'...man cannot move us where God cannot use us'

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Majors Milton and Adriene Wood are not looking forward to their move to Dallas Monday.

But with regret and hesitation, the Pampa Salvation Army officers will leave their home of two years and move to the Pleasant Grove area of Dallas, where they will operate a youth and community center.

Although they're not due in Dallas until June 19, they must be out of their house by Monday to make way for their successors, Lt. Carl Hughes of Harlingen and Lt. Sam Foden.

"Still, we won't move until we have to," Milton Wood said.

The Woods will be honored with a reception from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday at the Salvation Army Headquarters, 601 S. Cuyler.

"This is the hardest move we've ever had to make."

"But we feel man cannot move us where God cannot use us," he said.

"We're not leaving easily," Adriene said.

Moving to Pampa in 1983 was not easy either.

"When I first drove up Highway 70 in 1983, I thought 'what are we getting ourselves into,'" Milton said. "It was during a bad winter ice storm. And we saw nothing but flat, wide spaces."

"Desolation," Adriene interjected.

"The Salvation Army moves us at their discretion, and we were only supposed to be here for six months," Milton said. "But in no time, we fell in love with the community and we asked to stay longer. We wanted to stay at least five years."

Several things kept the Woods in Pampa.

"The scenery," she observed.

"My, you can see a rainbow

here from beginning to end," Milton said.

The Woods were also touched by the people of Pampa and their helpful spirit.

"There are some people who regularly contribute to the Army who tell me never to release their names," Milton said, praising the 18-member advisory board that oversees the local operation.

Through the support of the board, the seven-member staff and the numerous volunteers, the Pampa Salvation Army has been able to expand such programs as the disaster services, welfare work and their monthly Golden Agers luncheon for elderly Pampa residents. The latter program attracts an average of 100 residents per luncheon, up from 60 when the Woods first came to Pampa.

Adriene was impressed with the way the Salvation Army works with other agencies and with the community.

"The first Christmas we were here, we were afraid that we wouldn't have enough for the people who needed it," Milton said, explaining that the Salvation Army starts shopping in June for its Christmas program.

But once word got out that the Salvation Army needed help, the community responded, Milton said.

He said if any success can be attributed to their ministry it's "that my wife and I work as total equals. We both do counseling, work with the community, help with the sick..."

"I preach, too," she said, explaining that women in the Salvation Army may conduct weddings, baptisms, funerals.

It's been that way through the history of the Salvation Army, Milton said.

The Woods were promoted from captains to majors earlier this year. Milton explained that although the promotions are partly based on length of service, the higher ranks also have greater responsibilities.

"It's not a nine-to-five job,"

Annexation wins approval over protests

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

At their first night meeting Tuesday, Pampa city commissioners approved on first reading an annexation and zoning change for a tract north of the city despite the objections of residents in the area.

The annexation involves a triangular tract northeast of the Coronado Medical Complex and contains land owned by Columbus Morgan and Forrest Hills.

The zoning change is from Agriculture to Retail District only for the Morgan Addition tract, located between Hwy. 70 and the old Miami highway, southeast of the Hills' tract.

Morgan had requested the annexation only for his tract, but the Planning and Zoning Commission decided to include the Hills' land in the annexation proposal.

Hills and his wife, Mahunta Hills, expressed objections to the Retail District zoning for the Morgan Addition and reservations about the annexation.

Mrs. Hills said she was "not crazy about being annexed, but I can see the handwriting on the wall... I can see it is inevitable." But she was concerned about the businesses that could be allowed in a retail district.

She explained that when they had bought their property, the deed contained restrictions limiting the use of the land. She had thought the land would always be residential and "had always felt secure that we would be surrounded by residential property."

Morgan said his deed didn't have any such restrictions when he bought it. Mrs. Hills said she thought there was an oral agreement with the original owner of the surrounding property and had thought Morgan's land was included in that agreement.

David Martindale, a local lawyer representing Morgan, said the land was likely to be developed as Pampa grows to the north, a "logical extension" based on growth patterns for the city.

He said the Hills land would not be affected by the zoning of Morgan's tract, with the Hills' tract still retaining its Agriculture District zoning.

Martindale said consistent development of Perryton Parkway indicates continued commercial and retail zoning. Morgan's tract faces the highway and thus would be better developed for retail use.

he said.

Referring to the Hills' land, located across the old Miami highway from Morgan's land, Martindale said, "In any development you're likely to have residential property abutting retail or commercial property."

The retail zoning is more restrictive than commercial zoning for what business could be located on the land, he said.

But Mrs. Hills said Office District zoning would be even better, offering more protection. She was concerned that retail zoning would allow such businesses as convenience stores, gasoline stations, dance halls, auto sales, theaters, indoor amusement (as a video arcade) and even a sewage treatment plant. She felt all of those would be detrimental to a residential area.

Mrs. Hills said she would prefer the commission to rule on the use of each lot on the tract separately as it comes up for building or renting.

"I would like my place protected," she said. "You're the governing body, and you should protect us."

Martindale said there's a great deal of difference between office and retail districts. "You couldn't have any retail businesses under an office district classification," he said.

Hills said if the commissioners wanted to see an example of what a retail district could lead to, they should drive east or west on Hwy. 60. That zoning on a highway can put a stop to the city's development in the area, he said.

Commissioner Joe Reed said, "I can see the Hills' point of view very plainly." But the biggest decision concerned Morgan's right to do business on his land, he said. Since the land is located on a state highway, retail use is more likely, he conceded.

Commissioner David McDaniel said Morgan's tract is a development in itself. Individual lots shouldn't be picked out for different zoning, he said, referring to Mrs. Hills' suggestion that the lots on the highway be zoned retail while the lots facing her property could be zoned office.

He agreed retail was a more likely use for Morgan's tract. "Quite frankly, it's a logical approach to zoning" to go with the retail classification, he said.

After the commissioners voted, Mrs. Hills said, "I don't like the

Sales slip, but remain ahead of '84

By LARRY HOLLIS

Pampa's retail sales slipped in April, but total sales for the year still were running ahead of last year, according to figures released this week by State Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock sent Pampa a sales tax payment check this month for $99,427.86, representing sales of approximately $9.9 million. Last June the city received a check for $111,317.99 on sales of approximately $11.1 million.

June checks represent taxes collected on sales made in April and reported to the Comptroller by May 20, Bullock said. This month Bullock has sent checks totaling $58.1 million in local tax payments to the 1,003 cities that levy the one percent local sales tax.

For the first six checks of the current year, Pampa has received total payments of $904,018.60 for sales of approximately $80.4 million. This is a 2.85 percent increase over the $781,703.91 total payments sent to the city in the first half of 1984 from sales of approximately $78.2 million.

Bullock has previously noted an exact comparison is hard to make between the two years because of the additional items placed under the sales tax laws in December, but the figures should be generally reflective of the sales picture.

Elsewhere in Gray County, Lefors was holding stable mainly because the city received no tax payment in June of both years. The city has had total payments of $2,456.27 for the year to date, down 25.71 percent from the $3,306.31 recorded at this time last year.

McLean is still in the negative column but showed improvements in sales figures. The city received a June check for $1,306.72, up approximately $400 from the $908.72 reported last June.

Total sales tax payments for McLean are $9,818.92 for the year to date, a decrease of 12.58 percent from the $11,232.08 recorded at this time last year. But last month Bullock reported the city running 17.54 percent below last year's figures.

In Carson County, Groom was still reporting an increase over last year though April sales dipped from last year. Bullock sent the city a check this month for $1,757.71, slightly below the $1,870.91 received last June.

Total payments for the year to date are $10,678.60, still 1.54 percent above the $10,517.09 recorded at this time in 1984.

Bullock sent Skellytown a June check for $1,104.84, nearly $870 less than the $1,971.68 received last June. Total sales tax payments for the first half of the year are $8,924.60, falling 25.73 percent behind payments of $12,015.94 for the same period last year.

White Deer had a check this month for $898.72, nearly $1,300 below the June, 1984, payment of $2,190.98. For the year to date, the city has received total payments of $9,067.27, dropping 28.64 percent under last year's comparable period total of $12,706.07.

In Hemphill County, Canadian had a June check from the state for $9,751.25, approximately $1,700 below the $11,475.29 payment last June. The state has sent the city $78,291.87 in total payments this year, a dip of 8.26 below the $85,336.80 recorded in the same 1984 period.

Bullock sent Miami a check this month for $1,255.50, more than $100 behind the June, 1984, payment of $1,371.89. The Roberts County city has received $10,729.93 in payments for the year to date, dropping 24.96 percent under last year's comparable period total of $14,298.92.

In Wheeler County, Mobeetie received no check this month, though last June it had a payment of $639.24. For the first six checks of the year, the city has total payments of $2,453.03, recording a drop of 39.63 from last year's payments of $4,063.02 in the same period.

Wheeler had a June payment of $3,616.92, approximately $660 less than the previous June check of $4,277.07. The city has received total payments so far this year of $23,838.67, falling 9.09 percent behind the $26,221.79 registered in the same 1984 period.

Passengers freed, plane blown up

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hijackers of a Jordanian airliner today released 66 passengers and crew, including two Americans, and blew up the plane. Airport and Red Cross spokesmen said eight Jordanian sky marshals were killed in the explosion, but an airline official said they were alive and free.

Munib Toukan, vice president of Royal Jordanian Alia Airlines, said in Amman, Jordan that the sky marshals, or security men, "are now in Beirut in custody of the Royal Jordanian Airline."

But a Lebanese Red Cross official, who watched three explosions rip the plane apart said, "The marshals were blown up inside the plane. Their bodies are in pieces. We couldn't get to them." An airport official who spoke on condition of anonymity confirmed the report, adding that the hijackers "disappeared."

Toukan told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that the eight sky marshals, or security men, were in the airline's Beirut office. "They are in good health and excellent spirits," he said. "We're going to put them on the first flight out of Beirut."

The pilot of the hijacked airliner, Capt. Ulf Sultan, a Swede, told The Associated Press that the hijackers fled the plane with the sky marshals as hostages before it was blown up. "We have been assured by the hijackers that they are safe," he said.

The hijackers raked the plane with automatic weapons fire, then a series of explosions rocked the Boeing 727 and set it on fire as it stood on the airport runway, witnesses said.

Soon after the explosions, the plane's fuel tanks caught fire and it broke up into burning sections of twisted metal. Only its tail, bearing the crown of King Hussein's Hashemite dynasty, remained intact.

The plane was hijacked in Beirut on Tuesday, stopped in Cyprus, tried twice to land in Tunisia, refueled in Sicily, returned to Beirut, attempted to fly to Syria and then came back to Beirut Tuesday night.

The hijackers, identified by Sultan as Shiite Moslems of Lebanon's Amal militia, were demanding that all Palestinian guerrillas leave Beirut for Tunisia where Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization has its headquarters. Various reports put the number of hijackers at four or six.

Nine crew members and 48 passengers reportedly held hostage were evacuated just before the explosion and gunfire. Nine passengers were released earlier at the Beirut airport. Two of the passengers were Americans.

Woods leaving

Mrs. Wood said, "It's a calling and you live with it for 24-hours a day. And if we have to do floors, we do it."

"You do what you have to do," Milton said. "It might be tending the thrift shop, bailing clothes."

The Woods' job in Pleasant Grove will be different from the what they do here.

"But there is such a challenge there," Milton said, explaining that the ministry will be geared to young people.

Milton compared the Pleasant Grove center with the Pampa Youth & Community Center and the Optimist Club.

The largest Salvation Army community center in the state, it serves 4,000 youngsters, has three baseball diamonds, a gymnasium and gamerooms. The center has a staff of about 100 people. It is one of four such centers in the Dallas area.

"There will be no welfare work or thrift shop like we have in Pampa," Milton said.

"Working with young people, there is the challenge," Milton observed. "One of the highlights about serving on the staff of the Salvation Army youth and music camp was teaching the teen-age

City Manager Bob Hart said the state would spend about $95,000 on the changes, using some federal funds. The major cost to the city would be the widening of Kentucky to a left-turn lane, an action previously approved by the commission.

The commissioners also approved the selling of 500 million gallons of the city's surplus Lake Meredith water to Lubbock for approximately $75,000.

Hart said the sell of the water would not affect the city's supplies

Bible Class, putting the word of God on their level and relating the Bible to the young people."

"Some of the football teams in the league are little league football world champions," Milton said, adding that such sports stars as footballer O.J. Simpson and basketball player Dr. J. (Julius Erving) got their starts in Salvation Army youth sports programs. Such famous musicians as Harry James and Doc Sevensen also spent their youths at the Salvation Army.

Milton, who plays the tuba, first got interested with the Salvation Army at 11 when the group held a street service at the housing project near where he lived in New Bern, N.C. Mrs. Wood has attended Salvation Army churches all her life.

The Woods have been with the Salvation Army for 22 years, serving such communities as Louisville and Danville in Kentucky and Chattanooga, Tenn. Pampa is their first job in Texas.

Although familiar with Salvation Army Corps Community Center operations, the Woods admit they do not know exactly what the Pleasant

In other business, the commission approved a list of names to submit to the Gray County Appraisal District for nominations of three persons to the Appraisal Review Board, adopted a resolution approving the Pampa Deferred Compensation Program for city employees and approved accounts payable.

"I rode by the place and saw it," Milton said. "But I've never been there before."

Adrienne explained that they prefer not to think about having to move to Dallas until they sever their ties with Pampa.

"We can't even think about where we're going because we can't forget about where we are now," she said.

What do they look forward to most about their move? "Being able to return to Pampa for a visit," said Milton

Sentencing scheduled

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - Two men, including an adviser to a right-wing Salvadoran leader, were to go before a federal judge today for sentencing on charges of trying to smuggle nearly $6 million out of the country.

Francisco Guirola Beeche and Oscar Rodriguez Feo have relinquished their claim to the $5.9 million confiscated Feb. 6 at Kleberg County airport in Kingsville as the men were preparing to leave the country, authorities said.

Miami agrees to continue sewer oxidation pond work

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

MIAMI - City officials toured the city sewer plant's sludge-filled oxidation pond Monday and agreed that earth work needs to continue at the pond's south end.

Sediment, turtles and various types of debris is clogging the inlet and outlet pipes that feed into the pond. City Secretary Evelyn Heare said workers have been moving dirt and sediment from the south end of the pond. Miami Mayor Tom Stribling feels that the dirt work done now at the pond should make it serviceable for another five to ten years.

"By the end of that time, we should have enough money to dig a new oxidation pit," he said, noting that the current pit has been in operation for about 22 years.

In addition to the dirt work, city worker Larry Bryant has spent the last week at the sewer plant building a concrete grit chamber in an effort to keep the "trash and turtles out of the sewer pipe."

Another problem that the city has with the sewer is that the underground pipe has nearly collapsed.

To help pay for this near overhaul of the sewage pond, city officials agreed to transfer $3,000 from the city's general fund to the sewer fund. According to Heare, the dragline work at the south end of the pond is costing the city about $45 per hour.

City officials also agreed to waive their usual policy of paying employees by the month to pay Steve Collins this week. Collins has been helping Bryant with the sewer work.

City council members also agreed to seek bids on eight blocks of sealcoating work - four blocks on Summit Street west of Main Street and four blocks of Lenora.

"The streets look real bad," Stribling said. "The problem is finding the money to do it."

About $10,000 was allocated for street work, but $3,000 of that was transferred to the sewer fund.

Stribling said that by looking at the bids, the city can get an estimate on how much the sealcoating work is going to cost. "We can still have the bids, but not necessarily accept them," he said.

Pampa engineer Gene Barber, who is working with the city on the sealcoating project, warned that the city "can't wait too long if it's too late in the season."

He estimated that it would cost $9,000 to do the eight blocks.

In other business, council members indefinitely tabled action on an amendment on a water well lease agreement between the city and Santa Fe Railroad. Santa Fe is asking the city to amend the lease to release the company from liability on any damages to the well.

"What if a train derailed," Bryant asked. "Would the train's insurance cover it?"

"I don't want to sign any legal thing without having a lawyer look at it first," council member Monette Jenkins said.

Also tabled was an amendment to a recently passed city ordinance regulating the speed of trains through the city.

Oil wells

as for injection wells, since they are located so close to other existing wells. Such operations also would allow the recovery of some expenses involved in the drilling.

He also said that since the property is not currently developed, the company should be able to place its flow lines above ground until the final plats are established and developed. When that occurs, the company would place its lines underground to accord with utility lines, alleys, street curbs and other matters, Saunders said.

David Holt, local lawyer representing JR Development, said his company could concur with the suggested modifications and saw no problems with them, with the understanding the flow lines would be changed later to accord with the development of the plats.

Commissioner Joe Reed questioned granting a Specific Use Permit by ordinance at this time when a general ordinance is being prepared concerning all future drilling within the city limits.

City Manager Bob Hart and Mayor Sherman Cowan explained the ordinance will apply only to the two wells in an isolated situation. All future drilling will be considered in a general ordinance to be submitted later.

Hart noted Triple J has pending applications for six additional wells. But the general ordinance should be ready before those wells come before the commission for a permit, he said.

The ordinance will be considered on second and final reading at the next regular commission meeting with minor modifications included as discussed Tuesday night.

In other matters, the commissioners approved two ordinances on second and final reading. One permits a day care center to be located in the Wilcox Addition under a Specific Use Permit. The other okays a zoning change from Office to Retail District for the NBC Plaza Addition.

The commission authorized the city staff to return funds held in trust by the city to the Pampa Softball Players Association for the construction of concession and restroom facilities at Hobart Street Park.

Hart said the city had asked for bids twice on the facility, but the commission had felt they were too excessive. The association thinks it can get it done less expensively by dealing directly with a contractor, he said.

Mayor Cowan said the association has been beneficial to the city and the city should be willing to help it out. "They've been trying to get this for several years," he said, approving the return of the funds.

While the association would contract for the construction of the facility, the concession-restroom building will be located on city property, with the city maintaining it. The facility will be exclusively for use during softball games, not open generally for public use.

David Callison, Parks and Recreation Department director, said plans are being considered for renovation of the current restroom facility in the park for general public use.

Southern Baptist president urges demoninational peace

DALLAS (AP) — Signs of reconciliation pervaded the record-size Southern Baptist Convention today, bolstered by a strong pledge of cooperation by new top officers from both sides in the keen feuding between fundamentalists and moderates.

But edgy notes remained. Shortly after the vast convention on Tuesday re-elected the fundamentalist incumbent, the Rev. Charles Stanley as president, it overwhelmingly elected his moderate opponent, the Rev. Winfred Moore, as first vice president.

Arms about each other's shoulders, they pledged close teamwork in leading the nation's largest Protestant denomination, which has been wracked by sharp dissension between moderate and fundamentalist factions.

"I think we'll get along great," said Stanley, 52, an Atlanta pastor. He told a news conference his heart had immediately warmed toward Moore when they first met recently and that he was "more than willing" to work with him.

Moore, 65, an Amarillo, Texas, pastor, defeated by Stanley for the top office by a vote of 24,453 to 19,795, said, "I think you're going to see everybody in this convention coming closer together than you've ever seen them before."

An additional conciliatory move came in a "crisis-solution" report before the convention today, backed both by Stanley and Moore and calling for a "peace committee" made up of representatives of both sides in the struggle.

If approved, it would investigate points at issue, involving agencies, seminaries and other units of the of the 14.3 million-member denomination, and bring in recommendations for resolving them at the convention next year.

Nevertheless, hints of continuing strains surfaced in a rash of resolutions facing the 44,000 "messengers" from congregations across the country, nearly twice the total ever attending an annual assembly in the denomination's 140-year history.

There also were some firmly unswerving notes in Stanley's post-election remarks, particularly about seminaries that fundamentalists have charged are infected with liberalism about the Bible.

Asked if he would do anything to make professors toe the line, he said there are "limitations to academic freedom" which also "needs accountability."

He said it would be up to the "peace committee" to deal with the situation, adding, "I think we do have problems. We need to deal with them honestly, openly and in a Christ-like fashion."

Questioned repeatedly about links with the Rev. Jerry Falwell, head of Moral Majority of which Stanley was an officer until a year ago, Stanley said they are friends and share numerous stands on social issues.

However, Stanley emphasized he took those stands — such as opposing abortion and favoring prayer in public schools — as an individual "strong Christian citizen and not a right-winger."

Asked his view of a proposal to modify the bylaws

by which the president appoints a key committee that indirectly determines trustees of denominational institutions so as to spread authority to three top officers, he said:

"I think it should remain just like it is." That presidential sway over the makeup of institutional trustees is what has injected partisan passions into the contest for the top office, with moderates claiming the strife stemmed from a fundamentalist drive for power.

On the other hand, fundamentalists claimed the dispute involved views of doctrine and campaigned for curbing what they called liberal trends about the Bible in Southern Baptist institutions.

Abused women counselor accused in child kidnapping

AUSTIN (AP) — A woman facing felony charges of stealing her son worked for almost two years at a center for battered women, where her job included helping to resolve custody fights.

Sharon Murphy, 35, said she will not fight extradition to California where she faces charges of child stealing and false imprisonment in connection with 1981 disappearance of her 9-year-old son.

Authorities said Murphy had been living with her son, Colin Johnson, under an assumed name to avoid arrest. But officials caught up with her last week and returned the boy to his grandmother, author Maya Angelou.

"I think I might not see my son again for a very long time," Ms. Murphy told the Austin

American-Statesman. "I had no choice but to give him back; they had me."

Ms. Angelou took the boy to California to be with his father, Guy Johnson, who was given legal custody in 1980, officials said.

Johnson was the object of a nationwide search after he was snatched from his father's home in Santa Rosa, Calif., in 1981.

Ms. Murphy, known as Sharon Murphy Johnson when she fled California, described herself as "an in-the-street social worker" doing everything she can to resolve marital problems, including custody fights, for her clients.

"She's one of the best counselors we've ever had," said Judy Reeves, her supervisor at the center. "Everybody here loves her."

"So many battered women who come to the center from out of state have assumed names," she said. "I guess it was assumed she had custody of her son."

A native of Oklahoma, Ms. Murphy moved to California to study psychology and met Guy Johnson — the son of Ms. Angelou, a black activist, author and poet.

The two divorced in 1977 with Ms. Murphy claiming her husband beat her repeatedly. But California authorities said she never proved the claim. She was given custody of her son and raised him alone for 2½ years earning $630 a month and living in a housing project.

In 1980, the boy was placed in the custody of his father by a court that ruled he could provide for the boy better than she could, Ms. Murphy said.

"I was completely shut out of his life," she said. "The only way I could remain a part of my son's life was to do what I did."

Ms. Murphy left California for Phoenix, Ariz. using the name Anne Marie Clark and Colin became Luke Clark. After living in Phoenix, Ms. Murphy and her son moved to Austin in 1983.

Soon afterward, Ms. Murphy — who lived in Austin as Anne Marie Clark — got a job at the Center for Battered Women.

Many of the people who she worked with accompanied her to court when she was arraigned last week. Municipal Judge David Phillips reduced her bail from $75,000 to $10,000 after hearing about her work in the community and later released her on personal recognizance.

Sam McKee, an assistant district attorney in Sonoma County, Calif., said Ms. Murphy's decision to surrender to Texas authorities was a "positive step," but said he will not drop the felony charges against her.

Hospitals sue expiring state agency

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Hospital Association has filed suit against a dying state agency for not performing a job that will disappear in two months.

The 880-member association claims the Texas Health Facilities Commission has imposed an unofficial moratorium on hospital construction and major purchases through the summer.

Last month, legislators voted to do away with the commission on Aug. 31, the end of the current fiscal year.

But despite its Aug. 31 expiration date, the agency is obligated by state law to require hospitals and nursing homes to obtain a certificate of need from the agency to build, expand or purchase expensive new equipment.

The suit alleges that the commission has been dismissing all applications and certificates as it begins winding down.

John Neel, the commission attorney, said about 300 applications were pending when the Legislature decided to dispose of the commission.

O. Ray Hurst, president of the hospital group, said some facilities can't wait until the commission dies to get on with their expansion plans.

"A 90-day delay is costing somebody, somewhere a bunch of money," he said. "The consumer is going to pay for it."

White signs child abuse bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has signed into law two bills designed to help Texas communities fight child abuse and neglect.

"These two bills will safeguard the physical and emotional well-being of the children in Texas," White said Tuesday in a ceremony held in the shade of a tree on the playground of the Austin Community Nursery School.

The governor was assisted by Christina Flores, a 3-year-old student.

After the signing she threw her arms around the governor's neck and hugged tight.

Later, at White's urging, the little girl laboriously wrote "Christi" under White's name at the bottom of a measure establishing a Children's Trust Fund. The trust fund in the state treasury would provide grants to community groups for child abuse and neglect prevention programs.

The fund would be financed through an increase in marriage license fees, from $7.50 to $25. The fund would get $12.50 out of each license and counties would get $5 for issuing the license.

A new nine-member Council on Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention would be created to oversee the trust fund.

"Texas child care workers confirmed almost 37,000 cases of child abuse or neglect in our state last year," White said. "This is 37,000 too many."

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, Senate sponsor, said there would be no cost to the state or any local government in creation of the trust fund.

Later, in his Capitol office, White also signed into law:

— A bill allowing private fire-fighting firms to exceed speed limits and use flashing lights when going to an oil or chemical fire.

— A bill to tighten up regulations on the use of dealer plates on new cars.

A last minute substitution

It has finally happened. The thing I feared most. I found one of my fellow columnists had used my column topic for this week in her column. I had spent two weeks gathering information, coming up with brilliant ideas to tickle my readers' fancies with and I open Tuesday's paper and find out Cathy has already used it.

If I write about the new Coke now, my column will be as flat as Coke's taste. Besides, every other columnist in the country has written about it anyway. Maybe it's time for something different.

I mean, whatever happened to RC Cola? I remember when we'd go to the old gas stations and get an ice cold RC from one of those soft drink boxes that you'd put a dime in and slide the bottle around until it came out. There'd also be Orange Crush, Strawberry and Grape Nehis, and Hire's Root Beer in those old boxes, too. You don't see those soft drinks around much any more, either.

Kids are spoiled when it comes to soft drinks nowadays, anyway. (Since I'm nearly over the hill, I have the right to say that.) When I was a kid I could count how many soft drinks I had a year on both hands. It was a real treat to our family. We didn't keep them at home like a lot of people did, because we children had a tendency to be chubby and didn't need any encouragement.

Once in awhile we would stop at a drive-in restaurant in McLean after church for cherry limes. I'll never forget the time my best friend and I would take our half a lime and stick it in our mouth so we could reward everyone we saw with a bright green smile! We got so tickled, we had to hide under the table.

Which leads me on another tangent. For some reason, I find things much funnier when I'm not supposed to be laughing. I don't know how many times I've stuck my head into my desk at school to smother a laugh. Well, that may be a good place to hide, but it's not a good place to hide and laugh, because when I try not to laugh, I snort and all a desk does is amplify the sound.

Church is another place where I invariably get an attack of the giggles... still! Something about the solemnity of a church service just cries to be broken with a good belly laugh. What an example to set for my children. If you ever see them laughing uncontrollably at some inappropriate moment, you'll know it is because of their upbringing. I'll take the blame for it.

Recently my son Davy, his eyes filled with tears, informed me that he had gotten in trouble at school. "What did you do?" I asked. "I did something bad to my teacher," he replied solemnly. "What did you do to your teacher?" I asked. At that point, he (in all seriousness now) stuck his tongue out and flapped his fingers in his ears. I disintegrated. In between guffaws, I tried to tell him that that was not how students treated teachers. I hope I somehow managed to get the point across, but I have my doubts.

And if you are really hard up for a laugh, I have a perfect cure. It's called playing with the cat in the trash can. What you do is take a clean trash can, allow a cat to climb in it (preferably a declawed cat for safety reasons) and set the can upright. Then slowly bring your head up to the rim of the can. The cat invariably attacks, which drives me into hysterics, or else I get so jittery thinking that the cat is going to attack me that I go into hysterics anyway. I know it's crazy, but it's fun.

So... this is what you get when somebody takes my column topic away.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It's, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

What happened to 'farm crisis'?

It's a predictable pattern, but it is worth pointing out. Perhaps the memory will remain and induce a little skepticism the next time there's an overblown, media-hyped crisis that appears simply to cry out for government to do something (usually with a lot of taxpayer dollars) about it.

Remember of the farm crisis earlier this year? Tales of impending bankruptcy abounded. Television camera crews trudged into the cornfields to discover tales of woe. Farmers marched on Washington seeking special government assistance on top of all the government farm programs already in existence.

President Reagan stood firm and vetoed the proposal in question, and the doomsayers bayed.

How have things turned out? Well, the Department of Agriculture reports that only about 5 percent of the nation's farmers were unable to get credit to finance their spring planting this year. That's far less than the 14 percent some farm economists had been forecasting, and only a bit above the 3 percent to 3.5 percent considered a "normal" farmer turnover rate.

This doesn't mean there are no problems in agriculture. Farming is always a risky business, and losing a farm—whether it has been in the family for generations or is the result of a recent bit of speculation—is always a traumatic experience.

Furthermore, farmers are ever at the mercy of factors such as weather and world markets that are beyond their direct control.

It may well be that some of the overblown publicity of January induced some lending institutions to work a little more sensitively with some farmers than they might have without the publicity. Nonetheless, few lending institutions will make a loan they are convinced will go bad. The likelihood is that the "crisis" was blown out of proportion.

Perhaps we'll remember that when the next manufactured crisis hits the headlines.

What makes people give?

When the Treasury's first tax reform proposal was released last December, the nation's tax-deductible institutions and charities sent up a howl of protest because it limited charitable deductions to those above 2 percent of gross income.

Immediately, authoritative-sounding articles began to appear on the New York Times and Washington Post "op-ed" pages warning that such a move would "destroy charitable giving."

President Reagan was savaged, on the one hand, for promoting "voluntarism" as a means of helping the poor - and on the other taking away the tax-break mainstay of private charity.

Obviously, they made their point, because the administration backed away almost completely, and the full charity deduction remains for all those who itemize - but not for those who don't.

Even so, the ungrateful charity "industry" is already badmouthing Reagan's tax reform plan, contending that modest change will cost them as much as $10 billion in lower giving.

This is utter nonsense, completely refuted by actual tax and charity history.

If, as the charities contend, it is the tax-deductibility that now principally supports charitable giving, then, logic says, the higher the tax rates, the higher the giving, and vice-versa.

This, incidentally, is why virtually all the leading private foundations and universities opposed Reagan's 1981 25-percent rate cuts, as they had John F. Kennedy's '63-65 cuts.

They argued that these lower rates would make it "more costly" for the wealthy to contribute, and would thus reduce contributions.

Fortunately, for them and us, they were dead wrong on both occasions. In fact, in almost exact proportion as tax rates have been cut, charitable giving as a share of GNP has risen.

Indeed, charitable giving in the U.S. since 1950 suggests that the greatest boost to philanthropy would be to cut tax rates as low as possible, and kill the charity loophole!

The reason? Over the past thirty years charitable giving has remained remarkably consistent at between 1.8 and 2.1 percent of GNP, a very narrow band which suggests that giving primarily depends on economic growth, not tax incentives.

More important, the highest level (percent of GNP) of contributions has always coincided with the LOWEST levels of marginal tax rates, both at the top and on average; exactly contrary to what the professional fundraiser would have you - and Congress - believe.

For example, in 1960, the nation's top marginal tax rate was 91 percent, and its average marginal rate for all incomes was 20 percent. Not only did this produce anemic real economic growth (2 percent), but charitable giving was at 1.85 percent of GNP, its lowest historic level. And it was growing less than 4 percent a year.

But this began to change in 1964 - 1965 when top tax rates were cut to 70 percent, and average top marginal rates fell to 14 percent. Not only did this produce strong 5 percent GNP growth for five years, but charitable giving soared, reaching 2.03 percent by 1968, rising to 2.16 percent in 1971, with average real giving growth rates reaching 7 percent a year.

Then, inflation and "bracket creep" began to change all that, as average top tax rates began to climb, reaching 28 percent in 1981. Not only did these high rates cut GNP-growth and giving-growth, they also reduced the rate of giving to a post-war low of 1.82 percent by 1980 and 1981.

Yet, from 1970 to 1981, the percentage of taxpayers paying 30 percent or above in marginal tax rates shot up from 5 percent to 34. If the charity loophole were an incentive to give, there should have been a surge in the level of giving. Instead, the giving share FELL from 2.12 percent to 1.83, and the real giving growth rate from 6 percent to less than 2.

The reason is simple: For most people, charity comes out of "the last dollars earned" - what economists call the "marginal income." The higher the marginal tax rate on those "last dollars," the fewer there are left for giving - regardless of the deduction, especially when 65 percent do NOT itemize.

This is why in 1982, 1983, and 1984, when top tax rates were cut from 70 to 50 percent, and average top rates from 28 to 23 percent, charity SOARED, along with the economy, back up to 2.03 percent of a strong GNP. In fact, from 1981-1984, giving rose 37.3 percent, an average annual rate of 11.2 percent, from $54.06 billion to $74.25 billion, an average "real" rate of 6.3 percent a year despite a recession! This was a complete reversal of the "charity-pros'" forecasts.

This is why the best thing we can do for charity is to cut those marginal tax rates deeply - by taking away all deductions that merely keep those rates artificially high, and growth slow.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, June 12, the 163rd day of 1985. There are 202 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On June 12, 1939, the National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum was dedicated in Cooperstown, N.Y. - 100 years to the day on which Abner Doubleday is purported to have invented the sport. Historians, however, doubt Doubleday was the true inventor of baseball.

Ten years ago: A court in India ruled that Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had illegally won her seat in Parliament in 1971, and had to give it up. Under Indian law, that would have meant giving up the office of Prime Minister as well. Mrs. Gandhi vowed to fight.

Five years ago: Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira died at the age of 70 after suffering a heart attack.

One year ago: The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that employers may not be forced to scrap seniority plans that favor white males in order to protect affirmative action gains by minorities and women when hard times hit.

Fat-cats should step lightly

"I should put out $5 for a hard seat in a ballpark so a bunch of millionaires can play ball? No way." I was at first startled to hear that statement the other day.

Then it set me thinking... Americans used to sue Americans only rarely and only for "compensatory damages." Today's judgments frequently include multimillion-dollar punitive penalties.

What with widely publicized Vegas jackpots and purposely promoted state lotteries, "what's a million dollars anymore?" Scores of top corporate executives are now paid more than a million dollars a year.

We media people, ourselves ridiculously overpaid, hover like moths around the flame.

A million - two million - for a single station anchorman - makes money sound like trash.

The Chief Justice of the United States makes $104,700 a year.

Tennis player Martina Navratilova collects more than $4 million a year.

That degree of inequity cannot long prevail if only because one of the irrefutable lessons of history is that "excesses, ultimately, inevitably, are their own undoing."

If the "star system" is to prevail in sports, arts and industry it needs to be explained that most of the enormous incomes go to people who are able to generate commensurate cash flow.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca harvested an income last year of $1,194,838 in salary - plus stock-option gains of $4.3 million.

But that prize was his reward for bringing Chrysler back from bankruptcy.

When performance and compensation are kept in perspective, there is less likelihood of alienating the public.

The alternative is not a happy one. That one baseball fan's resentment alerted me, reminded me that fat-cats are prime targets for bitterness, resentment and reaction.

The confrontation is minimal right now because stockholders are too comfortable to object to sky-high executive salaries...

Consumers, themselves prosperous, rarely relate overhead to overpricing.

But when the lean times come...

We've not seen the incomes of a select few soar to such astronomically disproportionate heights since the robber barons of the 1920s.

Then, you'll remember, reaction spawned punitive legislation, tax discrimination and labor union organization of, by and for those who felt left out.

Berry's World

"Sweetie, I was into 'vintage dressing' before you were born."

Court poised to enter political thicket

By Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) - The U.S. Supreme Court is poised to plunge into the depths of a "political thicket" it scrupulously avoided until the early 1960s and has only tentatively explored since then.

"Courts ought not to enter this political thicket," Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter argued when he in 1946 refused to become entangled in a congressional redistricting dispute.

Until now, the Supreme Court has not been willing to consider the partisan ramifications of reapportionment - the use of redistricting by the party in control of a state legislature to protect, promote and perpetuate its political power at the expense of the opposition party.

That's about to change, however, because the court has decided that when it begins a new term next autumn it will hear arguments in a case in which Indiana Democrats allege that they were the political victors of the 1981 Republican-controlled redistricting of the state legislature.

In 1962 the court abandoned its traditional timidity on redistricting and issued a landmark ruling that irrevocably established the federal courts' jurisdiction over legal complaints against malapportioned state legislatures.

In an equally significant 1964 ruling, the court extended that jurisdiction to include congressional districting and held that "one man's vote is to be worth as much as another's."

In a dozen subsequent cases, the court has ruled that legislative and congressional districts must be compact and contiguous, and that politicians who construct them must strive for precise mathematical equality in the population of the districts.

In the new case, a special three-judge panel, sitting in U.S. District Court in Indianapolis, ruled late last year that the Republicans' "political gerrymandering" of legislative districts violated the Democrats' constitutional rights.

There was ample evidence to support that conclusion. All of the redistricting decisions were made by a joint House-Senate committee of the Indiana legislature whose voting membership was limited to Republicans. (Democrats were relegated to the role of powerless "advisers.")

Indiana's Republican State Committee paid $250,000 for the sophisticated computer hardware and software used to fashion the new districts. Democratic legislators and all members of the public were denied access to that equipment and information until the Republican plan was unveiled only two days before the end of the legislative session.

The Republicans were remarkably candid about their intentions. "We wanted to save as many Republicans as possible," explained one GOP legislator. "I don't make goals for the opposite team," proclaimed another.

To attain their objectives, the Republicans produced a redistricting map that ignored the concept of unifying communities sharing common interests, blatantly disregarded existing political boundaries (it divided Indiana's counties no fewer than 73 times) and was replete with grotesquely shaped districts.

Under the Republican scheme, the 100 members of Indiana's House are elected from a bizarre mixture of 61 single-member districts, nine two-member districts and seven three-member districts. Those multi-member districts were carefully constructed to dilute the electoral power of Democrats in the state's largest cities.

Thus, almost 47 percent of the voters of Marion County (Indianapolis) and Allen County (Fort Wayne) are identifiable as Democrats, but their party controls only 14 percent of the House seats representing those counties.

Rural voters do not fare much better because some districts sprawl across portions - but not all - of four, five or six counties to accommodate Republican legislators desperately seeking "safe" political venues to ensure re-election.

Subject of landmark right-to-die case dies after 10-year coma

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — Karen Ann Quinlan, who found death in the arms of her weeping mother more than nine years after her case established the right to die with dignity, fulfilled a purpose "far beyond what she could have suspected," her bishop said.

Miss Quinlan, 31, died at 7:01 p.m. Tuesday in the Morris View Nursing Home of "respiratory failure following acute pneumonia on top of a chronic vegetative state," said Dr. James Wolf.

Julia and Joseph Quinlan, her deeply religious parents who were daily visitors to her bedside, went into seclusion after the death.

The Quinlans in 1976 won a landmark court order allowing them to remove a respirator from Karen to spare her continued "agony" and to honor her expressed wish never to be kept alive through extraordinary means.

The historic case began when Miss Quinlan lapsed into a coma on April 15, 1975, apparently after consuming several gin and tonic drinks at a party after taking what doctors said was a "therapeutic" dose of a mild tranquilizer and aspirin.

Although she never knew it, Miss Quinlan became a symbol of the right of the terminally ill to decide their fates with their families.

"She had been embraced ... as someone with whom the world could empathize," said Paul Armstrong, the family lawyer who argued the case. "I think Karen has moved into the pantheon of the American myth."

The moment of death was "one of great reverence and sense of loss that I could read in Julia's face, who was embracing Karen and was weeping quietly," said Armstrong, who was at the nursing home.

Miss Quinlan developed pneumonia five days ago and "in the last 36 hours, it certainly seemed like she was in more distress than in any of her last 10 years," Wolf said.

No antibiotics were administered, although a non-prescription drug was given to reduce the fever, and by late afternoon, death was "clearly imminent," the doctor said.

Monsignor Thomas Trapasso, the family's spiritual adviser, described the Quinlans as "in some sense relieved" because Karen's death "had always been on their minds."

"Karen Ann Quinlan's 10-year sleep is over and God has called her home," said Bishop Frank J. Rodimer of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Paterson, to which the Quinlans belonged.

"Her tragic accident and her parents' persistence in doing what was morally correct has resulted in a clearer perception as to how we should treat those in the same situation that Karen was in. She had a purpose in life far beyond what she could have suspected."

The Quinlans went to court after doctors said Miss Quinlan would never return to a "cognitive state" but refused to disconnect the respirator.

The New Jersey Supreme Court overturned a lower court and granted the parents' pleas on March 31, 1976. The respirator was disconnected on May 22, 1976, but contrary to doctors' projections, Miss Quinlan lived on.

"It's amazing. We never expected her to live," Mrs. Quinlan said in a 1980 interview.

In 1976, the U.S. Supreme Court dismissed a final appeal by Stephen Garger and Richard Gallagher, officers of the Human Life Amendment Group, who had wanted the case be reopened "in the interests of justice."

One of bodies identified as ex-husband, officers say

ATHENS, Texas (AP) — One of the two bodies that investigators say they found buried in the yard of a rural mobile home has been identified as the former husband of Betty Beets, the 48-year-old waitress charged in both deaths.

The decomposed body was identified Tuesday as that of Wayne Barker, who was reported missing in 1981 after an argument with Mrs. Beets, the Athens Daily Review said.

Mrs. Beets, 48, and her daughter, Shirley Stegner, 26, of Balch Springs, remained in the Henderson County jail Tuesday awaiting release on $1 million bond for two murder charges.

On Saturday night, two decomposed bodies were found buried in the yard of a mobile home owned by Mrs. Beets. The mobile home is in the Cherokee Shores subdivision near Payne Springs about 25 miles northwest of Athens.

The discovery of the bodies has neighbor Margie Stubbs reflecting on claims her granddaughter made about a year ago that bodies were buried in a nearby yard.

Mrs. Stubbs told The Dallas Morning News that her granddaughter, Rebecca Smith, married Mrs. Beets' son, Robert Branson. The two currently are separated, she said.

Around Thanksgiving last year, Miss Smith told her grandmother that Branson had said two bodies were buried in his mother's yard, Mrs. Stubbs said.

"My granddaughter has been known to stretch the truth, so I didn't put any stock in it. But it was all true this time," Mrs. Stubbs told The News.

Meanwhile, authorities are investigating to see if Mrs. Beets obtained a divorce from Barker on grounds of desertion before she married Jimmy Don Beets.

The other body found Saturday is believed to be that of Beets, a member of the Dallas Fire Department for 25 years. Beets was reported missing from Cedar Creek Lake in August 1983 after he had been fishing. His boat was later found floating on the lake.

Police and volunteers dragged the lake for 13 days searching for Beets' body. The Beets were married for 11 months before he disappeared.

Authorities said the body believed to be Beets was found under a flower garden he had built.

Mrs. Stubbs told The News that Mrs. Beets woke her about 2:30 a.m. last Thursday after a fire broke out in her home.

"She sat over there and just bawled because her little dog had been locked up in a closet and suffocated in the fire," Mrs. Stubbs told The News. "Big tears rolled down her face, and she said, 'They smothered my dog. That's pure murder.'"

LIFESTYLES

Mood can change lonely feeling

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) — He up and left you, and you may not even know why. One thing you're sure of: You'll be miserable forever. No one else will ever want you. You're unlovable. And very lonely.

If it's any consolation, so are half the other people in the country — married or not — says Dr. David D. Burns, a psychiatrist with Presbyterian Medical Center in Philadelphia. And they're probably lonely for the same reasons you are.

"In our culture, people often transform the healthy need for love into a desperate situation and begin to pass all their self-esteem onto other people, which leads to loneliness," he says.

In other words, you rely on someone else to assure you that you're smart enough. Thin enough. Good enough. If no one is doing that then, obviously, you're not enough of any of those things. What you are is alone and everyone knows that's the same as lonely.

That's what you think, says Burns. Being lonely doesn't come from isolation, which is why married people are often as lonely as singles. It comes from not thinking well of yourself to begin with, and being happy with yourself alone is crucial to attracting other people you can be happy with — or without.

How you can do that is covered in Burns' new book, "Intimate Connections" (Morrow, $15.95). It presents a number of exercises based on cognitive behavior therapy, an expensive phrase for exorcising the thoughts that are making you feel so lonely.

Says Burns: "Negative thinking influences moods tremendously. By turning your thinking around, you can change your mood, but you have to prove to yourself that what you are thinking is not only self-defeating but unrealistic. There's no better technique for that, for many people, than getting those ruthless thoughts on paper."

So get out a sheet and write down those mean things treadmill through your head so continuously you take them for granted: "I'll be alone forever." "It was all my fault." "I can't live without him." "I'm unlovable."

Now try to see them as the distortions they are by writing out rational responses opposite them. For instance, says Burns: "I'll be alone forever," is an example of fortune telling, which no one can do. "It was all my fault," is very unrealistic because it generally takes two people to make or break a relationship. "I'm unlovable," is an overgeneralization based on one situation. And as for, "I can't live without him," well, you did very nicely for a number of years, didn't you?

"Another thing you can do," he says, "is experiment to see if you really need that one special person to be happy. Schedule some activities — movies with a friend, dinner alone, anything. Then using zero to 100 as a scale, project how enjoyable the activity will be. Afterward, evaluate the experience again to see if your projection was true. Very often, things turn out to be more fun than you expected."

Of course, if dinner alone at home means a boilable bag and some corn chips, don't expect your eyes to shine. "Entertain yourself the way you would someone you love," says Burns.

And for dessert, try weighing the advantages and disadvantages of believing you need a mate to feel worthwhile.

"One advantage would be that you feel validated when you're with him," he says. "But the disadvantage is feeling desperately unhappy when you're alone. Also, your self-esteem is in his hands and do you really want to give someone else so much control over you? You might do better to tell yourself that if a relationship flowers, that's wonderful, but if it doesn't, it can still be a good experience."

And you're not any the lesser for it. Unless you want to be. You may be one of those people who can't resist feeling unlovable because it's so safe: If you don't think anyone can possibly love you, you don't have to risk rejection looking for someone, or the rejection that's bound to come later when he or she discovers what a loser you really are.

But again, Burns emphasizes, these subtle and insidious "misery mentalisms" are eradicable with reason. "Who do you have to be to be loved? You're not perfect, but you're a lot like everyone else. You love people who are all very imperfect and if someone loves you, he or she will love you for your strengths and imperfections."

"Remember," he goes on, "by definition, half the people in the country are below average, yet most seem to find people to love who love them. Maybe the secret of love basically has to do with being willing to love other people, to share feelings and work out problems."

Still, life being what it is, you can expect your share of rejection before you find people who'll love you back. But you can inure yourself to that through "rejection practice," says Burns. "First, go out and smile at 10 strangers each week for a month. Start with people who are easy to approach: an elderly lady instead of a male model. Some will reject you, some won't, but you'll see you can survive the rejection. Then, say hello to 10 people and from there, initiate conversations with 10 you might consider dating but who aren't your ideal. Finally, as you gain confidence, connect with people you're interested in."

DAVID BURNS, author of "Intimate Connections," explains how to get over loneliness.

Whatever the outcome, he says, one result is inevitable. With all this socializing, you won't feel so lonely.

Dear Abby

Wife's accidental pregnancy causes her marriage to crash

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 years old, married for eight months, and I just found out I am six weeks' pregnant. (It was an accident.) My husband blames me for my carelessness. He says he doesn't want the responsibilities of being a father and he wants his single life back. He ordered me to get an abortion, but I can't see myself killing my unborn child, so now we are separated.

I now feel that he doesn't care about me anymore, but I still love him and miss him terribly. We were so happy before this happened.

I want my husband, but I can't kill our baby. We are both Catholic. What shall I do?

SPEECHLESS

DEAR SPEECHLESS: You need counseling to find out why you still "love" a man who would leave you because you became pregnant. He needs counseling, too, but your first order of business is to look after yourself.

Please talk to your priest. He can comfort and counsel you. And feeling as you do, under no circumstances should you abort your child.

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago, my husband and I bought a lovely old home from an estate. The elderly woman who had owned it had died, and some of the furniture was sold with the house.

About two weeks after we moved in, I was putting my china away, and what do you think I found tucked away in the back of the dining room cabinet? An envelope containing $700 in cash, and several pension checks made out to the woman who had died!

Immediately I telephoned the daughter of the woman whose home it had been. I told her what I had found, and in less than an hour her husband was at my door to pick up the envelope. He didn't stay 30 seconds, and never even said "Thank you!"

I told several friends about this, and they all said I should have kept the money, that the dining room set was sold with the house, and I was entitled to whatever was in the cabinet. I felt better giving it back, however, even though no one would have known about the money in the cabinet had I not mentioned it.

In retrospect, I can't believe they didn't offer me even $10 just for the heck of it!

What do you think?
CINDY IN PENNSAUKEN, N.J.

DEAR CINDY: I think you did the right thing by returning the money. And the beneficiaries of your honesty are for the birds. (Cheap, cheap!)

***

DEAR ABBY: What's bugging me? I'll tell you what's bugging me. I'm a grown man, and I have a problem I am too ashamed to admit to anyone else. When my brother and I go to lunch together, he usually brings someone else along, or else we are invariably joined at the restaurant by a third party — usually a friend of his whom I also know. When there are three guys, the two of them carry on a conversation and I am completely left out. Maybe it's my fault for falling into this trap, but I can't very well tell my brother not to bring anyone, and I can't really ask a person to get lost if he wants to join us for lunch.

I wouldn't mind a third person, but I'm getting tired and fed up just sitting and listening to two other people talk to each other.

EXCLUDED DOWN SOUTH
DEAR EXCLUDED: Your brother and the third parties who invariably join you are rude and insensitive. Look for more compatible luncheon companions.

Fast foods for everyday fiestas

Tex-Mex foods make any meal a fiesta. Surprisingly simple and fast to fix, their vibrant colors and spicy south-of-the-border flavors make everyone's eyes light up.

Tostadas are popular Mexican restaurant fare, with tortilla bases forming "edible plates" on which ingredients are piled high. Tex-Mex Tostada Grande is a show-stopping, Texas-size version that serves a small crowd.

With a base of corn or flour tortillas which will crisp in the oven, toppings offer the contrasts which make Mexican foods so appealing — soft and crisp, hot and cold, spicy and mild. Additional add-ons include ripe olive slices, sour cream, picante sauce.

Chimichangas are another Southwestern favorite, but the typically shredded meat fillings and the deep fat frying required often discouraged all but the most ambitious at-home cooks. Streamlined Chimichangas are the simple, savory solution.

Ground pork or beef and onions, simmered with picante sauce and seasonings, shortcuts the way to authentic Mexican flavor. Baking the filled and buttered flour tortillas at a high temperature browns and crisps them beautifully, without the fuss of frying. Pass guacamole, sour cream and additional picante sauce.

TEX-MEX TOSTADA GRANDE

- 1 lb. ground beef or pork
- 1 (16 oz.) can tomatoes, drained and chopped
- ¾ c. picante sauce
- 1 t. ground cumin
- ½ t. salt
- 12 (6 inch) flour or corn tortillas
- 2 c. shredded cheddar or Monterey Jack cheese

- 2 c. shredded lettuce
- 1 med. tomato, chopped
- 1 ripe avocado, peeled, seeded, and sliced

Brown meat; drain. Stir in tomatoes, picante sauce, cumin and salt. Simmer five to 10 minutes or until most of liquid has evaporated. Cover bottom and sides of 14-inch pizza pan with tortillas; spread with meat mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Sprinkle with one cup of the cheese; return to oven until cheese is melted.

Arrange lettuce, remaining cheese, tomato and avocado over top. Cut into wedges; serve with additional picante sauce. Makes six servings.

STREAMLINED CHIMICHANGAS

- 1 lb. ground pork or beef
- 1 med. onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- ¾ c. picante sauce
- 1 t. ground cumin
- ½ t. oregano
- ½ t. salt
- 8 (8 inch) flour tortillas
- ¼ c. melted butter
- Dairy sour cream
- Guacamole (recipe follows)

Brown meat with onion and garlic; drain. Stir in picante sauce, cumin, oregano and salt; simmer five minutes or until most of liquid has evaporated. Brush one side of tortillas with butter; spoon a heaping 1-3rd cup meat mixture onto center of unbuttered sides. Fold two sides over filling; fold ends down.

Place seam side down in 13x9 inch baking dish. Bake in preheated oven at 475 degrees F. about 13 minutes or until golden brown. Top with sour cream, guacamole and additional picante sauce to serve. Makes four servings.

GUACAMOLE

- 1 ripe avocado, peeled, seeded and mashed
- 2 T. picante sauce
- 1 t. lemon juice
- ¼ t. salt

Combine all ingredients; mix well. Makes about one cup.

Appealing Avocado Crab Boats

Elegant simple salads appeal to the eye, taste

Often the simplest salads with a few carefully chosen ingredients have the best taste and eye appeal. Avocado Crab Boats are a perfect example of an artful blend of flavors and visual appeal. They are an ideal choice for a weekend luncheon or light summertime dinner.

Avocados, fresh asparagus and crabmeat are the main ingredients for this composed salad. The avocado halves are filled with a combination of crab, asparagus and celery mixed with a creamy, piquant dressing prepared by combining avocado pulp with a hint of chili powder and creamy cucumber dressing.

For a handsome buffet presentation, arrange the avocado halves on a large platter, surrounded by tomato wedges and cooked fresh asparagus spears. Serve the extra dressing in a hollowed-out tomato cup in the center of the platter.

AVOCADO CRAB BOATS

- 2 avocado
- ½ c. creamy cucumber dressing
- ¼ t. chili powder
- 1 (6 oz.) pkg. frozen crabmeat, thawed, drained
- ¼ lb. asparagus spears, cut into one-inch pieces, cooked, drained
- ¼ c. chopped celery

Cut avocados in half lengthwise; scoop out centers, leaving ½ inch shell. Mash avocado removed from centers. Add dressing and chili powder; mix well. Combine ½ cup dressing mixture, crabmeat, asparagus and celery; mix lightly. Spoon into shells. Arrange on platter; serve with remaining dressing mixture. Serve with tomato wedges and additional asparagus spears, if desired. Makes four servings.

VARIATION: Substitute 6 oz. can crabmeat, rinsed, drained, for frozen crabmeat.

TEX-MEX TOSTADA Grande, a southwestern version of the Mexican tostada, boasts vibrant color and appealing contrasts in tastes and temperatures. Easier to prepare than its show-stopping appearance might suggest, the way to authentic Mexican flavor is streamlined by using picante sauce in place of hard-to-prepare chiles. The "crust" of corn or flour tortillas is piled high with a spicy meat mixture, cheese, lettuce, tomato and avocado.

Say the search will continue for Mengele

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — U.S. and West German investigators said today they would continue the search for Nazi death camp doctor Josef Mengele, despite a statement from Mengele's family that he drowned in Brazil.

The Mengele family has given prosecutors no proof of their announcement that Mengele died in 1979, said Hans-Eberhard Klein, the chief West German prosecutor in charge of the case, at a news conference.

Mengele's son, Rolf, said Tuesday that he is certain a corpse unearthed near Sao Paulo, Brazil, is his father. Known as "Angel of Death," Josef Mengele is blamed for the killings of 400,000 Jews during World War II.

"As long as it is not certain that the corpse that was exhumed in Embu (Brazil) is Josef Mengele's, the worldwide investigation will continue," Klein said.

Three U.S. Marshals from Washington who arrived in Frankfurt today to work with Klein on the case also said the search for the most-wanted Nazi fugitive would go on.

"Everything that has been started (in the probe) continues," U.S. Marshal Howard Safir told The Associated Press. Israeli, West German and American investigators met in Frankfurt last month to coordinate their search.

Israelis investigating Nazi war crimes said Tuesday in Tel Aviv, Israel, that they did not believe Rolf Mengele's statement and would continue to search for his father. They said the report may be an attempt to end public interest in the family and take pressure off Mengele because of a $1 million reward Israel offered for information leading to his capture.

Klein said Mengele's relatives, who for years have refused to talk to authorities, have given prosecutors only one piece of paper — the same printed statement that they delivered to reporters in Munich Tuesday.

"I have received no (other) documents from the family," Klein said. He added, however, that he hoped to be in touch with the family "this week or next."

On Tuesday, Rolf Mengele's sister-in-law, Sabine Hackenjos, said at a news conference in Munich: "The proof will be so clear that no one will be able to think that someone is still being hidden."

Asked whether the younger Mengele went to South America to see his father while he was alive, Mrs. Hackenjos said, "That will be learned from the statement given to the Frankfurt prosecutor."

Rolf Mengele planned to give prosecutors the "background leading up to the death of Josef Mengele," said Herbert Bauermeister, who described himself as a freelance journalist representing the Mengeles.

Romeo Tuma, chief of federal police in Sao Paulo, said he received a telex Tuesday from West Germany that said Rolf Mengele's wife had "information about diseases and fractures" suffered by Josef Mengele. He said the telex did not elaborate or say whether the information would be in the statement.

Police in Brazil say the body, exhumed last week, is that of a man buried under the name Wolfgang Gerhard who drowned in the ocean on Feb. 7, 1979 and was buried at Embu, near Sao Paulo.

Rolf Mengele, a Freiburg attorney, is the son of Mengele and his first wife, Irene.

Tuma said police are certain the body was not Gerhard.

Tuma also said after X-rays were taken of a pelvic bone among the remains that a fracture had been detected on "the right lower section of the hip bone." Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal has said that Nazi documents indicated Mengele suffered a broken hip in a motorcycle accident in Auschwitz.

Agents arrest 18 in 'Operation Dry Gulch'

DALLAS (AP) — A three-year sting operation based in Texas and stretching into several states has netted 18 more arrests and another seizure of a laboratory where amphetamines allegedly were produced, a federal official said.

The undercover investigation, dubbed "Operation Dry Gulch," has so far resulted with the arrests of 198 people and one of the largest ever seizures of chemicals and equipment used to manufacture mostly amphetamines and methamphetamines, said Phil Jordan, Drug Enforcement Administration special-agent-in-charge for Texas and Oklahoma.

Since the operation began in June 1982, more than $2 million worth of chemicals and laboratory equipment used to manufacture drugs at about 60 laboratories has been seized, along with about $1.6 million in assets, Jordan said.

Agents from the DEA, Texas Department of Public Safety and Dallas police arrested 18 people in the Dallas area Tuesday, and nine others named in a federal indictment remained at large Tuesday evening, Jordan said.

Those arrested Tuesday were charged with federal conspiracy to produce amphetamines for sale, he said.

Since the operation began in June 1982, 180 others have been arrested with about 150 of those arrests made in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Jordan said. Arrests and seizures also have been made in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona.

"It's one of the biggest in the country in terms of impact because it goes right to heart" of amphetamine production, Jordan said.

"Texas rates way at the top in terms of mass production of clandestine labs, and it's second probably only to California in producing speed," he said.

The sting operation involved setting up a storefront in Dallas where chemicals were sold, Jordan said. Agents would videotape people buying chemicals at the store and then follow them to various labs, he said.

"Some people came as far away as Arkansas and Louisiana to buy chemicals," he said.

"The laboratories that we confiscated were capable of producing multiple hundred pound quantities of the drugs," Jordan said.

U.S. sought Shcharansky release

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States tried to gain the release of Anatoly Shcharansky and other Soviet dissidents before concluding a deal with East Germany that led to an exchange of prisoners between the two countries, according to U.S. officials.

A statement prepared by the American mission in Berlin, and released by the Justice Department here Tuesday, said U.S. officials "did raise the cases of persons such as" Shcharansky and Andrei Sakharov, the Nobel physicist who is in internal exile in Gorky.

"Our efforts to obtain release of dissidents in the Soviet Union and elsewhere are well known and continuing," the statement said. "We were told that the Soviet Union would not consider their release."

"After it became clear that the Soviets would not change their position, we decided that obtaining the release of the 25 persons and family members was an important humanitarian step which justified the agreement," it said.

An administration official who spoke only on condition of anonymity later confirmed the United States tried to obtain the release of Shcharansky, a prominent Jewish dissident, and other imprisoned dissidents. He said the U.S. goal for Sakharov and his wife, Yelena Bonner, was better treatment.

The official said the effort would be maintained. He suggested that Tuesday's exchange of 25 people for four who had been held on espionage charges was, in itself, a major accomplishment. "That was 6 for 1 and it shouldn't be minimized," the official said.

Sakharov, 64, has been confined to Gorky, some 240 miles east of Moscow, since 1980 and is reported in fragile health. His wife has a severe eye ailment.

Shcharansky, 35, was a leader of the human rights movement in the Soviet Union during the 1970s. He was sentenced to 13 years in prison in 1978 on charges of anti-Soviet activity and passing intelligence to foreign nations.

A U.S. official in Berlin who also spoke on condition of anonymity said negotiations for the spy swap had been going on for three years.

He said the Soviet Union was informed of the talks but was not directly involved.

But the U.S. official interviewed here said the United States had tried at the outset to persuade the Soviets to release Shcharansky and other dissidents and improve conditions for the Sakharovs.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, asked whether this was a prelude to any future prisoner exchanges, said, "No, this is something that stands totally alone."

Speakes said President Reagan approved the prisoner exchange. He added at a White House briefing that Reagan "had to take some legal action."

The White House spokesman apparently was alluding to fact that executive clemency was granted to Marian W. Zacharski, a Polish national and the best known of four East Europeans the U.S. tried for 25 East Europeans who had been held in East Germany and Poland.

The four released by the United States had been indicted on or convicted of espionage charges.

The U.S. Mission statement did not characterize the nature of offenses committed by the 25 Eastern Europeans set free as a result of the prisoner exchange talks.

A Justice Department official, declining to be named publicly, said, however, the 25 were people who "had been helpful to the United States" in the past.

All but two of the Eastern European prisoners were handed over in the prisoner exchange on the Glienicke Bridge in Berlin, the U.S. Mission said.

Officials probe question: 'how much were we hurt?'

WASHINGTON (AP) — As soon as John A. Walker Jr. was arrested in suburban Rockville, Md., and charged with espionage, the Navy began its detective work, trying to answer the question, "How much were we hurt?"

Within hours, Navy investigators were poring through Walker's service records, checking his duty stations and assignments and beginning the long process of interviewing his neighbors and friends.

As more arrests followed in the widening ring, Rear Adm. John L. Butts, director of naval intelligence, was appointed to head a 35-member board charged with coordinating the activities of investigators and producing a damage assessment.

Working late into the night behind locked doors on the Pentagon's top floor, the panel sifted through the reports of investigators, talked with Navy experts on tactics and operations, and came up with an answer for top Pentagon officials to the question of how much damage was done.

That answer, provided Tuesday by Adm. James Watkins, chief of naval operations, was "serious" but "not catastrophic." Navy Secretary John Lehman said that while U.S. ships and weapons were safe, overcoming the security loss would cost "many millions of dollars."

The damage assessment given at a Pentagon news conference capped three weeks of intense work by investigators.

They began their answer on the worst case assumption, Watkins said.

"We always consider the worst case," he said. That means the service figured that any sensitive information that could have been passed was actually given to the Soviets.

For Pentagon investigators, the chief fear involved missile-firing submarines, the "boomers" that form the heart of America's nuclear arsenal.

Superior American technology has made the giant boats invulnerable to Soviet detection — and thus attack — and Walker's service aboard two subs in the 1960s, along with his tour at an onshore sub communications facility, raised concern that the subs might have become more vulnerable.

Watkins laid that fear to rest. The U.S. subs, he said, "are still 100 percent survivable," which means they couldn't be knocked out by a Soviet nuclear strike.

"There is no indication that the Soviets have broken the code of how to detect" U.S. subs, he said.

The worst damage, Watkins said, involved communications, including codes and the design and operation of some sophisticated equipment. Much of that information is "perishable," which is the Pentagon's term for information that changes often enough so that it is not particularly valuable.

State investigates King birthday fund-raising

DALLAS (AP) — A group claiming it will stage a parade in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, is under investigation by the attorney general's office because no such event has been planned.

Assistant Attorney General Steve Gardner said his office has had several complaints concerning Rainbow Inc., a group that apparently is using the names of famous black people to solicit money it claims to need to have a parade in Dallas honoring King.

Donations from several states ranging from $3,000 to $10,000 have been given to the group, Gardner said.

But no parade is planned in Dallas for the slain black civil rights leader, said Lloyd Davis, executive director of the Federal Holiday Commission, the authority to coordinate activities commemorating King.

Davis also said Rainbow Inc. appears to be using the names of several black celebrities, sports figures and politicians without permission.

A spokesman for music star Stevie Wonder, who is listed in Rainbow Inc. literature as the honorary chairman of a "National Advisory Committee" of black leaders, said Wonder knows nothing about the organization.

"They have no right to use Stevie's name in connection with any fund raising," said Ira Tucker, Wonder's publicist.

Asian Indians operate 28 percent of U.S. hotels, motels

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer
SPARKS, Ga. (AP) — As the sun sinks over a pine forest, Jayram Patel sits at the front desk of his brick motel, awaiting the weary travelers who pull off busy Interstate 75.

Armed with a master's degree and an entrepreneurial spirit, Patel left his native India in 1971. He worked as a chemist in New Jersey and Tennessee until he had saved enough money to buy the Sparks Inn in 1979.

"The first year was a little disappointing," said Patel, noting that he and his wife, Nila, sometimes had to work 24 hours a day while building a reliable staff of 15. "If the cook doesn't show up, you have to be a cook. You've got to be prepared for everything."

The Patels, seeking what he described as "better opportunity," and their fellow Indian immigrants have found a niche in the motel business.

Indians in large numbers began entering the United States from Canada, England and Africa in the early 1970s. Unlike some other immigrants, they had cash to invest. At the same time, the Arab oil embargo had cut down on holiday driving in the United States.

Many American motel owners sold their slumping businesses to the Indians, who were looking for businesses they could learn quickly.

According to one estimate, about 15,000, or 28 percent, of the nation's 53,629 motels and hotels are owned by Indians or people of Indian descent.

"They just got in at the right time and began helping relatives," said Thomas Abraham, president of the New York-based National Federation of Asian Indian Organizations in America. He's compiled a list of Indian businesses in the United States.

Although only 16,000 Indians entered the United States between 1871 and 1965, their numbers surged from 107,000 to 361,544 between 1973 and 1980, according to Abraham. By the end of this year, he said, 500,000 Indians are expected to immigrate to the United States.

Asian Indians currently have the highest per-capita income of all ethnic groups in the country, said Abraham.

Because of their traditional emphasis on education, many Indians work as college professors, engineers and scientists, but thousands have put their degrees aside to be innkeepers in rural towns like Sparks, a south Georgia farm community of 1,300 that Patel calls slow to accept newcomers.

"They're very conservative people," Patel said. "They don't like too much foreigners. They don't even like people from North Carolina."

Thousands of the Indian motel owners have the same surname, Patel, but are not necessarily related, according to Abraham, who joked that "the Patels own more motels than Hilton and Sheraton combined."

Patel is a caste name for a Hindu business class in Gujarat, a state in western India known for its merchant-entrepreneurs.

Although Indian innkeepers are found in nearly every state, many have settled in California.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — On a typical weekend, the Rev. Joseph T. Heistand might speak at a retreat center in Tucson on Saturday night, conduct Sunday morning worship service in Lake Havasu City and then speak at a dedication service at a Phoenix parish on Sunday afternoon.

The schedule of the Episcopal bishop of Arizona might seem logistically impossible, but with the "Episcopal air force" all things are possible.

At Heistand's disposal are 11 private aircraft owned and piloted by lay members of the diocese. These pilots arrange their schedules in a way that enables them to fly the bishop to any parish in this state. With this transportation arrangement, he is perhaps one of the most accessible bishops in the country.

"We have 113,000 square miles and one bishop. That is a huge area to be responsible for. By flying, there is no place in Arizona that I cannot get to in an hour and 40 minutes," Heistand said.

The nation's oldest Protestant denomination is well-known as the guardian of tradition, but not as the originator of new methods of church work.

Yet Heistand has made innovations in the way his staid and proper denomination does its work by becoming a highly mobile bishop involved in more than routine diocesan administration.

The diocese of Arizona includes churches or missions in virtually every community of the state. Nine years ago, when Heistand became bishop, he traveled throughout the diocese by car to do his work. He found that he spent much of his time on the road. Those days are over for Heistand.

The idea for a jet bishop did not originate with Heistand but came from Sue Harper, a member of Christ Church Episcopal in Paradise Valley. Seven years ago, she listened to Heistand describe his arduous schedule of driving across the state, staying in motels and eating on the road.

Ms. Harper told Heistand that there were a number of Episcopalians who had their own planes for business, and she suggested they probably would be willing to fly him around the state.

"I took her seriously. I put her in charge of the whole thing. She became the commander of the air force," Heistand said.

Ms. Harper had been a pilot for many years and had contacts with other pilots in the Phoenix metropolitan area. She recruited several interested pilots, while Heistand contacted several pilots he knew.

Heistand gave Ms. Harper a copy of his travel schedule, and she arranged air transportation for most of the trips. The idea worked so well that it became an integral part of Heistand's work.

"I can spend more time at the congregations I'm visiting. I don't have to worry about getting back in the car and driving five hours to get home," Heistand said. "And I'm not nearly as tired when I get back."

Heistand dubbed the current 11 pilots in the air force "the bishop's angels." He designed an embroidered arm patch that they wear on their flight jackets.

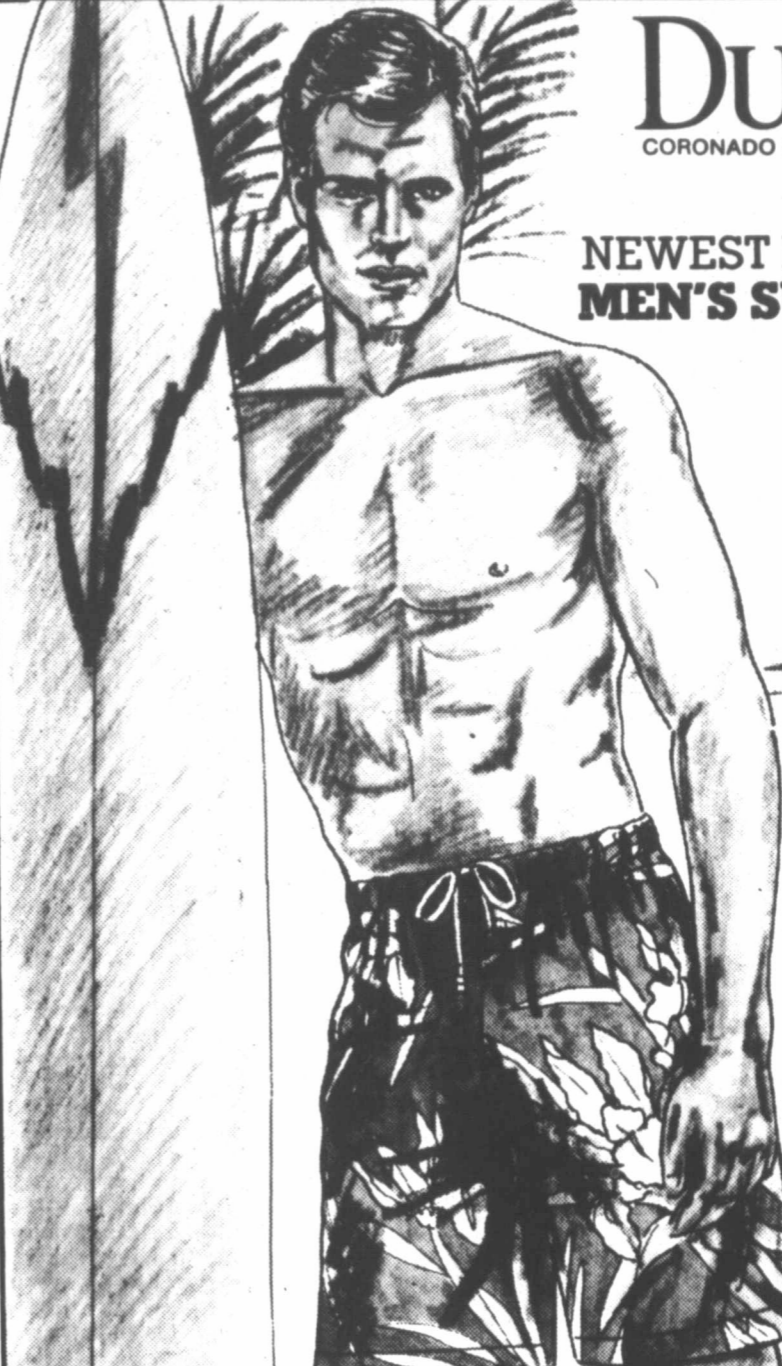

"It's a chicken air force — that is our motto," he said with a laugh. "What we mean is that we do not fly if the weather is marginal. There is nothing that cannot be canceled or rescheduled. We don't take chances."

Most of the planes in the air force are single-engine aircraft. Some of the places Heistand visits are so remote that a larger plane could not land.

"Several of the places we go actually have dirt landing strips. In one place, we land in a pecan orchard. You can't get in there with a big plane," he said.

Gutsy little town after the biggest prize of the century

EDITOR'S NOTE — Where will General Motors locate its new Saturn automobile plant? That's the million-dollar question — or, closer to the mark, billion-dollar question. All the big industrial centers are in the running. So are some other places, not so big in size but with just as big a dream.

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
 MEXICO, Mo. (AP) — Any day now, General Motors Corp. is going to end all this nail-biting suspense and name the winner of the closest thing this country has seen to a national lottery.

Any day, the people in some corner of the land are going to hear that GM has chosen their area as the birthplace for its new automobile, the Saturn. The choice is pregnant with the promise of joy and prosperity for all. At least that is the expectation.

The new plant will cost $5 billion and employ 6,000 people to start with. When all the attendant foundries and stamping plants and other support manufactories are in place, the payroll will hit $200 million a year and the area's population will jump by about 25,000 money-spending citizens. In chamber of commerce language the word for this is bonanza. Exclamation point.

Naturally, all of America's great centers of bustle and energy, many of them down on their luck, wasted no time in casting succulent lures to land this fat fish — Pittsburgh, Youngstown, Buffalo, Duluth, Chicago, Mexico...

Mexico? Mexico, Mo., population 12,267. "We figure we have as good a chance as any, better than most," said Mexico's mayor, Larry Webber, a druggist. "We're dead serious about this and GM knows it. Don't count us out. Mexico has pulled off some pretty good surprises in the past."

For instance? "For instance the Veterans Nursing Home. Moberly thought it had it. We needed it and we got it."

That was five years ago when the federal and state governments were looking for a 20-acre central Missouri site, donated. The town of Moberly, 40 miles west, had such a site. The town of Mexico did not. But if Mexico, where the unemployment rate at the time was 13 percent, could raise $74,610 in 25 days it could put together what it considered a better site than Moberly's. Mexico met the deadline with $30,000 to spare through donations from 2,300 townspeople. The local newspaper ran the names of all 2,300. The prize: a stable payroll of more than $1 million a year.

The chances of getting the Saturn site are, what, a thousand to one? So? This gutsy little town seems to thrive on steep odds.

Of course the nursing home was small potatoes compared with the Saturn plant, which one governor, Rudy Perpich of Minnesota, called "probably the biggest prize of the decade." He gave that assessment, which some considered understatement, on the Phil Donahue show in answer to a viewer who said competition for the site "looks like it's turning into a circus." Some would consider that understatement, too.

When GM announced its plans for Saturn last January, it opened a floodgate of hucksterism that would shame P.T. Barnum.

The nation's august governors, 26 of them, began a parade in gaudy orbit around Detroit promising the moon for Saturn: free land, tax forgiveness in the millions, site improvements in the millions. Step right up.

Minnesota's Perpich threw in state-subsidized home mortgages — 30 years, 10 percent — for Saturn's 100 top executives, and day-care centers for the factory kids. "We've assured GM," Michigan's Gov. James Blanchard consoled his constituents "that we will meet or beat any offer, anywhere."

Gov. Mario Cuomo, who brought along a New York license plate "SATURN-1" for the prototype car, boasted that his state had the cheapest power in the nation. So what, said Gov. Terry Branstad of Iowa, his state's high school students had the best SAT scores. Maybe so, said Gov. George Nigh of Oklahoma, but he himself had worked on a GM assembly line 32 years ago installing back seats in Buicks. "Our secret weapon," he said.

In Youngstown, Ohio, three high school bands gave a brassy send-off to a 35-car motorcade bearing 200,000 post cards to GM's president. With the steel business in decline and Ohio's Mahoning Valley going to rust, Youngstown is hurting.

Well, Mexico, Mo., has seen better times, too.

This is farm country, and farmers here have not escaped the plight of farmers throughout the land: high interest costs, low prices, heavy debt. Twice in recent weeks Mexico witnessed that saddest of rural rituals, a sheriff's sale. First the Middleton farm, west of town, then the Orth farm, east of town, went on the auction block on the Audrain County courthouse steps.

"It is not a pleasant thing to watch," one resident said.

But over the years Mexico has had an ace in the hole. Besides being a nationally famous breeding place for five-gaited saddle horses (Theodore Roosevelt bought his horses here), Mexico is also the home of A.P. Green Refractories

Co., which is the largest refractory in the world.

But employment at A.P. Green is at 45 percent. The ripples spread. Unemployment in the Mexico area is 10.3 percent. In recent years, a Mexico shoe factory closed. A drapery company moved into the vacant shoe plant. Last fall it closed. A chemical company closed. A paper box company built a building, but never opened. Like Youngstown, Mexico could assure GM of a plentiful supply of labor.

Labor, of course, was just one of GM's requirements. Last Jan. 25 Gov. John Ashcroft summoned to the state capitol officials from cities across Missouri to outline the other needs — acreage, water supply, railroads, highways, utilities, hospitals, schools, all you would expect for a plant that aims to turn out 500,000 automobiles a year. The governor said he would need the cities' proposals in 10 days.

Mark Pentz and Michael McGannon drove down from Mexico and took their seats alongside the delegations from places like Kansas City and St. Louis and Springfield, names which appear on the Missouri map in somewhat larger type.

Pentz, who is 35, is Mexico's city manager. McGannon, 45, represents the Mexico area Chamber of Commerce.

"Halfway through the governor's presentation I looked at Mike and he looked at me and we both nodded," Pentz said. "When it was over, we stood in the lobby and decided, let's go for it."

On the way home, Pentz stopped at a highway pay phone. He told his secretary to get hold of the mayor, the city attorney, the district manager of Union Electric, the real estate man from A.P. Green, a few other movers and shakers, and ask them to meet at city hall the next morning, a Saturday. They all came. They listened. Their verdict was unanimous. Go for it.

Pentz and his assistant, Tom Herron, spent the following day, Sunday, outlining what the proposal ought to include. On Monday the city council approved. By Tuesday the city had options on 877 acres with an additional 1,174 acres adjoining.

That was the first big hurdle. Now the gritty work began.

Pentz stuck a compass in the Mexico dot on a road map and drew a circle with a 50-mile radius.

"It had to be a central Missouri proposal," Pentz said. "If we called it simply a Mexico proposal we wouldn't get the time of day."

Phone calls went out to every town in the 18 counties within the circle. Pentz needed data, precise data. How many unemployed in the area? Precisely 13,145. How many books in the area's libraries? Precisely 4,736,582. Nobody sweats the details like Mark Pentz. A videotape crew went to work. A professional chart maker set up a drafting table. Lights burned late in city hall. Mexico was its energetic self again, running on high octane, getting things done in dead earnest. A new excitement chased away Mexico's farm-sale blues.

Within the prescribed 10 days Mexico had put together a 200-page proposal as slick as any the governor received, and off it went to GM.

But Mexico was not alone. The number of proposals from around the nation astonished even GM.

"We knew we would get a big response," said a company spokesman, Stan Hall, "but we had no idea it would be this big. It seems like everybody in America who has a piece of property has offered it to GM."

So what could little Mexico do to make its proposal stand out in a stack that big?

Max Thomson, managing editor of the daily Mexico Ledger, pondered that question one morning as he stared at his shaving mirror. Chicago had tried a billboard, Youngstown a motorcade. How about, Thomson thought, a big gas balloon from Mexico landing on the GM chairman's lawn? The absurdity amused him.

Investigator tracks down livestock, equipment thieves

By KAREN SVENDSEN
Waco Tribune-Herald
HEWITT, Texas (AP) — Cattle rustling was big in the years when cattle drives pushed north on the Chisholm Trail to stockyards in Kansas. But cattle rustling is even bigger today, says Eddie Foreman, field inspector for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Foreman is one of 32 TSCRA cattle inspectors in Texas and Oklahoma who looks for stolen farm equipment and animals. Based in Hewitt, a couple of miles south of Waco city limits, Foreman covers McLennan, Bosque, Coryell, Falls, Bell, Lampasas and Hamilton counties.

Foreman does not like the term "cattle rustling," saying it conjures up romantic television images. To him, the crime is cattle theft, pure and simple.

"What they're doing is stealing people's livelihood," Foreman said. "I don't dress up a thief any more than what they are."

Cattle thieves steal today for the same reason they stole in the past — money, Foreman said. Only stealing is easier and more lucrative now than during the olden days.

Cattle in a trailer are not as easy to track as 40 head tromping across the range. And selling a cow at current prices of more than $300 is greater temptation than the 1880s' price of $12 to $15 a head.

"Cattle thieving — it's a multimillion-dollar business," Foreman said.

Even during the past 20 years, the nature of cattle rustling has changed considerably. The big central stockyards have given way to more and smaller local livestock sales that are easier for thieves to reach and harder for law enforcement officials to monitor.

Computers have countered some of that advantage by keeping detailed records of the cattle sold and by having a centralized list of stolen animal descriptions.

"If cattle went through a sale, then hopefully they'll be record of it, and a computer will find them," Foreman said.

Imagination is a ready trait among cattle thieves, Foreman said. They can hide clues in the floorboard of a truck or the trunk of a car. A clever thief may put up a rancher's herd of cattle as collateral and trick a loan officer to believe the animals are his.

Besides imagination, the thieves have little else in common. Some "barely know the difference between a milk cow and a racehorse," while others are professional rodeo riders, Foreman said.

The TSCRA has never compiled a national figure on the number of cattle stolen because many ranchers do not report stolen cattle, believing their animals died or wandered into a neighbor's field. Other ranchers who report missing cattle fail to notify authorities when animals are relocated.

Foreman would not estimate how many cattle are stolen annually in the Central Texas area, but said the theft rate is directly proportional to current market prices. High prices foretell heavy stealing.

When a rancher calls Foreman to say his cattle have disappeared, the inspector checks to see if any other law enforcement officers are working on the case, reads their report and drives to the scene to scout for tracks. By studying the area, he may determine if the animals were penned by dogs, horses, people on foot or coaxed with hay. Tire tracks will indicate the type of trailer used. Some thieves have an easily identifiable method of operation, he said.

The second major step to solving the crime is obtaining a detailed description of the animals or property. Even ear tags and vaccination marks may help investigators locate an animal.

"The next thing I want is a telephone," Foreman said.

He calls sale barn operators through Texas to see if any cattle matching the description are being sold, and he puts case information into a computer. Many times the field inspectors will catch thieves when they pick up checks after trying to sell the animals at a cattle sale.

If no cattle are found at the sale barns, Foreman starts tracking. Returning to the crime scene, he questions neighbors about the

Another big winter wheat crop is likely, USDA says

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite some losses from dry weather, disease and insects, the 1985 winter wheat crop is still shaping up as a whopper, according to the latest Agriculture Department estimates.

Based on June 1 indications, the crop is expected to produce about 1.89 billion bushels, down 8 percent from last year's bumper harvest and 4 percent less than indicated a month ago, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Monday.

Despite the reduction — caused by a cutback in acres and lower average yields — the 1985 winter wheat crop is expected to be the sixth largest on record and will help add to the U.S. grain surplus.

Winter wheat is planted in the fall and harvested the following summer. It makes up about three-fourths of the total U.S. wheat supply.

In a related "supply-and-demand" report, the department projected total wheat production this year at about 2.44 billion bushels, including winter and spring varieties. That was down from 2.53 billion bushels projected in May and well below the 1984 production of 2.6 billion bushels — the third largest on record.

But total wheat use, including exports, is down sharply and may total only 2.3 billion bushels in 1985-86, compared with 2.6 billion bushels last season. Thus, the report said, U.S. wheat inventories next year could rise to 1.55 billion bushels from 1.4 billion bushels on hand as of June 1, the beginning of the new wheat marketing year.

Translated to market prices, wheat at the farm may average in the range of $3.20 to $3.40 per bushel in 1985-86, unchanged from the outlook a month ago. In 1984-85, the farm price wheat averaged $3.38 per bushel, down from $3.53 in 1983-84.

Beaumont woman Miss Rodeo Texas

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A 20-year-old Beaumont woman has been crowned Miss Rodeo Texas and will compete in December's Miss Rodeo America Pageant in Las Vegas.

Carla Sterling, who won the title late Sunday, was sponsored by the Texas Prison Rodeo and competes in barrel racing at local rodeos. She also exhibits horses in open and registered horse shows.

Also honored at the competition at Billy Bob's Texas in Fort Worth was Paige Surls, 17, who was selected Miss Rodeo Texas Teen.

Henry Neshem, president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said the reduced winter wheat crop is "bad news for those producers hit by bad weather or disease" but that it will not have much effect on market prices.

Wheat prices have had little impact on bread prices in recent years. According to USDA analysts, there is less than a nickel's worth of wheat — based on farm prices — in a one-pound loaf of white bread.

In the Crop Reporting Board's report, the average winter wheat yield, based on indications as of June 1, was estimated at 39.1 bushels per harvested acre, down from 40 bushels in 1984 and 40.7 bushels forecast in May.

The Kansas wheat crop, normally the largest, was estimated at 452.4 million bushels, down from 464 million indicated in May but still above last year's output of 431.2 million bushels.

Nationally, farmers are expected to harvest about 48.4 million acres of winter wheat this year, down from 51.5 million in 1984.

No production estimates were included for spring wheat, corn and many other spring-planted crops. Those will be released by USDA later in the growing season.

Indicated production of winter wheat and average yields in 1985 by major producing states, based on June 1 prospects, included:

Arkansas, 21,660,000 bushels and an average yield of 38 bushels per acre; California, 48,750,000 and 75; Colorado, 120,900,000 and 39; Georgia, 24,000,000 and 30; Idaho, 58,500,000 and 65; Illinois, 37,600,000 and 47.

Indiana, 35,770,000 and 49; Kansas, 452,400,000 and 39; Kentucky, 12,920,000 and 38; Michigan, 42,900,000 and 55; Missouri, 54,800,000 and 40; Montana, 39,600,000 and 22; Nebraska, 94,300,000 and 41.

North Carolina, 20,400,000 and 30; Ohio, 41,500,000 and 50; Oklahoma, 203,500,000 and 37; Oregon, 53,900,000 and 55; South Dakota, 49,880,000 and 29; Tennessee, 12,000,000 and 40; Texas, 201,300,000 and 33; and Washington, 112,500,000 and 50.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new analysis by the Agriculture Department says prospects still point to an improved grain harvest in the Soviet Union this year.

Based on current indications, total Soviet grain production could be around 195 million metric tons, up from a poor showing of 170 million tons in 1984, the department said Monday in its latest report. That would be the largest Soviet grain harvest since the 1978 record of 237.4 million tons.

The Soviet Union's grain imports from all foreign sources are expected to be 37 million tons, also unchanged.

Miami downs Texas to win championship

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Miami Hurricanes, billed by Coach Ron Fraser as the "happiest team in America..."

This is a special team, unlike any other we've had, said Fraser after the Hurricanes downed Texas 10-6 in the NCAA College World Series Tuesday night...

Miami made use of five Texas errors, including four in the first three innings, to jump to a 6-0 lead...

Greg Ellena, selected the tournament's most valuable player, had four of the Hurricanes' 14 hits as Miami ended a 64-16 season with its second national title...

This one feels better than the first one, said Fraser. I thought we did what we had to do tonight — go out there and score some runs...

Miami did win a 2-1 game with two unearned runs against Texas Sunday night. The teams were rained out Monday...

The rest gave relief ace Rick Raether a needed breather to strengthen his tired arm. He went 3-1 in 3-3 innings Saturday in a 6-5 win aided by Ellena's two-run, game-winning homer...

Kevin Sheary, Miami's starting pitcher and 7-4 on the season, picked up his third tournament win with 6 2-3 innings against the Longhorns...

I felt if Sheary could give us seven strong innings, I knew Raether was good for eight and nine, said Fraser...

While Sheary and Raether put the lid on Texas hitters in all but a three-run seventh, the Hurricanes took advantage of their hot bats and five Texas errors...

They gave us the first half of the ballgame and that was important, said Fraser.

They looked a little tight at the beginning and we came out swinging the bats," said Miami's Calvin James...

We made mistakes, said Texas second baseman Billy Bates. Miami played tough, and it is tough to beat somebody when they score 10 runs...

Texas, ranked third and finishing 64-14, was runner-up for a second straight year. The Longhorns were beaten 3-1 in the title match with Fullerton State a year ago...

Miami became the fifth team to come out of the losers' bracket to win two straight games against the winners' bracket champ. The last team to accomplish that feat was Southern Cal against Arizona State in 1972...

The championship game's 16 runs also made it the highest scoring CWS title game. The previous record was 15, set in the first CWS title game in 1947 when California beat Yale 8-7...

Rangers knock off Angels

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Parity is built into baseball, where the 162-game schedule is the great equalizer. On any given day, the game's downtrodden can beat the high-flying...

And so it was Tuesday night, when the American League West's cellar-dwelling Texas Rangers knocked the California Angels out of the division lead...

Texas' 6-4 victory nudged the Angels a half-game behind the Chicago White Sox.

Everything worked well this time for the Rangers. Making his first start since Apr. 24, and after a horrendous stretch in the bullpen, Dave Rozema went five strong innings for the win with Greg Harris' relief help...

Texas pounded four solo homers, three by men in deep slumps. And Bobby Valentine's club even survived a bizarre seventh-inning play in which Gary Pettis scored a contested run from first base on a 30-foot grounder...

The Rangers led 5-3 when Pettis pinch-ran for Bob Boone, who delivered his third single with one out.

When Craig Gerber topped a ball down the line that third baseman Buddy Bell fielded, Pettis ran all the way to third.

Both shortstop Curtis Wilkerson and catcher Don Slaught converged to cover third base. With Slaught leaving home plate unattended, Pettis got back up and ran home.

That's where the controversy began.

Valentine and his players argued that third base umpire Don Denkinger had raised his hands to call time before Pettis' sprint home.

It was just a fluke play — but maybe we should put it in our playbook, said Harris.

Harris could afford to joke after averting an even scarier ninth-inning situation to notch his fourth save.

Following a lead-off walk to Rod Carew and Wilkerson's second error of the game, he struck out Doug DeCinces, Reggie Jackson and Brian Downing to close out his four-inning stint.

Harris appeared to have no problem after DeCinces hit his first two-strike pitch deep into the stands but foul.

That was a mistake, said Harris. I was trying to sneak one inside, and I got lucky. Then I threw him a fastball low and away.

I had (Dave) Schmidt ready, Valentine said of the situation.

But I try to build short-term confidence for long-term character and that didn't seem like the time to take Harris out.

Rozema, 3-4, had fashioned a 9.39 ERA in 11 relief outings since his last start, but held the Angels to a pair of unearned runs through five innings.

Bothered by a tender shoulder, Rozema hadn't pitched at all since June 2.

He was given a 1-0 lead on a second-inning homer by Pete O'Brien. Urbano Lugo, 0-1, making his big league starting debut, also allowed Cliff Johnson's eighth homer in the fourth before departing with a blood blister on his pitching hand.

Larry Parrish hit his 11th homer off Doug Corbett in the sixth, and Oddibe McDowell added his second off Stewart Cliburn in the seventh.

What can you say? We threw three high fastballs and a hanging slider, said California Manager Gene Mauch. It's just one of those things.

Boone delivered RBI singles in the fourth and sixth innings to keep the Angels within striking range.

Rangers sign free agents ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers have signed 11 more players selected in last week's summer free agent draft, including second baseman Darrin Garner, a first-round pick in the secondary phase.

Garner, 19, of Orange Coast Junior College in Costa Mesa, Calif., batted .325 and had nine steals in 11 attempts this spring. He has been assigned to Sarasota in the Gulf Coast League.

Cole places high in tourney

Pampa bowler Forrest Cole was just nine pins away from making the top 24 in a Professional Bowlers Association Tournament in Denver, Colo. last weekend.

Cole carried a 213 average through 18 games and finished in 29th place at Celebrity Lanes during the Denver Open. It was Cole's best showing since turning professional in 1980.

Mark Baker of Garden Grove, Calif., was the leader going into Tuesday night's final round of match games, averaging 227 for the first 34 games.

The finals of the Denver Open will be televised on ESPN tonight.

Cole plans to bowl in another PBA tournament next weekend in Seattle, Wash.

Dean's win in extra innings

First-place Dean's Pharmacy had quite a scare against winless Citizens National in American Little League baseball action Tuesday night.

Citizens took Dean's into one extra inning before losing, 7-6. Quincey and Jason Williams pitched for Dean's.

Jabbar withstands test of time to win MVP honors

BOSTON (AP) — As a 24-year-old, two-year veteran of the National Basketball Association, Lew Alcindor was the playoff's Most Valuable Player as the Milwaukee Bucks won their only championship.

Fourteen years and a name change later, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar proved he has stood the test of time as well as any athlete in the 1970s and 80s.

Abdul-Jabbar was named unanimously Sunday as the 1985 post-season MVP. He averaged 25.7 points and nine rebounds per game in the Lakers' 4-2 championship series triumph over the Boston Celtics. In 1971, he averaged 26.6 points in the playoffs.

For me it's a personal treasure, said Abdul-Jabbar, who averaged 30.2 points and 11 rebounds in Los Angeles' four victories. It showed what I can do over a long period of time. It's 14 seasons since I won it the last time. That's quite a long stretch of time.

You're never going to see another one like him, said Lakers Coach Pat Riley before flying to Washington with the team to meet President Reagan at the White House. He's a superior athlete — the best of our time. Without him, we're just an ordinary team.

Abdul-Jabbar plans to play one more season for the Lakers, a year in which he would like to succeed where every other team since 1969, including the Celtics and Lakers, has failed to repeat as NBA champion.

It'll be there next year defending the championship, he said. It will be a good way to play my last year.

The Celtics, however, are wondering why the all-time leading scorer is considering retirement.

He could throw down that sky hook 'til he's 64, Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. That will always be there.

Time after time during the series, the Lakers passed the ball in to Abdul-Jabbar inside.

When the Celtics surrounded him, he calmly and precisely passed back outside to a wide-open teammate. When they were a step slow to double-team him, he would drive past the lone defender or whirl and toss up the deadly hook shot.

Abdul-Jabbar was particularly brilliant when working with Earvin Magic Johnson, who had 14 points, 14 assists and 10 rebounds in Sunday's final game, giving him 84 assists for the series. That broke Norm Nixon's 1982 record for a six-game series by a whopping 24.

Kareem and Magic, our two leaders, were the difference, Riley said.

Despite the individual brilliance of Abdul-Jabbar, Johnson and James Worthy, who scored 61 points in the last two games, the 1985 championship series will certainly be remembered as the one that saw Los Angeles finally beat Boston for the first time in nine playoff tries.

work hard, that we didn't have the work ethic, said Johnson, himself a playoff MVP when the Lakers won titles in 1980 and 1982. But we did. We showed everybody that we can dive, that we can make hustle plays and we are a workman's team. The victory is sweeter because we broke the stranglehold, the dynasty, against us, Riley said. Boston can never mock us again like they did last year.

As for Larry Bird, the regular-season MVP the last two years and the playoff MVP in 1984, he faces an uncertain summer after hitting just 41 percent of his field-goal attempts in the finals.

I felt great throughout the series, said Bird, who never offered injuries to his right elbow, right index finger and ankle as an excuse for his performance.

The shots just weren't there. I hope I don't have to visit the doctor during the summer, but we'll have to see. It's going to be a short summer and a tough one.

Gymnastics canceled DALLAS (AP) — Poor ticket sales have forced the cancellation of the U.S. Olympic gymnastic exhibition that was scheduled for Friday, one of the tour promoters said.

James Hartung, a promotional associate of J-T Productions Inc. and one of the 11 Olympic gymnasts who comprise the exhibition team, said it is unlikely that the tour will continue.

LA honors World Champion Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The sign held high by one fan of the Los Angeles Lakers told it all: "Let The World End, I'm Happy Now." There were a lot of happy people lining the streets of Los Angeles and attending a ceremony at City Hall Tuesday to honor the Lakers for winning the National Basketball Association championship. There also were a few unhappy people near the steps of City Hall who were briefly crushed against water-filled barrels serving as crowd-control barriers. That development along with moderate heat caused the festivities to be cut short. About 30 people received medical treatment, most of them because of heat prostration. Only one person required hospitalization, a 16-year-old boy who fell out of a tree. "Did you have fun Sunday?" Earvin "Magic" Johnson asked the fans gathered in 80-degree weather at City Hall. After a loud, positive response, Johnson said, "It's a long time since last season. Actually, it's a long time since three seasons ago," the last time the Lakers won the title. "It feels great. Let's try to do it again next season." The Lakers won the title by beating the Boston Celtics 111-100 at the Boston Garden Sunday to capture the best-of-seven championship series four games to two. A year ago, the Celtics won the championship by beating the Lakers in seven games. "We know we let everybody including ourselves down last year," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers' 38-year-old captain and the series' Most Valuable Player. "But we stuck with it, we didn't stop working, we didn't stop fighting." The championship was the fourth in the history of the Lakers — the club previously won titles in 1972, 1980 and 1982 — and it was the first time in nine tries that they were able to beat the Celtics in the finals. Police Lt. Dan Cooke said four people were taken into custody for minor offenses and were later released. There were no arrests, he said. One man taken into custody was "stark naked attacking a television truck," he said. Cooke estimated 30,000 lined the parade route and surrounded City Hall. He said the crowd was larger than those assembled for the Los Angeles Dodgers' World Series celebration in 1981 and the Los Angeles Raiders' 1984 Super Bowl victory. At least 6,000 people swarmed around the front steps of City Hall where the Lakers were presented with a proclamation. Semifinal action is scheduled for Thursday with the finals slated for Friday.

Weather helps Ballesteros, Watson

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Under almost any circumstances, Seve Ballesteros and Tom Watson can be expected to play major roles in golf's major championships. Under the circumstances prevailing at the 85th U.S. Open Championship — cold, rainy weather — their positions are enhanced. "It's not very good," Ballesteros said of the steady rain, chilly temperatures and blustery winds that curtailed practice Tuesday at the Oakland Hills Country Club course. "But it's often much worse than this in Europe" where he plays most of his schedule, said the Spaniard who has won two Masters and two British Opens. "It'll probably be in the 40's when I tee off Thursday morning," a dripping wet Watson said after a practice session played in 50-degree weather, with 20 mph winds and steady, cold rain. "But," he said, smiling broadly while he toweled his hair, "I've still got my lucky ski cap." "You know, I've had lots of requests for that cap." Watson has a history of playing some of his best, most productive golf under adverse weather conditions. He calls his 69 in some of the worst weather in American golf history at the 1979 Memorial tournament one of the finest rounds of his career. He achieved that score while wearing a ski cap, layers of sweaters and foul-weather gear — and a large smile. His career, of course, is spiced by one U.S. Open victory, two Masters championships and is highlighted by five British Open titles, several of which were won in cold, wind and rain. And that was the forecast for the Open: rain continuing today with a high near 60, and possible showers through Friday. Ballesteros, relaxed and easygoing as he often is when he's playing his best, shrugged. "I'm very confident now," he said. "It's just right. I'm playing good, but not too good." He raised his hand on an ascending plane. "Moving up. Getting close to very good." In addition to Watson and Ballesteros, the leading contenders for the $103,000 first prize include such familiar names as Jack Nicklaus, Hale Irwin, Ray Floyd and PGA champion Lee Trevino.

Movie to be made of Akeem Olajuwon

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Rocket Akeem Olajuwon sold the rights for a movie on his life and production plans are under way, the player's spokesman said. Writer-producer Ronald M. Cohen, who created the ABC series, "Call to Glory," will direct the movie, Olajuwon's spokesman Milton Kahn said Tuesday. "They're going to go to Africa and shoot it where he was born in Lagos, Nigeria," he said. The movie will begin at age 16, when Olajuwon first read a story on Los Angeles Laker basketball player, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and decided he, too, wanted to be a basketball player, Kahn said. Cohen said he was finalizing the movie plans and would not disclose the studio company, name of the movie or who would be starring.

In the year ahead you will do well in ventures or enterprises where you can use your inventiveness and originality. If you have something new to offer, figure out ways to get it to market. GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Limit your confidential discussions today to people you trust completely. Don't broadcast your secrets to a group. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your actions will be closely scrutinized by others today, especially in career situations. Do nothing that could make you the topic of gossip. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you lack respect for the intelligence of others today, those you associate with will notice and they'll find reasons to reject your ideas. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) People you meet for the first time today should not be taken at face value. They may be OK, but it would be wise to check them out further. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Others will have greater respect for you today if you "fess up" to your mistakes instead of trying to excuse them. Laugh and the world laughs with you. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be sure to show proper gratitude today to people who go out of their way to help you. A "thank you" will be remembered far longer than indifference. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your take-charge qualities will be very pronounced today and this is well and good, provided you don't assert yourself in ways others will find offensive. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Any disagreements you have with your mate today should be resolved within the privacy of your home. Airing differences in public will look bad. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) To avoid future complications, make certain that the understanding you arrive at with another today has the same meaning for him that it does for you. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You should do rather well in the management of your personal resources today, but a problem could occur if you place faith in a person who can't handle money. ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your financial advantages could grow slimmer today if you let things dawdle on. Once you get a "yes," move immediately. TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Instead of complaining about your duties or chores today, roll up your sleeves and get to work. Your hardest task is overcoming a poor attitude.

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, N.Y. (AP) — Actress Susan Anton says she saw the trauma of the Vietnam war and its aftermath in the faces of children when she visited the home of a couple who adopted four small refugees.

She visited the Long Island home of Hugh Boyle and his wife on Tuesday to get acquainted. Miss Anton will be narrator of a documentary about adoptions of Vietnamese refugees that will feature the Boyles.

"I'm becoming very, very overwhelmed by it all," the actress said. "I'm very emotional, because it's one thing to read about it, but you come face-to-face with these little faces, and you realize the courage it took them to get here. There's no way you can express it."

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Japanese Crown Prince Akihito, his wife Michiko and their son Prince Hiro are headed for Finland, the last country on their four-nation, 15-day Scandinavian tour.

On Tuesday, the last full day of their official visit to Norway, the royal couple and the royal offspring visited Oslo's Holmenkollen ski-jumping hill, site of the Winter Olympics in 1952.

They also toured Frogner Park to see sculptures by the renowned Norwegian artist Gustav Vigeland.

Haley told University of Tennessee graduates in a commencement address Tuesday that it is easy to forget that ancestors made those successes possible.

"As we go forward, we need to look back with a sense of reverence to those who made it possible for us to do the things we're doing today," he said, telling the graduates to open their arms to their parents and "hug them, kiss them and say, 'I want to thank you for what you have made possible for me.'"

MIAMI (AP) — Mr. Bill, the clay character featured on "Saturday Night Live," makes his TV comeback this summer in a commercial campaign for Burger King's reformulated Whopper that also will feature live celebrities.

Loretta Swit, Mr. T, Emmanuel Lewis of television's "Webster," and Bruce Weitz of "Hill Street Blues," also will appear in the $32 million campaign, in which celebrities play skeptical consumers who already liked the Whopper but are won over to the new product after a taste.

Sacramento trial for the man who sparked MADD

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The man who is credited with sparking formation of Mothers Against Drunken Drivers is to be tried in Sacramento County Superior Court on his last charge.

Sacramento Municipal Court Judge Gary Ransom made the decision Monday after three witnesses testified at a preliminary hearing for Clarence W. Busch, 52, who was being held without bail.

Busch, whose hit-and-run killing of a 13-year-old girl walking along a road in 1980 resulted in the formation of MADD, faces felony drunken driving charges from an accident last April in which the other driver was injured.

The injured driver in the latest accident, Carrie Sinnott, 19, of the Sacramento suburb of Carmichael, testified that she was driving across an intersection on a green light when a car driven by Busch slammed into the left front of her automobile.

Sinnott said she didn't see the other car until it hit her. "I just looked and there he was," she testified.

A doctor testified that Sinnott suffered no broken bones but had neck and back sprains and contusions on the shoulder and one hand.

California Highway Patrol Officer Lloyd E. Boden testified that he first contacted Busch as Busch was "rifling through the glove box of his vehicle," half in, half out the open passenger door.

Boden said he smelled alcohol and noted that Busch's speech was slurred and his eyes bloodshot.

Busch failed a field sobriety test, Boden said, and was placed under arrest.

A blood sample revealed a blood-alcohol content of 0.20 percent, twice the standard for drunkenness in California.

Court records indicate that Busch was arrested and convicted of driving under the influence of alcohol in 1976 and 1977, and plea-bargained a 1979 drunken-driving arrest down to reckless driving.

On May 1, 1980, Busch was arrested on misdemeanor drunken driving and misdemeanor hit-and-run charges.

Released pending a court appearance on those charges, he struck and killed Cari Lightner two days later as she was walking to church in a bicycle lane.

That prompted her mother, Candy Lightner, to launch MADD, an organization to combat drunken driving that has since gone national.

Lightner has since moved the headquarters of MADD to Dallas.

Convicted of vehicular manslaughter in the Lightner case, Busch served four months in prison and was placed in a work furlough program. Less than a year after his conviction, he was released on parole. He eventually served 16 months in prison because he twice violated the terms of that parole, state Department of Corrections officials said.

'Doctor' treats cases of bad phone manners

ST. LOUIS (AP) — If the switchboard operators and receptionists at your company are rude and cut off callers abruptly, it may be time to call the doctor — The Telephone Doctor.

Nancy Friedman guarantees she has the cure to ailments such as "holditis," "emotional leaking" and the dreaded "non-support statement."

Mrs. Friedman — calling herself The Telephone Doctor — travels to companies nationwide presenting her 3½-hour program on telephone manners.

Her talk has nothing to do with electronic gadgetry, long-distance service or call-waiting. Instead, it deals with attitude, tone of voice and language.

"The telephone is the lifeline of a business," she said. "Every question is a sales opportunity. When a person says, 'He's not in, can I take a message,' you've just lost a sales opportunity."

Mrs. Friedman said that rather than a general question such as "Can I take a message?" the response should be: "He's not in, but he'll be back at 2. Let me take your name and number and I'll have him return your call."

Proper telephone technique applies to everyone who uses a company phone. Mrs. Friedman said, "from the top executive to the guy who sweeps the floors. There's nobody that's exempt from losing a sale."

Mrs. Friedman said one of the most common problems is "holditis," when a person tells a caller he will be put on hold.

"Don't order your customers to hold," she said. "Ask them if they are able to hold. They're calling to give you orders, not take them."

"Emotional leaking" occurs when a person having a bad day takes it out on an unsuspecting caller. "How do you avoid it?" Mrs. Friedman asked rhetorically. "You shift gears. You regain your professional composure. A phony smile is better than a real frown."

Those are bad habits, but not as bad as "non-support statements. They're the worst," she said.

In fact, it was a non-support statement — a response such as "no" without elaboration — that turned Mrs. Friedman into one smooth operator.

She called her insurance agent three years ago and told him she was dropping her policies. When he asked why, she said it was because she could not stand dealing with the people who answered the telephones at his office.

"I told him, 'We treat our wrong numbers better than you treat your customers,'" Mrs. Friedman said. "It was in such an uncaring manner. I'd ask if he was in, and they would say 'no,' or 'he's out to lunch,' or 'he's gone.' I'd say, 'When did he die?'"

Her big break came when she related the story to a newspaper editor in Davenport, Iowa.

Calling All Home Makers Brought To You By Aline Johnson PICK SOMETHING SPECIAL

One way to give yourself - and your home - a lift, is to consider this idea:

Think about picking one special thing for each room. It can be one piece of furniture or one outstanding accessory.

The theory is that just one very special thing can really perk up a room.

And, furniture surveys show there's more variety and more options today in every price range — so it's easier to find those special things that can do so much for your home.

There are many different things you can think about. You might want to look for a new chair, or a new cabinet, or perhaps consider a new color or pattern. Whatever you select can stand out on its own and at the same time become an integral part of the whole — contrasting AND harmonizing with the other things in your room.

You might start by looking around each room and decide what one thing, or things, that could be added. It might be just something small for one room, or maybe something big in another, but by analyzing your rooms this way you can, at the pace you set for yourself, add those elements—large and small—that can make your home even more special.
