

WHERE PEOPLE
MAKE IT HAPPEN

HEY, HERE WE ARE! - It didn't take long for the new company in Pampa to put up its sign. The formation of IRI International Corp. was announced Wednesday, and the new sign at the plant entrance was up that same day. Resulting from a merger of Ingersoll - Rand and Dresser Industries, IRI was formed as an independent company from Ingersoll's Oilfield Products Co. in Pampa and Dresser's Ideco Division in Beaumont. Unemployment rises in Gray County area

Citing apparent slowdowns in oilfield and construction activity, Charles Vance of the Pampa office of the Texas Employment Commission said unemployment rose in the five counties served by his office.

Unemployment in Pampa rose from 5.5 percent in May to 6.6 percent in June, while Gray County figures rose from 5.6 to 6.8 percent.

This means there are 723 unemployed Pampa residents out of a work force of 10,873. He said 10,150 people are employed in Pampa. The Gray County work force is 13,386 with 910 people unemployed and 12,476 employed.

Unemployment in Wheeler County doubled for June, rising from 3.2 to 6.4. Hemphill County unemployment rose from 7.2 to 8.1. Roberts County unemployment rose from 2.6 to 3.3 percent. Lipscomb County figures rose from one percent to 5.1 percent.

"But there are so few people in Lipscomb County that two or three people out of work can make a difference," Vance said.

Vance could not say specifically what caused the rise in unemployment. Local figures lag one month behind state and national figures.

"I see a general decrease in permanent jobs, as well as activity in oilfield and construction," he said, adding that current job opportunities are in sales, nurse's aids and such restaurant work as waiters, cooks and fast food attendants.

In June, 1984, Pampa unemployment was 3.6 percent with a labor force of 12,495. Gray County's labor force was 15,373 with an unemployment rate of 3.7 percent.

County considers Lake McClellan's future

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

A meeting between Gray County commissioners and an aide to U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter (R - Amarillo) ended yesterday with the promise of further discussions on the future of Lake McClellan Recreation Area.

Ernie Houdashell, district representative for the congressman, said he would like to set up a meeting including the commissioners, Boulter and Alan Heinz of the U.S. Forestry Service, which has jurisdiction over the lake. Houdashell also said he plans to complete a survey of mineral values cleaned from the area.

The commissioners are concerned about the declining condition of the recreation area, which is mainly attributed to silt. Precinct Three Commissioner Gerald Wright also bemoaned the lack of attention given the site by the Forestry Service.

"It's unfair to the people of this county and this state — the people that use this lake," Wright said. "For years and years, there's been no money spent on this lake. If we're going to stay under their jurisdiction, I think what we need to do is to push for them to budget some money on this lake instead of Niagara Falls or some other place."

But, according to Houdashell, getting the Forestry Service to allocate more money for the site may be akin to paddling upstream. He said Heinz told him the agency has no plans for the site, although it is "open to suggestions."

Houdashell said Heinz told him removing the silt would cost $3 per yard and, in the Forestry Service's opinion, it is economically unfeasible. Also, before anything is done, the Forestry Service feels it must run studies on the ecological and economic impact of whatever is undertaken, Houdashell said.

The possibility of removing the site from the jurisdiction of the Forestry Service and placing it under more local control was discussed briefly. John Roberts, a concessionaire at the lake, wondered aloud about the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission taking it over. Commissioner Ronnie Rice said several years ago, Forestry Service officials insinuated the county was welcome to take over control of the site if it asked.

Problems at the lake were also blamed on a landowner upstream holding back too much water. Robert Payne, another concessionaire, said the main problem is getting enough water to the lake.

Wright said a solution to the water problem probably would take an agreement between the landowner, the federal soil and water conservation service and possibly the Texas Water Rights Commission.

Roberts said he is not necessarily opposed to someone trapping water.

"It's a question of whether they're doing it for one person or whether we have something for everyone," he said.

In other action, the commissioners met with two representatives of Groom Volunteer Ambulance Service who are hoping to purchase a new ambulance. Currently the service is using a 1974 Dodge van, which it plans to keep as a back-up unit.

"The old Dodge is shot," Mark Vivers of the service said. "We're approaching you today because a lot of our runs are in Gray County."

Jerry Crowell, another representative, said roughly 30 percent of the service's calls are in Gray County. He said the group currently has about $21,000 in savings and donations to be used for the new ambulance and plans to raise about $5,000 to $10,000 more.

Beyond that, an additional $12,000 is needed, he said. He requested about $4,000 from the commissioners.

County Judge Carl Kennedy said the county already has about $1,000 in federal revenue sharing money earmarked for the ambulance service, which

Congress okays budget

Lawmakers say deficit still too much

WASHINGTON (AP) — Resigned to what a leading lawmaker called "the best that can be done under the circumstances," Congress has passed a budget that reduces next year's spending by $57 billion but falls far short of the lofty deficit-reduction goals set early this year.

Heading for a month-long summer recess, there was no exultation among the senators and representatives about the final package and the $172 billion in red ink remaining for the coming fiscal year.

"Tonight, having lost the war, we're going to declare victory and go home," Rep. John E. Porter, R-Ill., said Thursday night after the budget was adopted.

And President Reagan threatened anew to use his veto if future spending bills are not pared more closely.

Congress passed a $968 billion budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, hours after negotiators settled on a fragile compromise. The House adopted it 309-119 and the Senate then voted 67-32 for approval.

It contains guidelines for $279.7 billion in savings over three years, short of the goal set by Reagan and congressional leaders at the beginning of the year to cut budget deficits in half — to $100 billion or less — by 1988. Red ink over the next three fiscal years will total $440 billion, declining only to $113 billion in fiscal 1988.

"It's the best that can be done under the circumstances," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. Though more cuts are needed, it was still the largest deficit reduction effort ever passed by Congress, he said.

The final package leaves Social Security benefits untouched and proposes no significant new taxes.

Slowing the defense spending buildup accounts for more than half the savings, but Pentagon spending would still rise with inflation to $302.5 billion next year.

A variety of domestic programs were reduced, but Congress would not follow Reagan's call to terminate Community Development Block Grants, the Small Business Administration, the Appalachian Regional Commission, Amtrak subsidies, and Urban Development Action Grants.

The budget freezes salaries of federal civilian employees next year. General revenue sharing for local government will end in fiscal 1987.

The budget is a resolution that does not go to the president, but helps guide Congress as it considers individual money bills that do go to the White House.

Senate leaders, too, had hoped for far deeper cuts in the deficit, especially in long-term liabilities. But a $338 billion deficit-reduction plan they proposed was killed by Reagan's opposition to a provision that would delay Social Security increases and a tax on oil imports.

Reagan's rebuke, which backed the position of House negotiators, cleared the way this week for agreement on a less ambitious plan that proponents found necessary, though unexciting.

"We know the product is not great, not what many of us wanted," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the top Democrat on the Senate budget panel. "But it certainly is better than nothing."

Weinberger holds little hope for relaxed ties with Soviets

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, despite his belief that President Reagan's November summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev will be useful, says the best the United States can expect in its future relations with the Soviets is a less costly military rivalry.

"The systems are dramatically different — between freedom and slavery and dictatorship," Weinberger said Thursday. "With those very profound differences, I don't speak of the problems subsiding. It's never going to be an easy, comfortable relationship."

He said Reagan's planned meeting in Geneva with Gorbachev will be important because it will provide a "forum for discussion." But he added that "a total change of behavior by the Soviets" would be required before all tensions and problems were eliminated.

"But that is obviously not in the cards," he noted.

Weinberger made the remarks in an interview with The Associated Press that touched on several major foreign and military policy problems facing the Reagan administration.

"I think the United States is far safer because we have gained a very great deal of military strength," and that the important goal in the relationship with the Soviets is to reach a "verifiable" level of equality in weaponry on both sides, he said.

On other issues, the defense secretary — Expressed fears that economic sanctions weakening the government of South Africa could lead to a worse regime — even one as bad as Iran.

— Suggested that the United States had extracted a measure of retaliation against guerrillas who killed six Americans in El Salvador by supplying intelligence that helped make possible a raid on a rebel camp.

Conservatives blame Shultz for foreign policy betrayal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has given Secretary of State George P. Shultz a new vote of confidence even as Shultz was being blamed at a meeting of leading conservatives for derailing Reagan's foreign policy.

"Our aim is to get the attention of the president and his supporters that American foreign policy is headed in a disastrous direction," said Richard Viguerie, sponsor of the day-long meeting of conservatives on Thursday.

Viguerie, publisher of Conservative Digest, said the nation's conservative leadership plans to maintain constant pressure to force changes.

But at the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan viewed Shultz as an "outstanding secretary of state. He enjoys the president's full, wholehearted support — will remain as long as he wishes to remain secretary of state."

Most of the speakers at the gathering focused their criticism of the Reagan foreign policy on Shultz and the State Department bureaucracy, which they accused of betraying Reagan's commitment to confront communism around the globe.

But the conference stopped short of a formal call for Shultz's resignation. The launching of a campaign to dump Shultz had been one aim of the gathering, but several participants expressed nervousness at becoming associated with such a move, especially since Shultz continues to enjoy Reagan's support.

Viguerie said conference organizers decided "they didn't want to get into anything at the beginning that everyone couldn't agree on."

The conference was sponsored by 15 major conservative organizations, including Conservative Digest, Conservative Caucus, the National Conservative Political Action Committee and Moral Majority. A representative of Moral Majority, Ronald Godwin, was among those expressing reservations about joining a dump Shultz movement.

Lewis, Hobby hit FERC ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Gib Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby today asked the Texas Railroad Commission to intervene and try to stop the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission from "usurping" the state's right to interpret its own oil and gas laws.

The FERC recently upheld an administrative law judge's decision that said 35 independent Panhandle oilmen illegally sold natural gas from what the Texas Railroad Commission had classified as oil wells.

The ruling favored out-of-state natural gas purchasers who contended from interstate commerce and federal pricing regulations.

In a letter to the three Railroad Commission members, Hobby and Lewis today noted that the FERC decision could cost Texas up to $100 million.

"This gives us great concern, not only because of the tight budgetary matters but the loss of power to the federal government," the two wrote.

They said failure of the commission to intervene "will allow the federal government to set a precedent that would take regulatory authority away from the state."

The legislative officers said they aren't taking sides in the case. But they did argue that it is a state issue which should be decided by a state agency, not federal regulators.

"This is a matter that Texas has always fought for — the right to make the decisions on state energy matters," their letter said.

They asked the Railroad Commission to hold a statewide hearing on the state issues involved in the gas case.

"It is our belief that time is critical for the Railroad Commission to act in preserving the right and the power of the state of Texas to decide these most critical issues," Lewis and Hobby wrote.

The group could have immediately. The commission is currently drawing up the 1986 budget and the commissioners indicated they may budget more money for the service.

Wright spoke in behalf of the Groom service, saying the Pampa Ambulance Service is not too familiar with the rural county area around Grandview. He said about 90 percent of his constituents in that area said they preferred the Groom service because it is more familiar with their area.

In other business, the commissioners: — agreed to donate $1,000 to the High Plains Food Bank of Amarillo, which will most likely come out of revenue sharing funds.

— decided to write a letter to the state highway commission changing the spelling of Boydston on signs along Interstate 40 to Boydston, the correct spelling of the name of the man who founded the county.

— tabled a decision on providing an office for Margie Prestige, First Precinct Justice of the Peace in Lefors, until the Aug. 15 meeting when Commissioner O.L. Presley is scheduled to deliver a report on the project.

— received a request from Kennedy that budgets be turned in by Aug. 15. Valuation for tax purposes this year is $1.398 billion.

PARKING HOT LAKE — Steam rises from the engine of a car as it is flooded in the parking lot of the Cheyenne Civic Center Thursday night. A torrential storm pounded the Cheyenne area for more than three hours Thursday night, dumping more than six inches of rain, four inches of hail and three tornadoes, forcing people to flee to emergency shelters.

Storm devastates Cheyenne, four dead and four missing

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A thunderstorm that pummeled Cheyenne sent cars and trucks floating down streets filled with 6 feet of water, tore telephone booths from their bases and left at least four people dead and four missing, authorities said today.
 Among the missing were a deputy and a little girl he tried to rescue.
 Officials said it was one of the worst thunderstorms ever to hit Wyoming's capital.
 "It's the one-in-100-year storm," said Jack Daseler of the National Weather Service.
 The slow-moving storm spawned three tornadoes, dumped more than 6 inches of rain in 3 1/2 hours Thursday night and buried parts of the city under 6 inches of hail that left the ground looking like a winter storm had passed by.
 Scores of people were forced to flee to emergency shelters. The police department was forced out of its command post, and the 911 emergency number was temporarily short-circuited.

"This is the worst flood I've ever seen," said Laramie County Commissioner Jeff Ketchum while standing outside the mobile headquarters the police moved into after a power transformer at their station failed.
 "I've lived here all my life, and this is the worst disaster I've ever seen," he said.
 Water behind an earthen dam five miles west of the southeastern Wyoming city were receding today, but officials who had feared the dam might collapse faced a National Weather Service forecast of more thunderstorms.
 If the dam burst, it could send water pouring down Crow Creek through the F.E. Warren Air Force Base and into Cheyenne's south side, the weather service said. However, it would take water over an hour to reach the city.
 Mobile home parks in south Cheyenne were evacuated as a precaution.
 "We have four fatalities now and we have four known missing people, including one of our deputies," said Laramie County Sheriff's Capt. Walt Vanatta. The deputy, whose name was not released, had been tied to a utility pole while rescuing three people from a partially submerged car.
 "He got two people out and went back for a little girl," Vanatta said. "He and the little girl were both washed away."
 Searchers walked the banks along Dry Creek, but muddy terrain and darkness prompted authorities to call off the search until daybreak.
 Gov. Ed Herschler put the National Guard on alert and two 2 1/2-ton trucks were used to help evacuate people from flooded homes to shelters.
 About 50 people sought shelter at the Army and Air National Guard armories, said 1st Lt. Rosalind Schliske. One woman reported her brick home destroyed by a "wall of water," Schliske said.
 The storm hit shortly after 6 p.m. Thursday and dumped 6.06 inches of rain on the city by 9:45 p.m., said forecaster Christopher Scott.

Israelis bomb leftist headquarters

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes today bombed the east Lebanon headquarters of a leftist group that has claimed responsibility for seven car bomb attacks in Israel's southern Lebanese security zone.
 The group that was attacked said at least two people were killed and four wounded, but the Christian Voice of Lebanon radio reported 15 killed and 20 wounded.
 Israeli military sources said a squadron of jets attacked the headquarters of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party in the Bekaa Valley town of Chitaura, located on the Beirut-Damascus highway about 10 miles west of the Syrian border.
 In Tel Aviv, the military said the planes returned safely to base, and reported accurate hits.
 Habib Kayrouz, a spokesman for the Syrian Social Nationalist Party in Beirut, said at least two people were killed in the raid. Party sources said four were hurt, including two who remained trapped beneath chunks of concrete, metal and standstone.
 Kayrouz said the building normally is staffed by 15-20 people, and that it was heavily damaged.
 He told The Associated Press the party would strike in Israeli territory to retaliate for the air raid. "Our operations will not be limited to Israeli troops in Lebanon. We shall carry them across the border and strike into the heart of Israel," he said.

 Party sources told reporters at the scene that party finance chief Hafez Sayegh and four other senior officials had left the building for a meeting five minutes before the attack.
 Sayegh said the raid came as no surprise. "We've been expecting Israel to attack after the escalation of our struggle against its occupation," he said.
 The Syrian Socialist National Party has claimed responsibility for seven suicide car bomb attacks against the Israeli army and the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army militia.

Boulter will visit area towns next week

MIAMI — The 1986 Federal Budget will be one of the items 13th District Congressman Beau Boulter will discuss at a Town meeting at 7 p.m. Monday at the Miami Community Center.
 "Over the past seven months, these meetings have been central in keeping me in touch with the people in the 13th District," the Amarillo Republican said. "We've talked about everything, from farm problems to the cost of living adjustments for social security."
 "When I am in Miami, I want to talk first about the 1986 budget, then get into whatever the folks there want to talk about," he added.
 Boulter was the only freshman Republican to gain a seat on the House Budget Committee and was appointed to the task of hammering out the differences between the budgets passed by the house and senate.

"Needless to say, the budget process is complicated," Boulter said. "So far, our conference committee has not broken the deadlock. I'd like to hear what the people of Roberts County have to say and what they'd like to see changed."
 Boulter will speak to the Eastern Panhandle Cattleman's Club Wednesday at Maxey's Steak House in Wheeler.

Sakowitz stores seek bankruptcy protection

HOUSTON (AP) — Sakowitz Inc., an 83-year-old family operated flock of chic specialty stores, says it will seek federal court protection from its creditors in hopes of turning the financially troubled business around.

The Houston-based company announced Thursday it would seek protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code rather than sell to a competitor.

"Given the continuing energy crisis and locations of our stores in natural resource-related or dependent communities, many of the out-of-town stores have not yet had the opportunity to grow to a profitable maturity," said company chairman Robert T. Sakowitz, grandson of one the business' founders.

Sakowitz officials said the company filed a petition with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court seeking time to scale down its operation, reorganize and return to profitability.

Four subsidiaries — Sakowitz of Amarillo, Sakowitz of Arizona, Sakowitz of Gulfgate and Sakowitz of Oklahoma Inc. — also sought protection under Chapter 11.

"In order to bridge the current and near-term projected economic conditions, we feel it necessary to alter the scope of our operations while under court protection," Sakowitz said.

Robert Sakowitz said he hopes the petition will enable the company to avert liquidation or sale of the firm, motions that he said the board of directors has considered in recent months.

"For a business that's been around as long as we have, it was a difficult decision to file for protection and to tell creditors to sit tight while we reorganize. But we can turn it around and we intend to do so, just like Chrysler and Continental Airlines," he said.

The company, which employs about 1,500 people, currently operates 17 stores and six boutiques in Houston, Dallas, Midland and Amarillo; Tulsa, Okla.

and Scottsdale, Ariz.

Sales for Sakowitz Inc., its subsidiaries and affiliates exceeded $120 million in the financial year ending Jan. 31, according to a company statement. The company incurred substantial losses during the period, the release said.

Court papers indicated the business' 20 largest unsecured creditors included Kensington Limited Partnership, of Tulsa, $3 million; Evans Inc. of Chicago, $570,702; Estee Lauder Group of Dallas, $290,233; and US Telecom of Dallas, $252,070. Documents also showed loans totaling $27 million from five banks.

Stores outside the Houston area, as well as two within the city, will be closely evaluated for profitability and some probably will be closed, Sakowitz said.

He said the company expects to file a reorganization plan within six months and may talk to investors, but "right now we don't have anyone."

Robert Sakowitz, 45, will remain chairman and chief executive officer during the reorganization.

The family business was opened by Sakowitz' grandfather and great uncle in 1902 in Galveston and soon became known as a conservative, carriage-trade operation for well-heeled, better-income customers.

The company moved to Houston in 1915 after a hurricane wiped out the Galveston operation.

The business later passed to Sakowitz' father, Bernard, and then to Robert Sakowitz in 1975.

Other family-owned stores that flourished from before the Civil War through World War II were swallowed by the giant conglomerates. Among the ranks was long-time arch-rival, Neiman-Marcus of Dallas.

Robert Sakowitz said it has become more and more difficult each year for the company to remain independent.

Police investigate possible link between wives' slaying

HOUSTON (AP) — Police were investigating the bizarre similarities between the murders of a Houston businessman's first and second wives, whose mysterious deaths occurred 3½ years apart.

The body of Paula Goss, 42, was found about midnight Wednesday in a utility room of the southwest Houston home she shared with her husband, former dinner theater owner Dean Goss.

Police still have not solved the March 16, 1982 murder of Goss' first wife, Elaine, 43, who was found dead in an upstairs bedroom in the same house.

Both women had been shot in the back of the head. Paula Goss' throat had been slashed and she had been stabbed in the back and beaten, police said.

"Same house, same family — it's very unusual," said Houston police Sgt. J.C. Mosier.

Capt. Bobby Adams, when asked whether police believe the two killings are connected, replied, "We can't speculate on that at this time."

However, Mosier said, "We're certainly looking into the possibility they're connected. If there's no evidence, as yet, that they're connected."

Dean Goss Sr., 48, operated a Houston dinner theater from 1968 to 1980 and has been involved in several restaurant ventures. On Thursday he was in Methodist Hospital, where he was admitted Sunday for surgery to remove a benign tumor.

He was "in a state of shock" Thursday and "he's sedated pretty heavily," said Thano Dameris, a Houston attorney who described himself as a close friend of Goss.

Paula Goss apparently had left her husband at the hospital about 5 p.m. Wednesday and apparently had just walked into her house when she was attacked, Mosier said. Her body was discovered by her stepson, Dean Goss Jr., 24, when he returned home around midnight, police said.

Mosier said robbery was ruled out as a motive for Paula Goss' murder because police found no sign of forced entry into the house and nothing inside appeared disturbed.

"She was wearing all kinds of expensive jewelry and her purse was found near her body," Mosier said.

The Harris County Medical Examiner's office performed an autopsy on Mrs. Goss' body Thursday, but withheld a ruling in the death.

Police said that in both of the Goss women's slayings, apparently nothing was removed from the house and no evidence of a struggle was found.

Dean Goss found Elaine Goss in the upstairs study of their home March 16, 1982. Police said she had been shot in the back of the head with a 22-caliber gun.

Elaine Goss' parents, Henry and Virginia Richmond, said they were shocked to hear their son-in-law's second wife had been killed.

"I'm so weak I can barely walk," said Virginia Richmond. "I genuinely loved her. She was so good to my grandchildren."

Asked whether he felt his daughter's death and the killing of Paula Goss were connected, Henry Richmond said: "God, it sure looks that way."

Paula Goss' slaying was the most recent in a series of tragedies to strike the Goss family during the past few years.

The family's home had been burglarized at least two other times, relatives said.

During one break-in, police said, Goss accidentally shot himself while attempting to chase away an intruder. He told police he slipped at the foot of a stairway in the home and the gun discharged, wounding him in the chest.

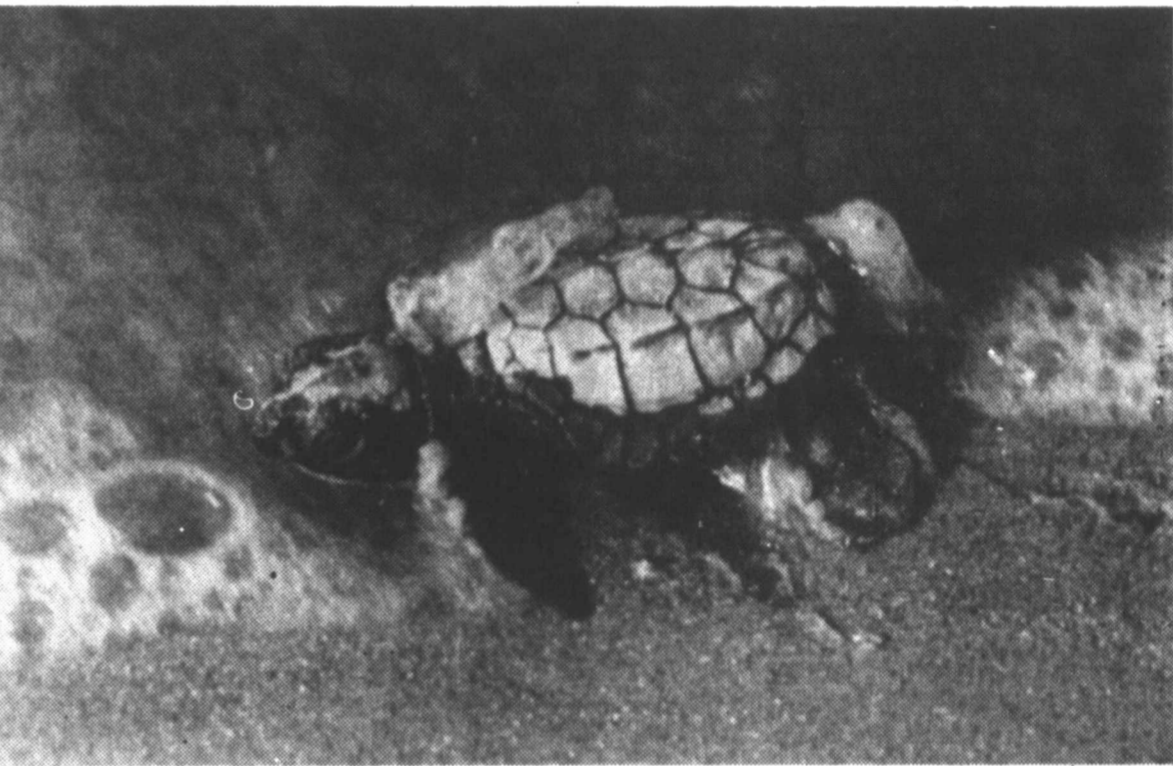

Paula Goss had a broken arm, which was in a sling, when she was killed. A friend told the Houston Post that Mrs. Goss said she injured her arm when she fell down the stairway at the couple's home.

About a year ago, Goss told police that vandals had splashed paint throughout the interior of a restaurant he had recently opened.

Police said an employee at the restaurant was found dead in the trunk of a car, but they refused to elaborate.

However, Merva Brown told the Post the slain employee was her husband, James J. Brown, a manager at the Cattleman's Cove restaurant.

Brown, 49, was found dead July 6, 1984. Mrs. Brown said his murder remains unsolved.

GUMS UP PLANS — Ridley turtles, an endangered breed of turtle, have been spotted in Corpus Christi Bay, causing some problems with possible landmass project plans being made there. Project moves at turtle pace

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Recent sightings of an endangered species of sea turtle along the Gulf Coast have forced the Army Corps of Engineers to delay for at least six weeks its plans to build an eight-acre, $3.9 million project to include shops and a civic aquarium.

Fishermen have reported catching the Kemp's Ridley sea turtle — the most endangered of all sea turtles — off Sunfish Island in Corpus Christi Bay. The turtles also were reported to have washed up on shore last month.

Only 5,000 to 6,000 of the world's smallest sea turtle are known to exist, and the Gulf coastline along Mexico's state of Tamaulipas is the only known nesting site of the species known to biologists.

Thomas Rennie, project manager, said that under the Endangered Species Act the Corps is required to ask for an official biological opinion from the National Marine Fisheries Service in St. Petersburg, Fla. on how the landmass project will affect the endangered sea turtles.

The Office of Protected Species and Habitat with the NMFS in Washington, D.C., will issue the opinion, which will influence the future of the proposed seaside development, Rennie said.

"All of our plans have been pushed back about six weeks, unless we get the opinion sooner. The sooner we get it, the sooner we can move on the permit," Rennie told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times.

"Although we've asked for an expeditious review, it may take up to six weeks for the opinion to get back to us," he said.

If Corpus Christi Bay is found to be a critical habitat area for the Kemp's Ridley turtle, future development in Corpus Christi Bay could be halted, said Charles Oravetz, chief of the protected species management branch of the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Corpus Christi recently was the winner in a hotly contested bid to be the homeport for the Navy's restored battleship U.S.S. Wisconsin. Future deepening of the ship channel for the Port of Corpus Christi and facilities to house the battleship could be affected, Oravetz said.

But Oravetz does not think there will be severe repercussions for Corpus Christi.

"There's always the possibility a turtle could be run over by a ship, but it's remote. All projects in the bay probably would have to proceed in a manner without jeopardizing the existing species," Oravetz said.

At the very worst, he said, the opinion from his agency will probably require developers to take measures to ensure the sea turtles in the bay are not jeopardized. Specifically, more cautious methods of dredging the bay would have to be implemented, he said.

"Based on the information I have seen and heard, it doesn't appear the bay is a major nesting area for the Ridelys," Oravetz said. "They've probably always been there."

The U.S. and Mexico are hoping to create a second nesting site on the Padre Island National Seashore near Corpus Christi. For several years, eggs from the endangered turtles have been transplanted from nesting sites in Mexico to the National Seashore Beach to develop the site.

Ed Klima, director of the NMFS laboratory in Galveston, said all of the sea turtles captured in the bay have been juveniles, many of them wild.

New conception method produces baby

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The first baby in the United States to result from a new fertilization method was born this week, researchers at the University of Texas Health Science Center said.

The 6-pound, 4-ounce girl was born Monday at Methodist Hospital.

The infant, Amanda Lynn Catchings, is the daughter of Gary and Christy Catchings.

She was born after the Catchings participated in the Gamete Intra-Fallopian Transfer research program at the medical school.

The first births ever as a result of the research came in April when twins conceived under the UTHSC program were born in Europe.

The Catchings were among ten couples in the first series of GIFT trials begun last fall.

Two other women became pregnant during that series but did not carry to term. UTHSC officials retrieved from the ovaries, they are mixed with sperm and incubated for up to 72 hours.

The eggs are then placed in the uterus where they must finish the maturation process usually accomplished in the Fallopian tubes.

Officials said GIFT promises to be simpler and less expensive because it is a one-step process.

The IVF procedure requires two separate steps. After the eggs are

You can just call her Red

EDITOR'S NOTE: Managing Editor Wally Simmons, who normally writes the Friday column, is on vacation, so this week a staff member, who normally spends most of her time behind a camera, is filling the spot.

Early in the summer of 1952 a drought depleted the water supply in the west Texas town of Hamlin where my family lived. The city was forced to bring in water with tank trucks and rationing was severe.

My father decided it would be much simpler to send his family of females, heavy water users all, to stay with my grandmother in San Francisco until the rains came once again.

He delivered us to the Santa Fe station in Sweetwater where Mom, my two older sisters and I boarded the train for the long trip westward. This was during the Korean War and there were servicemen scattered along the length of the train, including six additional troop cars.

In order to reach the dining car, we had to pass through all six of the troop cars. Along the way some soldier said, "Hey, Red!", and I swiveled in my mother's arms to see who called.

At the age of five months I knew my name was Red.

I'll answer to Red anytime and it won't make me angry (though when I was a third grader, a kid named Joe Poe made a crack about my freckles. I took up my lunch box, a new carton of Crayolas and stomped home.) My Dad always called me Red and when I got to high school, the coaches and band director picked it up; before long that was all I heard. Once, as a teenager living in Skellytown, I found a letter in our family mail box addressed to Red. No last name and no box number.

During my wedding, the judge said to my husband-to-be, "Will you take Deborah..." and he said, "Who?" When my son was a toddler, he would refer to me as Red, thinking folks wouldn't know who he was talking about if he said Mom.

I have a lifetime of friends who know me as Red and I bet half of them could not tell you what my full name is. Then there is the man here in town, who, not feeling comfortable addressing me as Red, and could not remember Debby (which is how I first introduced myself to him) calls me Betty instead.

I usually identify myself as Deborah and when I get a byline with one of my photographs it will say, "By Deborah Hendrick," but if you see me around town or need to call me at the paper and can't remember my name, well...you can call me Red.

VOA plans program on border city

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Reporters from Voice of America say they plan to tell about 120 million people around the world the "fascinating" story of this border city.

"In the case of Texarkana, you've got a situation where a city is literally on the border of two states," said Dick Bertel, one of the coordinators of a new Voice of America van that began its journey around the first of February.

"When you try to explain that to people overseas, where borders don't cross, it's a fascinating story," Bertel told the Texarkana Gazette.

Voice of America reporters have scheduled visits to the Bi-State Justice Building and Perot Theatre. Three reporters will also search for other stories during a tour of the city by R.E. "Swede" Lee, Chamber of Commerce executive vice president.

Bertel said the visit to the justice building results from his being "intrigued... (that) people can be tried from two different states in the same building."

"I'm not sure how that crosses over. I'm sure our reporters can bring that out," he said.

But the show won't "just concentrate on the fact that here's a city that's a tourist attraction because it's built on the state line. It also has a very fine theater," said Bertel.

Economy being held hostage

By WARRENT T. BROOKES

With inflation rates now at mid-1960s levels of 1-3 percent, Americans are entitled to wonder why mortgages are still at 12 percent, and consumer loans at 18-21 percent.

Or why it is that when the interest rates banks pay for money (certificates of deposit - CDs) have fallen nearly 35 percent in the last eight months, the average loan rates banks are charging have fallen less than 15 percent.

The answers to these thorny questions are at the heart of the chasmic rupture that finally broke into the open on June 20, between Federal Reserve chairman Paul Volcker and Reagan-appointed Vice Chairman Preston Martin.

Superficially the dispute was over Martin's curious decision to "go public" with his support for "a new look" at the way we are now handling the international debt crisis, and, by influence, his gentle knocking of the present "crisis management" approach of Volcker and the International Monetary Fund.

But the dispute is much more fundamental: Martin (along with most classic free-market economists) believes the money and banking system exist to serve the economy - while Volcker and the Fed bureaucracy believe the economy must be manipulated to preserve the soundness of the money and banking system.

One sees money as merely a medium of exchange, a purely technical instrument to improve the efficiency of the real market for goods and services - the other sees it as the fundamental lever by which the economy is to be controlled - by banks.

Martin knows from first-hand experience that under Paul Volcker the U.S. economy has made more fully hostage to the banking system than any time in its history. Just read the minutes of the Fed's 1984 Open Market Committee (FOMC) meetings when the Board deliberately pushed the economy back toward the brink of recession.

For example, back on Aug. 21, 1984, with the recovery already showing signs of serious faltering because of the Fed's excessive tightening, "some members continue to view the risks mainly in the direction of MORE RAPID EXPANSION..." and they voted to keep interest rates high deliberately to hold the recovery down.

On Oct. 2, 1984, with the economy demonstrably falling flat on its face, the FOMC worried that "appreciably lesser restraint (of credit) might well induce a sharp decline in interest rates...and an unsustainably strong rebound in economic activity."

The net result of this kind of secret economic policy making by unelected and unaccountable central banks has been a combination of excessively high real interest rates and an excessively strong dollar, whose unprecedented 67 percent rise under Volcker was at least in part engineered to help debtor-nations compete more favorably against U.S. producers, and pay off their bad debts to the big banks at the expense of U.S. workers and farmers.

It is no coincidence that the moment Martin chose to speak out, Volcker was in Tokyo where, under his leadership, the Group of 10 nations gave their ringing continued endorsement to the present floating rate exchange system. This system has been in existence since 1971-72 when the Nixon administration abandoned the Bretton Woods Agreement which had kept the world's money and banking system on a loose tether to gold since 1945.

That decision wiped out money's final connection to real goods and services through gold, and made it necessary for the Fed to attempt to give paper money the value it doesn't intrinsically have, by periodic bouts of scarcity and tight money-recessions.

The overall effects of the 1970's world-wide drift to fiat money controlled by central banks were both disastrously obvious (soaring inflation and interest rates) and institutionally dangerous, as the power and focus of the world economy shifted from goods producers to money manipulators, i.e. central bankers.

No wonder that even as industrial productivity and profitability began to sputter, the paper profitability of the nation's and the world's banking systems began to soar, even in the midst of more and more problems of credit-worthiness.

The primary focus on the Fed is not, after all, the economy's health, but banking profitability. And with its ascendancy over the last fifteen years, not only have interest rates soared to unprecedented levels but the "spread" between the rate at which banks borrow money from us and the rate at which they lend it rose 300 percent, from 80 basis points (0.8 percentage points) in the mid-1960s to 340 basis points (3.4 percentage points) in the 1980s.

As a result the financial industry's share of total profits in the U.S. economy has increased nearly 30 percent, while at the same time, through the so-called deregulation of 1980, the Federal Reserve banking systems share of financial profits has tripled.

Last month, Citicorp, Manufacturers Hanover, and Mellon Bank reported huge first-half profit increases of 23 to 51 percent, when most major industrial firms (like IBM) were reporting declines.

This is why the greatest impediment to monetary reform, (making money subordinate to economic policy, instead of its governing instrument), is the Fed, and its big-bank members.

Live Aid relief effort hampered by politics

The Live Aid concerts in London and Philadelphia were smashing successes, raising a reported $70 million for African famine relief. This amount, added to the estimated $1 billion in aid already donated or pledged by private agencies and governments around the world, should help save many thousands of lives.

But, as the respected London Economist notes in its current survey of Africa's food crisis, aid efforts are still being hampered by mismanagement and frustrated by political interference. Then too, free food may no longer be the best response to hunger in some of Africa's 20 poorest countries.

Start with mismanagement. So much donated food is rotting on the docks of Ethiopia's three ports that United Nations officials have suspended additional deliveries until the backlog is cleared. Some of the donated trucks and four-wheel-drive vehicles that could be hauling this food out to the feeding camps are sitting on the docks as well, awaiting some customs bureaucrat's signature or stamp of acceptance.

Less flagrant but still disheartening examples of "mismanagement" also afflict many of the aid efforts elsewhere in Africa. Typically, this mismanagement is less the fault of those giving aid than of the governments receiving it. In any event, the all-too-frequent result is that aid is wasted and many who need it nevertheless go without.

But at least these administrative shortcomings are usually not deliberate, unlike in Ethiopia. Political interference is, which is one reason it is so unforgivable. The Marxist government of Ethiopia still gives Soviet ships delivering arms priority for unloading over Western ships delivering grain. Worse, the Ethiopian regime continues to deny food to Eritrea and Tigre, rebellious provinces where several million people are starving.

The Ethiopian government has apparently engaged in deadly blackmail. It has exacted a tax of $12.60 a ton on food arriving at its ports. If the shippers cannot pay the tax, the food is turned away. Ethiopia's communist government has already raised $15 million through this outrageous method of extortion. Meanwhile, as the food rots off shore, thousands more starve.

Donated trucks that could be delivering food in Ethiopia are instead being used by the regime in the forced relocation of civilians suspected of sympathizing with insurgents. In Sudan, the new government seems decidedly apathetic about arranging the delivery of food to areas in the south where guerrillas are active. In all, civil conflicts are disrupting food distribution in Mozambique, Chad and Angola in addition to Ethiopia and the Sudan. And in almost every case, the villain is a government that would rather see innocent civilians starve than risk feeding insurgents.

This hardly adds up, of course, to a case for withholding aid. It does suggest the need for better, more farsighted planning plus more pressure on some African governments to stop using food as a weapon. These are ways to assure that aid dollars are not wasted and that such outpourings of generosity as the response to the Live Aid concerts actually accomplish as much good as possible.

A hand for Awesome Jim

Montreal, in the National League, has been playing good baseball this year. (1985)

So has Toronto in the American League.

And Toronto is going to play even better someday; they have drafted southpaw pitcher Jim Abbott.

Let me tell you about awesome Jim.

He developed his fastball at the age of eight throwing against the driveway wall of his family home until the bricks came loose.

His fastball has since been clocked at 90 miles an hour.

At Flint Northern High School in Michigan this past season Jim averaged two strikeouts per inning.

He also pitched four no-hitters.

Predictably, the big league scouts converged.

But then guess what!

In addition to his phenomenal pitching - by season end he was hitting also...I mean batting .433 with six home runs!

And he is barely 17.

Plenty of time, he says.

So, though he has been drafted by Toronto, he is likely first to accept a scholarship at the University of Michigan.

All the scouts who have seen awesome Jim Abbott thus far are astonished and salivating. Those who have only heard the rumblings and the rumors want to know - how does he do it??

Well, this is THE REST OF THE STORY...

Awesome Jim developed a most extraordinary pitching style - which involves actually wearing his glove on his pitching hand.

No, really!

Jim hurls one of those devastating pitches - and then deftly slips his left hand into the glove a fraction of a second after he releases the ball.

It happens so fast it's rather like a magician's sleight-of-hand. The ball takes off and presto! - the glove is on his left hand for retrieving return throws from the catcher, for fielding line drives or shagging hot bunts.

This unorthodox method is so effective that any bunt is considered an automatic out - against awesome Jim Abbott.

He does not necessarily recommend other pitchers wear their gloves on their pitching hands.

It's simply something that works for Jim.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Aug. 2, the 214th day of 1985. There are 151 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 2, 1876, frontiersman "Wild Bill" Hickok was shot from behind and killed while playing poker at a saloon in Deadwood, S.D. The man who shot Hickok, Jack McCall, was later hanged. When he died, Hickok was holding two aces and two eights - a combination that became known as the "Dead Man's Hand."

On this date:

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev met for a second time in Helsinki, Finland, then spoke afterward of progress in arms talks.

Five years ago: A bomb exploded in the main railway station in Bologna, Italy, killing 85 people in what Italian authorities believe was an attack by rightists.

Where's the principle, Uncle Sam?

By Don Graff

Maybe it's a public relations problem.

It could be that New Zealand simply doesn't have adequate professional help of that nature in Washington. Possibly it has no one at all, not previously having been in noticeable need of assistance with its image.

Well, it's a thought, one prompted by a revealing Washington Post report about another country entirely. Seething South Africa.

According to the Post, South African interests in this country are being furthered by, at last count, 31 agents registered with the Justice Department. The South African representation is high-powered and bipartisan - not, one might suspect in the latter respect, entirely by accident.

The law firm of John P. Sears, for example, is on Pretoria's payroll for a half million dollars a year. You may have heard the name before. Sears was Ronald Reagan's manager at the beginning of the 1980 presidential campaign.

Then there is the firm headed by former Sen. George A. Smathers (D-Fla.). Its reported annual retainer is somewhat less - $300,000 - but that could be, as they say, politics. Wait until '88.

So what do South Africa's public relations arrangements have to do with New Zealand? Nothing, directly. But they provide an interesting perspective on Washington's strikingly different attitudes toward the two countries - relative restraint on worsening racial repression in South Africa and outrage at New Zealand's declining a port call by a U.S. warship that may or may not have been carrying nuclear weapons.

That incident occurred, you may recall, back in February. But it is not being diplomatically forgotten. Secretary of State George Shultz, on a recent Pacific tour (New Zealand pointedly omitted from the itinerary), continued to hammer away.

It is, as Shultz sees it, a matter of principle. By its uncooperative behavior, New Zealand has weakened allied unity, injected a new element of risk and raised basic questions about "responsibilities in the modern world."

There are certain similarities between New Zealand and South Africa from the American point of view. Both are the offspring of a European civilization that is also the American heritage. Both have been American allies in the major wars of this century.

But there are also significant differences. Shultz acknowledges that, as uncooperative as New Zealand may be for the moment choose to be, it remains "a country that has the same basic values we do."

It is questionable whether the same can seriously be said of a South Africa that, driven by its racial obsession, presents an ever more brutal face to its own people and the world.

There is, however, something else to be said about South Africa in that context. There's no danger of any problems about port calls there. U.S. warships haven't been putting in in South Africa since 1969 because of the treatment encountered by black crew members.

There is yet another difference between the two countries, the most important one. South Africa is a deepening crisis preparing to explode. New Zealand remains a stable, functioning democracy, an asset rather than a threat to the free world.

Washington may have its reasons for treating two old allies so differently. Public relations probably has nothing to do with it.

But neither, clearly, has principle.

Carry-all picnic basket liner

By STEVIE BALDWIN
Our picnic basket had not only seen better days, but earlier days. My husband Ed claimed no ant would crawl near it, and the kids said we were the laughing stock of state parks nationwide. Everyone except me began to cast wistful glances at those huge, plastic wonder-coolers.

I pointed out that plastic wonder coolers take up so much room in the car that some of the picnickers have to stay home. The vote to fix up the old basket was, naturally, unanimous.

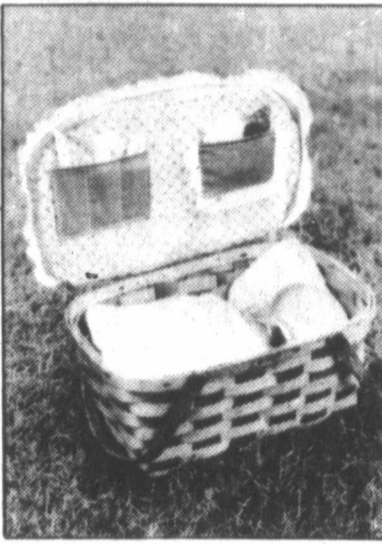

I made a defect - hiding, carry-all basket liner out of calico to cover the top and bottom of the hinged lid. The cover is made in two separate sections, with a simple patchwork design on the top section. Two pockets are sewn to the calico bottom section for convenient storage of picnic utensils and napkins. The cover stretches easily over the lid, yet remains removable for washing.

You can easily make your own carry-all picnic basket liner, using our fully illustrated plans which include a complete materials list, detailed cutting instructions, step-by-step assembly diagrams, full-size patterns, and directions for altering the size to fit your basket.

If you would like to order the plans, please specify Project No. 2612-2 and send $4.95. Mail your order to Makin' Things, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla., 74008.

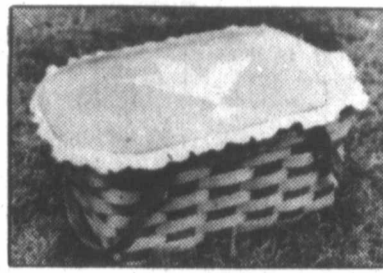

The amount of material you use to make your basket liner depends upon the size of your basket. You can use any fabric you wish. To make our basket liner, I used two pieces of calico, each about 12x20 inches. You'll also need 2 1/2 yards of one-inch-wide gathered eyelet trim.

Two pockets for utensils and napkins are sewn into the bottom lid cover. I topstitched through the pocket and lid cover to divide the pocket into three sections. The napkin pocket is rounded at the bottom and trimmed with eyelet.

Sew the top and bottom lid pieces together, leaving one long edge open. Press the seam allowances to the inside along the open edge. Turn the liner right side out and slip it over the basket lid. I used two pieces of nylon fastener strip on each side to keep the open edge of the liner closed.

Dear Abby

Woman wants drunken friend to become her sober lover

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and head over heels in love with a man who is 35. We've been dating for four months and I can't get him off my mind. I wish I could, because he told me right from the start that he didn't want any commitments. He was married to his ex-wife twice and says he is still in love with her and probably always will be.

Lately when we go to a nightclub, he drinks too much and I end up driving him home and putting him to bed. When he's drunk he says he's falling in love with me. Once he asked me to move in with him. I told him to ask me again when he was sober. He never did.

I really care a lot for this guy, Abby. How can I either get him to love me enough (when he's sober) to marry me, or get him out of my system?

told, "Take what you want and toss the rest."

As he was sorting through them, he found $2,000 in bills stashed in the socks.

We immediately contacted the executor and returned the money. And would you believe, the deceased's only child (a married daughter, living in another state) never as much as said "Thank you."

More surprising, nearly everyone we told said, "You should have kept the money. It was yours."

What do you think?

R.M., BLOOMINGTON, ILL.
DEAR R.M.: Your first impulse was right. For you to have kept the money the old gentleman had been literally socking away would have been dishonest.

DEAR ABBY: Recently one of your readers wrote, "America is the only country in the world where mothers will drive their kids to the YMCA so they can get some exercise."

Well, I want to tell you that America is the only civilized country where parents let their kids get up before dawn to deliver newspapers.

I was born in Europe, and when I went back there and told people this, they couldn't believe it!

JEANNE DUPREY, SEATTLE

DEAR JEANNE: Why is that so hard to believe? Many of America's most successful businessmen started out as young boys with a paper route. What better way to learn responsibility, the value of a dollar and the importance of sticking with the job come rain or shine.

Experts give tomato tips

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — If you're hoping for a tasty crop of tomatoes from the back yard, don't over-fertilize. That advice comes from two food scientists writing in a recent issue of the Journal of Agricultural and Food Chemistry.

Dr. Natholyn Harris and Dr. Deborah Wright of Florida State University in Tallahassee have been looking at the effect of growing conditions on tomato flavor.

"The more fertilizer you add, the more tomatoes you get, up to a point," says Wright. "But you may end up with a lot of tomatoes with no taste. Or worse yet — bad taste."

The amount of fertilizer that provided the best-tasting tomatoes was about the same as that recommended by county agents, according to the authors. Taste tests indicated that when more fertilizer was used the flavor was noticeably reduced.

Aside from growing conditions, which the authors say need much more study, there are several other factors that can significantly affect tomato flavor.

"For best results, let them ripen on the vine," the authors suggest. "One reason that some of the tomatoes in supermarkets have little taste is because they are picked green before being shipped to other parts of the country."

Gena on Genealogy

By GENA WALLS
Early settlers into OHIO came from all directions. Many floated the Ohio River on flatboats until 1812 when the first continuous road through the state was developed. The road, known as "Zane's Trace" was a key factor in the growth of the area with people stopping to homestead sections of land.

From the War of 1812 and continuing into the Civil War period, many settlers migrated from North and South Carolina as well as Georgia. Another overland route was the National Road.

Many records for Ohio are available to researchers; they vary depending on the county and the time period. Most county officials are helpful and willing to search the records for a small fee. Some cities, including Cleveland, Dayton, Toledo and Youngstown, have birth, death and marriage records filed with the Department of Health. They charge both a search and a copying fee. However, if the record is not located, the search fee is returned.

If you need marriages from several counties, try the Western Reserve Historical Society Library, 10825 East Blvd., Cleveland, Ohio, 44106. Most of the available county marriage records have been copied and are available through the society. I do not know what fee is charged. Remember to include that self-addressed, stamped envelope. For best results, limit your request to not more than three items in each correspondence.

I have a backlog of correspondence that I am trying to answer now. If you have written, please be patient and you will receive an answer. I do answer all letters that include a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

If you have a suggestion for the column, I would like to hear from you. Tell us about your family reunion! Newspaper articles make great "memories" for the family history book.

My new address is Gena Walls, 8825 S.W. Maverick Terrace, No. 1009, Beaverton, Ore., 97005.

In the past, you have frequently shown a consideration toward others without thought of reward or favor. In the year ahead, your unselfish gestures will be repaid in full.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Conditions in general tend to favor you today. Even though the beginnings may be questionable, the ending will be all for which you hoped. Trying to patch up a romance? The Matchmaker set can help you understand what it might take to make the relationship work. To get yours, mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even if there is someone else at a party you attend today who you'd like to get to know better, be more attentive and considerate to the person you came with.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) In competition today, Lady Luck may deal you more aces than she does others. Use your advantages, instead of taking them for granted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Things that affect your self-interests should go smoothly today. This is because you'll benefit from past experiences and won't repeat mistakes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Joint ventures look promising today, not so much from your efforts but from actions taken by one with whom you're involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Partnership arrangements are favored today, provided you're teamed up with a cohort whose aims and ideas are in complete harmony with yours.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Opportunities to advance your ambitious interests will prevail today. Once you spot the "go" signal, swing promptly into action.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 19) Today your influence over your peer group will be quite strong. Even those who usually try to run the show will look to you for leadership.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If you have special needs today, go to family members or relatives instead of outsiders. State your case without holding back any facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Mixing with a large group isn't apt to bring you the happiness you require today. Instead, you'll be happy being alone with one who enjoys you as much as you do him or her.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep your attention focused on financial or career matters today. Where others enjoy levity, you'll get a bigger charge out of adding to your resources.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today you're likely to be attracted to where the action is, so if you're not invited to a social gathering, go out to someplace fun with a companion you admire.

GOP shooting to break Democratic grip on 1st District

DALLAS (AP) — As Jim Chapman and Edd Hargett duke it out in their runoff campaign's final days this week, increasingly anxious GOP eyes from around the nation are focusing on the piney hills of East Texas for a hint of Democratic doom.

Republican analysts said this week that if Hargett, a former Texas A&M University quarterback in his first political contest, can pull out a GOP victory in Saturday's special congressional runoff election, that could be a sign that the Solid South is shifting sides.

"It would be Armageddon for the Democrats if they lose" in the 1st District where no Republican has been elected for 114 years, said Texas GOP Chairman George Strake. "We'll never have another chance like this."

But some Democrats — especially Chapman, a former Hopkins County district attorney — counter that the race is not a litmus of Southern sentiment and that its national importance is being blown out of proportion.

"Give me an 80 percent voter turnout, and then talk to me about realignment," said Chapman, 40. "This is conservative East Texas, and it isn't representative of the rest of Texas, much less the nation."

Voter turnout was about 20 percent in the June 29 special election that pitted the field from eight candidates to two. Hargett, the lone Republican, polled 42.2 percent. Chapman, one of six Democrats, garnered 30.2 percent.

So far, all indications are that the race is close and that turnout in the 20-county district that is the state's third poorest will be crucial. Democrats say they'll have the edge if with a large turnout, and are charging that Republicans are trying to stymie that through the Justice Department.

The department has filed suit over the election date, claiming that it should have been cleared through Washington first. Gov. Mark White has flatly refused to cooperate with that demand and says Texas doesn't have to.

A hearing on the suit is scheduled Thursday in Austin, said Justice Department spokesman Paul Hancock, who added that the suit seeks only a Texas plan to get the date approved and not a delay in the election.

Chapman and other Democrats also say that national Republicans have unfairly pulled out other stops in the race to see who fills the seat vacated when Sam B. Hall Jr. was recently appointed a federal judge.

"It's the East Texas Democrats versus the National Republicans," groused Mark Johnson, spokesman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

"If they lose after pumping more than $1 million and bragging around this town (Washington) about how they're going to buy this election, it would be a big loss," he said. "That would indicate their proclamations of a party realignment are premature."

But Hargett, although he has outspent his Democratic rival 3-to-1 in a campaign Chapman estimates as one of the most expensive ever in U.S. history, declares that "neither I, the people of East Texas, nor this seat are for sale."

In a race that observers say hasn't been particularly bitter, Hargett, 40, and Chapman have centered on issues of foreign trade and jobs in the economically depressed region.

Both have used the Lone Star Steel plant in Lone Star, one of the area's biggest industries where thousands of people have been laid off in the last decade, as a symbol of the district's problems. And both have promised to go on industry-luring crusades if elected.

But Chapman has described Hargett as insensitive or ignorant about how Reagan administration trade policies affect jobs in East Texas. He touts a Hargett quote in the Texarkana Gazette that "I don't know what trade policies have to do with bringing jobs to East Texas."

Hargett, who insists the quote was taken out of context, counters that he would try to ensure that other countries' markets "are as open as ours."

Both say they are deeply conservative men in a far right-wing district, but Hargett says his Republican affiliation "will give me the ear of the president."

Whichever man wins, Democrats will still far outnumber Republicans in the House. The tally now is 252 to 182.

But Terry Wade, communications director for the Republican National Committee, noted that "when you're as many seats behind as we are, any opportunity to pick up another one is important."

MOCK FUNERAL — Eddie Reeves, left, leader of a University of Texas student anti-apartheid group, leads a mock funeral procession on the U.T. campus in Austin Thursday. The group wants the university to end its investments with companies doing business in South Africa.

Study: millionaires paid less fed tax than typical family

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifteen hundred people with incomes above $1 million a year were able to legally slash their federal taxes below those paid by a typical four-member, middle-income family, according to a report released by Rep. J.J. Pickle of Texas.

As many as 306 of those millionaires may have escaped federal income taxes altogether by using losses from partnership arrangements to offset all their earnings from salaries, fees and interest.

In a computer study of all individual income tax returns filed last year, the Treasury Department concluded that nearly 11 percent of the 260,275 couples and individuals with 1983 incomes in excess of $250,000 paid no more than 5 percent of their earnings in taxes. And 11 percent of the 27,796 people who took in more than $1 million paid a maximum of 5 percent.

By comparison, typical families with incomes between $30,000 and $75,000 paid an average of 13 percent. A typical four-person family making $45,000 paid $6,272 in tax. Treasury said nearly 17,000 of the tax returns showing income above $250,000 paid less than that, as did 1,500 of those above the $1 million level.

The Treasury report is likely to fuel the demands of lawmakers for a tougher minimum tax — a special levy aimed at ensuring that upper-income people pay some tax regardless of how many deductions they use.

Pickle, D-Austin, chairman of the House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee, released the Treasury report Thursday and cited it as proof of the unfairness of the present tax system.

"In spite of the current minimum-tax law, it is clear that wealthy individuals have been able to exploit tax provisions related to business partnerships to dramatically reduce their taxable income and avoid paying their fair share of taxes," he said.

Any tax-reform plan must include a stronger minimum tax, he added. The plan advocated by President Reagan would toughen the present minimum tax, but not dramatically.

Treasury said losses from current business activities, including those conducted as partnerships, were the biggest factor in reducing the taxes of upper-income people. Other major factors included the exclusion of 60 percent of capital gains — profits from the sale of assets — from taxes and the ability to use previous years' losses to wipe out current taxes.

The study found that 166,401 of the 260,275 high-income taxpayers reported partnership losses, including 1,916 whose total income was exceeded by such losses.

In 1983, the average high-income individual who paid taxes of less than 5 percent reported farm and business losses that averaged two-thirds of total income. Such a person could have had income totaling $300,000 but used $200,000 of losses to reduce adjusted gross income to $100,000. Ordinary deductions, such as home mortgage interest, and personal exemptions would have cut still further the total amount subject to tax.

Survey shows more people buckling up

AUSTIN (AP) — A new opinion poll shows more Texans are using seat belts and more now support the law requiring belts to be worn.

Gene Fondren, executive vice president of the Texas Automobile Dealers Association, said Thursday that an advertising campaign featuring Gov. Mark White promoting seat-belt use has changed many Texans' attitudes.

"To the best of my knowledge, Texas is the only state which has had the good fortune of having its chief executive step up front and center and go on the line without any reservation or hesitation in favor of seat belt use and in support of a mandatory seat belt law," Fondren said in a news conference.

Fondren said that according to the most recent survey, 52 percent said they frequently wear seat belts, compared with 43 percent who gave that response in a poll before the ad campaign began.

Of the 52 percent who described themselves as frequent wearers, Fondren reported that 25 percent said they wear belts at all times and 27 percent wear them most of the time.

The survey also showed that the number of those who said they wear belts "infrequently" dropped from 54 percent before the ads to 48 percent, Fondren said.

And 69 percent now say they favor mandatory seat belt use, up from 51 percent in an earlier poll, he said.

Of the White commercials, Fondren said, "They very obviously are working."

White earlier this year signed the mandatory seat belt legislation into law. It takes effect Sept. 1.

The bill followed pressure from the federal government, which has threatened to force automakers to install airbags unless states require seat belt use.

Speaking at the conference, White said he is convinced that wearing seat belts saves lives and voiced the hope that more Texans will share his feeling.

"I am not only persuaded, I'm convinced that the use of seat belts will dramatically lower the number of injuries and deaths occurring on the roads," he said.

He urged the news media to report in stories about traffic accidents whether victims were wearing seat belts, saying that would increase public awareness.

White also said the survey results should quiet Republican critics who have argued that his appearances in the safety commercials have, in essence, also promoted White.

"I hope they understand what we are trying to do. And it would be nice for them to join us in that effort," he said.

Pampa youth plan to teach Florida VBS

Twenty-six youth and sponsors from the Mary Ellen and Harvester Church of Christ left Wednesday for Miami, Fla., to conduct the Vacation Bible School program for the Miami Gardens Church of Christ there.

The school will run from Sunday, Aug. 4, through Friday, Aug. 9, and will be conducted by the youth of the Pampa church.

Youth Minister Keith Feerer has conducted training classes for the youth to prepare them for their teaching duties.

Serving as sponsors for the trip are Keith and Joyce Feerer, Joel and Pam Walton, and Karen and Steve Schneider. Following the VBS, the group will visit Disneyworld and the Epcot Center before returning to Pampa on Aug. 12.

Minister Gene Glaeser has announced his sermon topics for the Sunday services. His morning sermon is entitled "Making Life Meaningful," and the evening sermon will be on "Micah."

Scheduled to be the Wednesday evening speaker is Scotty Ratliff, youth minister of the Center Church of Christ in Amarillo.

Religious education supported

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Presbyterians and Roman Catholics, often in disagreement about policies regarding public schools, are firmly agreed that they ought to include more teaching about religion.

It is "surely necessary for a complete education," representatives of the two traditions said in a new, jointly drafted ecumenical document.

The result of three years of study and discussions, the 42-page report declares:

"Children who are not exposed to the great faith traditions of the world with at least as much objectivity and detail as they are now exposed to economic and political ideologies, to artistic perspectives and to scientific theories and hypotheses are educationally deprived."

But such deprivation prevails widely in American public schools because of a "common, although dubious interpretation of the separation of church and state," the report says.

It points out that the U.S. Supreme Court, in its 1962-63 decisions barring devotional Bible reading and religious exercises, stressed that study about religion and about the Bible is vital to a full education.

Although such "historical literary, cultural and philosophical study of religion is permitted," it nevertheless remains rare, the report says, blaming confusion and hesitations in the schools about it.

The report, called "Partners in Peace and Education," was the latest product of the Roman Catholic and Presbyterian-Reformed consultation, a dialogue going on between the two traditions since 1965.

Although Presbyterians, like most Protestants, generally have opposed government aid or tax breaks for parents of children in church schools, the report sets forth arguments on both sides, and adds:

"There is need for proponents of both positions to listen carefully... Both of us must assess the roots of our differences. Are they theological, or historical-sociological? Is change possible?"

But agreement was expressed regarding sex education in public schools, holding that it should be "guided throughout by fundamental ethical principles" necessary in sexual behavior.

"Our traditions agree that sex is never, for humans, simply a matter of physiology, or even of psychology. We agree that human sexuality involves moral and spiritual values at every point," the report says.

It approves sexual activity only in "the context of stable, loving, monogamous, heterosexual relations" in marriage and says if schools don't emphasize that perspective, conflict will continue with the churches.

The report strongly backs church activism in civic and political affairs, declaring it right to act in those areas on the "strength of the perspectives and criticisms" from religion.

The document praises the 1983 pastoral letter on peace of the Roman Catholic bishops, which condemns nuclear warfare, terming it "one of the most discerning and prophetic statements" on that issue.

ASSASSINATED — Prominent South African civil rights lawyer Nonyamezelo Mxenge, widow of slain attorney Griffiths Mxenge, was shot and killed in the driveway of her home in Umiazi, a black township of Durban, South Africa, Thursday. Mrs. Mxenge was one of the lawyers for the 16 leaders of the country's main anti-apartheid organization who are facing charges of treason. (AP Laserphoto)

Black civil rights lawyer is gunned down at her home

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Four black men shot and killed a black attorney for 16 anti-apartheid activists facing treason charges as she returned to her home in a black township near Durban, police said.

In Canberra, Australia, the government announced today it was recalling its ambassador from South Africa for consultations as a "gesture of protest" against the white-minority government.

Australia joins a growing list of Western countries that have withdrawn their ambassadors from Pretoria. The United States withdrew Ambassador Herman Nickel on June 14, and the 10

Common Market countries announced Wednesday that they also were withdrawing their representatives in Pretoria.

Police said four black men in a car gunned down the lawyer, Nonyamezelo Mxenge, 43, late Thursday in the driveway of her home in the black township of Umiazi.

Her husband, Griffiths Mxenge, also was a civil rights lawyer who died violently. A former member of the African National Congress, an outlawed guerrilla group, he was stabbed 45 times four years ago.

Police never solved his slaying, and his wife took on much of his work. She was a lawyer for 16 leaders of the United Democratic Front, who are facing treason charges in nearby Pietermaritzburg.

Police had no further information on the slaying.

About 500 blacks have been killed in nearly a year of racial unrest. Some of them have been killed by police, but others — especially police officers and officials of the black townships — have been killed by other blacks who view them as collaborators with white-minority rule.

Authorities attribute some of the deaths to in-fighting between anti-apartheid groups.

Venezuela and Ecuador cut oil prices

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — OPEC members Venezuela and Ecuador have cut their oil prices in response to price reductions by their competitors. The loss of revenue to Venezuela, the United States' fourth largest oil supplier, could damage its efforts to repay a $35 billion foreign debt.

Venezuela's cut of nearly $2 per barrel of heavy crude had been expected, but will represent considerable lost revenue through the end of this year, said the minister of energy and mines, Arturo Hernandez Grisanti.

Venezuela's foreign debt ranks fourth among the Third World's debtor nations, following Brazil, Mexico and Argentina.

A founding member of OPEC, Venezuela had expected to earn $13.7 billion this year from oil sales, but new estimates based on lower production and prices say petroleum revenue will only be $12 billion.

Thursday's cut lowers the price of the country's heavy crudes by an average of $1.95, bringing prices to between $23 and $24 per gallon barrel.

Last week, OPEC announced rather symbolic reductions of between 20 cents and 50 cents for Arab light and medium crudes.

Most Venezuelan crudes are denser and not covered under OPEC accords.

A few weeks ago, a Mexican decision to lower oil prices by an average of $2.27 per barrel upset Venezuelan officials and increased pressures for the country to apply similar price cuts in order to prevent further market losses.

Venezuela is now expected to start a sales campaign to increase declining oil revenue and offset the losses caused by the continuing oil glut, experts say.

This year, Venezuela had expected to export an average of 1.4 million barrels daily. But the average until June 30 was only 1.26 million barrels a day.

In a country where oil accounts for 95 percent of the foreign exchange earnings, less oil sales represent less imports, less travelling abroad and probably more austerity measures.

Ecuador also announced a price reduction Thursday, saying the price of crude, previously $26.15 a barrel, would now fluctuate between $25.15 and $26.15 "for one or two months, until the international market recovers."

OPEC's 13 members have seen their share of the oil world market shrink to less than half of what they enjoyed in 1979, when their combined production was over 30 million barrels per day.

Business picks up on El Paso's 'boardwalk'

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — For Enrique Reyes, business has been booming lately, the Border Patrol can attest.

Reyes makes his living by placing a wooden board across a shallow stretch of the Rio Grande between El Paso and its sister city of Ciudad Juarez and charging between 50 cents and a dollar to people who don't want to get their feet wet while crossing into the United States illegally.

"They're day workers and shoppers. More and more people are crossing here because there are more and more people without jobs in Mexico," Reyes told the El Paso Times.

Between 4 and 10 a.m. every day, about 150 people cross his "bridge," he said.

The Border Patrol announced Thursday that it arrested about 800 undocumented aliens a day during July in the El Paso sector while focusing its efforts almost exclusively on those trying to travel farther into the interior by bus, train, plane or car.

The 24,661 arrests in July topped the previous high of 23,444 apprehensions made in September 1983 in the Border Patrol district, which stretches from the Arizona-New Mexico border to a point about 100 miles southwest of El Paso, between Sierra Blanca and Van Horn.

Farther downstream, a Border Patrol official said 12,687 people were caught in the Laredo sector trying to cross illegally into Texas. That's more than double the number of such arrests in July 1984, assistant border chief Joe Garza said.

He said July marked the largest increase in arrests of illegal aliens since the Border Patrol began keeping track in 1924. Garza blamed the peso devaluation and the poor Mexican economy for the jump in people trying to slip into the United States.

Patricio Cardiel Barron, one of those who crossed into El Paso on Thursday on Reyes' bridge, said he was planning to go no farther than the border area. Cardiel, 57, a laborer from Juarez's colonia San Antonio, said he comes to El Paso every few days to do yard work, then returns to Juarez.

Cardiel had a plaster cast on his arm. He said he broke it six weeks ago when he ran and slipped while trying to flee from Border Patrol agents.

Larry Richardson, chief agent for the Border Patrol's El Paso sector, said increased numbers of aliens also are trying to travel farther into the interior.

He said his agents are nabbing more "interior-bound aliens" because they are sorting out illegals with the border as their destination and concentrating on those headed farther into the United States.

Richardson said agents are using television cameras installed along a nine-mile border stretch of downtown El Paso.

"ADJUST. WE'VE JUST GOTTA ADJUST."

It was a statement emphatically made many times during the 1979 football season by West Texas State football coach Bill Yung, now entering his fourth season in a similar capacity at UT-El Paso. But unlike most coaches who adjust their offense or defense during a game to counter the opponent, Yung made those adjustments BEFORE the kickoff to counter the worst-executed travel plans.

It was a season filled with non-arriving busses to provide transportation to the Amarillo air terminal; delayed flights that greatly accelerated pre-game activities; mis-scheduled or mis-served pre-game meals to further complicate problems. Then throw in the usual amount of injuries, lost equipment, fouled-up hotel accommodations, non-working projectors or missing game film. Ad infinitum. And through it all Yung showed his ever-present christian patience and the sedating word of the season: ADJUST.

With Texas Coaches School just completed, football practice about to begin, teachers of extra-curricular activities finishing pre-school planning, the specter of "no pass, no play" is bigger than ever. And with nine months of protestations behind, with no apparent attitude change by either the State Board of Education or Gov. Mark White, we would counsel all coaches and teachers with affected students to use the Yung System: adjust.

Every possible complaint about the rule has been brought forward. Six weeks suspension is too long; the kids will take basket-weaving courses; everyone should be allowed one second chance; it will drive the kids from school and make them dropouts; how can you put time limits on practice, travel time and game time; they're driving all the folks out of coaching; etc., etc., etc.

Strangely enough the highly verbal uproar has come almost solely from the state's football coaches. Little has been pronounced by leaders of other sports. Also affected, but virtually as quiet as The Lost Chord is the highly organized Texas Music Educators Association. And where are the drama teachers, journalism heads, and FFA? The Texas Basketball and Baseball Coaches Associations have been strangely silent.

It is not that big a problem if people are willing to adjust, accept change, be cooperative and plan positively. After all, the new rules, abhorrent as they may be to some, are equally pleasing to others, and apparently locked in place for at least two years. We have a simple solution. It, too, will be abhorrent to some, pleasing to others, but the most equitable and adjustable solution we can figure. We have tested it with many coaches and UIL powers-that-be, and only one absolute total rejection has been received. We'll discuss it in this space Sunday.

Incidentally, in that 1979 football season, ADJUSTing to the problems, Bill Yung's Buffaloes captured their third Division I Missouri Valley Conference football title in three seasons. And some people say WT cannot compete in Division I or the MVC!! On to other things.

The Tony Dorsett - IRS brou-ha-ha is just more of the same headline-grabbing contrived problems that occur every year at the opening of spring training. Hayden Fry, then head coach at North Texas State, pointed it out ten years ago. "Look," he told me, "the Cowboys own the media in this area. They have the money and the product to court television, radio and newspapers to the point that none of the rest of us (NTSU, TCU, SMU, where he had also coached, UTA and other Metroplex lesser lights) can get any free publicity. We have to buy everything."

"And look how the Cowboys do it. Just when we are about to push season ticket campaigns and prepare for the start of fall practice, they develop a crisis surrounding a major star performer." That particular time it happened to be Bob Lilly. Would he retire? Could they take him into "just one more" season? Would the Pack pay enough money to get him back? Lilly flew back and forth to Thousand Oaks; it dominated the 6 p.m. sportscast...film at 10. Newspapers all over the state, fed by a multitude of sources, kept the Pearl White melodrama all-dominant. All other football news was benched.

Fry subsequently fled to friendlier confines, in Yankee Country if you please, at U-Iowa, where he presumably employs those same tactics to keep the names of Iowa State, Drake, Northern Iowa, Grinnell and all others sublimated. Rayden has never been accused of being stupid. Obnoxious, arrogant, handsome, talented, trustworthy, untrustworthy, yes; but not stupid.

Using his "crisis theory", I have anxiously awaited each veteran encampment in California to see whose turn it was to be part of the who-dunit. The ever increasing shortage of truly great stars has brought Dorsett full circle again. In the meantime we have had to endure the Too Tall Jones boxing episode, Hollywood's problems, which quarterback will it be, last year's White & White plot. You can rack your memory or study the newspaper files to determine if Fry's Philosophy is as on target as a Roger Staubach pass to one of the numerous ends and wide receivers who at one time or another were also part of the theatrics.

Is anyone to believe that neither Dorsett or the Cowboys were aware of the IRS threat, left unannounced and un-implemented until opening week of training camp? Will he be there or won't he? Will he get a reporting extension and new contract? Should we fine him or grant him grace? Who'll we try at tailback if Tony doesn't show? Maybe he can get Mercury Morris for a roommate, or be re-united with Hollywood, or change sports and enjoy the fellowship or Federal Freeloader 04000-018, Denny McLain.

Whatever, Uncle Sam, make him pay. Because if he doesn't, the rest of us will have to make up the difference.

Meanwhile, fans, as with "Hair", old Coca Cola, and the War to End All Wars, it too will pass...only to be recreated in another version next year...and again become an instant August Best-Seller.

NL roundup

McGaffigan hurls Reds past Astros

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer
With a 7-15 record in four major-league seasons, Andy McGaffigan needed to do something to turn his career around. What he came up with — a change-up — had the Houston Astros off-balance and Cincinnati player-manager Pete Rose comparing McGaffigan to Reds ace Mario Soto Thursday night, after McGaffigan notched his first complete game in 24 career starts, a 5-2 victory over the Astros.

In other NL games, it was Chicago 9, St. Louis 8, in 14 innings; Philadelphia 3, Pittsburgh 0; and San Diego 6, Atlanta 0.

Like Soto, McGaffigan relied on only two pitches — the fastball and change-up — to strike out a career-high 11 batters. He gave up eight hits, allowing only three in the last seven innings.

Another winning factor was the team's three-run fourth inning against Astros starter Bob Knepper, 8-9, a rally capped by Nick Esasky's two-run homer.

Cubs 9, Cardinals 8
Larry Bowa knocked in four runs, including the game-winner with a two-strike suicide squeeze bunt in the 14th inning, giving Chicago its victory over St. Louis.

The Cubs won despite blowing an 8-2 lead. The Cardinals tied the score 8-8 with three runs in the ninth on an RBI single by Tommy Herr and a two-run double by Jack Clark.

A double by Keith Moreland, his fourth hit of the game, and two walks set up Bowa's game-winning bunt in the 14th, which made a winner of George Frazier, 6-4, and a loser of Ken Dayley, 3-1.

Vince Coleman had two stolen bases on one play in the third inning to give him 74 for the season, two more than the previous rookie stolen base record established by Juan Samuel of Philadelphia last season.

"Just another day's work," said Coleman. "But I am honored about the record."

Chicago's Davey Lopes also swiped two bases to run his total for the season to 40 — one less than the Cards' Willie McGee, who also stole two of his own.

Padres 6, Braves 0

Andy Hawkins hurled a six-hitter against Atlanta to extend his string of shutout innings to 17 1-3, while Carmelo Martinez paced San Diego with three hits and four runs batted in.

Hawkins, 14-3, who won his first 11 decisions, never allowed a runner past second base, threw only 99 pitches and retired 15 straight batters from the third to the eighth innings.

Martinez drove in the Padres' first run in the fourth with a single and knocked in two more runs with a double in the sixth.

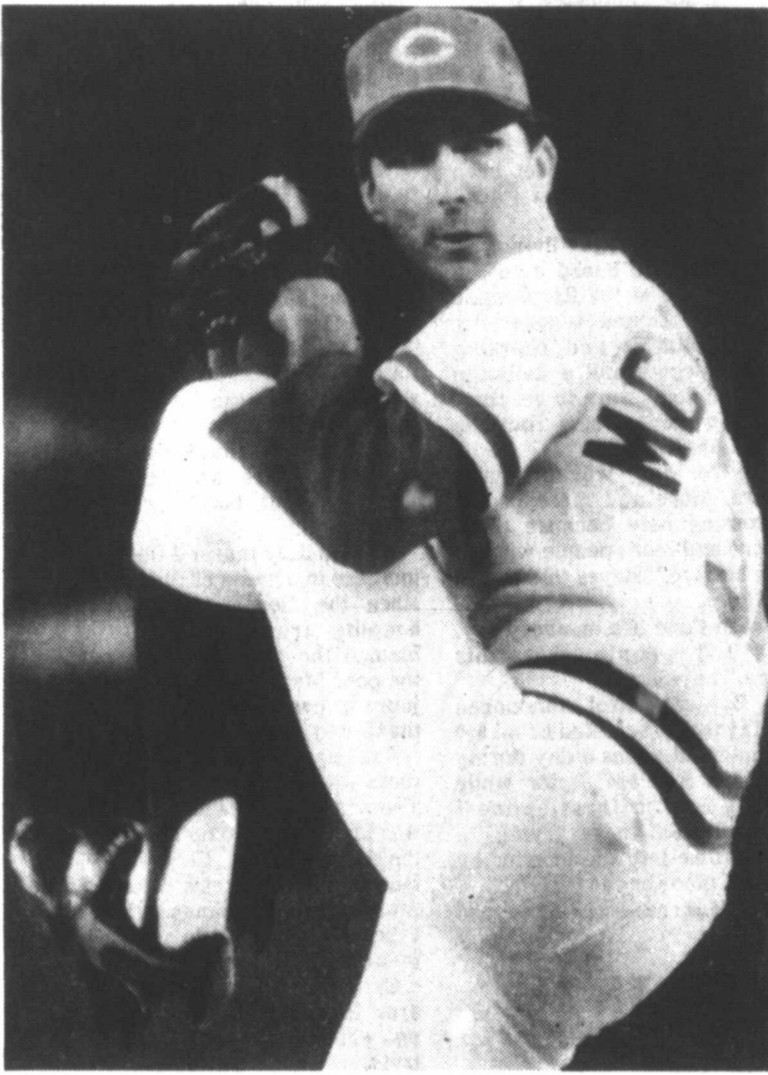

Steve Garvey went 4-for-4 and scored three runs for the Padres, who hit into a team-record five double plays.

Phillies 3, Pirates 0

Philadelphia right-hander John Denny, who set up the first run of the game with a single and stolen base in the fifth inning, pitched a six-hitter for his first shutout in two years.

Denny, 6-8, won his first game since June 26 and got his first shutout since April 30, 1983, when he beat Houston 8-0.

Denny singled off starter Don Robinson, 2-6, with two outs in the fifth, stole second and scored on a single by Samuel, who went to third when the ball skipped by Pirates center fielder Marvell Wynne for an error.

Reds' hurler Andy McGaffigan whiffs eleven Astros.

AL roundup

Blue Jays open up season's biggest lead

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

If the baseball season ends with a strike on Aug. 6, the Toronto Blue Jays have already clinched the American League East title. And if the season is not interrupted, they just might nail it down shortly thereafter.

Thanks to Thursday night's 9-3 whumping of Baltimore and stumbling New York's 9-1 loss at Cleveland, the Blue Jays have an 8½-game lead, their largest of the season, over the second-place Yankees. They outmarched the Orioles 10-3 in taking three games of the four-game series, and they did it in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium where they had dropped 30 of 44 games since entering the American League in 1977.

"It's a good feeling for us to come in here and win three of four," said Rance Mulliniks, who walked to trigger a four-run first inning against Storm Davis and singled home the first of four runs against Don Aase in the eighth. The Blue Jays have won 11 of their last 12 games. They are 10 games ahead of the world champion Detroit Tigers, who were idle, and lead Boston by 11 — the Red Sox split with Chicago, losing 7-2, then winning 4-3 — and Baltimore by 12½ games. In the only other AL game, Oakland downed California 3-1.

Tom Filer won for the third straight time since coming up from the minors on July 5, allowing two hits and striking out seven in 5 2-3 shutout innings.

Indians 9, Yankees 1

The Yankees almost caught Toronto last month, trailing by just 1½ games as late as July 21. But they have dropped eight of their last 11 games, the latest a three-hitter by Cleveland's Roy Smith, pitching for the first time since he was hit in the head by a line drive on June 30.

The run off Smith was unearned and he struck out four, walked one and retired 17 consecutive batters between the third and ninth innings in pitching his first complete game in 17 major-league starts.

Julio Franco collected three hits, drove in a run and scored three times for Cleveland, which won its third straight game to match its longest winning streak of the season. Loser Phil Niekro gave up six runs in 2 2-3 innings.

White Sox 7-3, Red Sox 2-4

Boston was on the verge of being swept when seldom-used Dave Stapleton doubled home the tying run in the ninth inning of the nightcap against Juan Agosto and scored on Steve Lyons' one-out single. The White Sox had gone in front 3-2 on a two-run homer by Carlton Fisk, his 28th, with two out in the eighth.

The rally in the nightcap turned reliever Steve Crawford from an apparent loser to a winner. Crawford, 5-2, picked up what fellow reliever Bob Stanley calls a "vulture win" after giving up a game-tying single to Harold Baines and Fisk's homer.

In the opener, Chicago's Gene Nelson scattered seven hits in his first complete game of the season. Harold Baines had two singles and a double, driving in two runs and scoring two, while Greg Walker and Ozzie Guillen also had three hits apiece.

A's 3, Angels 1

Chris Codioli ended a personal five-game losing streak with help from Jay Howell, who earned his 21st save with two innings of one-hit relief.

California's run came on Brian Downing's homer leading off the game. And they could have had more, but for some splendid play in the field by the A's — notably, Dusty Baker, who thwarted Downing's bid for another extra-base hit in the third with a leaping grab against the left field fence.

The loss was the Angels' sixth in their last seven games. They lead second-place Kansas City by only two games and the third-place A's by four in the AL West. California's Rod Carew had two hits, giving him 2,996 for his career.

North wins grid tilt

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Tom Enloe of Class 2A Olney struck a blow for the smaller classification schools in the annual Texas High School Coaches Association North-South All-Star football game.

Enloe caught the game-winning 22-yard touchdown pass and set up the North's other score with a 54-yard first-quarter reception in a 14-7 victory over the South Thursday night in steamy 99-degree Texas Stadium.

North quarterback John Stollenwerck of Highland Park, who hit Enloe on both passes, was named the offensive player of the game as the North extended its record to 28-17-4 in the All-Star game.

Stollenwerck hit 8 of 19 passes for 152 yards. Enloe had a total of 3 catches for 91 yards.

Enloe, who will attend Cameron University, made the spectacular game-winning catch with 6:14 left in the fourth period.

"It was more of a good catch than a good throw," said Stollenwerck. "Tom went up between two defenders. We had been working on that deep pattern all week."

Enloe, a quarterback in high school, called both the plays.

Enloe said, "I told the coaches I could beat them on the fly (deep) pattern. I just took the ball away from two of them for the touchdown."

The South tied the score 7-7 in the third quarter on a 26-yard scoring pass from Ronald Jiles of Houston Madison to Hart Lee Dykes of Bay City.

Stollenwerck's first-period 54-yard pass to Enloe gave the North position for Corsicana's Bill Jones, who punched it across from a yard away.

The South's score was set up when Stollenwerck fumbled and Heath Sherman of El Campo recovered at the South 39. A 19-yard Jiles to Daryl Owens pass, plus a roughing penalty positioned the South at the North 27. Two plays later Jiles found Dykes wide open for the touchdown.

Sherman and Dante Williams of Gainesville tied for defensive MVP honors.

Strasburger sticking with Cowboys

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP) — Six months ago, former University of Nebraska defensive end Scott Strasburger had decided he was finished with football.

Even though some people were convinced he had the ability to give pro football a shot, Strasburger had supposedly made up his mind to give up the sport in which he excelled at Nebraska and instead concentrate on a career in medicine.

But now the Holdrege native finds himself well into the Dallas Cowboys' training camp at California Lutheran College in Thousand Oaks, Calif. Strasburger said there is nowhere else he'd rather be.

"I really had decided not to pursue playing football," Strasburger said in a telephone interview. "I had made up my mind that I was through. But, the closer the draft got, the more I started to change my mind. This was something where the opportunity was now. It's something I decided I at least wanted to try. I figured I had a couple of years I could put into it before I really got started on my medical training. So, here I am."

Strasburger was a ninth round selection by the Cowboys. He is in competition for one of the outside linebacker spots, a position he said is very similar to the defensive end he played for the Huskers.

There are four other outside linebackers ahead of him. They are veterans Anthony Dickerson, Mike Hegman and Jeff Rohr and second-round pick Jesse Penn of Virginia Tech, who Strasburger said is sure to make the team because of his high draft selection.

Strasburger said he's in a no-lose situation.

"If things don't work out, I'm just going back to med school at Nebraska," he said. "Really, my most important goal in life right now is getting through med school.

If I get started this year, that's fine. If I get to play football for a few years, that would be great, too."

There have been some setbacks for Strasburger so far in training camp, but they haven't lessened Dallas' interest in the Nebraska product.

Strasburger pulled a hamstring during the Cowboys' mini-camp in May, and then reinjured himself during the third day of regular camp.

He was forced to sit out of drills last week, but has returned to action this week.

"Things are going a little better now, especially the last two days," Strasburger said. "The veterans came in Saturday, so it's good I'm able to go again. It's definitely hurt my chances by being injured. Now, I've just got to go that much harder in order to get noticed. I've got to try to make the big plays. That's a key now."

The 6-1, 205-pounder has the physical tools needed in pro football. Strasburger took advantage of the weight lifting talents he acquired at Nebraska, and he turned in the fastest 40-yard dash time of any rookie player at his position.

Young to meet with Tampa Bay

By the Associated Press

Quarterback Steve Young and his attorney are scheduled to meet today with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League in what is being called their "first real negotiating session," Young's lawyer said Wednesday.

Young, whose status as a member of the Los Angeles Express of the United States Football League is a subject of debate, will undergo a physical examination and meet with members of the Buccaneers' coaching staff, attorney Leigh Steinberg said in a telephone interview.

The quarterback is also expected to meet with team owner Hugh Culverhouse and his assistant, Phil Krueger, said Steinberg, who also represented Young in his negotiations with the Express last year.

"He'll take a physical, tour the city, meet with the coaching staff, and they'll get a chance to look at him," said Steinberg. "He'll be going to explore Tampa Bay as an opportunity."

Quarterback Joe Ferguson said he has fully recovered from last season's injuries and is looking forward to his new assignment with the Detroit Lions.

"I feel that physically I can play at least two more years," Ferguson said. "Not having to deal with the cold will make it easier to stay healthy. Who knows how that will affect my career?"

The 35-year-old Ferguson, a former Buffalo Bill, said the climate-controlled Pontiac Silverdome could be his key to maintaining good health and extending his career.

"I'll play just as long as I'm effective," said Ferguson. "But being able to play indoors should make a big difference. I won't have to worry about the weather beating down all the time, like it did in Buffalo."

Free agent defensive end Jim Moore was taken to a Pittsburgh hospital with a concussion following the Pittsburgh Steelers' afternoon practice Wednesday, a team spokesman said.

BIG TIME TALKER — Phil Donahue, host of the syndicated "Donahue" talk show, holds his award in the air after taking both awards for best host and best show Thursday in New York at the Daytime Emmys. (AP Laserphoto)

CBS dominates the Daytime Emmy Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS, the network that carried the Daytime Emmy Awards show, also carried away the honors, winning 12 of 17 categories, including "The Young and the Restless" as outstanding drama series.

During commercial breaks of the live CBS broadcast Thursday, the network plugged its afternoon soap operas with the blaring musical tag: "Feel the heat." But the best promotional platform was the show itself.

The CBS soaps, "The Young and the Restless" and "Guiding Light," each grabbed three Emmys.

The only non-CBS winners were ABC's "All My Children" with two awards, the syndicated "Donahue" talk show, also a double-winner, and public television's "Sesame Street."

"I feel like Frank Sinatra," said Phil Donahue, whose show moved to New York this year. "If you can make it in New York, you can make it anywhere. It's a real nice welcome to New York."

NBC, the third-rated network in daytime, was shut out.

"The Young and the Restless" the No. 4-ranked daytime show this year, beat ABC's "General Hospital," the top-rated program and the Emmy winner in the category last year. "The Young and the Restless" won best serial in 1983.

CBS was the top-rated network in daytime during the 1984-85 regular season with an average rating of 6.7. ABC had a 6.1 and NBC a 5.0. (A rating measures the average percentage of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes tuned to a given minute of daytime.)

Kim Zimmer, who plays Reva Shayne Lewis on "Guiding Light," won for best actress, while Darnell Williams, as Jesse Hubbard on "All My Children," was named outstanding actor.

"Donahue" took both awards in the talk-service show category. Donahue, who kissed his wife, actress Marlo Thomas, before walking to the stage, accepted the Emmy for best host, and then "Donahue," which moved from Chicago to New York this year, won for best show.

"Sesame Street," which is in its 16th season, won again for outstanding children's program. "The CBS Schoolbreak Special: All the Kids Do It" won for best children's special. Henry Winkler was executive producer of the drama about teen-age drinking. He also made his directing debut on the film.

Dick Clark of "The $25,000 Pyramid" was named outstanding game show host. Bob Barker, host of the Emmy Awards show and CBS' "The Price Is Right," was an also-ran in the category. "The $25,000 Pyramid" also won best game sho. Barker's consolation is that "The Price Is Right" ranked first among game shows this year.

In the supporting actress and actor for drama categories, the winners were: Beth Maitland, as Traci Abbott Romalotti, from "The Young and the Restless" and Larry Gates, who plays H.B. Lewis on "Guiding Light."

The categories of outstanding juvenile male actor and top "ingenue" were won by CBS performers: Brian Bloom, who plays Dustin Donovan on "As the World Turns," and Tracey E. Bregman, as Lauren Fenmore Williams, in "The Young and the Restless."

Other Emmy winners were Marc Breslow of "The Price Is Right" for best director of a game show; the "Guiding Light" direction team for best direction in a drama series, and ABC's "All My Children" for best writing.

CBS also won more Emmys in the achievement categories.

Waco police to bypass DA's office

WACO, Texas (AP) — Police Chief Larry Scott said he has decided to bypass District Attorney Vic Fezell and take his cases to assistant U.S. Attorney Jan Patterson whenever possible in hopes of getting more aggressive prosecution.

"We haven't been getting any prosecution locally, and we have been receiving very good cooperation from the feds in cases that the DA's office has refused to take," Scott said Thursday.

The police chief told the Waco Tribune-Herald that Fezell's office had refused to prosecute numerous cases, returning them to the police department with claims of insufficient evidence or poor search warrants.

Scott said the district attorney's office also has let criminal cases expire without prosecution under the speedy trial act.

Scott said there have been times in which Ms. Patterson obtained convictions in federal court on cases that Fezell refused to prosecute.

Fezell and members of his staff disputed Scott's claim. They said they refused to prosecute because of shoddy police work by the Waco police department's drug enforcement unit.

Fezell noted that the Texas Judicial System's annual report for 1983 showed McLennan County with a conviction rate of 75 percent, highest of Texas' 254 counties.
