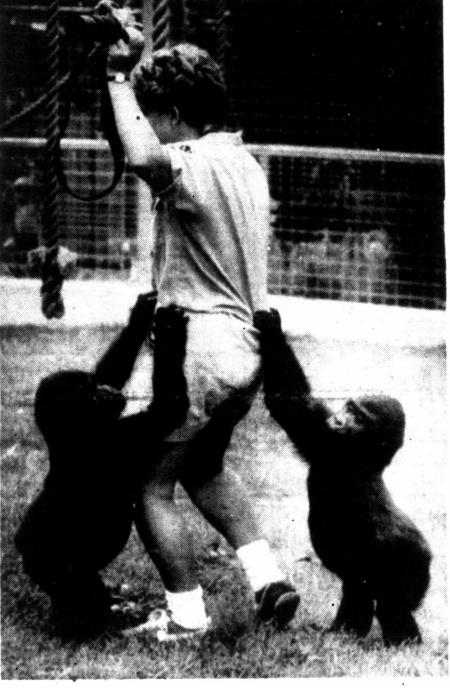

Grasshoff said the decision to send the motion for intervention was based on the state agency's feelings that FERC's "interpretation of the definition of casinghead gas was overly

The request notes that FERC's interpretation of the oil and gas situations in the Panhandle Field "might have serious implications in other parts of the state' regarding oil and gas production. Grasshoff said the RRC commissioners apparently feel the federal agency "might be going too far in interpreting state laws The interpretation in the federal

City of Groom keeps same tax rate

GROOM - While retaining the city tax rate of 68 cents per $100 valuation, city officials Tuesday approved 1986 budgets for their general, road and water funds

Out of the tax rate, 57 cents will go to the general fund and 11 will go for interest and debt service. It is the same as the city's 1985 tax rate. Based on $9,824,336 in city property values, the city expects $67,034 in property tax collections for 1986.

The $121,850 water works budget includes $33,500 for trash pick-up, $32,000 for salaries, $27,000 for telephone and utilities, and $9,000 for operating expenses.

The city expects to collect $119,652 in water and sewer fees and $1,500 in meter deposits. The fund also has a current balance of $25,000 and expects $24,302 at the end of the fiscal year.

The $56,736 general fund budget includes $7.000 for such professional fees as attorney services and engineering fee \lso included is $15,000 for salaries, $2,636 to the Carson County Appraisal District and $12,000 for insurance and bonds. The city also owes $11,437 on a 1982 certificate on a water well.

In addition to the $67.000 in property taxes, the city expects to collect $12,700 in franchise taxes. $1,300 in penalty and interest, $4,000 in delinquent taxes and $200 in licenses and permits.

The city road fund is $17,100 with $15,000 going for road repair and $2,100 in road supplies. The city owes $10,350 on debt service on a paving project.

Because of the doubtful status of Revenue Sharing, no RS budget was made. The current RS fund balance is $7,667 with about $5,418 expected from payments for July and Cctober

The city also owes $7,104 for debt service for a new fire truck.

In other business, the city hired Lucinda Mann as animal control officer. Mann, who spent four months training with the Pampa animal control officers, will work in Groom two days a week for $6 an

The city adopted a new animal ordinance which levies a $25 fine for each animal picked up and an additional $25 for each day that animal is kept at the pound. Although there will be no license tags, the animals must have proof of rabbies vaccination

The council also approved a bid of $900 from J.C. Brown of Groom to paint the city offices and the outdoor trim on city hall and presented former council member D.A. Watson with a plaque comemorating his service from

Miami school district facing large tax hike

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

MIAMI - The proposed 1986 school budget is three percent higher than last year, but a $30 million drop in property values may force a 19 percent tax increase, school officials learned Thursday

Miami Independent School District trustees discussed that possibility Thursday at a special school budget hearing.

School superintendent Allan Dinsmore presented trustees with a $1.448 million budget, noting that the school would have to raise its tax rate from 24 to 31 cents per $100 valuaton to pay the local share. Total property valuation in Miami ISD is $418,990,000, with $390 million of that coming from mineral valuations and $28 million coming from local property values.

Roberts County in may A raiser Debbie Stribling speculated that if the school continued its 24 cent tax rate, it would collect $71,580 less in 1985, or $1.077 million

Under a 31 cent tax rate, the school could collect $1.310 million, Dinsmore estimates

Usually if a tax rate jumps by more than eight percent, the rate is subject to a roll-back election; if by more than three percent, there must be a public hearing. However, new education legislation enables schools to bypass the rollback if there is an excessive loss in state revenue

Dinsmore anticipates the $200,000 carry-over from 1985 will be used up in September or October, before 1985-86 tax receipts come in

"So, we're looking at a deficit budget here," he said. Adding $7,000 in gate receipts,

$25,000 in interest, $24,000 in food service sales and $500 from rent of school facilities, Dinsmore anticipates $1,377,212 to come from local sources The district is scheduled to get

$53,200 in state per capita aid. Being a budget balanced school district, the school gets no state foundation funds to pay for such programs as special education, teacher career ladder merit pay, vocational education and transportation. The $95,167 the school could have received in foundation funds will be recovered by borrowing from the local fund.

"This hits a butget balanced school district harder than a foundation funded school," Trustee Vernon Cook said.

Dinsmore said that almost half of the budget is taken up with instruction-related expenditures, with most of that goin for teachers and aides. Total payroll for the 14 Miami High School teachers (grades 7-12) is $209,318 while payroll for the seven Miami elementary teachers and music teacher is set at $229,943.

Murray Bennett, representative of Pioneer Natural Gas who attended the hearing with Mel Stapleton of Phillips Petroleum, questioned the teacher payroll and asked trustees how many "excess teachers" the district has.

After a momentary hush among the board. Cook denied that the district has excess teachers. Citing a report comparing expenditures, teacher ratios and tax rates of area school districts, trustee Charles Byrum pointed out that Miami's teacher-student ratio of 1 - 10 is in line with other area districts. Mobeetie has a ratio of 1 - 9, he

Lefors school board studies tax rate hike

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

LEFORS - Trustees of the Lefors Independent School District generally agreed there will have to be a raise in the property tax rate, but the amount is yet to be decided

Meeting in regular session Thursday night, the board members set a special called meeting for 6:30 p.m. Aug. 19 to decide what tax rate to adopt. Supt. Earl Ross explained the effective tax rate would be 63.79 cents per $100 valuation. That would be the rate needed to raise the same amount of revenue from property taxes as last year The effective rate is nearly 4 cents above last year's rate of 60 cents. Business Manager Virginia Archer explained the effective rate is higher because taxable valuation for property in the district has dropped, according to figures from the Gray County Appraisal District.

The estimated adjusted taxable value of property is approximately $136 million this year, down about $7 million from last year, Archer said. Accordingly, a higher tax rate would be needed to raise the same amount of revenue But the final tax rate will probably be even higher in order to raise the additional revenue needed to cover increased budgeted expenditures, Supt. Ross noted

Because of state-mandated changes established last year by House Bill 72, the district faces increased salaries for teachers, Career Ladder supplements and additional courses of instruction. The district has increased its faculty by two additional members for the coming school year to meet instructional needs.

In addition, the district has to purchase new supplies for the added courses, including additional computers. Ross said there are also pressing maintenance needs which have to be met plus some capital outlay to obtain new equipment.

Ross presented the preliminary budget for study. Estimated expenditures for 1985-1986 are $1,116,282,

Last year's budget was $1,358,867. But that included more than $300,000 taken from reserve funds to meet payments for the new elementary school building. The remainder of the reserve funds was used to meet expenses for increased salaries and supplements mandated last year by the state.

Excluding the building payments, last year's budget was actually only about $1,024,000, Archer said. The proposed budget represents about a $92,000 increase, or approximately 9 percent, Ross

Ross said the statewide average for property tax rates in school districts is 76.7 cents per $100 valuation, with Lefors being below the average. "But we're penalized because we're not at the state average," he claimed, explaining the district loses state funds in some areas because of the lesser tax

The district has already lost some state funding under HB 72 changes. Last year the district lost about $75,000 in state revenue, and faces a comparable loss this year Ross suggested the board members review figures for the budget and tax rate and then make a decision at the Aug. 19 meeting. The board was to consider an agenda item last night to set a date for a public hearing on the tax increase, but that was tabled to a later meeting until the board sets the tax rate.

The board will also adopt the budget and approve the amended 1984-1985 budget at the special called responsibilities for the two principals.

Ross explained there have been some discipline problems in having the elementary principal in charge of students through the eighth grade, with the high school principal in charge of ninth through

Under the past division, the elementary principal had his office in the elementary building but still had responsibilities over seventh and eighth students attending classes in the high school building.

There were also problems in having some teachers instructing both high school and junior high or elementary students and having to answer to the two different principals. Ross said he had talked to the principals - Gene Gee for high school and Bill Crockett for elementary school - and proposed that the elementary principal be in charge of grades K-6 and the high school principal oversee grades 7-12. Those teachers having instruction areas in both high school and elementary classes would be under the elementary principal. The board approved the redesignation, noting it

Boulter campaign debt biggest

WASHINGTON (AP) - Five of Texas' six freshmen Republican congressmen drew substantial contributions — totalling between $32,550 and $77,350 - from special-interest political action committees, according to their latest campaign finance repor lt six months of 1985.

Mac Sweeney of Wharton, who was working overtime to mop up a large campaign debt, attracted the most individual and PAC contributions in the delegation. He received total donations of $220,265 with $77,350 coming from PACs.

Beau Boulter of Amarillo received $47,100 in PAC contributions. Tom DeLay of Sugar Land received $39.900: Richard Armey of Denton, $34,650; and Combest of Lubbock, Larry $32,550

Joe Barton of Ennis received only $6,000 from PACs. He was the only one of the six not to get a seat on a major committee and serves on Interior, and Science and Technology.

Sweeney is on Armed Services; Boulter on Budget; DeLay on Public Works and Government Operations; Armey on Education and Labor and Government Operations; and Combest on Agriculture

Boulter had the biggest campaign debt, about $42,600.

Democrat Marvin Leath of Marlin won a seat on the powerful Budget Committee, and Albert Bustamante of San Antonio, the only new Democrat in the delegation, was appointed to Armed Services, but their reports were not available Thursday at the House records office.

Two Texas veterans, Democrat J.J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin and Republican Bill Archer of Houston, boasted the largest campaign chests while picking up the fewest contributions. Both have historically drawn little opposition. Archer, who was elected to fill

George Bush's River Oaks seat in 1970, had $401,893 in his cofers. Pickle, who in 1963 won the seat once held by Lyndon Johnson, reported cash-on-hand of $358,705.

Pickle collected the smallest amount of contributions - $150. Archer reported contributions of Dallas Democrat John Bryant, in his second term and expecting opposition in a district that is shifting toward the GOP, has been busy building up a war chest. He reported cash on hand of $192,671. Next to Sweeney, he collected the most donations, $170,860, with $129.835 coming from individual contributors.

Jack Brooks of Beaumont, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, received $54,550 from Ralph Hall of Rockwall, who is 18th out of 25 Democrats on the Energy and Commerce Committee, received even more, $56,580, placing him second in the delegation in PAC contributions, behind Sweeney.

"It really opens up a whole new chapter in the struggle of the farm workers," union leader Jesus Moya said of U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson's ruling.

The Amarillo judge Wednesday threw out seven state laws restricting picketing. She said the laws violated free speech. Included were statutes barring "mass picketing" by requiring at least 50 feet between picketers

The Texas AFL-CIO on Thursday called the decision "the most significant labor-management ruling in Texas in at least 20 years." AFL-CIO Communications Director John Rogers unions a major, major boost in organizing.

said in Austin, "It probably gives service employees strikes," said Rebecca Harrington of Austin, Texas director of the United Farm Workers.

But growers and a major farm group criticized the ruling as giving too much freedom to union organizers. The result could be a "California" atmosphere in the fields, according to Keith Garrison, director of farm labor programs for the Texas Farm Bureau in Waco.

'That atmosphere contributed to a lot of violence. All kinds of violent acts resulted during organizing activities." he said.

"I was shocked," said Wes Fisher, a Hereford grower whose firm was a party to the court fight. "Good Lord, that leaves the door wide open for them to walk all over us. A lot of the growers are getting out of the vegetable business.

"It's going to screw up our right-to-work" guarantees, Fisher said in a telephone interview from his West Texas office.

Texas' right-to-work law forbids union membership as a condition of employment.

Ms. Robinson's ruling ended a bitter dispute between vegetable growers and union organizers that began five years ago in an onion field. Moya, now director of the International Union of Agricultural and Industrial Workers, was a key leader in the 1980 strikes that sparked the court

"This is not just a victory for farm workers. It's also a victory for all other workers in the state of Texas," he said in a Thursday telephone interview from Hereford

The dispute began when Deaf Smith County officials arrested Arizona labor organizer Karen Kincaid in 1980 for allegedly trespassing on an onion field six miles west of Hereford. High Plains growers then sought a court order to stop union activists from organizing protests.

The picketing laws thrown out by the judge include

 More than two pickets within 50 feet of an entrance to the work place and restricted pickets to one every 50 feet.

The use of "insulting, threatening or obscene language" to interfere with workers who cross the picket line.

- Picketing "accompanied by slander, libel or the public display or publication of oral or written misrepresentations.

- The use of force or coercion to get an employer to bargain with or recognize a labor union that does not represent the workers. A Texas Rural League Aid attorney, who helped represent the farm workers, said the laws made it difficult to organize an effective strike. Randall Marshall said the picketer distance provisions were especially difficult to obey.

Obviously, that has an effect on a picket line. If you have 100 people, it's hard to keep them 50 feet apart," he said in Hereford.

Governor offers advice to students and schools

AUSTIN (AP) — Hard work and that every citizen in Texas help in studying - not lower standards - are the secrets to success under the no-pass, no-play rule, Gov. Mark White is telling Texas students and coaches.

'No one ever said change would be easy. And we've got some big changes to make," White said Thursday.

"All we are requesting of coaches, teachers, students and parents is to give these rules time to work and a chance to work," he

The no-pass, no-play rule was a key element in the school reform law enacted by the Legislature last year. It forbids students from participating in extracurricular activities, including sports, for six weeks if failing any class.

Last month, two dozen high school coaches met with White to talk about the rule, which many coaches criticize as being too But the governor told his weekly news conference Thursday he is in no mood to bend.

"I made the point clear to the coaches at that time — and I would like to make that point again so understands - we are not going to retreat from the standards that have been set by this rule." White

However, White said he promised the coaches 'refinements,' so Thursday he issued a five-page position paper detailing his recommendations for guaranteeing the maximum number of students stay eligible.

The advice calls for planning by teachers and coaches, close monitoring of students' progress, extra tutorial sessions, a buddy system in which passing athletes help teammates who face academic trouble and a "mentor system" in which an adult would work with a student.

Coaches have said the six-week suspension is too long. They say it will discourage athletes from taking tough courses and may cause more to drop out.

But the governor voiced little sympathy for such complaints.

"I'm saying this is the law, and here is the way that we would advise you to have the greatest success in compliance with it and the least amount of difficulty as far as the number of students that would be lost by failure to pass," he said.

'Educational excellence is not a shallow dream and requires the deep commitment of all of our society. I am convinced that the coaches of this state share that commitment and will guide a team effort that will push Texas education across that academic goal line.'

"I'll guarantee you if they spend 10 percent as much time studying the course as they do practicing on the field, they'll pass the course,' he said.

White - who has taken to calling it the "pass-play" rule - said his advice wasn't just for football players, although this fall will be the first high school football season to come under the must-pass requirement.
"Our job now is not to debate the merit of the standards ... Our job now is to provide every student, in every classroom, in every school in Texas the kind of assistance and support he or she needs to be a winner in the classroom, on the playing field and in life.

Texas foreclosures

AUSTIN (AP) — The nation's leading mortgage insurance firm reports it had twice as many foreclosure claims in Texas as in any other state during the first quarter of 1985, and an official says adjustable-rate mortgages are a big reason for the problems. Michael Carroll, Austin representative for Mortgage Guarantee Insurance Corp., said that of the $46 million in claims his firm paid during the first quarter, Texas led with 635 claims. California was second with 330 claims and Florida was third with

About 424 of the Texas foreclosures were in Houston. "Houston is leading everywhere. If Houston was a state, it would be our No. 1 claim state," Carroll told the Austin American-Statesman

Real estate industry experts say the foreclosures point out the problems that led the National Federal Mortgage Insurance Association this week to announce tougher mortgage eligibility requirements. The new Fannie Mae rules, which take effect Oct. 1, may hurt somify for home loans. Nationwide, Carroll said, his

Miami Vice has been nominated for 15 Emmys this year and it was no surprise for me. I knew after watching the premiere episode that a hit show was at hand

Yes, I enjoy watching the show, but it's not what you think. You might believe I tune in NBC just so I can see two absolutely dazzling vice cops foil would-be felons with a splendid variety of fast boats, faster cars and (when necessary) some fetching females, all against a sultry backdrop of pink flamingos, palms and crystalline waters. You are partially correct, but the real reason I watch Miami Vice is to see Sonny Crockett smoke cigarettes. Oh, I understand cigarette smoking is unhealthy and only last week I read an article that inmplied the "better people" simply will not smoke, like it was some sort of low class thing to do

Don Johnson, who portrays the raspy-voiced vice cop Sonny Crockett, must have honed his craft by watching old Humphrey Bogart movies. Crockett smokes the old fashioned way First he employs just enough wrist action to flick one cigarette out of his pack of Luckies (NO FILTERS), then he tamps it carefully. To light it, he has a fat Zippo that throws a flame bright enough to have been used in the Old North Church. A hurricane couldn't blow it out. Which brings me to my point: Bic lighters and all those other disposables are just plain wimpy. Where are the spotless, gleaming Zippos the men of yesteryear used to carry? It might have had a Marine insignia or Airborne wings on it, with a small dent where it deflected a bullet, or maybe it was just inscribed "From Anne, with

So come on, men, dig out that old lighter, buy some flint and fluid and fix that baby up. And if the lighter fluid leaks out and burns a spot on your thigh the size of a silver dollar...well, why do you think Bogart was so tough?

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Missing ingredient is political resolve

The issue of whether the president should have the power to issue "line-item" vetoes-vetoing individual items in congressional spending bills rather than turning thumbs down on the entire bill—may be one of procedure rather than substance. The Senate recently defeated. through filibuster, a measure to give the president such

Enthusiasm for the measure may have reflected a desire to have budget-cutting with minimal political pain. but granting more power to the president could cut

Viewed one way, the line-item veto idea seems like simple housekeeping. Congress passes appropriations bills that may contain hundreds of spending items. If a president objects strongly to two or three of these programs, his only option is to veto the entire measure. dare Congress to muster the two-thirds vote need to pass it over a veto, or (more likely) negotiate about the objectional porograms and start over. To be sure, the process is cumbersome

The argument that this president, once armed with line-item veto power, could really get in there and cut the budget might be more persuasive if President Reagan had been more active in wielding the veto power he has.

The fact that he has talked a good budet-cutting line but used the veto on spending measures fewer times than President Ford did during his shorter period in office creates serious doubts about whether a line-item veto is a budget-cutter's nirvana

There is another long-term question about giving the presidency more power. A president with a big-spending agency mike be able to use it to pressure Congress into appropriating more money for his ppet projects than

It seems increasingly apparently that what is lacking in efforts to reduce government spending is not specific tools, but political will.

In a general sort of way, almost everybody agrees that the government is too big and too expensive. When it gets down to cases, however, specific alliances between political ambition and special-interest spending are still too strong for that general feeling to have much impact.

The lesson for those who would like to see the power and scope of government reduced is that a long, hard battle remains. The job of turning around public opinion and exposing special interests, not just in a general way but on specific spending programs, is complex and often thankless. That kind of educational work, however, rather than little changes in procedures, is what is needed more than ever.

'Reagan revolution' is over

By CHARLES D. VAN EATON

David Stockman irritated a lot of people and was, in turn, irritated by a lot of people. His high public profile and outspoken views on both the size and structure of the federal budget - which is to say the very heart of budget policy - upset a lot of people in the White House staff and in the Cabinet as he exposed their favorite programs to critical

Now that he is out it is generally acknowledged that it was his persistent "burr under the saddle" behavior which contributed to his demise. Indeed some observors have noted that it is not by accident that one of the criterion announced for his successor is that he (or she) be more "low profile" than was true of the outgoing director of the Office of Managment and Budget.

Stockman also irritated certain of the more extreme elements in the so-called "Supply Side Economics" camp. His presistent attacks on the deficit and his forthright argument that if spending was not going to be cut then taxes would have to be raised, upset those who based their case on tax cuts and tax cuts alone. One member of this group went so far as to label the 1981-82 recession the "Stockman Recession"

But Stockman was irritated too. The seeming unwillingness of Congress - both Democrats and Republicans - to bite the bullet on spending cuts before talking about tax increases called forth his wrath. He made his feelings clear in the famous (or, depending on one's point of view, infamous) Atlantic Monthly interview where he noted that where spending was involved "there are no true Conservatives in Congress.

In the same interview he expressed contempt for those newly appointed Cabinet secretaries who, following their appointment by a President committed to cutting programs under their oversight, immediately fell in line with the status quo of more and more spending. Moreover, Casper Wineberger and the Defense Department were not exempt from his criticism however much the defense budget may have been supported by

It seems to me that with Mr. Stockman's exit a pretty good case can be made for the proposition that the Reagan administration has not simply lost control over its own budget but, rather, has voluntarily forfeited its budget to Tip O'Neill and the Democrats in the House of Representatives. With Stockman gone and with short-run political interests running in the White House, executive influence over long-run economic policy aimed toward economic growth and price stability has ended for this administration.

The so-called "Reagan Revolution" included spending cuts alongside tax cuts. Early in the President's first year in office a number of economists friendly to his policies advised that without spending cuts the transitional deficit created by tax cuts would render the monetary policy component of his program inapplicable and would cripple prospects for permanent, long-run recovery. In fact this advise was not pursued and Mr. Reagan did not get the spending cuts he sought after 1981.

A lot of people - myself included - thought the President had learned from his budget defeats of 1982, 83 and 84 and would knuckle down for this 1985 budget proposal. In January I wrote that Mr. Reagan had only one year left to complete the program of fundamental economic change be proclaimed in his 1980 election campaign. I argued that in 1986 the House and Senate would be preoccupied with reelection concerns and that in 1987 contending groups within both political parties would be diverting energy toward positioning for 1988 with little concern for the program wishes of a lame-duck President.

Thus, I reasoned, Mr. Reagan had only the year

1985 to restore the path of federal spending growth toward the ends directed by the theoretical demands of supply-side economics.

It is now obviously clear that the 1985 opportunity - the budget opportunity - has been lost and that all the forces of economic destruction forewarned by his early advisors have been unleashed. The so-called "Reagan Revolution" is finished - killed and buried by the President's abandonment of the tough budget developed by his allies in the Senate.

It should have been clear from the beginning that the Reagan spending-cut victory of 1981 was an aberration. The real test of will lay ahead - at that point when defense, farm price supports and, especially, Social Security were put on the block Mr. Reagan submitted a budget to Congress in February which, except for defense, addressed those areas. The Senate took his budget and cut it even more in the area of defense and Social Security. The House restored the Social Security cost-of-living cuts and cut defense even more than did the Senate. In conference the House agreed to put more back into defense but held firm on full COLA funding for the nation's largest middle-class entitlement program - Social Security. The Senate took a grave political risk in hanging tough on Social Security before

As everyone knows, the President repudiated the Senate budget - the budget most consistent with his own February proposal - and deferred to the House. In so doing he marked the end of his administration. In all it has been a sorry spectacle sorry because the only person with the political capital to pursue the battle, the President, chose not to pursue the battle. Maybe David Stockman knew what he was doing when he left the scene.

Today in History

By The Associated Press Today is Friday, Aug. 9, the 221st day of 1985. There are 144 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: Forty years ago — on August 9, 1945 — the United States dropped its second atomic bomb on Japan, destroying part of the city of Nagasaki. An estimated 74,000 people died either from the blast or its after-effects. Nagasaki was not the original target; heavy clouds prevented the bombing of Kokura in northern Kyushu.

Five years ago: Hurricane Allen bore down on the Texas coast, roiling the Gulf of Mexico with supercharged winds and chasing thousands of people inland

One year ago: Iranian leader Ayatollah Khomeini denounced the mining of the Red Sea and sharply criticized his country's state radio, which had praised the attacks.

Today's birthdays: Sen. James D-Neb., is 64. Exon. Comedian-director David Steinberg is 43. Actor Sam Elliott is 41. Boxer Ken Norton is 40.

Signs of nearing senior citizenship

By D. R. SEGAL

A young relative of mine has given me a thing for my bicycle. It tells how far I have gone, how fast and how long it took. It has two other "functions," too, but I don't know what they are. Anyway, there I was, riding along the beach, watching my bike speedometer (11.6 mph). feeling pleased as punch that I had not fallen off recently nor run into anyone much. And then comes this darling little boy who is passing out handbills. "Hi, Gramps, says this little angel. "wanna go to a party?" The hideous little monster!

There is nothing as deflationary as tooling along on your bike along the beach, sort of fancying yourself as being one of those bronzed young gods all around you, and then some misbegotten brat calls you

Gramps! Like one atom bomb, it can spoil a whole day

To tell the truth, I have had certain signs and intimations of approaching senior citizenship for some time.

A number of years ago I went to see a movie called "The Last Picture Show" which young people thought was the cat's pajamas. Some of them saw it a dozen times. It was in black and white and didn't make a whole lot of sense It was a kind of celebration of the death of a small town in Texas. "The Last Picture Show" told me I was getting out of sync with the only people who really matter - the young ones.

Now there is a movie called The Big Chill." I saw that one. too, and if I hadn't read a review I would never have caught on to the plot at all. The actors talked at the same time and about somebody we never see (well, I guess we saw his cut-and-sutured wrist) and referred back to the days when they must have been a bunch of "The Big Chill" got rave reviews and it has a Message but you have to have a very young antenna to pick it up. My reaction was to holler at them. What are you all bitching so much about?

Well. I don't have to go to movies like that but I do like to ride my bicycle at a sedate pace without having runny-nosed cherubs calling me Gramps. It's not that I'm not a gramps, because I am, but I don't like to think that Gramps sums me up, puts me in a package and writes me off the ledger.

Gramps! He could have said Your Highness or Handsome or something more appropriate and accurate than Gramps!

BERN, Switzerland (AP) - Is Switzerland's 50-year-old law on banking secrecy an inviolable taboo, as a Swiss finance minister once put it ? Or will it soon have as many holes as a Swiss cheese, as some ultraconservatives warn?

More than one year after Swiss voters overwhelmingly rejected a Socialist proposal that would have radically modified its rules, the law is again the subject of a heated nationwide debate.

Reports that Swiss banks were involved in large-scale money laundering fueled the discussions as did the preparations, under U.S. pressure, for a law forbidding 'insider' stock market manipulations.

But Switzerland, Austria and Luxembourg declined earlier this year to accept recommendations by the the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development for a relaxation of bank secrecy toward tax authorities.

Senior Swiss officials say they do not share fears that the law is being eroded. However, Markus Lusser, vice president of the Swiss National Bank, said in an interview that the "boundaries of banking secrecy are not unchangeable, but must be adapted to new developments in social and legal

"It is important that Switzerland itself marks these boundaries without being governed by foreign wishes and ideas," he added.

Lusser said the law could be protected against foreign pressure for its abolition "if we succeed in showing credibly that we will not tolerate any improper use of

One important measure ensuring this, he said, would be incorporation of a good conduct code into national banking legislation. The code has been signed between the National Bank and the country's commercial Lusser blamed "misunderstandings and wrong notions" for putting the banking secrecy law into the headlines in connection with Mafia money-laundering operations.

Swiss banks, he emphasized, are obliged to cooperate with authorities in any criminal cases, including drug offenses, punishable under the Swiss penal

"But the police have to seize the offenders," he said. "The banks cannot replace the justice

Banking circles, however, expect that the United States will increasingly seek to curb Switzerland's share in the cash transactions market. Hans J. Baer, a leading Zurich private banker, said he expected some "unpleasant measures" would have to be taken in this field to check any future money-laundering.

Lusser, however, said restraints on such transactions would not make much sense, and might only create a 'gray market.' Moreover, he said, this country already had gone further than its foreign competitors in verifying the identity of cash depositors

This verification is part of the 1977 code of conduct agreement signed in the wake of the biggest banking scandal in Swiss history.

Atheists reveal bible's 'steamier' sections in special edition

AUSTIN (AP) - "The X-Rated Bible" is a newly-released book showing that even the Bible talks of incest, rape and abortion, officials of the American Atheist Center

The book, released last week, is a compilation of the Bible's steamier sections which contain the same type of material condemned by some who support banning sexually explicit books and magazines, center officials said.

Jon Garth Murray, director of 428-page book should be studied by pornography foes and Bible supporters who condemn sex-oriented publications.

"There are examples of the same kinds of things in the Bible that the people who claim to be representatives of the Bible are trying to get out of our society,' said Jon Garth Murray, director of the Austin-based center.

Murray said if pornography opponents are "going to condemn human sexuality, they're going to have to condemn it on some other basis than the Bible.

According to the atheist center, the Bible includes "incest, rape, fornication, homosexuality, mass-inflicted abortions, lasciviousness and adultery." It also contains "sado-masochism, pedophilia, lusting, bestiality, masturbation, lewdness, copulation and sodomy," center said in a news release. But pornography foes disagree with Murray's explanation.

Evenly Dee, executive director of Morality in Media, said if such actions are mentioned in the Bible, they "are mentioned as evil and usually punished as evil," whereas "in pornography they're represented as good, pleasurable and desirable.

Morality in Media is an anti-pornography organization based in New York.

Asked to name a specific sex activity condoned by the Bible but condemned by anti-pornography activists, Murray said, "I really don't know.

Despite its provocative contents, the book, compiled by Edward Ackerley, a California educator, might have a difficult time making it to the best-seller lists, said Murray, son of the center's founder, Madalyn Murray O'Hair.

No major book distributor or store chain has agreed to carry it, so "The X-Rated Bible" available only by mail from the atheist center.

One story included in the book is about David, later king of Israel, and his friendship with Jonathan, son of King Saul. Quoting David's description of Jonathan's love for him as "passing the love of had a homosexual relationship.

Scholars, however, are divided over such an interpretation.

These four ducks have a wreath to nest in!

Duck decor is very fashionable. or at least I think it ought to be. After all, many fashionable people imitate the duck's migratory habits by flying south for the winter. Luckily the four quackers on this wreath are ducks for all

Made from muslin and stuffed with fiberfill, these ducks nest comfortably all year round in their calico wreath. The rich green of the wreath suggests the muted beauty of a forest. The red calico bow and stuffed wreath measures 18 inches

To make the wreath, you'll need four 10-inch squares of calico, 1/2 yard of 36-inch-wide calico for the bow, 11/2 yards of 36-inch-wide cotton fabric for the ruffle and wreath back, and one yard of grosgrain ribbon. To make the ducks, you'll need 1/4 yard of unbleached muslin.

Cut from each calico square a piece shaped like one-quarter of the circular wreath. Stitch these pieces together end to end, leaving one seam unsewn. Assemble the cotton back as you did the calico

From the cotton fabric, cut four 9x36 inch ruffle pieces. Stitch them together end to end, to form one long strip 9x142 inches. Fold the ruffle in half lengthwise, with right sides together. Stitch each short end. Clip the corners and turn the ruffle right side out. It should now be folded in half lengthwise, wrong sides together. Baste through both layers along the raw edges. Gather the ruffle until it is the same length as the perimeter of the wreath.

Align the raw edge of the ruffle with the raw outer edge of the wreath front, and baste the ruffle in place. Pin the wreath back to the front, placing right sides together. The ruffle will be sandwiched between the front and back wreath layers. Stitch the inner and outer curved edges, taking care not to catch the ruffle in the seams. Do not stitch the short open ends.

Remove the basting threads, clip the curves, and turn the wreath tube right side out. Stuff the wreath firmly with fiberfill, up to the open edges. Press the raw edges to the inside, and whipstitch the edges together.

To trim the wreath, cut several one-inch-wide strips, and stitch them together end to end, forming a continuous strip about 48 inches long. Fold the long strip right sides together lengthwise, and stitch a narrow seam along the long straight edge, leaving the ends

At the whipstitched seam, begin tacking the trim to the outer edge of the wreath and continue around the edge of the ruffle. When you reach your starting point, cut off any excess trim, turn the raw edges to the inside, and tack the end in place

To make one duck, cut out two muslin duck pieces. Stitch them together, leaving an opening on the lower edge. Clip the curves, turn the duck right side out, and stuff with fiberfill. Turn the raw edges inside and whipstitch the opening. Whipstitch the ducks onto the

To make the bow, cut and piece together lengths of calico to form a 9x60 inch strip. Fold the strip lengthwise, right sides together, and cut the ends at an angle. Stitch across one angled end, the long straight edge, and the opposite angled edge, leaving a four-inch opening in the middle for turning.

You can easily make your own stuffed duck wreath, using our fully-illustrated plans. The plans include a complete materials list, full-size patterns for the duck figure, step-by-step assembly instructions, and sewing tips and techniques

If you would like to order the plans, please specify Project No. 1410-2 and send $4.95. We are also offering plans for our popular seed applique geese and eagle, Project No. 1240-2. These plans include full-size patterns for geese and an eagle created from beans and seeds. If you would like to order both plans, please specify both project numbers, and send $8.90.

Our color catalog lists hundreds of additional fabric and wooden projects, and is available for $2.95. All prices include postage and handling. Mail your order to: Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

Dear Abby

A lengthening list of origins is unearthed by 'OK' controversy

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Begging to differ all other parts were measured and president, who approved bills by marking them "OK"—the initials of his nickname, "Old Kinderhook," after his birthplace of Kinderhook,

This is pure folklore. It has been similarly termed an abbreviation of the semiliterate expression "Oll Korrect," slanderously ascribed to President Andrew Jackson.

Scholars, however, have established that "OK" had been used as far back as the American Revolution—long before anyone had heard of either Jackson or Van Buren (Martin or Abigail).

The source was likely one of the West African expressions such as "Yaw kay," meaning all right.

It is a major irony that this American term should derive neither from English nor from any other European tongue, but from the lips of slaves preserving a bit of their native language.

PRECISE AT PRINCETON

"OK," Charles Berlitz, the famous love them both—even with 'their linguist, thinks "OK" came from flaws. Aux Cayes," a port in Haiti, famous for its rum. His theory holds that American sailors were so fond of the rum, that "Aux Cayes," which later became "OK," became their expression for approval

J.McK., BALTIMORE

DEAR ABBY: The origin of "OK" has nothing to do with Martin Van Buren's nickname, "Old Kinder-It comes from "Olla" and

"Kalla"—the first letter of each word—which means "All Good," or 'OK" in Greek JACK KRUSH, AURORA, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: I submit that the term "OK" originated in the early days of shipbuilding on the East

In building a ship, the first step was laying the keel. Subsequently with your correspondent who stated installed, based on the keel. If a part that the term "OK" originated with was installed correctly, it was said Martin Van Buren, our eighth to be "On Keel"-hence the term "OK.

I left Max two months ago, partly because Ethel convinced me I would be better off without him. She was ecstatic when I left him. I moved into Ethel's apartment building, and we were practically inseparable for a while until I realized I still loved

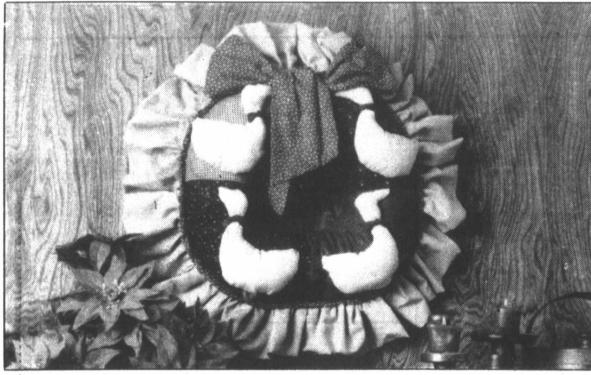

I've started seeing him again and we're looking for another apartment. When I told Ethel it was on again with Max, she grew sullen and hasn't called me since.

Ethel is clearly jealous of Max. He's a charming man, but he's not interested in winning Ethel's approval. He won't even try. Is there a way I can have Max, DEAR ABBY: With reference to and keep Ethel's friendship, too? I

DEAR IN: Your friend Ethel is a very controlling, possessive woman. While you may want to have both her and Max in your life, she is not about to share you. So, if you want Ethel's friendship, be prepared to say goodbye to Max-and to any other person who doesn't meet

Pioneers' descendants schedule reunion

Descendants of a pioneer family of the Pampa area will be gathering Saturday for the Osborne family reunion, the first time they have all tried to get together for such an occasion.

Mary Parker Graham. granddaughter of Mr. Charles W. and Gertrude Osborne, said there are 114 descendants who have been invited to the reunion, including 13 first cousins

Registration will begin at 10 a.m.

Saturday at the Clyde Carruth Pavilion on the rodeo grounds east of the city, with coffee and doughnuts available. A catered lunch will be held at 2 p.m., with family gatherings for the remainder of the day

Family members will be present from several states and parts of Texas. The furthest is from Valpraiso, Ind., with other relatives from Baton Rouge, La.; Los Alamos and Clovis, N.M.; Houston, Austin, Fort Worth and other cities in Texas.

Planning to be present at the reunion is Mrs. Jim Cooper, 94, of Perryton, the remaining survivor of the nine children of the Osborne pioneer couple.

Members of the Osborne family have been in the Pampa area since 1901, when F. W. Osborne, one of the couple's sons, arrived and settled east of the city. His parents and other siblings moved here over the next several years, with the two-story family house built two miles east of Pampa north of the Miami highway, near the present rodeo grounds.

Most of the children grew up in the area, leaving a number of descendants. Other family members moved to other areas, from which their descendants have been gathering here this week for the reunion activities tomorrow

In one of my recent columns, I requested old family recipes and suggested that readers include these in family books. Here is a recipe for Flannel Cakes that one reader sent to me. I would like to share more of this type thing and ask that when recipes are sent, please include your name and a little about the recipe you are sharing, such as whether or not it is an original

This recipe was printed in an old Homemaker Recipe Book in 1849 and is reprinted here exactly like it appeared - word for word:

FLANNEL CAKES

To make flannel cakes, take two eggs for a quart of sour milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, one of sugar, and one-half of salt. Put all together without beating eggs. Mix it into a batter stiff enough to drop off a spoon like an oyster. Then have some saleratus dissolved in water; stir in slowly until your batter begins to rise. Be careful not to put in enough to turn the color. If the milk is only sour enought to thicken, a teaspoonful of saleratus is enough for the quart. If it has fermented, it may require two and your cakes will be nicer. Have a griddle hot, and bake like buckwheat

This is an easy recipe to try today. Saleratus? Were you able to guess what the ingredient was or did you know that "saleratus" was plain old baking soda?

Send your old family recipes, queries or family reunion information to Gena Walls, 8825 S.W. Maverick Terrace No. 1009, Beaverton, Ore., 97005.

DALLAS (AP) - Mary Kay Cosmetics stock has recovered slightly from a two-day dive, and a leveraged buyout play by Mary Kay Ash to end 20 years of public trading in her company is still in the works, a spokesman said.

Mary Kay stock was the 13th most actively traded on the New York Stock Exchange on Thursday. The stock stood at 11% on 957,500 shares at the close of business, up from Wednesday's close of 10% but still down from Monday's 121/2.

U.S. moves to resume aid to rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration is preparing to resume direct aid to rebels fighting to overthrow Nicaragua's leftist government amid renewed allegations that White House officials never stopped assisting the insurgents even after Congress cut off funds a year ago

President Reagan on Thursday signed a $25.4 billion foreign aid bill for 1986 and 1987, saying he was 'particularly pleased' that the bill provides $27 million in non-lethal assistance for the estimated 15,000 Nicaraguan Contra rebels — an aid resumption cleared by Congress last month.

The bill signing came as White House spokesman Larry Speakes denied that officials of the president's National Security Council had violated "the spirit or the letter" of laws restricting U.S. military aid to the Contras.

According to published accounts by The Associated Press and The New York Times, NSC officials provided advice on how the rebels could raise money following the congressional cutoff. The Times also said advice was given on military operations.

Both reports said NSC officials began giving the advice last year after Congress refused Reagan's request for more military aid. Congress also barred any "agency or entity of the United States involved in intelligence" from helping the rebels militarily.

Administration officials have argued that the ban does not apply to the NSC, which advises the president on international and defense issues. But Rep. George E. Brown Jr., D-Calif., a House Intelligence Committee member, challenged any NSC exemption from the ban, noting that CIA council.

"They're up to their ears in intelligence," Brown said of the NSC, although adding that it would be difficult for Congress to investigate the NSC's role because the principle of executive privilege prevents presidenial advisers from being forced to testify.

But Brown said that despite that problem, the intelligence committee and the House Judiciary Committee might investigate the NSC role. He said the NSC's actions could involve "aiding and abetting violations of the Neutrality Act," which bars attacks on governments at peace with the United States.

Brown said the possible offenses 'could be impeachable" if proven, but he doubted Congress would press an investigation that might lead to such a confrontation.

Speakes said: "No member of the National Security Council staff has at any time acted in violation of either the spirit or the letter of the existing legislation.

Administration officials also said Thursday that work was nearly completed on a mechanism for distributing the non-lethal aid, which will include food, medicine, clothing and transportation for the rebels, most of whom are based in

Although granting the money, Congress barred the CIA or the Defense Department from distributing it.

In signing the foreign aid bill, which calls for $12.7 billion in each of the next two fiscal years, Reagan criticized congressional cuts in his assistance requests for some U.S. allies

Gandhi settlement attacked

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Fighting between Indians and blacks erupted today at the Mohandas Gandhi memorial complex in Durban's black townships, witnesses said, and the unofficial death toll in the Durban riots climbed to 38.

Gandhi's Phoenix Settlement became a battlefield when Indian residents set upon blacks living at the center, said director Mewa Ramgobin.

The settlement was set up by Gandhi, the Indian independence leader, during his 21 years in South Africa

The Indians were apparently enraged by black attacks on Indian houses in three days of Durban

Ramgobin described the fighting at a community dedicated to Gandhi's memory as a "terrible

He said he narrowly escaped death in the fighting when he arrived at midmorning. He said children as young as 5 or 6 were trying to carry furniture and other belongings away from the fighting.

"Whether Gandhi's house was burned, I cannot say. But a large number of buildings have been burned down" at the settlement, said Dr. Farook Meer, a leader of the Natal Indian Congress founded by Gandhi in 1894, the year he arrived in South Africa as a young

About 70 blacks, driven from their homes in previous black fighting, were living in Gandhi's former printing press building at Phoenix. They were the target of the attack by Indians from the area, said Ramgobin. The complex also included a clinic, a library and a large homestead as well as Gandhi's own modest house.

The rioting erupted during protests over the assassination last week of prominent black civil rights lawyer Victoria Mxenge outside her home in Umlazi township. About 7,000 people attended a peaceful memorial service for her Thursday night in

Roaming gangs burned down government buildings, stoned cars and police patrols and looted shops in the black townships throughout the day and night, news reports said, and police responded with shotgun fire, rubber bullets and tear gas. But reporters said that as soon as police dispersed a crowd and departed, the youths regrouped and resumed their

Peace group

An American peace group says 29 activists and 18 reporters were freed after a day of captivity by "independent anti-communist" rebels and not by the second-largest Contra guerrilla force, which it first had blamed.

Patricia Manning of the Witness for Peace group said in Managua that the American activists and the reporters accompanyie3 them arrived Thursday night at El Castillo after spending the day sailing down the San Juan River that divides Nicaragua and Costa

She said the boat was to leave early today for San Carlos, a town on Lake Nicaragua at the mouth of the river 125 southeast of Managua.

The group arrived without any accident and in a good state," Ms. Manning said, adding she could not learn more about the situation because of poor radio communications.

The Witness for Peace activists are in Nicaragua to protest the Reagan administration's support for the rebels and to campaign for peace between the United States and Nicaragua, the group's Washington office said.

On Thursday, President Reagan, who has hailed the insurgents as "freedom fighters," signed a $25.4 billion foreign aid bill, providing for a resumption of nonlethal U.S. aid to the Contras.

The peace group had blamed Wednesday's abduction on the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, an anti-Sandinista rebel group commonly known as ARDE. The rebel group's leader, Eden Pastora, had threatened that his guerrillas would shoot at the activists if they made their trip.

But Witness for Peace released a transcript of a radio conversation to The Associated Press late Thursday in which an activist aboard the boat said the abductors identified themselves as "independent anti-communists" rather than members of Pastora's

In Washington, the State Department said a spokesman for the group in Nicargua informed U.S. officials Thursday they had been held by an independent group and not by ARDE.

ARDE consistently has denied any involvement in the incident, saying it took place in territory held by the government, and that it was a "show" put on by the Sandinistas to discredit the rebels.

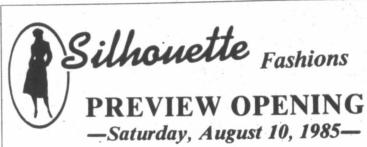

In San Carlos, local Sandinista authorities on Thursday gathered school children and teachers on the docks, saying they were to welcome the American activist group. The preparations began hours before the group announced the boat had been released.

The largest rebel force operates out of bases in Honduras, along the northern border.

Residents of Chile being driven 'batty'

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — This South American country is under a seeming invasion of bats, and experts say it's because of a recent

"The bats were driven from their homes, just like the people were. They're disoriented. They're looking for new places to settle, said zoology professor Dr. Elizabeth Chiappa of Catholic University of Valparaiso.

"The bats' lifestyle has been changed," she explained in a telephone interview. "They go out more in daylight. Therefore, they're having more run-ins with human beings.

A March earthquake shook the Santiago capital and Valparaiso, Chile's No. 2 city 75 miles northwest, killing 178 people and leaving more than 1 million homeless. Milder tremors have been jolting the two cities ever Chilean newspapers have stories almost every day of encounters between people and bats. Panicked mothers have found their children playing with the winged mammals. Parishioners of a downtown Santiago Catholic church recently screamed in fright when they discovered, literally, bats in the

Dr. Mario Munoz, the head of the Greater Santiago Environmental Health Service, which has sent out special bat-capturing squads, also believes the earth tremors have led to the zoological phenomenon.

Munoz said that since the earthquake, his service, aided by the University of Chile's Veterinary School, had caught more than 400 bats. Concerned citizens who have found bats in their homes "or sometimes just walking down the street" call the health service several times a day requesting help, he said.

It even was necessary to call in an expert bat zoologist from southern Chile, who, according to Munoz, knows special bat-trapping techniques such as using white sheets to throw off their radar.

Seven of the bats were found to be carrying rabies. But the health service chief, noting Chile's excellent record in rabies control no human infection in 14 years — said the danger to people was minimal.

"However, we must constantly warn people: don't touch bats," Munoz said. "We tell them, through newspapers and radio and TV: 'If you see a suspicious bat, leave it alone. Call us.'

'Bats are not naturally aggressive,'' he added. 'The problem is that when people chase after bats, the bats react, and this increases the chance of contact with human beings.

As a precaution, the health service gives a rabies vaccination to anyone known to have come in contact with an infected bat. Munoz said that during the current wave of bat sightings there had been about 50 such inoculations.

Firefighters school teaches tricks of trade By JEFF LISSON agencies from other cities. Texas A&M University also has an open field practice is the most exciting herman Democrat firefighters' training program. Gott's North Central Texas The summer's class included 10 SHERMAN, Texas (AP) -

Firefighting has come a long way from the days when the bell rang and the town's people grabbed buckets in an often futile attempt to save a neighbor's house. Now, with sophisticated firetrucks costing upwards of $100,000, the buckets have been replaced by hoses and firefighters. But those firefighters have to be taught the tricks of the trade. That's where Jack Gott, training officer and director of emergency medical services for the Sherman Fire Department comes in. He directs the only firefighting school in North Central Texas that is open to firefighters from industries and the town hires professional school is open to both men and women, and students come from up to 100 miles away to participate. They study subjects ranging from fire and arson investigation to community relations and mathematics.

There are 23 different subjects they have to complete that are required by the state for firefighter certification," Gott said of the training all fire personnel must undergo within one year of being hired. Texas requires 335 hours of training, Gott said, but "My school requires 360.

'The school is 80-percent classroom and 20-percent field experience," Gott said. But, the students from the Greenville Fire Department, four from Sherman, and one from the Grayson County Airport. Local industries often send their fire brigade workers to the school

"The idea is to get us used to the heat and smoke, as well as teamwork," said student Barry Witherspoon, a Greenville firefighter and 20-year volunteer with the Paris Fire Department. "For some of the rookies, it's the first time they've been in a fire."

The idea of the field experience, of course, is to simulate a real fire and to use hose and water stream techniques firefighters will later use when lives and property are at The outdoor training includes extinguishing controlled natural gas fires, oil fires, house fires and fires in taller buildings. Firefighters also learn rescue techniques.

"We're taught theory in the classroom," Witherspoon said. "This is the practical part."

Working in 100-degree heat is hard enough, but trainees often work in scorching temperatures of over 1,000 degrees. "That fire (in the oil pit) was close to 1,500 degrees, and Greenville firefighter Benny Thompson.

The idea of the training is to allow new members to practice before hitting the real thing. "The training is for the protection of property and people," Thompson

Gott generally holds the school one or two times per year. It is, he said, an all-or-nothing shot. "They have to successfully complete each subject with a 70 or above or that's it, they're not firemen," the 14-year training veteran said. "If my men fail, we just let them go.

ASPIN'S CLOUT — In a congressional upheaval, Rep. Les Aspin catapulted to the chairmanship of the House Armed Services Committee over six more senior collegues on the strength of his reputation as a military reformer and Pentagon critic. (AP Laserphoto)

Social Security viewed as an indispensable success

WASHINGTON (AP) - A half century after President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Social Security act to help protect "the average citizen average citizen ... against poverty-ridden old age," most Americans view the program as an indispensable success, a nationwide survey says.

Nine out of 10 people aged 25 or older believe Social Security should be spared from cutbacks regardless of the federal government's deficit problems.

House armed services chairman talks reform in Washington, clout at home

By DAVE SKIDMORE Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) - In a congressional upheaval, Rep. Les Aspin catapulted to the chairmanship of the House Armed Services Committee over six more senior colleagues on the strength of his reputation as a military reformer and Pentagon critic.

But when he goes home, Aspin doesn't talk about reform. He talks about clout.

"Everybody needs the help of the chairman of the Armed Services Committee," Aspin, a 47-year-old Democrat, said in a recent

WASHINGTON (AP) - The walls of Washington offices are cluttered with photographs of powerful people, usually shaking hands with the person in whose office the pictures are hanging.

Recent ones in color are best, especially if they are autographed, even finer if the autograph is accompanied by the powerful person's clever note recalling the close personal relationship the picture represents. Practically everyone who's anyone in town, whether in or out of government, seems to have one wall of such pictures. White

At a recent reception celebrating the opening of Michael K. Deaver and Associates, Washington's newest high-powered public relations firm, President's Reagan's former deputy chief of staff gaie friends a tour of his new quarters in the fashionable Georgetown district.

Deaver's office, at the end of a long hall in the luxurious penthouse suite, is furnished with a comfortable sofa and chairs and art objects collected from travels in the Orient. Windows on three sides afford a panoramic view of the city. It is more like a living room than an

During his close association with Ronald Reagan over two decades, Deaver probably has been photographed with the president

Wisconsin district since his elevation last January, but there are some indications.

For years Aspin prodded the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to dredge Kenosha's harbor on Lake Michigan. Suddenly, the corps agreed, and asked Congress to appropriate $434,000 for the job.

- Pentagon officials, including a briadier general, agreed to give 25 Wisconsin business people tips on getting military contracts. The business people then received complimentary $500-a-person tickets to a cocktail party (which raised about $25,000 for Aspin, according to an aide) so they could mingle with representatives of big

- Rolf Wogenke of the Wisconsin Department of Development was among officials from a dozen states invited to Washington to advise the Pentagon about restructuring the procurement process "I would like to feel they invited me on my own merits, but I have the feeling they invited me just because I was from Wisconsin and they knew Aspin was from Wisconsin and was very interested in defense procurement," said Wogenke.

Patrick LeSage, executive director of Forward Wisconsin, a quasi-public development agency, "It's indescribable the amount of difference it makes to be able to drop the name of the committee chairman."

"About 10 months ago we took a team of people to meet with a major defense contractor in Los Angeles," LeSage said. "One of their first comments was 'Can you tick off a list of the powerful committee chairmanships held by congressmen in your state?' That kind of put a damper on the meeting.

Not everyone's happy. Organizations pushing for procurement reform say soliciting defense business and advocating defense reform may not mix. Steering defense contracts to industries back home is "a very unhealthy way to run a nation's defense because it doesn't have anything to do with building a strong military," says James W. Morrison of Business Executives for National Security, an organization that represents 3,500 business people not involved in the defense industry. "By encouraging defense contracting into his district where it isn't now, he (Aspin) is going to put himself under stress," said Gordon Adams, executive director of a foundation-funded think tank called The Defense Budget

One of the advantages that guys like Aspin and (Sen. William) Proxmire have had is that they don't have a defense-dependent state," Adams said. "They're not hostages and that means they can bring a much more objective judgment to defense issues.

Since Aspin assumed the helm of the committee, Adams said his organization "has definitely noticed it's been a little bit harder to get support for tough bills out of

"I don't think there is any way that Les will become a pork barrel politician," said Proxmire, a Democrat who once employed Aspin as an aide. Aspin won his first term in Congress in 1970 and has won every election since.

Saudis studying Red Sea sharks

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) -Saudi Arabian scientists exploring Red Sea waters have reported the region to be one of the most prolific breeding grounds of sharks in the world.

A total of 63 sharks were caught in one area in four hours, Khaled Allam, marine biologist at the Ministry of Agriculture and Water Resources' fishery division, told The Associated Press in an interview

He said that a study of the sharks had been conducted recently off the southern Saudi coast of Jizan.

Allam stressed that there had not been any official reports of shark attacks in the Jidda area. But he said that he had recently read a Coast Guard report which reported the death of a Jizan fisherman by a tiger shark.

There are four shark species in the Red Sea that can be dangerous to man: the tiger shark, the hammerhead, the white-tipped and the black-tipped, said Allam.

The tiger shark is the most deadly of the four, he said. Long known as a man-eater, the tiger shark is distinguished by its brown spots and vertical bars on its body, giving it the appearance of its namesake.

The tiger shark is found in most of the world's oceans and is omniverous, feeding on fish, other sharks, mollusks, carrion and garbage. It is extremely aggressive.

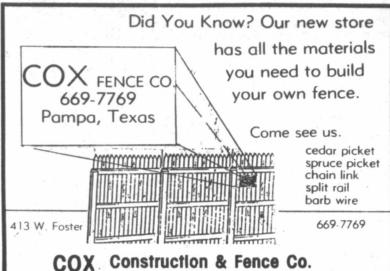

Just as dangerous is the black-tipped shark. Smaller than the tiger shark, it is distinguished by the black tips on its fins. Closely related is the white-tipped shark. As its name implies, it is distinguished by white tips on its fins. It is less aggressive than the tiger or black-tipped, according to Allam.

The fourth potential man-eater in the Red Sea is the hammerhead. Easily identified by the distinctive shape of its head, which may either be like a spade or a hammer, hammerheads are unusual in that they have nostrils and one eye on either ide of the "hammer."

Scientists believe that hammerheads use their heads as a kind of rudder. Hammerheads are swift and powerful. Their preferred prey are stingrays, skate fish and other sharks.

Allam says that hammerheads are less aggressive than tiger and black-tipped sharks and if one is spotted, it is best to keep still.

DISSA AND DOTTA: The mouse in the house tells us the field of 30 applicants seeking the Texas Tech athletics directorship has been narrowed to two, who returned for their second interviews yesterday and today. Tewell shoots record-breaking round

By JOHN MOSSMAN AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) - Journeyman Doug Tewell leads the PGA Championship, but an aching back and a trio of the game's greatest players were stalking him in today's second round.

Tewell, who hasn't won on the professional golf tour since 1980, erased a 25-year-old course record with a 7-under-par 64 Thursday for a two-stroke lead after the opening round over the 7,089-yard Cherry Hills Country Club layout.

Lurking just off the pace, however, were Jack Nicklaus, a five-time PGA titlist, and defending champion Lee Trevino, both at 66. Tom Watson, who needs this crown to become the fifth player in history to complete a career sweep of golf's Grand Slam events, was at 67.

Peter Jacobsen and Corey Pavin also shot 66s, and Hubert Green and Danny Edwards joined Watson at 67 as Cherry Hills, playing short because of its mile-high elevation, yielded 31 sub-par rounds. That was already more sub-par rounds than were shot in the entire U.S. Open here in 1978.

Temperatures in the 90s and little wind contributed to what

Watson called "ideal scoring conditions.' Morris Hatalsky, who eagled the difficult 491-yard, par-4 18th hole, was at 68, while 1983 PGA winner Hal Sutton, Masters champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany, Calvin Peete, Tom Kite and Gil Morgan were in a group at 69.

Pre-tournament favorite Seve Ballesteros of Spain opened with a 2-over 73. Arnold Palmer, whose only U.S. Open title came on this course in 1960, had 75, and the tour's leading money-winner, Curtis Strange, slipped to a 77.

Tewell's 64 broke the competitive course record of 65 set by Palmer in the final round of the 1960 Open. But Tewell, 35, from Edmond, Okla., likely spent a sleepless night pondering the giants who were chasing him.

"It was probably the best round I've had all year from the standpoint of hitting the ball," said Nicklaus. "It was certainly a step in the right direction.

FREE BOWLING - Chris Sumpter is one of many youngsters who enjoyed free bowling twice a week this summer at Harvester Lanes. Manger Van Vandenbrook said he let youngsters bowl free to "create an interest" in youth bowling. "It's hard to get the kids out here," Vandenbrook said. "I thought this might be one way to do it." Youngsters bowled over 1,400 lines last week.

Yankees beat Indians Henderson AWOL, but

By BARRY WILNER AP Sports Writer

Without their spating, the New York Yankees had no trouble getting started, while the Toronto Blue Jays kept their engine purring right along Both teams swept Thursday twi-night doubleheaders as baseball resumed following the two-day players' strike. The Yankees, despite the absence of leadoff man and center fielder Rickey Henderson, who was absent without leave, pounded Cleveland 8-1, then edged the Indians 7-6.

In doing so, they stayed nines game behind the Blue Jays, who upped their recent record to 15-2 with 7-2 and 7-4 decisions over the Baltimore Orioles.

Also sweeping a pair were the Kansas City Royals, who downed Detroit 10-3 and 6-4 to move within 3½ games of first-place California in the American League West, and the Milwaukee Brewers, who took Texas 7-4 and 3-1.

Boston and Chicago split a twinbill, with the Red Sox winning 6-1 after a 7-6 defeat, and Oakland routed Seattle 11-2. Even with Henderson AWOL, the Toronto continued its charge atop the East as Jesse Barfield went 6-for-6, including four runs scored and two stolen bases, and Tony Fernandez contributed four hits and five RBIs.

The visiting Orioles fell to just one game over .500, 141/2 games behind. Royals 10-6, Tigers 3-4

Detroit hadn't known that losing feeling in Royals Stadium for almost two years. Now, they've had a double dose.

Bret Saberhagen's nine strikeouts highlighted the first game, in which he tossed a seven-hitter. The Royals reached Tigers starter Frank Tanana for three runs in the third inning and got six in the sixth as Tanana lost to KC for the 20th time in his major-league career

Pampa resident Charles Ely has embarked upon a trophy-finding campaign.

Ely is trying to locate the district football championship trophy the Harvesters won in 1950. That was the year Pampa first went unbeaten in regular-season play with a 10-0 record. The Harvesters were District 1-AA's defending champions and clobbered Borger, 71-6, to clinch the title in the last game of the season. The Harvesters were one of four unbeaten and untied teams in the state going into the game with Borger.

Wichita Falls ended Pampa's season with a 44-7 win in bi-district play. Jimmy Hayes scored Pampa's only TD on a 7-yard run. The '50 Harvesters were coached by Tom Tipps. 'I have been unable to locate the championship trophy," said Ely, who played on that unbeaten team. "I have looked in the high school trophy case several times, but did not see the trophy.'

I can understand Ely's interest in finding this trophy. It would be like a collector's item to the '50 graduating class. Just how many times has a Harvester football team gone through the season unbeaten?

Ely received a district championship patch after the '50 season ended, but he would still like to know the whereabouts of the team trophy.

"I could be mistaken, but I don't remember ever seeing that trophy in the trophy case.

Ely can be contacted at 669-7586 if you have any information.

Former Pampan Randy Matson, who won a gold medal in the shot put at the Olympic Games in Mexico City, found himself once again in the limelight recently. Matson recently received a special award during groundbreaking ceremonies for the Clayton Williams Center at Texas A & M. Maston has served as executive director of the Association of Former Students since 1980 and has been connected with the Association's fund caising drives for the past 12 years.

Matson was credited with helping increase the annual fund from $600,000 to over $3 million this year. The unsuspecting Matson was presented with a resolution bearing the names of more than 90 board members and staff who contributed $50,000 so that one of the pillars around the Williams Center will bear Matson's name.

Matson said this honor was even better than winning the gold medal.

The Williams Center will be used as a meeting place for the students, faculty and alumni.

A story and color photos on the event were featured in the August issue of The Texas Aggie magazine.

Tri-State golf followers will remember the name of David 'Spec'' Goldman of Dallas, who was a dominant figure in the popular seniors tournament.

Goldman, now 76, is recognized as the finest amateur golfer ever to come out of the state of Texas. Goldman, who was inducted into the Texas Sports Hall of Fame in 1978, had won 165 amateur tournaments at the time of his induction. Twice, he was a finalist in the U.S. Seniors Championship.

Three of the trophies Goldman captured came in the Tri-State tourney, winning championships in 1966, '67 and '70, the first year it was played at the Pampa Country Club. He was medalist four years

Flashback: August 1946. The Pampa Oilers banged out 41 hits in a doubleheader victory over the Clovis Pioneers, 12-6 and 11-4. First baseman Joe Fortin and shortstop Earl Harriman led the Oilers' hitting atttack in the opener with four hits each. Harriman also had three hits in the second game as did third baseman Tony Range. Range knocked in two runs with a homer. Lefthander Bill Garland won his 23rd game of the season against seven setbacks the second game.

Soccer signup slated

Registration for the Pampa Soccer Association's fall season is set for Aug. 10 and Aug. 17 at the Pampa Mall. Registration times are from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. both

The regular season begins Sept. 14.

The Association voted to chance affiliations from the American Youth Soccer Organization to the North Texas State Soccer Association during its last general meeting.

"This will not change PSA, but it will give it more support in the way of coaches and referee clinics," a Pampa soccer official said. "Also soccer teams will have the opportunity to attend a variety of state tournaments.

Last May, just after joining the North Texas Association, two of three Pampa teams placed in a tournament at Waco. Pampa played teams from Arlington and Fort Worth, among others.

In addition to the registration, a clinic for both referees and coaches is set for Aug. 24-25 and Sept. 6-7. Interested persons may sign up for these clinics on the registration dates or call Bob White at.665-6070 on the coaches clinic or Miles Cook at 665-3036 or 665-6696 on the referees clinic.

More improvements are being made at the Sawatsky Soccer Complex, the official noted. A summer watering and fertilizing program has improved the grass and the new concession stand will be ready for the uncoming season. The field size for the 4-5 year-old division has been reduced to add more excitement for the beginning "The Association is looking forward to another great year of soccer for Pampa youth," the official said. We're especially proud of its "everyone plays" rule.

Chiles stressed that he had not talked to any members of the Player Relations Committee, which negotiated the settlement, and that most of his information on the strike and the settlement came from newspapers.
