Pampan draws sentence of 25 years

By PAUL PINKHAM Staff Writer

A 34 - year - old Pampa man is headed to the state penitentiary for a fourth time, following his conviction Friday of illegal possession of a

Cecil Ray Williams was handed a 25 - year sentence, the minimum, by 31st District Judge Grainger McIlhany after a jury of four men and eight women found him guilty of carrying a handgun in his truck. Because he had previously been convicted of a violent crime, Williams was prohibited from carrying a

Williams' prior convictions include burglary convictions in 1970 and 1973 and striking a child several years ago

The jury deliberated for more than an hour before reaching its verdict against the tatooed

Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton asked the judge for a life sentence, noting that McIlhany had sent the defendant to the penitentiary three times already. He accused the defendant of attempting to manipulate the criminal justice system.

'Nothing this court's done has got this man's attention," Hamilton told the judge. "He's manipulated you. He's manipulated me.

Hamilton also commented on Williams' appearance in the courtroom, claiming the defendant showed contempt for the

"He comes into the courtroom without even enough respect to put on a tie and a long leeve shirt and he parades those tatoos around and that great big swastika on his arm, Hamilton said.

Williams was dressed in a short - sleeve shirt, jeans and boots. Tatoos decorated his

David Holt, Williams' attorney, asked for the minimum 25 - year sentence, noting nobody was harmed by Williams' offense

"I can't see any justification for sentencing him more than 25 years," Holt said.

In his arguments before the judge and in closing arguments before the jury. Holt pointed to testimony showing that Hamilton attempted to strike a deal with his client. According to testimony by Detective Danny Lance of the Pampa Police Department, Williams was told the firearm charge would be dropped if the defendant helped make cases against people he claimed were operating a methamphetamine laboratory in Elk City,

Vol. 78, No. 121 3 sections, 38 pages

But Hamilton argued that the firearm conviction was worth trading because the Elk City area provides a high percentage of the methamphetamines in the Pampa area. He also noted Williams asked for the deal but did not hold up his end of the bargain.

"Look at what we were after.

Holt also questioned whether law officers had probable cause for a search and whether his client was illegally detained the night he

'The fact that he's been convicted of a felony doesn't take away his right to be free from unreasonable searches." Holt said

Hamilton said Holt realized the facts were '100 percent against him' and was trying to 'tippy - toe through the probable cause law.

After sentencing, Williams asked the judge if he could have some time to spend with his family before going to prison but the judge said the law required he be taken into custody immediately. Hamilton later said Williams probably will be eligible for parole in five or six

Holt did not indicate whether he plans to appeal the verdict or sentence.

Hundreds of laws to take effect Sept. 1

AUSTIN (AP) - Hundreds of new state laws take effect Sept. 1, and two in particular will change the habits of many Texans mandatory auto seat belt use and repeal of the Sunday-closing Blue

But the real effects of those laws may not be felt that first day.

The fines backing up the seat belt law won't start until Dec. 1, and many Texas retail stores already have thrown away their Sunday

"Closed" signs. During the regular legislative session that ended May 27, the Senate and House passed a total of 1,024 bills. Some that got a two-thirds vote of approval became effective immediately, and others became effective 90 days after the session on May 26. But most become law on Sept. 1, the beginning of the state's new two-year business period.

A lot of the lawmakers' time was spent talking about state revenues. or the lack of them, but possibily more was devoted to seat the Blue Law

The new seat belt law states that anyone in the front seat of a moving automobile or small pickup must be wearing a lap seat belt. State troopers first will give warnings to those not wearing the belts, but fines of $25 to $50 will be issued after Dec. 1.

Gov. Mark White said he was 'reluctant'' to sign anything that might infringe on individual freedom, but he later did television spots, sponsored by car manufacturers, urging all Texans to "buckle up." Sponsors said the law will save more than 1,000 lives

Repeal of the Blue Law is effective Sept. 1, but many retailers started opening up on Sundays almost immediately after White signed the bill on May 31.

The Blue Law, enacted in 1961, prohibited the sale of 42 items on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays, effectively banning Sunday sales of the items.

Originally, supporters said the measure was aimed at discount houses, since it specifically prohibited sales of furniture, clothing, hardware and appliances.

The repeal does not affect Sunday sales of automobiles, because auto dealers did not want to be included. But the ban is listed off everything else, and state officials estimate the new Sunday sales will bring in additional sales tax revenue of $24 million to $40

Most Texans won't notice it, but the biggest bill, financially, that becomes effective Sept. 1 is the $36.9 billion state budget for 1986-87

It includes a 3 percent annual pay raise for state employees. although part of the second-year cost is made up by doing away with two state holidays - Columbus Day and general election day.

It also includes $35 million in special funds to attract high technology to Texas, a $4 monthly increase in welfare payments to needy children, and extra money to help the state prison system and the state mental health department fend off federal court orders that said Texas was not taking proper care of prisoners and the mentally handicapped.

Two other laws taking effect Aug. 26 and Sept. 1 will help the state pay its bills the next two

Cat that bit boy sought

Pampa animal control officials have appealed for help from the public in locating a cat that bit a five-year-old boy last week.

If the cat is not located by Aug. 31, the youth will have to undergo a series of painful shots as a precaution against rabies. If the cat is located and found not to be rabid, the shots can be avoided.

Animal control officials described the animal as a full-grown calico cat. Its colors are orange, white and black. They cat is pregnant, they said.

Anyone spotting the cat is asked to contact the animal shelter at 669-6149 during working hours, or the Pampa Police Department if it is seen at night. Animal control officials warned citizens not to try to capture the cat because of the possibility that they might get bit or scare it away

It's registration time for area schools

Thanks to a state law requiring a uniform school year, classes at area school districts will all begin the same day: Sept. 3 And that means that most area districts will be conducting enrollment and registration during the coming week State law also requires that students new to a district provide immunization records and parents of kindergarteners and first graders with a birth certificate and immunization records. Also, several schools require report cards from previous schools.

A complete list of registration schedules for area schools and telephone numbers of people to call for more information is on Page 11 today.

South Africa hit by more violence

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Seizing people at home and off the street, security police reported arresting 27 anti-apartheid leaders in a 24-hour period ending Saturday

It was another day of racial violence throughout South Africa. Zulu warriors with clubs and spears attacked dozens of blacks near Durban, wounding an undetermined number, after illegal funerals for blacks killed in

Near the white town of Aliwal North, in northern Cape province, four blacks were wounded when police fired bird shot at crowds, a police spokesman said, speaking anonymously in accordance with government rules. The township, wracked by violence last week, is about 200 miles north of Port Elizabeth.

Anti-apartheid disturbances were reported in more than a dozen other townships throughout the country, but there were no deaths, police said.

All 27 of the people detained appeared to be supporters of the multiracial United Democratic Front, the main organization opposing apartheid, the system through which 5 million whites dominate and deny the vote to 24 million blacks. Friends said physician Dr. Farouk Meer, the Front's acting Durban drug store. Anglican Rev Syd Lockett, national director of his church's Board of Social Responsibility, was detained outside his home near Cape Town, colleagues said.

They were jailed under long-established security laws, not the five-week-old state-of-emergency regulations under which more than 2,000 people have been held without access to lawyers or family. Of those people, 1,038 people were still in cells Saturday

More than 600 people, almost all blacks, have died in a year of strife, about half killed by police and others by blacks who suspected them of complicity with the government. About 120 of the victims were killed after emergency law was imposed in 36 regions.

Louis le Grange, the law and order minister, warned of "stern action" if activists carry out a demonstration Wednesday to demand freedom for Nelson Mandela, the jailed black leader. The man who called for the march, mixed-race Rev. Allan Boesak, could not be found Friday. Outside Durban, a band of 200 to 300 Zulus carrying spears, shields, clubs and machetes chased away black mourners from among the 8,000 who buried eight riot victims

Mauro broke law claims GOP official

WACO, Texas (AP) chairman of the Republican Party in McLennan County says Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's use of his name and picture in advertisments promoting the veterans land program may be a violation of the state constitution. Craig Reid told the Waco Tribune-Herald he had relayed his protest to the state GOP headquarters in Austin.

But a spokesman for Mauro, a Democrat seeking re-election, says no laws have been broken because no state money has been used in putting up the signs along highways and other advertising.

Reid said he took the action after Rep. M.A. Taylor, R-Waco, pointed out a section of the Texas Constitution that says advertisements about the benefits of Texas may not include either the name or the picture of any living state official

Robert Mead, Mauro's executive assistant, said Mauro had been aware of the constitutional provision. However, Mead said, no state money has been used for the billboards or similar advertising.

The billboards have a large color photograph of Mauro with his name and the words: "Texas Veterans Program: the best in the USA." The largest lettering on the sign is the telephone number: 1-800-252-VETS.

"We believe there may be something to this on the legality side and if there is not anything actually legally impacting on this, it is certainly the ethical intent of Legislature to prevent current office holders from kusing their office as a campaign tool, when the message is to educate," Reid said.

Reid said if Mauro's billboards are allowed to stand, other incumbent Democrats may be posting 'informative' advertisement along the highways.

Mauro was elected in 1982 on a platform that included expanding the veterans land program to allow the purchase of homes as well as

A spokesman in Mauro's office said there are 280 of the billboards in Texas, with signboard companies volunteering the space and labor for the signs.

Harralson's friend freed

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge has granted the early release of William Hampton Robinson III. serving a 10-year prison sentence on drug charges, and allowed him to leave for a Colorado ranch.

State District Judge William

Harmon on Friday granted Hampton "shock" probation under a new law usually reserved for first offenders, prosecutors said. The law allows a judge to decide whether an offender serving prison

time has been shocked into good

behavior and should be released on

"He's here for two drug offenses, not aggravated robbery or murder," the judge said of his convicted of Wood's murder.

Robinson, 37, the son of a prominent Southeast Texas surgeon and rancher, was convicted of negligent homicide in the 1977 death of a Victoria rancher. Four years later, Robinson was accused of murdering a longtime friend, but the charge was dismissed after key witnesses disappeared. Robinson also was subpoenaed by federal grand juries investigating the 1979 slaying of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. in San Antonio. He eventually testified against Charles V. Harrelson, a friend who was

Chamber needs data for calendar

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce will begin publishing its monthly newsletter and Community Calendar for the new chamber year beginning Sept. 1, according to President Phil

The date(s), time and location of the event should be included

be included in the September calendar must be in the chamber office no later than Wednesday, Aug. 28. Gentry said the earlier an event can be placed on the calendar, the better it is to insure its inclusion in the newsletter. Gentry also urged clubs and organizations to check with the chamber office to see what is already scheduled before setting the date for an event. If organizations would do this, many conflicts of events between organizations on the same date could be avoided, Gentry said. The chamber office can be reached by calling 669-3241 or by writing to P.O. Box 1942, Pampa,

Harmon said he offered Robinson two choices: staying in prison a few more months and being paroled with a felony record or accepting shock probation and risking a 20-year sentence if he violates the terms.

Robinson will stay at an undisclosed Colorado ranch and will be supervised by authorities in that state. Harmon said. He also must write to a probation officer in Houston once a month, the judge

Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers, who prosecuted the drug cases, blasted the judge's decision. "It's an absolute injustice. He now goes to Colorado with less supervision than he's ever had. He can literally do as he pleases,'

Beers said. Robinson was arrested on a drug charge in October 1983, Beers said. While on bond, he was arrested on a second charge

In January 1984, visiting State District Judge Frank Price sentenced Robinson to two 10-year probated terms. Six months later, State District Judge Dan Walton revoked the probation and sentenced Robinson to 10 years in prison, Beers said

While appealing the sentence, he was arrested in January in Fort Bend County, south of Houston, on another drug charge. Chief Prosecutor Frank Follis said the charge was dismissed after

I came home from work, flipped on the television and sat down to listen to the evening news. What I heard and saw shocked me.

'The president today signed into law legislation that outlaws obesity in America," the reporter said. "Beginning Sept. 1, it will be a crime for anyone to be obese.'

The camera then switched to a shot of that venerable Washington correspondent Sam Donaldson, grey - haired and looking rather aged (I'd never noticed Sam had aged until then; I recalled his younger days and how he used to sharply quiz heads of state in press conferences), standing in front of the Capitol building and explaining the president's reasoning in signing the new law.

He cited statistics that showed obesity as the number one killer in America. He told us the president felt Americans need to be protected from this plaguing disease. And, for those like me who scoffed at the reasoning of protecting us from ourselves, he mentioned the president's commitment to keeping insurance rates down for those law - abiding Americans who maintained a healthier,

We'd been hearing the stories all summer. How Congress had bent to the wishes of the powerful health spa lobby in Washington and passed the obesity law. But we never believed the president, who ran on the idea of getting government out of the lives of everyday Americans, would stand behind such a bill.

My first reaction was to run to the kitchen and dump the potato chips, beer and cheesecake into the trash. But, before I could move, I reflected back on a series of laws that had transformed my beloved America into a virtual police state.

I thought of laws passed through the 1990s that outlawed many items the government found marginally hazardous to the lives of Americans and a whole other series of laws that required Americans to better safeguard their lives:

- The 1991 law that forced TV manufacturers to install a device in all sets that shut them off after three hours of consecutive viewing because Congress was convinced by the book - publishers lobby that TV was making jelly out of the brains of Americans. Consequently, cable companies, which begged for an unreceived exemption from the Too Much Telly bill, could no longer show full - length versions of the classics "Ghandi" and "Gone With the Wind."

— The 1994 law that outlawed cigarette smoking at the request of a growing anti - cigarette lobby because of smoking's link to cancer. In perhaps the greatest boondoggle of Congressional history, Congress then immediately voted to increase tobacco subsidies to compensate tobacco farmers for the loss created by the Cancer Stick bill passed iust days earlier.

- The 1996 law banning all sweeteners, natural or not, at the urging of the dental lobby, which claimed America's teeth were turning to mush thanks to a soda pop war between Classic New Coke, New Classic Coke, Old Coke, New Pepsi and middle - aged RC. The soda lobbyists were so busy fighting each other, they couldn't muster enough strength to challenge the No Coke No Pepsi bill. - And the 1999 bill that banned loud music because it was hurting the ears of American youth, or so said the audiologists loddy Symphony orchestras were prohibited from playing themes like Tchaikowsy's "1812 Overture" or the Beethoven's Ninth Symphony because they were considered too loud and the Eugene Ormandy Society lobby could not convince Congress to grandfather them out of the Rock'n'Roll Ain't Here No More bill. Then I tried to remember how this whole thing got started. And I thought back to the summer of 1985 when Texas and a whole host of other states, at the urging of Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole (remember her failed bid for the presidency with husband Bob on the infamous pineapple - lobby - sponsored Dole and Dole ticket in '92?), began requiring their residents to wear seat belts in the hopes

The arguments sounded the same then. Protect Americans from the hazards of driving by requiring them to buckle up. Keep insurance rates down for safety - minded Americans who have enough sense to protect themselves. I remembered how, in a glorious act of defiance one night in Podunk, Wyoming, I abandoned my custom of always buckling up to see what would happen and spent two years in the Wyoming state penitentiary as a result.

My reverie began to fade and I heard the president's voice on the television

"Think how far we've come," he exclaimed. "Americans no longer have to worry about safety in their own vehicles, too much television in their own homes, losing their teeth from purchases they've made or cancer laden cig

I never heard the end of his speech. My TV set was protecting me. Pinkham is a staff writer of The Pampa News.

AUSTIN (AP) - Predominantly white sororities at the University of Texas won't be holding rush activities in a campus-area church because the groups haven't signed a UT non-discrimination statement, officials say

The Rev. Bob Breihan, associate pastor of University United Methodist Church, said the church decided to bar the sororities because their refusal to sign the non-discrimination statement appears inconsistent with church

The issue arose when sororities and other off-campus groups were told last autumn by the Texas Student Publications Board they must become official campus organizations to buy pages for group photographs in the Cactus group requires signing a statement that membership policies aren't discriminatory.

Registering with the dean of students as an official campus

Sororities have signed such statements since 1981 for the publications board, the church and other organizations. But they never have registered as student groups, said Evelyne Bennett, director of the Panhellenic Council, which represents the 16 predominantly white sororities.

Ms. Bennett said the sororities voted in January not to accept the new requirement of the publications board.

"The sororities are not going to register. They decided back in 1968 not to register because they don't use campus facilities. They are completely off-campus organizations," she said.

She said the sororities also don't want to become campus organizations because they don't wish to give up their independence.

Mattox draws fire on child support

AUSTIN (AP) - A New York lawyer and men's rights activist says Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox is using men for political gains through his child-support enforcement campaign.

Sidney Siller, a founder of the National Organization for Men. is representing Kenneth Ryan, a New York man from whom Mattox is trying to collect $34,000 in child support for Ryan's ex-wife, Jean Ryan of Austin.

Mattox is "trying to make political gains on the backs of men" with the enforcement program, Siller told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"Both parents have a responsibility to support their children. It isn't just the father,' Siller said. "This country thinks it should be just the father who should get it on the chops.'

Mattox brought Jean Ryan to a news conference Wednesday to discuss the successes of his child-support enforcement program. He cited the $34,000 owed to Ryan's three children as one of the problems that he has making collections in the 42,000 out-of-state cases he handles.

"I'll challenge the attorney general of Texas to a debate on the Ryan case or any other case he wants to talk about, because if I understand the nature of attorney generals, all they are concerned about is politics," Siller said.

The Associated Press' calls to

Mattox's office for a response to Siller's comments went unanswered Saturday, and his home telephone number is Siller, also a monthly columnist on men's rights in Penthouse magazine, said Jean Ryan has no right to collect the back child support from Kenneth Ryan because she waited seven years to take action against him.

Independents endorse fee

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - Saying they want to protect national security, executive members of the the nation's largest state group of independent oil producers Saturday unanimously endorsed an oil import fee

The fee would not only ease growing U.S. dependence on foreign oil but would also bolster the sagging domestic market, Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association officials said.

TIPRO's executive committee supported the import fee during the final session of a policy committee meeting Saturday. Friday night, TIPRO's National Energy Policy Committee recommended a pro-import fee resolution.

In its resolution, the group said the fee's purpose was to protect national security, not promote domestic oil profits.

"The nation's energy policy should be ground in national security objectives and a concern for the destabilization of the economy because of disruption in oil supplies," the resolution stated.

Nonresident tuition will go from $40 per semester hour to $120 for the next two years. Increases are decreed for medical, dental and law students.

The omnibus fee increase will affect almost everybody who has business with a state agency or

One bill passed by the Legislature that will affect many Texans will not be felt until 1986. It raises the drinking age from 18 to 21. Federal highway authorities said that if Texas failed to pass the law, it would lose $100 million in road building funds.

Another bill taking effect Sept. 1 will at least double the fine for driving while intoxicated if an open container of an alcoholic beverage is in the vehicle

A multi-faceted indigent health care bill that was passed in a special three-day special session also is effective Sept. 1, but only to the extent that counties must start planning and contracting to take over at least part of the cost of caring for those in their counties unable to pay hospital and doctor

After Sept. 1, 1986, counties must spend up to 10 percent of their general operating costs to help the needy ill. Other portions of the bill, such as the prohibition of "patient dumping" from private to public hospitas, take effect Jan. 1, 1986.

State licensing and regulation of abortion clinics will begin Sept. 1 by the Texas Department of Health. Only a licensed physician may perform an abortion. Each clinic must observe definite health and sanitary standards and a report must be made for each abortion, without the patient's or doctor's name. This new regulation also will include birth control centers and outpatient surgical

WACO, Texas (AP) - The chairman of the Republican Party in McLennan County says Land Commissioner Garry Mauro's use of his name and picture in advertisments promoting the veterans land program may be a violation of the state constitution.

Craig Reid told the Waco Tribune-Herald he had relayed his protest to the state GOP headquarters in Austin.

But a spokesman for Mauro, a Democrat seeking re-election, says no laws have been broken because no state money has been used in putting up the signs along highways and other advertising.

Reid said he took the action after Rep. M.A. Taylor, R-Waco, pointed out a section of the Texas Constitution that says advertisements about the benefits of Texas may not include either the name or the picture of any living state official.

Robert Mead, Mauro's executive assistant, said Mauro had been aware of the constitutional provision. However, Mead said, no state money has been used for the billboards or similar advertising.

The billboards have a large color photograph of Mauro with his name and the words: "Texas Veterans Program: the best in the USA." The largest lettering on the sign is the telephone number: 1-800-252-VETS.

"We believe there may be something to this on the legality side and if there is not anything actually legally impacting on this, it is certainly the ethical intent of Legislature to prevent current office holders from kusing their office as a campaign tool, when the message is to educate," Reid said. Reid said if Mauro's billboards are allowed to stand, other incumbent Democrats may be posting ''informative' advertisement along the highways.

Mauro was elected in 1982 on a platform that included expanding the veterans land program to allow the purchase of homes as well as A spokesman in Mauro's office said there are 280 of the billboards in Texas, with signboard companies volunteering the space and labor for the signs.

Miami sets ambulance meet

MIAMI — Amarillo paremedic Dan O'Neal will discuss the role and responsibility of a community ambulance service at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Miami school auditorium.

O'Neal, who owns an ambulance service out of Amarillo, will discuss the mechanics and costs of establishing and maintaining an ambulance service and will persent a film about the responsibilities of Emergency Medical Technicians and Emergency Care Attendants. An organizational meeting will follow the program.

Miami has no ambulance service. Residents hoping to establish such a service hope that the Monday meeting will generate community support for an ambulance.

Miami residents petitioned for a county-supported ambulance service after an Arkansas contractor was killed in an apparent electrocution in July. But Roberts County Commissioners asked that an organized emergency care unit be formed before they could commit any county funds. Any ambulance service needs a staff of emergency personnel.

Harralson's friend freed

HOUSTON (AP) — A judge has granted the early release of William Hampton Robinson III, serving a 10-year prison sentence on drug charges, and allowed him to leave for a Colorado ranch.

State District Judge William

Harmon on Friday granted Hampton "shock" probation under a new law usually reserved for first offenders, prosecutors said. The law allows a judge to decide whether an offender serving prison

time has been shocked into good

behavior and should be released on probation. 'He's here for two drug offenses,

Robinson, 37, the son of a prominent Southeast Texas surgeon and rancher, was convicted of negligent homicide in the 1977 death of a Victoria rancher. Four years later, Robinson was accused of murdering a longtime friend, but the charge was dismissed after key witnesses disappeared.

Robinson also was subpoenaed by federal grand juries investigating the 1979 slaying of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr. in San Antonio. He eventually testified against Charles V not aggravated robbery or Harrelson, a friend who murder," the judge said of his convicted of Wood's murder. Harrelson, a friend who was urged to contact the chamber office about any upcoming major events sponsored by the organization, Gentry said.

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce will begin publishing its monthly newsletter and Community Calendar for the new chamber year beginning Sept. 1, according to President Phil

The date(s), time and location of the event should be included.

be included in the September calendar must be in the chamber office no later than Wednesday, Aug. 28. Gentry said the earlier an event can be placed on the calendar, the better it is to insure its inclusion in the newsletter. Gentry also urged clubs and organizations to check with the chamber office to see what is already scheduled before setting the date for an event. If organizations would do this, many conflicts of events between organizations on the same date could be avoided, Gentry said. The chamber office can be reached by calling 669-3241 or by writing to P.O. Box 1942, Pampa,

Harmon said he offered Robinson two choices: staying in prison a few more months and being paroled with a felony record or accepting shock probation and risking a 20-year sentence if he violates the terms.

Robinson will stay at an undisclosed Colorado ranch and will be supervised by authorities in that state, Harmon said. He also must write to a probation officer in Houston once a month, the judge

Assistant District Attorney Brad Beers, who prosecuted the drug cases, blasted the judge's decision. "It's an absolute injustice. He now goes to Colorado with less supervision than he's ever had. He can literally do as he pleases,"

Beers said Robinson was arrested on a drug charge in October 1983, Beers said. While on bond, he was arrested on a second charge.

In January 1984, visiting State District Judge Frank Price sentenced Robinson to two 10-year probated terms. Six months later, State District Judge Dan Walton revoked the probation and sentenced Robinson to 10 years in prison, Beers said.

While appealing the sentence, he was arrested in January in Fort Bend County, south of Houston, on another drug charge. Chief Prosecutor Frank Follis said the charge was dismissed after

"The president today signed into law legislation that outlaws obesity in America," the reporter said. "Beginning Sept. 1, it will be a crime for anyone to be obese."

The camera then switched to a shot of that venerable Washington correspondent Sam Donaldson, grey - haired and looking rather aged (I'd never noticed Sam had aged until then; I recalled his younger days and how he used to sharply quiz heads of state in press conferences), standing in front of the Capitol building and explaining the president's reasoning in signing the new law.

He cited statistics that showed obesity as the number one killer in America. He told us the president felt Americans need to be protected from this plaguing disease. And, for those like me who scoffed at the reasoning of protecting us from ourselves, he mentioned the president's commitment to keeping insurance rates down for those law - abiding Americans who maintained a healthier, slimmer lifestyle.

We'd been hearing the stories all summer. How Congress had bent to the wishes of the powerful health spa lobby in Washington and passed the obesity law. But we never believed the president, who ran on the idea of getting government out of the lives of everyday Americans, would stand behind such a bill.

My first reaction was to run to the kitchen and dump the potato chips, beer and cheesecake into the trash. But, before I could move, I reflected back on a series of laws that had transformed my beloved America into a virtual police state.

I thought of laws passed through the 1990s that outlawed many items the government found marginally hazardous to the lives of Americans and a whole other series of laws that required Americans to better safeguard their lives:

- The 1991 law that forced TV manufacturers to install a device in all sets that shut them off after three hours of consecutive viewing because Congress was convinced by the book - publishers lobby that TV was making jelly out of the brains of Americans. Consequently, cable companies, which begged for an unreceived exemption from the Too Much Telly bill, could no longer show full - length versions of the classics "Ghandi" and "Gone With the Wind."

 The 1994 law that outlawed cigarette smoking at the request of a growing anti - cigarette lobby because of smoking's link to cancer. In perhaps the greatest boundoggle of Congressional history, Congress then immediately voted to increase tobacco subsidies to compensate tobacco farmers for the loss created by the Cancer Stick bill passed

iust days earlier. - The 1996 law banning all sweeteners, natural or not, at the urging of the dental lobby, which claimed America's teeth were turning to mush thanks to a soda pop war between Classic New Coke, New Classic Coke, Old Coke, New Pepsi and middle - aged RC. The soda lobbyists were so busy fighting each other, they couldn't muster

enough strength to challenge the No Coke No Pepsi bill. - And the 1999 bill that banned loud music because it was hurting the ears of American youth, or so said the audiologists lobby Symphony orchestras were prohibited from playing themes like Tchaikowsy's "1812 Overture" or the Beethoven's Ninth Symphony because they were considered too loud and the Eugene Ormandy Society lobby could not convince Congress to grandfather them out of the Rock'n'Roll Ain't Here No More bill. Then I tried to remember how this whole thing got started. And I thought back to the summer of 1985 when Texas and a whole host of other states, at the urging of Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole (remember her failed bid for the presidency with husband Bob on the infamous pineapple - lobby - sponsored Dole and Dole ticket in '92?), began requiring their residents to wear seat belts in the hopes

The arguments sounded the same then. Protect Americans from the hazards of driving by requiring them to buckle up. Keep insurance rates down for safety - minded Americans who have enough sense to protect themselves. I remembered how, in a glorious act of defiance one night in Podunk, Wyoming, I abandoned my custom of always buckling up to see what would happen and spent two years in the Wyoming state penitentiary as a result.

My reverie began to fade and I heard the president's voice on the

"Think how far we've come," he exclaimed. "Americans no longer have to worry about safety in their own vehicles, too much television in their own homes, losing their teeth from purchases they've made or cancer laden cig.

I never heard the end of his speech. My TV set was protecting me. Pinkham is a staff writer of The Pampa News.

Mattox draws fire on child support

AUSTIN (AP) - A New York lawyer and men's rights activist says Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox is using men for political gains through his child-support enforcement campaign.

Sidney Siller, a founder of the National Organization for Men, is representing Kenneth Ryan, a New York man from whom Mattox is trying to collect $34,000 in child support for Ryan's ex-wife, Jean Ryan of Austin.

Mattox is "trying to make political gains on the backs of men" with the enforcement program, Siller told the Fort Worth cases he handles. Star-Telegram.

"Both parents have a responsibility to support their children. It isn't just the father," Siller said. "This country thinks it should be just the father who should get it on the chops.'

Mattox brought Jean Ryan to a news conference Wednesday to discuss the successes of his child-support enforcement program. He cited the $34,000 owed to Ryan's three children as one of the problems that he has making collections in the 42,000 out-of-state

Mattox also said he wanted to disgrace people for not paying child support: "We are bringing forward a social stigma that should be attached to the failure to pay child support.'

"I'll challenge the attorney eneral of Texas to a debate on the Ryan case or any other case he wants to talk about, because if I understand the nature of attorney generals, all they are concerned about is politics," Siller said.

The Associated Press' calls to

Mattox's office for a response to Siller's comments went unanswered Saturday, and his home telephone number is

Independents endorse fee

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - Saying they want to protect national security, executive members of the the nation's largest state group of independent oil producers Saturday unanimously endorsed an oil import fee.

The fee would not only ease growing U.S. dependence on foreign oil but would also bolster the sagging domestic market, Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association officials said.

TIPRO's executive committee supported the import fee during the final session of a policy committee meeting Saturday. Friday night, TIPRO's National Energy Policy Committee recommended a pro-import fee resolution.

In its resolution, the group said the fee's purpose was to protect national security, not promote domestic oil profits.

'The nation's energy policy should be ground in national security objectives and a concern for the destabilization of the economy because of disruption in oil supplies," the resolution stated.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Furor over Falwell temptest in teapot

The establishment's "black leaders" in the United States reacted last week to statements by The Rev. Jerry Falwell as if the ghost of Bull Connor had jabbed them with a cattle prod.

One said Falwell should be tried for treason. Another said he would probably have favored Hitler over the Jews. A third, not surprisingly, accused Falwell of being a southern racist.

What was Falwell's great crime? He made a tour of South Africa and returned saying the blacks he talked to there oppose current efforts to force the United States' government to impose economic sanctions against that county. Falwell said those blacks told him sanctions, such as prohibiting American citizens from making investments in South Africa because of that government's apartheid policies, would hurt black citizens more than it would hurt whites

Falwell's subsequent conclusion that the Nobel prize-winning bishop, Desmond Tutu, who supports such U.S. sanctions, is a "phony" if he claims to represent the views of black South Africans, is what really raised the storm of protest among America's "black leaders

We are not in the habit of defending the Rev. Jerry Falwell, who appears to us wrong about as often as he is right. Also, he appears quite capable of defending himself. But any objective observer will note that Falwell presented his findings AFTER visiting with many black citizens of South Africa, something those who are unloosing the barrage of criticism have not bothered to

We don't know if he has correctly assessed their feelings, but common logic tells us that a person who has talked to those people has a better chance of understanding their views than those who have never set foot in South Africa. In fact, Sen. Ted Kennedy, the last American saviour who went to South Africa decrying America for not imposing economic sanctions, was booed out of the country by the very black citizens he thought he

It is not surprising that America's "black leaders" would criticize The Rev. Falwell. After all, if it were revealed that blacks in South Africa do not share the views of "black leaders" in America, then how could America's "black leaders" continue soaking soft-hearted Americans for funding of efforts to "save" South African

And, if it were revealed that Bishop Tutu does not really represent the views of most black South Africans, someone might have the audacity to ask if people like Jesse Jackson or Andy Young really represent the views of black Americans. We, of course, can't have questions like that asked, can we?

While the condemnation of The Rev. Falwell by many well-known American blacks amounts to no more than the proverbial temptest in a teapot, there is one aspect of the South African debate that should be of great concern to U.S. citizens. It is the growing movement to forbid American investments in South Africa and the Reagan administration's response to those demand.

The administration has thus far resisted such efforts, but for the wrong reason.

Administration spokesmen have indicated the president refuses such action because it would hurt South African blacks more than it would help them.

We have heard no voice in the administration say that the government of a free country simply has no right to tell citizens where they can or cannot invest their money.

That is scary because if they don't say it, they must not

The question that attitude raises is this: If the government of South Africa thinks it has the right to deny such things as property rights to some of its citizens, and if the government of the United States thinks it has the right to tell its citizens where they can invest their money, how can we say that our government is any better than theirs?

Blacks without a party

The only people who have a right to insult somebody and still expect a warm reception are infants, the insane, and the infirm. The rest of us have to play hardball. Yet black leaders either haven't faced up to this reality, OR may not consider themselves to be among "the rest of us."

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the NAACP, and John E. Jacobs, president of the National Urban League, at their respective conventions, criticized the Reagan administration and the GOP for not responding to their overtures for a discussion of black issues. But nowhere has mention been made of the NAACP insult to President Reagan when he addressed their annual convention a few years back in Denver. Nor has mention been made of allegations that administration officials were Klansmen in pin-striped suits. What's more, the insults and name calling haven't stopped even in the wake of the civil rights groups' calls for talks.

At the June NAACP convention in Dallas, Republican Party Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf was roundly booed by the delegates. Despite all the insults aimed at the president and the GOP, the Washington Post reports that Jacobs told the Urban League convention, "I want to point out that it wasn't black leadership that refuses to communicate; we tried."

Even if it is agreed black people need leadership (Poles, Jews, Chinese, Japanese, Armenian, etc., don't), it's a real question whether black people need the kind they have been getting. Such leadership has led to a Democratic party monopoly on black votes for the price of a chicken dinner and a few hallelujahs. Black people are in the unenviable position where Democrats take their votes for granted and Republicans don't even

Given the facts of political hardball and the entrenched attitudes of black leadership, the Urban League's warning that the Republicans can't keep the White House in 1988 if they 'continue to operate as if black people don't exist," must fall on deaf GOP ears. After all the GOP took the White House in 1980, retained it in 1984 with a 49-state margin, and made gains in Congress, all in the face of massive drives to deliver black votes for Democrats.

Unfortunately, there is no mechanism to force black leadership to recognize its mistaken strategy and abandon it (like the "new" Coca Cola). All the evidence suggests that, despite the fact that by 1988 they will have had no access to the White House for eight years, black leaders are going to go for four more years. Moreover, if the Democrats win the White House, they won't do it on the big-spending platform so pleasing to the black leadership. The 1990s raise the specter of black people without a party. The evidence suggests that, in order for Democrats to win, they must weaken association with interest groups, e.g., blacks, feminists, homosexuals, and unions.

The poor state of relations between blacks and the GOP is also due to administration policy.

In meetings with top officials, this writer suggested anti-trust action against numerous state, federal, and local laws that thwart black economic mobility. I also recommended moves to address the fraudulent education received by blacks and discussed disastrous effects of labor regulations such as the racist-motivated Davis-Bacon Act, and occupational licensing

The morality of attacking interest-group restrictions hurtful to blacks fell prey to the political expediency of vote counting. But morality is a scarce commodity in the political arena. Today's struggle must address economic freedom. We've won the battle for civil rights.

Today in History

By The Associated Press Today is Sunday, Aug. 25, the 237th day of 1985. There are 128 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: n Aug. 25, 1944, Allied forces liberated Paris, ending four years of German occupation. The surrender of Maj. Gen. Dietrich von Choltitz - who had defied Adolf Hitler's orders to level the French capital rather than give it up - set off wild celebrations in the streets.

On this date:

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford said in a speech to the National Hardware Week Convention in Chicago that he would push Congress to ease tax burdens on business.

Five years Director-choreographer Gower Champion died of a rare blood disease in a New York hospital hours before his show "42nd Street" opened on Broadway. Both the cast and audience were stunned when producer David Merrick announced the news of Champion's death during the curtain call.

Confessions of a spiller

Name any abnormal condition or behavior on the part of any segment of our population and somebody is out there attempting to raise the public's consciousness regarding same

This just goes to show that people still do care about one another But I have a unique problem and I am certain there are others who share it with me, and so far nobody has stepped to the forefront in our behalf.

My condition is that I am a grown man and I am still spilling things on myself. I spilled things on myself when I was a child, just like all other children. My mother was attempting to teach me how to hold a spoon and feed myself and I dropped an entire spoonful of Gerber's stained cauliflower into my diapers. Naturally, I began to cry.

'What's wrong with Mommy's Precious?'' my mother asked.

'Goo, moo, gurgle, babble," I replied, which is the name of a Chinese dish as well as baby talk meaning, "If you had strained cauliflower down your diapers, you'd cry too.

Most children stop spilling things on themselves at least by their teen-age years. Not me. When I was 18, I had my fist date that didn't involve an adult driving the car, an experience much like taking a shower while wearing a raincoat.

I took my date to an eatery in the county seat and ordered myself a chopped sirloin steak, the specialty, and a baked potato

A few bites into the meal, the baked potato fell into my lap, buttered side down.

I didn't think my lovely date had noticed, so instead of retrieving the potato, I continued eating as if nothing had happened.

When the waitress arrived with the check, she blew my cover by asking, "Should I wrap your potato or do you prefer to wear it home?

I have continued spilling things on myself into adulthood. One night I was eating in a Cajun restaurant, and I ordered something that turned out to be oysters hidden under a lot of red sauce.

I raised my right elbow to put it on the table, and it caught the side of my plate. The oysters that previously had been hiding under the red sauce spilled into my lap and trickled down into my

I began to curse and scream. "Anything the matter, sir?" asked the waiter.

"Dirtyrottendadgumrackerfratz!" I bellowed, which is Cajun for, "You'd be cursing too, if you had oysters in your loafers.

Over the years, I have spilled on myself coffee, wine, rice pudding, buttered pecan ice cream, potato salad, linguine with both red and white clam sauces, several stacks of hotcakes, entire casserole dishes filled with you-name-it and a Maine lobster which I swear jumped into my lap in an effort to make his escape back to his tank

People with my condition become nervous wrecks whenever they are confronted with the necessity of getting food into their mouths without spilling it, and we are rapidly becoming outcasts from such functions as stand-up church dinners and marshmallow roasts. The time may even come when we will be asked to sit in the fumble-fingers section of the restaurant rather than in the non-fumble-fingers section.

Don't allow that to happen to us. Give us your love and give us your understanding and perhaps we can overcome this terrible burden

Remember, a plate of oysters hidden under some sort of red sauce is a terrible thing to waste. (c) 1985 Cowles Syndicate, Inc.

Voting will not make them free

The popular conception of the strife going on in South Africa today is that it is a struggle for freedom. It is not. It is a struggle for power.

If it were a struggle for freedom, the demands being made by black South Africans would focus on important issues of individual liberty, such as property rights, freedom of movement and freedom from arbitrary arrests.

Instead, the main interest of the country's black leaders is acquiring the right to vote. something that has nothing to do with freedom.

Why do you think they favor that right over important personal liberties? It is because they want power for themselves, not freedom for their people. The right to vote would not make black South

Africans free. It would only enable them to swap white dictators for black dictators and their lota probably would be no better than it

And why do you think the white government, while apparently willing to consider removing some of the restrictions on individual liberties, is so adamant in refusing to allow a one-man, one-vote sytem?

The white government understands that one-man, one-vote would create a black government with the power to seize the wealth of all white South Africans. That is why the white government opposes it and why the black leaders want it. Both sides understand that voting is simply a means of legalizing theft. The only difference a black government would make is that a majority rather than a minority would then have the power to commit theft.

There could be a way out for the white government. It's only hope of avoiding a bloody revolution that will destroy the country is to immediately allow all black citizens all rights enjoyed by white citizens, except the right to vote. That would make it impossible for the blacks to seize the property of the whites.

But it would make it possible for black citizens to acquire wealth on their own and escape the poverty that grips much of the black population. Such an action would not satisfy the black leaders who want political power for themselves. But granting individual freedoms would diminish the fervor for revolution among their followers, who would soon learn if they have the freedom to work, own property and live as they wish, they would have no use for ballot boxes and politicians

If they were granted those individual freedoms, it would not take long for the black population to evolve into an affluent middle class with both influence and wealth. When that happened, they would no longer have to demand the right to vote. They would then be begged to go to the polls and vote in order to provide an air of respectability for the legalized theft committed by the politicians.

The so-called Beef Promotion and Research Act of 1985 deserves a quick death in Congress.

This proposed legislation is doubly flawed: It stems from wrongheaded economic analysis and it is sweepingly undemocratic. The defective analysis is found in the view that cattlemen have "to win the hearts and stomachs of American consumers back to 'King Beef'," This winning is, no doubt, to include media extravaganzas along the lines of Jane Fonda aerobizing with a chicken fried steak sandwich in one hand, while occasionally hired scientific guns fire a salvo at the tofu crowd.

After staggering millions and hundreds of millions have been poured into the coffers of Madison Avenue with a few dollops to the guys in the white lab coats, here's what you'll find: the demand for beef has been effected only marginally. A few tofu-ites are now topping theirs with chopped prime rib.

The history of beef consumption in America, as in other countries, is that the richer the country gets, the more animal protein (particularly beef) it consumes. Since the early 70s, America has become in many ways a poorer country. As a recent article on the editorial page of the Wall Street Journal detailed, the Baby Boomers and their nascent families-prime consumers of beef, are less well-off today than were their parents, even with both spouses

In order to have significant expansion in the demand for beef, America is going to have to become a richer country. I doubt that making the employees and stockholders of J. Walter Thompson, et al. more prosperous will be sufficient. Lower taxes and less government spending are the proper course to enrich the individual

Be the economic arguments as they may, the damning apsect of the Beef Promotion and Research Act of 1985 is its wholly undemocratic character. Not only will a producer be unable to get his $1 per head refunded if he doesn't like the program, he can't even vote it out of existence for two years. In our operation's case, we'll have waved perhaps a couple of thousand dollars bye-bye before we can even try to latch the corral gate. Big Brother knows what's best for us, and he's going to use our money without our consent to see

I've never met a cattleman who didn't believe in right to work laws. The idea of compulsory unionism was abhorrent. Why must a man be forced by the government to pay dues to a private organization in whose goals he does not believe; or whose efforts on his supposed behalf he finds not worth their cost? My partner and I, as well as a good many others, don't care to join the Cowboy Workers of America before being permitted to pursue the cattle business.

I urge cattlemen to contact their Congressmen and Senators to stop this questionable picking of their pocketbooks and to repulse this unquestionable assault on their liberty.

Time to get tough on vandals

Dear editor

It is a sad commentary that in what was once a quiet residential neighborhood, one can no longer have even a vegetable garden without being vandalized.

We give most of our produce to neighbors and friends and would have shared it with those who ruined if had they asked. But in a senseless foray of destruction, a group of youngsters, mostly Hispanic-appearing according to an eyewitness, smashed, uprooted and destroyed everything in sight in my vegetable and melon garden one night recently.

This is certainly not intended as an indictment of any ethnic group, but it is intended as an indictment of any parents of youngsters who are allowed to roam at large and wantonly destroy the property of

We take some pride in our homeplace and have never obbjected to neighborhood kids using our playgrounds, swings and see-saws. But unless the parents of some of these young hoodlums can instill some sense of the rights of others into their offspring, there could be some serious consequences.

When a person's property is invaded in the dead of night, especially around here, one is not likely to ask the age of an intruder before blasting away with a shotgun or pistol.

This and other such incidents at my home have been reported to the police and I hope they are able to help correct the situation before it gets any worse. And I certainly don't envy them their job in view of the recurring waves of expensive and irresponsible vandalism in Pampa. But I do think it is time the Pampa police got tough.

To the editor,

I know Pampa is getting ready for Chautauqua activities again. I do not know if anyone there would be interestd, but I have several copies of the newspaper entitled "Chautauqua Assembly Herald," Chauqauqua Lake, New York.

I have several copies dated during the month of August, 1885-100 years ago, and several during August, 1886. Also have one periodical magazine for Oct., 1886

In the August 8, 1885 issue, there are several articles about President U.S. Grant as his funeral was held on Aug. 8, 1885. If anyone is interested in looking through those, I'd be glad to show them. I can be reached at Canadian Pharmacy, Canadian, Texas, during the day, 232-6171, or at my home after 7 p.m. evenings, 323-8276. I'm off work on Wednesday

Let me know if anyone wants to see them.

Wishes Botha was an American

During the 60s, the federal government went to great lengths to insure the equality of the minorities. Thousands of the majority's tax dollars were spent to insure that everyone could vote, eat at the same lunch counter and ride the same school bus. There were a few consequences to this humanitarian action, such as the loss of states rights, a society and heritage being destroyed and a wrecking of old moral values

We find now that this same federal government wants the majority to have the major role in the government of a country on the other side of the world and some of our senators and statesmen are actually raising money to help them do this. It would appear that these men of learning (they must be pretty sharp, they got you to vote for them) can't decide what team to cheer for, the minority or the majority

I know one thing. Botha scared them with his speech. I hope that he will not back down. The bureaucracy has just heard from halfway around the world that there is still one man who can't be bought, scared or intimidated by a half-witted Nobel Prize winner into giving up his beliefs.

The next time some of the liberals and some of the governmental officials visit our fair city, remind them of this and watch the fun.

I only wish Botha were an American and had made his speech from the White House instead of South Africa. I have often said that this country is running out of leaders and patriots, but I didn't realize they had gone to South Africa.

Is seven months postal record?

I was shocked when it took eight days to receive mail postmarked in Robert Lee, Texas, and thought it must have set some sort of record

But an even greater shock occurred yesterday when I opened a statement from Energas and noticed the amount had increased $61.98 over the previous month's statement amount. Before taking the time to read the entire statement, I called Energas and talked to Richard Taylor, who informed me that my meter had only been read the day before.

As I was talking to him, I happened to nice the bill covered the period Dec. 12, 1984, trhough Jan. 11, 1985. It only took seven months to receive mail postmarked in Amarillo. That must be a record.

AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - For the fourth time in six months, the Agriculture Department has lowered its value estimate of U.S. farm exports in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, and another a decline is in the works in 1985-86.

As it looks now, the department reported on Wednesday, the farm export value is expected to decline to a six-year low of $32 billion, down 16 percent from more than $38 billion in 1983-84.

In another forecast three months ago, farm exports were indicated at $33.5 billion. The new report showed a $1.5 billion decline from that mark, and indicated the slump will extend into next fiscal year, beginning on Oct. 1.

'Current global supply and a record of $20 billion this fiscal demand estimates indicate that fiscal 1986 agricultural exports on May 22, the volume of shipments was forecast at 137 million tons this year. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds

At 129 million tons, 1984-85 shipments will be the lowest since 1976-77 when they totaled 112 million tons, according to USDA records. At that time, however, exports were rising and the following year jumped to 131 million tons. They rose to record levels of more than 160 million tons in the early 1980s

Last Dec. 3, the USDA forecast 1984-85 farm exports at a value of $36.5 billion. That was lowered to $35.5 billion on Feb. 20, to $34.5 billion on March 12, and to $33.5 billion on May 22.

Export values rose to record levels for a dozen consecutive years, to a peak of $43.8 billion in 1980-81 before turning down to $39.1 billion in 1981-82 and to $34.8 billion in 1982-83. They increased to $38 billion in 1983-84 before beginning the current slump

WASHINGTON (AP) -Agriculture Department scientists are enthusiastic about the bug-killing potential of neem trees that are native to tropical areas of Asia and Africa.

Neem leaves and seeds have been used for centuries to help control insects in the tropics, says Hiram Larew of the department's Agricultural Research Service. Now, neem products show promise when sprayed on flower and nursery crops. They also are being tested for cockroach control.

Larew and a colleague, Victor Adler, have been working on the neem project at the agency's laboratory in Beltsville, Md. A report on their work was released A commercial product

WHEAT VARIETIES

Several producers have inquired about what looks like the "best" variety for next year. As usual there is no "one" best variety. Environmental conditions as well as cultural conditions vary from field to field.

I do have copies of wheat yields from quite a few County Agent demonstrations scattered all over the Panhandle and the Rolling Plains. There are some varieties that appear to have produced better this past year. However, we do not know if leaf rust will have the same effect this coming year hopefully not.

Anyone wanting to review these various demonstrations results can come by the office for a copy. You can study them and decide for yourself what you may want to try

CATTLE EMBRYO TRANSFER

Beef cattle producers in the area are invited to attend an educational meeting on 8 p.m. Monday in Muleshoe at the Bailey County Coliseum. The main item to be discussed will be embryo transfer and nutritional management of the beef herd. The purpose of the meeting is to acquaint beef cattle producers with the economic feasibility of this reproduction process that is receiving major emphasis.

The two speakers for this meeting will be Dr. John McNiel, area livestock specialist from Amarillo, who will discuss beef herd nutrition and management, body condition related to breeding, herd vaccination, and health program and economic feasibility: Dr. Berry Cowart, DVM, in Muleshoe, who will speak on procedures for synchronizing cows, techniques used in collecting and transferring embryos, use of frozen eggs and success of new procedures at the Muleshoe Embryo Genetics Center.

Embryo transfer, simply stated, involves collection of multiple embryos from donor cows and their transfer to eligible recipient cows. However, the process involves many critical intermediary steps including donor selection, superovulation, artificial insemination, estrous synchronization, ova and embryo collection, classification of embryo and transfer of suitable embryos to prepared recipients.

Although embryo transfer has been studied for 25 years, it still remains an exciting new technology and has grown to a multi-million dollar business within the last decade. While the genetic gain from embryo transfer is small compared to artificial insemination (AI) and the use of superior sires, it offers many other unique opportunities.

An average rancher's life span may cover only six to seven generations of cows. Therefore, the chances of obtaining a truly superior calf from an outstanding cow are limited with conventional breeding. Thus, the opportunity for selection with embryo is increased many times when one considers that it is not unusual to obtain 12 or more calves from a donor cow within a single year.

This program is being sponsored by the Bailey County Extension Livestock Committee. The meeting is free and open to everyone from the general public. We would like to encourage beef cattle producers who have considered using this method to attend the meeting. For additional information, please contact the Bailey County Extension office, 806-272-4583.

GRASLAN PELLETS NO LONGER AVAILABLE

Elanco Products Company recently announced that Graslan pellets will no longer be available for aerial application on private rangeland. The pellets will continue to be available for broadcast application to direct purchasing government agencies. Graslan Brush Bullets will continue to be sold through distribution. Most, if not all, of the direct purchasing of Graslan by government agencies will take place in the western states that have much more Federal lands than does Texas.

Apparently, the decision to discontinue the availability of Graslan for aerial application on private rangeland was a marketing decision. Graslan pellets were a very useful tool for managing certain brush species on rangeland. The lack of availability of this product will certainly affect brush management programs. Hopefully, in the near future, Elanco Products Company will change their marketing strategy and make Graslan pellets available for broadcast application on private rangeland.

DES MOINES, Iowa -Leaders of two fundamentalist churches are asking a federal judge to bar the state of Iowa from imposing its educational standards on their small, religion-based schools.

The issue is crucial. fundamentalists say, because public education is failing and they must teach their children as they wish, using large doses of the Bible and discipline. Parents of the children say they're willing to go to jail, if necessary.

The state, proud of its traditionally high literacy, argued during the first week of testimony in lawsuits brought by the churches that it must enforce its standards to guarantee that all Iowa children receive a sound education.

"Parents' rights are sacred in law, but they are not absolute." said Ivan Webber, a Keokuk lawyer defending the state. 'That's why we have child abuse laws. That's why we have child labor laws.

'Night stalker' linked to 14 murders in LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A killer dubbed the "Night Stalker" who terrorizes suburban homes at night has been linked to 14 murders from Los Angeles to San Francisco, but officials fear the search for the man may have been hampered by the release of too much information.

Dental records that may be those of the gap-toothed killer have been sent to more than 3,000 dentists and a reward has grown to $35,000. Police would not comment Saturday on reports that the killer scrawled messages on the walls of victims' homes.

"We have definitely tied 14 murders to this individual and possibly as many as 33 individual cases in L.A. County and the case in San Francisco," Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block said at a hastily called news conference late Friday.

Previously, police had blamed the attacker for seven murders and 27 attacks, including rapes, beatings and kidnappings, most in the San Fernando and San Gabriel valley areas of Southern California. The first assault was reported Feb. 8 and the first slaying March 17.

Block criticized San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein for telling reporters that last weekend's murder of San Francisco resident Peter Pan, 66, and the attempted murder of his wife Barbara, 64, had been linked to the "Night Stalker" through ballistics tests.

Ms. Feinstein revealed the results of ballistics tests Friday as she announced that she was adding $10,000 to a reward fund for information leading to the capture of the attacker. The fund now stands at $35,010. She declined to elaborate on the caliber of the murder gun or any other details. There goes the gun into the bay," the San Francisco Chronicle quoted one unidentified police officer as saying after Ms. Feinstein's comments.

"I'm telling you that information (released to the media) has significantly jeopardized the investigation that is under way,' Block said at his news conference in Los Angeles. "It places this community in jeopardy because it impedes our ability to go forward with the investigation.'

Investigators are worried that the killer may change his methods because of the details that have been released, setting investigators back. Sheriff's Deputy Bob Stoneman said Saturday.

A police official said the killer left behind some physical evidence in the Pans' residence and in homes of some of the Los Angeles-area victims, according to the Los Angeles Times. The evidence found in a majority of the cases is so distinctive that it will allow investigators to rule out copy cats, the newspaper said.

Firefighters' fare unusual

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) -Although the menu may initially alarm a cautious eater, members of the Beaumont Fire Department say they never go away hungry when Rex Hoffpauir puts on his starched chef's hat.

Whatever members of the department bring in, Hoffpauir cooks. The fare was barbecued raccoon one month. Another time, it was fried alligator tail. Once, Hoffpauir fixed armadillo, baked in onions.

On other occasions, the specialty has been baked dove, venison gumbo, catfish or just red beans. Although the menu may not always sound appetizing, Fire Chief Pete Shelton and department spokesman Tommy May said they have never tasted any of Hoffpauir's specialties they didn't

"I use a dash of this and some of this," Hoffpauir says. "I never measure anything."

At 47, he has been cooking for fun since he was about 10. A firefighter of 17 years, he now doubles as the department cook and supply officer. His gumbo won first place in the 1981 International Gumbo Cookoff in Orange, but he said he doesn't have the time to enter contests anymore. Two years ago, Hoffpauir made his famous gumbo for 1,000 statewide fire department representatives at Riverfront

MAO INHIBITORS AND FOOD Individuals taking monoamine oxidase (MAO) inhibitors, which are occasionally prescribed for depres-sion or high blood pressure, need to exercise great care in food and beverage selections. Food and drugs that contain high levels of tyramine, a natural component, can interact with MAO inhibitors. It can force blood pressure to dangerous levels and cause severe headaches, brain hemorrhages and even death.

Tyramine-rich foods and beverages

LTV not yet headed for upturn, analysts say "Its basic position isn't bad. It

DALLAS (AP) - When LTV Corp. announced in February 1984 it was merging with Republic Steel to become the nation's second-largest steel maker, company officials hailed the move as one that would increase productivity, cut costs and yield a lean, mean competitor

Tet after 18 months, hundreds of millions of dollars in losses, massive layoffs and plant closings, the jury still is out on the merger, industry analysts and company officials say.

-LTV officials, who have staked much of the company's future on its heavy investment in steel, believe they have turned the corner recently after a major restructuring. But analysts say it isn't clear whether the company is getting the most out of the acquisition, and that more plant closings, price cuts and layoffs will be necessary.

What happened is more confusion and less efficiency. The results have been very disappointing to date," said John Jacobson, director of steel services for Chase Econometrics

"On paper, the move made lots of sense," Jacobson said. "In terms of execution, it doesn't look as good. They aren't making any money

In fact, LTV has posted massive losses this year. In the first quarter, the company had losses of $156 million, and then a record $472.3 million in the second

501 W. Brown

But the bulk of the losses were one-time special charges stemming from the indefinite idling of LTV's Aliquippa, Pa., steel plant. The actual operating loss for the period ended June 30 was $73.5 million, below what analysts had predicted and considerably less than the first

"They were a little better than we expected," Merrill Lynch analyst Charles Bradford said of the results. "But clearly they will continue to have substantial losses for the year.'

Raymond A. Hay, LTV's chairman and chief executive officer, said the second-quarter results for the troubled steel unit were cause for optimism. "If you look at the numbers, you'll see that those numbers reflect ... a break-even in operating results - a very substantial improvement from the first the fact that we have a substantial amount of debt and the interest on that debt every month is somewhere in the neighborhood of $25 million," Hay said.

Since 1982, the aerospace. defense and steel company's overall losses have topped $750 million, most of it in the steel

"We really worked hard to try to figure out how to deal with the problem of the steel business and the corporation's liquidity and the long-term financial stability of the company," Hay said.

The result was May's reorganization plan, which included the indefinite idling of most of its Aliquippa steelworks, the laying off of 1,300 workers, and a program of divestitures and cost reductions. The writedown made the company's balance sheet "look a lot worse" than it actually was,

Four-year drought testing gritty West Texas ranchers

ARNOLD GARCIA Jr. Austin American-Statesman

M.

RANKIN, Texas (AP) — DeWayne Lindsey surveyed his sprawling Upton County ranch from behind the wheel of his pickup and saw miles of mesquite, scrub brush and weeds that provide what greenery there is on the drab, brown earth.

Missing from the picture was all the livestock that once grazed on the 140 sections of 640 acres each he operates in a part of West Texas that conjures up legendary images of big ranches, big oil, and big money. When times are good, there is truth to the legend.

But these are not good times.
The continuing drought in West Texas is causing Lindsey to wonder if that part of the state can support life as he has known it.

"I think that from a practical standpoint, ranching may be through here," said Lindsey, 49. He moved all his livestock last year to land he ranches in Wyoming. "We don't have the economic flexibility to ranch this marginal country."

His neighbor, Tommy Owens, is hanging tough in the face of the drought. But even with the kind of rain the country needs to come back, his operation will never again be what it was He has scaled back from 80 to 50 sections.

Better times will not signal a return to ranching on the magnitude associated with that corner of West Texas, Owens said. "We're not going to come back strong."

Lindsey said Upton County remains at the center of a devastating regional drought from which ecological and economic effects will linger for years.

Despite some moisture, no one believes the drought is broken. Upton County has received about 6 inches of its annual average 12 inches of rain so far this year, said Kent Powell, the county extension agent.

Ernest Woodward, 32, is a Fort Stockton rancher who operates two ranches on 82 sections. He said, "I'd say that the rainfall we have gotten in 1985 is near normal, but before we can get out of the drought, we got to have a year of

Jerry Puckett, a Fort Stockton rancher and banker, put it this way: "I don't see anything to shout about." Despite the occasional scattered rain, there is little thought being given to rebuilding herds that were cut back drastically during the past three to four years.

Walter D. Noelke, whose family has ranched in West Texas since 1889, says people who analyze the economics of modern ranching reach the same conclusion: "It is insane."

Noelke, who holds a doctorate in government from the University of Texas and is a government professor at Angelo State University, is working the ranch his grandfather established and his father ran near Mertzon, about 20 miles west of San Angelo. Noelke operates 14 sections and figures that he has been operating at a loss for the last three years.

A rancher brings in money twice a year, in the fall and the spring, but operating expenses — like labor, fuel, interest, and feed continue throughout the year, Noelke said.

"Ranchers get caught in a lifestyle and struggle to the next bill," Noelke said. Ranchers are at the mercy of an agrarian economy that is not able to adopt to quick, fast options, he said.

Puckett said, "You have to hold onto livestock because the operating expenses continue" even if there is no livestock. "It's like that old-timer used to say: I don't want any more cheese. I want out of the trap," he said.

Noelke said there is a mystique associated with ranching, "maybe some primal evolutionary link" that makes people fantasize about raising livestock on a ranch.

What happens when an industry so dependent on weather gets kicked in the teeth by it?

"I think reality has caught up with the fantasy," said Lindsey, the Rankin rancher. "Nature has a way of putting us in perspective."

Powell, the Upton County agent, said the drought is in at least its fourth year. In the four-year period, the livestock population has gone from 44,000 ewes to below 10,000. There were 3,000 goats four years ago. Today there are 300. There were 2,000 head of cattle grazing Upton County pastures four years ago. Now there are 400.

four years ago. Now there are 400.

There is land for sale in Upton County for the first time in recent memory, Powell said. There have been virtually no takers. "We have not seen any new faces in four years and have lost a few old

If someone accepted the challenge of the land, Powell said, "He could get by with 20 sections," or 12,800 acres, "if he were young and single" and had money for livestock to put on it. The asking price for Upton County ranchland is $115 to $150 per acre.

Agricultural conditions are 'semifavorable to hostile, depending on how you look at it,' even during years of good rainfall, Powell said.

The area accounts for a half-billion dollars of the $10 billon annual agricultural sales in Texas. But, Leland Beatty of the Texas Department of Agriculture said, "When you're living in Upton County, that's the center of your whole universe."

Bill Sims, a San Angelo rancher and state senator for the region, said the area is in perpetual drought. To ranch in West Texas is to gamble, he said.

"Family ties, commitments to other people," said Noelke, the professor-rancher. His father, M.B. "Sonnie" Noelke, is buried on the ranch. "He wanted to be buried facing east so he could see the sun rise." he said.

Woodward of Fort Stockton harbors no thoughts of giving up ranching in the face of the drought.

"I guess you could say we were raised in hardship," he said.

Owens said he intends to hold on and hope for better weather this winter. "It's a damn big gamble," he said. But he said it is worth the Owens said: "The man that owns the cattle, the man that owns the sheep, and he can stay and he stays in business, and he keeps his name, and he keeps his collateral to where he can go borrow money — I think he'll be here a long time when the drought breaks, because he'll be the No. 1 man on the totem pole. There's a lot of them not here

In the meantime, Lindsey and Owens said, they have adopted a new philosophy: They do not care if it rains again.

Owens said: "I've got an attitude now that it's not going to rain. I'm not going to be disappointed anymore."

Plans for the new operation called for the stocking of $1 million worth of Superior and Cooper-Bessember gas engine and compressor parts at Dunlans. located on Price Road. Dunlap's has provided shop and field engine and compressor overhaul, machine shop and parts services in Pamoa for over 10 years. Durwward Dunlap is president of the firm and J.C. Beyer is general manager.

The operation will be supported by J.L. Trantham, an Energy Services Group field representative, based at the Dunlap facility.

The Energy Services Group of Cooper Industries based in Mt. Vernon, Ohio is a leading worldwide manufacturer of reciprocating and rotating engines, compressors, turbines and controls. Houston-based Cooper Indistries, with expected 1985 revenues of nearly $4 billion, is a diversified manufacturer of products for the electrical and electronic, commercial and industrial and compression and drilling markets.

Chalk also reported that the Pampa store has plans for remodeling soon.

The Dunlap Co., of Fort Worth purchased the Amarillo store one week after Sakowitz, Inc., of Houston sought protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law

Roy Fly, store manager of the Sakowitz Amarillo operation, will manage the store in the West Plaza Mall for Dunlap's.

'Dunlap's has wanted to be in this market for a number of years," Fly said. Immediately after the sale was announced. Dunlap's began replenishing the stock and refurbishing the store. "We will continue to operate as a

Indecisiveness of market may last until Labor Day

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market continues to show a lack of conviction, and many Wall Streeters figure the indecisiveness will last at least until Labor Day.

Some observers are even looking beyond the next few sessions and instead trying to determine which collective course the market might take after the Sept. 2 holiday.

In the meantime, one need only look at trading volume to see that many investors also have been willing to give the market less-than-full attention while the vacation season continues.

Daily trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange has failed to climb above 100 million shares for the past two weeks - the first time that has happened since the last two weeks of 1984.

"Labor Day is sometimes regarded as the beginning of the new business year," Eldon Grimm, senior vice president of Birr, Wilson & Co., wrote in his latest market letter. "Then the fantasies of summer disappear and the financial markets return to the cold facts of the real world.'

But there are serious doubts about whether Wall Street can sort out the cold facts with any more conviction after Labor Day than it is doing now

"People seem to be more confused now than they've ever been," said Charles Jensen, technical analyst at MKI Securities Corp. "We have so many conflicting signals coming down the pike it certainly would take more evidence in a consistent way to sway people to be either completely negative or positive. And the market is reflecting the

Many economists still think the economy will accelerate, albeit moderately, as the year progresses. But indicators lately have portrayed the economy as continuing to sputter, raising doubts about the expected recovery and frustrating the stock

This past week, for example, the Commerce Department said new factory orders for durable goods fell 2.8 percent in July, the biggest decline since March. Orders for non-defense capital goods alone, a gauge of future business investment plans. skidded 6.3 percent last month.

During the two days before the department's report, the stock market had mounted what many analysts considered a suspect advance. They viewed the rebound as largely technical and selective toward the blue chips and other market favorites.

A PECULIAR PEOPLE

"For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in the present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; who group birnoslif for us that Christ; who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Titus 2:11-14 KJV.) One of the plainest teachings of the New Testament is the distinction that is made between the followers of Christ and the rest of mankind. Members of the church of Christ are not different from all others simply for the sake of being different, but of necessity they are different because they belong to Christ (I Corinthians 6:15-20.) God's ways and God's thoughts are not the way and thoughts of man (Isaiah 55:8-9.) Therefore the people of God are not as the rest of men.

Christ taught His disciples that they must be willing to leave all in order to be His disciples (Luke 14:25-33.) He did not teach this just in 14:20-33.) He did not teach this just in order to insist upon difference but in order to impress upon them that the world and the ways of the world would pass away. Therefore, those who were influenced to be worldly-minded would perish but those who do His will shall endure forever (Matthew 7:24-27; I John 2:15-17.)

Jesus' teaching concerning disci-pleship is one of the hardest teachings of His for us to accept and apply. The willingness go give up and sacrifice in order to follow Jesus is imperative to order to follow Jesus is imperative to being a disciple. Paul told the Roman brethren to present their bodies as a "living sacrifice" unto God (Romans 12:1-2.) He impressed upon them that they would have to "renew their minds" in order to prove the will of God in their lives. He told the Colos-ions the content their attentions. sians to center their attention or things above not on things of this earth (Colossians 3:1-11.) Therefore the distinction exists because of one's obedience to the will of God.

Thunderstorm scrubs launch of Discovery

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - The launch of space shuttle Discovery was scrubbed Saturday by a thunderstorm that lingered just long enough to cause a one-day postponement

A new attempt to launch the ship and its crew of five on a satellite delivery-and-rescue mission was set for Sunday at 7:57 a.m. EDT. Storm clouds began building as thunderstorms in the vicinity of the landing facility," said Launch Control's Hugh Harris. Moments later, clouds closed in, thunder rolled over Cape Canaveral, and the clock ticked toward the end of the 34-minute "window" in which the shuttle could leave.

Launch director Bob Sieck allowed the count to continue to the 5-minute mark, hoping for a last-minute change, then ordered the scrub.

Within minutes, the sky again was a brilliant blue.

East Texas air service is setting the woods on fire

By CHERYL ALEXANDER Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — A pillar of gray and white smoke rises 40,000 feet in the air from flames intentionally set to consume a 230-acre tract of land.

From what seems like the midst of the massive tower, the drone of an approaching helicopter is heard. As the soot-covered yellow craft breaks through the smoke and zooms in as close as six feet from the ground, droplets of fire can be seen falling from its belly, igniting even more of the dried brush below.

Although the pilot is purposefully setting the earth ablaze, he isn't a woods arsonist. He's a pilot for Custom Air Service — a Jasper-based company owned by Bob Ewing that uses helicopters to do hazard reduction and site preparation burning for timber companies.

Each of the company's five choppers is equipped with a custom-built "helitorch" and a 25-gallon tank that carries the fuel for the burn. When the pilot pushes a lever, a mixture of fatty-acid soap and gasoline called alumagel is released from the tank into the helitorch. As it enters the helitorch, the mixture is ignited by a butane flame and released into the air as a droplet of burning gel from the arm of the helitorch.

Protected by a green flameproof jumpsuit and gloves, Tony Aldridge piloted the company's bright yellow 20-foot-long Hughes helicopter for a controlled burn near FM 1818 ordered by Temple-Eastex recently.

The job of starting the fire was completed by Aldridge within 30 minutes of takeoff.

Aldridge said he doesn't drop the fire haphazardly; there's a pattern to follow.

"I drop the flames about every six feet in rows that are 50 to 100 feet apart. I start downwind and work into it so that I'm usually clear of smoke."

But he wasn't clear of smoke on this particular mission. Because of a shift in wind direction, Temple's ground crew of foresters, who are responsible for control of the fire, had to set backfires on all the tract's boundries to insure against the spread of fire to wooded lands surrounding their tract.

There was no escaping the smoke that day for the pilot or Temple's crew led by Dave Robinson, district supervisor for Temple-Eastex foresters.

The sun looked like a dull orange ball through the smokey, soot-laden sky. Some of the crew members operating bulldozers and four-wheelers wore masks to filter the smoke and dust as they plowed or checked the fire lines.

"We run tree crushers across the land to chop up the smaller stuff so that it will dry out and burn easily. After it's burned, hand or machine planters can more easily replant the area."

To prepare for the burn, Robinson said, ground crew dig trenches around the site to contain the fire and warn area residents of their plans.

The Texas Forest Service must be notified and give the go-ahead for the burn. If weather conditions permit, the pilot is allowed to take off and start the fire. If the fire gets out of control, the forest service will assist Temple's crew in putting it out.

Robinson said that controlled burning is done almost every day on Temple land, about 25,000 acres a year, by hand-held torch and aerial methods to reduce foliage and undergrowth and to minimize wildfire and arson. It's also effective in preparing an area for regeneration of a pine forest.

method for us and all of East Texas," he said. "We prefer an aerial burn for large tracts. Custom Air Service charges between $1.50 and $2 an acre—that's economical enough for the big jobs. The hand-held drip torches that we use to burn small tracts take a lot of time and don't give as good a burn."

When brush burns from all sides toward the center of the property, Robinson said, a huge centralized tower of billowing smoke forms that often proves dangerous.

Sure enough, inside the smoke cloud, a small tornado formed. The ground crew listened to the thunder-like rumblings of the twister and discussed apprehensively whether the tornado would jump out of the cloud and deposit its sparks in the forest nearby, as so often happens. Aldridge flew around the cloud watching for "catch outs" (fire spreading to other areas) or tornados.

"It's out," one of the crew members yelled, and everyone scattered to vehicles and headed toward the smoke rising from the adjoining forest. The tornado had indeed jumped from the cloud and had started an unwanted fire that was quickly extinguished by the foresters.

Robinson said that the controlled burn would be 95 percent complete by the following day and the fire completely out within a day or two.

Since Ewing pioneered the air service in East Texas, the method has become consistently used by Kirby, Temple-Eastex, Boise-Cascade, International Paper and others, according to Ewing.

Ewing said all the major timber companies are at least trying the aerial method and most of them are finding that it's a more efficient, effective way to burn.

The air service burns an average of 500 acres a day, but in their peak season, January through March, 3,000 acres a day is not unusual.

Controlled burning is provided by the service year-round for industries in eight states.

(1980), Clemson (1981) and Penn State (1982) were familiar names in winning circles, Miami, Fla. (1983) and Brigham Young (1984) were relative newcomers to the sport's top echelon

No one, not even Coach LaVell Edwards, expected BYU to wind up No. 1. The Cougars' title gave additional hope to teams that have never won the national championship.

Eleven teams from last year's final Associated Press Top Twenty have never won a national title. With their 1984 finish in parenthese, they are Washington (29). Florida (3), Boston College (5), Oklahoma State (7), Southern Methodist (8), UCLA (9), South Carolina (11), Iowa (16), Florida State (17), Kentucky (19) and four starters return on defense, three of them linebackers.

The Cougars were the only undefeated major-college team last year and they were the first team in 80 years to go 13-0. They come into 1985 with a 24-game winning streak, longest in the BYU is favored to win its 10th straight Western Athletic Conference crown. The top challengers figure to be Air Force, Hawaii and San Diego State.

Thanks to BYU, the WAC stole the spotlight from the Pacific-10 Conference in the Far West. But Pac-10 members Washington, UCLA and Southern Cal won Jan. 1 bowl games and finished in the Top Ten. The Pac-10 could have a wild scramble among those three plus Arizona, Arizona State and Washington State.

Washington's only loss came at the hands of Southern Cal. The Huskies return five starters from a defense that led the nation with a total of 51 interceptions and fumble recoveries but Coach Don James admits he doesn't expect to duplicate those accomplishments.

Like Southern Cal, the Huskies will have an experienced quarterback in senior Hugh Millen. UCLA is without an experienced quarterback but among the returnees are All-American placekicker John Lee and sophomore tailback Gaston Green, who rushed for 144 yards in the Fiesta Bowl.

Washington State will field one of the rankings despite the loss of Doug Flutie, major-college football's all-time passing king. Shawn Halloran, Flutie's backup for two seasons, is the likely successor. He is a dropback passer who cannot scramble like Flutie. Who can?

Despite Penn State's poorest season since 1966 (6-5) and Pitt's collapse from a No. 3 preseason ranking to its first losing record since 1972 (3-7-1), Penn State's Joe Paterno thinks Eastern football is better than ever.

Paterno says Penn State is 'going into the season with the idea that we're starting all over. We're starting all over with the offense. with the defense, the whole bit.' The defense has 18 of the top 22 players back, including eight starters led by strong safety Michael Zordich. The offense returns six starters but will have a new quarterback, probably junior Matt Knizner.

Pitt's main goals are to replace linebackers Troy Benson and Caesar Aldisert and pump life into an offense that frequently sagged last season. Quarterback John Congemi, plagued by injuries last year, is back.

West Virginia is aiming for an unprecedented fifth straight bowl trip and the Mountaineers intend to do it with defense, where 10 starters return, including linebackers Matt Smith and Fred Smalls and free safety Travis Curtis. The big man on offense is 290-pound tackle Brian Jozwiak but the key is new quarterback John

Army was among the major surprises in 1984, capping an 8-3-1 season with its first ever bowl trip. Fullback Doug Black, one of the nation's top rushers, is among 41 returning lettermen.

Navy has the first redshirt in its history - Napoleon McCallum, who was only 84 yards short of the career rushing record when he suffered a broken ankle in the second game last season. Syracuse could contend for regional honors if it comes up with some offense while Rutgers and Temple are on the upswing.

Auburn was the preseason No. 1 team a year ago but the Tigers lost their first two games to Miami and Texas. If tailback Bo Jackson stays healthy, they should contend for the Southeastern Conference championship.

Elsewhere in the South, Maryland is favored to capture the Atlantic Coast Conference championship for the third year in a row and Miami of Florida. Florida State and South Carolina are expected to challenge for supremacy among the area's Division 1-A independents. Defending champion Tennessee-Chattanooga, The Cidadel and Furman should battle for the title in the Southern Conference, a Division 1-AA

Auburn's most serious challenge is expected to come from Florida. which is on probation and ineligible for SEC honors. The Gators won last year, the first one in the school's history, but it was taken away by the conference presidents because of recruiting violations that landed the Gators on NCAA probation.

Florida must rebuild its offensive line, but the Gators have proven talent in quarterback Kerwin Bell and runners Neal Anderson and John L. Williams. Alonzo Johnson ranks as one of the area's top outside linebackers.

Of the SEC eligibles, Alabama, LSU and Tennessee appear to have the best shot at Auburn. Georgia is in a rebuilding stage.

Alabama has a pair of all-conference stars in linebacker Cornelius Bennett and defensive tackle Jon Hand. LSU has some spots to fill in its line but the Tigers have some gifted backs quarterback Jeff Wickersham and runners Dalton Hilliard and Garry James. Tennessee's attack will be geared around quarterback Tony Robinson and wideout Tim McGee. Johnny Majors calls them the best he has ever coached.

In the Atlantic Coast Conference. Maryland has 18 starters back, including two All-ACC defenders guard Bruce Mesner and back Al Covington. Much will depend on how Stan Gelbaugh succeeds Frank Reich at quarterback.

With Clemson coming off probation and picked to finish second, the ACC will have eight teams officially in their race for the first time since 1970. Georgia Tech and Virginia are expected to nail down the other two first division spots.

Miami is coming off an 8-5 season that could easily have been 11-2. The Hurricanes have nine defensive starters back but lost quarterback Bernie Kosar to the pros. Not to worry - Vinny Testaverde has a better arm. Florida State must rebuild its secondary and also settle on a quarterback. South Carolina has only eight starters from last year's 10-2 team but could be solid again if the offensive line comes around.

Louisville made a commitment to football by hiring Howard Schnellenberger, who steered Miami to its national title, as its new coach

This is the year of the quarterback in the Midwest. Nine starting quarterbacks return in the Big Ten and Steve Beuerlein will be back at Notre Dame Illinois Iowa and Ohio State have been tabbed the Big Ten's preseason favorites

AP picks Sooners No. One

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

The Oklahoma Sooners, who were ready to claim the 1984 national championship had they beaten Washington in the Orange Bowl, are the preseason choice to win it all in 1985 while defending champion Brigham Young just made the Top Ten

In wide-open balloting, with 10 of the 105 Division I-A teams receiving at least one first-place vote. Oklahoma outdistanced Auburn, last year's preseason pick in the Associated Press poll, which began in 1936.

The Sooners received 23 of 60

first-place votes and 1,090 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Auburn received 13 first-place votes and 1,027 points in balloting results announced Saturday night The preseason poll also raised the possibility that a team on probation could win the national championship since there are two such teams among the top five. Southern Methodist is third with three first-place ballots and 924 points, followed by Iowa, with seven firsts and 837 points, and Florida, with four firsts and 788

Both SMU of the Southwest Conference and Florida of the Southeastern Conference are ineligible for their league championships, nor can they go to a bowl game this year.

Rounding out the Top Ten are sixth-place Southern California with two first-place votes and 754 points; Maryland, three and 738; Ohio State, 709; Nebraska, 676, and BYU with one first-place ballot and 608 points.

The remaining four first-place votes were split between Illinois, No. 11, and Washington, No. 12.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer whose Sooners finished sixth last year, isn't thrilled to be No. 1 this early, but noted "we've all got to start somewhere. There are just a lot of unknowns about our team. Quarterback and the defensive secondary are major concerns. Our front line people are good on defense and I think we'll be pretty good on the offensive line.

Switzer said being ranked No. 1 'just raises the expectations of your fans. It creates so much anticipation and they feel so disappointed when it doesn't happen. They ought to know that unbeaten seasons just don't happen much any more.

Since the AP began a preseason poll in 1950, only six teams ranked No. 1 at the start of the season have won the national championship. Tennessee did it in 1951, Michigan State in 1951, Oklahoma in 1956, 1974 and 1975, and Alabama in 1978. Oklahoma also was the preseason pick in 1977 and finished seventh.

Auburn wound up 14th last year. In addition, three of the last four national champions - Clemson in 1981, Miami in 1983 and BYU last year - were not in the preseason Top Twenty.

Last year's final Top Ten consisted of BYU, Washington, Florida, Nebraska, Boston College, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, SMU, UCLA and Southern Cal.

Trailing No. 11 Illinois and No. 12 Washington in the preseason Second Ten are LSU. Notre Dame. Arkansas, Oklahoma State, South Carolina, Penn State, Florida State and UCLA.

Watson regains share of golf lead

AKRON, Ohio (AP) - Defending champion Denis Watson of South Africa compiled what he called "a kind of unusual" 4-under-par 66 Saturday and regained a share of the lead in the third round of the NEC World Series of Golf.

"I missed several easy birdie opportunities and made the difficult ones," said Watson, who failed on two birdie putts from about 5 feet.

"There was a lot of solid grinding," said Watson, who completed three trips over the Firestone Country Club course in 202, eight shots under par

He was tied with Roger Maltbie, who has had a share of the lead all three days. Maltbie saved a round of 68 with a 12-foot par putt in steady rain on the final hole and, grinning broadly, scampered away under an umbrella.

"I'm delighted to finish in the fashion I did, with good, par-saving putts on the last two holes." said Maltbie, who also made an 8-foot putt on the 17th hole.

Gordon Brand Jr. of England, who qualified for this elite event as the European Open champion. matched par 70 in the chilly showers and dropped two strokes

The group at 205, 5-under-par and only three strokes back going into Sunday's final round in the chase of a $126,000 first prize, included Tom Kite, 45-year-old George Archer, Woody Blackburn and Mark McCumber.

Archer, who left an erratic driver in the bag and attacked the 7,173-yard course with a 3-wood, birdied three of the last five holes and matched the best round of the had the lead alone. But he couldn't hold it. The strokes bled away on the back and he finished with a round of par 70. Blackburn closed up with a 67 and McCumber shot 68. Hal Sutton, with a 70, and Calvin Peete, who had a 71, were next at

Tom Watson was not that close. Watson, only two off the pace after two rounds, slipped to a 72 and was six back at 208. PGA champion Hubert Green had the same total after a 70. U.S. Open titleholder Andy North shot 73-211.

Garbacz leads National Pro-Am

DENVER (AP) - Her record over the past month or so supports Lori Garbacz's contention that she is finally ready to win in this, her seventh year on the women's golf

'The worst round I've shot in five weeks is a 73," she said. 'When you're playing that well, there's no reason to doubt

There was no doubting Friday, even after a couple of early bogeys. Garbacz parlayed a hole-in-one into a 3-under-par 69 and took the lead at the halfway point of the $300,000 LPGA National Pro-Am.

Garbacz had a two-round total of 5-under 139, a stroke ahead of Amy Alcott and two shots in front of Betsy King.

Alcott, who stands fourth on this year's LPGA money list and who won last week's World Championship of Women's Golf, moved into contention with a second-round 68. King, the defending champion and first-round leader, double-bogeyed her next-to-last hole to finish at even-par 72 Friday. U.S. Women's Open champion Kathy Baker was another shot back at 142 after a 72 Friday, while Rosie Jones, Becky Pearson, and Debbie Massey were at 143. The pros, each paired with an amateur partner, have played one round at Meridian Golf Club and one at Lone Tree Country Club. The final two rounds will be played at Meridian, which resembles a Scottish course with its lack of trees, many mounds and sand traps, and undulating greens.

Garbacz - playing Friday at Meridian, which consistently has yielded lower scores than Lone Tree - began the day just one shot behind King but lost ground on the front nine.

GIRL GRIDDER - Elizabeth Balsley is shown as she leaves the locker room of North Hunterdon High School after receiving her football gear Saturday. STUFF AND THINGS

IS IT THE SAME Texas Education Agency that has shown such great concern over the encroachment on academics by extra-curricular activities that approved closing public schools on Sesquicentennial Day? The TEA said there shall be no school, the day will count as an official school day and need not be made up.

Does this august body feel that the students will be better served educationally staring at cartoons and quiz shows on television, listening to record players, etc., than they would participating in a school-sponsored UIL activity? And when is the last time you can recall the State Commissioner of Education ordering a school to make up a school day missed due to weather closing? Most of the time the day is forgiven.

And isn't this stealing from both the students, in terms of loss of an educational opportunity, and from the taxpayers, who are paying for that day(s) of education? Forgive me for being picky, but I don't see the difference between that and buying a dozen eggs at the grocery store and finding only 11 in the carton when I get home.

THE REASON I COULD not get enthused aboug Enos "County" Slaughter's selection to Baseball's Hall of Fame this summer dates back to a World War II encounter with the fine baseball player. He joined our Aviation Cadet unit, bragging that the only reason he joined the program was so he could finish the 1942 season with the St. Louis Cardinals, resulting in a World Series victory over New

I guess it was his cocky attitude that he had put one over on the military, that baseball was more important than his country. In fairness, he went on to serve three years, in what capacity and duty I don't know. But it didn't set too well with those of us already in Service, volunteers, including one of his fellow major leaguers in our unit, Pittsburgh outfielder Maurice Van Robays

IT WAS 6:45 a.m. Saturday morning a week ago, "I've got to have a cup of coffee to wake up,' said longtime friend Dr. Rhea Williams, now retired head of the Texas University Interscholastic League. He poured us both a cup as we sat down to eat breakfast. Rhea, once the unbending, feared rule interpreter, still is a part of the UIL, serving as secretary of the organization's Foundation program. And we naturally got to the immediate problems created by HB 72.

"I think they'll eventually alter the 'pass-play' rule in some manner," said the man who is probably more respected as an authority on the subject of extra-curricular school programs than anyone else in the nation. "I think they'll shorten the penalty for failing a class to two or three weeks after they've had some time to evaluate the rule's current effect. And I think they should let that athlete participate during that period of waiting, allowing taking part in workouts and playing in junior varsity contests.

We both expressed some concerns over the growth of coaching staffs, and more importantly from an educational standpoint, the placement of coaches in the classroom, where many teach outside their primary field, again cheating students truly desirous of learning.

"Here is where the teacher testing part of the bill is good," said Dr. Williams. "That test should eliminate much of that problem eventually." Not this year, however, as we understand because of the time element, any tests this year will be limited to one subject, English.

Andujar becomes first 20-game winner

Andujar a 20-game winner

AP Sports Writer

Joaquin Andujar has been called flashy, stylish, a showoff and a lot of other things. Now, he can be called a 20-game winner -

Andujar became the first 20-game winner in the major leagues this season Friday night by pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves. The right-hander, now 20-7, was the only National League pitcher to reach that mark last year when he went 20-14.

The triumph, coupled with the New York Mets' doubleheader loss to San Diego, moved the Cardinals into a one-game lead in the NL East. And Andujar said the team's success, rather than his own, was most important.

"I don't have any numbers," he said. "I just want to go to the World Series. That's my goal."

Andujar is the first NL pitcher to record consecutive 20-victory seasons since Houston's Joe Niekro in 1979 and 1980. Andujar is the first St. Louis pitcher to do it since Bob Gibson in 1969 and

"I like his style," Andujar said of Gibson. "He's a real tough

In other NL games, San Diego dropped New York 6-1 and then 3-0, Los Angeles slammed Montreal 8-4, Houston beat Pittsburgh 2-0 in 10 innings, Cincinnati nipped Chicago 3-2, and San Francisco halted Philadelphia 4-1.

Andujar battled to his 20th victory, going 7 1-3 innings but giving up 12 hits. Jeff Lahti finished the game for his 15th

Mark Thurmond combined with two relievers on a six-hitter in the opener, and Roy Lee Jackson teamed with three pitchers to scatter five hits in the nightcap as San Diego swept in New York.

The two victories moved the Padres within 61/2 games of Los Angeles in the NL West.

Astros 2, Pirates 0

Kevin Bass lined a pinch-double that drove in two runs in the 10th inning and led Houston past Pittsburgh.

The victory, however, did not go to Astros starter Nolan Ryan, who pitched eight innings and gave up two hits. Ryan wound up with a no-decision that left his career-high, eight-game losing streak intact. He has not won since June 17.

"My job is to give us a chance to win and I did that tonight," said Ryan, who is 8-11. "You can't worry about your won-loss record." Giants 4, Phillies 1

Chris Brown hit his 13th homer and Bob Brenly contributed three singles, while Atlee Hammaker and two relievers held Philadelphia to six hits.

Good things just seem to be happening to Brian Downing, even on apparently routine plays.

Downing, hitting .438 in August with eight homers and 25 RBIs, had two-run homer in the sixth inning, but that was one of only two hits California managed in the first eight innings Friday night. The Angels got two more hits in the ninth, but three Detroit errors, including third baseman Tom Brookens' throwing error on a grounder by Downing, allowed California to score five runs and beat the Tigers 7-6.

"What's the big deal? It was just a ground ball and an error," Downing said. "I'd much rather be in that situation now than in the first half of the season. I have more confidence now

Brookens actually made a good play to field Downing's hard grounder with two outs and the score tied 6-6, but his throw to first was low, allowing Gary Pettis to

An organizational meeting for the formation of a city fall volleyball league will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Lovett Memorial Library auditorium.

Jackie Harper, recreation coordinator for the Parks and Recreation Department, said persons or groups interested in the league should attend the meeting so the office can have an idea of the number of teams and players that will be participating.

The number of teams will determine the number of volleyball leagues to be established. The season will last eight to 10 weeks or longer depending on the number of teams which form the leagues.

The league will be organized similarly to the city's softball league program, with team and player fees supporting the operations of the program.

Further information may be obtained by calling Harper at 665-0909 or Gary Meador at 665-3761 during the day.

Germans assess spy damage

BONN, West Germany (AP) -Security officials met in emergency session Saturday to assess the damage wrought upon their system by the defection to Communist East Germany of one of West Germany's highest placed counter-spies.

One great concern was for Bonn's spies abroad, put in danger of exposure

"The main thrust of the meeting was, 'How could this have happened," said Michael-Andreas Butz, spokesman for the Interior Ministry.

The Bonn Panorama newspaper said intelligence officials fear the defector, Hans Joachim Tiedge, 48, may have handed the East Germans a list of 160 West German agents operating undercover in the "Intelligence officials fear a wave of arrests of Western agents in East Germany in the near future," the newspaper said.

Tiedge headed a department responsible for fighting East German spy efforts.

Butz said Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann and several ranking security experts spent more than five hours reviewing the defection and Tiedge's knowledge of West German security operations.

"Primarily, they are attempting to assess the extent of the damage done," Butz told The Associated Press, but declined to give details. He said Zimmermann broke off a vacation and returned to Bonn late

Friday to attend the meeting. Ministry sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said officials remained stunned by the report Friday from East Tiedge had fled to East Berlin and asked for political asylum. West German television, calling the spy scandal "the worst in the Interior Ministry officials said Tiedge had worked in West German intelligence for 19 years and held a "sensitive position" within the Constitutional Protection Office, which handles counter-espionage.

West German officials have said they have to assume Tiedge could give wide-ranging information to the East Germans. U.S. and other Western security experts are trying to determine if the defection was also damaging to their interests.

Bonn officials declined to comment on reports in several West German newspapers that West Germany was trying to recall its undercover agents in East Gemany out of fear Tiedge would expose them.

The Constitutional Protection Office has halted all operations until it can be determined exactly what Tiedge knows and can pass on, according to a government source, who spoke on condition of not being named.

West German news media meanwhile reported that Tiedge had suffered from a drinking problem, financial difficulties and depression after the death of his wife three years ago.

Hans Neusel, Interior Ministry undersecretary, told reporters authorities knew Tiedge had personal problems but judged him fit enough to carry out his job.

Jury recommends $8 million award

RIO GRANDE CITY, Texas former employees, Moises (AP) - A Starr County jury has recommended that almost $8 million in damages be given to the family of an oilfield worker fatally shot in the face by a co-worker.

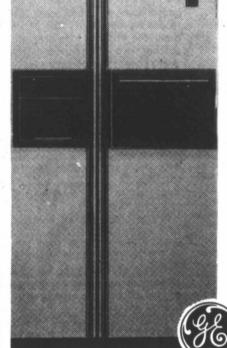

The seven-man, five-woman jury found gross negligence Thursday on the part of Heldt Brothers Trucking of Alice, an oilfield service company, and one of its Medrano, 37, of Port Isabel.

Medrano shot and killed Ruben Ruiz, 20, while playing with a gun at an oil rig at a west Starr County ranch on May 21, 1980, police said.

Medrano had testified that his supervisor, Rene Alvarado, saw him three times with the gun on the day of the accident, but only once told him to put it down.

"This will be a very difficult debate," said a senior U.S. official who will be in Geneva with Kenneth Adelman, the director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, defending American policy. "I do not expect a walkout," he added.

They have not concluded a major agreement in the arms control field since the last review was held. Negotiations in the Swiss city, due to resume in mid-September, have failed so far to make any discernible headway on reducing nuclear missiles, bombers and

Girls (and men, too) at the Social Security office hosted a 50th anniversary celebration that a penny says might not have been equalled across the land in any other SS office. Billie Bruner, Pat Stubbs and Doris Huffhines used a red party table cloth caught with gold bows and accented with brass appointments to create an impressive patriotic atmosphere.

Receiving equal billing was the white, 3-tiered cake baked, artistically decorated and served by Raymona Nuttall. Shirley Nicholson, Brunette Stewart and Phyllis Schrader baked cookies, made punch and mints, and helped with hostess duties. Old Glory hung from the ceiling in splendor.

Jim Talbot, Amarillo District manager, attended. Larry Mayo is the local manager.

BILLIE AND GUY James had their three daughters and seven grandchildren for their regular, annual two - week visit. Attending were Pam (Mrs. Randy) Turner, Erin, Sally and Guy of Utah; Guyla (Mrs. Charles) Endey, Graham and Carrie of Bowie; and Jan (Mrs. Mike) O'Neal, Jeremy and Jami Smith of Pampa

When Erin found the first of many coins Billie had hidden in the sand pile, the others joined in what became a three-day search. Another year Guy brought RENTED baby pigs home in a tow sack for the children to play with Jeremy, the oldest grandchild, celebrated his 14th birthday during the visit.

After the grandparents rested up a few days in their mountain cabin. Billie, Jeremy and Jami picked up Guyla, Graham and Carrie at Bowie for an end-of-summer fling at Six Flags.

Long-time Pampa resident Nora Ford will observe her 91st birthday Monday. Congratulations!

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Ramirez, celebrating their 50th anniversary recently with a special mass at St. Vincent's, had some moments of deja vu for the occasion. Mrs. Librada Tenorio repeated her role as maid of honor, having been at the couple's first wedding. And playing after the ceremony at the reception in Pampa Optimist Club was Victor Diaz and his band, who had also played at the first wedding

50 years ago. All of Mrs. Ramirez' brothers and sisters were here to help celebrate the special occasion: Robert Hernandez, Arthur Hernandez, Mrs. Celia Alarid, Mrs. Felicitas Diaz, Mrs. Trinidad Martinez and Mrs. Aurora Hernandez.

PENNIES IN the wishing well could be well spent in wishing for Bill Waters' white Mercedes Benz convertible. It's a dream buggy de elegance. There were some unidentified men's heads stuck under the hood while Bill and Ed Sweet admired the body.

Dorothy and Tommy Hollis arrived home in the early hours of Friday, Aug. 16, from what turned out to be a shortened trip to the coast to meet their son John and his family for a camping and fishing trip to Matagorda Island. The camping was cut short when Hurricane Danny threatened to head toward the coast and the campers decided to head home.

Dorothy and Tommy brought their granddaughter Shawn back with them for a stay so she can visit her cousins and other family members. They will take Shawn back to her home near Nacogdoches next week so she can rejoin her parents and twin brothers in time for the start of school

Oops! and apologies to Cam Marsh, who is "Cameron," not "Camberon."

Lois and Cam's son, Dr. Randall Marsh of Greeley, Colo., and his cousin, Gregory Marsh of New York City, also attended the family gathering in Washington, D. C., for the 70th wedding anniversary of Cam's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Marsh, ages 93 and 88, of Silver Spring, Md.

Greg is the son of Abbot and Nadine Marsh of Vero Beach, Fla., rather than Lois and Cam as previously reported.

BY JOE VanZANDT COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT FALL LAWN CARE

Our weather is beginning to take on a feel like fall weather is just around the corner. September is the best time to seed cool season grass lawns such as Bluegrass or Fescue. It certainly helps if you have your seedbed prepared ahead

Seedbed preparation includes having the lawn area leveled, soil firmed, free of weeds and junk grass, and fertilized. It is best if you can anticipate when a damp, cool spell of weather is coming and sow your seed just prior to its arrival. A light incorporation of seed is all that is needed. Probably the most important thing is to be able to keep the seedbed area fairly damp for at least two to three weeks. This means being able to apply water two to three times per day with light applications until the grass becomes fairly well rooted.

The amount of seed needed for establishment of tall fescue lawns is approximately 8 to 10 pounds of pure live seed per 1,000 square feet. Bluegrass needs about 1 to 3 pounds of PLS per 1,000 square feet of area Most tall fescue lawns eventually become thin or bare in spots. This condition may be caused by diseases, insects or hot, dry summer conditions. A thinned tall fescue lawn forms clumps and becomes unsightly. To prevent this from occurring, it's usually necessary to overseed fescue lawns in the fall. This must be done every 1 to 3 years, depending on the condition of the lawn.

KERRVILLE - Kelly Stevens, 20, of White Deer worked this summer as a counselor at a camp for physically handicapped children.

The counselors at the Texas Lions Club Camp for Handicapped Children are special people with big hearts who spend 11 weeks helping children, many of whom would not be eligible for other camps.

As a counselor, hours are long, work is plentiful, pay is little, but the rewards are unforgettable

The summer begins with a one-week training program to teach the counselors sign language, techniques in lifting children from wheelchairs and dealing with braces. The counselors also learn how to adapt activities to include all the children, no matter how handicapped they may be.

The counselors then become parent - teacher - friend for approximately 1,300 children throughout the five two-week camping sessions.

On the 500-acre camp located near Kerrville, the counselors plan and assist the children in all activities. Some of the activities include swimming, horseback riding, fishing, studying nature, participating in sports and going on an overnight campout.

The "can do" philosophy is emphasized and the campers are encouraged to try things they never have done. The counselors provide safe ways for every child to do things he or she many have only dreamed of doing before.

One camper's parent wrote to the camp: "I cannot speak highly enough for the camp counselors. I have never seen such a true outpouring of love and care. They are a group who give their love to so many. The experience my son had at camp will keep him happy all year.

Since 1949, when the Texas Lions League was chartered, the goal was to provide a center dedicated to serving the handicapped population of Texas. The first camp session in 1953 served 40 handicapped children. It has since grown to serve thousands of handicapped people every year.

The center gives them a chance to reach their potential and learn more about themselves and others. Currently the center is one of the largest educational and recreational programs in the United States offered to disabled

The paved pathways make the facilities completely accessible for handicapped individuals. The facilities include eight large bunkhouses, two dormitories, a cafeteria, two swimming pools, two camping sites, an auditorium and recreation building, an

Although many of us may look upon children's clothing shopping as a real headache both physically and in the pocketbook, being well dressed is important to children. Children's clothing has many purposes in addition to providing something to wear. Clothes give children the means to: (1) Be like other children; (2) Develop a sense of ownership and responsibility; (3) Gain self-confidence and independence; (4) Learn about decision-making; (5) Acquire freedom of activity in relation to growth stages; and (6) Use their imaginations.

Children who have confidence in how they look tend to be more positive in their schoolwork and their relations with classmates. Research studies also show that teachers believe school-age children with an attractive appearance are more intelligent and do better in school.

Parents can help children have that extra bit of confidence by planning school clothes carefully. This doesn't mean that parents need to go out and spend a months income on a child's wardrobe featuring the latest styles and most advertised brands.

The basic elements in selecting school clothes are that they should be attractive, comfortable, and safe. Beyond that is an enormous range for choice - a choice to be made with the child's input.

Here are some suggestions on how to make shopping trips for clothes a success. First make a money plan. Know how much you have to spend on clothes for everyone before you begin buying. The greatest amount of money spent on children's clothing usually goes for a back-to-school wardrobe.

Have a closet check at the begining of each season. Decide what is usable, stylish, still fits, and in good repair. What's stylish for kids this year? Paisleys, plaids, denims, and corduroys will hit the mark for girls and boys. Bright colors, oversized tops, high-top shoes, suspenders, and sweaters are all grade A choices. Don't forget to check older brother's or sister's wardrobe for clothing items that can be updated for another year's wear. Garage sales are another option - especially when it comes to major clothing items such as coats.

Agree on what to buy and when, since you don't need to have everything at once. Layaway plans at many stores allow some shopping flexibility making it possible to take advantage of good size and style selections and sometimes sales. Remember, too, that school-age children grow fast, so purchase only a few things at the beginning of the school year to avoid outgrowing garments.

Buy clothes that fit according to your child's size, not by age. Most manufacturers base sizes on weight and height so if you can't shop with the child, take actual measurements along. Since sizes may vary by manufacturers, it's best to have the child try on clothes.

Check for quality and safety. Look for straight seams. Check buttons, zippers, belts, ties, and pockets for strength, finishing, and ease of handling. Select fabrics that are sturdy but comfortable, colorfast and have easy-care requirements.

Always read labels before you buy. Permanent labels give you details for laundering.

Social Security sprouts seeds of conflict

EDITOR'S NOTE - A blunt fact about Social Security is that young working families are heavily taxed to support benefits for a steadily rising segment of the older generation. Therein lies a seed of intergenerational conflict, and occasional but so far unheeded proposals for fundamental changes in the system. This is the last of three articles.

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL Associated Press Writer

In St. Petersburg, Fla., Ruth Stott frets about the possibility that the government might skip or cut in half next January's Social Security cost-of-living increase.

"My rent has gone up something terrible, and what I get for $10 in the grocery is nothing hardly. Milk used to be 79 cents a quart. Now it's $1.25," says the 82-year-old widow, who gets $399 a month. "If they would freeze that stuff I would be satisfied with what I have.

A thousand miles to the north, in Elm Grove, Wis., Brian Schneider got fed up reading about senior citizens lobbying to protect their cost-of-living increases

The elderly "don't give a damn about anyone under 65," the 25-year-old architect from Elm Grove, Wis., charged in an irate letter to the editor of The Milwaukee Journal. "Very little, if any of the money they collect from Social Security is theirs. It is mine and all other working taxpayers ... I say: Power to the junior citizens

- the taxpayers.' In this 50th year of the Social Security system, there are clear signs of a growing generational divide over the program that taxes 123 million Americans to provide a steady income for 37 million retired or disabled workers.

Mrs. Stott, a one-time tavern owner who drove ammunition trucks during World War II and whose main pastime now is riding buses around St. Petersburg, has been drawing Social Security for 22 years.

Schneider, who is self-employed, pays more than $4,000 a year in Social Security taxes to provide for her and others. Many in his generation seem to regard the system as a sinkhole that will swallow their taxes then disappear. Sixty-seven percent of adults under 30 in an ABC-Washington Post poll last January said they doubted Social Security will exist when they

If Social Security is to survive and prosper for another 50 years, it must convince people like Brian Schneider that they will get their

IT IS A TASK made more difficult by the fact that for years the government operated Social Security like a discount department store. It charged only a fraction of what retirement benefits actually were worth. But now it is demanding that workers pay full price - or nearly so - for its wares.

For years, payroll taxes were kept artificially low. From 1937 through 1949, Congress froze the rate at 1 percent, and the maximum tax was only $30. There was an abundance of taxpayers and relatively few beneficiaries. Later, when the politicians added new benefits, they often postponed the taxes to pay for them Now, the payroll tax claims $7.05 out of every $100 that most Americans earn. It has gone up six times in the past eight years and is headed for 7.65 percent in 1990. The ceiling on how much income is taxed has quintupled since 1971, when only wages up to $7,800 were taxed. The maximum tax for employees is now $2,791.80 on earnings of $39,600 or more. When the program started, liberals and conservatives alike were skeptical about its financing mechanism. It had to convince skeptics that it could build up a $47 billion reserve fundswithout bringing the Republic to its knees.

In 1937, a leading Republican, Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, derided the idea of a $47 billion reserve - then double the national debt - as the "most fantastic and the most indefensible objective imaginable. Today, the system pays out that much in benefits every three

J. Douglas Brown, a Princeton University economist who helped draft the program, in his 1972 book, "An American Philosophy of Social Security," argued, "The Social Security system as a whole has sold itself. The common reaction is: Why look under the hood?"

But with most families now paying more in Social Security taxes than income taxes, many do want to look under the hood.

THE PROBLEM that troubled Social Security at the start whether it should build up a huge reserve - will recur, for the system's strategy for paying for the retirement of the post-World War II baby boom generation is to build up a $12 trillion reserve by the year 2030 - $2 trillion in today's dollars - then liquidate it over the next 20 years.

In 2050, when the trust funds are depleted, the government would have to come up with a new source of revenues or reduce benefits to keep the program on an even keel.

To its defenders, Social Security is a humane, intergenerational compact that has lifted millions of the elderly out of poverty and allowed millions more to live independent lives.

It has done that remarkably well. A quarter-century ago, 35 percent of the elderly fell below the government's official poverty line. Today, only 14 percent are classified as poor, and children are far more likely to be living in poverty than their grandparents.

In the 1930s, says former Commissioner Robert M. Ball, "The poorhouse toward end of life with all its horrors — was a very real part of America. Social Security changed all that. It created a peaceful revolution in the way older people, totally disabled people, and widows and orphans Yale University economist and Nobel laureate James Tobin, at a conference in New Haven last April called to celebrate the program's golden anniversary, said he was convinced "the Social Security Act was one of the greatest triumphs of political, social and economic architecture in the history of the Republic.'

But Tobin also said the program is "seriously troubled" and threatened by "an ugly intergenerational conflict." He proposed a gradual switch to a funded pension program over

Even some admirers have likened Social Security to a Ponzi scheme, after the 1920s Boston swindler who paid handsome returns to early investors and left the rest holding the bag.

Economist Paul A. Samuelson wrote in 1967, "The beauty about social insurance is that it is actuarially unsound. Everyone who reaches retirement age is given benefit privileges that far exceed anything he has paid in ... A growing nation is the greatest Ponzi game ever contrived."

To its detractors, Social Security is fundamentally flawed because it is not a fully funded retirement plan. Workers' money is not set aside for their own retirement. It is simply paid out to those who currently get benefits. What workers get is a promise that the government will keep taxing workers in later generations to cover their checks.

Economist Milton Friedman, also a Nobel laureate, once dismissed Social Security as "a triumph of imaginative packaging and Madison Avenue technology.

Friedman and other conservatives claim workers could realize far bigger gains if they were free to buy their own pensions and insurance in the private sector, where their dollars would be helping the economy expand, rather than just redistributing income from workers to retirees.

Two years ago, two Heritage Foundation analysts, Stuart Butler and Peter Germanis, wrote a paper urging "what one might crudely call guerrilla warfare against both the current Social Security system and the coalition that supports it." Germanis is now a White House policy aide

They extol the strategy championed by Peter J. Ferrara, a former Reagan aide, who wants to expand Individual Retirement Accounts and give workers the option of diverting their payroll taxes into their own retirement and insurance investments.

Robert J. Myers, Social Security's chief actuary from 1947 to 1970, figures that the program is "a poor bargain for young new entrants when the combined employer-employee tax is considered, but a reasonably good buy when only the employee tax is

Social Security's actuaries estimate that someone born in 1960 who pays the maximum tax will have paid $341,841 in old-age insurance taxes by the time he retires at age 67. The worker also would have paid $43,000 for disability insurance, and an even larger amount for Medicare.

If those old-age taxes had gathered interest over the years, they would be worth more than $922,000 by the year 2027, according to Myers. For that, a new retiree can expect to receive nearly $8,000 a month from Social Security in 2027, or $96,000 a year in benefits.

He would likely live to draw $1.3 million in benefits, or $2.3 million if a spouse also collected on his account, according to Myers. To put those figures in perspective, the average wage by then would exceed $150,000 a year and someone qualifying for the maximum benefit would have earned $354,000 the year before

Today, there are 3.2 taxpayers for each person getting Social Security. The ratio will remain above 3-to-1 for the next quarter century, because the baby boomers will be in their peak working years while the relatively small cohort born during the Depression reaches retirement age. But after that, the ratio will fall to 2-to-1 by

Today it takes someone who retires at 65 less than two years to recover in benefits all the taxes he or she paid in. But it will take years for the baby boomers to recoup in their old age what they paid into the system.

Anyone who retired before 1971 had paid no more than $3,765 into the system, or $4,900 if they were self-employed.

But in the past 15 years, workers have kicked in up to $20,887 to Social Security, including $2,791.80 for 1985 alone. The self-employed have paid up to $30,253.05, including up to $4,672.80 this year.

The most any 65-year-old worker has contributed since 1937 is $24,652.79, but that person can now draw $8,500 a year in benefits, or $13,000 with a spouse.

Another transformation for Ted Knight

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Ted Knight's syndicated comedy series is going through yet another transformation, but he isn't

"Too Close For Comfort" is being canceled, but most of the characters will reappear in 1986 in a new series called "The Ted Knight Show."

Knight is smiling all the way through it. He has a right to smile. He drives a Rolls-Royce and plays tennis every day.

Patting his flat stomach, he says, "I'm still married to the same woman, I have three great kids, I own my own home, I have a steady job. What more could I want?"

Maybe another five years on the air with his new show.

"Too Close For Comfort" first appeared on ABC in November 1980. Even before that there was the British series that inspired it, "Keep It in the Family." After three years ABC dumped the show because of poor ratings.

But producer D.L. Taffner and Metromedia stepped in to rescue the show. It went back into production for syndication for another two years.

The experience of "Too Close For Comfort" is not unique. Other network castoffs have found new homes. "Fame" had tough going on NBC, but it's enjoying prosperity in syndication. "The Paper Chase," discarded by ABC. was picked up first by PBS in reruns and then by the Showtime pay network for new shows.

Two other network refugees, What's Happening!!" (retitled "What's Happening Now") and "It's a Living," will soon find new life in syndication.

In "Too Close For Comfort." Knight played Henry Rush, a cartoonist who housed his grown-up daughters in the same San Francisco apartment building where he lived so he could keep an eye on them. In the new show, Rush buys into a Marin County newspaper, across the Bay, and moves there with his wife, played by Nancy Dussault. JM J. Bullock, who played Monroe Ficus, will also join them, but the two daughters will not. Warren Berlinger and Pat Carroll will be added to the cast.

"It'll have a fresh look," says the white-haired Knight, who first gained fame as television anchorman Ted Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." "It'll be almost a different show, but not quite. The daughters won't be in the new show. We decided it'd be a little silly for Henry Rush to be on the floor with a glass to his ear listening for his 30-year-old daughters to come home.

Knight worked in radio early in his career. One job took him to New York where he enrolled in the American Theater Wing and soon began to land roles on radio and television. Later he moved his family west and played more than 300 roles in television series. But he didn't become known until he became Ted Baxter
