Top spellers fight tension

WASHINGTON (AP) - "This is worse than having a baby,' lamented Raymond Mercier as he watched his 13-year-old daughter painstakingly recite the correct spelling of "cadre," 'quisling' and 'refluence.'

Mercier, a purchasing agent from Scott, La., had just escaped briefly from the tension of a hotel ballroom here where 168 young spellers were participating in the 58th National Spelling Bee.

His daughter Maris was one of 112 contestants who survived the opening day ordeal only to face today's "killer round" of difficult words sure to produce more nail-biting, heartbreak and happiness.

'We saw to it that she studied," Mercier said as his daughter easily handled the first three rounds

Others had a more traumatic time. Charles E. Meadows, 12, Huntington, W. Va., stood speechless at the microphone when given a word, looking plaintively from the announcer, to the audience, to the spellers.

A judge gently prompted the boy, telling him he must try to spell the word. Charles nearly made it, but he dropped an "s" in 'lisse,' which means silk gauze.

With the two-day event concluding today, the words were expected to be complex or obscure. Rochelle Solomon, the mother of Tanya Solomon, 13, of Kansas City, Mo., said the fourth round traditionally is hard.

Body believed 'Death angel's'

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) -Federal police say they have found the body of a man they believe is Josef Mengele, the infamous "Angel of Death" at the Auschwitz concentration camp, according to radio reports today

The reports quote Federal Police Director Roemeu Tuma, as saying a man found buried in the small town of Embu, about 40 miles from Sao Paulo, was Mengele

The man drowned in 1979 on a beach called Bertioga, about 46 miles southeast of Sao Paulo and was buried in the nearby town, the radio reports quoted Tuma as

The reports quoted police as saying Mengele arrived in Brazil in 1969 or 1970 with a German couple, whom he hid out with

The reports said an exhumation of the body was scheduled to take place today

Mengele carried out sadistic medical experiments and ordered the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Jews at the Nazis' Auschwitz concentration camp during World War II

Mengele, who would be 74 if he is alive, reportedly has been seen in Paraguay and Uruguay in recent

In West Germany, the newspaper Die Welt reported today Mengele may have died 10 years ago, in 1975, in Sao Paolo - not in 1979 as the Brazilian radio reports

Die Welt, published in Bonn and one of West Germany's largest daily papers, said authorities flew to Brazil several days ago to verify reports that a man believed to be Mengele drowned while swimming in Sao Paulo in 1975

A Bonn Justice Ministry official who requested anonymity said he could not confirm whether German authorities had flown to Brazil. He said he was skeptical about the report Mengele had drowned.

"We are always hearing reports about Mengele," the official told The Associated Press. "First he's sighted here, then there. But there has not been any proof offered

The West German newspaper, releasing in advance an article to be printed in its Friday editions, said German officials would watch an exhumation of the drowned man's body.

Die Welt said Mengele, the target of several international manhunts, was living in Sao Paulo under an assumed name at the time of his death. Several reward offers, totalling $3.5 million, have been made for anyone who can find Mengele.

Mengele reportedly moved to South America after World War II, living first in Argentina and then in Paraguay, where he was granted citizenship in 1959.

Paraguay revoked Mengele's citizenship papers in 1979 because of international pressure, but Paraguavan officials mantained he had left the country by then

Pampa escapes flash floods

Area soaks up more than three inches of rainfall

From Staff and Wire Reports

Heavy rainfall was reported point during the night heavy across a vast area of Texas early rainfall in North Texas caused U.S.

Austin. Wichita falls has recorded p.m. City Engineer David Zelenok said Holliday Creek rose about today after a night of flash flooding across portions of North Texas.

Pampa escaped the flooding, but the showers added another 1.31 inches of rainfall to the three-day total, bringing beneficial moisture to most area farmers. (See related

Falling intermittently throughout Wednesday, the rain brought the three-day total to 3.34 inches, according to local weatherman Derrell Sehorn

Pampa has received 12.36 inches for the year to date, much above the normal rainfall of 7.5 inches for this time of year, Sehorn reported.

The runoff water filled the banks of the Red Deer Creek system running through the city, but no flooding has been reported. Low-lying areas throughout the city and in the countryside are full of water, but the slow rains over the past three days has allowed most of the water to run off without threatening any flooding.

Pampa had a high yesterday of 65, with an overnight low of 60. Skies were expected to begin clearing off today, with a high near 80, though there's still a chance for isolated showers and thunderstorms. Fair skies are forecast for tomorrow with a high

More than seven inches of rain fell at Denison between late Wednesday and early today and up to five inches of rain fell in the area just north of San Antonio

Heavy rains were reported early today in North Central, Northeast, South Central Texas, the Hill Country and the Edwards Plateau. And forecasters say the rain should continue during the day, ending from the west to east by tonight. Clearing skies and slightly warmer temperatures are forecast for Friday

A flash flood watch was in effect for much of the state today and numerous flash flood warnings were issued during the night before tapering off somewhat early today.

The rains were triggered by an upper level trough of low pressure that was moving slowly at dawn northeastward through the Texas Panhandle. A nearly stationary cold front extends across the state from just north of San Angelo to just north of the Dallas-Fort Worth

The heavy rain in North Central Texas caused some flooding at Wichita Falls and forced some residents from their homes. In Wichita Falls, floodwaters were as high as three feet in some streets Wednesday after rains dumped up to five inches of rain there, the Wichita Falls Record News said.

The Red Cross set up an emergency shelter at an elementary school in Wichita Falls, and about 29 residents were staying at the shelter Wednesday night.

As many as two dozen Red Cross volunteers were working throughout the city Wednesday helping flooded-out families and assessing damage.

Heavy rains won't hurt farmers, VanZandt says

The three-day rainfalls in the sorghum when it is planted," he Pampa area should be generally said. beneficial to area farmers, Gray County Extension Agriculture Agent Joe VanZandt said today

'I don't foresee any real problems in most areas," he said.

Since the rains totaling between three and four inches throughout the county fell over an extended period, most of the water was able to run off or to seep into the ground, preventing any general flooding of most fields. VanZandt said.

The only areas which might have problems are low-lying sections in flatland fields or those around the edges of lakes and ponds, he said.

VanZandt said farmers who have already planted grain sorghum may have to do some replanting if the fields have been fully soaked. But the rain should be really beneficial to land on which the grain is yet to be planted, he said. The rains have really been "a big benefit to getting soil moisture restored on grain sorghum ground," VanZandt explained.

The rains probably will provide a full soil profile that should carry into July, helping to cut down on the amount of needed irrigation for many farmers, he said. "It will be a big help for the

"I doubt it will have any really adverse effects" on most wheat land, VanZandt said, except possibly for low-lying spots which may have been flooded.

The flooding hasn't affected much acreage except in limited areas, he said.

The rains should be very beneficial to range land grass, "something we've been missing for the last three years, VanZandt said. "There's a good chance to grow a lot of grass this year" because of the large amount of rainfall in recent weeks, he said.

But as soon as the ground gets dry, there will be wheat to harvest and sorghum to plant, making a busy time for farmers, VanZandt said

He said he doesn't expect the warm weather and increased humidity to provide many problems for most farmers with wheat rust

Most wheat is close enough to harvesting that the leaves have matured and dried out, cutting down on the chances for the wheat rust, he explained

The only areas which might still experience problems with the rust are fields which had been damaged by hail with the wheat left lying in the fields, he said

Secure animal shelter for Groom discussed

GROOM - City officials continued their quest for tighter control of stray animals as they discussed building a new animal shelter during a regular meeting

Although no action was taken or any decision made on the shelter. the city council did come up with a rough draft one shelter design.

The shelter is to replace the current "shelter" located next to the city garage. It is a small cage about four to five feet high and divided into 3 by 4 feet pens. City officials say they have had problems with residents breaking into the cages to retrieve their animals which have been caught. by city workers. Most of the dogs caught are not strays, but are owned by residents. The shelter design that council members discussed would be a cinder block building with a concrete floor. It would be about 12 by 7 feet and include four 3 by 4 feet pens and possibly a walkway in front of the pens so that the animal control officer may tend to the animals. Each pen would have an outside door to enable the officer to put the dog inside the pen

As the law allows, the city would keep the dogs only for three days before doing away with them. As a result, the city decided that lighting the building or putting in running water is of little importance. Mayor Alfred Homer said the Pampa shelter is not lit.

But ventilation is important, council members agreed, as they discussed ways to provide ventilation without providing enough space for the animals to escape

SEATTLE (AP) — In the first five days since he launched his war on the new Coca-Cola, Gay Mullins says he's been overwhelmed by the response from others who apparently share his dismay at the soda pop's change.

"It's just unbelievable," Mullins said Wednesday. He said more than 60,000 phone calls have been logged on a nationwide number explaining his organization, the Old Cola Drinkers of America

His fledgling protest group also has plans to produce T-shirts, buttons, pins and a record to pressure the Coca-Cola Co. to make the traditional version of the cola drink available, he said

New construction lags far behind pace set last year

Staff Writer

Valuation of buildings issued permits by the city continued to show a drop from last year's figures. according to a report issued this week by Steve Vaughn, director of the Neighborhood Integrity

Department. Totals for the current fiscal and calendar year periods are running about half of the previous fiscal period's totals and only about a third for the comparable calendar year period.

The fiscal year runs from October to September, with the calendar year beginning in January Vaughn reported a total valuation of $4,444,981 for buildings issued permits by the Department of Building Inspection for the current fiscal year to date. That's about 50.9 percent of the $8,728,534 valuation recorded in the same 1983-1984 fiscal For the first five months of the year, valuations totaled $2,073,625, only about 34 percent of the $6,072,649 recorded for the same 1984 period.

In May the department issued 26 building permits with a total valuation of $430,150, up more than $100,000 from the $322,500 valuation recorded in Last May, however, 33 permits were issued for buildings having a total valuation of $1,203,185, nearly three times the amount for last month. The valuation listed for last May is more than half the total for the current calendar year period.

Building permits issued last month included two single family dwellings with a valuation of $313,000; two relocation or demolishing of buildings, $6,000; six mobile homes, $50,000; seven alterations or additions, $47,150; two garages, $14,000; and seven others, no valuation listed.

The department collected $1,259.25 in building permit fees in May. For the calendar year to date fees total $5,693.50 for 96 permits. For the fiscal year period, personnel have issued 192 building permits and collected $11,306.25 in fees, down from the $18,311.43 collected in the previous fiscal year period from 182 permits.

Twenty-six electrical permits were issued in May for fees of $358.22, compared to 29 permits and $789.40 in fees for the previous May, Vaughn reported.

For the fiscal year to date, the city has issued 145 permits for $2,823.76 in fees. In the previous fiscal period, personnel issued about the same number of electrical permits - 144 - but fees totaled $8,216.35. For the first five months of the calendar year, 79 permits have been issued with fees totaling $1,263.52. The department issued 36 plumbing permits last month, with fees of $532.87 received. In May, 1984, 47 permits were issued for fees of $987.09.

For the first eight months of the current fiscal year, personnel issued 254 permits and collected $3,817.54 in fees. In the comparable 1983-1984 fiscal period, 301 permits were issued for fees of $10,403.44. For the calender year period, 142 permits have been issued, with fees totaling $2,011.72.

The decrease in building construction and related permits is also reflected in the number of inspections personnel have conducted in relation to the previous periods.

Last month the department conducted 35 building inspections, compared to 130 in the previous May. The city has made 172 inspections in the calendar year to date. For the fiscal period, 356 inspections have been made, 150 less than the 506 conducted in the previous fiscal period. Forty-seven electrical inspections were made last month by city personnel, compared to 62 in May, 1984. The department has conducted 176 inspections for the first five months of this year. For the fiscal year periods, the city made 277 electrical inspections for the current period and 332 in the previous period.

Plumbing inspections totaled 53 last month, nearly half of the 104 made the previous May. The city has conducted 272 plumbing inspections in the current calendar year. In the current fiscal period to date, 440 inspections have been made, nearly 200 less than the 637 reported for the same 1983-1984 fiscal period.

The drownings occurred about 9 p.m. Wednesday as police were trying to keep motorists out of a flooded area of Ardmore, Ardmore Police Chief Bill Cully said. He said the driver of the van ignored their warnings and drove into the flooded street. The vehicle was swept into an 8-foot drainage ditch.

Senate approves record spending bill for defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a rare display of bipartisan unity, the Senate, as it passed a record defense spending bill, called on President Reagan to continue to honor the limits imposed by the SALT II nuclear arms treaty but to respond in kind to any Soviet violations of it.

The Senate voted 90-5 Wednesday night to seal a compromise on the SALT II issue worked out in hours of private negotiations between liberals and conservatives.

It then approved, 92-3, a $231.8 billion military procurement authorization bill. The remainder of the Pentagon's $302 billion spending authority for fiscal 1986 was to be authorized through separate bills on military construction and pay

Voting against the bill were Sens. John Melcher, D-Mont.; Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and William Proxmire, D-Wis.

The Senate's SALT II declaration came just five days before the president was scheduled to announce his own decision on whether the United States will continue to voluntarily comply with the terms of the treaty.

The treaty was signed in 1979 by President Jimmy Carter and Soviet leader Legnid Brezhnev but was never ratified by the Senate. However, both superpowers have agreed to abide by its terms while arms negotiations continue.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas called the amendment "a good compromise" and said White House officials reported they had "no problem with it" even though Reagan has yet to announce what his decision would only provide enough of a defense spending increase next year to cover expected inflation.

President Reagan has reluctantly approved the Senate's $302 billion defense figure, although he had first sought a 5.9 percent hike over inflation as part of his defense build-up.

The Senate bill will have to be reconciled with whatever measure eventually passes the Democrat-controlled House, which is considering simply freezing Pentagon spending at current

The bill also would authorize the Pentagon to buy thousands of planes, ships, missiles and tanks. while spelling out changes in the way the money for them is spent in an attempt to curb wasteful and fraudulent practices that have prompted a series of investigations of major U.S. defense contractors.

On Tuesday, the Senate approved $2.97 billion spending for research on Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense program next year. Reagan had sought $3.7

Not voting on final passage of the overall spending bill were Sens. John C. Danforth, R-Mo.; Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala.; John P. East, R-N.C.; Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., and William V. Roth Jr.,

Nicaragua rhetoric rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is opening debate on resuming aid to Nicaragua's anti-Sandinista rebels as President Reagan ridicules the country's leftist leader as "a little dictator" and the speaker of the House accuses the White House of mapping invasion plans.

Amid the rising rhetoric, the Senate was focusing today on 10 separate proposals to permit or bar new U.S. aid to the Contra guerrillas in Nicaragua fighting the Sandinista government of President Daniel Ortega.

But Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas says he has the votes to win approval of an amendment to provide $32 million in non-lethal aid to the Contras over a two-year period. The plan specifies that the

AT&T wants $139 million. The rate hearing opens

Tom Jones, an AT&T Texas vice president, said Wednesday that the PUC staff recommendation marks the first time the agency has agreed that AT&T needs more money. The company has claimed losses of up to $300,000 a day since the Jan. 1, 1984 Bell System break-up.

State accountant Judy Poole's $81 million recommendation is "the first time we have had a solid recognition by the staff that what we've been saying is true — we've been losing money in the state," said Jones.

But $81 million is not enough, he added

"That won't do anything to address what has happened to us for the last 18 months," he said of the proposed hike. "We will never be able to recover those losses. That money is gone forever.

"Given their recommendation, in the future we would be on a positive income basis, but not at the level we need to be earning," said Jones.

The $81 million recommendation may be closer than it seems to the $139 million requested. AT&T no longer must pay about $31 million in gross receipts taxes because of a change in state law. But Jones said part of that $31 million could be cancelled by anticipated increases in wages, Social Security payments and depreciation expenses

The accountant's recommendation did not say which customers should cover the $81 million increase. The "rate design" portion of the staff report will be filed afterythe hearing begins.

AT&T initially asked for reductions in intrastate long distance rates. But in April the company decided that "increased financial losses" made the rate cut impossible.

The current request seeks increases in the short mileage long-distance calls and for the first minute of all long-distance calls. For example, the cost of a five-minute, day call from Dallas-Houston would go from $2.10 to $2.14.

AT&T also wants to charge 50 cents for long-distance directory assistance calls. The first two calls per month would be free. There is now no charge for such calls

Most of the increase would come through hikes in specialized business services, such as WATS and

Attorneys for Texas Municipal League say AT&T is entitled to a $18 million overall increase, including a $23.5 million decrease in revenue from long-distance calls.

The hike would result from increases in business services, directory assistance calls and operator-assisted calls.

Governor signs fees bill

AUSTIN (AP) - Without comment or ceremony, Gov. Mark White has signed into law a bill increasing fees paid by many Texans or by their firms.

The $146 million in increases, effective Sept. 1, includes hikes in the cost of driver's licenses, auto inspections, filing civil suits, paying for probation costs and getting bond issues reviewed.

Also signed into law Wednesday was a bill decreasing the state's contribution to the retirement funds for the teachers retirement system and the state employees retirement system.

The two bills, plus increased tuition fees for state colleges, provided about $700 million toward financing the state spending bill for

The fee bill was a compromise between the $225 million passed by the Senate and the $106 million by the House

The increased fees include: - Raising the $5.25 annual auto inspection fee to $7.75 annually for older cars, with a special $15 fee for new cars, good for two years.

- Driver's licenses, good for four years, went from $10 to $16. Filing a civil suit in a state district court was increased from $25 to $75, with $10 of the new fee going to the county that handles the filing. Filing fees for child custody cases would remain at $25. - Personalized auto license fees increase from $40 to $75 a year.

- Probation fees would increase from $15 a month to not more than $40 a month to cover administration costs of the services

 Permits for fleets of emergency medical vehicles would increase from $500 to a maximum

RYE, Texas (AP) Investigators in a subdivision of this small East Texas community say they fear five or six more girls may be victims of an alleged child-sex ring already linked to sexual assaults of four children.

Liberty County authorities have learned that during the past four years, four girls in Hoop-and-Holler ages 9 to 13 allegedly were offered gifts in exchange for participating in sex acts with numerous men.

"It was like prostitution, but they didn't know it," said Houston Police Vice Officer Steve Andrews, who is helping with the investigation.

"I get the impression they thought that was the way life was, the way to get nice things,' Andrews told the Houston story published Wednesday.

Authorities learned of the alleged child-sex ring May 8 when four girls called police and asked to tell 'the whole story of what was going on," said Liberty County Constable Paul Lognion

The girls, who include three sisters, told investigators their initiation into the alleged child-sex ring began around their ninth birthdays. They were rewarded for their favors with new clothes. makeup, camera film and a trip to Astroworld amusement park in Houston.

Six men were charged last Friday with aggravated sexual assault of children. Arrest warrants were issued for two other

Authorities say the girls, including three sisters, have given videotaped statements

One of the girls, age 12, was found living in a camper of a pickup truck with a man, his wife and three young children

Robert Ziriax, a 47-year-old construction worker from Baytown, was charged with sexual abuse and held in the Liberty County Jail on $50,000 bond.

Ziriax contends the girl was only a baby sitter and that he was "trying to get her out of a bad environment," said Liberty County Sheriff E.W. "Sonny" Applebe.

"But the girls say he has had sex with them and once even whipped his wife in an effort to force her to participate," Applebe said.

"Have you had any jobs outside of being a reporter?" my friend asked as we were sitting on the grass in the park one afternoon

'Well, yeah, sure,'' I replied. ''Why do you ask?''
'Oh, just interested,'' he said. ''What were they?'

'Well, let's see. I served in the Army in Germany, in the misnamed Intelligence Branch. I did some light roustabout work for a couple of months before returning to college. In Utah, I worked in the reading and writing lab at college, taught freshman English and wrote some brochures for the Indian Education Department.

"No. I worked as a custodian in one of the school buildings one semester during the summer months. And before moving back to Pampa, in Lubbock I was a salesman, a taker of antique photographs

"You took a bunch of old pictures?"

"No. The kind where people put on old western clothes and pretend they're Kenny Rogers or Clint Eastwood. That was at a kind of crafts store in the big mall there. I also became manager of the store for awhile before I moved home "Kind of varied jobs, eh?"

"Yeah, I guess so. Not as many as some people have had. I had one friend who changed jobs about as often as he changed the dial on a

"Do you have a secret career desire, a job you would really like to "Well, there's one I've kind of thought about wanting to do

"What?" he asked, taking his eyes off the girls riding bicycles

"Just a job, something that might be fun."

'Okay, I admit it. I've thought it might be kind of fun to be a radio disc jockey

"You?! You can barely talk your way through a check-out line at the grocery store! Sometimes you can hardly speak decipherable English. How could you handle all the chatter about the platters?

With you it'd be all muttering. 'Yeah, I know. That's one of the reasons I've never pursued it. And I'd have problems handling all the mikes, tapes, records, buttons, switches, all that equipment. I took an introduction to audio-visual production class in Utah. One of our final tests was to make a half-hour tape blending news, commercials, tapes, records, chatter

'How did you do?'

"It took me four hours to get a passable half-hour tape." "That bad, huh?

"Yeah. It was nearly a traumatic experience." "What kind of program would you like to host? A talk show?"

"You're kidding, of course. No, I'd like to do a golden oldies show. "Well, you're old enough for that," he said, turning back to watch the bikers.

'Age is only a state of mind,'' I said. "Yeah, and with you it's quite a state.

"Well, you have to admit I have a lot of years of music I can call on Most DJ's today are so young, they can't recall any good oldies. To them, the Osmond Brothers are about as far back as they can think. Or if they do play old songs, they play the old standbys, those old records that keep turning up on movie soundtracks or oldie compilation albums. Or they might find the original of a current remake, like Phil Phillips' "Sea of Love" done recently by the Honeydrippers. 'What's some of the ones you'd like to play?''

"Loads of them, including some of the ones that were so great or so much fun in my other younger days but that seem to be ignored today. Like 'The Kind of Boy You Can't Forget' by the Raindrops, 'The Martian Hop' by the Randells, 'I Just Don't Understand' by Ann-Margaret. Or 'The Big Hurt' by Toni Fisher, 'Linda' by Jan and Dean. And 'Gonzo' by James Booker, and 'Dirty Water' by the Standells and 'You Can't Judge a Book by Looking at the Cover' by

'Okay, okay. I can see you know a lot of those moldy oldies.' "And 'Six Days on the Road' by Dave Dudley. 'Pushing Too Hard'

'Enough, enough. Well, I can see you'd know a lot of old songs to drag up. Too bad you can't handle the DJ spouting delivery. I sighed. "Yeah. That's really held me back. That's why I've settled for just being a reporter.' I got up and started walking over to my bike.

Where are you going?

"Home. I think I'll pull out my Fats Domino greatest hits album and just lie back and remember things. "Fats! You have his greatest hits?! Wait a second. I'll come with

'Reforms' or not, it's still not fair

The rhetoric may be that of revolution and historic reshaping of the nation's income-tax system, but the reality is more like the kind of tinkering that keeps an increasing number of Americans relying on "experts" to prepare their tax returns.

Talk of tax reform started bravely enough, as talk of reform so often does. This time the animating idea was a "flat tax," the idea that the rate at which income is taxed should be the same for everybody, with none of the complicated deductions, exclusions and exemptions that have made the present tax code so discouraging and

Fortunately or unfortunately, that animating idea has been put through the Washington policy meat grinder. It has emerged in somewhat different form, with three levels of taxation instead of one, some exemptions instead of none, and enought loopholes and ambiguities to keep special-interest lobbyists and professional tax preparers in business for a good, long time to come.

And that's just the administration proposal. Congress has not yet begun to tinker

Perhaps the most disacouraging aspect of the Reagan proposal is its implicit acceptance of the old populist notion that we can reduce the tax burden by making corporations pay more taxes. Wasn't this the president who, in a bar in Boston a couple of years ago, let slip the embarrassing fact that corporations don't pay taxes. people do?

That's a fact few prefer to recall, but it's a fact nonetheless. But here comes the administration with that wheezy old relic, the "minimum tax" on corporations. It will almost surely hurt the economy, but it's tailor-made for demagogues catering to the ignorant.

What this latest "revolution" demonstrates, perhaps clearly enough for even more to see, it that there is no such thing as a "fair" tax. A tax is money taken from people against their will—which would be called stealing if somebody besides government did it. There's no fair way to do it.

The stark truth that people in government would prefer you forget is that tinkering with the tax code will not reduce the burden of taxation. It may redistribute the burden slightly, but most of the taxes will still be paid by middle income people—because that's where the money is. The poor don't have enough of it, and there aren't enough truly rich to run the government for more than a few weeks if you took everything from them.

If we look beyond the technical discussions that is sure to dominate the media for the next few months, perhaps we can grasp another important truth. The only way the tax burden will really be reduced is for the spending burden to be reduced. Government still feels it simply must have almost a trillion dollars a year, and it has to get it somewhere. No amount of tinkering can change that fundamental fact

Fuel standards not needed

May I say how pleased I am personally that during the '70s the chrome-plated, gas-gulping brontosauruses of the American highway lumbered off to the bonevard?

Having said which, may I add that keeping them there is neither my business nor - much more to the point - the federal government's?

If Americans want to buy heavier, roomier, less fuel-efficient autos, Americans should be able to. The government should not stand in their way. Specifically, the government should not adhere rigidly to the fuel-efficiency standards scheduled to take effect this year.

Under the Energy Policy and Conservation Act of 1975, U.S. auto manufacturers are to reach - in 1985 - an average fuel-economy standard of 27.5 miles per gallon. For failure to do so the industry could be slapped with fines totaling $750 million.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, responding to petitions from Ford and General Motors, proposes reducing the standard to 26 miles per gallon. This she is entitled to do under

Ford and GM contend that the higher standards would raise full-sized car prices by $500 each and could cost the economy 500,000 jobs as foreign manufacturers grabbed the big-car market as well as a larger share of the small-car market. All this so as to reduce oil consumption by a gigantic 0.0006 percent

Lee Iacocca's Chrysler, the welfare queen of Detroit, strongly opposes relaxing the standards. Chrysler, as you might surmise, no longer builds large cars and sees no reason why Ford and GM should either, despite ample, affordable gasoline and growing demand for such cars.

Naderites and the usual environmentalists are of a similar mind. The heat is on Mrs. Dole to back

In thinking about fuel-economy standards it is helpful to remember how they came to be. In 1975 the oil embargo was over, but not the trauma of suddenly discovering energy to be in short supply. Grave scholars and impressionable politicians reassured all who would listen that the oil era was

During the embargo of 1973-74, the federal government had gone so far as to lower highway speed limits, allocate gasoline supplies, extend daylight-savings time and urge the dousing of Christmas lights - all in the interest of conserving supplies.

What Congress failed conspicuously to do was promote the finding and production of oil right here at home. On the contrary: Congress tightened such price controls on oil as already existed, insisting that American producers be paid less than foreign ones. This was the same Congress - note carefully, please - that mandated fuel-efficiency standards for autos.

The fuel standards did increase fuel efficiency -70 percent between 1975 and 1984. This is not to overlook the fact that the standards imposed costs on the economy. To pay for each 0.05 miles-per-gallon gain in fuel efficiency, says GM, Detroit has invested $1 billion. One obvious consequence has been to help force up car prices.

Was there an alternative? Naturally - an alternative called the free market. Which would have meant scrapping all controls and pushing for production, letting businessmen and customers adopt those conservation measures that made sense to them, not to a simple majority of Detroit, for instance, would have built lighter. smaller cars out of self-defense, lest foreigners steal their markets. Of course this wasn't the kind of solution widely favored during a decade marked by pessimism and a sense of futility.

And today? Oil is in surplus. A gallon of regular gasoline, as in 1973, costs about the same as a loaf of bread. Oil controls are gone. Gasoline allocation long ago went out the window. Highway speed limits are still 55 miles per hour. Detroit labors under the fuel-efficiency policies of another age, intellectually and economically.

And heavens to Betsy! Here come those White House whippersnappers, tampering with the hallowed traditions of the '70s, making out as if they knew it all.

Well, my dear, I mean, did you ever!

Leaving or going back?

I was driving home from south Georgia on a two-lane road. The scenery was acres of freshly plowed fields, rows of tall corn and an occasional old dog asleep on a front porch.

Towns I passed through haven't changed since the last time I passed through them. That's one of the things I like about small towns.

They had names like Sasser and Dawson and Parrot and Richland. Sasser I know little about. They filmed a western movie in Parrot once. I'll bet nobody gets in much of a hurry in Richland.

The last time I was in Dawson, we buried a good

The thought came to me as I drove along that I've been an urban animal, away from slow paces and open spaces, for a long time now. In fact, I've been out of the slow lane longer than I lived in it.

It's changed me. It changes all of us who leave home, for bigger, and presumbly, better things.

I don't sleep as well as I used to when I was back in my mother's house, curled up under those quilts my grandmother made with failing eyes and arthritic hands.

New sights don't open my eyes as widely as they once did. And I catch myself nowadays in about as many cynical moods as sentimental ones, and I hurry more often than I cruise Fools rush in and fools rush on, I suppose, and they often are afraid to give up the night.

As I drove on, noting the onrushing growth of the kudzu, the plush pecan groves and peach orchards and the absence of billboards, I wondered what it would be like to go back and live in a place where they don't lock their doors at night and there are more hours in a day than you really need.

Would I be bored in that sort of environment? Sometimes yes, but boredom does have its good points. It allows the opportunity to reflect and savor and play with the mind. When I was a boy, I spent a lot of time just with me and my I've changed my mind on that now, however. There was a song with the line: "I don't know which takes more courage, the staying or the running away.

Democrats ignore security

The deficit reduction program proposed by the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives fails to fill the bill to put it mildly. It preserves all the federal programs which should be eliminated while it slashes funds for national defense. It is, therefore, the most irresponsible of legislative proposals.

When the majority on the House Budget Committee reported out the proposed budget, it bragged that it was acting responsibly in slashing the deficit. But the way the majority reduced the budget was in no way responsible. It saved the leftover Great Society programs by freezing defense spending at current levels with no allowance for inflation. As there will be inflation in the 1986 fiscal year, the House Committee in effect calls for a cut in defense spending below current levels.

President Reagan has rightly said that he can't accept such a cut, that his "first responsibility as President is the safety and security of the American people." He added that Congress can repeal essential defense expenditures but that "an act of Congress can't repeal the aggressive tendencies and intentions of our adversaries.'

The majority in the House Budget Committee has the wrong priorities. It places such boondoggle programs as the Appalachian Regional Commission before the security of the American people. It downplays threats to the nation in order to ensure funding for the politically activist lawyers in the Neighborhood Legal Service. By refusing to eliminate any of these programs, the big spenders in Congress show that they haven't changed a whit.

R. Emmett Tyrell Jr., editor of The American Spectator, offers the timely comment that "the big spenders remain in Washington's enduring force, despite the present alarm over deficits. Even in these days of budget restraints, they nip away with more money here, more money there. Now it is bilingual education that is fattened, then it is the Rural Electrification - up 579.4 percent in fiscal year 1984." The only area that doesn't receive their concern and protection is national security. There they are willing to be budget-cutters with a vengeance, to slash to the bone, exposing the American people to

The country can't afford this kind of budget committee with its dangerous priorities. It can't afford a Congress that produces such an irresponsible committee. If there is any remaining question as to the need for a continuing defense effort, it can be seen in the statistics of comparative U.S. and Soviet military spending. From 1974 to 1983, the Soviets spent $250 billion more than the United States. The House Budget Committee would give the Soviets even more of an

Police: teens killed because they 'like to shoot people'

DALLAS (AP) — Five teen-agers have been arrested after a seven-month crime spree that included the shooting deaths of three men killed by a loose-knit group who "like to shoot people," police said.

Detectives also are looking for 15-year-old who they believe may have fled to Mexico, homicide investigator T.J. Barnes said.

"The brutality and age of the participants and reasons they were killing people were unusual," said Barnes. "They were killing people because they didn't like their looks or the way they looked at them."

The suspects, described as

The suspects, described as an 18-year-old man, one 17-year-old, three 16-year-olds and the 15-year-old, "were looking for a reason to shoot somebody," said homicide Lt. Ron Waldrop.

"They're a group of friends..."
Barnes said. "They have no clubhouse. They have no name. They have no turf. They didn't confine themselves to the area around their homes."

"They were clean-cut. They're just a group of friends who like to shoot people," he said.

Two of the youths are believed to be students at J.L. Long Middle School, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

One police investigator said the youths often carried weapons as they roamed the streets of east Dallas, The News said.

Police said they have connected various members of the group to the shooting deaths of Juan F. Cuevas, 20, on April 6, John Kane, 25, on March 15, and John B. Hahn, 21 on Dec. 7

Cuevas was shot by a 16-year-old as he tried to stop a robbery, Barnes said.

On March 15, four youths hurled beer cans at Kane as he was walking along a Dallas street. He chased the youths, and one of them shot him in the left side. Kane later died at a hospital, and a 16-year-old has been charged with his death, The News said.

Hahn was shot to death by two juveniles after he bumped into a group of four youths on the sidewalk on Dec. 7, 1984.

Pete Quinones, 18, of Dallas and two 16-year-olds have been charged with Hahn's death along with a 15-year-old who remains at large, Waldrop said.

Police said group members also are under investigation in connection with four other killings, a murder attempt, an aggravated robbery, two aggravated assaults and one burglary.

Quinones was charged about three weeks ago with murder in Hahn's death, Barnes said.

Barnes told The Associated Press Wednesday night that three juveniles in custody were charged in three murders and one was charged with attempted murder.

"We've still not filed charges in all seven murders, and we may not be able to," Waldrop said. "But we're definitely not through investigating them."

Police have already filed petitions to certify two of the youths to stand trial as adults, Lt. David Clary said.

Judge orders clients placed in community homes by 1986

TYLER, Texas (AP) — The Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation must place 279 clients from three state schools in community homes over the next 15 months, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice also ordered the state to implement an appeals process for dissatisfied parents of state school residents and to report monthly on the rate of community placement to Dr. Linda O'Neall, a consultant appointed to monitor the state's compliance with a 1983 mental health reform order.

The 1983 settlement guaranteed retarded residents at state schools the right to the least restricted living environment and called for many residents to be moved into the community.

Justice's order on Wednesday resulted from an April hearing called after attorneys for residents of state schools in Austin, Denton and Fort Worth filed a motion asking that the state be forced into compliance with a settlement of the case. The 279 persons to be placed will be moved from those three schools.

into the community.
"It is now abundantly clear that the defendants have failed — and will continue to fail, without correction from the court — adequately to fulfill their responsibilities with regard to community placement," the judge's order stated. Justice followed recommendations of Ms. O'Neall in his ruling.

Parent groups that crowded Justice's courtroom during the April hearing showed resistance to the plan to move their children into the community.

Although the plaintiff's attorneys asked that members of three groups — school-age children, non-mentally retarded residents and those recommended by treatment teams for placement — be placed, Justice granted the order only for the last group.

The order also states that 20 percent of the 279 may come from waiting lists waiting lists.

The order outlines a temporary appeals process for parents who object to their child's placement in the community or those parents who want to contest the treatment teams' recommendation to leave a resident in the state school.

"It was apparent throughout the hearing that parents were deeply concerned that the state would usurp them in deciding what was best for their children and leave them without recourse and their children without security."

Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) elects Texan as moderator

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A
Texas man who has been elected moderator of the 197th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) says he feels a
"raw terror" over expected debate on homosexual ministers.

But William H. Wilson, 61, an elder of a congregation in McAllen, Texas, said after his election. We dnesday he remains openminded on the issue.

The 600 voting delegates attending the nine-day conference at the Indiana Convention Center are expected to discuss homosexuality as well as other topics as it works to set guidelines for the church.

Wilson, responding with other moderator candidates in a question-and-answer session before his election, admitted to a "raw terror" of the issue, which has split the traditionally liberal church

He said he would "not close the door at this point" to the prospect of homosexual Presbyterian ministers, comparing the current debate to the church's previous division over the participation of blacks and women.

The church ruled at its 1978

General Assembly that it would not ordain 'unrepentent, self-affirming, practicing' homosexuals.

Even so, according to a spokesman for the Presbyterian group, Lesbian-Gay Concerns, homosexuals enjoy a "tremendous amount of support," in the church.

Also Wednesday, the Rev. James E. Andrews of Atlanta, was installed as stated clerk, the church's highest administrative office. Andrews was elected to the post at last year's Presbyterian General Assembly in Phoenix, Ariz.

Andrews, 57, was leader of the church's southern branch for 10 years, until the southern and northern branches united in 1983 after being separated during the Civil War. Andrews became co-stated clerk of the re-united church two years ago.

The annual General Assembly is also expected to debate issues such as abortion, Central American political refugees and U.S. foreign policy.

Wilson, who was elected moderator of the conference with 339 votes out of 663 cast, said a "tremendous gulf" exists among church factions on abortion. The Presbyterian Church does not forbid abortion, and is generally considered pro-choice on the issue.

Church leaders begin committee meetings Thursday to produce guidelines and policies for more than 3 million Presbyterians in the United States.

Wilson a consulting geologist in

Wilson, a consulting geologist in the petroleum business, was the only lay person among four candidates for moderator, the presiding officer of the conference and the church leadership's ambassador to Presbyterian churches and missions around the While having little policy making role in the current session, the moderator could influence future church debate through the appointment of study committees for the next General Assembly. Wilson will also serve on the General Assembly Council, a 59-member body that directs policy moderator.

The 19 study committees in the 1985 session will produce reports for consideration by the Assembly at general sessions

New law makes few changes, group says

AUSTIN (AP) — A recently signed bill clarifying the rights of both landlords and tenants makes "no substantive changes" from previous law, according to Jerry A. Adams, executive vice president of the Texas Apartment Association.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Dallas, and Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, was signed into law last Thursday by Gov. Mark White.

"This bill clarifies changes and omissions from the 1983 recodification," Adams said.

One section of the bill says if a landlord or landlord's agent changes the door lock of a tenant who is delinquent in paying rent, written notice must be placed on the tenant's front door and a new key must be provided to the tenant at any hour, regardless of whether the rent is paid or not.

The words "landlord's agent" and "at any hour" were added by the recently adjourned Legislature.

New suits evoke romantic past

By Florence De Santis

LONDON (NEA) - The surprise of the European collections for next fall come with the re-emergence of the suit. Not that it hadn't been foreseen when last year Paris couture houses launched a fitted, shortened silhouette, often using wide-shouldered suits to showcase it. However, the concept went on hold for springsummer, when women prefer looser and lighter clothing.

Now, it's evident that the suit is often the kingpin of a collection, as in short skirt, with a blouse in a check to John McIntire's Edwardian-themed clothes that led off the London fall designer showings. McIntire's choice of a luxurious era for inspiration is betweeen the short, fitted suit and a part of an entire mood in London which also includes Regency looks.

Reagan's controversial ideas of past hardly causing ripple now

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

AP White House Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP) -President Reagan, who in the past has suggested abolishing the corporate income tax and letting the government figure out individuals' tax bills, has incorporated elements of both ideas in his proposal to overhaul the income tax system.

Reagan's unconventional views about the federal income tax system have sparked controversy in the past. But in their present form, the proposals have hardly caused a ripple as Reagan has flown around the country campaigning for a fundamental rewrite of the tax code

Two years ago, in a panel discussion with a group of corporate executives. Reagan complained that taxing companies' profits and individuals' dividends was really just double taxation of corporate earnings.

tist

"I realize that there will be a great stirring and I'll probably kick myself for having said this,' Reagan said, "but when are we all going to have the courage to point out that in our tax structure the corporate tax is very hard to justify its existence?"

Pursued by reporters, Reagan added, "I said it was something that we ought to look at because there isn't really a justification for

But when protests began to flood the White House, Reagan quickly backed off, saying he had predicted he would kick himself for raising the issue - and he had.

In the tax plan he presented last week, the president proposed to increase, rather than abolish, revenues from corporate income taxes. But he would add a provision permitting corporations to deduct 10 percent of the dividends they pay stockholders as partial relief from what the White House called "the double taxation of corporate earnings distributed as dividends." During his re-election campaign last year, Reagan offered another

An AP News Analysis

impromptu suggestion that seemed at the time like an even more radical plan for changing the income tax system

"The government has the nerve to tell the people of this country, 'You figure out how much you owe us — and we can't help you because our people don't understand it either - and if your make a mistake, we'll make you pay a penalty for making the mistake."

"We think we ought to be able to send you a bill and tell you what you owe, not the other way around," Reagan said.

James Wetzler, chief economist for Congress' bipartisan Joint Committee on Taxation, said the United States had "no mechanism to collect the tax" if people didn't figure their own bills and mail in what they owed.

And Tom Field, a Washington tax analyst and publisher of the newsletter Tax Notes, said the cost of setting up an office to calculate people's income taxes "would be on the magnitude of the Pentagon

White House spokesmen refused to explain what Reagan had in mind, and officials speaking on condition they not be identified said they knew of no effort within the administration to flesh out Reagan's idea.

But when Reagan's tax plan "for fairness, growth and simplicity" was published last week, it contained a proposal for what was called a "return-free system" in which the Internal Revenue Service would, "at the election of each eligible taxpayer, compute the taxpayer's liability based on withholding and information reports provided to the Internal Revenue Service currently.

Although the plan at first would be available only to those with the simplest tax situations — single wage earners with uncomplicated financial transactions — the administration predicted that by the mid-1990s it could be extended to more than half of all individual taxpayers.

By calculating how much people owe based on W2 forms and reports of interest and dividend payments already required by the IRS, the administration estimated: "The return-free system would save taxpayers annually approximately 71 million hours in actual return preparation and $1.6 billion in fees paid to professional tax preparers.'

Final Israeli pullout delayed

EDITOR'S NOTE - This story was submitted to the Israeli military censor, who made some changes. By NICOLAS B. TATRO Associated Press Writer

NAQOURA PORT, Lebanon (AP) — Hundreds of Israeli troops remained in south Lebanon today despite the government's statement it would have all its forces out by the third anniversary of Israel's June 6 invasion of Military sources in Tel Aviv said the pullout would be completed "in the very near future." But the sources, who demanded anonymity, declined to give a target date for the final pullout.

Israeli officials have said Israel would downplay the final phases of its staged pullout. In a wide-ranging interview with Prime Minister Shimon Peres on national television Wednesday night, no mention was made of Lebanon or the Israeli pullout.

Peres said in an interview with the Europe 1 radio station earlier this week that "several dozen" Israeli soldiers would remain in Lebanon for a few weeks even after the withdrawal was completed.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said this week in Washington that Israel may delay the withdrawal of the last units for one or more attacks on the South Lebanon Army was seen by observers as a factor in the apparent decision to delay the final pullout.

The Israeli media devoted programs and articles to the war and its political and social repercussions

There was almost no military traffic along the coastal highway leading to the Rosh Hanikra border crossing, which had been jammed with armored vehicles, tanks and troop carriers since the Israelis began withdrawing their last soldiers on Feb. 16.

Three years ago, Israeli tanks rolled through the border crossing and two other points on their way north to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization. Since then, 654 Israelis have been killed in Lebanon and 3,856 wounded.

Western diplomatic sources estimate that at one time Israel had 25,000 soldiers in Lebanon. The only Israeli soldiers in evidence Wednesday were at the newly created Nagoura Port four miles north of the border. They were helping local militiamen evacuate 150 Lebanese Christians from the besieged town of Jezzine and nearby villages.

BORGER, Jan. 27 - Borger's Bulldogs put up a game scrap to map the Harvesters' long winning streak here last night but the Green and Golders from Pampa choked off their efforts and thus registered their 45th straight victory in an overtime thriller, 59-58.

The win gave the Harvesters a clean sweep of the first round of play in the District 1-AAAA schedule. Pampa thus retained its district lead with a 7-9 record, followed by Amarillo with 6-1 and Borger

Press chief's innovative style clashes with traditions

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Writer VATICAN CITY (AP) - In a world of men wearing black casssocks and Roman collars, the plaid-jacketed Joaquin Navarro stands out.

Some of his views, such as making as much Vatican information available as quickly as. possible to the world's news media, also make him unusual.

He has made history of sorts by answering his telephone at 2 a.m. and keeping his office open an extra hour until 3 p.m., the height of the Roman lunch hour

The 48-year-old, chain-smoking Spaniard, a member of the conservative Roman Catholic group Opus Dei, was appointed by Pope John Paul II last December as head of the press office of the

In effect, he's Pope John Paul II's spokesman for the world.

Other laymen work at the Vatican as experts in the Vatican museums, at the Vatican bank or on the security force. But none holds such a visible and sensitive iob as Navarro.

"I think the view here is 'let's see now he does," Navarro said of himself over lunch at a favorite trattoria, a 5-minute drive in his small Fiat from his office at the Vatican.

He said it with a smile, a few days after having been rebuked in public by one of the pope's aides for a perceived "breach of protocol" during the visit to the Vatican by Prince Charles and Princess Diana Navarro succeeded an Italian priest, the Rev. Romeo Panciroli, the Vatican spokesman since 1976 who was known to the press corps as "Padre Non Mi Risulta," which is roughly translated as "Father I Don't Have Anything on That."

One of his conditions for taking the job. Navarro said, was that he would never issue a "non mi risulta" reply.

Navarro, who holds a degree in medicine and switched to journalism while doing medical research in Italy in the early 1970s. was tapped for the Vatican post while serving as correspondent in Rome of the conservative Madrid newspaper ABC.

"The pope was looking for a layman, presumably a Catholic, who was a professional journalist in Italy," Navarro said.

He said he didn't seek the job "but as a Catholic I felt it was a service I should accept.

Panciroli's predecessor was a layman who had simply moved over from the Vatican's daily newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano

Navarro bristles at suggestions that his membership in Opus Dei, which the pope has taken ar interest in, played a role in his appointment. He is quick to point out that he was twice elected by his fellow journalists as president of the Foreign Press Association.

With Navarro's appointment, the pope completed a major reshuffle of the Vatican media hierarchy with an emphasis on professional qualifications

Debunkers demand proof of psychic power claimants

EDITOR'S NOTE - They are the debunkers, demanding scientific proof of the claims of psychics, faith healers, telepaths, astrologers, mystics and others. To show they mean business, they offer cash prizes if the claims of supernatural powers can be

By BOB DVORCHAK ....

Associated Press Writer PITTSBURGH (AP) - For people who claim they can levitate, predict the future, make dogs talk, bend spoons with their minds or grow beards with psychic powers, a skeptical band of sleuths says: "Prove it."

The cold light of science is being turned on people claiming supernatural powers by a network of scientists, psychologists and magicians (the better to spot sleight-of-hand and chicanery). Some groups are even offering cash if such claims can be validated.

"We are truth-seekers," says Richard Busch, a magician, hypnotist and mentalist who is chairman of the Paranormal Investigating Committee of Pittsburgh.

'We don't have an ax to grind. We're not out to embarrass anyone. But any claim ought to be backed up by evidence.

Busch's committee offers a $5,000 cash prize for anyone who can perform a paranormal claim under scientific conditions. In three years, it has probed 47 claims and received hundreds of calls and letters without paying up.

One woman said she could grow a beard through mental powers. A man in Texas said he could make barking dogs talk. Another claimed his magnetic waves could sexually arouse women while giving headaches to men. A doctor said he could strengthen or weaken muscles with lines of force.

'After three years we still have all this money," Busch says. Worldwide, about $290,000 is being dangled by separate groups and individuals probing paranormals, Busch says.

The Pittsburgh group is part of the international Committee for the Scientific Investigation of Claims of the Paranormal (CSICOP), which was founded nine years ago in Buffalo, N.Y.

CSICOP has 300 members such as astronomer Carl Sagan and psychology professor B.F. Skinner of Harvard University. It publishes "The Skeptical Inquirer," a quarterly magazine with a circulation of 20,000.

In simple terms, they are debunkers who demand the same standards of proof from psychics as required for other scientific discovery. They have investigated faith healers, poltergeists, telepaths, astrologers, mystics, UFOs, Bigfoot and other supernatural happenings.

"These claims are as unsinkable as rubber ducks at a shooting gallery," says Paul Kurtz, a philosophy professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo who is chairman of CSICOP. "You can never shoot them down. They're always popping back up. The only therapy is a little common sense. The debunkers' creed, Kurtz says, is, "The burden of proof rests on the claimants.

Last year, CSICOP investigated a reported poltergeist in Columbus, Ohio. A teen-ager claimed lamps and telephones were flying about her house while lights and water spigots were turned on and off.

Probers were not allowed inside the house. But witnesses say they never saw an object actually take off and a TV crew filmed the teen knocking over a lamp. Finding no evidence to support the claims, the committee ruled it a hoax.

The debunkers admit the public sometimes views them as heavy-handed know-it-alls spoiling harmless fun. After all, what could be the harm in going to a fortuneteller or a palmist?

"It is harmful," Busch says. 'People are paying with their belief-system. We must not let the public think there is a simple, magical solution to life in the stars or the palm of your hand."

Not every mystic or psychic is a charlatan intentionally hoodwimking a gullible public, the debunkers say.

"Most of them are not frauds, Busch says. "They are self-deceived, misguided people. They got fooled themselves into believing."

When a person makes a claim with the local committee, ground rules are agreed upon in writing and the debunkers call upon physicists, engineers, linguists or magicians to witness the demonstration

Busch issued a plea for anyone with supernatural ability to contact

"Those who sincerely believe that they can perform psychic phenomenon are urged to come forward for the benefit of sci ence," he says. -

PARK ART — The recently reopened and and even have lunch among reflection pools and remodeled Burnett Park in Fort Worth is a half block oasis near downtown. It is a place to relax

Favorite city park changes

By SUSAN ASCHOFF Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -The noon sun bounced off the granite sidewalks with merciless glare, but a young couple squeezed under the shade of a tree to share lunch in downtown Fort Worth's favorite noon gathering place. Burnett Park, a half-block oasis of nature shadowed by skyscrapers and surrounded by traffic, has always been a Fort Worth favorite. Downtown workers go there to eat lunch or read during their breaks, and children unwillingly dragged on shopping trips seem to find it by radar to escape confining stores with "don't touch" aisles. In December, hundreds gather at the park for the lighting of the city's Christmas tree. At times. protesters for a cause have gathered to shout slogans, mostly at each other since no one else seems to get too excited.

But the park has changed.

around it, Burnett Park has been entitled "Backs." The bronze renovated. It's weed-strewn grass panels, which are set into a granite and wino-littered benches have given way to neatly planted flower beds around diagonal granite walks and spraying fountains. The grand opening May 8 brought dignitaries, the Texas Christian University Marching Band and cookies and lemonade for about 200 people who came to look. Now, the brown-baggers are each discovering the new park for themselves

"I like it. It is a little bit stuffy, but I like it," said Bob Roose, 26, who works in visual communications for Burlington Northern Railroad Sitting on a granite bench during his lunch hour, Roose, a newcomer, said he never saw the old park, but "I heard about the trees.

A small and short-lived furor erupted when two dozen giant magnolia and oak trees were removed from the park's perimeter when construction began in 1983. City officials said the trees were old and sickly. Others said they were taken out because they clashed with the new design.

Trees in Texas are as treasured as water in the Sahara. With summer temperatures often topping 100 degrees for weeks at a time, Texans don't just like trees, they revere them. "I wish there would have been more grass and trees," agreed Diane Parr, who works for Champlin Petroleum Co. in the Interfirst tower which shares the block with the park. She and Teresa Cain, another Champlin employee, ate sandwiches and salad in the bright sun. "At least I haven't had to push anyone off benches" to sit down, said Ms. Cain, recalling the old park's popularity with sleepy street people

Burnett Park's new centerpiece Like the central business district is four sculptures by Henri Matisse wall above a pool, each show a woman's back from her knees to shoulders. They progress from a primitive, rigid rectangle to the softly touchable curves of a beautiful woman.

They were acquired by the Anne Burnett and Charles Tandy Foundation, which also provided the $5 million grant for the park's massive facelift

But even the sculptures' strong beauty seems muted by the park's never-ending granite

"I was just wondering if anyone will come here for lunch when it's hot," said Barbara Fitzgerald, a secretary. "But I think it's beautiful ... very geometric."

The park has shed its worn, neglected look. Bright yellow mums surround the park now, and a cracked and empty cement pool has been replaced by rectangular fountains with tall silver pipes spraying water. Although many Fort Worth residents remember when the cement pool was filled with goldfish, of late it held nothing but trash and dead leaves.

The tall fir tree which will serve as the city's Christmas tree provided a patch of shade for LuAnn Burkhalter, 22, and Jeff Beckhusen, 21, self-described "sweethearts" who dined on McDonald's hamburgers in the

When Samuel "Burk" Burnett donated the land to Fort Worth in 1919, he wanted it to be a "breathing place ... where the poor and the rich may assemble as a place of recreation and particularly for relief against the heat of our summers, and as a resting spot for tired mothers with their children."

One wonders if Samuel Burnett would like the changes. Without the circle of trees, the park has little

But Burnett Park, like the downtown that surrounds it, is moving toward the future. Once marked by a lonely skyscraper, downtown now has three glass towers and the Interfirst building and, thus, a skyline.

Historic buildings along brick-paved Main Street have been preserved, and at the end of the boulevard is the strikingly restored Tarrant County Courthouse.

Burnett Park now has a chic. urban design. But it is also sanitized

The elderly Ms. Fitzgerald said workers and bums peacefully coexisted before, and that city officials and business leaders were probably the ones miffed about the bench snoozers.

"It never bothered me," she said. "I haven't been in a city yet that doesn't have bums on benches

Visit to U.S. ship brings memories

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) -Her decking is new and her navigation equipment is radically different now, but the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Eagle still holds a familiar fascination for the Danish seaman who brought her to the United States after World War II.

"There's a house up on top of the poop that wasn't there in my time, and of course many of the instruments in the chart house we didn't have, but the ship hasn't changed much," Capt. Knud Langevad said as he stood on board the square-rigger during his first visit to New London in 39 years.

Langevad, 77, of Copenhagen, came to this country in 1939 as first officer of the Danmark, a Danish navy sailing vessel assigned to attend the New York World's Fair.

The Danmark then sailed for Washington, D.C., and was homeward bound by way of Jacksonville, Fla., where a reporter told Langevad that Denmark had fallen to Hitler's

After a 20-month layover in Jacksonville, the Danmark was brought to New London in January 1942, and her permanent crew of Danish officers spent nearly four years testing Coast Guard cadets for their seamanship and navigation abilities "The best half got commissioned and the rest were tested for 14 days" under sail aboard the Danmark, Langevad said. He said 300 cadets were taken on board each month, and of the 5,000 cadets tested over the years, about 2,000 failed to make the grade. The war ended in Europe and finally the Danmark sailed for home in September 1945, but before his departure Langevad visited Adm. James Pine, commandant of the Coast Guard Academy, who lamented the fact that the United Ståtes would no longer be able to train cadets under sail

'The day before the Danmark left the academy, I went up on the hill and showed him pictures" of five German sister ships taken as prizes of war.

Ultimately, Pine selected the Horst Wessel, and Langevad was dispatched to Bremerhaven, Germany, where he and an American Coast Guard officer, Cmdr. Gordon McGowan, readied the ship to sail to the United States, renamed as the Eagle

City battles to preserve history of the past

EDITOR'S NOTE - When it comes to protecting the old from the bulldozing inroads of the new. there's no place like Charleston, S.C., once called the "best-preserved secret in America." Its large historic district is not merely facade - it's entirely functional.

By KAY BARTLETT AP Newsfeatures Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) - A large construction crane dominates the Charleston, S.C., skyline for the moment, a crane erected after a seven-year battle over a convention center that many preservationists deemed out of harmony with the towm's historic buildings.

When the mayor officiated at the ground-breaking ceremony last February, he quipped that it was fitting that the weather was freezing because many in town said it would be a cold day in

Preservationists keep pressure on

By The Associated Press

From mobster Al Capone's home in Chicago to Victorian hotels in the West and a quaint gas station in Washington state, preservationists keep up the pressure to maintain historic buildings.

Sometimes they lose. In Fresno, Calif., the wrecker's ball started razing a vacant, 67-year-old raisin plant one minute after a city-imposed moratorium expired.

Preservation has taken many different forms across the country and even spawned some new industries. Historic reproductions of old furniture shops have increased, men and women skilled in restoration of nw buildings are in demand, and a South Carolina businessman purchased a British restoration company as a money-making investment.

In Faribault, Minn., residents disagree whether the historic Alexander Faribault House, built in 1853 as part of a 280-acre farm should remain wedged between an auto body shop and a gas station or whether it should be moved to a more appropriate setting.

In North Seattle, volunteers are cutting back ivy and brambles to save an overgrown orchard planted over a century ago. Landscape architectDaphne Lewis discovered the forgotten orchard in 1981 and conservationists say it's a bit of living history tha should be preserved.

On the South Side of Chicago, city landmark designation has been given to the home of Al Capone, a home replete with secret staircases and tunnels which the gangster used as his headquarters during the late '20s.

"Preservation fever has caught on from the East Coast to the West Coast," says Susan M. Ono-Gillott, a director of the Carroll Avenue Restoration Foundation, a non-profit charitable organization in Angelino Heights, Calif.

Last year, Angelino Heights became Los Angeles' first historic preservation overlay zone. Owners can't alter the exterior of a historic building without approval of a city-appointed board.

In Seattle, which will host more than 2,000 preservationists from around the country this October. many of the older buildings have been saved. Pioneer Square and the Public Market were homes for the down-and-out and seemingly ready to be brought down before preservationists moved in. Now the 100-year-old brick buildings house restaurants. businesses, retail outlets, taverns and nightclubs.

In Zillah, in eastern Washington, the Teapot Dome Gas Station is back in business after seven years. The small, round station house has a spout and handle, just like a teapot. It was picked up seven years ago to make room for a new interstate highway and relocated last year. Owner Dick Thomas, whose father bought the station in 1928, says the station uses modern pumps alongside a pair of 10-gallon bowl pumps that were state of the art in the early '20s. One works, the other is for looks only you-know-where before the project went up.

"We lost the war on that one, but we won some battles," says Henry Cauthen, director of the Charleston Preservation Society. The battles won by the preservationists included cutting the building from 12 stories to eight, modifying the architecture, and preserving some storefronts, although Cauthen remarks that he's not sure the fake fronts are Hollywood or preservation.

In Charleston, preservation is a way of life.

Besides the lengthy fight over the convention center, Charlestonians got into a lengthy fight over a proposed annex to the old Court House, a fight which eventually stretched to Washington and ended in a compromise with most preservationists happy

But efforts to maintain the glow of the past are always going on in this city, where it has always been fashionable to live in town, particularly south of Broad, where the gentry have always lived and were often called SOB's, an allusion to the address, not their birth.

For instance, a beautiful pre-Revolutionary Georgian mansion, south of Broad, is for sale now for $850,000.

Mrs. S. Henry Edmunds, the executive director of the Historic Charleston Foundation, says she is sure the right family will come along, although it has been on the market since August. The right family, one that "will gently live in the great house," will be required to sign eternal covenants that they won't alter the exterior, turn the property into something gauche like a condo or a restaurant. They are allowed, however, to convert the carriage house into one or two rental units.

Mrs. Edmunds, born south of Broad into a Charleston family that has 300 years of roots here, is one of the guiding forces of preservation in this beautiful city.

It is through a revolving fund that her organization is able to buy the great houses and resell them with covenants that will prevent them from being turned into cutesy gift shops or worse.

On the morning she shows a visitor this spectacular home, built in 1772, she is upset. The City Council voted to allow a developer to build up an area outside of town. A historic highway as well as live oaks, many of them hundreds of years old, will be destroyed, the preservationists say.

'We didn't pay enough attention to that one," she says. "We lost."

Those who live in the historic districts routinely appear before the Board of Architectural Review when they want to paint their houses or do anything at all to the Charleston's preservation fervor is unusual, but many other cities across the land have strong preservation movements. They got a boost when Congress approved tax incentives to hang on to the old.

That legislation went into effect in 1982. In that first year, more than $2 billion worth of rehabilitation money qualified for the investment incentive. Last year, it had grown to $2.5 billion.

J. Jackson Walter, president of the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Washington, says none of the tax reform bills currently being considered would retain such incentives.

The tax incentive deals only in revenue-producing properties and it has been used almost exclusively in downtowns, such as in Jersey City, N.J., which became a fashionable place to live again after rehabilitation.

Walter says Americans became more interested in their heritage after the 1976 bicentennial celebration

"The restoration of the Statue of Liberty and the plans to raise the Monitor are both populist, easily accessible movements. I think the celebration set off a whole train of events and I think it will be revived in 1987 when the bicentennial of the Constitution is celebrated.'

Back in 1931, Charleston became the first city to pass an ordinance creating a historic district. followed by New Orleans a few years later. That early legislation was inspired by construction of a Moorish hotel right on the water in the 1920s

A Miss Susan P. Frost was horrified at what she regarded as a monstrosity in her beloved city.

"She reared up on her hind legs and got a lot of other ladies, mostly little old ladies in tennis shoes, behind her and they just pestered City Hall until a historic district was created," says Jack Leland, retired journalist, active historian. lecturer and author.

Charleston's preservation also rests in a cliche fostered by poverty and in the unique spot Charleston held in America's early history. At the time of the Revolution, Charleston was the fourth largest city in the nation and one synonymous with gracious living, culture and high educational standards.

"Too poor to paint and too proud to whitewash," is the cliche and it is a good one. Charles Duell, an eighth generation descendant of Arthur Middleton, signer of the Declaration of Independence, says that Charleston did not recover economically from the Civil War until after World War II. People just held the old houses together the best they could because they couldn't afford to build new ones. The preservationists' clout rests on solid support from most Charlestonians. There are brush fires about how many bed-and-breakfast places can be established, where and when tour buses run, about vinyl siding (ordered off)

New battles may loom as the preservations consider the East Side of town, which is not now a historic district. But, as Cauthen says, it is filled with houses that in any other city in the United States would be turned into house museums

Mrs. Edmunds took one such neighborhood, on the verge of decay, and restored it by creating the revolving fund to purchase homes and then sell them back to the community.

It is now a lovely residential district. Some screamed gentrification when she undertook the project, and some families were displaced, but had not the preservationists come in, the neighborhood could have simply gone under.

Court rules feds can cut trees to stop pine beetle

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that, at least temporarily and under certain conditions, the U.S. Forest Service can continue to cut down sections of five national wilderness areas in a quest to halt pine beetle

U.S. District Judge William Steger denied a request from a state agency and two environmental groups for a preliminary injunction that would have halted all cutting of trees in wilderness areas in Texas pending a trial later this year.

But he also ordered the U.S. Forest Service to comply strictly with its guidelines in cutting the

An environmental group spokesman called Steger's decision

The Sierra Club, the Wilderness Society and the Texas Commission on Natural Resources filed suit in April against the Forest Service, maintining that the cutting violated three environmental acts and further endangered the red-cockaded woodpecker.

Federal officials said the cutting must continue to stop the beetle from spreading to other areas. But in testimony in Steger's court two weeks ago, the groups also said the tree-cutting did not prevent the pest's spread.

In his order, Steger directed the Forest Service to stop cutting hardwoods dotted inside a beetle-infested spot of pine trees and to cut only those trees in wilderness areas bordering with adjoining land or woodpecker colonies.

He also ordered them to cut the trees in a manner specified in the forest service's guidelines - so the felled trees fall in toward the infestation - and to take advantage of natural borders such as roads or railroad tracks to prevent the beetle's spread.

"The decision is tragic," said environmental spokesman Ned Fritz of Dallas. "Now the U.S. Forest Service can continue to cut up our wilderness until a final trial, severely impairing these beautiful areas. Our only other recourse is congressional action.'

The three organizations sued after saying forest officials did not complete adequate studies on the environmental impact of clearing infected timber in the Davy Crockett National Forest, the Sabine National Forest, the Sam Houston National Forest and the Angelina National Forest.

Requirements Steger placed in the injunction included:

Prohibiting forest service contractors from cutting hardwood trees. The environmental groups had argued that forest service contractors were cutting down hardwood trees. hardwoods are immune from most beetle attacks and prevents beetles from spreading.

- Requiring contractors to cut infested trees so they fall toward the center of the infestation, rather than toward uninfested trees. When tall trees on the edge of an infested spot are allowed to fall outward, as environmentalists contend happens, it helps the beetles to spread.

- Requiring the forest service to take advantage of natural boundaries, such as roads, hardwood stands and and rivers, which beetles have difficulty crossing.

- Requiring the forest service to notify representatives of environmental groups about where they have cut sections of the wilderness areas, so the groups can chenck whether the forest service is abiding by injunction restrictions

Battling for truckdrivers is his life

By RICK BROWN Odessa American

ODESSA, Texas (AP) - W.F. "Dad" Carter leaned forward from the back bunk of a friend's speeding, westbound Mack truck. lit a pipe and eyed the two ribbons of divided highway that stretched out before him

'They (truckers) are the last cowboys, the last one-man businesses, the last free enterprise and the last American dream that's still alive," he said. "They are a throwback to the first man that ever rode a horse across this country.

Carter, 61, isn't a truckdriver himself, but he battles feverishly for their causes. Carter enthusiastically acts as a moneylender, jobhunter, portrait maker, historian, all around advocate and information clearing house for truckdrivers.

He publishes a pamphlet each year in which he chronicles their lives - and deaths.

"I hitchhike to every location where one of these drivers dies.' said Carter, adding that he writes obituaries of the men and attends their funerals.

"What I do is my way of recording a phase of history," he

Carter also prints in the pamphlets the ink-on-paper portraits he draws during his travels. He estimated he's drawn nearly 4,000 truckers' portraits since starting his life on the road in

But in addition to these activities, Carter acts as a watchdog for problems large and small that affect his truckers, he

He solicits their opinions on three-page questionnaires that range in topics from the best and worst truck stops to what trucking companies tend to cheat their drivers, he said.

His wife, Kay, enters the drivers' answers into a computer, he said, and they address the issues in his annual pamphlet.

High on Carter's list of causes is a crusade to bring a more law-abiding atomosphere to truck stops, he said

'I can get anything you want from coke (cocaine) to hookers.' he said. "You want a washer and a dryer? You want a wetback? You want syphilis and gonorrhea? I can guarantee you that," he said with a

"The truck stop owners don't want to stop it," he said. "They don't want to play law enforcement. They don't want to run anybody off."

Trucker Janet Snead, 27, who drives in tandem with her husband. Sam, both of a Eufala, Ala., echoed Carter's concern, particularly in regard to truck stop prostitution.

"They're trying to sell you everything under the sun commercial meat, they call it now — banging on your doors at night," she said. "And the majority of us feel like we'd like to go somewhere we don't have to be bothered." "I won't go to a truck stop where there's hookers working the lots," Carter said.

A mobility among the truck-driving population that may seem unusual or even frightening to the general public is the reason Carter can make easy connections among his friends, he said.

To Snead and another Carter friend, Mike Oates, 32, of Bainbridge, Ga., the mobility and the freedom that goes with it is an appealing part of the job.

'Out here, you have freedom from responsibility and can make your own decisions," Snead said.

"You're not running from anything," added Oates. "You might be running to something, but you're not running from anything." Carter, who travels the country with his wife in a mobile home.

Former state employees are indicted

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) -Four former state Department of Human Resources employees have been indicted by a federal grand jury on fraud charges, alleging they tried to conceal the name of their meat packing company that contracted business with the state and federally funded day-care centers.

The four - Jaime and Gloria Ramos and Arnoldo and Celestina Benavides - have been named in a 22-count indictment handed down on Tuesday.

Federal authorities said that the couples bought the L&C Meat Co. in 1981 and renamed it Rio Grande Valley Meat Distributors, but continued to get contracts with the state as L&C Meat Co. and through Jaime Ramos

Some of the items sold were to day-care centers that receive federal monies.

Ramos was the program director of purchasing services for the Department of Human Resources in Edinburg and authorized to negotiate contracts likely will rush to the aid of one of his charges at a moment's notice, he said

He made a run recently to El Paso, begun 40 miles west of Odessa at the Border Cowboy Truck Stop in Wickett, for two reasons, he said. He needed to meet one trucking friend who needed a loan and interview another for a job as a truck stopmanager.

Carter hitches rides with drivers from whatever truck stop where he, happened to have laid down temporary stakes.

'The drivers pick where they, want me at, and when they're, ready for me to move, I move," he said

A truck stop meeting Carter's approval is likely to see a substantial increase in business. Mrs. Carter remarked.

Communication travels fast among truckers because of the ever-present citizens band radio the CB — Carter and Oates agreed. "Drivers can usually find me in 15 minutes - no matter where I'm at and no matter where they are. Carter allowed. Carter said the camaraderie among truckers is the chief reason for his continued efforts. This wasn't something I chose," he said. "This is something that over a period of years the drivers kept after me about." "I can walk into any truck stop in the United States and it's hard for me to get in that door that somebody doesn't know me," he said, visibly proud of his notoriety.

"We are no more and no less than the people we know, and the better people we know, the better people we become.

Celtics win on Johnson's goal

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - It seemed almost as if time were suspended momentarily as Dennis Johnson's long-range jumper floated toward the basket.

But two seconds after the shot left his hand and just as the buzzer sounded, the ball swished through the net and the Boston Celtics had beaten the Lakers to even the National Basketball Association Championship Series

I figured it had a 50-50 chance of going in," Johnson said after his 22-footer beat Los Angeles 107-105 Wednesday night at the Forum

"The play was set up to take the clock down to five seconds." Johnson explained, "with Larry (Bird) coming off the pick.

Bird dribbled, was double-teamed by Laker defenders, then passed off to the wide-open Johnson, who immediately fired the ball.

"I saw Byron (Scott) and Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) running toward me so I figured I'd make the shot a little higher," Johnson said. "It felt good.

Boston Coach K.C. Jones said he didn't have time to worry about Johnson's shot, commenting, "My only thought was to watch the spin on the ball and see if it went in. I was watching the same as everybody else in the place.

The Lakers' Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who'd tied the score at 105 with a basket just 19 seconds earlier, said, "We just lost a tough game at the buzzer. All we can do now is forget this game and look ahead to Friday.

Dennis Johnson, who hadn't been much of a factor in the opening three contests of the title series, had 27 points for Boston

The Lakers, who led 92-85 early in the fourth quarter before Boston surged back, were paced by Abdul-Jabbar with 21 points and "Magic" Johnson with 20.

Unlike the first three games of the series, this one was close most of the way. And, unlike the third game, it was scuffle-free.

NBA Vice President Scotty Stirling had met with Jones and Lakers Coach Pat Riley prior to the game, ostensibly to talk about the rough play that had characterized the third game and resulted in some tough talk from both sides.

"It was the best of the games we've played,'' said Dennis Johnson. "There were no brawls and there just were not too many faws in the game.

"I thought the game was played very aggressively but fairly," Riley added.

The fifth game is scheduled here Friday night at the Forum. The series then shifts back to Boston for a sixth game on Sunday, and, if necessary, a seventh on Tuesday

'We knew when we got here we had to win one," said the Celtics' Johnson. "Now we just have to bring some intensity back Friday night like we had in this game."

'The series is tied both numerically and emotionally,' said Riley. "We have a dagger in us a little bit now, but we just have to come back strong Friday

Longhorns advance in college world series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - Texas junior Billy Bates said he lucked out when he looked up to see Miami's center fielder playing shallow in the fourth inning of the NCAA College World Series winners' bracket semifinal.

"He was playing over and way in," Bates said Wednesday night. "I've hit quite a few balls up the gap like that and I got a good pitch

Bates' long fly was behind Hurricane center fielder Rick Richardi, who turned the wrong way to race the ball down. Bates turned the hit into a three-run, inside-the-park home run to lead Texas to an 8-4 victory.

It was Bates' second homer of the game, tying a CWS record held by several players. The 5-foot-7, 155-pound All-American second baseman hit a home run from the right side of the plate in the third inning off Miami ace Dan Davies, now 15-2, and hit his second round-tripper from the left side of the plate.

"It was just one of those nights," Bates said. "I was seeing the ball well and just tried to make contact. Things kind of came out pretty good for us.'

Richardi said he was playing left-center "where the coach wanted me.

"He (Bates) hit the ball to center and I went to where I thought the ball would be, but I never saw it."

Texas ace left-hander Greg Swindell took care of the rest. He struck out 14 and picked up his second CWS victory and complete game. Swindell now is 19-1 on the "He's done that for us all year," said Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson. Swindell threw 164 pitches in the game, 117 of them for strikes.

"I think that's the key to his pitching is being around the plate,' Gustafson said

"You take the lead late in the game and you have to take it to them," said Swindell. "I started getting tired around the fifth and

"He pitched like we expected him to pitch," said Miami Coach Ron Fraser of Swindell. "I didn't think he pitched as well as he did the other night (in a 2-1 win over Arizona).

Miami, now 60-16, picked up three runs in the fourth on an RBI ground out by Rusty DeBold and RBI hits by Don Rowland and Chris Hart. The Hurricanes added another on Chris Magno's RBI double in the fifth to trim Texas lead to 5-4.

Bates doubled home another run in the sixth and scored on David Denny's sacrfice fly in the eighth. Rusty Richard singled home the final run for the 62-12, third-ranked Longhorns.

Texas advances to Friday's winners bracket finale at 7:10 p.m. against fifth-ranked Mississippi State, 50-13.

Miami, sixth-ranked and 60-15, drops into the losers bracket to meet second-ranked Oklahoma State, 58-15, at 7:10 p.m. Thursday, following a 4:10 p.m. contest between top-ranked Stanford, 47-14, and fourth-ranked Arkansas,

State tournevs start today

AUSTIN (AP) - Lubbock Monterey and DeSoto are the veterans of a 20-team state baseball tournament that includes 11 schools making their first appearance.

Monterey in Class 5A won state championships in 1972, 1974 and 1981, and the Plainsmen, 30-3 this season, were runners-up in 1971.

DeSoto won a 4A baseball title in 1979 and finished second in 1980, 1983 and 1984

The Eagles, 31-6, lost to Austin Westlake in the finals last season but defeated Westlake two out of three en route to the tournament this year

Other former champions in the tournament include Colmesneil in Class A, which won in 1980: Riviera, the 2A winner in 1979; and Linden-Kildare in 3A, also a 1980 winner

Linden-Kildare, Monterey and 4A New Braunfels Canyon lost in the semifinals last year. Jasper, a 4A squad, is making its fifth appearance in the tournament but has never won a championship. Semifinals were set for today, starting with 1 p.m. games matching DeSoto and Andrews, 22-8, and Colmesneil, 21-5, and Gunter, 10-8. First-round games were scheduled for three fields.

All five championship contests will be played Friday at Disch-Falk Field, a large park with artificial turf that is the home of the Texas Longhorns.

Here are the semifinal pairings in the state baseball tournament. beginning today:

Martinez stops Angels on 1-hitter

By DICK BRINSTER AP Sports Writer

Few have faulted Baltimore control artist Dennis Martinez for failing to throw strikes. In fact, when he went into a mysterious slump two seasons ago the problem was too many strikes - too many hittable strikes.

And that was his only problem Wednesday night, albeit a very minor one

"He hit a fastball right down the middle of the plate," Martinez said of Jerry Narron's leadoff single in the third inning.

But that was the only hit the California Angels could muster as Martinez pitched the Orioles to a With a 3-and-2 count, I have to go with my fastball and make him hit the ball," Martinez said. "But unfortunately, he got it for a hit. That's what happens when a hitter is looking for one pitch.'

Martinez made only 89 pitches, well below his average of about 130. and faced only one batter over the minimum in becoming the seventh Baltimore pitcher to notch 100 career victories.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Toronto 5. Minnesota 0; Detroit 5, Seattle 2; and Milwaukee 10, Kansas City 2. Rain washed out the remainder of the schedule - Cleveland at Boston, Oakland at New York and Chicago at Texas. The latter is scheduled to be made up tonight in Blue Jays 5, Twins 0 Jesse Barfield hit two home runs and right-hander Dovle Alexander haffled Minnesota which has lost 12 of 13 games, on six hits through 8 2-3 innings.

'When you're seeing pitches every day, the sliders start to look a little fatter," said Barfield, a platoon player last year who has been batting eighth against right-handers this season.

Tigers 5, Mariners 2 Home runs by Detroit's Alejandro Sanchez and Tom Brookens backed the six-hit pitching of Jack Morris. Morris, 7-5, struck out eight and walked two while turning in his sixth complete game and averting a sweep of the three-game series by

"I feel good in that I knew the bullpen needed a rest," Morris said. "I got the good game when we needed it

The Tigers had lost six of their previous eight games and left immediately for Toronto, where they open a four-game weekend series with the Blue Jays. Royals 10, Brewers 2

Milwaukee rookie Earnie Riles accomplished a rare baseball feat when he hit a three-run single. The rookie shortstop's hit came in a six-run third inning off Mike Jones that helped rookie left-hander Ted Higuera to an easy victory over Kansas City. Two were out in the Brewer third when Jim Gantner and Brian Giles singled to bring in Jones, who issued an intentional walk to Paul

Expos slip San Francisco a Mickey Astros 8, Cardinals 3 homer for the lone New York run.

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer

Mickey Mahler has spent the better part of the past five baseball seasons on a bus traveling from one minor-league city to another. Since 1980, he's been cut by five major-league teams, while his younger brother Rick has found a home with the Atlanta Braves, Mickey's original team. Both brothers are pitchers. Rick got off to a 7-0 start this season for the Braves, while Mickey was pitching for Indianapolis in the American Association. Suddenly, fortunes have changed. The 31-year-old Rick has lost five of his last six decisions, and 32-year-old Mickey, called up by the Montreal Expos last weekend, pitched the first shutout of his career, allowing just one infield hit, to beat San Francisco 6-0 Wednesday night

"No matter what I do from now on, they can't take away that game I just pitched," Mickey said.

In the rest of the National League, Los Angeles edged New York 2-1, Atlanta defeated Chicago 4-2 in 11 innings, Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 11-9, Houston trimmed St. Louis 8-3 and San Diego came from behind to edge Philadelphia

Mahler, a left-hander, was cut by the Braves in March, 1980, then signed and released, in succession. the Pittsburgh Pirates, California Angels, New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals before he signed a Triple A contract with the Expos last February. Before Wednesday night, he hadn't started a game since 1979.

The only hit Mahler allowed was Dan Gladden's infield single in the third inning. He Mahler walked two, struck out six and did not allow a runner past first. Dodgers 2, Mets 1

Bob Welch, making only his second start of the season, teamed with three relievers on a three-hitter to earn his first victory in beating the Mets.

Welch, who had been out with an arm injury, pitched five innings. giving up two hits, before Rick Honeycutt, Ken Howell and Steve Howe finished up.

Mariano Duncan had an RBI single in the fifth inning to break a 1-1 tie. Steve Sax singled, stole second and scored the go-ahead George Foster hit his eighth

Braves 4, Cubs 2 Rafael Ramirez drove in all of Atlanta's runs, the last two with a homer in the top of the 11th inning off Lee Smith, to lift the Braves over Chicago. The loss was the first for Smith, 3-1, in 21 relief appearances.

Paul Zuvella started the Braves 11th with a single. One out later, Ramirez hit an 0-2 pitch over the left-field fence for only his second homer of the season. Ramirez had a two-run double in the third inning Ron Cey hit his 11th homer for the Cubs.

Reds 11, Pirates 9 Alan Knicely hit a three-run homer in Cincinnati's four-run sixth inning as the Reds rallied to beat Pittsburgh for their fourth straight victory. Knicely's homer, his fourth, broke an 8-8 tie.

All of the sixth-inning runs were unearned, coming after an error by Pittsburgh shortstop Johnnie LeMaster. Dave Parker also homered for the Reds, and LeMaster homered for Pittsburgh.

The victory moved the Reds six games over .500 for the first time and Enos Cabell drove in two runs with a pinch-hit double to help Houston beat St. Louis. Bob Knepper went 6-1 by going

Mark Bailey hit a two-run homer five innings, and Frank DiPino pitched the final 3 1-3 innings for his fifth save, allowing just one hit.

Chief's Crown favored to win Belmont Stakes

NEW YORK (AP) - Chief's Crown, the beaten favorite in the first two legs of the Triple Crown, is the likely early choice for Saturday's Belmont Stakes, the finale of the 3-year-old thoroughbred series.

Roger Laurin, trainer of the 2-year-old champion, has taken the setbacks in stride, saying Wednesday, "The best is yet to come. He ran a much better race in the Preakness than in the (Kentucky) Derby."

Laurin is looking for a progression from third in the Derby and second in the Preakness to a victory in the Belmont, worth $350,000-added.

The only other 3-year-old in the field who has made all the Triple Crown races is Tank's Prospect, who broke the Pimlico track record in winning the 1 3-16-mile Preakness by a head over Chief's

Woody Stephens will be seeking an unprecedented fourth consecutive Belmont triumph with Stephan's Odyssey and Creme

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Washington Redskins said Wednesday they have "ruled out" trading wide receiver Charlie Brown.

"We plan to have Charlie back here in the same form he was in two years ago, all-pro form," said General Manager Bobby Beathard.

Beathard said the Redskins had explored a trade "to protect" themselves. But he said, "we decided that's not want we want to

Brown, 26, missed the Redskins' recent minicamp after Coach Joe Gibbs would not guarantee how much he would play this season. He missed 10 games last season with an injured ankle, knee, fibula and hamstring, and he caught 18 passes, down from a team-high of 78 in 1983. According to Beathard. Craig Kelly, Brown's agent, told him during minicamp that, "Charlie would probably feel better if he didn't come back" to the Redskins.

But Wednesday, Kelly said, "I never saw this as a big problem and we don't want to keep throwing logs on the fire. All Charlie wanted was for Gibbs to come out publicly and to say what Gibbs has now in fact said publicly, which was, 'You're my main man until somebody has beaten you out."

Gibbs said Wednesday 'competition will determine' if Brown or Calvin Muhammad would start along-side all-pro Art Monk next season.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Motorcycle patrolman Johnnie C. Corbin was sprawled dead in the street after being rammed by a car from behind when the driver got out and began kicking him, his killing rage sparked by a $4 parking ticket, police said.

The driver in Wednesday's attack, 43-year-old unemployed ex-convict Willie Taylor Jr., was in custody today on a first-degree murder charge, police said

"He said his anger got the best of him," Capt. Robert Richters, commander of the police homicide division, said of the suspect at a news

Taylor was confronted by a bystander who picked up the fallen policeman's revolver and held it on Taylor, saying, "Quit kicking that officer or I'll kill you," Richters said.

The bystander was not identified for his own protection. The pistol was damaged and would not have fired, Richters added.

Apparently Corbin, 41, and Taylor had confronted one other about 11:20 a.m. on the city's north side when the officer gave Taylor a parking citation. About 10 minutes later and two blocks away. Taylor drove his car into the rear of Corbin's motorcyle, knocking the officer several hundred feet, Richters

"The car slid him (Corbin) all the way down the street," said Ronald Taylor (no relation), who said he saw the crash.

The driver then got out of the car and started kicking Corbin's body, officers

Richters said Taylor admitted hitting Corbin because he was angry about the ticket Corbin had been on the force nine

A member of the police mobile reserve unit from 1974 to 1980 before being transferred to his traffic safety assignment, Corbin was also a member of the department's Hostage Response

WESTPORT. Conn. (AP) - A partnership which includes actors Paul Newman and Keir Dullea and writer Robert Ludlum has been given a three-week deadline extension on its $300,000 down payment on the Westport Country Playhouse.

The $1.2 million sale of the century-old barn playhouse in Newman's hometown was delayed until June 25 at the seller's request. Jacquie B. Lazo, a lawver for the buyers, said Wednesday.

The limited partnership to buy the summer theater, located on 31/2 prime commercial acres. was formed by the Connecticut Theater Foundation, which has leased and produced off-Broadway-style plays there since 1973.

James B. McKenzie, president of the foundation and a general partner, said the group has raised the $300,000 in

REAGAN AND NIGH — Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh looks on as President Reagan steps to the speaker podium during a rally at the A.T.&T. facility in Oklahoma City Wednesday. Reagan took the opportunity to promote his new tax plan during his visit. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan barnstorming for money and taxes

ATLANTA (AP) — President Reagan, telling Democratic defectors "the welcome mat is out," plans a barnstorming tour of the nation over the next four months to push his tax plan and pick up party-switchers along the way.

"The doors are open. The welcome mat is out. Our agenda is opportunity and freedom for all," Reagan told supporters of Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., Wednesday at a $125-a-plate partisan fund-raising dinner, which was followed by a $1,000-per-couple reception.

Reagan wraps up a two-day swing through the Sun Belt today, which he has used to plug his tax plan and boost the campaign war chests of three Republican freshmen senators up for re-election in 1986.

The president was returning to Washington after speaking to students at Atlanta's Northside High School and flying to Birmingham to attend a fund-raiser for Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., which state Republican officials have predicted will glean $500,000.

At the Birmingham stop, the president was expected to offer a response to the Supreme Court's decision striking down an Alabama law that required a moment of silence each day in public schools for meditation or prayer, said White House spokesman Larry Speakes. The decision was seen as a blow to efforts by Reagan and others to get organized prayer in the schools.

In his Atlanta speech, Reagan lauded a local state senator who switched parties and joined the GOP, telling the cheering Republican audience: "We don't have to make the opposition see the light — they just felt the heat."

Asserting that the Republican Party 'represents a new force in this country,' Reagan said 'more and more of our Democratic friends and neighbors are recognizing that old political labels no longer apply.''

Speakes told reporters Wednesday that Reagan will help attract dollars at Republican fund-raisers for "eight or ten" of the 22 GOP senators up for re-election in 1986 and "may campaign for a half-dozen others where needed."

Parallel to that, Reagan will travel fairly frequently in the coming months to push the tax revisions, Speakes said. He added that there is a "distinct possibility" Reagan will visit various parts of the country on a regular basis to boost support for the plan.

On Wednesday, the president took aim at those in high-tax states who oppose his plans to drop the deduction for state and local taxes.

Reagan also issued a warning to Congress, nearing a vote on aid to the Contra rebels fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua, charging the Soviet bloc was using the Sandinistas as a means to establish a "beachhead on our doorsten"

Even while allegedly a spy, Whitworth was re-cleared to see nation's secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even during the time that the government says Jerry A. Whitworth was spying for the Soviet Union, the Defense Department twice reinstated his clearance to handle top secrets.

The Pentagon said Wednesday that Whitworth, 45, a retired Navy radioman, was re-investigated for security clearance in 1969 and in 1978 and retained his top secret rating. On Monday he was arrested in . California and charged with stealing classified communications documents from 1965 until he retired from the Navy in 1983.

Whitworth is one of four men charged with conspiring to pass important Navy secrets to the Soviets in a 20-year operation. All held clearances, including the alleged ringleader, John Anthony Walker Jr., whom his ex-wife claims needed money to shore up a failing South Carolina bar and restaurant in which he had invested.

Walker began spying for the Soviets in the late 1960s and made "well over $100,000," Barbara Crowley Walker was quoted as saying in today's Los Angeles Times

But Walker's state-appointed attorney said Wednesday that a federal tax lien placed on Walker's property has left him with "negative net worth" and will make it impossible for him to afford a private lawyer.

The Internal Revenue Service registered the lien on a rural South Carolina property Walker had been renting to the local chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, local officials said.

In U.S. District Court in Baltimore on Tuesday, Walker had filed a financial worth statement showing assets of $230,000, with net worth after debts at $174,000.

The IRS on Tuesday charged in Norfolk Circuit Court that Walker owed $252,487.66 in back taxes and froze all his holdings until he pays the sum.

The disclosure that Whitworth passed re-investigation raised questions about the thoroughness of the periodic loyalty checks that are supposed to be conducted among military people, government workers and contractors' employees who are cleared to handle confidential government papers.

More than 4.3 million Americans have such clearances, including 622,000 cleared to see the government's most important secrets, according to Pentagon figures figures.

The Pentagon said Wednesday it has been unable to re-investigate those holding clearances every five years, as its procedures require.

The Pentagon said two of the other three men arrested in the scandal had never been subjected to the re-investigations.

"John Walker, Arthur Walker and Jerry Whitworth all possessed top secret access while they were on active duty," said a statement from the office of Michael I. Burch, chief Pentagon spokesman.

The fourth man charged, Michael Lance Walker, joined the Navy in December 1982, but he had not held a security clearance long enough to be subjected to re-investigation. Michael was arrested two weeks ago while on active duty aboard the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz.

Barbara Walker has said in newspaper interviews she contacted the FBI concerning her ex-husband about six months ago. The Washington Post reported in today's editions that before she notified authorities, she asked a friend for a tarot card reading in January 1984 to help her decide what to do.

When push comes to shove,

John Deere 21-inch deluxe mowers are easy rolling because all four wheels turn on ball bearings. And that's a real advantage on inclines or in tall grass.

Four 4-hp models are available — self-propelled and push-type, with electric and recoil start. All have deep, contoured aluminum deck and a dual safety system that stops both the engine and blade when the control handle is released.

Two cutting height adjustment levers let you set the mower from <sup>7</sup>/<sub>8</sub> to 2<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub> inches above the ground. Side discharge is standard. A 2-bushel rear bagger is optional.
