Independents ask for injunction against action by RRC

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — Independent oil operators are seeking an injunction against a Texas Railroad Commission order which threatens to shut down 271 "white oil" wells in the Panhandle Field.

Lloyd Broussard, an Austin lawyer for white oil operators, said the operators had asked 250th State District Judge Harley Clark for a permanent injunction to keep the wells operating, and Clark had set a hearing for 9:30 a.m. Oct. 7.

In a letter Sept. 13 announcing his decision in a suit filed by 14 operators and interest owners against an earlier commission order, Judge Clark said, "I see no need at this time to issue an injunction" as the white oil operators had requested. "They may request a hearing on the subject if they desire.

Broussard said the operators had exercised that option, and also hoped to get Clark to sign a final judgment in the case Oct. 7. Any appeal would have to be filed within 30 days of the signing of the judgment, Broussard said.

Letters were sent to operators of 540 wells tested in the 1.5-million acre Panhandle Field, which includes $27 billion in oil and gas reserves in Hartley, Moore, Hutchinson, Potter, Carson, Gray, Wheeler and Collingsworth counties.

Operators of 269 of those wells got the news that their wells qualified as oil wells. Operators of 88 wells were informed that theirs did not meet the gas-oil ratio and that their production allowable would be set at zero as of Tuesday.

Operators of an additional 183 wells were notified that tests were not conclusive but that those also would be shut down Tuesday. Those operators can request a second test, and if the well qualifies within 60 days as an oil well, the allowable will be backdated to next Tuesday to allow the well to produce as an oil well.

The Tuesday letter to white oil operators was signed by Jim Morrow, director of the commission's Oil and Gas Division.

Susan Cory, general counsel for the commission, said Clark's ruling would not stop the commission from moving ahead because the ruling was based on a technicality.

Judge Clark had ruled the commission had erred in its handling of the case on procedural matters. He said the commission had treated the matter as a "contested case" when it should have been handled as a "rulemaking case."

Lawyers for the independents at the earlier court hearing had claimed the RRC had permitted white oil, produced by low temperature extraction or refrigeration units (LTX units), to be counted as crude oil in the past. The commission's May 13 order saying white oil could not be counted as crude oil was a change in previous policy, the lawyers argued. Judge Clark, who has yet to sign his final order, apparently accepted the independents' arguments and ruled the commission's order involved a change in policy. He overturned the commission's decision, saying it should have followed proper rulemaking procedures

But in his letter the judge said he had found no error in the decisions or actions by the commission in the substantive aspects of its order.

The commission had ruled that to be counted as crude oil for well classification purposes, liquid The LTX units use temperatures as low as 20 in the well bore and liquid at the surface.

degrees below zero to turn gas into a liquid.

E. Ray Grasshoff, RRC information specialist, said the commission staff had taken the position that the commission has the authority under other hydrocarbons must be liquid in the reservoir, liquid regulations to test wells and assign production allowables for wells outside of the commission's

It was under that authority that the commission sent out the letters to the oil operators late Tuesday afternoon, Grasshoff said.

But in filing for the injunction, independents claim the judge's declaration of the commission's order as "null and void" should not allow the commission to act upon the recent retesting of disputed wells as conducted under the order.

The tests were made this summer by District 10 personnel under the commission's order. It is those test results which have led to the commission's letters ordering the shutdown of production for 271 wells in the field

Seesaws not 'safe' enough for parks

Call them seesaws or teeter totters or whatever, they will soon be a thing of the past in Pampa's public parks

The Parks and Recreation Advisory Board approved a request Thursday evening for their removal from city parks for safety

Parks and Recreation Department Director Reed Kirkpatrick asked the board for permission to remove them from the parks, citing safety and liability reasons.

Kirkpatrick said teeter - totter equipment is being eliminated in most parks throughout the state and other parts of the nation because of accidents arising from its use.

Seesaws have been cited in safety studies as a major cause of accidents in playground equipment use, he noted

Accidents and injuries have occurred from children falling off. he explained, with head and spinal injuries and broken limbs being commonly reported.

One common form of accident often occurs when a "heavy" person and a "light" person use the equipment, with the lighter person sometimes being knocked off when the heavier person's end falls quickly to the ground, he noted. Other common accidents arise from youngsters falling off when one tries to balance himself in the middle while others are sitting on the ends or when a youngster tries to "walk the plank" from one end to the other. Other accidents may happen by children walking up the teeter - totter while it is in use by others and getting hit by a descending end.

Kirkpatrick said the city may also face liability problems, noting a number of cities have faced lawsuits arising from injuries derived from the use of the equipment in public parks.

The removal of the seesaws are part of a program being implemented by the department to further safety programs in the

Kirkpatrick said the parks crew will be developing a safety inspection program for playground equipment in the parks. The crew will be making an inventory of all playground equipment and then checking and testing the equipment regularly to keep note of deficiences and to determine needed repairs, he explained. The dates of checks and completed repairs would be maintained on a safety list, he said.

'This insures we're doing our job," he said. "Citizens shouldn't have to go to parks and worry about getting hurt.

The safety inspection program also could aid the city in case of liability claims, Kirkpatrick said. In case of accident claims, the city can check its safety list for the equipment, with dates available, to compare with claims concerning poor or defective equipment, he

Kirkpatrick, who took over the director's position Sept. 3, said the parks department is also establishing priorities for maintenance needs. Current

Hobart Street and Marcus Sanders Parks and parks restroom facilities, he said

Top priorities are to take care of what's most dangerous and of what's of the most immediate concern, he said. "We first need to take care of what we've got" and then consider adding on to the parks system, he stated.

Further park development will take time, planning and discussion to build up and expand the system, Kirkpatrick noted the present restroom facility at Marcus Sanders Park has more or less been abandoned. He said it's generally useless and recommended it be torn down.

Board members discussed the possibility of making the restroom at the Marcus Sanders Pool, under development for repairs, more accessible to people in the park. The board took no action but indicated further study was needed

Gloria heads for Northeast

By BOB McHUGH Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. -Hurricane Gloria crashed along the East Coast on its way toward the Northeast today with 120 mph winds, torrential rain and pounding surf that sent more than 270,000 people fleeing inland from North Carolina to Massachusetts.

Swells 10 to 12 feet above normal cut off many access roads to New Jersey's barrier islands as the eye of the vicious storm passed at midmorning, and police blockaded all other roads to the islands, said Gerald Thornton, director of the Cape County County board of freeholders.

In Wildwood Crest, 11 elderly people were reported trapped on one barrier island at a private home for the elderly. Thornton said, and a bus was sent for them.

Waves crashed onto the boardwalk along the beach at this gambling resort, where casinos were closed Thursday night. "It puts the fear of God in you." WNBC-TV's Ralph Penza said of the scene on the boardwalks.

The storm's fury also had lashed resort towns to the south on heavily developed barrier islands in Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina, with waves up to 30 feet crashed onto the boardwalk at Rehoboth Beach, Del.

Waves buckled sections of the boardwalk at Ocean City, Md., littered Virginia beaches with debris and smashed piers in North

At 10 a.m. EDT, Gloria, with wind down from 130 mph to 120 mph, was centered near latitude 39.2 north and longitude 74.0 west, off the coast of New Jersey. It was about 145 miles southwest of Southampton, N.Y., on threatened Long Island, and about 90 miles south of New York City.

The storm was moving toward the north-northeast at 35 mph on a course that would take it across densely populated Long Island, brushing the eastern edge of New York City, and on toward Connecticut and the rest of New

A hurricane warning extended from Chincoteague, Va., to

The director of the National Hurricane Center at Coral Gables. Fla., Neil Frank, told Cable News Network the storm was taking the worst possible course as it stayed over water, which would allow it to keep up its strength.

Frank said metropolitan New York City had not been hit by the full force of a major hurricane during this century

More than 270,000 people along the Eastern Seaboard as far north as Massachusetts fled inland as the storm approached.

States of emergency were declared in North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Delaware, Rhode Island and New Jersey

Ahead of the storm, torrential rain fell well inland, up to 6 inches in the southern Poconos in northeastern Pennsylvania, where small rivers rose, and 2 to 4 inches of rain fell by midmorning in New York's Catskills and Adirondacks. Southern New Jersey's Cumberland County had more than 6 inches of rain. In Stamford, Conn., the Army Corps of Engineers raised a 35-foot-high steel storm barrier in the harbor to protect low-lying homes and boats. Rhode Island Gov. Edward DiPrete ordered several bridges closed.

New York City Mayor Edward I. Koch today urged residents of Staten Island, Coney Island and the Rockaways near John F. Kennedy Airport on Long Island to evacuate to higher ground. The city set up 15 shelters for refugees.

Classes were canceled today in North Carolina, Virginia, De awrt, Maryland, New York, New Jersey, southeastern Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts as schools were turned into shelters. Hundreds of military planes and helicopters and dozens of ships were moved from their home bases to protect them from the storm. Smaller craft were hauled into drydock.

In New York, the twin 110-story towers of the World Trade Center were ordered closed, along with several other tall office buildings, and trash cans were taken off the

Harvester homecoming activities slated tonight

Pampa High School students and Harvester fans will be busy this evening with activities leading to the climax of Homecoming Week.

The Harvester football team will meet the Perryton Rangers at 8 p.m. in Harvester Stadium.

The Homecoming Queen and her court will be announced tonight during halftime activities at the game. After the game, students can attend the homecoming dance at M. K. Brown Auditorium's Heritage

Room. Six queen candidates were selected last week. Voting has been completed, with the winner being presented tonight. Nominees, all PHS seniors, are Kim Bowers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bowers; Mary Cross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Cross; Shannon Churchman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Churchman; Kelly Finkenbinder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E Finkenbinder; Rogena Fly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Fly; and Kellye Welborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Welborn.

During the past three days students and faculty members have been "dressing up" in various styles for the school days. Wednesday was Nerd Day, Thursday was Gangster Day and today was Punk Rock Day.

Students showed their spirit during a pep rally today to encourage the Harvesters in their battle with the Rangers.

Wednesday afternoon students gathered downtown after school to paint business windows with spirit slogans for the Harvesters. City and business employees supporting the team have been wearing their green shirts today to further express spirit for the

In other homecoming activities, the PHS Choir Booster Club will be having its annual spaghetti supper from 5 to 7:30 p.m. in the PHS cafeteria. Tickets for the all - you - can - eat supper are $3, which includes spaghetti, salad, bread and drinks. Desserts also will be available for an extra charge.

Local florists have been inundated with orders for the traditional homecoming chrysanthemum corsages.

State plans push to keep AIDS victims in classes

AUSTIN (AP) - State health and education officials are preparing guidelines that will tell school districts there is no medically based reason to keep AIDS victims out of classrooms.

Except for some cases with extenuating circumstances, children with AIDS pose no threat to classmates, according to State Health Commissioner Dr. Robert Bernstein

"It would be based on the knowledge that casual contact does not spread the disease," Bernstein said Thursday.

AIDS - Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome - breaks down the body's ability to fend off disease. The illness is usually fatal, and no cure has been found Children stricken with AIDS have caused dilemmas in several states. Thousands of New York City parents kept their children at home after it was disclosed that, somewhere in the city, an elementary school student with AIDS was attending classes.

In Indiana, Kokomo school officials barred an AIDS victim from classes Bernstein and Texas Education

privately Wednesday to discuss the guidelines. When completed, the guidelines will be sent to school districts as recommendations and information only. "I don't think we have the authority to just go out and set rules on this thing, unless it becomes a serious problem," Bernstein said. State health officials are unaware of any AIDS victims in Texas public schools, according to the commissioner. "I am unaware of any problems, but I don't think we should wait for problems," he said. Bernstein said parents in other states have over-reacted to AIDS victims in the schools. "We should get the word out to

Holding company to dissolve

AUSTIN (AP) — United Bank of Texas will try to cut costs and reverse operating losses by dismantling its parent company, according to bank chairman Ruben H. Johnson.

Johnson told the Austin American-Statesman Wednesday that the holding company, United Texas Bancshares, was an extra expense that the sixth-largest bank in Austin cannot afford Johnson is a member of the state Finance Commission, a 12-member body that oversees Texas state banks and savings and loan associations.

Plans to dissolve the holding company were disclosed in a tender offer Sept. 12 by United Texas Bancshares to buy back 26,400 shares of preferred stock from shareholders for $2.8 million. The offer was completed Wednesday. Investors who paid $100 a share for the stock in December, 1983, are being paid $106 a share.

The document also said a committee of the United Bank board of directors is examining the business dealings of Johnson with the bank

Growth protein may open new doors in cancer fight

BOSTON (AP) - The first detailed analysis of an organ-forming protein, a natural chemical that induces the body to sprout blood vessels, could open new approaches to fighting cancer, heart disease and other ailments, researchers say.

The protein, named angiogenin, was discovered and studied by researchers at Harvard Medical School, who published their findings in the latest issue of the journal Biochemistry. They also isolated the gene that oversees production of the protein.

"It is the first time that a specific substance has been clearly related to the creation of a type of organ,' said Dr. Hans Neurath, editor of Biochemistry. "That is really a first."

Cancers secrete angiogenin and probably other, similar, - to promote the growth of tiny blood vessels called capillaries. This provides the blood supply that allows the tumor to enlarge and eventually spread. Some experts theorize that if some way could be found to block angiogenin and its chemical cousins, then cancers could be stopped "I would fondly hope that this . The blood vessel growth will prove possible," said Dr. Bert L. Vallee, who directed the research. "I think this should facilitate it."

Experts say the work represents a major step in the study of angiogenesis, or blood vessel formation, which was pioneered two decades ago by Dr. Judah Folkman, another Harvard researcher.

"It's a stunning achievement," Folkman said. "I think it's very important for the whole field, because it will enlarge everyone's thinking about how tumors send the signal to keep blood vessels growing in toward them.'

Dr. James F. Riordan, another member of the research team, said one logical cancer strategy will be to try to produce antibodies that will neutralize angiogenin. The researchers said they were surprised to find that angiogenin holds about a 35 percent similarity to another well-known enzyme called ribonuclease. This, too, could be turned to their advantage in finding ways to defeat the Comparing angiogenin to ribonuclease "gives us a clue as to its three-dimensional structure," Riordan said. "If you know the structure, you can try to design drugs that will specifically bind to the protein" and deactivate it.

promoters also probably play a role in diseases besides cancer. For instance, experts believe that they are responsible for the proliferation of blood vessels that leads to blindness in victims of diabetes as well as the overabundance of capillaries in "What turns it on?" he said. What turns it off? How is it made? How is it excreted? It is enough to keep people busy a long time.'

The scientists derived angiogenin from a human colon cancer and showed that it would promote capillary growth in chicken eggs and rabbits.

Normal tissues also produce similar hormones. They are part of the female menstrual cycle and fetal growth in the womb, and they are released to repair wounds and heart attacks.

Folkman said the angiogenesis factors released by cancers are probably extremely similar to those produce in the body's day-to-day housekeeping.

"The big difference is timing," said Folkman. "Normal tissues rarely put these factors out. They are normally turned off. In the tumor, they are turned on and stay on continuously.'

We've seen our kids growing by leaps and bounds," Rosita Apodaca, bilingual education consultant for the El Paso Independent School District, said of the variety of approaches used to teach non-English speaking students in her district.

We feel we're very successful because of the many ways we attack the problem," Mrs. Apodaca said.

In New York Thursday, Secretary of Education William J. Bennett said he plans to press for changes in the nation's bilingual education program to give school districts more flexibility on what teaching methods to employ.

The law currently requires that the Education Department spend 96 percent of its $139 million-a-year in bilingual aid helping schools teach children basic courses in their native language while also trying to teach them English.

The El Paso district, using state and local funds, already offers a break from the transitional teaching method in a "high-intensity language training program" in eight of its secondary schools, Mrs. Apodaca said.

'The Reagan administration doesn't know what bilingual education is if it thinks English is not being taught," said Mary Esther Bernal, San Antonio School District bilingual education director. "He (Bennett) ought to get out into the schools."

Another Texas district that has gained impressive results in educating Hispanic children by using several approaches is in McAllen, said Carol Pendas Whitten of the Office of Bilingual Education and Minority Language Affairs in Washington, D.C.

She said she saw the immersion technique of teaching bilingual education working well in McAllen on a recent visit there.

Mrs. Apodaca said the El Paso district has established several bilingual programs because "we have different types of needs within the district.

Approximately 20 percent of elementary and secondary El Paso district students are enrolled in bilingual education.

In grades kindergarten through six, Mrs. Apodaca said, transitional as well as immersion methods are used. 'We've been teaching bilingual education for many years," she said. "El Paso is known to have the Cadillac program in the state." Mrs. Apodaca said the success of the various methods used in El Paso can be seen in improved grades, in higher achievement test scores and in lower drop-out rates among Hispanic students than before the programs were

The programs are taught "very much differently than the rest of the country," she said.

Ms. Whitten said research on the benefits of transitional education is inconclusive.

"Transitional bilingual education has worked very well in some instances; in some instances it has not," she said. "It's unfortunate that some school districts have had to use that method. But it is very successful

ABA committee says judge needs more experience

HOUSTON (AP) - An American Bar Association committee has recommended against the appointment of a 32-year-old state district judge to the federal bench because he only has eight years' experience as a lawyer, according to a newspaper report.

But Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who in March recommended that Judge Sidney A. Fitzwater of Dallas fill the federal court vacancy in the northern district of Texas, says he may ask the Reagan administration to ignore the objection

"I'm strong for him, and I've made that know to the administration," Gramm said Wednesday. "He's exactly the kind of person I want on the federal bench. If nominated by Reagan and confirmed by the Senate, Fitzwater would be the nation's youngest federal judge, a job that carries a Fitzwater has been backed by Gramm said the ABA's rule has been waived for women and minorities and should be set aside for Fitzwater because of his 'exceptional talent.

Fitzwater refused to discuss the matter while Gramm's recommendation is pending.

Senate Judiciary Committee spokesman Mark Goodwin said the ABA panel's view is respected but is only one aspect in the process. Robert Evans, the ABA's director of government relations, declined to discuss the matter as did Gene W. Lafitte of New Orleans, a member of the ABA's federal judiciary committee.

am not angry. Hunch frees innocent man

HOUSTON (AP) - Thomas P Goldschmidt spent five months trying to convince authorities he didn't rob a Houston bank, despite four eyewitnesses who identified him as the culprit.

Ironically, it was a Harris County prosecutor who proved Goldschmidt was innocent

'I'm very relieved it's all over said Goldschmidt, 32, of Webster

"It's been very frustrating. State District Judge Doug Shaver on Wednesday dismissed the aggravated robbery charge against Goldschmidt. Fort Worth officials also dismissed similar charges against him

Goldschmidt was arrested April 24 for the April 18 robbery of Allied Jetero Bank. A detective saw a photograph taken by a surveillance camera and recognized the suspect as Goldschmidt, whom the detective knew Witnesses, shown what police call a "photo spread," picked out Goldschmidt. Then there was a lineup and four bank employees positively identified Goldschmidt.

Goldschmidt spent 45 days in Harris County Jail before Assistant Harris County District Attorney Charley Davidson, believing Goldschmidt might be innocent, got his bond lowered from $200,000

'I have never worked so hard to prove somebody did not commit a crime," Davidson said.

"It was unusual that the prosecuting attorney and the investigating officer were in Goldschmidt's banking and investigating my innocence as opposed to my guilt," Goldschmidt

Goldschmidt, however, said he could understand how the witnesses identified him. He had been fingered as Dallas' dapper bank robber

Since Sept. 18, 1978, well-dressed man is believed to have robbed 14 Texas bank of more than $500,000, mostly in the Dallas area. The bandit also struck Fort Worth and eyewitnesses there also pointed fingers at Goldschmidt.

But an Arlington bank was robbed when Goldschmidt was in the Harris County Jail.

And Davidson said he was torn between the eyewitnesses and Goldschmidt.

Rude behavior at games

Was the Pampa Harvester football team booed last week when it played in Clovis? I do not know, as I was not there, but I was present the week before when members of the PHS student body booed the visiting Amarillo Sandies

The first time I heard the unpleasant sound was before the game started. Sandie band wranglers were moving halftime equipment into place on the home side of the stadium when a large number of 'fans' voiced an opinion. Then, when the Sandie football team ran onto the field to begin the competition, they too, were booed

Still, I could not believe my ears when I heard the Amarillo Sandies band being booed as they marched onto the field to present their

Gee, I thought clapping was the way to greet halftime performers. All over the city, businesses and individuals are trying their best to show support for the Harvesters. A student's letter published in The Little Harvester encouraged the wearing of green and gold, and showing more pride. Someone is not paying attention.

I carefully watched the crowd that evening when the Harvester's played the Sandies. I watched the football players and listened to them exhorting one another as defense and offense changed places. Regardless of the score board, the football team tried, no thanks to the crowd of students whose rude behavior probably spurred the Sandies on to greater endeavor.

When I was a high school freshman at Hamlin, my algebra teacher, who was also my basketball coach, once said in class. "Good sportsmanship is for children playing jacks." In my naivete, I argued with him and have tried for nearly twenty years to maintain my position. But I guess old Dan has taught a lot of students since then, and his philosophy has trickled down

Please don't misunderstand. Not all of the PHS student body was booing. We can still be proud of the Pride, the cheerleaders, and some of the students, but for those kids who seem to have a one word vocabulary, I recommend remedial jacks.

Vietnam continues trying extortion

Americans who have not forgotten this country's missing in action in Vietnam, and the MIA families who cannot forget them, can only have been tantalized by the recent news from Hanoi. Vietnamese officials all but admitted that they were holding the remains of many MIAs and that these could be released and returned to the United States with little further delay.

But then came the condition for allowing the families of the missing in action a measures of peace at last. The United States would have to drop its "hostile" policy towards Vietnam and terminate the embargo against U.S. trade with Vietname. There was also mention of U.S. payments to cover the supposed expenses of Vietnam's supposed searches for more remains of MIAs. And, finally, the Vietnamese talked of "borrowing" the sophisiticated equipment that could theoretically help in locating, for example, crash sites.

The excuses offered by the Vietnamese authorities for this undisguised extortion is so patently transparent that it qualifies as deliberate insult. The Vietnamese people, Hanoi says, can only be persuaded to cooperate in locating the remains of U.S. servicemen if the United States adopts policies friendly to Vietnam. In fact, of course, Vietnam is a totalitarian, communist state in which people do exactly what they are told or suffer the draconian consequences

Cruelly, there appears little or nothing new in Hanoi's position a dozen years after its representatives signed a peace agreement pledging them to return all prisoners of war, all remains, and to provide all information they possess on the missing in action.

It is still the same crude extortion. If American wants the hundreds of sets of remains the Vietnamese are almost certainly holding, it will have to pay for them. And payment must come in the form of economic political concessions to a communist dictatorship that brutalizes its own people, makes common cause with the Soviet Union, and wages war of aggression and conquest against its neighbors in Southeast Asia.

The system creates 'poverty

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

He worked for a meat packing company for twenty three years and supported his family. But he didn't like his job. One year ago he walked off his job with $35,000 in accumulated retirement benefits paid in one lump sum. He said that while he intended to find another job he wasn't going to worry for a while - he insisted that he deserved a long vacation because he had been working hard since he was seventeen and he "needed" a break.

Every penny of that $35,000 was gone within six months. New furniture, new carpets and new drapes were purchased for the house - but three years' over-due property taxes weren't paid. The house was lost in a sheriff's auction sale.

He did purchase a new van. It looks sharp. He did take tennis lessons. He loves tennis and enjoys playing with his fifteen year old son.

He always thought he would like to be a truck driver so he spent $3,500 on lessons from a truck-driving school. Three months ago he was offered a driving job by a car-hauling company. He tried it for a few days and quit because he said that he had trouble staying awake.

For six months his church paid the rent for a new house and provided money for groceries. His church brethren scouted jobs for him. Each time he was informed of an opening for which he could interview, he acknowledged the opportunity but failed to report for the interview. Last month he refused to follow up on an opening at another meat packing company - a firm which pays $13 per hour - on the grounds that since it was fourteen miles away it was too far for him to drive

He sleeps till noon and plays tennis every afternoon. Under these conditions how does he survive? He survives quite well: He and his family now receive food stamps, medicaid, rent subsidy, utilities subsidy and aid to Families With Dependent Children. Two of his children - the two older girls - work at a fast-food restaurant and turn their checks over to him. His son stays busy playing school sports - Dad loves sports and doesn't want to see his son give that up for something like an afternoon paper route.

Should this man and his family receive "public assistance"? Whether they should or not is beside the point - the fact is that they do. Is this man able to work? Yes, in one sense he is. But in another sense he isn't. He's in excellent physical condition and capable of working. But he's also a moral catastrophy in that he feels absolutely no guilt: indeed he feels perfectly justified in his present situation because, in his own words, "there are no jobs available" which are worth what he would have to give up if he worked. In that sense he's unable to work.

Should this man receive so much as a dime from the public purse? I don't think so. I believe he should be treated with human dignity and be permitted to starve to death if he so chooses. I feel so strongly about this that I'm the individual who advised the church to quit paying his rent and buying his groceries on the grounds that he refused to work. In view of the facts, the church agreed. The church's decision hasn't bothered him one bit. He knows how the welfare system works in Michigan and he's made a directly purposeful decision to use the system to its limits

Are there others like him in this country? Of course there are. Are such persons counted as part of "the poor"? Most assuredly! Do they represent a large proportion to the poverty population? I not only don't know, I don't think it matters. Whether this man is typical or not is irrelevant. The fact is that the American welfare system, as presently constituted, has no hard and fast method for making a clear distinction between what used to be called the "worthy poor" and the "unworthy

Under today's welfare system, to be poor (which means to have an income below three times the cost of the Department of Agriculture's Economy Food Plan) automatically makes one eligible for welfare whether or not such poverty is the product of choice or chance. In this man's case - with zero income - he's eligible and that's that. The fact that he's a bum makes absolutely no difference. Even an expanding economy will make no difference in . his case because the economy is not the problem he's the problem.

There are some people in this country who refuse to consider the idea that poverty can ever be anything other than a "problem with the economic system." They reject the view that the very existence of income transfer programs reduces the personal cost of making those choices which are likely to bring on poverty and, as a result, increases the number of people who qualify

Thus when United Steelworkers Union official Jack Parton offered his view of the plight of 40,000 laid off steelworkers in his district, he said, "we have money from the federal and state government for job retraining, but retraining for what?...the computer industry never did materialize in this area...these people would rather be working." Of course they would! In the meantime many - though not all - will stay where they are and, eventually, accept the same kind of assistance as the man whose true story I have detailed above. After all, the welfare system has removed the moral hazard of staying put.

In his book, "Losing Ground: American Social Policy, 1950-1980," Charles Murray argued that anyone able to work should be automatically declared ineligible for welfare of any sort so that the basic principle of personal moral hazard must be restored to the economic choices people make. Charles Murray is absolutely right.

Today in History

Today is Friday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 1985. There are 95 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history On Sept. 7th, 1964, the Warren Commission issued a report concluding, that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone in assassinating President John F Kennedy in November 1963.

On this date: Ten years ago: OPEC, the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries, announced a 10 percent price increase to take effect October 1, 1975.

Five years ago: New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne ordered mandatory water rationing for 114 communities in the drought-ridden northern section of his state.

One year ago: Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko addressed the United Nations General Assembly, accusing the United States of seeking "military superiority" through President Reagan's arms buildup.

Paul Harvey

Let's remedy our own ills

President Reagan wants to give you a Christmas present

He wants you to be able to enjoy through all the New Year a simpler, fairer system of income taxes

Danny Rostenkowski thinks he can get it through the Democrat-controlled House but Bob Dole does not think he can get it through the Republican Senate.

Scrooge! President Reagan, addressing students at North Carolina State University, was interrupted by applause 27 times in 24 minutes and most all of that applause was in response to his proposals for tax reform

If earlier generations of students were indoctrinated with the notion that we could all stand in a circle with our hands in each other's pockets and somehow get rich thereby - not this generation!

One week later the President was addressing an audience of senior citizens in Tampa, Fla. He was arguing support for his tax reforms.

He said, "This senior citizen needs your help!" And THEY applauded!

Members of Congress tell the White House that public enthusiasm for tax reform has cooled; at least once a week President Reagan will return to the hustings to prove they're wrong.

The hit-and-run attackers seeking to sabotage tax reform contend.

"It would punish Social Security recipients." In fact it will in no way affect present Social Security checks.

You'll hear. "It would hurt the middle class." The fact is that the President's plan will reduce taxes across the board and further save taxpayers money by eliminating for some and simplifying for all the burdensome filing of tax returns.

In the President's words, "Every group in America will be better off and if Americans are better of America is better off."

Originally, the Ways and Means Committee was to begin drafting a bill Sept. 17 and sending it to the House floor in time for an Oct. 15 vote.

It would then go to the Senate where Bob Packwood had promised final action by Christmas.

But Rostenkowski has given trade debate precedence over tax reform and Bob Dole sees no likelihood of Senate action this year.

The President believes that proper tax reform will create 10 million new jobs within five years. Not if it's stillborn, it won't!

And congressmen have learned they got more TV exposure condamning South Africa than by seeking to remedy our own ills.

Ben Wattenberg

Life is much safer than before

It's a risky world

Plane crash in Dallas. Plane crash in Japan. Plane crash in England; in Milwaukee. Ferry boat capsizes in China. Chemical plant leakage in West Virginia. Famine in Africa. Nuclear arms race. Little wars everywhere. Epidemic of AIDS.

But it's not enough to say it's risky out there, not enough to point the finger of blame at the airlines or chemical plants, not enough to worry about carcinogens, pollution, radiation, missile buildups, hungry babies, and whether or not AIDS will spread to the heterosexual community.

In order to try to understand something about the direction our civilization is taking, we ought to be asking this question: Is it more risky or less risky than it used to be? That is the right way to measure progress.

The fact of the matter is that in almost every measurable way the modern world is safer than it used to be, not more risky. Consider air pollution. Almost every measurable index is down: particulates, sulphur dioxide, carbon monoxide, ozone, lead. Water pollution is also way down. The National Center for Health Statistics measures the rate of deaths by accident. That's also way down in recent

Perhaps the best measure of risk is adult life expectancy - how long you are likely to live? During the last decade and a half - just when we heard all about the carcinogen-of-the-month, the pollutant-of-the-week, the accident-of-the-day - adult life expectancy has been going up at the fastest rate in American history! That rise will likely continue: some recent progress on the cancer front is particularly heartening.

In addition to adding years to life, we've been adding life to years. New treatment for kidney stones and for cataracts lower our risk of debilitation.

There is famine in the world - the video pictures we see are tragic. But, hard as it may be to believe, there is less hunger than there used to be. Despite all the headlines, caloric intake per capita in the less-developed countries has gone up substantially in recent years. There are wars. There is a nuclear arms race. Yet, at least there has been peace among the big powers for 40 years, probably because of the nuclear threat. So far, not bad. Compare the last 40 years to the 30 years from 1915 to 1945 when world wars twice scorched the earth.

Of course, it's not all roses. For a few years the safety record of major airlines in America was at a near-perfection level. Now, it is apparent that there is more that the government and the airlines can do. Attack wind shear! Don't land or take off during bad

The AIDS situation is quite properly scaring people half to death. Laymen don't quite know what to make of it. One day the Washington Post seems to say it will spread disastrously beyond the high-risk groups. The next day The New York Times says it does not seem New York Times says it does not seem to be spreading beyond the high-risk groups. Science is apparently still quite a way from a cure or a vaccine.

There is an irony here. Although we are now shocked by the AIDS epidemic, until very recently epidemics - including diseases spread venereally — were the rule of life, not the exception. From bubonic plague in the Middle Ages, to rampant and deadly syphillis, to killer influenza in the earlier parts of this century, mankind was periodically decimated.

There is probably a moral in all this. We're doing better than we used to. But don't get arrogant. We still can't handle viruses, wind shear, drought— and lots of other plagues, including the one that incites people to kill each oth-er. Nature, and human nature, is still in charge, not us.

Lottery organizers expect three out of every four adults in the state about 14.2 million people — to play the games within five months of their Oct. 3 inauguration. The others will remain indifferent or morally opposed.

Nearly 20,000 stores scattered across the country's most populous state will begin selling $1 "California Jackpot" tickets at 12:30 p.m. Thursday, followed by ceremonies in major cities and a Hollywood gala.

A San Francisco grocer kicked off the lottery unofficially Tuesday and Wednesday by selling nearly 1,700 tickets and awarding dozens of $2 and $5 prizes. Officials Wednesday confiscated Steve maining tickets and temporarily suspended his ticket-sales license, pending permanent revocation.

"I jumped the gun. I broke the rules. I've caused a big hoopla and I'm having great fun," said Stephan, adding that the lottery was a "ripoff" for the players. Nobody won any of the larger $100 to $5,000 "instant" prizes, he said.

The nation's 20th state lottery is expected to sell 400 million $1 tickets - an average of about 6 million to 7 million daily - during the first of the continuously running, 'instant-winner' scratch-off ticket games. Trade deficit drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. foreign trade deficit dropped to $9.9 billion in August, the lowest level this year, the government said

The Commerce Department reported that the trade imbalance was 5.8 percent below the July deficit of $10.5 billion and a sharp 26 percent lower than the high point this year, a $13.4 billion imbalance

Reagan suffers setback in farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Reagan has seen two of his best hopes for cutting costs in the 1985 farm bill go down to resounding defeat, leaving even Republican allies saying there is little administration clout left in Congress on agriculture issues.

Despite administration lobbying and direct appeals from Agriculture Secretary John Block, the House on Thursday defeated by wide margins attempts to cut dairy and sugar price supports as the chamber began several days of contentious debate over the five-year, $141 billion measure.

'I don't know to what extent the agriculture (department) officials really understand the Congress or understand what is going on in the Congress," said Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill., the top Republican on the House Agriculture Committee.

"I could do better at getting (a farm bill Reagan could sign) if Jack Block would talk like somebody who knows what's going on and cares what's going on. I'm seen as his minion, and people are turning away from me - people I normally work with," Madigan

Democrats, who had been braced for a tough fight on the dairy and sugar issues, were surprised by the ease of their victories and by the amount of help they got from Republicans. An effort to cut the current 18-cent-per-pound sugar price support level to 15 cents over the next three years was defeated, 263-142, with 103 Republicans joining the majority of Democrats in voting no.

And a substitute dairy section, one that calls for price-support cuts tied to the levels of surplus milk production, was killed, 244-166. There were 74 GOP defectors.

In voting against the proposed amendments, the House rejected consumerist arguments that the price supports add billions of dollars to food costs and only encourage farmers to produce more of the commodities than can be absored by domestic and export

Proponents of both programs, which were backed by their respective industry interest groups, contended the supports will guarantee consumers a steady supply of food at a consistent price.

"We had a good day," said a smiling Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas. "People are realizing that the farmer is in trouble. I'm hoping we can carry the momentum on" to votes next week, when further administration-backed amendments will be offered.

The bill was left with a dairy section that revives a version of an earlier program that paid farmers not to produce milk and taxed all producers to help pay the cost of the diversion. It also would establish a new price-support formula that would increase support levels as production costs

Confrontation nears

By The Associated Press

A showdown over protectionist trade legislation drew closer as Congress and the Reagan administration pressed forward with differing solutions to the nation's huge trade imbalance.

The House Ways and Means Committee gave its approval Thursday to large rollbacks in textile and apparel imports, an approach Reagan opposes as a threat to the free trade system.

Also in Washington, a bipartisan group of senators and congressmen released a Sept. 19 letter calling on the Reagan administration to convene an international conference on the world monetary

In the letter to Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, they said: "The chaotic state of the international monetary system is a major cause of the trade imbalance. The wild fluctuations in the value of the dollar and resulting economic uncertainty have disrupted international trade, discouraged long-term investment and increased pressures for trade protectionism.

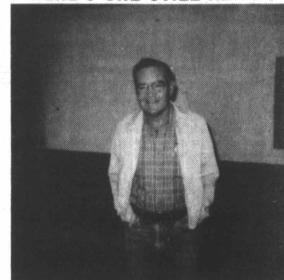

In other economic developments Thursday:

-General Foods Corp.'s directors reportedly met to consider the company's options after receiving a takeover offer from a suitor that is rumored to be Philip Morris Inc. But General Foods spokesman Jack Whiteman declined comment on reports that the board scheduled a meeting to discuss the situation.

—Trans World Airlines Inc. said it reached agreement with financier Carl C. Icahn, who owns a majority of the carrier's stock, for Icahn to acquire the remaining shares. The group currently owns more than 52 percent of TWA's total common shares outstanding.

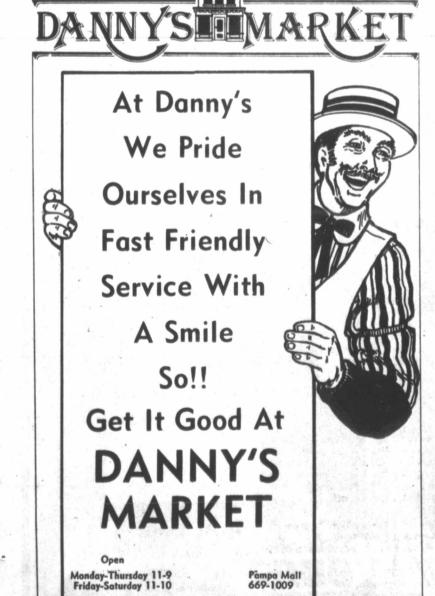

-The nation's basic money supply contracted for the first time in two months, raising hopes for an end to an explosive growth pattern that has raised the threat of higher U.S. inflation. The Federal Reserve Board said M1, the basic money supply measure representing funds readily available for spending, fell $3.3 billion in the week ended Sept. 16 to a seasonally adjusted $610.4 billion. M1 had soared $21.9 billion over the previous eight weeks.

Textile forces win again, and vow to 'crawl bloody' for toughened trade bill

Congressional supporters of the textile industry, fresh from another victory against the White House, say they will "crawl bloody" if need be to win their fight for toughened trade legislation.

"This industry is on the verge of going under if something is not " Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., said Thursday as the House Ways and Means Committee approved to voice vote large rollbacks in mports. The panel ignored dininistration warnings that a eto awaits the measure - the cus of the debate over protectionism for import-battered lustries — if it reaches President eagan's desk.

Skirmishing in the committee meeting, held in a cramped room gith lobbyists relegated to an diside hallway, pointed toward efforts to torpedo the bill when it arrives at the House Rules Committee.

As Congress pressed forward with trade matters, there were these other developments:

-House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., fired a broadside at Reagan's plan, announced Monday, to push for trade measures including a $300 million fund to spur exports. He said it "has no teeth" and "instead of sending a loud roar to our trading partners, it sends nothing more than a whimper.

-U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter was briefed by House Republican leaders on their plan to introduce a sweeping, 85-page trade bill within a week. He said he would help in drafting the measure.

Yeutter spokesman Roger Bolton said readiness to join the bill-writing represented no switch in administration tactics. He said contrary impressions could have formed because "there was some confusion coming out of the White House, but there shouldn't have been after Monday.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that the administration is considering a major policy shift to support an import user fee to finance an expanded training program for workers who lose jobs because of foreign competition.

According to the Post, administration sources said economic policy council members Thursday discussed the possibility of developing their own program or supporting a Senate bill that would impose a fee of 0.1 percent to 1 percent of the total value of U.S. imports. The estimated $250 million raised would be used to extend unemployment benefits to workers enrolled in retraining

Jenkins touted the textile bill as the remedy for plant closings and layoffs in the textile and apparel industries caused by low-cost imports, primarily from East Asia. He said Congress and the Reagan administration have ignored calls for help until now.

"We can't have the attention of both houses or whatever administration until we crawl bloody to the front door, and I'm now out in the front yard, ready to come up the steps," Jenkins said.

Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., responding to a Jenkins request, dropped plans to bring the measure to the floor under special handling that would bar amendments but require 290 votes, two-thirds of the House, for passage.

Urged by Jenkins, Rostenkowski charted a more conventional course for bringing the bill to the Black colleges pose tough questions

Fourth of a five-part series

SYSARALEE TIEDE Fort Worth Star-Telegram

HOUSTON (AP) - Off the record, said one of the state's most successful businessmen, the black universities just aren't going to make it.

"Off the record," began one of the state's better-known university presidents, "the question of black schools must be addressed - the test results are abominable and they can't attract good faculty.'

'This has to be off the record." said one of the state's budget experts, "but before you talk about shutting down East Texas State. you should talk about shutting down Prairie View

"And before you talk about therging Texas Woman's University and North Texas State, you should talk about merging Texas Southern and the University of Houston.

Texas' two black state universities, founded because white colleges were off limits during the days of Jim Crow, are as ticklish an issue as any confronting the state. White leaders fear frank discussion will brand them as racists. Black leaders bristle at suggestions that the schools are substandard.

Prairie View A&M at Prairie View and Texas Southern in Houston are temporarily safe from drastic measures. A federal desegregation agreement requires the state to upgrade facilities and programs there at least until the no-nonsense agendas. But increasingly, serious questions are being asked about the future of the schools.

And both universities have new academic leaders with no-excuse.

Some reasons: Some 75 percent of Prairie View graduates flunked the state's professional engineering examination this spring, compared with 21 percent statewide. About 35 percent of Prairie View graduates failed the state licensing examination for registered nurses. Only one senior university, Pan American, was worse.

Fifteen of the 20 Texas Southern tydents who took the bar exam for he first time this year failed. Only bree of 42 students passed when bey took it for the second time.

Only 11 percent of the Texas athern students and none of the rairie View students who took the tified Public Accounting exam at year passed

Last year only 29 percent of Exas Southern sophomores issed the basic skills test oduired to enter teacher training.
The schools' supporters blame such feeble academic records on a history of deprivation. Prairie View and Texas Southern were separate but never equal.

If we had put the kind of money into the TSU law school we put into the University of Texas law school, #-would be just as good," said state Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, chairwoman of the House Higher Education Committee

(Faculty at the UT law school earned an average $25,838 compared with $20,984 at Texas Southern when the Office of Civil Rights made its first comparison

"The other fact is that they start with students a lot further back than most of the other schools,"

Mrs. Delco said (The average Scholastic Aptitude Test score for entering freshmen at Prairie View in 1983 was 660 out of 1600, lowest in the state. At Texas Southern it was 715.

The state average was 848.) "But you have to remember that these schools are not inherently inferior. These small, isolated, oor black colleges produced atmost all of today's black aders," Mrs. Delco added. Integration meant hard times for the black schools. Prestigious white universities came courting not only the most talented black students but the best-qualified lack faculty.

Enrollment at Prairie View, located about 50 miles west of Houston, has been dropping for nearly a decade. The major decline, nearly 1,000 students between 1980 and 1981, occurred when the university began demanding that students actually pay all the tuition and fees that state law required.

Mexico's aid request is a break with lengthy tradition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Among the side effects of Mexico's devastating earthquake was a ticklish diplomatic problem: How much aid should the United States offer and how much should Mexico request?

Mexico has always sought to minimize its asymetrical relationship with the United States and, whenever possible, attempts to maintain a discreet distance from its big neighbor. For example, until the recent disaster, Mexico had not asked for U.S. government assistance since a previous earthquake there in 1964.

It has never taken part in U.S. bilateral aid programs; it shunned participation in President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress program and has never accepted U.S. Peace Corps volunteers.

Despite pressing needs, Mexico has had a go-it-alone attitude, and U.S. officials took that into account in deciding how to respond to this month's earthquake.

'We know that you don't shove aid down Mexico's throat," said one official

But there were countervailing pressures from American citizens, who felt the neighborly thing for the administration to do was to be as generous as possible.

We couldn't afford to look like we were sitting around doing nothing," said the same official.

Thus, the administration made it clear from the outset that it stood ready to meet Mexican requests for aid but took no initiative beyond that. Thirty hours after disaster struck, Mexico came forth with its first request for U.S. aid in more

'Ugly' gorilla to seek mate

HOUSTON (AP) - A "really ugly" gorilla whose life once was saved by famed cardiovascular surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley was headed for Brownsville today to find a mate, officials at the Houston Zoo said.

"This may be her last hope, Florence Wilson Davis of the city's parks department said Thursday of the !onely 300-pound ape named Vanilla Gorilla.

Ms. Davis said zoo officials have introduced Vanilla to several male gorillas over the years, but she never showed any interest in the potential suitors.

"She is a stubborn girl," said the spokeswoman.

Complicating matters is Vanilla's age, Ms. Davis said. At 17, her reproductive clock is running out of time to destroy buildings beyond repair and personnel trained in spotting survivors in devastated areas.

It was a modest request indeed. Secretary of State George P. Shultz expressed admiration for Mexican self-reliance.

Subsequently, the Mexican request list grew longer but the U.S. government role in the relief effort remains relatively limited. After the first six days, U.S. assistance totaled somewhat more than $3.5 million.

Some Latin American and European countries dispatched aid without asking Mexico for a list of its needs. As the planeloads of food, clothing and medicine began arriving the day after the quake, Mexican Foreign Minister Bernardo Sepulveda said, "Mexico has not asked for aid but we cannot refuse to accept it.'

Mexico also has discouraged good-will expeditions by well-meaning foreigners and the Reagan administration has done what it can to support that stand.

When San Antonio Mayor Henry

than 20 years - demolition teams Mexico shortly after the earthquake, he was publicly rebuked by Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams. Cisneros ignored the request and flew to Mexico on a plane loaded with relief supplies.

The caring but cautious U.S. approach was reflected in the visit of first lady Nancy Reagan to Mexico City four days after the quake. The visit was kept brief to cause minimum disruption. In addition to touring devastated zones, she presented a $1 million check to the Mexican government. Another reason for the limited U.S. role is that Mexico has considerable resources of its own. As an example, it was able to mobilize thousands of relief workers on short notice after the Still, U.S. officials said there vere consistent indications of a Mexican government desire to downplay the extent of the damage. In the first few days after the disaster, U.S. estimates of the death toll invariably exceeded the official Mexican government

The bottom line: call a sergeant a sergeant and a soldier a soldier.

Last month, in an all-points message sent on behalf of Army Chief of Staff Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., Lt. Gen. Robert M. Elton announced it was time to personalize references to our officers, soldiers and civilians."

The top brass do not like the use of the term "SM," which stands for service member, the memo explained. Nor do they like the idea of referring to soldiers by their pay grade instead of title, such as "a meeting of O-6's" instead of a meeting of colonels.

"The Chief of Staff, Army, has directed that all military members of the U.S. Army be called soldiers," the memo states.

"The term 'soldier' has connotations of valor, duty, honor, sacrifice; noble values of a noble profession. The term 'SM' is a vapid construct which evokes sensings of computer-jargon ciphers; or worse: an 8-hour-per-day 'employe' of the U.S. government."

Likewise, "military courtesy" demands the use of rank and not pay grades, and civilians "should be addressed as Mr., Miss, Mrs., or

The Army missive follows a Nov. 1 memo issued to all Navy bases and ships by Navy Secretary John F. Lehman. Lehman announced he was scrapping earlier efforts by civilians to mask the Navy's heritage by using such terms as "unaccompanied enlisted personnel housing.'

Henceforth, Lehman wrote, sailors will call them barracks. Terms such as mess, bachelor's quarters, ladder, topside, deck and passageway also received Lehman's stamp of approval.

For a time, Navy officers posted to the Pentagon gave directions by using the word "ladder" for "stairways.

It's Beans again!

By GENA WALLS

You might remember this week's column as it is a repeat of a column that first appeared in 1983. I have received a number of requests for this piece which has been published in several genealogical columns. I do not know the author. A special THANK YOU to all the readers that send material to be shared with others

THE BEAN FAMILY

We were working on the family tree when our visitor arrived. "On my mother's side," I explained, we're tracing the McNeils, Scots who came to Carolina in the 1700s."

"Fascinating," said the visitor. "I have Scots in my family too, the McBeans. They dropped the Mc and were just known as the Beans.

"How interesting," I said. "From Scotland," he said, sipping a Scotch, "the Beans migrated all over the world and became quite famous. "Well," I said, somewhat miffed, the McNeils, too, are pretty hot stuff, there was .. I RECOLLECT.' he interrupted, "hearing about an ancestor who fled to Peru after being persecuted by the British. Family's still there. The Lima Beans "Fascinating," I said. "But the McNeils.

There there was John Paul Bean, who commanded a frigate in the War of 1812. His male descendants have all been Annapolis graduates. A patriotic bunch, those Navy Beans.

'Now listen here,'' I protested. There there was McTavish Bean," he persisted, "a mercenary for a Polish count in 1774. Stayed in Warsaw and started a line that exists to this day. Perhaps you heard of them, the Pole Beans.

'Then, of course," he went on, "There was the German branch, industrialists, famed for their elegant automobiles. The Mercedes Beans.

"I don't believe this," I said. "You just don't know Beans," he said. "Lady Flora Dora Bean is immortalized in Madame

Tussaud's London Museum. She's known as the Wax Bean. Great great uncle Amos settled in Mexico, where he perfected chili con carne. But he hated the Mexican heat and moved his family to icy Alaska. We call them-

"The Chilly Beans?" I guessed. "Of course. I might add that Beans have always intergrated fully with native cultures. A branch of the Beans intermarried with a Cuban family, the famed Garbanzo Beans, and with a Mandarin line in China, the Soy Beans. Then there are the Black Beans in Swaziland - all of noble birth - and the Scot -Sioux line descending directly from Crazy Horse: the Red Beans.

"You are trying to tell me that every last Bean was a paragon of virtue and nobility?'' I said.
''Well,'' he said sheepishly.

"There was a gangster, Machine Gun Bean. He got the electric chair. Odd thing though. The power failed just as they threw the switch. They had to make repairs before electrocuting him. We have a little joke in the family about him: the Refried Bean. "This is going too far."

"Oh, I could tell you stories," he said. "The Swaziland Beans still hunt lions with spears — the Bean Stalk we call it. Then there is my idiot brother, the Bean Dip and his ugly wife, the Bean Bag, and his maddening children, the Bean Sprouts, and the annual family dance, the Bean Ball..

"Stop, stop," I cried. "I'll never mention the McNeils again.

"Oh," he said downing his whiskey and rising to depart. "I nearly forgot the French branch of the family. "I never heard of any French

Beans," I said. "Of course not," he said. "They changed their name to Legume.

SCARE UP a few materials you probably have on hand, and make these Halloween decorations in time for the big day! They look great as a party table centerpiece, or combine them with a branch of fall leaves as a door decoration.

Time to start Halloween decorations

Before you groan and tell me I'm rushing the season with these Halloween decorations, let me ask you to think about this:

How many times you have waited until the week before, scurried madly about town purchasing materials, then wound up having to buy those cheap-o commercial decorations because something came up at the last minute and you couldn't finish making what you had planned?

So you finish making your decorations the week AFTER the holiday, intending to use them the next year, which is an entire YEAR early instead of just one month.

I rest my case. These easy Halloween characters are the perfect centerpiece for a party table, or you can combine them with a branch of fall leaves to hang on your door. They're inexpensive, too, requiring only some scraps of felt, a little fiberfill, a cardboard tube, buttons and old pantyhose or nylon stockings.

To make the ghost, cut the foot portion from a leg of nurse's white hose and insert a 5-inch-long white cardboard tube into the foot. Tuck the open end of the hose into the top of the tube and glue in place. This is the basic ghost body

For the head, wrap a four-inch circle of hose around a wad of fiberfill. Tie off the hose and glue the head to the body tube.

For the ghost's shroud, cut an eight-inch long section from the remaining white hose. Cut this tube of material in half diagonally and fringe each half along the diagonal edge at 1/2 inch intervals.

Gather the straight raw edge of each fringed tube and slip them

Wrap a small circle of hose around a small ball of fiberfill to create each hand. Soft sculpt the fingers and glue the hands to the front of the body. Cut two oval eyes from black felt and glue them in

Officers installed at ACS dinner

The Gray-Roberts unit of the American Cancer Society hosted its annual dinner and business meeting at the Pampa Country Club recently.

After dinner, the minutes were read and the treasurer's report given. The following committe members gave reports: Leona Willis, crusade; Pat Leach, public information; Nellie Norman, service rehabilitation; Nadine Fletcher, public education and Jim Finkenbinder, the Great American Smokeout.

Finkenbinder then presented a special award to outgoing president, Shirley Wooldridge. She then presented a number of certificates of appreciation.

The following officers were installed at the meeting: Jim Finkenbinder, president; Nadine Fletcher, vice president; Gerry Caylor, secretary; and Betty Tom Graham, treasurer.

The American Cancer Society welcomes anyone who desires to become a member. For more information, contact any of the local ACS officers.

DEAR ABBY: I am a male U.S. Marine, stationed in Okinawa, Japan. I read "Dear Abby" in the Pacific Stars and Stripes and consider you a personal friend.

Being stationed in a foreign country, far from family and friends, presents problems. Many servicemen drink more than they should out of boredom and loneliness. I try to keep busy with my work, lifting weights and reading, but the brightest spot in my day is when I get a letter from home-which is not very

I live with a platoon of young Marines who are desperately waiting for mail from home. The folks back home seem to have forgotten us. Abby, please tell your readers who have a son, daughter, husband, wife, girlfriend or boyfriend in the service to please write. And if any of your readers want to correspond with a guy or a gal (there are women in the service here, too), they can write to me. I promise to distribute their letters to Marines who would appreciate a pen pal. Thank you, Abby. MEL IN OKINAWA

DEAR ABBY: A long-time friend, whom I love dearly, is due to come soon for her annual two-week visit.

In the past, we have learned to live with each other's idiosyncrasies in order to preserve our friendship, but something occurred on her last stay that I don't think I can put up with again. I love cats, and wish I had a dozen, but I have only one "Whiskers," whom I adore. My friend (I'll call her Carolyn) hates cats. On her last visit, I saw her actually kick Whiskers out of her way.

After I had told her that Whiskers was not allowed to go outside because coyotes had killed several small pets in my neighborhood, she deliberately left my back door wide open several times!

I was so shocked by Carolyn's behavior, I couldn't even confront her about it. I feel guilty letting her come again, because I really don't

Miami couple to sing for local church

The Harrah United Methodist Church, 639 S. Barnes, will present David and Sharon Thweatt of Miami in a musical program at 6 p.m. Sunday.

The talented couple have composed several religious numbers either together or separately, said Rev. Gene B. Louder, pastor.

David plays the guitar and Sharon plays the violin and piano. Most of the material they will be performing are their original compositions though they also will compositions, though they also will be presenting some traditional hymns.

The couple have been singing together since January, 1980. They were married in 1981. Sharon is originally from Kilgore and David from Abilene. Currently they are both teaching in Miami, where she uses her talent as a music teacher and he teaches English and speech. "Whenever they are asked, they are eager to perform," Rev. Louder said. "Their goal is to magnify the Lord through their music." Following the program there will be a salad supper in the church fellowship hall.

Rev. Louder extended an invitation from him and other congregation members for all interested persons to attend the special service Sunday night.

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — West German Old Catholics and Protestants of the Evangelical Church in Germany and the United Evangelical Lutheran Church of Germany have a d to "eucharistic fellowship," sharing in Holy Communion.

sharing in Holy Communion.

Church officials called it "an important ecumenical step." The Old Catholic Church broke away from Roman Catholicism in production of the doctrine of papal infallibility.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) —
Analyzing some religious usages of Soviet Communist party chief Mikhail Gorbachev, the National Catholic Reporter suggests several possible explanations, including:
— That his phrases, such as

— That his phrases, such as "God on high," were Slavic cultural usages rather than reflecting any personal belief, and were directed at U.S. believers.

— That his phrasing may also have been directed to home consumption because of increased religious belief there, according to Gerald Michaelson of the University of Kansas's Slavic languages department. He says:

"There is a resurgence of religious belief within the Soviet Union and an increased respect for belief — even by those of no belief — as part of the venerable Russian past and the religius nunderpinning of the country."

Gorbachev, in an interview with Time magazine, said, "God on high has not refused to give us enough wisdom to find ways to bring improvement...in the relations of the two great nations on earth, nations on whom depends the very destiny of civilization."

He also referred to "mortal sin" and used the Biblical quotation about "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth" in Leviticus 24:20, in one of his comments.

Arthur Jones, Washington bureau chief of the independent Catholic daily, also suggests Gorbachev could have learned such religious imagery from his parents, who were born in pre-revolutionary Russia, and conceivably were raised as Orthodox Christians.

Sculptor of Indians comes home for exhibit

By JAN TOMAS San Angelo Standard-Times

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) -Sculptor Lincoln Fox has returned to his hometown bearing southwestern Indian bronzes for a special exhibit.

The bronzes, on view at Iman Galleries, depict Indians catching and dancing, carrying game or wearing ceremonial headdresses. The Indian men are powerful, with rippling muscles. They seem imbued with mystical qualities.

Fox, 43, has exhibited works in museums and galleries around the nation, including the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C., the National Academy of Western Art at the National Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, and the Armand Hammer Invitational Exhibition at the United World College in Albuquerque, N.M.

The works will be on exhibit here through Oct. 1.

He received his bachelor's degree in fine arts at the University of Texas and his master's from the University of Dallas in Irving. State panel cracks down on auto dealer advertising AUSTIN (AP) - "Last Call! Sensational new pricing policy has Houston in a buying frenzy!" the Chevy dealer's ad screamed to customers infected by the costly bite of the new-car bug. "Never pay 'retail' again,'' the ad said.

Hyperbole and bombast are common in car dealer ads. So are asterisks, which can lead to a small-print explanation of why the big-print price isn't what it seems.

Perceiving puffery that surpasses the boundary of fair play, the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission is cracking down on ads. Landmark Chevrolet of Houston, which ran the "buying frenzy" ad, recently paid a $60,000 fine, 10 times larger than any fine ever assessed by the commission.

'The commission felt like over the past several years, some advertising practices were being followed in various markets, particularly the very competitive markets, that were not right, that were deceptive," said Robert Hoy, commission chairman.

The Texas Automobile Dealers Association says dealers welcome close scrutiny of their ads

We've seen cycles of excessive ads. Things happen, times get bad and whoever it is, auto dealers or others, stretch the thing as far as they can," said TADA executive Tom Blanton.

Hoy, an El Paso car dealer, understands advertising's crucial

"Most of the ads that are illegal do generate traffic, unfortunately. If people go in thinking they are going to get a good bargain, whatever happens, they think they got a good bargain," he said.

Henri ten Brink, a commission ssistant director who monitors the ads, agreed, saying, "I never met a person who bought a car that got a bad deal." Or, at least, thought they got a good deal. The commission has seven pages of rules aimed at protecting consumers from deceptive ads.

"It had gotten real bad in the Houston market and the rest of the state was kind of following." said ten Brink. "The car business is a very competitive business. The dealers for the most part don't want to do deceptive advertising. But if the guy down the street is doing it and it's working and taking away business, in order to compete, he's got to do it.'

The $60,000 fine against Landmark Chevrolet was assessed after the commission decided the Houston dealer was "baiting and switching" by advertising low prices and steering customers to more expensive models. About 5 percent of 1,510 car sales reviewed by the commission were sold by Landmark at the advertised prices, according to ten Brink.

Landmark's ad offered new Chevettes for $4,187 or $95.07 a month. But you could not buy a new Chevette for $95.07 a month from Landmark. You could lease one. And "not very many" Chevettes were sold for $4,187, ten Brink said records showed Landmark also advertised a "loaded" Caprice for $7,976, a seemingly impossibly low price. How loaded was the car?

'That's a loaded Caprice that doesn't include air conditioning. It says here 'automatic transmission, power steering, power brakes, luxury and comfort.' Those are standard features," said ten Brink, adding that Landmark sold, at most, one Caprice at that price during six months of advertising.

Landmark claimed the commission rules are unconstitutionally vague and unenforceable." But the dealer paid the fine. A copy of the check is framed in ten Brink's office.

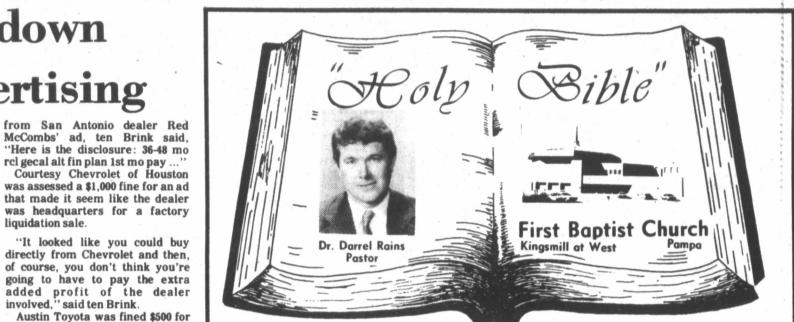

Landmark general manager Jim Johnson said the dealership, which is owned by a Georgia businessman, made no admission

'We paid the fine. We felt like we were paying a fee to enter the market." Johnson said.

'We aggressively entered the market in a high profile. Our sales have been terrific. We undercut pricing and the powers-that-be felt a need to humble us. I wouldn't know how to bait and switch someone if I set out to do it."

Commission files are full of ads that violated the rules. Most drew fines of $500 or $1,000.

Some dealers ran afoul of the fine print rule that requires conspicuous placement of any qualifications or disclosures about advertised prices. Reading aloud

WARREN HASSE

IT TOOK THE TWO schools a long while to realize that completion of the Canadian River bridge, and the subsequent easy bus ride, made them natural sports opponents. That fact, coupled with a growth in enrollment at Perryton and a decrease at Pampa, the two got together in football for the first time in 1964.

Other than a four-year hiatus from 1978-81 the teams have met annually, Pampa holding a slight 10-7 edge in the series. John Kendall is the sixth Harvester coach to face the Rangers, while Coach Robert Langford is the fourth Perryton mentor to meet Pampa, and the first Harvester grid captain in our memory to oppose his former team. Tonight will mark the fourth confrontation between the two coaches, and each time the host team has been victorious.

Under Langford's direction, the Rangers won at home in 1982 (6-0) and last year (29-15). Kendall's win came in 1983 at Harvester Field (26-9) when the Pampa defense held Perryton's all-state running back, Roger Bocox, to just 29 yards in 14 carries. Quick and speedy Anthony Scott romped for 210 yards and two scores for Pampa in helping to produce the Green and Gold's first win of the season, an eventual 5-5 campaign.

The task tonight again will be given to the defense, which thus far has been very suspect. Only the name has been changed. In the past it was the running of names like Beck, Pshigoda, Pletcher and Bocox. Tonight it is 200-pound Mike McKinley, who averaged over 110 yards per game as a sophomore last year. And he has plenty of talented offensive help, including Taylor Newcomb, a transfer from Canadian, whose father, Gary, was once a member of the Pampa staff.

The Rangers are the slight pre-season favorite to win District 1-3A, possibly as tough and balanced a conference as there is in the Panhandle every year. It includes such perennials as the Childress Bobcats, Dalhart Wolves and Canadian Wildcats, developing River Road, and occasional upstart Boys Ranch. Pampa will be the third 4A opponent for Perryton, which already owns wins over Borger and Dumas, before losing at Altus, Oklahoma's Homecoming Game last weekend. It's Homecoming at PHS tonight, too, which should add considerable enthusiasm to the night's activities, on and off the field.

In beating the other two 1-4A teams, the Rangers outscored them 33-12. Pampa, meanwhile, has had a malfunctioning defense, allowing an average of nearly 34 points per game, by far the poorest in the district. But it has also been able to generate some scoring, the 53 points second only to state-ranked and unbeaten Lubbock Estacado, and only two touchdowns away from last years entire point production. For the record, the winning team in the series has generally relied on defense. Only four times in the 17-game series has the loser scored more than one TD, and there have been five shutouts recorded, three of them by Pampa defenses. GAME NOTES: Pampa opens district play next week at Dumas; Perryton entertains Guymon before traveling to Canadian for a critical contest Oct. 11...In other games tonight, Vernon is at Borger, Dalhart at Canyon, Dumas at Guymon, Levelland at Hobbs. Lubbock Dunbar at Pecos, and Estacado at Monahans. Estacado (3-0) and Dunbar (2-1) are the only district teams with winning records...Despite his 5-10, 165 pound stature, too small by most college standards, Ranger coach Langford was selected as the all-time middle linebacker at his alma mater, New Mexico State. Chosen by the fans, that team included such stars as all-pro quarterback Dr. Charlie Johnson and NCAA scoring champions Preacher Pilot and Bob Gaiters...Pampa assistant athletic director Garland Nichols has been hospitalized this week with a blood clot...Seating capacity at Harvester Park is just under 6,000, and most of those should be covered tonight...To help get them in and out, would it be possible that the North Gate could be used, as in seasons past, to allow ticket holders entrance there, and post-game exit through that facility?...All remaining Harvester games are 8 p.m. kickoffs...Enrollment at Perryton HS is listed at approximately 460...USA Today lists East St. Louis, Ill. HS as the No. 1 schoolboy football team in the nation. Odessa Permian is rated No. 9, the only Texas team in the top 25...Homecoming Queen will be crowned at halftime. Nominees are Kellye Welborn, Kelly Finkenbinder, Mary Cross, Shannon Churchman, Kim Bauers, and Rogena Fly...Langford is in his 14th season at Perryton, six as assistant to Don Beck, the last eight as head coach. Son Monty, who sparked last year's Ranger win, is a freshman walkon footballer at Texas Tech...Next Thursday the Shockers are at Amarillo Jayvees, Pampa Ninth hosts Borger. PHS hosts Levelland in tennis tomorrow, while volleyball travels to Dunbar and then participates in the Perryton triangular next Tuesday...Tickets may be purchased at gametime at the West Booth, too...Kendall points to Bay City, perennial 4A power, as an outstanding program where five athletes participate in two sports and four in three sports. Head football coach and athletic director at Bay City is Ron Mills, former Skellytown-White Deer-West Texas State star athlete...Thanks to Pampa

Harvesters tackle Rangers in 1985 homecoming grid game

By L.D. STRATE Pampa News Sports Editor

There's been a lot of give-and-take in Pampa High's first three games this season. The Harvesters have been doing the giving and the opposition has been doing the taking. But Harvester head coach John Kendall is hoping the spirit of homecoming can make a difference in tonight's game with Class 3A power Perryton.

"After three losses, it's hard to get up for the next game, but I'm hoping homecoming can pick us up some," Kendall said.

No doubt Pampa's non-district schedule has been tough, and Perryton is no exception. The Rangers have won two of three games against bigger schools. knocking off Borger, 26-6, and Dumas, 7-6, before losing to Oklahoma powerhouse Altus, 28-7,

'We haven't faced any slouches ourselves," Kendall said. "Our schedule has been demanding and I'm hoping it will help us when district starts. There's pros and cons on that viewpoint though."

Pampa opens the District 1-4A season against Dumas next Friday

The Harvesters, especially their offense, have shown a marked improvement over last season. Pampa has scored 53 points in three games compared to only seven a year ago against the same three foes. And fullback Gary Jernigan, who rushed for 169 yards and two touchdowns in Pampa's opener, has seen only limited action the last two games.

"It looks like Jernigan (who had an bruised shoulder) will be at full speed tonight," Kendall said.

However, the Harvesters may lose cornerback James Ellison for

"Ellison has twisted his knee, but I don't know if he'll be able to play any or not," Kendall added. Swingback Courtney Nickleberry will also be playing defense if Ellison is unable to play, Kendall loss to Perryton last season, but Kendall knows it won't be easy.

Pampa hopes to avenge a 29-15

"This may be one of Perryton's best clubs. They've got a power-type team with three good backs," Kendall said.

Mike McKinley, a 200-pound junior, rushed for 318 yards and two touchdowns in Perryton's opening win over Borger. McKinley scored a touchdown and rushed for 149 yards against Dumas. McKinley was held to only 55 yards against Dumas, but scored Perryton's only TD on a 25-yard run.

Perryton coach Robert Langford, a Pampa High grad. feels the Harvesters have one of the best 0-3 teams around.

"They've got an outstanding team with good speed and good size," Langford said. "They've been like we were last week, overscheduled. Pampa has played three strong teams.'

Tailback Mark Williams. fullback Gary Jernigan, linebacker David Carter and offensive guard David McGrath are three Harvesters Langford is concerned

"Williams will be as fast a back as we've seen this year, Langford said. "You have to defense the whole field against him because he does an excellent job of finding daylight. Both Williams and Jernigan were on Pampa's sprint relay team, I think, so they've got good speed in the back field.

"McGrath is a good, strong blocker and we don't have anybody his size (245 pounds) that can match up with him. Carter is one of the best linebackers in the area. He can cover a lot of territory.

Carter was Pampa's leading tackler against Clovis with five individual tackles and 10 assists. He also recovered a fumble.

Langford is well aware that tonight is Pampa's homecoming

"It's always nice to play the old alma mater," Langford said. "I have a lot of fond memories there, but it's been so long ago probably not too many people remember

The Southwest Conference, second to none when it comes to family feudin', opens its regular season Saturday with two games that will be televised and draw big crowds to Waco and Fort Worth.

Unbeaten Texas Tech (3-0) travels to Waco to meet those bad Baylor Bears who knocked off then No. 3-ranked Southern California last Saturday night. The Bears are 2-1 with a victory over Wyoming and a narrow loss to Georgia.

Regional television cameras will capture the noon kickoff with some 30,000 fans expected on Parent's Day. Oddsmakers see Baylor as a 10-point favorite.

Southern Methodist and Texas Christian, two teams who have had business with the NCAA checking out recruiting violations, collide at 6:45 p.m. in Fort Worth's Amon Carter Stadium.

SMU was placed on probation for three years before the season began because of recruiting violations while the NCAA began an investigation Wedneday of the Horned Frogs after seven players admitted taking cash from Five TCU starters will be missing from defense and All-American running back Kenneth Davis will be gone from the offense because of the scandal.

Pro Picks

The Miami Dolphins, says Dan Reeves, are the kind of team he'd like to coach. So Reeves is settling for second best - coaching the Denver Broncos against the Dolphins this Sunday.

That's not so bad — the Broncos had the second best record in the AFC last year, 13-3 to Miami's 14-2. But this week's game is less about that than the first meeting of the two most successful quarterbacks to emerge from the quarterback-rich 1983 National Football League draft - Dan Marino and John Elway.

The oddsmakers make Marino-Elway I pick 'em, which is just about the difference between the two quarterbacks - after a couple of years in Marino's shadow, Elway is emerging as the glamour boy he was supposed to be and has outpassed him so far this

But Marino, a holdout for 39 days, is just starting to come around. And the Broncos have lived by the sack - 14 in three games. Marino hasn't been sacked yet; The pick is DOLPHINS.

John Mayberry will now have to move over for Steve Balboni ... and the California Angels will have to make some room at the top for the Kansas City Royals.

With a swing of his bat Thursday night, Balboni not only surpassed a Kansas City home run record held for 10 years by Mayberry, but also helped the Royals move into a flatfooted tie with the idle Angels for first place in the American League West.

"Now we have to go to Minnesota and do the same," said Balboni after his 35th homer keyed a 5-2 victory over the Seattle Mariners. "It's going to come down to our upcoming series with California.

'That was a big home run," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said of Balboni's two-run blast in the sixth inning that insured the Royals' victory. "It was like a lot of the others he's hit this year. Just check the 'homers he's hit ... they've all been against the better pitchers in the league."

In the AL East, the Toronto Blue Jays lost a 4-1 decision to the Boston Red Sox, dropping their lead over the New York Yankees to 51/2 games.

Elsewhere, it was Texas 2, Minnesota 0; Baltimore 9, Milwaukee 1; and Chicago 11, Oakland 7. Rain washed out the New York-Detroit game.

Rockets sign Harris

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Rockets signed No. 1 draft choice guard Steve Harris and veteran guard Lewis Lloyd to four-year contracts in time to start two-a-day workouts today.

Harris, 6-5, 195, from the University of Tulsa, signed a contract that will pay him $800,000 over the next four seasons. The first three years are guaranteed.

The Rockets are hoping to use Harris' outside shooting touch to take inside pressure off Twin Towers Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson.

Lloyd, a two-year starter for the Rockets, received a $50,000 signing bonus but his contract is not guaranteed

Rockets Coach Bill Fitch greeted 18 players today for the first workout in preparation for the team's exhibition opener Oct. 5 against Detroit in Tampa Fla.

Man gets death sentence in slaying

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas (AP) Hernandez' wife wept when State A San Antonio man has been sentenced to death in the murder of an illegal alien who with several others was robbed, forced to lie face up and shot after coming to Texas by hopping a freight train.

Rudolfo Hernandez, 36, was convicted of capital murder Wednesday in the March slaying of Victor Serrano Cervan, 20. The jury deliberated six hours Thursday before returning the death sentence

Two of the four other Mexican nationals who were shot but survived, described by the prosecutor as "meat to slaughter" in the hands of "a cold-blooded killer" had testified that Hernandez made them lie face up while he went from one to another pumping bullets into their necks as close as four inches away

District Judge Robert Pfueffer read the sentence of the jury. The defendant appeared shaken.

Court-appointed defense attorney John Chunn of New Braunfels said it was natural that he felt disappointed.

'I guess if I ever quit feeling disappointed, I'm not doing my job," Chunn said. "The jury has done what they think is right - and as an officer of the court, I'm going to respect that verdict.

Comal County District Attorney Bill Schroeder said, "As long as people kill members of our society, and if we have no other recourse than this alternative, then I think the jury's verdict is proper.

resulted in five deaths - a massacre. Once the jury grasped this, then they had really no recourse but to return the verdict of death," said Schroeder, who had guided the jury to the guilty verdict on Wednesday.

The five aliens were attacked after they hopped a San Antonio-bound freight train at the international border in Eagle Pass and accepted a ride after arriving in San Antonio.

They were driven to the countryside in Comal County between San Antonio and Austin, robbed and attacked.

During his summation, Chunn attacked Schroeder's case as being "riddled with reasonable doubts."

But Schroeder replied: "Even the atrocities of war don't necessarily follow that rule.
