

Wichita Falls, Hill Country hit by flooding

By The Associated Press

Two persons were missing and feared drowned in the wake of flash flooding following heavy rains that drenched a vast area of Texas, sending water over roads and families fleeing from rising flood waters.

A boy was missing and feared drowned after he vanished while playing in a rain-swollen creek in Wichita Falls and a 19-year-old youth disappeared while walking along a spillway in North Central Texas.

Police were to resume their search today for Paul Delaney, 12, who apparently drowned while playing with another boy in a creek in Wichita Falls Thursday evening.

The boys were floating on an innertube when Delaney was caught in the current, the Wichita Falls Times-Record-News reported today.

About 30 miles southwest of Wichita Falls, authorities planned to resume their search today for Steve Bitner, 19, of Archer City. Bitner was walking across the Lake Kickapoo spillway when he was swept into the pool below Thursday night, Archer County authorities said.

Creeks in Wichita Falls spilled over their banks Thursday afternoon forcing some residents from their homes.

James Manning, Red Cross disaster action team coordinator, said at least 30 people had signed in at the city's Red Cross shelter Thursday night, and more are expected as floodwaters continue to rise.

In the Texas Hill Country, residents were rescued from rooftops and others were pulled from vehicles at low-water crossings after torrential downpours flooded the area Thursday.

Heavy rains, some totaling 16 inches, were reported Thursday in parts of the Hill Country, the Austin American-Statesman reported today.

Mobile homes near Wimberley were swept away by the Blanco River, and several vehicles were washed off roadways in Hays, Comal, and Blanco counties, where the heaviest rainfall was recorded.

In San Antonio, a wildlife rehabilitation compound was heavily damaged by floods, and 20 to 40 animals were killed.

By Thursday evening, most creeks and rivers were again within their banks, but parts of Bulverde, 20 miles west of New Braunfels, were still isolated by receding floodwaters from the Cibolo Creek.

Texas National Guard troops on maneuvers near Bulverde rescued five residents from rooftops. A helicopter carrying a television press crew was used to rescue two sanitation workers whose truck was being swept away by floodwaters in Comal County near the Bexar County line.

Among those rescued was Lillian Conrey, who sang and discussed Bible scriptures with her two sons as they waited for help Thursday morning atop their home near the confluence of Cibolo and Indian creeks.

"We sat there with our umbrellas, our cat, and a ski belt on our dog," Conrey told the American-Statesman. "It was like being on an island in the middle of the lake, but not as fun."

The greatest amounts of rain hit south Blanco and western Comal counties near Twin Sisters, Spring

Branch, and Bulverde.

Blanco County officials rescued a husband and wife after their vehicles were sucked into rushing waters that had broken the banks of the Little Blanco River, said Mark McMann, chief of the Blanco Volunteer Fire Department.

McMann said the couple, Fred and Louise Mullikin, was found clinging to a gate.

Hays County Sheriff Alford Hohman said an Austin resident driving over the Five-Mile Dam on the Blanco River between San Marcos and Kyle was swept away in the fast-moving currents.

The woman scrambled to the roof of the car and remained there until the car floated past a clump of trees. She jumped onto a limb, and made her way to high ground, Hohman said.

Blanco Mayor Marge Waxler reported between 13 and 16 inches of rain near Twin Sisters in southern Blanco County.

In Wimberley, the swollen Blanco River crested at about 30 feet, spilling from its banks and sending at least two unoccupied mobile homes down the river.

Another baby dies

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Samuel and Patricia Frustaci kept a vigil at the crib of one of their four surviving septuplets, Bonnie Marie, after her tiny, 16-day-old brother, James Martin, died in his parents' arms.

Three other Frustaci infants remained in critical but stable condition at Childrens Hospital, where doctors said they were encouraged by their progress.

The father, saying Bonnie Marie "was hanging on by a thread," wept Thursday as he told reporters how James Martin battled for life.

"When we spoke to him, his eyes would open and he would gaze from side to side," Frustaci said. "His eyes remained open even at his death."

Frustaci said the small baby was "a fighter" like the infant nicknamed "Peanut," 1-pound David Anthony, who died May 24.

Another of the seven children born 12 weeks early to the Riverside couple, Christina Elizabeth, was dead at birth.

The other three septuplets, Patricia Ann, Stephen Earl and Richard Charles, make progress every day and are gaining weight.

Groom realizes need for ambulance

BY CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

GROOM — The Groom Ambulance Service has been raising funds for a new $30,000 ambulance since January, but it took a May traffic fatality on I-40 to show just how much a new unit was needed.

The ambulance service, a group made up entirely of volunteers, has been using a 1974 Dodge Van for the past 11 years. Ambulance spokesperson Darlene Jones said the van has logged more than 50,000 miles.

"It's small and the noise level keeps us from monitoring cardiac patients," she said, adding that the van doesn't have adequate space for several victims.

"We found this out when we had a head-on collision on the interstate in May," she said. A Pampa woman, Helen Thompson, and a 2-year-old Mississippi girl were killed in the two-car crash May 25 on I-40 west of Groom. The child's parents and older sister were also injured. All five victims had to be transported to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

"We had to give cardiopulmonary resuscitation on the baby," she said. "And when you have two critical patients, you need the space. There were so many victims involved, but Amarillo ambulances met us half-way."

Jones said the Groom Ambulance Service serves a 60-mile area. With the Groom Hospital closed, the service must transport victims of Amarillo or to Coronado Community Hospital in Pampa.

"McLean Ambulance takes over (emergency medical responsibilities) east of here and Amarillo takes over west of here," she said.

The State Board of Health confirmed that the size and noise level of the old unit do not comply with federal ambulance guidelines.

"We'd like to go for a Type Three ambulance," she said. "That's a larger type with plenty of working space and all the equipment is accessible from the outside. The units at McLean are Type Three ambulances. The Type Twos are vans and are a little larger than the unit we have now."

Jones estimated that the new ambulance would cost about $30,000. A fund has been set up at the State National Bank of Groom to receive contributions, which may be made in the form of regular donations or memorial funds.

So far, the fund drive "has gotten really good response" Jones said, adding that the local Beta Sigma Phi sorority has also set up a fund to buy a new gurney (stretcher).

Jones explained that the Groom Ambulance service is not subsidized by any local or state taxes. For the past 21 years, the service was sponsored by the local Lions' Club; but the civic group dropped its sponsorship recently.

The service has no salaried employees and is funded through service fees and through donations. As a result, the service has not applied for any state or federal government grant.

"We would like to stay independent if we possibly can and not be responsible to the government," Jones said.

Jones added that the service would "definitely" use the 1974 ambulance as a back-up unit.

"We've had several incidents where we had just come back from a run and were called out on another one," she said. "We hope to keep it equipped to meet the state standards."

All contributions may be sent to "the Ambulance Service, Box 111, Groom or to the First State Bank.

One-vote margin

Water projects wash out in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, by a one-vote margin, has eliminated 31 Corps of Engineers water projects, cleaning out a traditional pork barrel that critics say has put political connections before a project's merits.

The dams and harbor deepening projects were slashed Thursday on a 203-202 vote from a fiscal 1985 supplemental spending bill as insurgents led by Rep. Bob Edgar, D-Pa., hung defeat on one of the House's most powerful old-guarders, Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss.

"It was a fight between the old way of doing things and the new," said Edgar, one of a group of younger House members who say that a project's merits, not a representative's influence, should be the prime consideration.

The insurgents took aim on 31 corps projects that had been approved by Whitten's panel but had not been authorized by the Public Works and Transportation Committee, as required by the congressional budget process.

Left in the bill were funds to begin 31 other corps projects that have been endorsed by Public Works and four Bureau of Reclamation projects previously authorized by the House Interior Committee.

During the debate, Whitten attempted to shift the focus of the battle to make the fight appear to be between Congress and the Reagan administration's budget office, which supported only five of the deleted projects.

"Are we going to let a budget office determine what projects we have?" Whitten said. "The time has come for Congress to speak out. When did it get to be bad to look after your own country?"

A foe of the scuttled projects,

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., called the debate "our annual performance of rolling out the (pork) barrel."

Rep. Joe Skeen, R-N.M., countered with, "One man's pork barrel is another man's priority."

Edgar's amendment, supported by Public Works committee leaders, cut the spending proposed by Whitten from $150 million to $50 million, which Edgar says is enough to get the approved projects under way.

The action left the estimated completion cost of the surviving projects at about $1.5 billion. The future price tag for Whitten's package was about $4.12 billion.

Thursday's tussle was another chapter in a congressional stalemate that has resulted in no new water project starts being voted into law by Congress since 1976.

The long fight has pitted people like Edgar against a traditional system that has often seen projects approved in part because members were on the right committees or were friends with people who were.

The younger members are pushing for a law that will require projects to be approved on the basis of need and with a greater share of costs being paid by areas directly benefiting. The House passed a bill to do this last year, but it died in the Senate.

Edgar said Thursday's vote was the House's way of saying, "Let's get our system in order so that only the worthy projects get through."

He conceded, however, that the victory could unravel later this year after the Senate passes its own supplemental appropriations bill and the matter reaches a joint conference committee, which could attempt to restore any or all of the chopped projects.

Unemployment

Local, area rates down

The unemployment rate in both Pampa and Gray County dropped eight-tenths of a percent during the month of April, according to figures released today by Charles Vance, director of the local Texas Employment Commission office.

The Pampa unemployment rate stood at 4.9 percent at the end of April, down from 5.7 percent in March. Gray County's rate was 5.0 percent, down from the 5.8 recorded a month early.

Three out of four area counties also showed improvement in the jobless rate during April. Wheeler, where the rate rose from 4.2 to 4.5 percent, was the only county with a higher rate.

Hemphill County showed the strongest gain, with the rate falling from 7.0 to 5.4 percent. The rate fell from 1.3 to 1.1 percent in Lipscomb County and from 2.6 to 2.4 percent in Roberts County.

Those figures compare favorably with the nationwide rate of 7.3 percent for May. Local employment figures for May will not be available until next month.

The April unemployment rate, however, reflected a decrease in the labor force rather than an increase in jobs.

The labor force in Pampa dropped from 11,063 in March to 10,682 in April, while the number of persons employed fell from 10,431 to 10,160. Pampa's number of unemployed residents numbered 522 in April, down from 632 the previous month.

In all of Gray County, the labor force was 13,146, down from 13,618 the previous month. The number of persons employed was 12,488, down from 12,822 in April. The County had 658 unemployed residents in March, compared to 796 the previous month.

The Pampa unemployment rate one year ago was 4.0 percent and the county's rate was 4.1 percent.

Vance said he wasn't sure why the labor force dropped, but assumed it meant some workers moved out of the area.

However, he reported that his office had a large amount of activity from employers seeking to fill job openings in April and the activity is continuing now. Many of the job opening are for roofing helpers and home damage repair work triggered by the hailstorm that caused widespread damage in Pampa.

"We're still having calls from employers seeking to fill those jobs," he said.

Vance estimated that his office handled about 200 requests for workers in April and filled about 185. He said about 65 percent of the total was for fulltime work.

In addition to roofing helpers, the office still has opening for fast food workers, parttime retail store sales clerks, checkers and stockers and a variety of unskilled job, he said.

National rate same

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civilian unemployment rate held at 7.3 percent in May for the fourth straight month, the longest stagnant period in at least 14 years, the Labor Department reported today.

Manufacturing employment fell by 28,000, the fifth straight monthly decline. Since the start of the year, some 163,000 manufacturing jobs have been lost.

But the economy overall created 345,000 jobs in May, with virtually all the gain in the services sector. Some 111,000 of those jobs were health- or business-related.

At the same time, the overall unemployment rate among young men, traditionally one of the strongest labor pools for manufacturing, was up. The jobless rate for those aged 20-24 rose 1.2 percentage points to 12.5 percent.

And for teen-agers, the rate rose from 17.7 to 18.9 percent, due primarily to rising joblessness among college-age youths.

A Labor Department check of records going back to 1971 showed no period when unemployment had stayed the same for four months running. However, department analysts say there have been numerous times in that period when the labor picture has been relatively stagnant.

Indeed, civilian joblessness has been moving in the narrow range of 7.1 percent to 7.5 percent for the last year.

The number of unemployed Americans totaled 8.4 million in May, the level that has held since February.

Construction employment rose by 30,000 while the weakest segments of manufacturing, electrical equipment and clothing, fell by 24,000.

State rate up slightly

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas unemployment rate jumped slightly to 6.9 percent in May, and a labor forecaster predicted that the state's gains in employment would lag behind the national recovery.

The jobless rate rose from 6.6 percent in April, an increase that is statistically insignificant, said Bryan Richey, a regional commissioner with the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The state's unemployment figure was 5.9 percent in May 1984, Richey said.

The latest figures painted a mixed economic picture in Texas, Richey said.

Senate approves $38 million aid for Nicaraguan rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate has approved a plan to resume U.S. support for rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government by providing $38 million in non-lethal aid over the next 18 months.

After a 55-42 vote for the aid Thursday, one of its sponsors, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., refused to rule out the possibility that the money could be used for defensive radar or CIA helicopter flights into Nicaragua to ferry supplies to the rebels.

As to exactly how the aid could be used, Nunn said the Reagan administration and Congress would have to work out the "precise understanding behind closed doors." He said if the CIA abused the rules, any congressional consensus supporting the aid "would fall apart."

Liberal Senate Democrats tried unsuccessfully Thursday to place tight restrictions on any new aid to the Contras and to bar use of U.S.

combat forces in Nicaragua. Similar efforts were expected today as the Senate continues work on a two-year State Department authorization bill totalling $5.6 billion.

Reagan praised Thursday's Senate action as "a display of bipartisan concern for the people of Central America and our own national security."

However, the Nicaraguan Embassy condemned the move as "an escalation of U.S. involvement and a major step down the road to intervention of U.S. combat troops. It will prolong the bloodshed in Nicaragua..."

The aid plan, passed by a coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats, would repeal a strict prohibition against U.S. support for military action inside Nicaragua, but would bar spending on guns, bullets and lethal weapons. Nunn said military training would also be prohibited.

It would provide $14 million in non-lethal aid to the rebels, known as Contras, this year and $24 million next year. The money could be used for food, clothing, medicines and transportation, possibly funneled through the CIA.

The Democrat-controlled House, which has led opposition to aiding the Contras, is expected to vote on a similar proposal next week.

In supporting the aid plan, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said, "We should not be embarrassed to support forces that are struggling against Marxism and for democracy."

Nunn said the new assistance would show the United States "stands with those who favor democracy" in Nicaragua.

Pampa man found guilty

AMARILLO - A Pampa man was found guilty Thursday in federal district court in Amarillo on charges of filing false federal income tax returns in 1978 and 1979.

Robert L. Killebrew was convicted of knowingly underreporting his income tax forms by $85,524 for the two calendar years.

The five-woman, seven-man jury found Killebrew guilty of two counts for the income tax evasion, stating he "willfully and knowingly" filed tax returns that he "did not believe to be true and correct." They acquitted him of the third account involving his 1980 return.

Killebrew faces a maximum of three years in prison and a $5,000 fine for intentionally filing false income tax returns. U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson will wait for a presentencing report before sentencing Killebrew.

Killebrew is free on bond.

The Pampa resident was indicted Feb. 28 on charges he neglected to report a total of $106,459 in royalties and $5,553 in gross oil lease income on federal tax returns for 1978, 1979 and 1980.

During questioning at the trial, Killebrew admitted he had received royalty payments from Phillips Petroleum Co. in 1978 but failed to report them on his tax return.

Wounded prisoner stable after 120th Texas stabbing

ROSHARON, Texas (AP) — A prisoner was in stable condition after he was attacked in what officials say is the 120th stabbing in a Texas prison this year.

Johnny Harris, 28, was in the Texas Department of Corrections hospital in Galveston after another Ramsey 3 Unit inmate allegedly stabbed him with a knife made from scissors. TDC spokesman Charles Brown said Thursday.

A 27-year-old suspect, serving 15 years for burglary and drug convictions in Bexar County, told investigators Harris made sexual advances in the shower and at the dormitory where they lived, Brown said.

Harris is serving five years for a Harris County conviction of aggravated assault. Brown said.

So far this year, there have been 120 non-fatal stabbings and 12 fatal knifings within the nation's second largest prison system. A female was stabbed to death earlier this week.

In an unrelated incident Wednesday, three inmates were indicted by a Brazoria County grand jury in Angleton on charges of assaulting prison guards.

Pedro Ancira, 28, serving 25 years for a Caldwell County burglary conviction, was charged with aggravated assault in the Feb. 10 stabbing of David Connery, a guard at the Retrieve Unit near Angleton.

Connery, 19, suffered a wound in the right thigh during a struggle with Ancira, who was trying to leave a room where inmates were watching television. Officials said Ancira, a member of an Hispanic prison gang known as the Texas Syndicate, was intoxicated.

Inmate Pablo Rios, 34, serving 90 years for a Harris County aggravated rape conviction, was indicted on charges of attempted capital murder. Rios had said the devil ordered him to stab Ken Garza on March 2.

Garza was talking with an inmate in the hallway at the Ramsey 1 Unit near Rosharon when he was stabbed with a 9-inch weapon fashioned from a metal ruler, officials said. Garza needed surgery to close wounds in his back and stomach.

Jeffery Lynn Thompson, a 21-year-old inmate serving 10 years for a Dallas County aggravated robbery conviction, was charged with aggravated assault in the Feb. 24 attack at the Clemens Unit near Brazoria.

Thompson threw hot water in the face of guard Buckley Atkinson, 23, who was treated at a local hospital.

Texan given $3.2 million in damages

CHICAGO (AP) — A Texas businessman has been awarded $3.2 million in damages after a jury ruled he was illegally fired by a Chicago-based company.

Roy W. Green Jr., who sold his steel fabrication business to Advance Ross Corp. in 1970 and was fired in 1978, was awarded $1 million in compensatory damages and $2.2 million in punitive damages. Green said Thursday that he was ecstatic about the judgment.

Harvey Campbell, Advance Ross executive vice president of finance, said the company would appeal the ruling.

William Holloway, Green's lawyer, said the ruling was consistent with a trend toward limiting discretionary employee discharges.

"The case serves as warning that employers who engage in reckless violation of employees' rights may expose themselves to damages being calculated by a jury," Holloway said.

Green's family sold their Longview, Texas, business to Advance Ross in 1970, with Green signing a 10-year contract that gave Advance Ross the right to terminate him with 180 days' notice and one year's salary as severance pay.

Green and his mother were fired in 1978 without notice, apparently after Green decided to award severance pay to his father, who had been fired by Green on company orders.

Advance Ross manufactures electrostatic precipitators for air-pollution controls. Campbell said the company's net worth is $14.4 million.

The Cook County Circuit Court jury returned the judgment last week.

Radio stations discover rising costs of doing business

WACO, Texas (AP) — Many Texas radio station managers and chief engineers have received a surprise this week in the mail — learning that their telephone bills for private transmission lines have increased 500 to 1,000 percent.

In addition, the stations were being billed for three months at one time, instead of one month, the Waco Tribune-Herald reported.

Private, or "dedicated" telephone lines, are used by radio stations to broadcast events ranging from church worship services on Sunday to athletic and news events.

The stations also subscribe to news services, including The Associated Press, over the wires.

Most television stations are not affected because they have satellite receivers to bypass telephone lines.

Although most of the radio stations said they had no prior warning of the rate increase, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. maintains it sent a letter dated April 26 for billing that started April 1, the Tribune-Herald reported.

The Federal Communications Commission requires that customers be notified in advance of rate increases. However, the company does not have to notify the customer of the size of the increase.

Judy Lancaster, business director of Waco's KBBW, was shocked to find a bill Monday that she said was a huge increase over previous rates for those lines.

"And it's for 2.8 months of service," she said. "Normally, the bill runs $164.90 a month. This one is for $1,125."

Mrs. Lancaster also said the station had not been notified of the rate increase.

"Every radio station relies on these lines," she said. "We will have to either quit using these or pass it (the cost) on to the consumer."

"My feeling is they could have been specific," said Dave Fricker, chief engineer for six radio stations in Central Texas. "The notification came after the billing started. It might be legal, but it's not ethical. Since the phone company has the wires in hand, they can unplug you."

Fricker is chief engineer for WACO, KHOO, KRZI, KNFO, KIXS and KIIZ. He said the cost of the private lines had risen an average of 500 to 800 percent.

"There was some general talk on rate increases a while back but no specific information was given," he said. "And they have made the billing retroactive to the beginning of April without any prior notice."

Fricker said that coupling a three-months bill with an "astronomical" rate increase increased bills that were generally between $200 to $400 for radio stations to about $2,000.

Larry Schneiders, district manager of external communications for Southwestern Bell, told the newspaper he personally had met with the executive director and his assistant of the Texas Association of Broadcasters. Although he acknowledged the billing started April 1, he said the notice dated April 26 stated that stations would not be billed for April until May's bill was due.

John Loehman, assistant vice president for rates and revenues for Southwestern Bell, attributed the increases to a directive by the FCC that the private lines be made to pay for themselves.

"In certain circumstances, short-haul rates increased fairly dramatically," he said. "Sometimes short-haul costs (or private lines) could go up quite a bit."

Loehman also said delays and changes in the final structures of line rates caused problems.

"There's so many changes, sometimes you can't notify the customers until the tariff is authorized," he said.

Bryan King, chief engineer for radio station KLBK in Austin, said he had heard of the rate increase by word-of-mouth.

Floods ruin animal refuge

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Heavy rains washed out a wildlife rehabilitation compound here killing several baby animals and causing an estimated $100,000 worth of damage, a spokeswoman said.

"We lost it all, really everything," said Pat Rogers, media coordinator for the Wildlife Rescue and Rehabilitation Inc., in northeast San Antonio.

The compound's new nursery was swept away by flood waters from a rain-swollen creek late Wednesday night, Ms. Rogers said Thursday. Equipment, cages, the entire food supply and records were destroyed or washed away.

Flash floods swept the Lone Star State on Wednesday after torrential downpours dumped several inches of rain in just a few hours. Mobile homes were swept into a river in Hays County, while thunderstorms swelled creeks and rivers in the Austin area.

About 200 animals were at the wildlife compound when flood waters hit the refuge Wednesday night. Ms. Rogers said 20 to 40 of them were killed, including baby opossums, foxes, fawns and a baby skunk all housed in the nursery.

"We lost a lot of the babies that we had," she said. "Most of the babies are dead that we know of. There are a few that are missing."

The seven-year old compound offers refuge to wild animals unable to live in their natural habitat, and others are rehabilitated so they can return to the wild.

Most of the rescued animals were taken to another compound, while two cougars and a jaguar were being housed at the San Antonio Zoo's health center, she said.

A creek near the compound started overflowing about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday, and overflowed again Thursday about noon, she said.

Damage to the compound is in excess of $100,000, she said.

Volunteers worked through the night trying to rescue all the animals. Some that could fend for themselves were released, but Ms. Rogers said no dangerous animals were set free.

The National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning Thursday afternoon for Bastrop, Caldwell, Hays, Bexar, Comal and Guadalupe counties.

The heaviest rains were reported to be in Comal County in the Hill Country, and several roads in the Hill Country were closed due to high water.

More than seven inches of rain fell at Denison in North Texas before the storms cleared out and moved east Thursday. Up to five inches of rain fell late Wednesday and early Thursday in the area just north of San Antonio, and another 1.5 inches fell at San Antonio International Airport in an hour's time Thursday afternoon.

White suggests placing retarded away from the residential areas

AUSTIN (AP) — One option for overcoming neighborhood opposition to group homes for the retarded might be to put them in industrial rather than residential areas, Gov. Mark White says.

"You don't just go out there and move them in next door to a stable neighborhood in which it would tend to diminish property values or endanger the stability of the neighborhood," White said.

"Possibly an industrial section of the community might be an area where they can be placed," he said.

White's comments during a Thursday news conference followed questions about a federal judge who Wednesday said it was "abundantly clear" Texas has failed to comply with his 2-year-old order to find community homes for some residents of state schools.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice ordered the state to find homes for 279 retarded people by September 1986.

The governor said the state has time and money to meet that order.

Finding locations for homes to house small groups of retarded people often has been difficult, with opposition from neighborhoods and sometimes city officials.

The Legislature this year approved legislation that would keep cities from using zoning and property laws to prohibit group homes for the disabled.

About six hours after his news conference, aide Janis Monger said White will sign the bill. "He very much supports community-based mental health programs," she said.

White noted that El Paso has been successful in locating a "restitution center" — housing criminals who are working to repay victims — in an industrial area. He suggested a similar approach might be used with group homes for the retarded.

"They don't all have to be in neighborhoods," White said. "There are places in community relationships that are not necessarily next door to someone in a residential setting."

"There are ways you can do that, just as I described in the criminal justice area. You can do the same in mental health areas."

White noted the reluctance that many residential areas have voiced in the past when group homes were proposed for those neighborhoods.

"I wouldn't suggest you move into East Austin and destabilize the neighborhood. But then again, you wouldn't move into any neighborhood and destabilize it," he said.

The governor also was asked about the belief of many people that retarded citizens benefit from living in residential areas, near typical families, rather than state schools or large institutions.

"Probably the problem many of them has is they didn't have very good families to begin with in some cases," White said. "That may be part of the problem. To put them back in the area that created the problem is not going to solve their long-term situation."

White did say that neighborhoods shouldn't fear having a group home located nearby.

"I don't think they should, but I think we shouldn't give them any reason to fear, either," he said.

Drinking age increase bill signed

AUSTIN (AP) — In hopes of saving lives and of getting the state more highway funds, Gov. Mark White has signed into law a bill that would raise the drinking age in Texas from 19 to 21.

White also said Thursday he would sign another measure that not only would raise the drinking age to 21 but would provide maximum penalties for anyone driving drunk with an open container of alcoholic beverage in the car or pickup.

In 1984, Congress enacted federal legislation to withhold federal highway funds from states that do not raise their drinking age to 21 in an effort to decrease highway deaths.

The bill signed Thursday, sponsored by Sen. Bill Sarpalus, D-Amarillo, would become effective Sept. 1, 1986, only if the federal law has not been changed. The drinking age would revert back to 19 if the federal law is held invalid.

White told a crowd in his reception room he was signing the increase in the drinking age "fully aware of the strong feeling on both sides of this issue, but I am convinced that the drinking age should be raised for several reasons."

"First and foremost, there is evidence that raising the drinking age would reduce the number of alcohol-related deaths on Texas highways."

"Second, I think this bill puts Texas into compliance with the congressional mandate and guarantees that more than $100 million in highway funds will flow to Texas in the next two fiscal years."

"I think we all share a concern about the problem of alcohol abuse, and I would not suggest for a minute the problem is limited to our young people," White said.

Just how simple is simple?

I do not understand all I know about Mr. Reagan's new tax reform plan.

According to the administration, the plan is supposed to make our tax system more simple and more fair.

"For the sake of fairness, simplicity and growth, we must radically change the structure of the tax system..." Mr. Reagan said.

But here are some of the troubling questions:
If the proposed new tax code is simple, how come the government had to print a 500-page book that it sold for $18 to explain the plan?

If the new code is supposed to be fair, why do people who are well-off enough to purchase homes still get a tax break for housing costs, but people who have to pay rent don't? And why can an elderly couple with no Social Security earn over $17,000 without paying any taxes, while a family of four would have to start paying after earning just under $13,000?

If Mr. Reagan still believes in an earlier statement, "Corporations don't pay taxes, people do," why did he include a minimum corporate tax? Especially when the Treasury Department says the revenue from it will be negligible?

If President Reagan is the champion of private enterprise, why are all those businessmen opposed to his new plan?

If the Reagan Administration is still serious about returning responsibility for many programs to state and local governments, why would he make it harder for those entities to collect taxes to pay for the programs?

If he still favors voluntary donations to charitable organizations over government programs as a means of dealing with social programs, why does the plan make it more difficult to claim deductions for charitable deductions?

Why is there a 25 deduction limit on business meals? Are government bureaucrats also going to be forced to limit the cost of their "business meals" to $25? Don't hold your breath waiting for that announcement.

If we dislike the Marxists in Nicaragua so much, why do we cling to a tax system based on the Marxian principle, "From each according to his ability...?"

But the really puzzling question is this? If the new tax plan is going to raise the same amount of revenue as the one we have now, how is nearly everyone, as the president implies, going to get a tax break?

They may understand how in Washington, but I sure don't.

Deregulate electric utilities

BY FRANK N. WILNER

The Big Rivers Electric Cooperative, which serves 22 counties in western Kentucky, is in debt for $20 billion to the federal government. The money was used to build unneeded generating plants. The co-op wants its customers to repay the debt.

Public Service Company of Indiana abandoned its $7 billion Marble Hill nuclear plant and seeks massive rate hikes from customers to cover losses.

Public Service Company of New Hampshire saw its Seabrook nuclear plant costs soar from $1 billion to $9 billion. It is now looking to its customers to bail it out.

Between January 1982 and October 1984, according to Edison Electric Institute data, average national electricity rates rose almost 21 percent, about twice as fast as consumer inflation.

Public utility commissions, which regulate electric companies, have permitted utilities to recover from customers virtually all costs associated with poor management decisions. The rationale is straightforward: to provide consumers the quantity and equality of service demanded, utilities must earn a return equal to the cost of obtaining capital in both debt and equity markets. But would electric consumers be required to pay the rates they are currently paying - for a similar quality of service - if greater competition for the sale of electricity existed?

Unlike the corner grocery store, electric utilities are insulated from competition. These vertically integrated firms sell electricity in a precisely defined area, where it is unlawful for any other firm to do so. In exchange for monopoly power, their rate and service levels are regulated. In theory, such regulations will approximate the results which might be expected if competition existed.

Non-regulated utilities might also make bad management decisions resulting in cancelled plants, cost overruns and higher electricity rates. But under existing law, the captive customer of the local electric company bears all costs and risks, and cannot seek another supplier to make a better deal for himself.

Meanwhile, regulated electric utilities are currently enjoying equity returns of 14 percent, and they are demanding more. This is for an industry which has not experienced a bankruptcy in 50 years, which faces absolutely no competition for customers, and which is using, according to Forbes magazine, excess cash to pay higher dividends and invest in manufacturing, land development and high technology.

There is a growing public perception that regulation of electric utilities is not efficient; that deregulation might offer electric consumers lower prices and improved service.

Though generation of electricity has been largely deregulated by Congress, as has transmission between various utilities, the retail sale of electricity remains a government-protected monopoly. Thus, market pressures have not come to bear on the electric company. The consumer is prevented by law from searching for a "better deal."

If the retail sale of electricity were deregulated, each existing electric company would immediately face potential competition from neighboring utilities and new entrants. Such contestable markets would place utilities under severe pressure to achieve, and pass along, the lowest-cost means of providing service.

Consumers might opt to enter long-term supply contracts with existing or new utilities with all future rate increases pegged to a mutually agreed upon index. Local industries, which have greater market power to negotiate contracts, might become secondary suppliers, selling excess or cogenerated power at slightly more than their cost but at a lower price than a homeowner can negotiate with the utility. User cooperatives might be formed to negotiate with both electric utilities and local industries for the "best deal."

Some utilities, the ones which have made bad management decisions, might fail. But bankruptcy law ensures orderly transitions. Physical assets remain in place. Only the owners and management change. A study by the accounting firm of Touche Ross concluded that a bankruptcy of Long Island Lighting Company - plagued by billions of dollars in cost overruns on its Shorham nuclear facility - would cost ratepayers one-tenth of what it would cost for them to fund the waste.

Writing for the Cato Institute, University of Kansas economist Douglas A. Houston takes issue with conventional wisdom which suggests that economies of scale prohibit a free-market approach, or that duplicate distribution systems would be necessary.

With a 14 percent return on equity and virtual total insulations from competition, electric utilities have a vested interest in maintaining the status quo. Those who value competition and the free market over monopoly and inefficiency have an equal incentive to change the status quo.

Wilner, an associate of the Institute for Human Studies, Menlo Park, California, is a transportation economist in Washington and also electric utility stockholder.

Opinion

Some odd friends of free enterprise

Beleaguered defenders of a free-market economic system often believe the system could survive attacks from outright enemies—self-proclaimed socialists and academic dreamers. But those who proclaim devotion to free enterprise—businessmen and conservative politicians—may do more to undermine the system than its enemies.

Get most businessmen talking on the subject and you're like to hear pieties about the freedom to compete and the benefits of a market system. Give many of them a concrete opportunity to use government power to slip a shiv to a potential competitor—either for a share of the marketplace or control of a company—and they'll jump at the chance. They may even say it's in the public interest.

A recent case in point is TWA, the airline company. TWA lost $74.3 million during the first quarter of this year and maverick investor Carl Icahn thinks the company is ripe for a takeover. In March he began buying stock and now controls about 24 percent of the company. He recently made an formal offer to buy the rest for $600 million.

So what does the present management do? Batten down the hatches and prepare for a fight? Start calculating how to take advantage of whatever situation ensues? Stand on its record of prudent management?

It has down a little of all the above, but mainly it has crawled to Big Daddy government to seek protection from the Big Bad Wolf of the marketplace, Mr. Icahn.

C.E. Meyer Jr., TWA's president, has petitioned Congress for legislation that would prevent Icahn from voting stock or managing the airline for at least 90 days if he is successful in gaining control.

The company asked the Department of Transportation to make an evaluation to find Icahn unfit to run an airline (whatever that means) and more recently to issue an emergency order to stop Icahn from doing anything until the esteemed department declares him unfit.

Meyer claims Icahn would siphon cash from TWA and eventually run it into bankruptcy.

Maybe so. But when a company "goes public" by selling stock, as TWA did long ago, it opens itself up to acquisition. Perhaps TWA would survive Icahn, perhaps not.

The point is that it is not up to a government agency to decide which companies shall succeed and which shall fail, which investors are "fit" to run an airline and which aren't. The continuous and subtle interplay of the marketplace is a more reliable and competent method of making such determinations.

If Meyer's request is granted, the government will have gained a little power; the free, private marketplace will have lost a little independence; the notion that government exists to help one competitor against a less politically favored competitor will have been reinforced. The "death of a thousand cuts" that the free-enterprise system has been undergoing for decades will be accelerated.

Ruining doctors' health

Medical training may be hazardous to your health. Most any young medical resident is readily recognizable by the circles under his or her eyes.

Norman Cousins says we are expecting competent medical judgment from physicians who have been sleepless for 32 hours.

Medical internship, he says, is tantamount to a prolonged "hazing." Residency is three years in a meat-grinder.

Do you want to be treated by a physician who is physically and emotionally exhausted?

Cousins says, "The custom of purposely overworking interns has long since outlived its usefulness."

In September of 1984 I referred to the teaching hospital as "the last sweatshop."

Sample my mail since:

"Dear Paul Harvey News: I am the grandmother of a medical student. He works the equivalent of three 40-hour weeks every week.

Never enough sleep and little to eat. I do not believe any doctor can care for a patient properly when he, the doctor, is all but disoriented himself."

"Dear Paul Harvey News: Thank God for your column on physician fatigue. Our son is a third-year med student. We see him so tired he can hardly function. These students pull two 36-hour shifts every week. We are destroying the health of the people who may be in charge of our health."

That writer makes a sharp point. Lack of sleep, exercise and nutrition in medical school become lifelong habits. One-in-five physicians develops problems with drugs, alcohol or burnout.

"Dear Paul Harvey News: My son fell asleep at the wheel after 22 hours on duty. The emergency room doctor says he patches up a lot of sleepy interns."

The Wall Street Journal reports: "Medical residents find work conditions worsening."

The New England Journal of Medicine says: "Interns deprived of sleep made more errors in reading electrocardiograms..."

I will be pursuing this subject further.

Each time I hear of a hospital "mistake" costing somebody's life, I'm going to make it a point to find out how long the person responsible had been on duty.

Some teaching hospitals - if only to disarm malpractice lawyers - are reducing "on-call" from 30 hours to eight hours. But others, with fewer resident slots, are working them harder.

This is not somebody else's problem. If someone you love is a doctor in residence or if someone you love might ever be treated by one - you want him or her to be awake, rested and alert.

Medical training, as is, may be hazardous to your health.

Using a dubious weapon in Nicaragua

By Don Graff

"U.S. presidents seemingly feel compelled to dramatize their opposition to foreign misdeeds, even when the likelihood of changing behavior in the target country seems remote."

I can't imagine why, but that observation jumped out at me in the course of some background reading prompted by the Reagan administration's embargo on trade with Nicaragua.

The statement appears in "Economic Sanctions in Support of Foreign Policy Goals," a study by the Institute for International Economics, a Washington-based research organization. The study makes a number of interesting points on the use of economics as a weapon to further national interests.

Drawing on what it terms "the rich history" of sanctions in the 20th century, the study examines 99 instances to find how and when economic pressure succeeds or fails to achieve desired goals.

It finds that the economic weapon is notably ineffective in confrontations between major powers, such as the American embargoes on grain sales and transfer of pipeline technology to the Soviet Union.

Prospects of success improve considerably, however, when a large country moves against a small one. They improve even when the wielder's goals are limited, such as the settlement of an expropriation dispute or an improvement in human rights conditions.

As the study puts it, "pursuit of modest goals with economic sanctions is likely to be rewarded with at least modest success."

It can be a very different matter, however, when the desired change is not modest but fundamental. Such as, for example, the destabilization of a government, a goal which the study notes is usually the outgrowth of conflicts about other issues and typically involves "companion measures" - specifically "covert action and quasi-military operations."

Whether goals are limited or not, basic to their achievement is the capability to hurt a target country economically. In the case of a trade embargo, the evidence suggests that the country imposing it must account for a quarter or more of the other's total trade to be able to inflict sufficient pain.

Sanctions on the average have met with a fair degree of success. Of the cases studied, 40 percent were judged to have achieved the desired goals. In the case of destabilization, the score is even higher - 50 percent.

Where sanctions fail, the study suggests several reasons. Goals can be elusive and measures employed may be too gentle. Sanctions may create their own antidotes, spurring a target country to successful countermeasures. Other countries may come to its aid. And there may be a backlash in opinion in the sanctioning country and its allies.

The embargo in question would appear to be problematic on several of those counts.

There is also a problem, largely of the administration's own making, with the importance of U.S. trade to Nicaragua. It has declined precipitously in the last several years with the cutting of Nicaragua's sugar quota to the vanishing point and with the placing of import curbs on other products. The U.S. share of Nicaragua's trade is down from almost 50 percent to less than 20 percent - well under the critical pain threshold.

The sanctions study, issued in 1983, predates the embargo but takes note of other economic measures taken by the United States against Nicaragua since 1980. And in that context, another statement that jumps out could prove prophetic of the embargo as well:

"Sanctions thus far applied in a measured and deliberate manner have only unified Nicaragua in common support of the Sandinista government. Domestic opposition to the Sandinistas was suppressed, and Nicaragua has become more resourceful in finding ways around escalating U.S. economic pressure."

Truck driver king of early morning road

By JEFFREY GIRION
Richardson Daily News
RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — Arapaho Road. In the quiet morning darkness a large white street cleaning truck is hugging curbs at 8 mph and Billy Barnes, a veteran "sweeper" for nearly three years, is sitting at the controls.

His left forearm rests on the driver's side window frame, and when Barnes steers the $76,000 Tymco air-sweeper truck with his right hand, a second steering wheel in front of the passenger seat turns as well. The truck, you see, is ambidextrous: driveable from the right or left.

Barnes, 30, unconsciously scans his eyes up and down — ahead to the picturesque and brilliantly lit Arapaho Road, his sweeping assignment one recent night, and then down to the spinning circular brush dislodging dirt and debris from the road surface itself.

Normally he will be listening to country music, which helps keep him alert. But tonight he is explaining a few of the intricacies of street sweeping to an interested rider. There are "tricks" that make the job easier, he says. Like turning on a hydrant to flush a mud-congested curbside.

Barnes is one of a crew of four sweeper drivers, newly organized under the Richardson Parks and Recreation Department this past budget year. Three of the six sweeper trucks patrol every night, tidying up Richardson's main thoroughfares and commercial areas. One sweeper runs on spot calls during the day. (Aside from city-caused spills, the gutters of residential streets, officials say, are left to the responsibility of homeowners.)

Each night, Barnes said, a sweeper is assigned a different route on his midnight to 8 a.m. shift.

Arapaho Road, which spans Richardson's city limits from Coit to Jupiter, presents one of the common problems street sweepers face in the city again and again: seemingly oblivious gravel and cement trucks that drop globs of concrete and loose rock.

"It makes you so damn mad — gravel trucks that drop it (rock) like they don't care," Barnes said, excited and annoyed at the same time.

Part of his continual frustration is having a freshly cleaned street messed up again — sometimes by the time he has returned from his coffee break.

According to law, gravel trucks should have tarpaulins covering their loads but Barnes said many ignore that requirement. Windshields struck by fragments are often the result.

"I think they (the gravel truck drivers) ought to be fined," he said. "If it's not brought to their attention they'll do it as long as they can get away with it."

Barnes said sweepers will take a truck's license plate number if they see them spilling loads. One of the reasons they are so conscious of the nuisance: When, for instance, concrete hardens on the street, sweepers will have to descend from their trucks and break it away using hand tools.

Late at night, when city traffic drops off considerably, is the optimum street cleaning time, Barnes said. He will steer the Tymco street cleaning truck, which is made in Waco and has a Ford chassis and cab, down one median curb and back the other side before cleaning the property-side gutters two lanes away. On this eight-hour shift he will clean only one very long street.

There are still traffic hazards even though the hour is late, he explains. Once two young girls on bicycles rode directly in front of his huge white truck despite its flashing red and white warning signals and yellow beacon. Or cars ride in his lane until they practically crash into the truck's rear storage compartment — which hold six yards of dirt.

"People," he said, "don't always pay attention."

Problems will arise during the night, such as the clogging of one of the hard rubber chutes that collect the road debris blown into them by air. Descending from the sweeper's cab, Barnes gets a garden hoe from the rear and said: "this thing doesn't like to pick up mud."

Ramming the hoe into the chute, Barnes breaks away muck and discovers what has been sucked into the truck's blower, under a hard rubber curtain, is a mud-encrusted Texas license plate, 471-HAP.

Usually he will operate the truck using water sprayers that wet down the road, preventing boiling clouds of dust generated by the spinning steel brushes canted at an angle to the road surface. If the water tank runs dry it is a simple matter for the sweeper, a city vehicle after all, to pull up to the nearest hydrant and take a 170-gallon drink.

Sweeping the streets of Richardson is a job Barnes likes to get right.

Do you know these people?

Dear Abby

Your best gift to Dad is one from the heart

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Next Sunday (June 16) is Father's Day. Many believe Father's Day was invented by the merchants who saw a way to play on the sentiments of the buying public and stimulate business—after all, almost everybody has a father. (Look what Mother's Day has done for the florists, greeting card people and retail merchants!)

Regardless of whose idea it was, it's a good one that has taken hold, and continues to bring joy to dear old Dad.

Last year, my Father's Day column brought a surprising number of requests from editors of church bulletins, newsletters and other publications asking permission to reprint it. Many readers wrote to say that they had put my suggestion to use, and found it more appreciated than any gift they had given Dad.

I was encouraged to run it annually, so here it is:

DEAR ABBY: The week before Father's Day you wrote: "Don't give Dad another tie, shirt or wallet; give him something he will cherish forever—a letter telling him how much he means to you."

Well, I composed a letter on the bus to work that very morning, typed it on my lunch hour and mailed it to my father in a beautiful card that evening. He was actually my stepfather, but he had been more of a father to me than my real father. I knew it would mean a lot to him, especially since he was in the hospital at the time.

He died on July 5, and I'm so glad I wrote that letter. Now I can live with myself, knowing that he knew how I felt about him.

Thank you so very much for making me put my thoughts of love and gratitude on paper. If this letter helps just one person to do what I did, it was worth writing.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR ABBY: A number of years ago, we bought a home in a nice, quiet, high-class neighborhood. Now one of our neighbors has made it look like a cheap flea market! She has one yard sale after another, which brings a lot of people in front of my house as well as hers.

Believe me, she doesn't need the money. The traffic is annoying, and so is the noise. And it looks terrible!

Last summer she started selling vegetables from their small backyard garden, with signs all over the yard. Now I think this is really tacky!

I am annoyed! What can I do outside of filing a complaint with the city? I am told by other neighbors that this enterprising neighbor manages to stay just within the law.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: If your enterprising neighbor manages to stay within the law, there is nothing you can do. Ask a lawyer if a yard sale qualifies as "an attractive nuisance."

***

DEAR ABBY: What should a woman do when a man gives her an engagement ring while proposing marriage, and she doesn't like the ring? Don't get me wrong, I love the man, but I don't care for the ring. Must I wear the ring the rest of my life and not let on that I don't like it? Or should I ask him, as tactfully as possible, to exchange it for a style more in keeping with my taste?

I've heard several opinions. My mother said she'd kill me if I opened my mouth.

CONFUSED IN QUEENS

DEAR CONFUSED: Be honest with him. Tell him you love him and know he wants to please you, so if it's possible to exchange the ring, you'd like to go with him and select one more in keeping with your taste. And tell your mama that Abby says if you're old enough to take a husband, you're old enough to make your own decisions.

WHO ARE THEY? — Members of the Gray County History Book Committee are searching for the names of this family in the photo at left, probably photographed during the late 1800s. Anyone knowing the identity of these people are asked to call 665-2913. The photograph of the two children at right was found among some old papers at The Pampa News, and we feel there is someone out there who would like to have this picture back. Anyone knowing more about this picture may call Dee Dee Laramore at 669-2525.

Doctors discover cause of toxic shock syndrome

BOSTON (AP) — Manufacturers of tampons can reduce the risk of toxic shock syndrome among users by adding magnesium to the product, say researchers who identified absorbance of the mineral by certain tampons as a cause of the rare but dangerous disorder.

Doctors at Harvard Medical School said Wednesday that they had found that two kinds of fibers once used in highly absorbent tampons, polyester foam and polyacrylate rayon, remove magnesium from the vagina.

A low level of the mineral provides an ideal environment for common bacteria to produce a poison that causes the ailment, said the researchers, who provided the first explanation of the link between the fibers and the disease.

"We hope we have found a means for making tampon fibers such that they will not stimulate maximum toxin production," said Dr. Edward H. Kass. "We hope what will come out is a safer product with maximum absorbency."

The study was financed by Tambrands, which makes Tampax tampons, and is being published in the June issue of the Journal of Infectious Diseases.

The illness is caused by toxic shock syndrome toxin 1, a poison produced by an everyday bacterium known as Staphylococcus aureus.

When levels of magnesium are relatively high, the bacteria produce little toxin. But toxin levels increase six to 12 times when magnesium levels are low.

Plan in advance for traveling with pets

NEW YORK (AP) — Planning in advance of your vacation will add to your pet's comfort when traveling by car, advises the Pet Information Bureau, which suggests that short practice drives ahead of time will get the pet accustomed to the sensation of riding in a car.

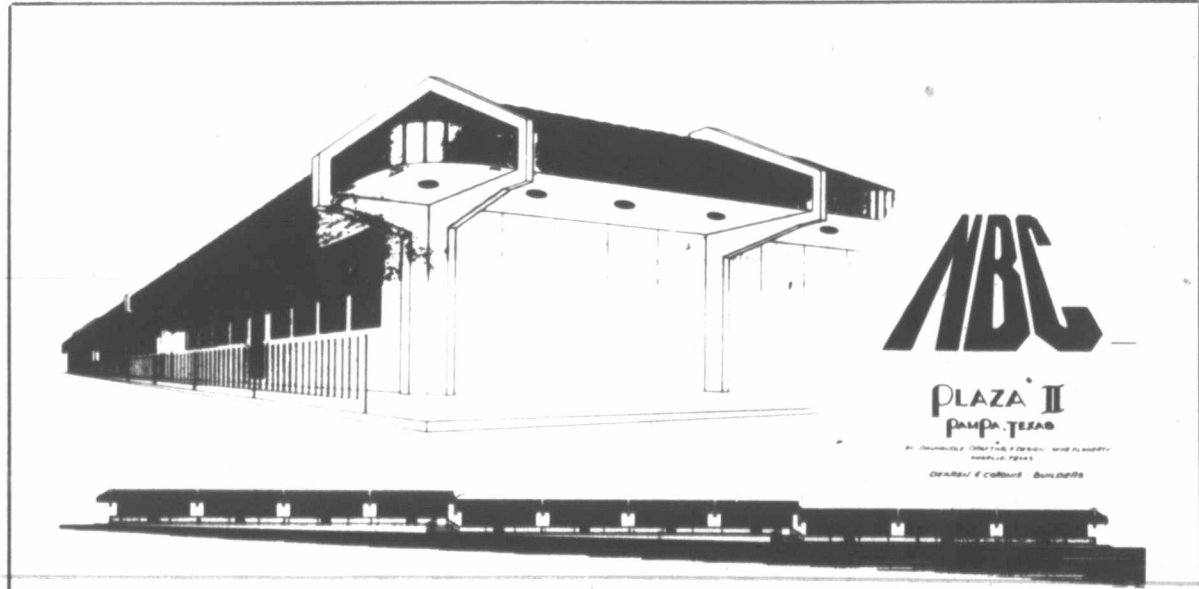

Don't feed your pet just before starting out, but pack food and fresh water for the trip, the bureau advises, and for long-distance drives, make frequent stops.

Pets should never roam unrestrained in a car, because they may distract the driver or accidentally jump out of an open window. They should always be secured with a car seat, leash or harness system. And pets should never be left alone in a car, even if the windows are slightly open for air, since sun and outside heat can quickly turn the car into an oven.

States step in with farm aid

By TOM SEERY
Associated Press Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — From a counseling program in Kansas to interest rate subsidies in Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota, state governments across the Midwest are throwing life preservers to farmers struggling to stay afloat.

Farm aid has always been considered the domain of the federal government, but several states have decided that additional action must be taken to help farmers beset by high interest rates and low crop prices.

"We had to go ahead and do the best we could," said Iowa Senate Majority Leader Lowell Junkins. "We at the state level are a cushion for our agricultural community to fall on."

A three-day farm conference last week in Des Moines that drew 300 officials from 22 Farm Belt states resulted in no formal recommendations for changing national farm policy. The participants met in small groups on a variety of topics, including how to counsel displaced farmers.

One of the most extensive farm-state programs was approved by the Iowa Legislature and awaits Gov. Terry Branstad's expected signature into law.

The Iowa plan, which would begin next spring, would reduce interest rates on farm operating loans, allow farmers to stay on their land after foreclosure and give the governor power to declare a moratorium on farm foreclosures.

The Iowa Legislature created an agency to issue an unlimited amount of bonds to fund the program, in which the state would pay to reduce the interest rate on a farm operating loan by 2 percentage points if the bank handling the loan agreed to a further reduction of 3 percentage points.

A similar plan, designed to reduce interest rates 4 percentage points, was implemented in Minnesota this year.

In Illinois, the Legislature implemented one program and state Treasurer James Donnewald began a second program.

Under the Legislature's program, which was signed into law by Gov. James Thompson, the state appropriated $25 million for interest rate deferrals on loans needed by farmers for this spring's planting. Participating farmers pay only half of the interest rate on 1985 operating loans, with the state paying the remainder. Farmers then repay the state over five years.

Under Donnewald's program, $212 million was committed to a loan program for farmers. A smaller version of the program began in mid-February and expanded as demand for loans increased.

Under the program, the state deposits money, at a lower-than-normal interest rate, in local banks which in turn loan money to farmers at interest rates 2 to 3 percentage points below the going rate.

By late April, the treasurer had deposited $173 million to cover 9,400 loans to farmers.

The Illinois Legislature's program has not drawn such interest. The Illinois Farm Development Authority, charged with administering the program, reported receiving only about 50 applications by mid-May.

Director Ron Bailey, who said he had hoped to help 8,000 to 10,000 farmers, speculated that many farmers may be taking advantage of the good weather to get crops in the ground and will wait until the June 15 deadline to sign up.

The Minnesota program also has had only limited acceptance. Of $25 million appropriated, it is now estimated that only $10 million will be used.

AG gets orders against overloads

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox said Wednesday the state has obtained temporary restraining orders against 13 trucking companies for overloaded trucks.

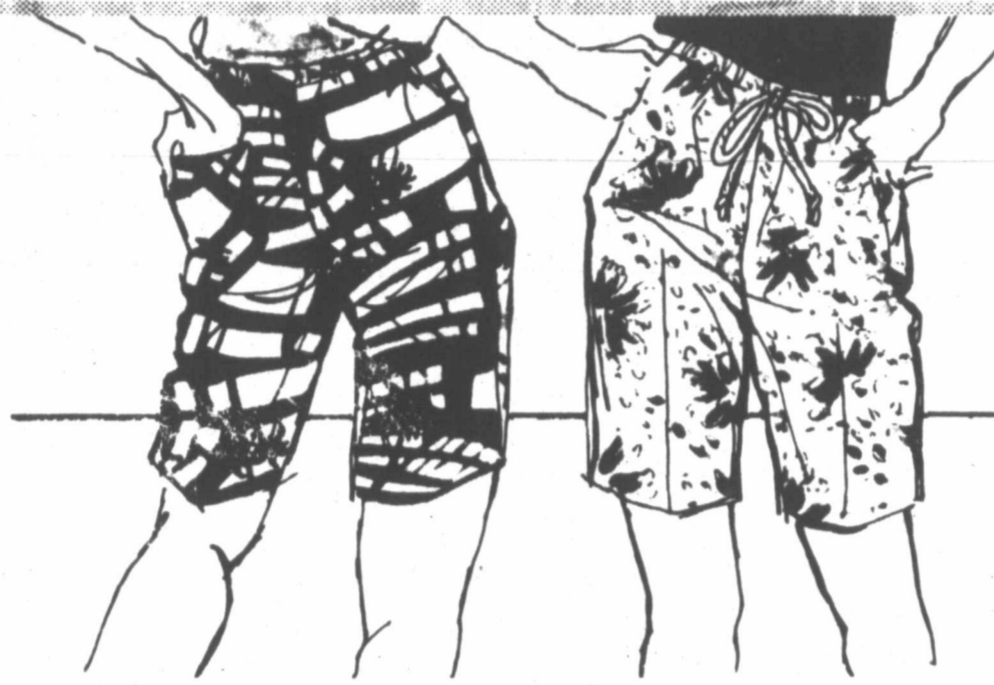

Mattox said the suits were filed Tuesday in an Austin state district court against Joe Brown Co., Ardmore; Canyon Trucking Co., Laredo; Charter Crude Oil Co., Dallas; Fish Oil Well Servicing, Beeville; Heidt Brothers Trucks Inc., Corpus Christi; Houston Shell and Concrete Co., Houston; Howard Trucking Co., Houston; Hudson Brothers Mining Co., Rusk; Johnson's Trucking Co., Inola, Okla.; Kelworth Trucking Co., Poteau, Okla.; Melton Truck Lines Inc., Dallas; Charlie Myers Trucking Inc., Wichita Falls; and Texas Trucking Co., Beeville.

Mattox said that the drive against overloaded trucks begun in November 1984 by his department and the Department of Public Safety has resulted in 37 lawsuits filed. Mattox said a total of $685,590 has been collected.

SPECIAL PATIENT — Dr. Buddy Gesecke, left, supervises the anesthesiology of Demba, a 200 pound female lowland gorilla at Parkland Hospital in Dallas Thursday. Demba, normally a resident of the Dallas zoo, underwent an exam by a team of medical specialists to learn why she is unable to become pregnant. (AP Laserphoto)

Hospital gets gorilla for patient

DALLAS (AP) — When motherhood eluded Demba the gorilla after three years of mating at a zoo with a male ape named Fubo, officials checked her into a human hospital to find out why.

The diagnosis: blockage in the Fallopian tubes, which carry the egg from the ovaries to the uterus.

A team of medical specialists spent almost two hours Thursday examining the reproductive system of the 14-year-old, 200-pound ape. Their diagnosis was bad news for Dallas Zoo officials, said zoo spokesman Bill Stewart.

"The staff has to go back to the drawing board to discuss our alternatives, if there are any," Stewart said. He said it was not clear if the problem could be remedied.

"There are only a few thousand gorillas left in Africa and their natural habitats are shrinking rapidly."

The animal is on the endangered species list and the number of gorillas born in captivity is declining by about 5 percent to 10 percent a year, he said.

Demba has lived for the past three years with Fubo, who has been on loan for breeding from Cheyenne Zoo in Colorado Springs, Colo. But their efforts at producing a family had been fruitless.

After being sedated Thursday, Demba was transported with a park police escort from the Dallas Zoo and then wheeled on a stretcher into a ground floor entrance of Parkland Memorial Hospital.

During the procedure, known as a hysterosalpingogram, dye is injected into the Fallopian tubes. If the dye spills into the pelvic area, the tubes are open. If not, the tubes are blocked and the patient is unable to conceive.

Tubal blockage is usually the reason most human females cannot conceive, said Dr. George Curry, chief of diagnostic radiology at the hospital. He said blockage is usually caused by infection.

The procedure usually takes an hour and requires two people, but Demba got special treatment.

Her examination was staffed by five radiologists, two anesthesiologists, a surgeon, a zoo veterinarian and several other members of the zoo staff.

Curry said the only complication Demba suffered was a pneumonia

Du Pont using new insecticide process

LA PORTE, Texas (AP) — Du Pont Co. announced it is producing an insecticide using a new process that will eliminate the shipment and storage of methyl isocyanate, a lethal element that leaked from a plant in India and killed more than 2,000 people.

"We have made what was already a safe process even safer," said R.D. Stewart, manager of Du Pont's La Porte plant, the only U.S. facility where the insecticide Lannate is produced.

The original process used to manufacture Lannate required the shipment of a tank car of methyl isocyanate, or MIC, each week, Stewart said Thursday. He said MIC was shipped to the plant in specially built rail cars from the Union Carbide plant in Institute, W.Va.

MIC is the lethal element that killed hundreds in December when it leaked from a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India.

"At any one time we were storing approximately 250,000 pounds of MIC in above-ground, stainless steel tanks," Stewart said. "With our new process, we have eliminated the need to transport and store MIC."

Lannate, used by farmers worldwide to protect about 70 types of crops against as many as 125 different insects, now is being made by a process that involves a continuous, "close-coupled" system that produces MIC as a chemical intermediate that is instantly consumed, Stewart said.

The MIC is not isolated as a separate raw material, but is converted into Lannate insecticide as it is produced, he said.

There is never more than two pounds of MIC in existence at the plant at one time, Stewart said.

Using the new system, air and the chemical compound monomethyl formamide flow into a reactor, where they are combined in a chemical reaction that produces MIC and water.

The water is removed and the MIC flows to another reactor through a seamless, stainless steel pipe. There, the MIC is consumed in a chemical process which produces Lannate. There is no MIC in the final product.

Stewart said scientists have been working since 1977 to develop the new system. It was perfected shortly before the Bhopal accident at a cost of about $15 million, he said.

Union demanding prison probe

AUSTIN (AP) — In the wake of a prison guard's murder, the Texas State Employees Union has asked prison officials to investigate the selection process by which inmates become trustees.

In a telegram to Raymond Procnier, director of the Texas Department of Corrections, the union also asked that the hiring and training of new prison guards be speeded up.

"The tragic death of Officer Minnie Houston at Ellis 1 Unit was the direct result of having to work by herself," the union said.

A Walker County grand jury on Wednesday indicted Ramon Mata Jr., 36, who was serving 30 years for a Pecos County murder, on charges of capital murder.

Marine's role in Lebanon lacked sense of purpose

An AP News Analysis
By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States involvement in Lebanon proved a fiasco because, some experts say, the Reagan administration was never sure what it wanted to accomplish there.

A grim chapter in the Lebanon crisis was drawing to a close this week with the withdrawal of the last of the Israeli soldiers who invaded Lebanon three years ago on June 6, 1982.

It was a chapter that cost the lives of 265 American servicemen, all but a few in the devastating terrorist explosion that demolished the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut on Oct. 23, 1983.

That explosion marked the beginning of the end, but the seeds of the setback were sowed much earlier when the administration proved unable to agree on why the Marines were there or what the United States was trying to accomplish.

One former administration official who was intimately involved in the American policy-making during the period lamented that the decision to send the Marines was controversial from the start, with Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger strongly opposed, but overruled by Secretary of State George P. Shultz and President Reagan.

"The most important lesson from Lebanon was that you have to have consensus among the key players in the executive branch with a lot of support on Capitol Hill," said the former official, who was interviewed on condition he not be identified.

In Lebanon, Congress only reluctantly went along with the decision to send a Marine peacekeeping force in 1982.

An AP News Analysis

Lawmakers complained that the purpose was unclear, and they were quick to demand the withdrawal of the Marines as soon as they became seriously endangered.

It's a lesson that could have application to the administration's policy in Nicaragua. The administration has repeatedly pressured a reluctant Congress to approve funds for the anti-government insurgents called Contras. One of several complaints of congressional critics is that the administration has failed to spell out in a precise fashion what it hopes to achieve.

Administration officials insisted the Marines were needed as peacekeepers to show support for the government of President Amin Gemayel. But there was no clear way for them to be effective, and they became targets of rival militias who viewed them as taking the government's side.

William Quandt, a Mideast expert at the Brookings Institution, said the Israeli withdrawal from the Shouf — an action that increased the danger to the Marines — was a clear signal that Israel knew it couldn't achieve its goal of securing a stable pro-Israeli government in Lebanon. But still the Marines stayed, amid mounting chaos.

Quandt agreed with other experts that "the simplest conclusion is we don't send in a tiny task force to accomplish major military-political ends. We either send in a large force, or be careful of deploying any force at all."

But he said he doesn't know whether any lessons were learned.

Is Reagan's tax plan effective?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When a president advertises his tax proposals as fairer and simpler he is inviting fair comment and criticism.

Consider his advocacy of higher taxes for some businesses and lower taxes for many individuals. Is it fair?

That really isn't the proper question suggests Murray Weidenbaum, who used to be chairman of President Reagan's council of economic advisers. More to the point, he indicates, would be questions regarding its effectiveness.

Weidenbaum, now director of the Center for the Study of American Business at Washington University in St. Louis, comments that business doesn't pay taxes — it merely collects them.

So why tax business? Because, he suggests, it may be politically attractive to do so. There are, of course, many more individuals than businesses. And while businesses can lobby, they cannot vote.

"Only people pay taxes," says Weidenbaum.

The contention is that higher taxes simply become a cost of doing business, which is then passed on to people in the form of higher prices. In effect, therefore, to tax business is to tax the people, albeit indirectly.

Bruce Bartlett, senior fellow at The Heritage Foundation, a Washington-based conservative think-tank, agrees. Higher business taxes, he says, "unwisely perpetuate the idea that taxes on business are not paid by individuals."

As a result, he says, "the Reagan proposal is not a tax cut at all, but merely a rearrangement of the tax burden so that some people and some businesses will pay less and others will pay more."

Leonard Greene, president of The Institute for Socioeconomic Studies, a private research organization in White Plains, N.Y., comes right to the point.

"The Reagan tax reform proposal is a misnomer," he says. "It is not much of a reform: it does not make income taxes appreciably simpler, nor does it make them much more fair."

Is it fair, he asks, to cut funds for school programs while continuing aid for building bridges?

Greene's argument goes like this:

Termination of state and local income tax deductibility, proposed by the White House, would cause people to clamp down on state income taxes.

THE KIRK RINGERS

Kirk Ringers to present concert

The public is invited to view the Kirk Ringers, one of America's best known bell choirs, in a free concert Sunday at 7 p.m. in the First Christian Church of Pampa.

Coming from the First Christian Church of Wichita Falls, the Kirk Ringers' repertoire represents a colorful variety in both musical style and playing technique. Solos, duets and small ensemble numbers are combined with the excitement of the full choir playing such numbers as "Malaguena," "Ritual Fire Dance" and "Sabre Dance," among others.

Surprisingly, many of the bell choir members have little previous musical training. They are primarily students in Wichita Falls high schools, although a few college-age alumni of the choir fill in from time to time. The only requisite for membership is willingness to attend rehearsals regularly. The handbell choir, with its annual national tour, offers these young people opportunities for both personal and musical development.

Brent Stratten, director of the Kirk Ringers, has been a minister of music at First Christian Church in Wichita Falls for 31 years. He holds a master's degree in organ performance from Midwestern State University. In addition, he has studied at Oklahoma University, the Royal School of Church Music, London, and the Orff Institute of the Mozarteum, Salzburg, Austria.

Join Us In Worship IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

"I was glad when they said unto me,
LET US GO INTO THE HOUSE OF THE LORD"

"... in thy presence is fulness of joy ..."

Open up your heart, sing praises joyfully unto the Lord. The feeling of being and sharing with others in worship is at its highest in the Lord's house. Hear a message from God's dedicated servant. Know the satisfaction of praying to the Lord with others. Attend church regularly and ... "Praise the Lord: for the Lord is good: sing praises unto His name; for it is pleasant."

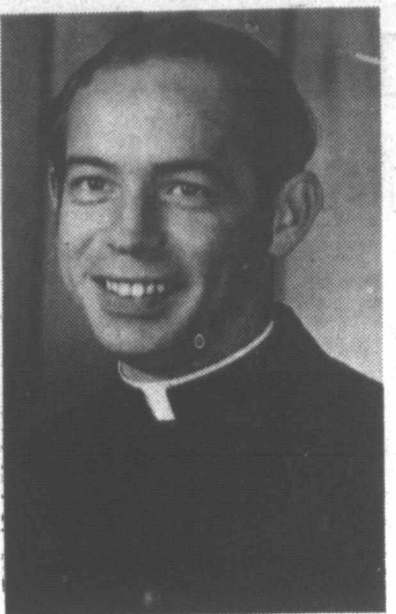

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

REV. GARY SIDES

St. Vincent to receive new pastor

Rev. Gary Sides has been appointed pastor of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church in Pampa effective July 1.

Father Sides, 42, has been pastor of Sts. Peter and Paul's Church in Dumas for the past seven years.

At St. Vincent's, he succeeds Rev. Joseph Stabile, C.M., as pastor. The appointment was made by Bishop L. T. Matthiesen of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Amarillo.

In Dumas, Father Sides also had the care of Christ the King Church in Sunray and Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Cactus. The former U.S. Army sergeant also served as dean of the Borgery deanery of the Catholic diocese.

With the appointment of Father Sides, diocesan clergy resume the care of St. Vincent's after 45 years. During that time, priests of the Vincentian religious community were in charge.

Father Brendan Sherry, also a diocesan priest, is caring for St. Vincent's during June, after which he will become pastor of Sacred Heart Church, Spearman; Immaculate Conception Church, Perryton, and St. Peter's Church, Booker.

In Canadian, Father James Hutzler will become the new pastor on July 1. He formerly served as pastor of St. Anthony's Church at Dalhart.

New area pastor ordained deacon

MIDLAND - Stephen Fletcher Venable, recently appointed pastor for the Mobeetie and Kelton United Methodist Church charge, was one of nine United Methodist deacons ordained this week in Midland.

Nine elders and nine deacons were ordained Wednesday night during the Ordination Service at the Northwest Texas Annual Conference meeting at First United Methodist Church in Midland.

The ordination process is a major step in the ordained ministry of the United Methodist Church.

Bishop Louis W. Schowengerdt of the Northwest Texas and New Mexico Conferences led the ceremonies, assisted by the superintendents of the seven districts within the Conference.

Venable, a new pastor in the Pampa District, was ordained a deacon, one of the first steps in the United Methodist Church ministry.

The annual meeting of the ministers and lay leaders from Northwest Texas concluded Thursday evening.

Local churches set joint vacation school

Zion Lutheran Church and St. Matthew's Episcopal Church will be holding a joint Vacation Bible School to be held June 17-21 in Zion's new facilities at 1200 Duncan.

The school will meet daily from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Registration will open at 8:30 a.m. on Monday, June 17.

Theme this year will be "Share the Good News of Jesus." Bible lessons, games, crafts, songs and refreshments will be presented in sessions during the week.

The closing program will be held at Zion Lutheran at 7 p.m. Thursday, June 20, with the school concluding on Friday, June 21.

Methodist youth choir to give concert Sunday

The youth choir from Colonial Hills United Methodist Church in San Antonio will give a free concert at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in Pampa.

The concert will be presented in the sanctuary of the First United Methodist Church at Foster and Ballard Sts.

Dr. Richard H. Whitwam, pastor, invited the public to attend the special concert.

Have you hugged your lawyer today? New state bar prexy wants to know

By SHEILA ALLEE
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lawyers don't expect to be loved — they just want a little respect, says the new president of the State Bar of Texas.

And winning that respect will be one of Smith's main goals when he takes over Saturday.

Smith, a civil lawyer and senior partner in the San Antonio firm of Groce, Locke & Hebdon, says he wants to do a little reshaping of the legal profession's image during his term.

"The public thinks a lot of people get off on legal technicalities and blame the courts and the lawyers," he said. "But it's the lawyers' responsibility to represent them (clients) no matter how bad they may be."

"It's our ethical responsibility to find and use legal loopholes," said Smith, 53.

Smith, a lawyer for 28 years, said, "It's not realistic to expect the legal profession to be loved by the public."

But he added, "It's vital to create a better image of what we do and hopefully gain a greater respect."

Lawyers, he said, "absorb much of the hostility of the community. We represent the worst people. The most despised on earth."

Smith, who steps into the presidency at the state bar convention in Dallas Saturday, said one of his top priorities in the coming year will be to convince the 44,500 members of the Texas bar to approve a referendum requiring continuing education classes.

The proposal, which goes to a vote in November, would force the state's lawyers to take 15 hours of continuing legal education each year or risk losing their licenses.

"This doesn't mean the lawyers of Texas are incompetent. But the laws are becoming more and more complex and there a many more laws" to know, Smith said.

Already, 15 other states require such continuing education for attorneys, he said.

Smith said he will spend much of his time campaigning at local bar association meetings for the program. He also will be promoting a new project which he says could provide millions of dollars in new legal aid money in Texas.

The project, known as IOLTA — Interest On Lawyer Trust Accounts — would utilize interest money earned on funds attorneys hold for their clients for brief periods.

Money from real estate deals, settlements from personal injury lawsuits and other legal transactions routinely are held in interest bearing trust accounts held by law firms.

Under IOLTA, participating law firms would agree to contribute the interest to one fund. Money from that fund would be used to provide legal services for the poor.

The need for such services is growing rapidly, especially in light of federal cutbacks of legal aid money, Smith said.

"There are thousands upon thousands of people here in Bexar County that need legal services but can't pay for it — hundreds of thousands statewide. It's reached crisis proportions," Smith said.

Detoxification center relies on drug to dry out drinkers

By SHEILA ALLEE
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — For more than 40 years, sleeping at bus stops, living in the streets and working odd jobs to earn enough money to buy booze was a way of life for Alfredo Castellano.

But a year and a half ago, the 57-year-old San Antonio man admitted he was an alcoholic and checked himself into the substance abuse unit at the San Antonio State Hospital.

Doctors there put him on a drug known as Antabuse, a chemical that causes patients to become violently ill if they take a drink.

Castellano has been on the drug — and sober — ever since.

"I'm glad I'm sober. I feel a lot better. I can smell the grass, see the flowers grow," said Castellano, a compact, crisply dressed man.

Castellano has been taking Antabuse under the supervision of Dr. Ronald McNichol, a psychiatrist and director of the state hospital's substance abuse unit.

McNichol, despite what he calls strong opposition among the medical profession and widespread ignorance, is a fervent believer in the use of Antabuse.

The state hospital is the largest user of the drug in the state and one of the largest in the nation, McNichol says.

For the alcoholic, the drug "buys sober time," he says, until the drinker can dry out and begin changing habits.

The San Antonio State Hospital is the third detoxification unit where McNichol has relied heavily on Antabuse to treat patients.

He began working with the drug 20 years ago at a state hospital in Arkansas. He continued its use while treating hundreds of alcoholics at the Bexar County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Center in San Antonio.

In 1981, McNichol introduced Antabuse at the state hospital here, where a hundred patients at a time are under treatment.

"It just sounded to me like an awfully practical way of stopping drinking," he said.

Alcoholics who are on Antabuse take three of the aspirin-like pills a week. If they succumb to temptation and take a drink, within 15 minutes their blood pressure shoots up.

Within another 15 minutes their blood pressure drops and they begin to vomit.

"In 15 minutes they think they are dying. In 30 minutes they wish they could," McNichol said.

Antabuse has gotten a bad reputation among doctors, McNichol said, because it is not discussed in medical school.

And the Physician's Desk Reference, a doctor's bible on drugs, lists some alarming side effects from the drug.

One is blindness. Another is nerve damage. Also possible side effects are skin rashes and drowsiness.

But McNichol said he has never seen a case of blindness and has encountered only one incidence of nerve damage due to Antabuse.

McNichol, who has researched the drug and has written a book on it, said he knows of eight deaths in the past 20 years because of the use of Antabuse.

He points out that thousands die each year from alcoholism.

Asked if Antabuse is addictive, McNichol said, "I wish it were."

Antabuse has not been endorsed by the National Council on Alcoholism, Alcoholics Anonymous or the American Medical Association.

But Wayne Bode, a recovering alcoholic and a counselor at the state hospital, said, "AA was strictly against Antabuse for a long time. They thought it was a crutch, another substance to abuse."

But now the organization offers no overt opposition to use of the drug.

NCA spokeswoman Lesley Lull of New York said her organization takes no official position on Antabuse.

But she said, "We tend not to promote aversion therapy."

McNichol points out Antabuse alone will not bring an alcoholic to recovery. Therapy, AA meetings, church and other supportive measures must be part of the treatment, he said.

McNichol is not alone among psychiatrists — at least in Texas — in his belief in the use of Antabuse.

Dr. Mary Bubliss, a psychiatrist in Plainview, said she has used the drug on patients off and on for 30 years.

"The wonderful thing about it — it's the patient's own hand putting it in their own mouth. It's a device for reinforcing the person's own decision," she said.

McNichol says as many as 200,000 people are on Antabuse at one time in the nation.

"More people would be free of alcohol if Antabuse were more widely used. It's been grossly underused for years," he said.

Eternal Prince surprise entry in Saturday's Belmont Stakes

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The surprise entry of speedy colt Eternal Prince has provided Saturday's Belmont Stakes with a new element for its 117th running.

Only two others have been to the other two legs of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown — Chief's Crown, the beaten favorite in the first two legs, and Tank's Prospect, the Preakness winner. They are among the favorites.

Eternal Prince, whose principal owners are Brian Hurst and New York Yankees boss George Steinbrenner, set blazing fractions in the Preakness only to have Chief's Crown overtake him at the quarter-pole. Tank's Prospect caught Chief's Crown at the wire in record time.

"Tank's Prospect and Chief's Crown can beat my horse provided they make me run fast early," Hurst admitted Thursday after the post position draw.

Both Hurst and trainer Butch Lenzini are looking for realistic fractions if Eternal Prince goes to the front as expected in the 1 1/2-mile Belmont.

Hurst said the colt was entered in the Belmont "because of the absence of overwhelming speed."

Chief's Crown, the early 5-2 favorite, likes to lay on or close to the lead.

He said the Wood Memorial winner would benefit from the soft track at Belmont after a left shin bruise had bothered him on the hard Pimlico track.

Post-Preakness indications were that Eternal Prince would be rested until the Travers at Saratoga in August.

Hurst also said there was a possibility that Eternal Prince would scratch from the Belmont and await the June 15 Ohio Derby at Thistledown.

But Lenzini indicated that Eternal Prince would run at Belmont Park.

"All we have to do to win the Ohio Derby is show up and we'll win it," Lenzini said. "This'll be more fun."

Richard Migliore, replaced as Eternal Prince's rider after finishing 12th in the Kentucky Derby, again was named to ride the colt, who was listed at 5-1 in the early line.

"I'm happy to get a second chance," Migliore said. "I ride here every day and I'm happy to be a part of the Belmont."

Chief's Crown was the slight early choice over the field of 11 3-year-olds, followed by Tank's Prospect and the Woody Stephens-trained entry of Stephan's Odyssey and Creme Fraiche, all 3-1.

Another entry, El Basco and Purple Mountain, both owned by Jacques Wimpfeimer, was rated at 6-1.

Completing the field were Fast Account and Important Business, 15-1 each; Cutlass Reality, 20-1, and Southern Sultan, 30-1.

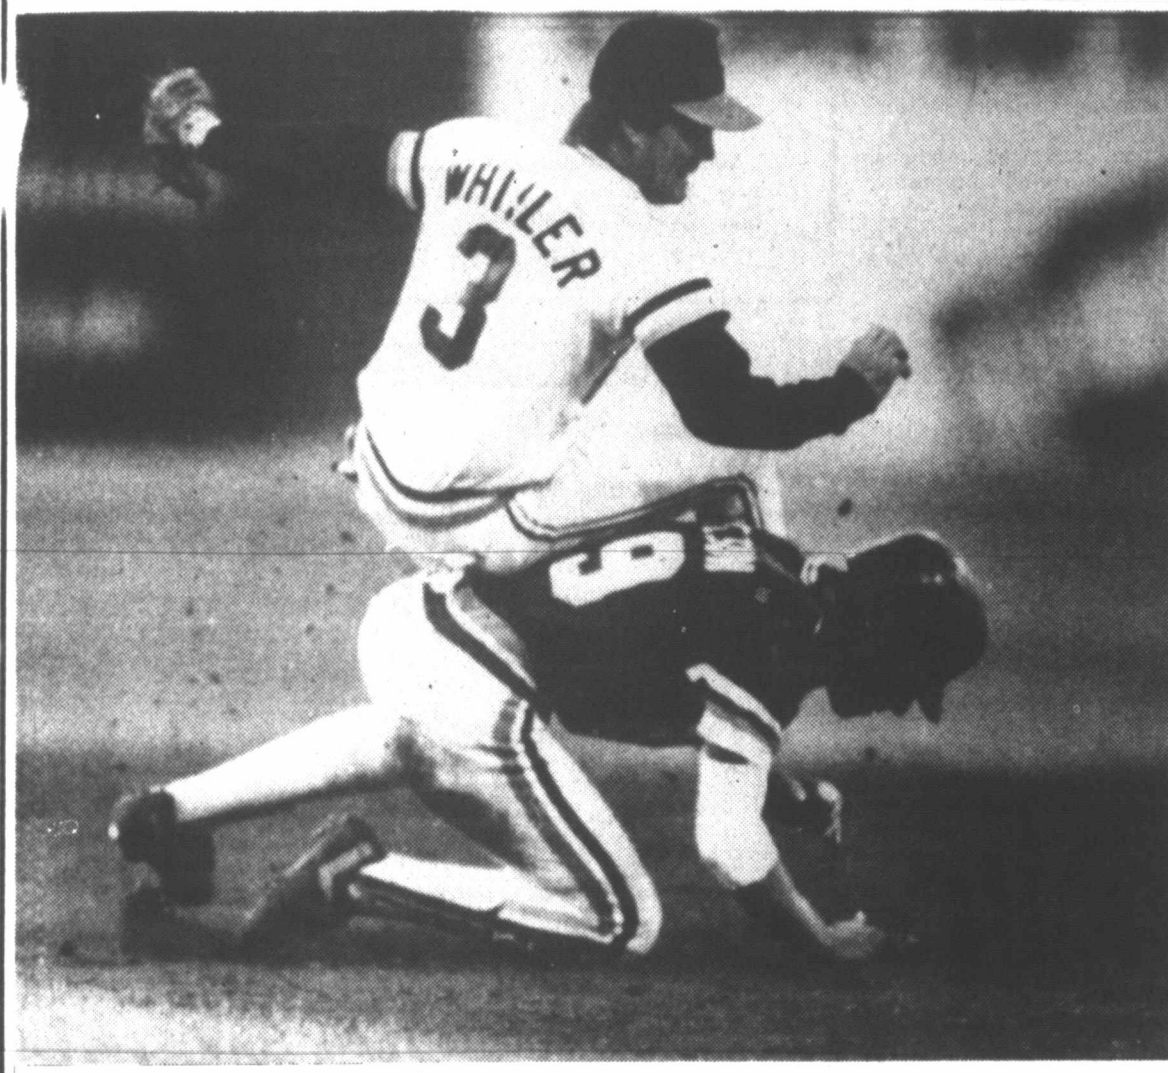

Stephens, a 71-year-old Hall of Famer who won the past three Belmonts (Conquistador Cielo, Caveat and Swale), will be shooting for an unprecedented fourth straight with his entry.

"Never dreamed I'd have the chance," said Stephens, whose main contender is Stephan's Odyssey. "I give myself a chance of winning."

Chief's Crown had the rail position position. Then came Tank's Prospect, Southern Sultan, Fast Account, Purple Mountain, El Basco, Stephan's Odyssey, Creme Fraiche, Important Business, Cutlass Reality and Eternal Prince.

Important Business was a supplemental entry at a cost of $32,500.

If all 11 start, the Belmont will be worth $512,900.

Stanford, OSU eliminated from college world series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jeff King said pregame talks from Coach Norm DeBrynn and past and present players were enough to awaken sleeping Arkansas bats in the NCAA College World Series losers' bracket.

The fourth-ranked Razorbacks pounded out 12 hits, four from King, in a 10-4 whipping of top-ranked Stanford Thursday night. In the second contest, the noisy bats of Miami and Oklahoma State were nearly put to sleep in a 2-1 victory for Miami.

Arkansas' offense had been relatively silent in its first two games of the CWS. A 1-0 win in 14 innings in the first game last Friday was followed by a 5-4 loss to Mississippi State Monday night.

"We had a team meeting before the game and it woke me up, and I think it woke the whole team up," said King, who belted his 17th homer of the year with nobody on in the seventh inning Thursday.

Mark Jackson hit a three-run homer in the fifth to stake the 5-1-14 Razorbacks to an 8-1 lead. Arkansas scored five runs in the fourth on six hits and an error off

Stanford starter Jeff Ballard, 14-4.

"Coach told us it was a privilege to be here and if we could win a couple more games we could play for the championship. Then (relief pitcher Tim) Deitz spoke and said a player from the 1979 team called and said he could tell by watching us we were flat. So he said we'd better get going and get excited."

The player from Arkansas' 1979 CWS team that finished second was Mark Brumble.

The talk apparently worked and sent Stanford home with a 47-15 record. Kevin Campbell, 10-5, picked up the win for Arkansas.

Arkansas advances to Saturday's elimination round against Texas, which will play 50-13 Mississippi State in the winners' bracket finale Friday night. The Razorbacks have won four of five regular-season meetings with the 62-12, third-ranked Longhorns.

Miami's Kevin Sheary and Ric Raether combined for a four-hitter in sidelining second-ranked Oklahoma State.

Sheary, now 6-4, allowed only one run, a Carlos Diaz homer to right-center in the fifth, while Raether picked up his 20th save on the season to shut the door on the power-hitting Cowboys through the final two innings.

Chris Magno provided the game-winner with a two-out single with 'no runners on in the eighth. Rick Richardi provided the earlier run with a leadoff triple in the sixth and scored on an infield error.

"It was a little bit away. I was choking up, just trying to make contact," Magno said of his two-out single to bring home Calvin James with the game-winning run.

Asked if he ever expected a 2-1 game from the slugging teams, Miami Coach Ron Fraser said, "That never entered my mind. It was just a question of trying to get a good game out of Sheary. We just wanted him to keep it close for Raether."

Raether opened the ninth against Oklahoma State's record-setting slugger Pete Incaviglia and struck out the Cowboy junior.

"I figured if we were going to get beat, we were going to get beat with our best," Fraser said.

Spinks stops MacDonald

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Michael Spinks easily dispatched Diamond Jim MacDonald, the latest pretender to his light heavyweight crown, then talked confidently of beginning a new career as a heavyweight with a fight against undefeated Larry Holmes.

Spinks knocked MacDonald down three times Thursday night before referee Davey Pearl moved in to stop the contest at 1:30 of the eighth round to retain his undisputed light heavyweight title and keep his unbeaten record intact.

He then issued a challenge to Holmes, who promptly relayed to Spinks a $700,000 offer to fight him in August.

"That just told you Larry don't want to fight," Spinks said of the offer, less than the $1 million he was offered to fight Holmes last month.

Spinks may have little choice but to meet Holmes, having run out of marketable opponents in the light heavyweight division.

The champion received $150,000 for his latest defense, the 10th of his career, and made it known after the bout that he had to move up from the 175-pound division to keep his career going.

"I'm not No. 1, I'm number zero because there is nobody that can keep up with me in the light heavyweight division and never has been," Spinks said.

That leaves only a fight against Holmes.

Lendl advances to French Open finals

PARIS (AP) — Defending champion Ivan Lendl, not letting the wind and rain bother him, swept aside Jimmy Connors 6-2, 6-3, 6-1 today to advance to the final of the French Open tennis championships.

On Sunday, Lendl will face the winner of today's second semifinal between top-seeded John McEnroe and Sweden's Mats Wilander, the 1982 winner here.

In what may be his last appearance at Roland Garros

Stadium, Connors was trying to reach the final of the French Open for the first time in his career. The 32-year-old left-hander, four times a semifinalist, had his attacking game blunted by the 25-year-old Czech.

Tickets available for volleyball

The "Four Continents" championship series of Men's International Volleyball will be held June 22-23 at the Amarillo Civic Center.

Bulgaria meets Korea at 5:30 p.m. June 22 in the opening match, followed by the U.S. Men's Squad versus Japan.

The United States won the Olympics title last year.

The losers play at 2 p.m. June 23, followed by the winners.

Tickets are $10 for courtside and $7 for others. Pampa High Volleyball Coach Phil Hall has tickets for sale and he can be contacted at 665-7829.

Players still needed for Babe Ruth 16-18 league

Players are still needed to fill the rosters of the Babe Ruth 16-18 Baseball League, which started play last Sunday.

The league consists of three clubs from Pampa, two from Dumas, and one from Perryton Canadian and Canyon. Players interested in joining the league may call league president Gary Graves at 665-2244.

Ballgames are played on Sundays (doubleheaders) and Wednesday nights.

Pampa Two and Pampa Three have lost twinbills to Canyon and Dumas respectively in action so far.

In recent t-ball action, the Giants and Plumbco, both unbeaten met, with Plumbco winning by a 23-20 margin.

Little league roundup

Tyson Beck literally did it all. He held Dixie Parts to only three hits and his two-out double in the bottom of the sixth inning scored teammate Rudy Martinez with the tying run. Moments later, he scored the winning run on a wild pitch as Duncan Insurance came from behind to win, 11-10, and take possession of first place in the second half of National Little League play with a 3-0 record.

Beck walked 12, hit one batter and struck out nine in defeating Dixie for the second time. Martinez had three hits, including a triple for Duncan.

Jeff Lamp won his third game without a loss as Glo-Valve Service avenged an earlier defeat and blasted Dunlap Industrial, 16-4. Matt Daigle was charged with the loss.

Brad Smillie scored three runs, had three hits and had a run batted in for Glo-Valve to share top hitting honors with teammate Nacho Vargas, who scored two runs and had three hits, including a double and triple and five runs batted in.

Glo-Valve is now 2-0 for the second half and plays first-half winner Moose Lodge at 8 p.m. tonight.

THREE STRIKES AND YOU'RE OUT!!!

It's one of the rules by which baseball has been played forever. And that third strike is fatal. Lost in the current unrest in baseball is the fact that the threatened strike sometime this summer would be the third in baseball history. Whether or not such an occurrence would be fatal only history will determine. But there is no question it is one of the several diseases infecting The National Pastime right now.

STRIKE ONE was in 1972. It was a 13-day affair that delayed the start of that season by 10 days, resulting in the cancellation of 86 regular-season games. When play finally started, both sides claimed victory, but in reality everyone lost. Attendance was off more than two million customers as public reaction was overwhelmingly against the players. Team harmony was divided, with many big-name players openly criticizing the walkout, and before the season was to end a total of 10 managerial changes took place, club ownership changes took place, and even some ballclubs moved. Several veteran players lost chances at records, in the asterisk-marked season.

STRIKE TWO was in 1981. It began on June 12 and ran for 50 days, wiping out one-third of the major league schedule, a season quite properly called The Year That Baseball Management and Fans Alike Would Prefer to Forget. Many veteran players like Carl Yastrzemski, Gaylor Perry, and even Pete Rose, had career goals stifled by the cancellation of 712 games.

Emotionally, again the rifts between players and management and fans and players grew wider and deeper. An estimated $116 million dollars in gate revenues was lost. And the economic damage to major league cities and ballpark area businesses is virtually unassessable. The New York City comptroller said a conservative estimate for that two-team metropolis was $8.4 million; Cincinnati's mayor figured it at $900,000 per game not played; and totally ignored in the entire strike mechanism was the poor old taxpayer that didn't even give a hoot about baseball but was still being taxed for a municipal stadium to house the non-performing ballclub.

A couple of months ago, in late March, I walked into Giant Stadium in Phoenix at mid-morning, expecting to see the Oakland A's down on the playing field. Instead, I found them (almost all of them, at least) sitting in the shaded area in the grandstand behind home plate, in their game uniforms, being lectured by Don Fehr, the acting executive director of the players association. And it was just that, a lecture. Fehr was doing everything he could to inflame those minds against their bosses. Ten days earlier, Fehr had received the response from the owners to his demand to see team financial records. Lee MacPhail, president of the Players Relations Committee and the owners' spokesman, had presented documentation of losses estimated to reach as high as $155 million by 1988 unless some immediate changes were made. Fehr was berating MacPhail's response to the players, who unquestioningly listened, on management's time, in management's facilities.

I was finally politely requested to move out of the area by former Baltimore Oriole all-star shortstop Mark Berlinger, an aide to Fehr. Berlinger has been right in the middle of each of the previous strikes also, as a player representative. "This is a private meeting," he intoned, as he asked if we would please move out of earshot, ignoring the players were sitting in my ticketed seat. But coupled with what I already knew and felt about the negotiations, my mind was already decided. The arguments are both ways, and reflect actions of stupid owners and greedy players willing to take full advantage of that stupidity.

The owners are unable to legislate their own economic sanity, so they are trying to force it with a salary cap, ala the NBA.

The players, who want to get their heavy off-field product endorsement fees and remain American sports heroes, refuse to come clean and assist in combating a major national disease by enthusiastically endorsing drug-testing, which they call demeaning.

The players want league expansion, meaning more major league jobs. While any knowledgeable fans recognize the mediocrity of today's players in comparison to yesteryear's true stars.

A United States District Court has told the players they have no right to television revenue their teams receive from game broadcasts.

And owners have offered an eight-point program which includes an increase in the minimum wage of 50 percent, up to $60,000 a year for the rawest and untalented of rookies for a few months of summertime fun and games, plus travel and medical expenses.

Included is reduction or elimination of all incentive bonuses, which, as they are about to do in the teaching profession, cause nothing but a "me first" attitude that destroys the team concept; an increase in pension benefits; agreement that existing contracts cannot be renegotiated or extended, with the feeling they were made in good faith to begin with and should be honored by both sides, as only management is required to do at present; and minor alterations in deferred compensation and salary arbitration.

Gosh, remember when differences were only over road trip meal money!

Just as the wheat farmer worries about weather, bugs and marketing, the ballclub owners have problems. The President's new tax proposal would cut deeply into season ticket sales, since nearly 60 percent go to corporations. Luxurious stadium suites would no longer be a write-off. The depreciation schedule would be severely altered. The entire minor league development program as we have long known it, could be finished.

How long will television, which is the main financier of it all, accept strikes in exchange for those excessively high broadcast rights payments? And would a strike just about write finish on the careers of such legendary names like Staub, Carlton, Ryan, Sutton, Phil Niekro, and even Reggie? And would it secure Ty Cobb's record from Pete Rose's challenge?

Based on the simple American business principle that the person putting up the money is taking the gamble and therefore can call the shots, it's not difficult to side with management. But we would suggest one more rule change be adopted by the owners. In the event of STRIKE THREE...give the players a walk!

Rangers' home streak ended

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Ron Kittle's hitting slump, the Chicago White Sox' eight-game road losing streak and the Texas Rangers' six-game home winning streak all ended at the same time.

Kittle, who had been 0-11 during the past week, had a three-run homer Thursday night to give the White Sox a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers in a rain-delayed makeup of Wednesday's rained out game.

Kittle's last hit had been a homer last Friday against the Kansas City Royals. Six of his 15 hits this season have been homers, but Kittle says that's not surprising.

"I've been known to hit a few home runs," said the man who led the White Sox in homers with 32 in 1984 and 35 in 1983. But he has been bothered by a shoulder injury this season and has appeared in just 33 of the team's 48 games, batting .154.

White Sox manager Tony La Russa was glad to see the road losing streak end.

"The game is mental enough if you've got something freaky like that (the losing streak)," La Russa said. "It can get to you if you let, but we haven't."

Floyd Bannister, 4-4, worked 5 1/3 innings to get the win, walking two and striking out seven. He gave up all of the Texas runs on six hits. Bob James pitched the last two innings to earn his eleventh save.

Mike Mason, 4-5, gave up all the Chicago runs in six innings. He gave up five hits, walked two and struck out five.

The White Sox last won on the road when they beat the Cleveland Indians on May 8.

Thursday's game was a makeup of a game that had been rained out Wednesday. Both teams were scheduled for a day off.

But the teams had to sit through another rain delay. Chicago scored first in the second on Tom Paciorek's double, a wild pitch by Mason and Greg Walker's groundout to first.

Then it started to rain. After an hour and 14 minute delay, play started again. Larry Parrish promptly tied it up with a home run to center field.

The White Sox took the lead for good on Ron Kittle's homer in the sixth. With one out, Tom Hulet and Harold Baines singled.

Government investigators still probe mystery man in spy case

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger pictured as increasingly concerned about damage caused by a Navy spy ring, government sources say the mystery figure "F" passed a polygraph test two weeks ago but "we're still looking."

Published reports identified "F" as Gary Walker, the half-brother of John A. Walker Jr., the accused spy ringleader, but government sources interviewed by The Associated Press declined to identify "F" publicly and said his activities are still under scrutiny.

One source, declining to be named, said "F" was identified through the paper found in the search. He said "F" had "passed a lie detector test."

"We had no other evidence he was an active participant in the ring," this source said. "I would use the terms 'he is not a suspect,' but we're still looking — at him and at the possibility that there is another person with the same first name."

Meantime, Pentagon spokesman Michael I. Burch said the concern felt by Weinberger "has gone up" because "of what he continues to learn."

Burch said Weinberger has ordered "proper precautions to try to offset any advantage that the Soviets might have gained out of this episode." He would not describe the changes.

Stressing that it was too early to make a damage assessment, Burch said the Defense Department was "not aware of any change" in the Soviet Union's ability to track U.S. missile submarines based on information furnished by the spy ring.

In a related development, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., considered by his colleagues to be an expert on national security, said if the government does not overhaul its system for clearing people to handle secret papers the Walker case will appear "very small" compared to problems in the future.

Nunn and Sen. William Roth, R-Del., issued a report by the Senate Permanent Committee on Investigations. It called for cutting in half the number of people — now 4.2 million — with security clearances and recommended that more intensive background checks and regular re-investigations be conducted.

Weinberger, in an interview with The New York Times published today, said the Pentagon would reduce the number of people who have access to secret information, to help foil future spy rings.

"The numbers of people who have clearances is too large and we are going to cut that down," Weinberger said. Regarding potential damage from the alleged spy ring, Weinberger said, "I think there are very serious losses that went on over a long period of time."

'Gay high school' sparks debate

NEW YORK (AP) — The opening of the nation's first public high school for homosexuals has stirred a debate over whether gay teen-agers are helped or hindered in a segregated school setting.

"It's an act of compassion on the part of the school board. New York will be a lighthouse school district that will be watched by educators around the country," said Tom Shannon, executive director of the National School Boards Association in Reston, Va.

A more skeptical view was expressed by Sandra Feldman, executive director of the United Federation of Teachers, the union representing New York City teachers. "It's very clear these kids needed some special help," she said, but added: "We're by no means convinced that segregating is the best way to handle this."

She said it's unclear whether teens should be regarded as confirmed homosexuals.

Harvey Milk School, named after a homosexual San Francisco city supervisor who was murdered seven years ago, opened in April in a Greenwich Village church, serving 20 homosexual teen-agers — 14 boys and six girls ranging from 14 to 19 years old. Most had either dropped out of regular high schools or were chronic truants.

The school is being operated by a local gay advocacy group, but the New York City board of education has supplied a teacher and some curriculum materials.

Teaching students with special problems in settings outside traditional public school walls is not unusual. In New York, for instance, the board of education has 40 programs involving 1,200 students, many of whom are in drug rehabilitation programs or in programs for teen mothers.

But educators and gay activists said Harvey Milk was probably the first school in the nation to provide a separate haven for homosexual youngsters.

Reaction from school officials around the country centered on the wisdom of teaching homosexuals apart from "straight youngsters."

Joyce Hunter, a program director for the institute running the Harvey Milk School, agreed that "we don't want to ghettoize these kids. But this is a school for chronic truants. Kids who are doing well in regular school are not going to Harvey Milk. If they didn't go to this school, they wouldn't go."

In San Francisco, which has one of the nation's biggest concentrations of homosexuals, schools spokesman Felix Duag said "we don't have any plans for a school similar to that type at this time."

Gay activist groups said the opening of a separate high school for homosexuals in New York is dramatic evidence that regular school life for gay youngsters can be intolerable.

A 1984 survey of 2,100 homosexuals by the National Gay Task Force found that 20 percent of lesbians and half of the gay men said they'd been harassed, threatened or physically abused in junior or senior high school because they were homosexual. The Task Force said state surveys in New Jersey and Maine produced similar findings.

Ronald Najman, a spokesman for the task force, said the studies show the New York program "clearly is a response to a real problem."

Regulations on Mexican trucks eased

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though the Department of Transportation has agreed to change its interpretation of a new motor safety law, Texas Sen. Phil Gramm wants the law amended to make sure Mexican truckers will be able to cross the border.

Gramm said Thursday that DOT erred when it interpreted the Motor Carrier Safety Act of 1984, which goes into effect this summer, as barring all Mexican trucks carrying non-agricultural products. They account for 90 percent of border truck traffic, said Gramm.

In part, the law was aimed at keeping out of the country uninsured Mexican trucks that do not meet U.S. safety standards.

Gramm, a Republican, said he had no problem with that, because currently, "you can drive anything across the border that doesn't break down on the bridge."

Quintero said charged in case of missing Americans

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Alleged drug kingpin Rafael Caro Quintero has been charged with the murder and abduction of two Americans who have been missing since January, according to information the government provided the U.S. Embassy.

An embassy spokesman said Thursday the Attorney General's Office reported that Caro Quintero and unnamed accomplices were indicted on May 15 in the western state of Jalisco in connection with the case.

The Americans — John Walker, an Army veteran from Minneapolis, and Alberto Radelat from Fort Worth, Texas — were last seen on Jan. 30 in Guadalajara, capital of Jalisco state and a major drug trafficking center. The men were believed to be in their late 20s or early 30s.

The embassy has not yet seen the indictment, issued by Judge Ramon Soltero Guzman of the 7th criminal court of Jalisco state in Guadalajara, according to the spokesman who spoke on condition he not be identified. The Attorney General's Office gave the information to Larry Lane, the U.S. consul general in Mexico City.

Telephone lines were busy at both the Attorney General's Office and the court.

U.S. officials had said earlier that they held out little hope the two were still alive. Their bodies have never been found.

U.S. Ambassador John Gavin told reporters in late April that Mexican authorities were holding three witnesses who reportedly saw Walker and Radelat abducted in Guadalajara on Jan. 30.

The embassy said earlier that the deposition from the witnesses indicated the Americans may have been mistaken for U.S. drug investigators. Eve Walker, the missing American's wife, told reporters earlier this year that her husband had been writing a murder mystery with a plot involving cocaine smuggling.

Brazilian police, experts seek to determine if body is Mengele's

EMBU, Brazil (AP) — Police have exhumed the body of a man they believe may have been Josef Mengele, the Nazi doctor known as the "Angel of Death," and begun the lengthy task of analyzing the skull, bones, and shreds of cloth.

Jose Antonio de Mello, director of the Sao Paulo morgue, held the skull high for hundreds of onlookers to see when the remains were disinterred Thursday at Embu, 17 miles from Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest city.

"There are extremely strong indications that we have the man we're looking for here," Federal Police Chief Romeu Tuma said Thursday.

Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles said the information could be intended to throw researchers off Mengele's trail.

Brazilian police said they were led to weed-covered grave in Embu by information from West German investigators. Gino Carita, former administrator of the cemetery, told The Associated Press that a man he knew as Wolfgang Gerhard was buried there in the same grave as his mother, Friederike Gerhard. The gravestone bears only her name.

Heinz Hauelsen, who has been in charge of West Germany's search for Mengele the past five years, said in Frankfurt a review of files turned up clues that led to Guenzberg, Mengele's hometown in Bavaria. Police seized documents there that led them to Brazil, he said.

Tuma said the man he believes was Mengele drowned Feb. 7, 1979, while swimming at Bertioiga, a beach resort 73 miles from Sao Paulo. He said the body was buried the next day in Embu.

De Mello said bones taken to the morgue late Thursday were badly decayed; but that the teeth were "sufficiently well preserved to compare with dental records and make an identification."
