'Catastrophic' storm could hit East coast

MIAMI (AP) — Gloria, one of the strongest and most dangerous Atlantic hurricanes ever, was expected to turn its eye from the Bahamas and head north toward the Eastern Seaboard within the next two days, forecasters said today.

The 300-mile-wide hurricane, with fluctuating 150 mph winds and an 8- to 10-mile-wide eye, was classified today as a "borderline" Category 5 storm on a scale that rate hurricane strength from 1 to 5, said Hal Gerrish, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables. A Category 5 hurricane is capable of "catastrophic" damage.

At 9 a.m. EDT, Gloria was centered near latitude 26.2 north, longitude 72.2 west about 650 miles south-southeast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., forecaster Miles Lawrence said in an advisory.

Gloria was moving northwest at 15 mph toward the central Bahamas, where a hurricane warning remained in effect.

But forecasters expected the hurricane to veer north and pick up speed, reducing the risk to the Bahamas but threatening the East Coast from the Carolinas north to New England.

"We have a dangerous hurricane and there's a possibility that it will threaten the Eastern Seaboard in the next couple of days," Gerrish said.

A hurricane watch may be posted over parts of the mid-Atlantic coast later today, Lawrence said.

"There's only been one hurricane stronger in the Atlantic and none stronger over the open Atlantic" since record-keeping began, "and that went through the Florida Keys in 1935," Gerrish said.

How hurricanes get their rating

MIAMI (AP) — On a scale of one to five, forecasters have classified Gloria a "borderline" Category 5 hurricane, the only one recorded over the open Atlantic Ocean and one of the five most powerful storms in history.

Hurricanes are ranked according to what is known as the Saffir-Simpson scale of strength:

Category 1 — Hurricane has central pressure of 28.94 inches or less and winds of 74 to 95 mph, is accompanied by a 4-5 foot storm surge and causes minimal damage.

Category 2 — Pressure 28.50 to 28.91 inches, winds from 96 to 110 mph, storm surge 6-8 feet, damage moderate.

Category 3 — Pressure 27.91 to 28.47 inches, winds from 111 to 130 mph, storm surge 9-12 feet, damage extensive.

Category 4 — Pressure 27.17 to 27.88 inches, winds from 131 to 155 mph, storm surge 13-18 feet, damage extreme.

Category 5 — Pressure less than 27.17 inches, winds greater than 155 mph, storm surge higher than 18 feet, damage catastrophic. Only two other storms this century have been ranked Category 5.

Budget, garbage fee hike approved

By LARRY HOLLIS

Despite protests by a former Pampa mayor, the city commission adopted the 1985-1986 operating budget and tax rate and approved higher sanitation collection rates during its regular meeting Tuesday evening.

Former mayor E. C. Sidwell asked the commissioners Tuesday night if they were going to adopt the budget without having any public hearings on the matter. But Mayor Sherman Cowan explained the hearings had already been held.

Sidwell then asked if he could be allowed to make a few comments, and the mayor granted him permission.

Sidwell tried to dispute the figures presented by City Manager Bob Hart. He said Hart had said the budget was approximately $10 million, but he claimed the budget copy he had looked at indicated revenue and expenditures were listed at more than $11 million.

Hart explained the new accounting procedures include "double counting" for some funds, including the internal services fund, with the actual figures being just under $10 million. Funds transferred between departments, for example, would be listed twice for more accurate accounting, he said.

Commissioner Bob Curry said the staff and commission had put in many hours to develop the new accounting system for city funds. He said the new budget figures permitted better listing of items in more detail than ever before, with internal figures for separate departments more accurately depicting actual expenditures for each department.

Hart said the new system "shows everything on both sides" in accord with acceptable accounting

House finance corporation formed

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa city commissioners organized the Pampa Housing Finance Corporation in a special meeting Tuesday night following the regular commission meeting.

The corporation is being formed to issue bonds for multi-family housing projects meeting state and federal guidelines for low and moderate income residents.

Though initially organized to issue tax exempt bonds for the rehabilitation of the former Schneider Hotel, the corporation will be able to approve bonds for similar projects in the future.

The commission approved the application and articles of incorporation for submission to the Secretary of State in a special meeting last week. Named as incorporators were Mayor Sherman Cowan, Finance Director Frank Smith and Community Services Director Nathan Hopson.

Tuesday night, the commission adopted the by-laws for the corporation and established income guidelines for project developments.

City Attorney Don Lane said the by-laws would set the maximum adjusted gross income for persons dwelling in one unit of a development seeking the tax exempt bonds, which are similar to industrial development bonds.

The guidelines would concern the income for people living in one unit, whether one, two or three persons occupy the unit, Lane explained. He said the state had provided no figures establishing the low to moderate income range; the corporation would have to set its standards, he said.

The commission, serving as the initial board of directors for the corporation, set the adjusted gross income standard at $30,000 per unit.

Elected as officers for the non-profit corporation were Mayor Cowan, president; procedures recommended in the past by auditors. For example, the city's data processing funds are now accounted separately for each department to show more accurately how the data processing funds are expended, he explained.

Sidwell questioned the increase showed for the city manager's department, asking Hart how much his salary had increased. Hart explained several city personnel are now included in his department's figures, such as the city secretary and the coordinator to be selected for the Main Street program.

"My salary has not gone up at all," Hart said.

Sidwell claimed he has "watched the city budget closely" since 1961. He said the budget has increased from $1.2 million in 1961 to nearly $10 million in the new budget.

"How long can the citizens of Pampa stand such increases?" he asked, claiming the budget had regularly increased about $300,000 each year.

Mayor Cowan said gas and electric utility costs have also increased yearly, with the city's costs being affected by the additional expenses there.

Curry said the budget increases have not kept up with inflation over the years, with attempts made to keep the budget costs under control.

Cowan said, "Pampa's getting good service for the money being spent," with even better efforts being made now by staff and department heads to be more efficient in using city funds and yet improving the services for citizens.

After adopting the budget ordinance on second and final reading, the commission also approved the new property tax rate at 64 cents per $100 valuation, a penny under last year's rate of 65 cents.

Sidwell had claimed the city was increasing its taxes, despite the one-cent decrease.

The commission also approved on final reading new sanitation collection rates of $8.50 per month for residential users and $13 per month for each container used by commercial customers.

Under other old business items, the commission approved on second and final reading an ordinance establishing zoning changes for the Sanders Park North Addition development, located east of Duncan and Perryton Parkway and north of existing developments.

The ordinance sets Commercial District for Block 17, bounded by Perryton Parkway, 32nd Ave., Aspen and 31st Ave., and Retail for Block 16, bounded by Duncan and Perryton Parkway, 31st Ave., Aspen and 30th Ave. Block 15, bounded by Duncan, 30th Ave., Aspen and 29th Ave., will remain Agriculture Blocks in the rest of the development will be either Single Family 1 or SF 2.

In other matters, the commission declared as surplus property five bicycles, two typewriters and a

Miami agrees to pay for sealcoating work

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI — City officials have agreed to pay a Pampa contractor for summer sealcoating work on condition that it be brought up to standards demanded by the council.

But it won't be until next spring that any repairs are done.

At a special meeting Thursday, the city council agreed to pay Lewis Construction of Pampa $11,013 for eight blocks of sealcoating work it did for the city in August. For the past two months, council members chose to withhold payment because of what some members felt was faulty work.

Pampa engineer Gene Barber and representatives of the contractors met with the council, surveyed the sealcoated streets and agreed to do the repair work at no extra charge.

However, with the weather getting cooler, no work is expected until hot weather returns in the spring because sealcoating involves the use of hot tar.

At their regular meeting Sept. 10, council members complained that they could "see the layers" of the seal coating and that the streets are in worse shape than those sealcoated in 1979.

In a letter to the council, Barber admitted the work was "not up to standards."

Council members also claimed that sealcoaters damaged public property, including a retaining wall at the local swimming pool. The contractors have fixed the retaining wall.

"They agreed to take care of the problem," Miami mayor Tom Stribling said, attributing part of the disagreement to a "misunderstanding on the council's part."

"We don't claim to be engineers," he added. "The contractors are professionals in their field."

The sealcoating work is funded through the city's Revenue Sharing budget. Council members amended the RS budget to allow for the $11,013 for the contractors and a remaining $508 for the city dumpground. The $1,101 engineering fees will be paid through the general fund.

The sealcoating work is guaranteed through next summer.

Unprepared students problem for colleges

By SARALEE TIEDE
and LEE JONES
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

AUSTIN — There's no money-back guarantee on a college education. A bachelor's degree doesn't come with a warranty.

But increasingly Texas are concerned that some of the many students who come to college unprepared are graduating without mastering even elementary skills.

"We, with our taxes, are supporting another generation of college illiterates," said Tony Bonilla, a Corpus Christi attorney who served both on the college coordinating board and the Select Committee on Public Education.

A Southern Regional Education Board study of five southern states showed that 40 percent of college freshmen need remedial work.

"I think it's every bit that bad if not worse in Texas," said State Commissioner of Higher Education Kenneth Ashworth, who served on the board's Commission for Educational Quality.

Higher education in Texas

2nd of a 5-part series

"Too many students are playing their way through high school. That's why we have to pay $37 million for remedial education every biennium."

"Then, too many manage to get through their specialized areas in college without adequate testing or an adequate demonstration of basic skills. That's a condemnation of what's going on in college."

Despite rocketing costs and the best intentions, Texas' public university system in many cases has failed to remedy the shortcomings of a public school system branded mediocre by all national standards. Some statistical evidence:

Despite $18 million a year in taxpayer dollars spent on remedial education in universities, one-third of sophomore university students flunked a test of 10th-grade-level reading, writing and arithmetic skills, a test necessary to enter teacher education. Last year, it was nearly one-half.

Students from four-year universities didn't score as well on the state nursing examination as those from junior colleges and hospital diploma programs.

On the state engineering exam, three state universities — University of Texas at El Paso, Texas A&I and Prairie View A&M — had failure rates above 40 percent.

Freshmen flunk-out rates run as high as 50 percent. At Lamar University, for example, only 30 percent of freshmen who enter get a degree. Some 40 percent of academic students must take at least one remedial course.

"Students come from high schools sadly lacking in basic skills," said Bob Hardesty, president of Southwest Texas State University.

"We had students who couldn't write a simple declarative sentence, who couldn't do basic math problems and we were graduating them. It wasn't intentional. Our system just wasn't sophisticated enough to catch them in time.

"We all seemed to be taking the attitude that if the public schools couldn't teach the basic skills to their students, there was nothing that we could do about it once those students reached college," he added. "It was a vicious cycle."

Texas is trying to break out of the cycle, first with sweeping changes in public schools; next, with a hard look at higher education.

Junior colleges should offer remedial courses, Ashworth said, but it is "highly questionable" if senior universities should be in the remediation business.

"But we can't just tell all of those students they have to go to junior college. That would sentence a whole generation and it's not their fault," he said.

The Southern Regional Education Board, after determining that the average community college freshman reads at the eighth grade level, chided institutions for giving college credit for work that is not college level.

Texas officials were doubtful enough about the quality of the state university product to ask a special committee to decide if universities should require a sophomore year basic skills test. Gov. Mark White has endorsed that idea.
At least seven state universities, following the lead of the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M, have raised admission standards. Others are implementing tougher course requirements, retention programs to reduce flunk-outs and mandatory testing.
And universities are admitting unpleasant truths about the quality of their product.
A University of Houston study conducted by consultants Richard F. Dini & Associates determined that the university was held in such low esteem in Houston that a multimillion-dollar money drive should be delayed because the university lacks the respect to make that effort a success.
"Many corporate executives do not view the University of Houston as a primary resource for new, outstanding talent," the report said. "In the boardroom, the University of Houston's credentials are not well regarded."
At East Texas State University, students who can't write a literate junior-level essay can't graduate. Only 48 percent of East Texas State University students passed the test the first time they took it in 1984. This year the scores improved, up to 69.4 percent.
At Southwest Texas State, where Hardesty said "faculty was spending too much time with students who ought not be in college," higher entrance requirements made a dramatic improvement.

In 1983, 1,100 entering freshmen were in the bottom half of their high school graduating class. In 1984, only 280 were in that category.
Hardesty, who also heads the coordinating board committee on basic skills tests, created a college of general studies to ensure that all students would get basic liberal arts courses. He strengthened the advising system to catch academic problems. He initiated an exit exam essential for graduation.
Texas' populist tradition made open admissions standard policy at most state universities. Even now, seven state universities make no demands on entering freshmen other than showing up with enough money to pay tuition and fees.
The average Scholastic Aptitude Test score of freshmen entering state universities in 1983, the last year for which figures are available, was 848 out of a possible 1600.
"I doubt that any faculty member deliberately pushed students along," said Jack Humphries, president of Sul Ross State. "But the feeling was, 'We've got them, we've got to graduate them.' The colleges were caught up in the same democratic, egalitarian attitude."
"We were not demanding in our standards. We tended to adjust curriculum so that students could succeed."
The reputation of Texas universities varies widely.
"I think we have two institutions with the potential for greatness as major international universities, and that's UT and A&M," said coordinating board chairman Larry Temple. "I don't think that has been achieved but it can be achieved with the right leadership, funding and direction."

Near-collision in Washington highlights growing concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — The near-collision of an Eastern jetliner and a private helicopter at Washington's National Airport highlights a growing concern among aviation safety experts over a rising number of hazardous incidents at busy airports.
Within hours of the incident Tuesday, investigators for the National Transportation Safety Board were making arrangements to impound tapes of conversations between the airport tower and both the jetliner and the helicopter to determine what happened.
"We're very concerned with the problems of runway incursions,"

NTSB spokesman Ira Furman said. The board last summer began a special inquiry into such incidents after receiving reports of more than a dozen cases in which pilots had to take action to avert a possible collision on an airport runway.
The Federal Aviation Administration also has acknowledged that such problems appear to be more numerous and troubling this year — a year in which the aviation industry also is going through an alarming number of airplane crashes that have claimed more than 1,500 lives worldwide.

Furman said investigators would examine both the cockpit voice recorder aboard Eastern Flight 1500 — the 5 p.m. shuttle between National and New York's LaGuardia Airport — and the tapes of radio communications between the airport tower and the Boeing 727 and a helicopter which was said to have crossed in front of the jetliner.
The plane, carrying 175 passengers and a crew of seven, came to rest on a grassy "overrun" area built only last December and 130 feet short of going into the Potomac River. No one was seriously injured, authorities said.

1980 Chevrolet 4-door sedan.
Hart reported the earlier auction of surplus property had exceeded the expectations. He said the staff had expected to raise $10,000, but instead the final total from the auction was near $20,000.

The commission deferred action on a request by City Ball Club, Inc., to install an automatic, coin-operated batting practice facility at Hobart Street Park. Hart said there's general support for the facility, but further studies are being made.

In other business, commissioners:
- approved on first reading an ordinance authorizing the installation of a stop sign at Somerville and Foster;
- approved on an emergency measure an ordinance permitting a crosswalk on Buckler St. between Mann Elementary School and St. Paul United Methodist Church for kindergarten children attending classes in the church;
- appointed Floye Christensen to the M. K. Brown Auditorium Board;

- authorized payment of $3,550.35 to Wagner and Klein for architectural services concerning renovation plans for City Hall; and
- approved accounts payable.
In Hart's report session, the commission indicated general agreement for the Pampa Chamber of Commerce to take bids during their upcoming Country Fair annual meeting for people to fly a college alumnus flag on the City Hall flag pole.
Hart said the city staff is making studies for repairs on the drainage system at the U. S. Post Office.

Commissioner Bob Curry, vice president; Commissioner David McDaniel, secretary; Commissioner Joe Reed, treasurer; and Commissioner Clyde Carruth, assistant secretary.

Lane explained the commissioners would form the initial board, but it is not a requirement of the by-laws that board members be commission members. There's the possibility the commission could decide in later years to form a separate board of directors not including commission members, he said.

The board approved a resolution authorizing the issuance of bonds to finance a project for Schneider Apartments Associates, Ltd., for the rehabilitation of the hotel into low income housing for senior citizens.
The corporation was formed by request of the project developers to facilitate the issuance of bonds for the development more quickly than could be achieved by a regional housing finance corporation board.

In last week's meeting, Ken Smith of Dallas, vice president of Schneider, Bernet and Hickman, explained the PHFC will allow the city to have more control over multi-family housing projects in the city and to review housing applications to determine their validity.

The local corporation also can insure that projects meet city guidelines, that they are needed in the city and that they are desirable projects, Smith said.

The bonds will be issued without any financial obligation or liability to the city. The bonds would be paid through the project development.

Austin lawyer heads higher education study

AUSTIN (AP) — The upcoming study of higher education in Texas could lead to the closing or merging of some state colleges, says the Austin lawyer selected by Gov. Mark White as chairman of the Select Committee on Higher Education.

White's office announced the appointment of Larry Temple and the other committee members Tuesday. The 1985 Legislature established the panel to undertake "a comprehensive examination of the critical issues facing and influencing the state's higher education system."

Temple said the panel is "not designed to be any kind of carbon copy" of a similar committee, chaired by Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot, that recommended sweeping reforms for Texas public schools.

The panel, however, will look at the controversial matter of shutting down state colleges, he said.

"I wouldn't want to foretell any end results. But the possibility of merging or closing institutions is clearly one of them. We've got 37 separate state-supported universities," Temple said.

There also are 49 junior colleges depending on the state for most of their money, he noted.

The panel will look at the schools and ask, "Do we have enough? Do we need more? Do we have too many? Do we need less?" Temple said.

Among others selected for the 19-member panel Tuesday were:

East Texas timber baron Arthur Temple Jr. of Diboll; Dallas businessman Peter O'Donnell, who reportedly made an anonymous $8 million donation to the University of Texas at Austin last year; former UT and Rice University president Norman Hackerman, and Bobby Ray Inman of Austin, chief executive of the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. (MCC) computer research consortium.

The two Temples aren't related. Also serving on the committee are the governor, lieutenant governor and House speaker.

White picked five committee members. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis each chose four. The Legislature added Senate Education Committee Chairman Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and House Higher Education Committee Chairwoman Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin.

Larry Temple was guaranteed a committee spot because he serves as chairman of the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board, which oversees state universities.

"I don't believe the reasoning behind this study is because the Legislature believes there is some radical change that needs to take place. That's not to say some substantial changes may not come out of this committee," said Larry Temple, 49, a graduate of the University of Texas and the UT law school.

State universities underwent tight budget examination this year by lawmakers strapped by a money shortage. A House committee recommended closing the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and Texas A&M's Galveston campus, but both were saved in the final budget vote.

Here is the makeup of the committee:

Larry Temple of Austin, attorney and chairman of the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board. Appointed by the legislative resolution that established the committee. Named as committee chairman by White.

Arthur Temple Jr. of Diboll, chairman of the board of Temple-Inland Inc. Appointed by White.

Reynaldo Garza of Brownville, judge of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Appointed by White.

Deborah Kastin of El Paso, owner and president of Southwest Industrial Resources, a construction firm. Appointed by White.

Earl McKinley Lewis of San Antonio, chairman of the department of urban studies at Trinity University. Appointed by White.

Inman of Austin, president and chief executive officer of Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. (MCC), a computer research consortium. Appointed by White.

George Mitchell of The Woodlands, chairman and president of Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. Appointed by Hobby.

Hackerman of Austin, former president of UT-Austin and Rice University, now chairman of the Scientific Advisory Board at the Robert A. Welch Foundation and professor emeritus of chemistry at UT-Austin. Appointed by Hobby.

O'Donnell of Dallas, investment business. Appointed by Hobby.

Wales Madden of Amarillo, attorney. Appointed by Hobby.

Glen Biggs of Eldorado, vice chairman of the board of InterFirst Bank in San Antonio. Appointed by Lewis.

William Blakemore II of Midland, president of Alpha Texas Twenty-One Corp. Appointed by Lewis.

Joe McCormick of Round Rock, executive director of the Texas Guaranteed Student Loan Corp. Appointed by Lewis.

Bill Parsley of Lubbock, attorney. Appointed by Lewis.

Carl Parker, chairman of the Senate Education Committee. Appointed by resolution.

Wilhelmina Delco, chairwoman of the House Higher Education Committee. Appointed by resolution.

Gov. Mark White. Appointed by resolution.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. Appointed by resolution.

House Speaker Gib Lewis. Appointed by resolution.

Named as ex-officio members were Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, and Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston.

Council plans cancer fight

AUSTIN (AP) — A $7 million fight against cancer in Texas has been launched by the Texas Cancer Council despite protests from some members that the program slighted the eastern part of the state.

The council was created by the 1985 Legislature after a task force appointed by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis recommended emergency action to halt the spread of this disease.

Members of the 16-member council indicated Tuesday they would have recommendations for the 1987 Legislature to expand the effort to find and treat cancer in Texas.

Dr. Donald C. Spencer, Austin private physician, and former state Sen. Don Adams, vice chairman of the council, disagreed with a Texas Department of Health plan that would not require hospitals with fewer than 100 beds to report cancer cases.

Hospitals required to make reports would get $6 for the "abstract" of each cancer case, describing in detail the circumstances.

"Most of the hospitals in East Texas are under 100 beds, as well as in South Texas," said Adams, an Austin attorney and lobbyist who formerly was a senator from Jasper.

"Region 7 (which includes most of East Texas) has the highest incidence of cancer in the state but it is not included in the payment for reports on cancer patients," Spencer said.

"It would take only about $100,000 more to get these reports from East Texas," said Dr.

Joaquin Cigarroa, Laredo physician.

Dr. Robert Bernstein, state health commissioner, said when the 1985 Legislature cut the appropriation from $11.7 million to $7 million for the next two years, the Department of Health was forced to ask for cancer reports only from hospitals with more than 100 beds in "high priority" areas for the Texas Cancer Registry.

Bernstein said his department believed these reports would represent about 90 percent of the cancer cases in Texas since they would include the Dallas-Fort Worth and the Beaumont-Port Arthur and Houston areas.

"I am convinced this cancer registry can be the most important thing we do," said Spencer. "I am very anxious we work on a very firm basis."

Poles sentenced for smuggling countrymen

PECOS, Texas (AP) — The defendants said they were trying to promote freedom when they helped Polish immigrants slip over the Mexican border, and apologized for breaking the law.

But the two found little sympathy from the judge who sentenced them Tuesday.

Miroslaw Piatowski, one of two naturalized citizens from Poland who had admitted smuggling some of their countrymen into the United States, told U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton that he was sorry.

"I will promise I won't do that ever again," Piatowski said.

"I saw you before," Mr. Piatowski, Bunton was quoted as saying by the San Angelo Standard-Times. "The jury, for some reason totally strange to me, acquitted you, and you were guilty as sin. You are back within a year doing the same thing."

Piatowski, who was acquitted in a similar case a year ago, and a co-defendant, Jan Bukovicky, pleaded guilty last month to smuggling illegal aliens. Bukovicky was arrested with a carload of Poles near the Mexico border on Texas Highway 385 in May.

Piatowski also pleaded guilty to conspiracy to smuggle illegal aliens.

"It is hard for me to realize that two individuals that our federal government has given the right to become a citizen would repay this government by breaking their laws," Bunton said.

"You know, whatever your motives might be — bringing people so they can become citizens or because you don't want them to have to live in a country where you believe their rights are being taken away from them — you both knew that you were violating our laws, and you did it anyway."

Those changing fashions

Deborah Hendrick, Cathy Spaulding and I got quite a shock recently when we heard that a local youth group had been having theme parties. That in itself is not too shocking. But when we heard that a '70s party was one of these, we were shaken. The '70s aren't that far behind us. What, we thought, could they possibly do at a '70s theme party?

At a '50s party, we know you can wear bobby socks, pony tails and poodle skirts for the girls, jeans and leather jackets and slicked back hair for the boys. But what could be a "theme" for a '70s party?

It made us think back... Let's see... Well, I just HAD to have a pair of bikini jeans with 30 inch bells (the width of the leg - not the ringing kind). I had a picture made in a pair, once I got them, and all I can remember about the picture was how my tummy rolled over the top of them. Shudder...

And did I really go to a "Chicago" concert in a pair of orange hot pants?!!!! Yes, children, they did have "Chicago" back then. And, yes, Paul McCartney was in another group before Wings.

Of course, my hair hung almost to my waist and, naturally, it was parted in the middle. I didn't wear it straight, however, I was one of the first to have it cut in a more curly "gypsy" look. Farrah Fawcett changed the style a bit and created a hairstyle that rivaled Princess Di's in popularity.

And you that now go to school wearing almost anything you want to might find it hard to comprehend what we went through to get those stringed dress codes changed. Imagine being sent home because you wore a split skirt to school or a pair of blue jeans.

Our shoes were what might be called "chunky." We wouldn't have been caught dead in a pair with a pointed toe or heel! Wedges were quite popular then, too. And the taller, the better. We short people were quite happy about that. Many of the wedges were three to four inches high.

Some of you old timers might remember the choker necklaces we wore made from leather thongs with wooden beads. How about double knit? Everything was double knit. Double knit pantsuits was a big thing. This material wore like iron! Go to any used clothing store today and you'll find 12 - year - old double knit clothes that look like new. You can't wear double knit clothes out, you can only get tired of them. I bet those things are around when archeologists excavate our ruins.

But I'm saving the best for last. Mini - skirts! The guys loved them, naturally. We girls felt the shorter the better. To be short enough for me, my skirt hems had to reach to the center of my palm when my arms were held straight at my sides. I believe the school dress code required that they be no more than four inches above the knee — that's about two inches below the rear on those with short legs.

You can stand up straight in a mini-skirt and still retain your dignity, but that's all. I think that's why pants became so popular during the '70s. It's nice to be stylish and all, but we girls didn't really want to abandon our modesty everytime we moved. Bending over in a mini-skirt was out of the question. I still feel funny bending over in a dress. Of course, at 16, I would have fought to the death for my right to wear my skirts as short as I wanted.

No, I was happy to see mini-skirts fade from the fashion scene. I'd rather wear lower hems most of the time, and leave the minis for special occasions and just-for-fun. Besides, I have seen many women with nice calves and ankles, but I have yet to see what I would call a pretty knee.

Jury convicts Vietnamese in boy's stabbing

HOUSTON (AP) — A Vietnamese man who told authorities he repeatedly stabbed a 9-year-old boy in hopes of being sent back to his native country was convicted of murder.

A jury in state District Judge Joseph Guarino's court deliberated about four hours Tuesday before finding Huy Nguong Duong, 25, guilty in the Jan. 10 slaying of Shane Smith.

Guarino scheduled punishment phase testimony for today.

Authorities said Smith was stabbed more than 60 times while waiting for a school bus outside a west Houston apartment complex. Police said Duong told investigators he stabbed the boy so he would be sent back to Vietnam or to a mental hospital.

The boy's mother, Becky Smith, said after the verdict was returned that Duong "had a purpose in mind. Fortunately, he didn't get what he wanted."

Defense attorneys contended Duong, who has been taking anti-psychotic drugs while being held in Harris County jail, was insane at the time of the killing. Duong's family members have said his mental illness was discovered when he was a teen-ager in Vietnam.

Opinion

Raising the debt ceiling no answer

It's getting to be an annual story. Congress spends money all year with nary a care and then, come October, finds the till empty. That's because the government has run smack up against what is known as the debt ceiling—a legal limitation that is supposed to keep Congress from borrowing more than it can afford.

Every year there is hand-wringing, a little gnashing of teeth, and a few moans and groans thrown in for the benefit of the folks back home. Then Congress imposes a new — higher — debt ceiling. And the government's money managers troop off to the bank to take out a few more loans.

The debt limit right now is $1.824 trillion. That means the government cannot have loans outstanding for more than $1,824,000,000,000. Sure enough, even all that won't be enough to keep the wheels of government grinding. The administration says the government will be out of money by Oct. 15 unless the debt ceiling is raised to $2.073 trillion.

Look at that figure: $2,073,000,000,000! According to John Niehenke, acting assistant treasury secretary for domestic finance, it costs the government more than $170 billion each year just to service the existing debt. That's a big chunk of the total of all the money the government collects each year in taxes. And still Congress wants to borrow more.

At this rate, it won't be long before every tax dollar collected goes just to service the debt. Almost every private citizen knows that when you're taking out loans to pay off previous loans, you're in trouble. Deep trouble. Somehow, when government does the borrowing, Congress seems to forget that.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, joked the other day that he would consider leaving the debt limit where it is and "have the attorney general rule that (the president) can't spend any money that he doesn't have and Congress could go home.

But then he spoiled it all by saying that idea wasn't "realistic." Congressional realism, Symms says, is making a little trim here and a little trim there and asking for — get this — a smaller increase. That's called delaying the inevitable. It may work for the short run, but in the end, the inevitable catches up. Ask any private citizen who has run his credit cards to the limit.

Symms was on the right track. Whether you blame the president for creating the costly programs the president administers, it's past time to put a halt to incessant borrowing beyond any imaginable means.

Tell the president to stop spending money he doesn't have, shut down Congress? Why not? By the time the current debt is paid back, no one will be left who remembers what it was like way back in the fall of 1985.

Costly farm bill coming

Even as organizers used the "Farm-Aid Concert" to boost the radical-left agenda of Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa), Capitol Hill is quietly bracing itself for what could be an $6- to $8-billion increase in its already approved fiscal year 1986 farm subsidy outlay.

Record bumper crops of corn and soybeans are now threatening to boost FY86 taxpayer spending on farm subsidies by as much as 25 percent above their current FY85 $16.8-billion level.

The August 3 congressional budget compromise approved farm subsidies of less than $12 billion a year — but huge harvests, coupled with the soaring 75 percent "participation rates" of farmers in subsidy programs, have shredded that cosmetic budget and are threatening to cost taxpayers as much as $20 to $21-billion in FY1986, before any policies can be changed.

Indeed, Agriculture Secretary John Block tacitly admitted as much September 10 on the "Today Show" when he said that "the next three years of subsidies would equal the last three." The next day, the Agriculture Department announced that the 1985 corn harvest will hit 8.5-billion bushels — almost 300-million more than the 1982 record year, and up more than 11 percent from last year, with a similar jump in soybeans. This combined with a 29 percent increase in corn-producer participation rates in the subsidy program, from 55 to 71 percent, could boost the cost of corn subsidies alone to $4.3 billion, $800 million above the administration's mid-year forecast.

While the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) is not yet "owning up" to the huge deficit-busting potential of 1985's bumper crop, most outside experts are pointing to FY83's $19-billion pricetag (not counting outlays for the Payment-in-kind program) and 1982 crop year was 5 percent SMALLER, with 30 percent lower farmer participation rates.

"I wouldn't be at all surprised by a $21-billion outlay for FY1986," said Dr. D. Gale Johnson, one of the nation's foremost agriculture experts, at the University of Chicago. "While the increased participating rates may not have a large effect on crop purchases by the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC), they will tremendously increase deficiency payments to farmers."

"Deficiency payments" are the difference between the farmer's loan rate from the CCC — the price of his crops with the CCC will cover with interest-free credit — and the so-called "target price" for the particular commodity. This year, for example, the "target price" for corn is $3.02 a bushel, and the loan rate is $2.55, even though the average cash price has been less than $2.40, and the average futures contract for fall and winter delivery is now less than $2.20.

If a farmer sells the corn ABOVE the loan rate of $2.55, he still gets paid for full 47-cents-per-bushel deficiency payment on every bushel he produces — even if, as most corn farmers do, he feeds 40-50 percent of his crop to his own livestock.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary for Economic Affairs Robert Thompson admitted to, "This is the first time that corn farmers have ever signed up so heavily for the support program — and deficiency payments on that program could easily hit $2.8 billion." That's ten TIMES the 1983 level of $289 million.

Altogether, crop deficiency payments in 1986 could hit $5.4 billion for less than 600,000 feed and food grain farmers, double the record — not to mention the costs that will be incurred by the CCC in handling the huge surplus crop it will "own" as a result of farmer forfeitures, and the soaring costs of storing that crop: almost 50 cents a bushel per year.

"I would expect to see the CCC buying a lot of corn, wheat, and soybeans this year," said Dr. Bruce Gardner, agricultural economist at the University of Maryland. Dr. Johnson echoed that assessment. "Especially if the Russians were to have a good harvest this year. Last year they bought 50-million tons of wheat — if that were to fall to 30 million or less, and it's possible — we could see substantially higher levels of crop forfeit."

What this kind of huge subsidy program, why are so many farmers in trouble? The answer is: It is not lack of government aid or current cash flow, but the collapse in land values caused, in part, by government policies that have encouraged: 1) heavy land speculation and subsidized borrowing by farmers; and 2) subsidy-inspired massive increases in product output. These have further depressed prices in an already deflationary world agricultural commodity market that price supports already have priced us out of.

"It's become the biggest income-support (welfare) program in our history," Dr. Johnson admitted, "and its apparently making many farmers poorer than ever. The administration was right in trying to move farmers back to the market — but Congress said no."

Instead, Congress is now about to legislate an infinitely more costly and disastrous way of tinkering with the farm economy.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 25, the 268th day of 1985. There are 97 days left in the year. Day.

This is Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement and the most sacred Hebrew holy day. Yom Kippur is on the 10th day of Tishri, the seventh month of the Hebrew calendar.

Today's highlight in history: On Sept. 25, 1789, the first United States Congress — meeting in New York — adopted 12 amendments to the Constitution and sent them to the states for ratification. Ten of the amendments became known as the Bill of Rights.

On this date: Ten years ago: President Gerald Ford and congressional leaders agreed on restoration of oil price controls, which had expired Sept. 1, and their extension through mid-November.

Today's birthdays: New York Yankee broadcaster Phil Rizzuto is 67. ABC News correspondent Barbara Walters is 54. Dancer-actress Juliet Prowse is 48. Actor Robert Walden is 42.

Safer planes on the way

When the British had to go to war with Argentina over the near-worthless Falkland Islands it appeared a tragic waste of men and money.

But something happened during that war which will open our skyways to a new concept in air travel.

British helicopter gunships — cumbersome, sluggish in flight — were no match for Argentine interceptor planes. That left the British fleet — so far from home — highly vulnerable.

So they sent for the Harrier — and the Harrier went to war, in a role for which it was never intended.

Harrier crews had no experience in carrier-based takeoff and landing.

But they got it during the Falklands war — and proved with certainty that there is such a plane in your future.

The next generation flying machine will take off and land straight up and straight down.

I first witnessed a vertical takeoff in Beaufort, S.C., in May of 1974.

Having flown since I was 14, I recognized the urgent need for a plane that could take off and land straight up and straight down. But the swivel-wing British Harrier did not establish a very good safety record.

In theory it was great; in operation it was unreliable.

So the world continued to move over and make room for mile-long runways and noisy, hazardous approaches.

The British continued to use their jump-jet because it allowed ground support for troops otherwise hidden from any enemy.

The Spanish adopted the Harrier.

But our own Marine Corps flew few because of range, payload and safety problems.

Meanwhile, jet engines were becoming more efficient and more reliable.

And then came the Falklands, dramatically to demonstrate the usefulness of the jump-jet.

So now... NASA asked four American aircraft manufacturers to get busy designing a single-engine jump-jet as efficient as today's fighter planes. McDonnell Douglas, General Dynamics, Rockwell and Vought are racing one another to improve the concept.

Scale models are being wind-tunnel tested right now.

Preliminary results are "very encouraging."

We are collaborating with the British to accelerate research.

Our Air Force will be flying highly efficient jump-jets within 10 years and you're next.

The civilian application — the advantages in airport location and passenger convenience are enough. But imagine the safety factor in a plane that can land anywhere!

Two sane voices on foreign trade

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) — Restoring a measure of parity to this country's relations with its trading partners is an extraordinarily complex problem that deserves more serious treatment than it has been receiving on Capitol Hill.

Congressional debate has been almost totally devoid of rational consideration. Instead, the public is being regaled with a protectionist clamor on behalf of various states' and regions' parochial interests.

At the same time, the Democrats are engaged in a disgraceful attempt to manipulate the issue to gain political advantage over the Republicans in next year's elections.

The existence of a serious problem is documented by the lopsided balance-of-payments statistics: The value of this country's imports exceeded the value of its exports by $123.3 billion last year.

If the current trend continues, that record-setting figure will be exceeded this year. In the first half of 1985, the trade deficit totaled $62.1 billion.

Marketers of products ranging from costume jewelry to tuna fish are demanding import tariffs, quotas, surcharges and other quick-fix protectionist legislation — all of which fail to deal with the fundamental causes of the trade imbalance.

Emotional complaints are heard about imports of autos, consumer electronics and semiconductors from Japan; shoes from Taiwan, South Korea and Brazil; timber and hogs from Canada; wine from France and Italy; blouses from Indonesia, and shirts from the People's Republic of China.

Among the pitifully few politicians resisting the hysteria of the moment are a Republican, President Reagan, and a Democrat, Arizona Gov. Bruce E. Babbitt.

At his mid-September news conference, Reagan used exceptionally strong language to warn that "a mindless stampede toward protectionism will be a one-way trip to economic disaster."

The president noted that "for almost two years now, I have been begging our allies and trading partners" in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade "to join with us in another round of trade talks" designed to produce a long-term solution to import-export problems.

One of the few Democrats who views the current crisis as more than an opportunity to take a cheap shot at the Republicans, Babbitt also proposes working within the GATT framework — but he believes radical reform is necessary.

"It is time to admit the obsolescence of GATT and make a comprehensive new beginning," says the governor. "Before it is too late, the president should light a fire under the world trading community by requesting Congress to set a statutory deadline" for a drastic overhaul of GATT.

As part of that process, Babbitt adds, this country should serve notice that it "will withdraw from GATT unless there is by that time a comprehensive new agreement reflecting the economic realities of the 1980s."

Japan, he notes, is a special case because of its industrial targeting, internal subsidies, cultural antipathy toward imports and other subtle yet powerful protectionist barriers.

Indeed, Japan's closed markets have led to a situation where it routinely produces export surpluses with every worldwide trading partner except Canada, Australia and Switzerland.

This country's trade deficit with Japan amounted to $36.8 billion last year (almost 30 percent of the 1984 total) and could grow to $45 billion or more this year.

Reagan, suggests Babbitt, ought to press for bilateral trade negotiations with Japan, then seek adoption of a formula similar to that proposed by the semiconductor and telecommunications industries.

It would limit Japanese access to U.S. markets to this country's share of Japanese markets, thus giving Japan an incentive to promote mutually beneficial reciprocal trade.

Officials: aid will take time

AUSTIN (AP) — Setting a $15.5 million fund-raising goal, leaders of the task force coordinating the state's Mexican earthquake relief efforts say their work likely will take a long time.

"The response is strong right now. Part of our task is going to be to sustain the interest, that good will ... after it is no longer on the front page. The devastation that has occurred will take a long time to rebuild," said Bob Krueger, task force co-chairman.

Texas Response — Citizens for Mexican Relief, held its first meeting Tuesday and established a $1 per Texan goal. That would raise some $15.5 million, said Krueger, former U.S. ambassador-at-large to Mexico.

"A dollar a Texan. It's not that much. It's a possible goal," Krueger said.

More than $1 million already has been donated, said Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio, the task force's other co-chairman.

"This isn't a government effort. This is a neighborly effort, a people-to-people effort, a citizens' effort on the part of a state that shares a large border ... with Mexico," Cisneros said.

Krueger said cash is a big need of the Mexican government in the wake of the two deadly quakes that killed an estimated 3,000 people. Several thousand more are missing.

The relief task force has established a bank account in Austin to receive contributions.

Krueger and Cisneros said a system has been established to transfer the money daily to a Mexico City bank, where it will be immediately available for use by Mexican officials.

"There is not going to be anything taken off along the way. A dollar given will be a dollar received," Krueger said.

He also said controls are in place to guarantee the money goes for assistance. "The people of Texas can feel confident that if they give that money will be received and will be put to very good use," he said.

The two said Texas companies and individuals already have pitched in with medicine, other medical supplies, construction equipment and cash.

Continental Airlines has made arrangements for relief flights from Houston to Mexico City and for flights of goods from Texas cities into Houston, said task force member Ben Reyes, a Houston city councilman.

Cisneros said four relief flights in a donated Boeing 707 jetliner were to have been made from San Antonio to Mexico City by Tuesday night, and truck convoys are being organized from the Rio Grande Valley.

"It's been a strong statement of support from Texans," said Krueger, who with Cisneros visited Mexico City over the weekend.

"They have lost lives, cruelly. They have lost buildings unmercifully. They have lost hospitals, major sources of medical care," he said.

Cisneros said the task force, working out of Gov. Mark White's office, is in daily contact with the U.S. State Department and Mexican officials to make certain the right kinds of aid are being sent.

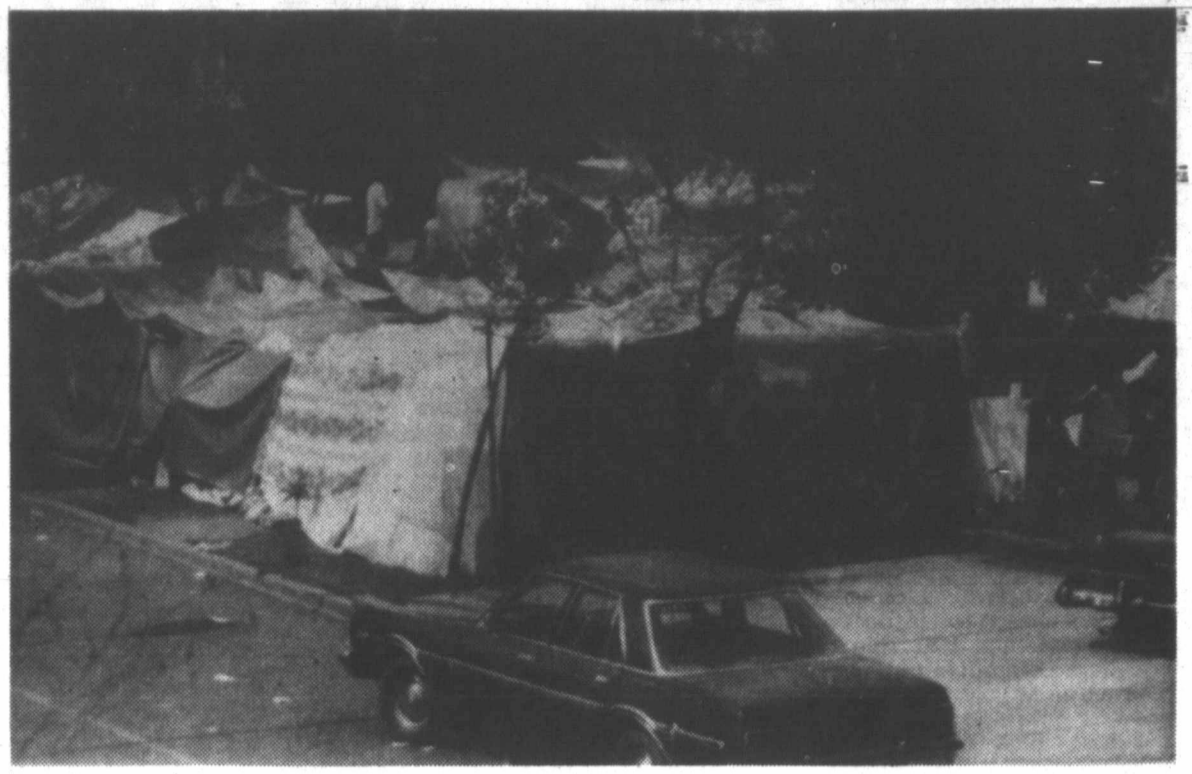

Cisneros, who Reagan administration officials tried to discourage from going to Mexico City, said those problems have been worked out.

"All the institutional, bureaucratic questions can be worked out and they have been," he said. "I don't think there's any conflict at all."

Tom Adams, a White aide who is directing the operation, said he is constantly checking with the U.S. Agency for International Development to learn the latest needs of the Mexican government.

In another effort, the Baptist General Convention of Texas took its 18-wheel tractor-trailer equipped with a field kitchen over the border en route to Mexico City Tuesday, said Orville Scott, news information director for the convention.

The 15-person crew, including cooks who will be able to serve 8,000 to 10,000 meals a day, was under a military escort.

American official: Mexico's late aid request may have cost lives

MEXICO CITY (AP) — More lives could have been saved last week following Mexico's twin earthquakes if Mexican leaders had not waited two days before requesting relief assistance, a U.S. government official has told the Dallas Morning News.

In a copyright story in today's edition, The Dallas Morning News quoted the official, who asked not to be identified, as saying, "We were ready to go immediately. We could have saved more people."

The U.S. official said the delay in seeking aid was caused by "national pride, that it does not need to rely on foreign help to get things done."

"They did not admit to themselves the damage was as great as it was," the official said.

The U.S. official said Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda contacted the U.S. Embassy after the quake Thursday and said "they had extensive damage and would get back to us."

The official Mexican request was not made until Saturday, after the second earthquake, and even then the first U.S. planeload of supplies was brought in that evening "pretty much on our own," the official said.

Sepulveda said Friday that Mexico had not by that date solicited aid, "but neither can we refuse to accept it."

On Thursday, Mexican President Miguel del la Madrid said the country "had the resources" to respond to the emergency. By the next day, however, he said, "We don't have the elements to deal with this as quickly as we would like."

Victoria Guzman, a spokesman for the Mexican government, told the News Tuesday that the country acted "as quickly as possible."

France names new secret service chief

PARIS (AP) — The government named the army chief of staff to head France's secret service after a scandal over the sinking of a Greenpeace vessel cost the former intelligence chief his job, a government spokeswoman said today.

Spokeswoman Georgina Dufoix said Gen. Rene Imbot, the new head of the General Directorate for External Security, would "reestablish order", reorganize the body and report on its role in the mining of the Rainbow Warrior in Auckland harbor on July 10.

She said Socialist President Francois Mitterrand stressed to a Cabinet meeting "the great toughness of character" of Imbot, 60, a 20-year veteran of the French Foreign Legion.

Adm. Pierre Lacoste, fired last week as intelligence chief for refusing to answer official questions on the sinking of the ship by French agents, was retired from active service, she said.

Premier Laurent Fabius has admitted that the bombing of the Rainbow Warrior, which killed a photographer, was carried out by two French agents.

The newspaper Le Monde says former Defense Minister Charles Hernu may have ordered the vessel to be "neutralized" and that the agents possibly interpreted that as permission to use violence. Hernu resigned last week during the uproar over the Greenpeace affair.

Gen. Maurice Schmitt will become chief of staff, a post Imbot has held since 1983.

In other developments, a lawyer for Police Capt. Paul Barril, sought in connection with leaks to the press over the Greenpeace affair, said today he was "at the disposal of the judicial authorities."

Lawyer Francis Szpiner did not say say disclose Barril's whereabouts. He said the allegations against Barril, a controversial figure who was fired from his post as deputy commander of a special anti-terrorist squad, amounted to "a miserable manoeuvre by political authorities mired in lies."

Two French agents and a warrant officer of the army combat frogmen's school in Corsica were arrested Tuesday for allegedly leaking details about the Greenpeace scandal to the press.

In a related development, port officials in Auckland, New Zealand, said said a temporary patch had been welded over the blasted hull of the Rainbow Warrior, but that the ship was no longer seaworthy and would be towed to a berth to be assessed by scrap metal merchants.

Prime Minister David Lange of New Zealand has demanded France apologize.

President says search for survivors will be slow

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Rescuers saved two small babies trapped for more than five days in a hospital ruined by two major earthquakes, and President Miguel de la Madrid pledged that rescue efforts would go slowly to protect others who still may be alive.

Mayor Ramon Aguirre's office said late Tuesday that the death toll had reached 3,500 from the quakes last Thursday and Friday. The federal Health Department reported 11,000 injuries.

The mayor's office reported 1,700 earthquake victims hospitalized — 1,100 more than the Mexican government listed a day earlier.

Relief workers pulled the two crying babies from metal cribs in a smashed hospital Tuesday. One was a boy born the day before the quake, and the other was a 2-month-old girl, said the Red Cross workers who found them said.

Miguel Gonzalez Juarez, one of the rescuers, said the babies, whose faces were covered by stones and dirt, were in "terrific" shape considering their ordeal.

The workers said the babies were in a small pocket of air in the wreckage of the Juarez Hospital, and that the sturdy metal frames of their cribs apparently had saved them.

Workers listened intently with ultra sound equipment, and specially trained dogs sniffed and pawed in a desperate effort to find the estimated 1,500 people still trapped.

"The priority is rescuing lives and because of that we have to take our time because a precipitous action might provoke the death of trapped people," the president said. He spoke to reporters after touring some of the harder hit areas of the city of 18 million.

"We have to work with prudence, so as not to put at risk the volunteer groups," he added.

There had been some speculation among rescue workers that officials would soon start demolishing the more seriously damaged buildings and leveling the mounds of rubble that dot the city.

A top government official speaking on condition he not be identified told The Associated Press that Mexico is grateful for the relief aid pouring in from around the world, but said some of it may not be useful.

Nutrition guidelines urge common sense diet

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When he was questioned about nutrition nearly five years ago during his Senate confirmation hearing, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said he thought people were as good as hogs at selecting the proper foods.

A hog will "eat about the right amount of protein to go along with the grain," Block said. "He won't overeat on the grain. And people surely are as smart as a hog."

Block on Tuesday announced a revised set of dietary guidelines to help Americans eat better. He was asked about his 1981 Senate Agriculture Committee testimony and whether he had changed his mind.

"I don't think I've changed, entirely, anyway," Block replied, noting that the guidelines said there is some confusion about what to eat "because we don't know enough about nutrition to identify an 'ideal diet' for each individual."

"I think that was basically what I was saying in that statement before the Senate Agriculture Committee," Block said.

The government's new dietary guidelines say Americans should use common sense and eat a variety of foods, being careful not to overdo it — something a good parent might tell a child.

"I always thought our mothers gave us pretty good advice, and I think that motherly advice was good then, I think it's good today," Block said.

The recommendations were in "Nutrition and Your Health: Dietary Guidelines for Americans" issued by the departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services. The first guidelines were issued in 1980.

The nation's eating habits were also the topic of hearings and proposed legislation on Capitol Hill on Tuesday.

—Sens. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, introduced a bill requiring food labeling telling consumers the amount of salt in the product and the amount and type of fat. Currently, federal regulations require foods to list the amounts of nutrients only if they make any sort of nutrition claim or if they are fortified with vitamins and minerals.

—A senate subcommittee heard medical experts and physical fitness experts decry the diets of young people, saying they are endangering their future health by eating the wrong foods and not exercising enough. "A great deal of evidence demonstrates the childhood origins of heart disease," said Dr. David W. Harsha, a professor at the Louisiana State University Medical Center.

A committee of nine nutrition experts headed by Dr. Bernard S. Schweigert, chairman of the department of food science and technology at the University of California-Davis, prepared the guidelines.

Dr. Michael McGinnis, deputy assistant secretary of Health and Human Services, was asked whether people ought to avoid fast-food places that provide many items rich in cholesterol, fat and calories.

"The important thing is what people choose when they go into any particular food service establishment," he said.

Officials said USDA will make single free copies of the 24-page pamphlet available from: Dietary Guidelines, Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Dear Abby

Mother's apron strings are too strong for son to snip

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive, single, career woman, 32 years old. For the last three years I've been in love with a kind, successful, gentle man who is 48. We share common interests, he treats me very well and he says he loves me. We've talked extensively about marriage. (He brought the subject up initially.)

The problem: At 48 he still lives with his 79-year-old ailing mother. He never married. As much as he cares for me, and I do believe he loves me, he can't bring himself to leave his mother. I've tried patience, persuasion, confrontation and ultimatums, but he can't deal with the idea of leaving his mother. I'm frustrated, jealous and angry. My friends tell me I'm wasting my time. I've tried to break off with him, but I was miserable!

We've been to two different family counselors without success. He won't return to either one because they both told him his mother is the root of his problem. Now he refuses to see another counselor.

Have you any suggestions, Abby? I don't want to be his "girlfriend" until his mother dies.

TIRED OF WAITING

DEAR TIRED: I suspect a symbiotic relationship between mother and son. (He needs her as much as she needs him. Possibly more.) Frankly, I think he's using his mother to avoid marriage. Further, a man who ducks counseling because he doesn't want to know the truth is just putting his problems on hold. Don't fight too hard for this prize. You might get him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's father passed away recently after a long illness. He couldn't go home for the funeral because he had just been there the week before to visit his father in the hospital. His folks live nearly 3,000 miles from us.

My question: Do you think my husband should have sent a condolence card to his mother? He called her up and sent flowers, but no card. One of my husband's sisters said he should have also sent a card. I've asked several friends and relatives, and they all agreed that it wasn't necessary for my husband to send his mother a card. In keeping with my sister-in-law's line of thinking, shouldn't my mother-in-law send her son a condolence card? After all, he lost his father.

Was my husband remiss in not sending a card? And what do you think of his sister?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: I think your husband said it all when he called his mother and sent flowers. His sister is in one of the first stages of grief—anger. Forgive her.

***

DEAR ABBY: The next time the subject of pedestrians or joggers comes up in your column, please mention the old rule that anyone on foot, regardless of rate of speed, should always walk facing the on-coming traffic.

I've seen people in some very hazardous situations because they're walking with the traffic instead of against it.

KATHRYN IN ROCK CITY, ILL.

DEAR KATHRYN: Why wait for it to come up? It's worth bringing up. And in case pedestrians don't know it, they should always walk on the left side of the road.

***

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a family dispute. Do you or don't you peel a banana from the stem?

GOING BANANAS IN SEATTLE

DEAR GOING: To my knowledge, there is no "correct" way to peel a banana, but I peel mine from the stem.

Red Cross sends aid to earthquake victims

At the request of the League of Red Cross and the Red Crescent Societies, a seven member assessment team has been sent to Mexico to assist the Mexican Red Cross in determining the extent of human need following the recent earthquakes there.

The team was joined by two league representatives from Switzerland. The American Red Cross assessment team included a nursing a health specialist, a logistics coordinator from Los Angeles, an orthopedic surgeon from Washington, D.C., a communications specialist from the Palo Alto chapter, and a public relations person and photographer from national headquarters.

The National Red Cross has made an advance gift of $250,000 to be used by the Mexican Red Cross in the relief effort. Those wishing to assist the stricken people in Mexico may make donations through their local chapters.

The Gray County chapter at 108 N. Russell will accept and process these gifts, or they may be mailed to the chapter's postal box, Box 1036. Officers of the local Red Cross said they will relay any further requests from the national headquarters to our community.

The fizz factor:

Who drinks water anymore?

How about something to drink? How about a new Coke? An old Coke? With or without caffeine? With or without calories? A brew, maybe? Low-cal? Light alcohol? No alcohol?

Perhaps wine. Regular alcohol, light alcohol or no alcohol? A wine cooler? Maybe some fruit juice with sparkling water? Or just plain water?

Over the last two decades Americans have forsaken tap water for beverages with fizz and flavor. This year the nation will spend an estimated $60 billion to slake its thirst.

So seriously do people take their beverages that Coca-Cola's decision to fiddle with its 99-year-old formula became front-page news.

Jesse Meyers, publisher of Beverage Digest, estimates the average consumer now drinks 42 gallons of soft drinks per year, 26 gallons of coffee, 25 gallons of beer, 20 gallons of milk and 43 gallons of water. That last figure is a bit misleading, since it counts the water contained in foods; for example, the water in a popsicle. Fifteen years ago Americans quaffed 64 gallons of water to 27 gallons of soft drinks, 36 gallons of coffee, 23 gallons of milk and 19 gallons of beer.

"Find me somebody who gets turned on by a glass of tap water anymore," he challenges.

There are many theories about the change in the nation's drinking habits. Martin Romm, who follows the beverage industry for First Boston Corp., a New York investment firm, says sodas have more "zip and appeal."

"The consumer is drinking water in other forms," he says. "Now it's water with flavor and no calories."

Public tastes also are influenced by the constant buzz of advertising. Coca-Cola spent an estimated $70 million last year proclaiming that "Coke is it." Pepsi-Cola countered with around $50 million, using robots, space ships, even Michael Jackson, to tout the "Choice of the New Generation."

The boom in the fast-food industry has encouraged America's fizzy habit.

Make carameled apples a fall family affair

With today's social climate of working mothers and fathers combined with busy household schedules, planning activities that will involve the whole family is more important than ever.

Child development experts agree that involving children in the preparation of a meal or snack can be beneficial for the entire family. Having your children help out also allows you to spend some special time together.

Important contributions such as the preparation of a family treat can help your children develop a sense of self esteem, giving them a feeling of accomplishment when the results are ready to eat. So this year, why not get the whole family involved in making carameled apples?

Make your trip to the grocery store a learning experience. Explain that tart and tender apples are the best for carameled apple making. The tartness complements the rich, sweet flavor of the caramel while the tenderness makes it easier to take a big bite. Two common apple varieties, McIntosh and Jonathans, are among the Kraft Kitchen's favorites for carameled apple making. First grown in Ontario, Canada, around 1800, the McIntosh is now widely available in the United States. Jonathans are a native American variety best known for their brilliant red color, excellent flavor and fragrance.

When making your apple selection remember that beauty is more than skin deep. Choose apples with a smooth skin and without any soft spots which will turn into brown bruises inside the apple. And once you've picked your apples handle them with care so as not to create any bruises yourself. Next, pick up a bag of caramels, which already have the wooden sticks included during the autumn months, and you're ready to head home and begin.

It's important to wash and dry the apples in a mild soap solution before the dipping process begins to remove their natural waxy coating. This step cannot be skipped or when the dipping starts the caramel will slide right off the apples. While the kids are busy washing and drying, assemble the everyday kitchen utensils you will need: 1 1/2 quart heavy saucepan, spatula, wooden spoon, wax paper and cookie sheet.

- 1 (14 oz.) bag caramels
- 2 T. water
- 4 or 5 medium size apples
- Wooden sticks

1. Unwrap caramels. Place them and water in 1 1/2 quart heavy saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring frequently until caramels are melted and sauce is smooth.

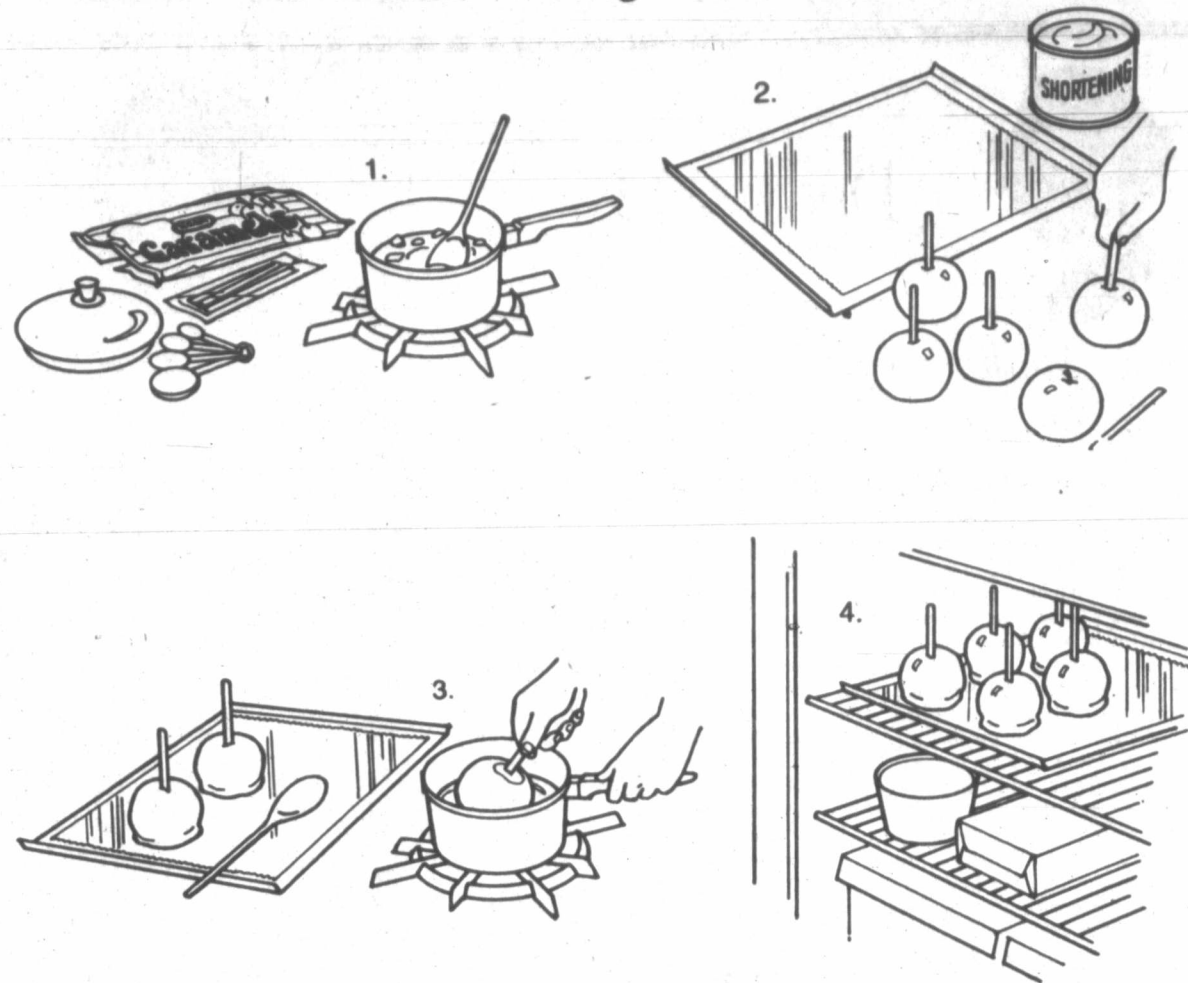

2. Place sheet of wax paper on cookie sheet. Lightly grease wax paper. Wash and dry apples. Insert a wooden stick into stem end of each apple.

3. Holding stick, dip apples, one at a time, into hot caramel sauce, tilting sauce pan and turning until well coated. Scrape off extra sauce from bottom of apple with spatula. Place apples on greased wax paper.

4. Store in refrigerator. Let stand at room temperature about 15 minutes before serving to allow caramel to soften.

- VARIATIONS:
- Substitute pears for apples.
  - Substitute 14 oz. bag chocolate fudgies for caramels and one tablespoon milk for water.
  - Add two tablespoons creamy peanut butter with caramels and water. Continue as directed. Dip in chopped peanuts.
  - Dip caramel-coated apples in chopped nuts, flaked coconut or chocolate pieces.

TO MICROWAVE:
Place unwrapped caramels in small, deep, glass bowl. Add water. Microwave on high for 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 minutes, stirring after each minute until sauce is smooth. Continue with Step 2 as directed. If caramel sauce is too thin, let stand about two minutes before dipping apples.

This bread early to rise with new yeast

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Baking bread is simpler with the new RapidRise yeast, which cuts preparation time. Using a mashed potato gives a loaf a moist texture and helps keep bread fresh longer.

You also can make your own pizza dough for a fresh vegetable pizza wheel.

POTATO BREAD

- 3 1/2 cups all-purpose flour, divided
- 2/3 cup mashed boiled potato, at room temperature
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 package RapidRise yeast
- 3/4 cup milk
- 1/4 cup water
- 2 tablespoons margarine
- 1 egg white
- 1 tablespoon cold water
- Cornmeal

Set aside 1 cup flour. In large bowl, mix remaining flour, mashed potato, sugar, salt and RapidRise yeast. In saucepan, over low heat, heat milk, water and margarine until hot to touch (125 to 130 degrees); stir into dry mixture. Mix in only enough reserved flour to make soft dough. On lightly floured surface, knead 4 minutes.

Roll dough to 16-by-8-inch rectangle; roll up from long edge as for jelly roll; seal seam and end. Place on greased baking sheet sprinkled with cornmeal; cover. Place large shallow pan on counter; half fill with boiling water. Place baking sheet over pan; let dough rise 20 minutes.

Cut 3 slashes on top of loaf. Beat egg white and cold water; brush on loaf. Sprinkle with cornmeal. Bake at 400 degrees for 25 minutes or until done. Remove from baking sheet; cool on wire rack. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 1 loaf.

QUICK VEGETABLE PIZZA WHEEL

- 3 1/4 cups all-purpose flour, divided
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, divided
- 1 package RapidRise yeast

- 1 cup hot water (125 to 130 degrees)
- 1/4 cup margarine, softened, divided
- 1/2 cup thinly sliced small zucchini
- 1 cup chopped red pepper
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- 1/2 teaspoon basil leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- 3/4 cup prepared pizza sauce
- 1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese (about 4 ounces)

Set aside 1 cup flour. In large bowl, mix remaining flour, sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and RapidRise yeast. Stir in hot water and 2 tablespoons margarine. Mix in only enough reserved flour to make soft dough. On lightly floured surface, knead 4 minutes. Cover; let dough rest 10 minutes.

In large skillet, over medium-high heat, melt remaining 2 tablespoons margarine. Add zucchini, red pepper and onion; cook, stirring occasionally, until tender. Remove from heat; stir in remaining salt, basil and garlic powder. Set aside.

Roll and stretch dough to a 15-inch circle. Place in greased 14-inch pizza pan, forming a standing rim of dough around edge. Let rest 5 minutes.

Cut a 7-inch "X" in center of circle through dough. Spread a 4-inch border of pizza sauce evenly around outer edge of "X." Spoon vegetables over sauce; sprinkle with mozzarella cheese. Pull back cut points of dough over vegetable mixture; tuck under rim of dough, pressing to seal.

Test oven for accurate temperature and bake at 425 degrees on lowest oven rack for 20 to 25 minutes or until done. Serve warm.

Former Soviet diplomat says disregard the hard line

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The United States should not make unilateral concessions to the Soviet Union during the upcoming U.S.-Soviet summit meeting, a former Soviet diplomat says.

Arkady Shevchenko, former under secretary general of the United Nations for the Soviet Union, said the Soviets "do not appreciate if you are soft, if you give them something. They consider you are stupid fools."

Shevchenko made his remarks at a news conference prior to a speech at Trinity University.

The former diplomat, who defected to the United States in 1978, said the Nov. 19-20 summit will be beneficial if the two sides can agree on some guidelines for arms control.

Even though some summits in the past have accomplished little, Shevchenko said "it would be a more dangerous world" if there are no talks at all.

Shevchenko said he is not surprised at the hard line taken Tuesday by new Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Shevardnadze, in a speech at the United States, said the United States has "sinister plans" to militarize outer space in a plot that would ignite an uncontrollable and irreversible global arms race.

As a Soviet diplomat, he said, "we always had instructions to take positions impossible to achieve."

One of the reasons the Soviets are so opposed to the Star Wars program, Shevchenko said, is because developing a similar system of their own would cost them a great deal of money.

"They don't like to be engaged in a competition with enormous expenses," he said.

The primary concern in the Soviet Union now, he said, is bolstering the sagging economy.

"The major flaw in the Soviet economy is technological backwardness," he said.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev understands that the future of the Soviet system is in danger with its economy behind the rest of the world, he said.

"The Soviet model will lose all its attractiveness to the rest of the world," he said.

Shevchenko said he doubts there will be significant changes in Soviet policies with the advent of Gorbachev's rise to power. He, like previous Soviet leaders, will have to adhere to the party line.

Gorbachev has been referred to as a "closet liberal," but Shevchenko said such a label does not fit.

"There are no signs in the Soviet Union toward more personal freedom. The attention in the media here has focused on what he says to the West and not to the people of the Soviet Union."

"Gorbachev is a man who's heavily influenced by the Soviet ideology," Shevchenko said. "He's not some kind of new breed."

Thoughts for the mid-1980s

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Evidently inspired by the recent discovery of the Titanic on the Atlantic Ocean floor, many business managers and economic analysts are doing a lot of thinking right now about disasters, and how to avoid them.

Raymond F. DeVoe Jr., an analyst at the Wall Street firm of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc., reported recently that he put a picture of the doomed ship in his office this summer.

It serves partly, he said, as a reminder to avoid complacency in his stock market forecasts. But it prompts other thoughts as well — most obviously, "beware of icebergs in the fog."

A beginning list of those today would include the heavy debts of both the federal government and American consumers, as well as a banking system strained by loans to developing countries, farmers and the oil industry.

DeVoe also cited a "speculative binge in all kinds of new sophisticated financial instruments" such as stock-index futures.

Beyond that, he said, the story of the Titanic suggests "beware of admonitions that 'everything's fine,' 'we're watching the situation,' or 'it can't happen.' Think the unthinkable."

Memories of the Titanic's sinking were still very fresh in the 1920s, when prosperity and complacency once again abounded just before the economy foundered.

A good many observers see some perilous parallels to the 1920s in the state of the country today — problems on the farm, pressure for protectionism in international trade, and more.

"The economy is slowly heading towards deflation," contends Jay Goldinger, an investment broker at Cantor, Fitzgerald & Co. in Beverly Hills, Calif.

"The majority of businesses today weren't around in the 1920s — the most recent time in our history when deflation was prominent," he says. "There are ominous clouds on the horizon that indicate most Americans will not be ready when deflation hits."

In their successful efforts to slow inflation, Goldinger says, the Federal Reserve and its chairman, Paul Volcker, have set forces in motion that could lead to a deflationary contraction of the economy.

Of course, fears of an economic disaster of Titanic proportions seem always to be with us. There were those who were certain that a new Depression would strike after World War II.

Every recession since has brought talk of something much worse. The economy withstood the energy crisis of the 1970s, and survived a spell of severe inflation to boot.

So the ship's log attests that the American economy is indeed a formidable vessel.

ACLU sues city over parade permit

HOUSTON (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union is suing the city of Houston, alleging officials wrongfully denied an anti-apartheid group a permit to march downtown next month.

The federal lawsuit filed Tuesday challenges a city ordinance that forbids officials to issue more than one parade permit per day for downtown Houston.

The Free South Africa Movement asked the city for a permit to hold the Oct. 12 parade downtown. But the city notified the organization on Sept. 13 that it was denying the request because it has already issued a permit for the Texas Southern University homecoming parade.

The ACLU suit asks U.S. District Judge Carl O. Bue to enjoin the city of Houston from barring the Oct. 12 parade planned by the Free South Africa Movement.

Men teachers give different perspective to the students

By RAMON RENTERIA
El Paso Times

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Andres Valle no longer considers himself such a rare breed. For many years, he said, you could count on one hand the number of men teaching in El Paso primary schools.

Valle is adjusting this year to working with 4-year-olds in the Ysleta school district's prekindergarten program, after eight years of teaching mostly kindergarten children.

More and more, men are drifting into the primary grades and upper levels in elementary school, a field traditionally dominated by women.

Educators agree that men add a special flavor, a different perspective to the education of young children.

Children from single-parent homes sometimes view men in the elementary classroom as surrogate fathers.

Some were lured into elementary teaching by necessity; others tried other professions and just wanted a slower pace in life. In Valle's case, it was just a young man's desire to work in education.

At 35, Valle has had opportunities to go back to college and branch out into administration or school supervision.

"I prefer the younger kids because they're more responsive, more eager to learn," Valle said. "I prefer to stay in the classroom, where I feel I'm better able to serve the kids," he said.

Right now, Valle is making a big adjustment working with even younger children who respond to him with a little fear. For most of the children, it is their first experience away from home, in a more structured environment.

After nine years of teaching, Valle said no magic formula distinguishes a good elementary school teacher.

"I've been told that I seem to have a lot of patience, and that's they key right there, plus understanding of the age level and where the kids are coming from as far as their home environment and cultural background," he said.

Bill Jackson spent 20 years in the Air Force, retired and then spent six years in business, managing restaurants and a security firm. He got tired of the pressures, returned to college, latched onto a teaching certificate and then landed in the El Paso elementary school system in 1978.

These days, Jackson teaches science and math at Alta Vista Elementary School. With a neatly trimmed gray beard and white lab smock and tie, he looks more like a college professor.

"I feel like I really have found what I really love doing," he said. "When you deal with kids, there's the bottom line — they make it all worthwhile."

Jackson is 53 and his students — fourth-, fifth- and sixth-graders — sometimes treat him like a surrogate grandfather. He likes to dress the part, playing the role of a scientist, so that children can understand that they, too, have a chance of succeeding in life.

"Kids are just little adults. I don't want to disappoint them in their expectation of what they think you're supposed to look like," Jackson said. "That's the big thing we need in schools, to be respectful of the kids."

For Mike Cassidy, it is important that children realize at a very early age that men and women can fit a variety of roles.

Cassidy launched his teaching career working in a kindergarten classroom and now is a district administrator in the Ysleta district's elementary instruction program.

"Whether a person is a male or female is probably not as important," he said. "It's more whether the person has the skills, sensitivity, ability and desire to work with young children."

When the kindergarten program started in the late 1960s, Cassidy was a rarity in primary school. Now, he is detecting more and more men in the primary grades and in the upper elementary levels.

He remembers how children naturally assumed that he and his female aide were husband and wife.

"So it set kind of a nice, almost family-style tone to the whole thing and they could see an easy transition from what they were used to at home," Cassidy said.

Santos Rivera, a bilingual education teacher at Zavala Elementary, got into elementary teaching by necessity. He emerged from the University of Texas at El Paso with a degree in Latin American studies and found the job pickings slim.

After 11 years teaching in elementary schools, Rivera thinks about the prospect of someday teaching high school Spanish. Right now, he's comfortable educating young children.

"I feel close to the children; they really want to learn," Rivera said. "It's good to have men in elementary school just to give kids a different feeling of the world and different opinions."

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Sept. 28, 1985

Unique or original ideas you get in the year ahead should at least be given a chance to prove themselves. Seeds of success can be sown from your fertile imagination.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Establish a sensible schedule regarding your workload today. If you try to crowd too much in, you might end up accomplishing nothing. Major changes are ahead for Librans in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today; Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be extra mindful of your behavior in social situations today. Do nothing that could give one who dislikes you a chance to gossip.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Family problems should not be discussed in the presence of outsiders today. Open disputes will make everyone look bad and resolve nothing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Hard feelings will result today if you take credit for things others have done. Stay out of the spotlight if you haven't earned it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you shop impulsively today, there's a strong chance you'll respond to sales pitches and buy things you really don't need.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Lack of willpower today might allow a setback to deter you from achieving an objective, instead of regrouping and trying again.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today, if you can help people who have been kind to you, don't let the opportunity slip by. You'll be remorseful later if you look the other way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's best not to take gambles today on ventures that are outside of your field of expertise. Your lack of knowledge could prove costly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) To gratify your ego and prove others wrong today, you might be tempted to take an unpopular position that will anger associates.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Decisions that have an effect upon your work or career should be based upon your logic today, not your emotions. Keep feelings in check.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be extra careful in joint ventures today, especially if there are costs involved. Make sure the expenses are distributed equally.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Partnership arrangements could be more of a hindrance than a help today. Instead of relying on others, try to fend for yourself.

WARREN HASSE

I WAS JUST preparing to go on the radio with a 15-minute noon newscast when the police radio crackled:

"The ambulance is taking someone named Langford to the hospital, hurt in the oilfield." I knew several fine young men by that name, and one of them was working in The Patch, earning money for his senior year at New Mexico State University.

Robert Langford had ridden many a mile with me during basketball and baseball season, as the Harvester athletes traveled by private vehicles in those days. And he had been forced to listen to endless braggadocio about my good 'ol University of Wisconsin. So it was with great anxiety I raced through that newscast and then sped to Highland General Hospital.

As I arrived, the ambulance was just pulling away from the emergency room doors, lights flashing, sirens wailing. I rushed inside where the attending physician was watching it depart.

"It's Robert," he sadly said. "He'll never make it as far as Panhandle." The doctor, the PHS team medico, knew the outstanding athlete well, too. He had done all he could, performed a tracheotomy, and sent him on to Amarillo for further emergency treatment.

But in his prognosis he hadn't taken into account the superb physical condition of the middle linebacker of the Aggie football team, all 5-9, 160 pounds of him, nor the faith and love of his family. I returned to the office, called his college coach, Warren Woodson, to tell him what had happened. Thirty minutes later I called the Amarillo hospital and was informed the ambulance had arrived, the patient still alive. A few minutes later I found one of the Harvesters' most loyal football boosters, and together we headed for Amarillo.

There, in the emergency room waiting area, we found the family, supported by family pastor Dr. E. Douglas Carver and friends, prayerfully waiting. Coach Woodson had already called twice, a telephone vigil he maintained every two hours, being told Robert was still alive and in surgery. Robert had been elected captain of the Aggie grid team for the upcoming season, as popular at college as in high school, where he had served as student body president, class favorite, and football captain. His teammates at the Las Cruces School had included future pro-great quarterback Charley Johnson, and national rushing and scoring leaders Bob Galters, Preacher Pilot and Purvis Atkins.

Throughout the long afternoon, a condition status report was given to those in the waiting room, and early in the evening a doctor came out. Everyone feared the worst. "Does he have a nose like yours," he asked one of the startled brothers. Before getting an answer, the doctor said: "That's the way I rebuilt it." And then he explained that Robert had been crushed from waist to head in the accident, and this plastic surgeon had reshaped the face, working from a picture of the athlete from an NMSU football press guide provided by an Amarillo teammate.

The next 13 months Langford spent in miraculous recuperation. The first few were virtually immobile in a hospital bed, visited constantly by teammates and their families, coaches, teachers, family and friends. Then came a continuous string of surgeries, reconstructing body and face, restoring eyesight. The happiest moment came one early August day in the summer of 1982 when he returned for a complete physical at the hands of the fine doctor who had prepared him for that emergency run immediately following the accident.

Robert came to my house that evening, absolutely elated. "Guess what," he exploded. "The doctor said I can go back to school AND play football again. AND our third game this season is AT WISCONSIN!" Although he had been forced to miss the senior year he was elected to captain, 1981, he was honored at a game that fall, and his captaincy was carried over to that 1982 campaign.

No number of words could possibly explain all that went into the lives of that young man and his family from the moment of the accident until he visited me that night. But all that he has learned has been returned as a coach ever since. Grad assistant at his alma mater, unsuccessful rookie head coach at McLean, then assistant to Don Beck, and now his successor and also athletic director at Perryton High School. He has one of his finest teams this season, a chance for post-season honors. A lot of folks will be watching and pulling hard for him, including his now-retired college coach, living in Dallas, but who always inquires about Robert as if he were a son. And it's going to be hard for me to not be a bit partial when Robert brings his team to PHS' Homecoming Friday night.

Oh, yes, one more note. About that game the Aggies played at Wisconsin, the Badgers won 69-13. Robert made the trip, but didn't get to play. He broke an arm the week before in a 28-6 win over University of Pacific!

Mariners have Royal's number again

If the Kansas City Royals fail to repeat as American League West champions, their lost crown probably could be traced to the Seattle Kingdom.

The fifth-place Mariners, coming off four straight losses to last-place Texas, beat Kansas City for the 10th straight time this season Tuesday night. The 5-2 defeat kept the Royals from taking first place from the California Angels, who fell 8-1 to the Chicago White Sox but remain a half-game in front.

"It's not a jinx, it's just been good pitching on their side," Royals Manager Whitey Herzog said after Mike Moore held Kansas City to seven hits. "We've scored 21 runs in 11 games. They've just shut us down."

"I don't have the answers about the streak," Mariners Manager Chuck Cottier said. "I have no idea why. If we could put it in a bottle, we'd all make a lot of money."

Elsewhere in the AL, Toronto beat Boston 6-2 and Phil Niekro failed again to win his 300th game as Detroit bombed New York 9-1, giving the Blue Jays a seven-game lead in the East and reducing their magic number for clinching the division title to six.

In other games, Texas blanked Minnesota 5-0, Milwaukee outslugged Baltimore 10-6, and Oakland defeated Cleveland 10-8.

White Sox 8, Angels 1
Carlton Fisk drove in three runs, two of them with a homer, and Tom Seaver won his 302nd game as Chicago defeated first-place California.

Fisk's homer in the fifth, his 36th of the season overall and 32nd as a catcher, equaled Lance Parrish's record for American League catchers set in 1982. Fisk later doubled home a run to give him 100 RBIs for the season.

Seaver, 14-11, went seven innings, losing his bid for a shutout when Brian Downing singled in a run in the sixth. Blue Jays 6, Red Sox 2

Dennis Lamp, continuing to rebound from his disappointing season in 1984, improved his record to 11-0 with 4-2-3 innings of shutout relief as Toronto moved closer to the AL East pennant.

Lamp relieved rookie left-hander Steve Davis with the score tied 2-2 and the bases loaded in the fourth, but he got Jackie Gutierrez to ground into a double play to end the threat. Lamp, who gave up three hits, gave way to Bill Caudill in the ninth.

"My preference is to pitch a lot, but last year was my fault," said Lamp, who was 8-8 and pitched only 85 innings in 1984. "I was determined to put last year behind me and have a good season this year." Tigers 9, Yankees 1

Niekro failed in his third bid to win his 300th game, getting bombed for eight runs in four innings as Detroit routed New York.

"It seems like they were on every pitch I threw," said Niekro, 15-12, who is 0-4 against Detroit this season. "And the harder I threw, the harder they hit it."

John Grubb hit a three-run homer over the center-field fence in the first inning to get the Tigers started, then added a two-run double in the third.

Niekro was finally replaced in the fifth after Lance Parrish hit a two-run homer. Brewers 10, Orioles 6

Milwaukee scored five runs in the fourth inning and four more in the fifth to subdue Baltimore.

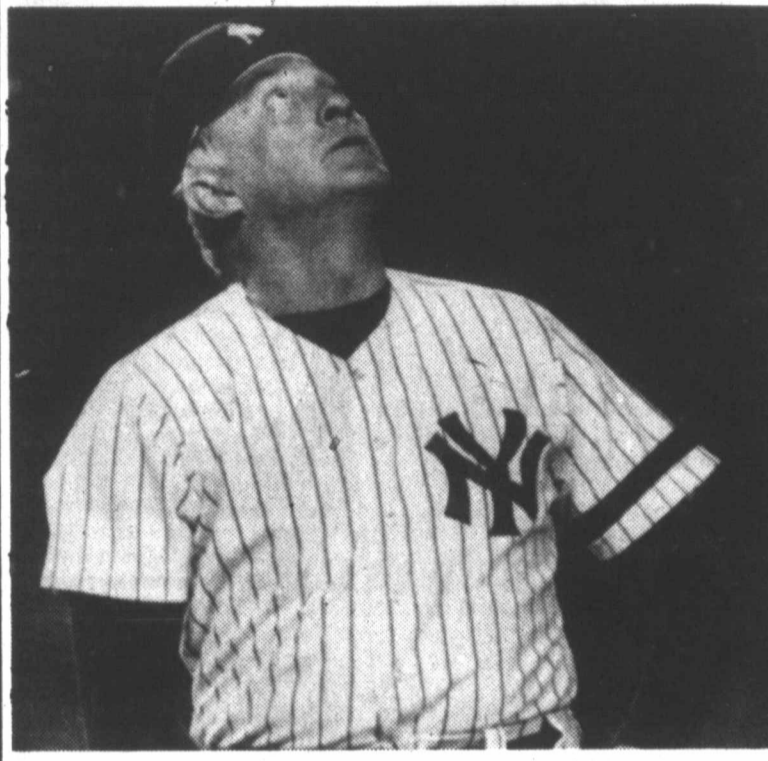

The Brewers reached five Baltimore pitchers for 14 hits, including a homer by Paul Householder, Jim Gantner's two-run triple and Cecil Cooper's two-run double. Rangers 5, Twins 0

Texas won for the fifth straight time, its longest winning streak of the season, as Pete O'Brien drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly.

O'Brien, with a 400-foot shot into the center-field seats in the first inning, became the first left-handed hitter to hit 20 homers in a season for the Rangers. A's 10, Indians 8

Oakland handed Cleveland its sixth straight defeat, breaking an 8-8 tie in the seventh on pinch-hitter Mike Heath's squeeze bunt that resulted in two runs.

Jose Canseco started the inning with a single, his fourth hit of the game.

NO 300 — Yankees' Phil Niekro fails to win 300th game Tuesday night as the Tigers won, 9-1, knocking the 46-year-old knuckleballer out in the fifth inning. Niekro is trying to become the 18th pitcher in Major League history to win 300 games. (AP Laserphoto)

Tired Cardinals still hold 3-game lead

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

Maybe the St. Louis Cardinals are starting to get tired. But no one would know it by looking at the scoreboard.

"We weren't very sharp. We've played 27 games in a row and have still got five more games left," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said after a 5-4 victory Tuesday night over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Cardinals withstood errors by shortstop Ozzie Smith and second baseman Tommy Herr on the first two balls of the game and did not allow a run, and then scored twice in the third when Pittsburgh center fielder R.J. Reynolds dropped a fly ball.

"Everybody's got to be the goat at least once in their lifetime," Reynolds said. "I didn't take my eye off it. I just closed my glove too soon."

"This was kind of a gift," Herzog added. "We didn't play good."

Despite the somewhat sloppy effort, the Cardinals held a firm grip on their three-game lead in the National League East over New York, which beat Philadelphia 7-1.

In other NL games, Montreal outslugged Chicago 17-15, Los Angeles downed Houston 7-2, Cincinnati defeated Atlanta 7-5 and San Diego beat San Francisco 4-3.

St. Louis, which has been making a habit of coming from behind recently, led the entire way in winning its fifth straight and 12th in 13 games.

Mets 7, Phillies 1

Sid Fernandez pitched a two-hitter and Keith Hernandez set a major-league record with his 23rd game-winning RBI of the season.

Fernandez, 8-9, struck out nine. Among pitchers who have worked at least 145 innings, Fernandez leads the majors with an average of just 5.73 hits allowed per nine innings and 9.82 strikeouts.

Expos 17, Cubs 15
Andre Dawson hit three homers and tied a team record by driving in eight runs as Montreal raced to a 15-2 lead in the sixth inning and then hung on in Chicago.

Dawson took advantage of the wind blowing out at Wrigley Field. Tim Wallach and Sal Butera also homered for the Expos, while Gary Matthews, Jody Davis and Billy Hatcher connected for the Cubs.

Dodgers 7, Astros 2

Bob Welch pitched a six-hitter and drove in two runs to help Los Angeles maintain its six-game lead in the NL West over Cincinnati.

The Dodgers reduced their magic number to seven while mathematically eliminating Houston.

Reds 7, Braves 5
Rookie Tom Browning won his 10th straight game and raised his record to 19-9. No rookie has won 20 games since Bob Grim went 20-9 for the New York Yankees in 1953.

Browning became the first Cincinnati rookie to win 19 games since Harry Gaspar in 1909.

Bob Horner hit a two-run homer for Atlanta, his 27th.

Padres 4, Giants 3
Kurt Bevacqua's two-run homer capped a four-run fourth inning, while Dave Dravecky won his fourth game in four decisions against San Francisco this season. Dravecky now is 13-10.

Pampa defeated by Dumas in loop volleyball opener

Pampa lost to Dumas, 3-15, 15-17, in District 1-4A volleyball action Tuesday night at McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Lady Harvesters are now 0-1 in district play and will meet Lubbock Dunbar Saturday in Lubbock for their next match.

The Lady Harvesters had trouble getting started the first game, but bounced back the second game and had a 9-2 lead before the visitors rallied to win.

"We came out flat the first game, but the girls played with a lot of intensity the second game, but once you get that losing habit it's hard to break," said Pampa coach Phil Hall. "We allowed Dumas to come back."

Courtney Brown, Melinda Jackson and Irene Perez had outstanding performances for Pampa, Hall said.

"The girls need to win a match to get their confidence back and play like they're capable of playing," Hall said.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian University football coach Jim Wacker says as many as 29 TCU football players may have been receiving illegal payments from alumni before he took over as head coach in 1983.

Wacker made the statement Tuesday at a meeting of the Frog Club, an organization of TCU sports boosters.

Later, Wacker announced that Ron Zell Brewer, a senior on the team, was suspended Tuesday after he said he had been receiving cash payments in violation of NCAA rules.

Brewer, a reserve tight end from Dallas, told TCU coaches about the payments, Wacker said.

He was the seventh TCU player to be suspended since Thursday amid allegations that the players violated National Collegiate Athletic Association rules by accepting payments from alumni.

Brewer was recruited in 1981 under the school's previous football coaching staff, as were the other players who were suspended. He spent the 1984 season as a redshirt.

Wacker first set the number receiving cash payments at 29, but backedtracked a little.

"I don't know if I'm right (about the number). I'm not sure, but I think that is the number I heard from somewhere," Wacker said.

"When we came in, the boosters evidently cut that list to nine and made a decision not to let me or anybody know that," Wacker added.

Cash payments by boosters to TCU football players were common knowledge among team members under former coach F.A. Dry, according to former TCU quarterback Anthony Gulley. Another player said the payments were widespread.

"A majority of those who came in my year (fall of 1981) were aware of what was going on," Gulley said. "It (payments) wasn't any big secret. All the guys recruited by coach Dry knew what was happening."

Dick Lowe, a Fort Worth oilman

who has revealed that he and other alumni helped to subsidize seven players currently under suspension by TCU, said in a report in Wednesday's New York Times that he cannot remember the precise amounts athletes at the school received to play football over the last five years.

But according to Lowe, a top-notch running back would bring $10,000 to $25,000 in cash, plus an automobile and $1,000 a month in spending money. The payoffs, which Lowe maintains are commonplace in big-time college football programs across the nation, require the willing participation of the coaches, alumni and the players themselves, he said.

The practice of recruiting players with cash and other inducements ended at TCU in 1982, he said.

"These guys are deft negotiators," Lowe said, referring to the student athletes. "The first thing, if you're going to recruit a kid, is someone has to find out if he's on the take with his hand out and wants to be bought."

Dry, now an assistant coach at Baylor, has denied any knowledge of illegal payments, chursday after Wacker dismissed six players from the squad.

Others suspended last Thursday were Egypt Allen, Gary Spann, Geard Taylor, Darron Turner and Marvin Foster.

EXHIBITIONIST TWO... An AMX, driven by Mike McComas of Pampa, had a winning time of 10.2 at the Sundown Dragway in Liberal, Kans. last weekend. The win qualified McComas for the Bracket Finals Oct. 11-13 in Green Valley, Tex. McComas becomes the fourth Pampa driver to qualify for this year's drag racing finals. The other qualifiers are Keith Stowers, Chuck Kimball and Jack Curtis. Only the top 32 racers (based on season points standings) in the area are invited to the finals. (Staff Photo)

Pro-Member tournament results

Val Howard of Vernon Hillcrest Country Club teamed with Elmer Wilson, Joe Donaldson and Norma Healy to win the Pro-Member team championship Tuesday at the Pampa Country Club course. The foursome had a low ball total of 123 in the 18-hole tournament, sponsored by the West Texas Chapter of the PGA.

Clay Hoffmann of Ross Rogers in Amarillo and his team of Ronnie Wood, Dwain Urbanczyk and Ralph Baker placed second with a 124. Mike Horton of Hereford's John Pitman Golf Course teamed with Buddy Lamberson, Orville Heiskell and Carol Bush to place third with a 127.

Low pro was Keith Bumpass of Tascosa Country Club with a 72. There was five-way tie at 73 between Hoffman, George Mackanos, Hunsley Hills GC; David Mooring, Panhandle CC and Terry Dear, Lubbock Lakeridge CC.

Gary Keim of Pampa was low amateur with a 73.

The West Texas PGA Chapter Championship teed off today at the Pampa Country Club. The 54-hole tournament ends Friday.

Bufs host A & I

It's Parents Day at West Texas State University this Saturday as the Buffaloes entertain Texas A & I at 7:30 p.m. in Kimbrough Memorial Stadium.

West Texas State is 1-2 on the year after losing 20-10 to Louisiana Tech last weekend. A & I is now 1-1 after falling 28-21 to Stephen F. Austin.

After three games, junior fullback James Morton is the leading rusher with 101 yards for the Bufs. Quarterback Tod Mayfield has tossed for 838 yards and four touchdowns. Mayfield broke his own school record for pass completions in one game Saturday as he was successful on 29 of 55 aeriels for 287 yards and a touchdown. Against Angelo State a week before, the Panhandle junior shattered the old mark of 27 completions in one game.

Stan Carraway continued his consistent pass-receiving accomplishments Saturday as he hauled in six catches for 112 yards and a score.

The all-time series between WT and A & I is knotted at 1-1-1. The 0-0 tie occurred in 1939; the Bufs won 26-6 in 1940; and A & I triumphed 39-7 in 1941. This year's game will be the first meeting between the two schools at Kimbrough Stadium.

WT coach Bill Kelly said the loss to Louisiana Tech was a frustrating one.

"We were playing a better team and a more talented team, and we had a chance to beat them, but mistakes cost us," Kelly said. "The way we lost was very frustrating. I thought we outplayed them until the fourth quarter. I don't want to take anything away from Louisiana Tech. They're a good football team."

WT outgained Louisiana Tech 334-283 in total yards and registered an average gain per play of 4.77, compared to 3.87 for Louisiana Tech.

Kelly said A & I should be similar to Angelo State — "a very talented, very good football team."

"I don't know much about A & I, but I know they beat Southwest Texas, which is not the little sisters of the poor."

Heath Sherman is the Javelinas' top rusher with 35 carries for 291 yards and two touchdowns. Quarterback Darcy Davis has passed for 228 yards and two touchdowns.

For the third game in a row, the Bufs escaped with no injuries and are healthy for Saturday night's game.

Landry concerned about Oilers

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys will get to see films of the Miami Dolphins this week.

No, the Cowboys aren't playing the Dolphins Sunday. It's film of the Houston Oilers' 26-23 victory over Miami in the first game of the season they will be watching. "That should be an eye-opener," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "Any team who beats the Dolphins can play."

Landry said Tuesday his Cowboys had better get pumped up about playing the Houston Oilers this Sunday even if they did beat them 20-10 during the National Football League exhibition season.

"We'd better get excited every week, regardless of the team we are playing," said Landry. "We're not good enough to overlook anybody."

The Oilers beat Miami, then lost to Washington and Pittsburgh. The Cowboys opened with a victory over Washington, lost to Detroit, then defeated Cleveland 20-7 Sunday.

"Houston is coming on strong," said Landry. "They have good people and can still be a strong football team. They have a very aggressive defense and they hustle hard. They have the ingredients to make a good race out of the (American Conference) Central Division."

Landry said Oiler quarterback Warren Moon is a "gifted athlete who moves well and has a good arm. The Oilers have been making some good draft choices. They are building their offense line and you need a good offensive wall in this business."

Landry said the Cowboys were in good shape, although offensive tackle Phil Pozderac may miss the game with a knee injury. Running back Tony Dorset was nursing a sore back but Landry said he expected him to be ready for the noon kickoff in Texas Stadium.

The Cowboys also said quarterback Danny White was improved from his hurt ribs and sprained wrist and should be in top shape for the game.

Landry said, "White is starting to play well. He's nursing his injuries along. He's very tough and he has been able to overcome most of them."

Dallas is 3-1 against Houston in the regular season. The Cowboys are rated five-point favorites.

The Cowboys also announced on Tuesday that middle linebacker Eugene Lockhart had signed a four-year renegotiated contract for an undisclosed sum. Lockhart is expected to make $160,000 in the first year of the deal.

Hodel, White square off on proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coastal states seeking a bigger share of offshore oil revenues than the federal government has been willing to give them have won a second round in the seven-year, $5.8 billion feud.

The Senate Energy and Commerce Committee, in an 11-7 vote Tuesday, adopted a proposal already approved by the House Interior Committee that would give states an immediate $1.6 billion of accrued revenues, plus 27 percent of future revenues, including royalties.

The committee voted for the proposal despite Interior Secretary Donald Hodel's testimony earlier in the day that the proposal would give three states — California, Texas and Louisiana — the bulk of about $5 billion out of the federal Treasury during the next 30 years. Texas Gov. Mark White, who also testified at the hearing, argued in favor of including royalties, saying that the states are being generous to the federal government in agreeing to 27 percent instead of a 50-50 split.

After lengthy negotiations with seven affected coastal states, the Interior Department had agreed to give them 27 percent of rents and bonuses that are paid for the leases but would not agree to split royalties, which are paid on the oil production and are the major source of continuing revenue from the leases.

The dispute stems from a 1978 act of Congress that created shared offshore leases where federal offshore lands abut state-owned offshore lands. The revenues from those leases, Congress said, should be shared in a "fair and equitable" manner.

"Unfortunately," White testified, "what Congress failed to foresee is that the department's idea of a fair and equitable division was for them to get all of the money."

The disputed revenues have been put in an escrow account since 1978 that now totals $5.8 billion, according to Hodel.

Under the states' agreement with the Interior Department, seven coastal states would share in an immediate payment of $1.6 billion. Texas' share would be $424 million.

The other $4.2 billion would offset the federal deficit.

Hodel had argued that including royalties in the revenue "pool" would cost the Treasury about $150 million to $200 million annually for the next 30 years.

White said Hodel's estimate was too high and that the states' share of royalties during the 30-year period would be about $810 million.

The congressional proposal, sponsored in the Senate by Bennett Johnston, D-La., and Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, would also give the states an additional 10 percent of future revenues to offset what the states contend is a shortage in the escrow account because the Interior Department prorated revenues based on how much acreage in the lease was on state-owned land.

Hodel said the department no longer draws leases that are partly on state-owned land.

Will summit produce more than rhetoric?

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — So far, the pre-summit rhetoric from the White House and Kremlin is offering an expectant world predictable posturing but no clear signal that the meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev will lead to an arms control breakthrough.

No bargaining on "Star Wars" exists the U.S. president, while the Soviets retort with talk of Star Peace. Both sides keep accusing the other of refusing to negotiate seriously in Geneva.

"Let's get down to real business with the seriousness the subject deserves," said Secretary of State

George Shultz in a speech Monday to the U.N. General Assembly.

"From the very beginning of the Geneva negotiations on nuclear space arms, our country has been determined to achieve a radical solution," Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze told the General Assembly on Tuesday.

An AP News Analysis

Those watching for signals of pre-summit flexibility are finding none. Reagan is determined to proceed with his Strategic Defense Initiative, the space-based missile defense system. Gorbachev is equally determined to build pressure on the United States to cut back on the program if not drop it altogether.

It's a propaganda battle unique in the history of U.S.-Soviet summits because rarely if ever have the leaders of the two superpowers had such a keen sense of public relations.

So, while Reagan pursues Star Wars as a means of tilting the nuclear balance toward defense rather than mutual destruction, Gorbachev sends his foreign minister to the U.N. to declare that limiting arms in space ought to be the central focus of the summit.

Shevardnadze told the General Assembly: "What I have in mind is the problem of preventing an arms race in outer space and terminating it on Earth, limiting and reducing nuclear arms and enhancing strategic stability."

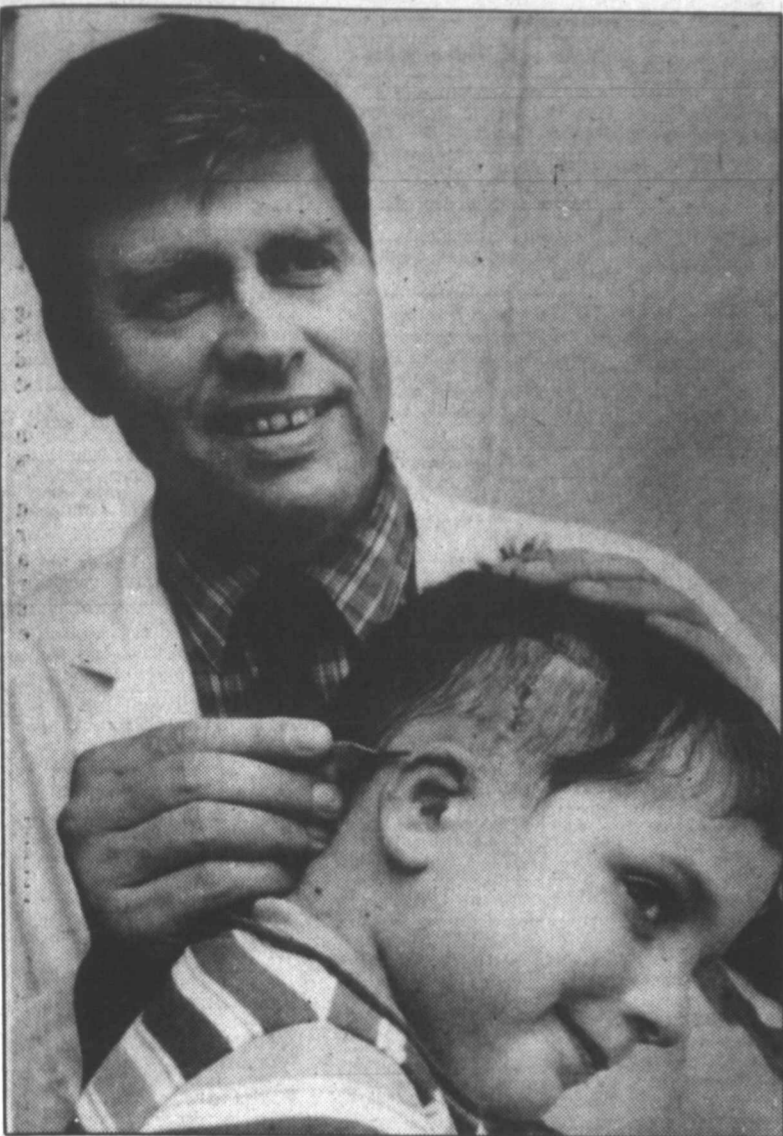

Shultz and Shevardnadze were meeting today and then the Soviet official will go to Washington for a session on Friday with Reagan.

The word being put out by Soviet sources was that Gorbachev is prepared to offer a 40 percent cut in nuclear launchers and warheads.

"I'd like to see it on the table in Geneva with the arms control people," was Reagan's first public reaction. "It would be a better idea if it was more," he said, referring to the 40 percent figure. Later he softened his reaction, saying he hadn't meant to indicate he was ruling out any such offer.

The two leaders will meet Nov. 19 and 20 in Geneva, which leaves several weeks for the two governments to find a path to some agreement.

The history of face-to-face meetings between U.S. and Soviet leaders, however, offers little encouragement to those who hope that this summit will produce agreements of lasting significance.

EAR SAVED — Dr. Joseph Upton, a surgeon at Children's Hospital in Boston, points to the right ear of 5-year-old Guy Condelli of Medford, Mass., after the bandages were removed from the ear Tuesday. Guy's ear was reattached in an operation Aug. 16 after being severed in an attack by a dog. (AP Laserphoto)

Doctors combine modern microsurgery and ancient leeching to save boy's ear

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors who reattached a boy's severed ear with microsurgery feared the operation might fail when drugs didn't overcome a complication, so they turned to one of their profession's oldest tools: leeches.

"It wouldn't have worked if we hadn't been able to use the leeches," said Dr. Joseph Upton, who headed the team of Children's Hospital surgeons that operated on Guy Condelli, 5, of Medford, who had been attacked by a dog.

Reattachments of severed ears are rarely successful because the ear's blood vessels are exceptionally tiny — so small they can't be seen with the naked eye. The only reported success was five years ago in Australia, Upton said.

When Guy and his severed ear were rushed to Upton after the attack Aug. 16, "I decided to give it a try, even though the success rate is almost nil."

Members of the surgical team worked for 12 hours under microscopes that magnified by 40 times the torn veins and arteries they had to reconnect. The operation worked, and blood flowed through the reattached vessels.

But Guy's recovery was complicated by poor circulation. Although blood flowed into the ear, clots formed in the veins so it could not return to the heart. Three days after the operation, the ear turned blackish blue with congested blood.

At first, doctors gave the child heparin, a medicine that prevents clotting, and made cuts in the ear to let out blood. However, the child was losing a lot of blood, and doctors feared the operation would fail.

As a surgeon in Vietnam, Upton had sometimes used leeches to heal wounds, and he decided they were worth a try.

"I started calling around the country to my friends trying to find some hungry leeches," Upton said. He eventually found a variety of medical leeches, known as Hirudo medicinalis, in England and had some flown to Boston.

He attached two of the 1½-inch-long worms to the child's ear. They slowly filled with blood and eventually became 8 inches long and looked something like fat cigars.

Besides sucking blood, the leeches inject an anesthetic and anticoagulant into the flesh to keep blood from clotting. "The ear perked up right away," Upton said. "It was obvious it was going to work."

The boy's mother, Darlene, said Tuesday she had no doubts about the leeches. "I said, 'If it works, do it. Whatever it takes.'"

Our Tax Deferred Annuities* now pay 10¼%****

Everybody knows that there are many investment opportunities around today that pay a handsome rate of interest. The trouble is, in many cases that interest is currently taxable. You can keep up to over half of it to the tax man. So your retirement savings may grow very slowly.

Now, there's a better answer. It's our tax deferred single premium annuities.

Not only is the rate competitive, but the interest is free from current federal income tax. That means your savings can grow up to twice as fast as a mutual fund, time deposit, or other taxable plan.

Taxes on the income must be paid later, of course. But usually not until retirement, when your income tax bracket will probably be lower. And after your savings kitty has grown.

Our annuities are also ideal for IRA and Keogh plans—because they also protect against disability and provide a retirement income you cannot outlive. Most other plans don't.

And whether it's IRA, Keogh, or other retirement fund, you get our expert knowledge of annuities and our substantial service.

These annuities are available through most New York Life Agents. Go ahead, ask. They'll help you to a richer retirement.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Comedian Bill Cosby called it embarrassing but wonderful that the town where he grew up decided to honor him after a benefit concert for a voting rights fund.

Mayor W. Wilson Goode and the Rev. Jesse Jackson saluted Cosby at the Citizenship Education Fund benefit Tuesday night at the Academy of Music. The fund is a national, non-partisan voter education and registration group.

"It's embarrassing for me," Cosby said after the show. "I thought I was coming here to raise money to educate people. It was just wonderful."

Goode praised Cosby as "the person who has done more in his lifetime to enhance the image of the city than any other single person I know."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Jan-Michael Vincent, charged with punching a woman in the face and with two counts of probation violation, is "adamantly protesting" the latest accusations, his lawyer says.

The star of TV's "Airwolf" series was charged Tuesday with felony battery for allegedly punching a woman, breaking her nose and splitting her lip Sept. 6 outside his Malibu home, district attorney spokesman Al Albergate said.

Vincent, 41, arranged to surrender today, prosecutors said. The actor is on probation on charges of disturbing the peace by fighting at a party and for drunken driving.

HONOLULU (AP) — Actor Sylvester Stallone has joined a group of investors planning to build homes on a site on Kauai Island, but hasn't decided what to do with another parcel he bought last year, his attorney says.

"It's really a very beautiful site," said John Ferry, the real estate agent who brokered the latest deal, for building eight homes on an 8-acre site on Kauai's north shore. "He (Stallone) really likes it here."

Last year, the 39-year-old star of the "Rocky" and "Rambo" films bought five acres on Kauai's north shore. No decision has been made about development of that parcel, said Jake Bloom, Stallone's Los Angeles attorney.

"He just perceived it to be a good investment," Bloom said Tuesday.

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Actor-director Elia Kazan, whose films include "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "East of Eden," will receive a new Yale award honoring people in the arts.

Kazan, 76, and 12 others will be given the award Oct. 5 as part of a Convocation of Yale Arts Alumni.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Ted Knight, who played Ted Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," should be released Thursday from the hospital where he had abdominal surgery last week, a spokesman says.

Knight, 61, star of television's "Too Close For Comfort," underwent "surgery to remove a blockage," spokesman Henry Ballinger said Tuesday.

Production of Knight's current, syndicated show was interrupted, and filming would resume

Oct. 14, Ballinger said. The program is being renamed "The Ted Knight Show," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The disputed property in a palimony case against pianist Liberace by a former live-in companion amounts to a couple of robes and a bathing suit, the entertainer's lawyer said.

Superior Court Judge Norman Epstein ruled Tuesday that there were enough issues for dancer Scott Thorsen, 25, to get his day in court on an amended suit.
