A NEW ADDITION — Commemorating the remodeling and expansion of Wheeler's Parkview Hospital are, from left, Wheeler County Judge Wendell Morgan, board chairman Dean Tipps, former chairmen Lewis Gravson and Paula Britt. Holding the ribbon is board member Tom Puryear. The $1.1 million addition to the hospital was funded through operating money and a strong tax base, according to hospital administrator Charles Hix, who added that the hospital opearates debt free. The addition features 10 private and four semi-private rooms, a new laboratory and respiratory therapy room, new offices and a new cafeteria in the basement. The nurses station, main lobby, rooms and halls were also remodeled. (Staff Photos by Cathy Spaulding.)

Progress made on Schneider grant

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

A Texas Panhandle Community Action official said he was "greatly encouraged" by progress made toward getting a grant to turn the decaying Pampa (Schneider) hotel into housing for senior citizens

However, with no firm figures released by the Department of Housing and Urban Developent, TPCA housing director Ron Baugh said he cannot assure that the project is funded, or how much could be funded

Houston Developer Robert Caplan, who developed the senior citizens' apartments on N. Wells, wants to renovate the 58-year-old hotel into a 52-unit low rent apartment complex for senior citizens. The TPCA is seeking a grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development to help the agency subsidize the rent of the potential apartment

"HUD has approved five of the seven steps of the application and they have tentatively approved a sixth," he said, explaining that the

and design, value and funding. He said he did not know which five of the steps were approved

However, Baugh said, the original grant application used fair market rental information from 1984, not 1985 on which HUD would base the grant.

Grover Coulter, family housing representative with the regional HUD office in Fort Worth, confirmed that his office does have the Pampa application and that the supplimental information is in the process of being reviewed.

"It is done by different branches of HUD and I can't say what the figures are until I get the review back," he said

Because of the apparent discrepancy between the 1984 and 1985 values, there is the possibility that HUD would not fund the whole 52 units, according to Baugh who said he'd 'prefer this not be hashed out in the

"I didn't figure that (not funding the whole 52 units) would be an option," he said.

He explained that the grant would be percent occupancy over 15 years. At the HUD subsidized Pam apartments, the elderly tenants pay whatever rent they can afford, based on income and non-subsidized medical expenses, and the rest of the rent is paid through the government.

The HUD grant would go to suppliment the rent, not for any of the construction or renovation work on the historic hotel. Although such work is not funded, the rehabilitation must meet HUD specifications for health and access to the handicapped.

Developer Caplan has not been available for Speaking for Caplan, Baugh said "our sincere hope and desire is that the funding will come through.

"But we'd rather wait and have more positive information," he said.

Built by Swiss immigrant and hotel entrepreneur Alex Schneider in 1927, the Schneider hotel was once a Panhandle showplace where such celebrities as Hank Thompson and Guy Lombardo stayed. It was sold to an unidentified buyer in 1949 and renamed the Pampa Hotel

City to study salt problem

Pampa city commissioners will meet with representatives of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority in their workshop session at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday to discuss the Lake Meredith Salinity Control Project.

Concern about the salts in the lake water has existed since the authority began delivering water to member cities in 1968. The change in water supply from groundwater was extremely objectionable to many citizens because of the mineralized nature of the lake water

CRMWA officials reported late last year that a generally increasing trend of the chloride content (salt) has occurred in Lake Meredith water, with chloride contents reaching above the recommended levels in some areas.

The salts in the lake water has also led to continuing problems with corrosiveness and mineral deposition accompanying the salty taste, officicals observed.

The officials noted some cities like Pampa have alleviated the problem by mixing the lake water with groundwater to achieve a more acceptable supply. But other cities do not have groundwater available

Beginning as early as 1969, the authority and other agencies sought to identify the source of the water salts and to determine whether water quality could be improved.

Studies identified an area in New Mexico just downstream from Ute Dam near Logan was a major contributor of saline water to the Canadian River system, being responsible for as much as 70 percent of the chlorides in the Lake Meredith water Officials revealed the chlorides originating near the Ute Dam site are filtering into the river channel from a shallow brine aquifer which is under artesian pressure. The aquifer's brine water is roughly as salty as sea water, CRMWA officials have stated.

Authority officials have said the water supply could be ultimately improved if the contribution of saline water from the brine aquifer were stopped, though it would take time - perhaps as much as a decade because of the amount of salt stored in the river channel sand between Lake Meredith and the Logan site.

Bureau of Reclamation studies indicate the salt water flow could be controlled by drilling a well or wells into the shallow brine artesian aquifer and pumping water from those wells to reduce the artesian pressure.

The CRMWA is currently studying projects and estimated costs in relation to the project and seeking input from the member

The authority said the funding is an uncertain element in the project. Similar pollution problems. in the past have been financed entirely by federal funds.

Authority officials feel some local funding support probably will be required, with the member cities likely to have to support the financing costs by up to 25 percent of the project cost.

Depending upon the final extent of the project and the number of wells drilled, the project's estimated costs range from approximately just over $3 million to as much as $8 million

Tornado death toll may rise as residents begin cleanup

By SCOTT WILLIAMS Associated Press Writer

As residents of tornado-stricken Pennsylvania and Ohio towns consoled one another and cleared away rubble, officials said the death toll could top the 87 already reported and that one hard-hit town had almost no warning of the wave of deadly twisters.

In Pennsylvania, where at least 62 people died and more than 700 were injured after the state's worst ternado outbreak Friday, Gov. Dick Thornburgh declared a state disaster emergency for 13 counties, where 1,658 houses were destroyed and damage could exceed $200 million dollars.

"I asked Gov. Thornburgh when he toured the city Saturday for $50 million," said Mayor Helen Duby of Wheatland, where seven people died and more than 50 houses were destroyed. "I asked for the moon. But I'll settle for half a moon.

In Ohio, where at least 12 people were killed, Gov. Richard Celeste asked President Reagan for federal disaster relief for four counties where damage was estimated at $45 million.

"I wish I could say that we won't find any more bodies, but I can't,' Ken Robinson, head of the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency, said Sunday. "They're still going through the

Gang war hits Fort Worth

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Two men are under arrest and one still at large today after bloody shootings that police say are the worst outbreak of gang violence in recent years.

A 22-year-old man was killed and nine other people, including two young children, were seriously wounded early Sunday in thz shootings on the city's north side.

Police said the bloodshed apparently was part of a long-standing feud that has intensified recently between two rival Mexican-American gangs, La Loma and Varrio Gran Norte.

"Since the gangs have become known to our department, this is the worst I've seen," police Detective Ron Pendergraft said Sunday. "Look at the victims. We've got one dead and nine wounded. It looks like it's going to be a long, hot summer.'

A truckload of gang members drove past three houses around 1 a.m. and one of them fired a shotgun repeatedly into the structures, city police spokesman Doug Clarke said. "They drove by and bang, bang, bang, bang," he said. "And then they just kept on going to the nzxt place.

At the first house, Domingo Duran Jr., who lived there with his parents, was hit several times and pronounced dead at the scene. Four others were wounded

Duran was killed just hours after being released on bail from city jail, where he had been held for investigation of attempted murder in connection with a shooting Friday night, Clarke

The gang members then drove to two other neighborhood houses and opened fire, Clarke said.

Although each of the shootings appears gang-related, several of the victims, including the children, were innocent bystanders, police said.

The gunmen "were after particular individuals in each situation," police Detective Paul Kratz said. "But they didn't show any regard for innocent bystanders.'

A 16-year-old was arrested about 8 a.m. and remains in the Tarrant County Juvenile Detention Center, police said, adding that a 20-year-old was arrested three hours later. No charges had been filed by early today, and police said they are seeking a third man in the shootings.

Kratz said the feud between the two gangs had been going on for about a year but had intensified in the last several months.

"They shot at each other's houses and there were some injuries, but nothing like this," Kratz said. "I know myself of thrze or four incidents, and I'm sure there are others that other detectives had worked.

Lobbyists line up for tax hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business enters the spotlight Tuesday as the House Ways and Means Committee, long lines of lobbyists at its doors, pushes forward with hearings on the impact of President Reagan's tax plan.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the tax panel's chairman, plans a three-month airing of the plan, with no bill-drafting until after Labor Day.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, starts hearings next week but plans to hold off on fashioning a bill until the Ways and Means panel finishes its work.

"With luck, we'll have a bill on the president's desk by Christmas," Packwood said after Reagan last week unveiled his plan to lower income tax rates and condense the number of brackets from 14 to three.

Many lawmakers foresee a timetable that could easily spill into next year because of conflicts guaranteed to arise over the specifics of Reagan's plan.

Streams of lobbyists are converging on the Ways and Means Committee and could turn both panels into pressure cookers by Cattlemen have been branded 'losers'' in early readings of the plan by Capitol Hill staffers, a label sure to register with Western lawmakers. Liberals clamor for an end to tax breaks for energy companies, a view without much appeal to oil-state congressmen.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., and others representing high-tax states in the East blasts a provision to wipe out the deduction of state and local tax payments.

In other action, the Senate this week debates whether to cut research funds for President Reagan's "Star Wars" anti-missile system from a $302 billion defense authorization bill

Middle income families big winners, Gramm maintains

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Sen. Phil Gramm says middle-income families will benefit most from President Reagan's tax reform proposals because their tax rates will be lower and their major deductions will remain intact.

Gramm, R-Texas, said Sunday that families with incomes of $12,000 or less would effectively be removed from federal tax rolls while the wealthier would pay more in taxes at 35 percent than they are paying now at the rate of 50 percent.

The basic goals of the Reagan tax reform measures were elimination of deductions and lowering of marginal rates. Gramm told members of thz Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association at their annual meeting.

He said goals of the Reagan tax reform measures were elimination of deductions and lowering of marginal rates.

'But if you look at the deductions that it eliminates, it does not eliminate deductions that are used by middle income citizens," Gramm said adding home mortgage interest and charitable donations were the most important deductions used by families earning $20,000 to $50,000.

Gramm said middle-income families usually don't have enough capital for tax-motivated financial planning "beyond an IRA type investment, and in fact we're doubling the ability to use IRAs.

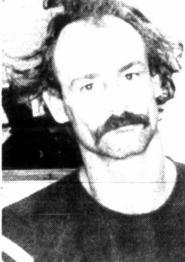

Such families also will see their tax rate drop to 25 percent from 35 percent, he said.

"If you want to know who's going to gain the most if this package is adopted, it's going to be a two or more wage-earner family with all of their income on a W-2 form, no business to write off the car or the pickup against, no professional association to write off the vacation to Hawaii or Europe or Mexico against, and they are going to be the single largest bzneficiary to this package." Gramm said.

Gramm, an economist who won a Senate seat last fall by defeating Lloyd Doggett of Austin, said Democrats in Congress are rushing to claim credit for reform proposals.

Cleanup behind schedule

Pampa City Manager

Our Clean-Up Campaign is winding down, but because of the large number of items to be collected during the course of the campaign, we are running behind

If you have placed items in the alley since we came by, please call the Sanitation Department at 665-1689 and request a pick up. They will place you on a list and get to you as soon as possible.

We are moving closer to using our new logo. The city commission awarded bids on our new stationery. We held up purchasing goods for almost four months pending the selection of the new logo and design of the stationery.

Jay Henson, the winner of the logo contest, designed the letterhead and envelopes for the city. They are very attractive and will provide a professional image for the city when dealing with organizations and other cities outside our area. We hope to begin using the new stationery within 45

We are still working on color combinations for the logo decals to be placed on city vehicles. We hope to have the design completed by the end of the week so the decals can be ordered. It will still be about 45 days until they actually appear on the vehicles.

Our Fire Department has been busy lubricating and cleaning the 547 \ fire hydrants we have throughout the community. When I refer to lubricating fire hydrants, it is done with vegetable oil as opposed to the more traditional types of grease and oils. We use vegetable oil to protect the water supply, without endangering your health or welfare.

We have received permission from the Texas Air Control Board to burn the limbs that we collect. We will be burning tree limbs periodically at the landfill; however, we can do so only under specified conditions as set forth in state regulations.

If you see tree limbs burning in the landfill area, it is not a cause for alarm. It will help us in conserving space within the landfill. The burning will continue through Sept. 30.

I would also request that when you are in the landfill area, do not drive more than 10 miles an hour. I also want to remind you that if you are hauling items to the city landfill (in particular, shingles and nails), you are required to have a cover over your load. It is also important that you drive slowly to prevent any items from coming loose and spilling onto the streets.

Concert, workshops set at St. Vincent's church

Daniel Consiglio, North American Liturgy Resources (NALR) recording artist, will perform in concert at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church at 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 7.

In addition to the concert, Consiglio will conduct workshops at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at St. Vincent's Parish

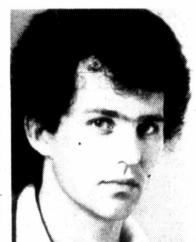

Topics Wednesday will be "Role of the Musician at Liturgy" and 'Performance Techniques.' Thursday evening Consiglio will discuss "Communicating with the Congregation" and "Ways of Introducing New Music."

The same workshops will also be presented at 10 a.m. Thursday.

All liturgists and musicians in the diocese are encouraged to attend, said Juanita Brower, youth minister.

Consiglio is the composer of 'Lord of Field and Vine,'' a collection of music for choir, congregational or meditative use, mainly appealing to young adults.

Born and raised in the Chicago area, Consiglio moved to Phoenix, Ariz., in 1979. He began working as a fulltime musician for churches. clubs and various rock bands. He

Report says Texas hospitals are overcharging Medicaid

DALLAS (AP) - Texas taxpayers have been footing the bill for some hospitals' televisions, telephones and bad debts because of overcharging in the government's Medicare program, a federal study shows.

The General Accounting Office, which reviewed the 1981 billings of 21 hospitals, found that all had overcharged the Medicare program in claims, some of which were caught by auditors and disallowed.

The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday that the hundreds of ineligible charges eventually deducted by the federal government include:

-A Texas City hospital's attempt to recoup its income tax payment for the previous year -$776,419.

- A Killeen hospital's bill fbr $405,654 in bad debts

- A Galveston-area hospital's bill for $1,374 for a doctor's moving expenses.

- A San Antonio hospital's charge of $175,525 for unexplained "employee discounts. - A Garland hospital's attempt to charge $284,823 in indigent health care costs - after the hospital already had been repaid once.

While those impermissible items were eventually caught by auditors and disallowed, the GAO said countless others have gone through undetected since Medicare was started in 1966. The agency's seven-month study of Medicare billings for 418 of the nation's hospitals shows that Texas facilities are not the only ones that pad costs.

The GAO, in an investigation of General Dynamics and other defense contractors, found the government had been overpaying millions of dollars for equipment.

"With General Dynamics, we were talking millions of dollars," Dan Garcia, a senior evaluator in the GAO's Dallas office, said. "Here, we're

A lot more people may have called Warren, but been unable to reach him.

Warren, who teaches at Austin High School, has been busy trying to prepare for the selection process which will pick only one teacher from the 118 contenders - two from each state and others from the District of Columbia and U.S. territories.

He has toured NASA facilities in Houston, and studied the manual for shuttle astronauts. He has been working on two experiments that he proposed as part of the selection process, and is taking a speech course "as a confidence builder

Warren said that during interviews in April with Texas Education Agency officials who chose the two Texas contenders from more than 400 applicants, the teachers were asked what they had done to prepare for a shuttle flight since President Reagan announced that a teacher would go into space.

"I really hadn't done anything, so I didn't have an answer,' Warren said. "But if I'm asked that again, I'll be prepared.'

Warren and the other Texas contender - Peggy Lathlaen, an elementary school teacher in suburban Houston - will join other candidates in Washington June 22-27 for a space education workshop.

They will also be interviewed by officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Ten finalists will be named in July and will undergo further tests and interviews. NASA then will choose one teacher-astronaut and a backup candidate.

"I think the flight on the F-4 will be something in my favor, as well as the fact that I am in the Navy reserve," Warren said. "I flew F-8 Crusaders in the Navy, but I hadn't flown in 10 years, so I was apprehensive about it," he said of his Saturday flight.

But sheriff's officials are considering hiring two more employees, which would more than double the division's $50,000 annual budget. Officials also have asked for another livestock trailer.

"They thought we'd do real well for a while and then drop off," said Munster from the metal shed that doubles as a command post. "But we fooled 'em. We're just as busy now as then.

Since October, nearly 450 head of livestock have been detained in the center's five pastures. More than two-thirds of all the confiscated livestock are claimed by their owners before they are auctioned, particularly if the animal is worth its weight in cash.

In that respect, goats get no respect

"Yeah, a lot of times, people will set their goats free, just hoping we'll pick them up," Munster said. 'One time, we picked up $560 worth of goats - 38 in all.

Eagle eyes seek mistakes

There is this sweet, little, ol' lady who makes it a point to tell me of the mistakes in grammar which appear in "my paper" whenever we

She seems to take almost fiendish delight in her quest, much like a sport fan waiting for a favorite manager or coach to make a tactical She's a second-guesser — a Monday morning grammarian, to be more exact. Whenever we meet, she starts off the conversation by asking, "Did you read...in your paper?" - referring to some story printed recently in The Pampa News. I nod, refraining from telling her once again that it isn't my newspaper, I only work here.

"Not a bad story," she remarks as I nod once again

Then this sweet lady suddenly turns sour, snapping the trap shut "Did you catch the grammatical error?"

No, this writer admitted, people who edit newspaper copy five or more days a week usually don't go out of their way to spot errors in The mistake was a common misusage - an "I" where "me" should have been. This apparently has been one of her lifelong peeves, so naturally

she picks up on such miscues as a matter of rote

The writer didn't take the time to defend the reporter I could have explained just how many words newspaper writers encounter in the course of a week. I might have pointed out that most reporters write and write until their senses become somewhat For example, one reporter for this paper during the six - issue period ending Sunday, wrote 20 stories for a total of 309 column inches of copy. That's creating approximately 12,500 words on a The time consumed writing these words doesn't include the numerous hours spent attending meetings and studying lengthy reports to obtain information and facts needed to compile the stories Plus, this workload is turned out on a computer screen the size of a portable television. After a while, eyes and the mind start playing

And writers are human. They make mistakes. When they're rushing to meet an ever - present deadline, some of those old grammar rules stored in the brain get lost.

Verb tenses get scrambled. Participles tend to tangle. And the English language is darn complicated. When some mean old editor is grumping in the background and whining about the time factor, reporters aren't in the best decision - making frame of mine.

Suddenly, harried writers who normally possess a working knowledge of their native tongue can't put two and two together. Meanwhile, writing decisions seem to increase in proportion to the pressure.

Should that be affect or effect?

Now let's see, farther or further?

Oh me, this is tough. Perhaps that should be Oh I. Oh well

Editors, obviously, are supposed to come behind the writers and clean up the mess. But those eye - weary folks are charged with reading the combined work of several reporters and all of the copy from everywhere else supplied by the wire service and numerous They're likely to peruse as many as 200,000 words during a week's time. Quite often they read over the stories twice or even three times.

But they still miss glaring mistakes. So the human factor rears its ugly head once again.

Yeah, errors get through. Every day. And there's always one of those Monday morning grammarians out there licking his or her chops, waiting to tell us about it.

Funny thing is, most every newspaper gets these "I told you so" letters or personal remarks. Quite frankly, errors that sneak through can be awfully dumb. From time to time, though, the sticklers for accuracy have committed a rather embarrassing writing blooper in their own letter. That's a tad of consolation to embattled reporters.

Anyway, I could have put up a fight when the little, ol' lady complained about grammar in the paper. But she wasn't malicious or angry, and she was quite correct in her half-kidding complaint. Newspapers can murder grammar, spelling and proper usage at

So I were a nice guy and let the issue drop

Authorities investigate airport grenade scare

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - A San Antonio man is demanding that El Paso airport officials apologize for a guard he says slipped a hand grenade into his wife's purse to test the airport's security system.

"I was flabbergasted," Ken Bryce, 29, said Sunday. "But the security people just laughed and said they couldn't believe we were upset about it. They didn't even apologize. El Paso airport authorities say they will begin an investigation today into the incident that Bryce. a medical student at the University of Texas at San Antbnio, says left his family scared witless.

Bryce says that he, his wife Carol, and their 6 - month - old son, Justin, had just gone through security at El Paso International Airport Saturday when their carry on baggage came through the X ray machine. That's when he says he saw the grenade in a side pocket of his wife's purse.

"My first thought was for the safety of my wife and son," Bryce said. "I grabbed for the grenade, intending to throw it away from us, not thinking about all the people coming up that concourse. A security guard grabbed my hand and said, 'No, don't touch it.'

"My next thought was that someone who had wanted to get the grenade on a plane had planted it on us, and that we would spend the rest of our lives in prison," he said "Then the guard told me it was OK, that they had put it there to make sure their machines were working

Airport Manager George Perry said Sunday Bryce had good reason to be flabbergasted.

Both the airline managements and the (Federal Aviation Administration) test those machines regularly," Perry said. but they usually coordinate with everyone involved. We did have some irregularity or deviance from procedures. We are on top of it and we will get to the bottom.

The incident will be discussed at Wednesday's meeting of the Airport Advisory Board, chairman Deane Miller told the El Paso

"I've never heard of such a thing," he said. "Whoever made that decision, I think just made a poor decision. Perry said airlines contract with a security firm for guards to operate the X-ray machines and metal detectors. Those guards do not work for the airport's own security office.

'When we got to Dallas our hearts were still thumping," Bryce said of the grenade scare. "I'm about to become a physician and I know that if I had high blood pressure I could have stroked out right there, and if I had a heart condition, I could have had a heart

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Immigration laws don't make sense

What do Rupert Murdoch and Rolando Velazquez-Campos have in common? Both want to become American citizens.

But while Murdoch was blithely announcing that he would become an American citizen in order to own a handful of television stations—the better to get his message to the people—Velasquez - Campos was having a hard time getting anyone to listen to his message: If he is deported to his native El Salvado he faces a rather real possibility of death at the hand of government because of involvement in a political party critical of the government. He faces an Aug. 6 deportation hearing.

The probelm for Velasquez-Campos and his wife is an American immigration law, which bars the door to most immigrants seeking political freedom as well as a better way of life. In 1984, 503 Salvadorans were granted political asylum; 13,045 others had their petitions denied. The INS ruled that they were fleeing poverty, not

Under the refugee act of 1980, an alien may qualify for asylum if he has a "well-founded fear of persecution" in his homeland "on account of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group or political opinion." But it isn't enough simply to show that general conditions of violence exist in the native country; they have to prove that actual threats exist against them.

So Velasquez-Campos and his wife are out to purchase the death certificates of friends who allegedly were killed by persons woking for the Salvadoran government. They hope that evidence will sway an immigration judge.

Murdoch faces no death threats in his native Australia. In fact, the only government persecurtion he faces comes from the Federal Communications Commission—an agency of the very government to which he is applying for citizenship. FCC rules say that no foreigner can have majority ownership of an American television station.

An international media tycoon who owns newspapers and magazines in his native Australia as well as England and the United States, Murdoch certainly is not fleeing poverty. He's simply trying to comply with FCC rules so he can become an even bigger, even richer media tycoon. In short, he's trying to live the American Dream.

He'll probably get it. Velasquez-Campos and his wife may not. The American Dream is denied to hundreds of people every day. Still they stream across the border, always hoping that in the land of the free they will find a better life. The Immigration and Naturalization Service battles to keep them out and sends back those who do get

Congress sits in Washington and sees little wrong with rules that allow one man to pursue the American Dreams while others are denied the freedom of their beliefs

Demos 'suckering' public

On May 23, the House Democrats, with Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill (D.-Mass.) smiling on, broadly congratulated themselves effusively on their budget "triumph" over President Reagan.

But the "victory" party had more the odor of used car salesmen celebrating the successful sale of a lot-full of lemons. The budget "illusion" they approved says much about the cynicism with which this relic of a party still views the American

It is a cynicism O'Neill brought to Congress for his experience as speaker of the Massachusetts Legislature. There annual "suckering" of the public on budgets and taxes was developed into such an obscene artform that the frustrated taxpayers finally revolted in 1980, and passed Proposition 2-1/2, the harshest of all the tax-cutting Lest you think this unfair, consider a few simple facts about the Democrats' supposed "deficit reduction" plan. It promises $56.5 billion in FY 1986 deficit-reduction ($500-million MORE than the Senate's draconian effort). Yet it spends $9.8-billion MORE in total gross outlays, and adds back over $17 billion in social spending, while only cutting $6 billion from the Senate defense appropriation.

Do you think these numbers don't add up? You're right! At least $10 billion of the 1986 House "cuts" are phoney - illusory. And network reporters, like NBC's Bob Kur and CBS' Phil Jones, who shamelessly shilled for the Democrats, should be embarrassed for going along with the May 23 budget "victory" charade.

The Democrats were celebrating a victory because they conned the media into reporting they were cutting the federal budget even as they paid off everyone except the defense contractors.

They restored $11.1 billion in COLA (cost-of-living) benefits to ALL entitlement and retirement programs, including not just Social Security, but the bloated Civil Service Retirement System. As Wall Street's Peter Peterson remarked on "McNeil Lehrer," "If we can't get these middle-class entitlement programs under control, we have no hope of ever getting these deficits under control in the out-years.

The House added back $1.2 billion for housing construction and $300 million for UDAG, a boondoggle even Tip O'Neill last January thought should be killed They restored $1.2 billion for strategic petroleum purchases, even as the oil glut continues. And they rescued the useless Economic Development Administration, Appalachian Regional Commission, and TVA development programs (all killed by the Senate).

They added $1.3 billion to an already overbloated $14.5-billion agricultural subsidy budget which the Senate passed, and put another $4.4 billion back into highways and Amtrak over three years.

They put $700-million more into supporting the already insupportably high costs of veterans health care construction programs.

They provided for 22,000 more federal jobs than

With the lone exception of revenue sharing (where the House cut $900 million from Senate), the House budget was simply business as usual.

Yet, the House leadership had the chutzpah to look us straight in the eye and claim $56.5 billion in 1986 "cuts," and $259 billion over three years this, despite the fact that over three years, the House budget approves $50.8-billion MORE in total outlays than the Senate, and $74.6-billion MORE in total non-defense and social spending. The silly media reports implied that this miracle was accomplished by cutting the defense budget, but the three-year House cuts in defense outlays only come to $22 billion.

So, how do you finance $75-billion more social spending with only $22 billion in defense cuts? You don't. But, you TRY to do it with what Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole (R.-Kan.) properly called "smoke and mirrors." Over $11 billion of the House's three-year "savings" come from what are called "allowances and offsets."

For example, the House "assumes" additional savings of about $4 billion from unspecified 'contracting out" - but they, in fact, are claiming that this will come NOT by contracting OUT (as the Grace Commission advocates), but by "contracting in" work now done outside - a direct payoff to federal employee unions.

They also "assume" ("Hope" is the correct term) about $5 billion in oil purchase savings and "potential" reimbursements from legal disputes over the Outer Continental Shelf.

Finally, they "assume" - get this - $2.5-billion "savings" in net interest, not because they will borrow less, but because they voted to LOAN OUT MORE - and supposedly collect more interest. That's "creative bookkeeping" even the Massachusetts Legislature would have to admire.

The fawning liberal media may applaud this kind of cynical budget gaming, but the Senate and the taxpayers - shouldn't.

"We've either got to reduce military pensions, or start asking the men to volunteer for dangerous missions right before they retire..."

Today in History

Today is Monday, June 3, the 154th day of 1985. There are 211 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History On June 3, 1963, Pope John XXIII died at the age of 81, ending a papacy marked by innovative reforms within the Roman Catholic Church.

On this date:

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford ended his week-long European tour with a visit to Rome for talks with Italian President Giovanni Leone and Pope Paul VI.

Five years ago: In the latest round of primaries. President Jimmy Carter won enough delegates to ensure his renomination.

One year ago: During a visit to Ireland, the land of his ancestors, President Reagan stopped by Ballyporeen in County Tipperary. Today's birthdays: Actor Maurice Evans is 84. Actor Curtis is 60. Actress Colleen Dewhurst is 59. Poet Allen Ginsberg is 59. Musician Curtis Mayfield is 43.

What are the idle thoughts that fill your head? When you are alone on your pillow or in your car or even in a crowd - what are the thoughts which skip in and out and about your brain? Larry Wells will admit what his daydreams were about - about partying with women, about coveting things that belonged to other people, about beating up somebody he didn't like. Larry - of Idaho Falls, Ida. - was poisoning himself with such thoughts until he read a book called "As a Man Thinketh.

The book was based on the verse in Proverbs: "As a man thinketh so is he.

And to Larry what the book - a gift from his parents - was trying to say was that he could think himself to be something less than he was, or

He chose then and thereafter to think positively and he prospered.

And he vowed next to do what he could to help his area's least fortunate to make something worthwhile of themselves.

He elected to encourage, assist and get jobs for ex-convicts. And he has given 20 years that effort Wait'll you hear the results!

Eight of 10 men who leave prison are soon back in again.

Larry was determined to reverse that ratio. He initiated a call-in talk program on local radio counseling ex-cons and matching them with job opportunities in the area.

And he presented free to each a copy of that book: "As a Man Thinketh. Larry, an enthusiastic outdoorsman, organized an outdoor program for ex-cons, both juvenile and adult. They went on camping trips. He taught survival courses in six states thereabouts. Nature can be a teacher and a healer.

And again, for each participant in his survival course, that book was required reading

The numbers are in on a five-year study of participants in Larry's "great outdoors" programs. Success is irrefutable. Where nationally only two of 10 ex-cons go straight, eight of 10 of Larry's men have not been in trouble

Larry has become a parole officer and drug counselor. Larry says cons respond to handouts only briefly but tend to respond to an outstretched hand permanently.

He knows. He is one

Larry Wells was in state and federal penitentiaries for six of his young years - for driving away in other people's cars - until in prison, his parents sent him that book, and he read it, and he came out of prison at 20 to prove to himself that "As a man thinketh so is he..." And he proved it to himself, and ever since to ever more.

Is Darwinism scientifically valid?

By William A. Rusher

Every so often, as regular readers of this column know, I like to turn away from the daily flux of events and take a look at some of the deeper tides in the affairs of men. A new "Darwin's Enigma," by Luther D. Sunderland (Master Book Publishers, San Diego) — prompts me to do so again.

The 18th century Enlightenment, with its tremendous inflow of newly acquired and organized knowledge, prompted many people to conclude that the concept of God could be dispensed with. Henceforth mankind would find its own way, with science illuminating the path. The results were prompt and immense. Technology enhanced man's capabilities enormously. By the opening years of the 20th century, three giants were seen as unlocking the final doors which barred the pathway of the human race to understanding and (therefore) to happiness: Marx, who, by perceiving the true nature of human society and the laws of its historical development, pointed the way to the rational organization of social effort; Freud, who revealed the basic structure and drives of the human mind; and Darwin, whose theory of evolution promised to explain the origin and development of all living forms

Now, however, in the last years of that same 20th century, these towering figures are being unexpectedly discredited. Marx, whose theories have had the longest and most rigorous trial, has suffered worst: There is hardly a Marxist government on earth that is not in explicit or veiled retreat from his vaunted principles. Recently it has been Freud's turn: Whatever portion of his insights and teachings can be salvaged, no one any longer pretends that they constitute a definitive description of the human

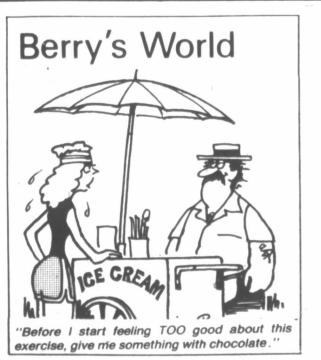

Until very lately, Darwin fared better. Certainly as a student in Geology 102 at Princeton 44 years ago, I swallowed him whole. However life had originated (and that was a mere detail, involving the particular chemical mix in some warm primeval pool), it had progressed and proliferated into ever more complex organisms in inexorable obedience to the evolutionary principles of natural selection as laid down by Darwin. God could stick around if He chose, by claiming to have invented these principles; but He wasn't really neces-

It is Sunderland's important contribution to tell us just how deep the disarray has recently become in the field of evolutionary theory. For one thing, Darwin had counted on further fossil discoveries to fill in the noticeable gaps that separated particular species from their presumed ancestors; but a century further on the transitional forms are still missing. The basic types of organisms seem to appear abruptly in the fossil record, and to undergo relatively little change thereafter. Far worse, the early confidence that the origin of life was simply a chance concatenation of the "right" chemicals, perhaps energized by a lightning bolt, has crumpled before the realization that, mathematically, such a possibility is (to use astronomer Fred Hoyle's vivid formulation) "comparable with the chance that a tornado sweeping through a junkyard might assemble a Boeing 747 from the materials therein.

Sunderland, a New York aerospace engineer whose hobby is testing the scientific validity of Darwinism, may be a creationist at heart, but to his credit he doesn't insist on the point.

Two tee - offs are scheduled, one at 8:30 a.m. and one at 1:30 p.m.

This year, an estimated 1,260 people a day — about one every 70 seconds, an annual total of 460,000 - will die of cancer. By the end of 1985, an additional 895,000 new cases of the disease will be detected, according to the American Cancer Society. The society also predicts that over the years, cancer will strike in about three out of four families.

On a more encouraging note, however, cancer research has resulted in treatment methods and programs that have dramatically increased the survival rate of cancer patients. In the 1930s, less than one in five was alive at least five years after treatment. In the 1940s, it was one in four, and in the 19602, one in three survived after five years.

Today, more than five million Americans who have a history of cancer are alive, and the five year survival rate is almost one in two.

Robinson said much of the credit for this progress may be attributed to the efforts of the ACS, the largest and oldest of the private nonprofit cancer organizations. Funded entirely by private contributions, the society has invested more than half a billion dollars in cancer research for the past 40 years, and also leads in the field of patient services and educational

Dear Abby

Abby takes a battering for comment on cake

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I would like to clear up a misconception that has been perpetrated over the years concerning Marie Antoinette's famous statement, "Let them eat cake."

Years ago, the French bakers would make a mixture of flour and water that they spread on the bricks of the oven. This hardened crust provided a clean surface on which to place the dough for baking bread. At the end of each day, the baker would scrape off this crusty substance and put it in buckets out the back door for the beggars. This substance was called "cake," which later became confused with the sweet pastry that only the well-to-do could afford.

GRETCHEN HABE BELLEVILLE, MICH.

DEAR GRETCHEN: Another defender of Marie Antoinette offers this informative morsel:

DEAR ABBY: Please, please, please! While Marie Antoinette may have been no paragon of virtue, let us not damn her further by repeating that malicious retort, "Let them eat cake," after being told the peasants had no bread.

The person who translated that remark was obviously not as familiar with the French language as he should have been.

Properly translated, it should have read, "Let them eat the little cakes"meaning the small, round, flat cakes of flour or meal-a far cry from a delicacy. Those little cakes (or something similar) are still eaten by the very poor in backward countries.

H.S. BALLARD, KETTERING, OHIO

DEAR H.S. BALLARD: Read on for an interesting bit of icing on the cake:

DEAR ABBY: Love your column, Abby, but might I suggest eating crow rather than cake for allowing a nasty misquote to slip by?

A letter on the etiquette for eating wedding cake ended by attributing 'Let them eat cake" to Marie Antoinette. This much maligned such a remark. In the sixth book of his "Confessions," written in 1766, Jean Jacques Rousseau refers to an incident that happened in 1740, 15 years before Marie Antoinette was born:

queen had too much class to utter

'At length I recalled the thoughtless remark of a great princess, who, when she was told the peasants had no bread, replied, 'Let them eat

In The Dictionary of Misinformation, author Tom Burnam notes the writing of Alphonse Karr, who in 1843 explained that a duchess of Tuscany supposedly uttered the remark in 1760. Karr contended the quote was used to discredit Marie Antoinette.

Serious biographers of the queen do not even grace the remark with a comment.

As a newspaper editor, I hate to see such dubious-and ugly-statements creep into print.

And I have a more personal reason as well: I am the great-great-greatgrandson of the man who claims to be her son, the lost dauphin, Louis XVII. As the inheritor of a family legend, I have been compelled to defend the honor of Marie Antoinette many times.

I would appreciate your correcting this matter.

L. MICHAEL MAY. NEWS EDITOR. THE SEWICKLEY HERALD, SEWICKLEY, PA.

Yesterday I was fired.

Three other temporary employees were also fired - one day before we would have become permanent and therefore members of the union.

Of the four men laid off, I am the only minority member. I believe I've been discriminated against.

I talked to the union, but they said they can't help me. I called the state Department of Labor, and they said it would be a difficult case to prove.

Where do I go from here? - P.Y., RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR P.Y. - Unfortunately, I can't tell you where to go.

If you were to allege discrimination, your employer would be quick to point out that 75 percent of the laidoff employees were white. Therefore the allegation of discrimination would probably fail.

What is probably happening here is the employer and the union are working together. The union has enough difficulty finding work for permanent members and doesn't wish to expand the membership rolls.

This is not a new situation; it's been going on since World War II. Temporary employees are often laid off just before they are eligible for union membership.

Unfortunately, I know of nothing further you can do other than look for a new position. In this pursuit, I wish

DEAR BRUCE WILLIAMS - My parents are getting along in years and I've heard that in their will they've named me their executor.

Because they are my parents, and because I love them, I don't want to say no. But I'm wondering what my duties as executor will be. - R.P., ATLANTA, GA.

DEAR R.P. - Your duties as the executor of the will are to carry out the wishes of the deceased in accordance with the law of your state or iurisdiction.

You'll be obliged to make an accounting of the estate, pay all lawful obligations, take care of funerals, debts, taxes and so forth, and then dispose of the assets of the estate in accordance with the deceased's wish-

While it's not necessary to have an attorney every step of the way, it would be wise to consult one, even if you pay him or her on an hourly basis. You can do the leg work and the attorney can guide you.

In most cases, being the executor is not a particularly difficult task. It usually can be accomplished by a lay bles. I would avoid it.

DEAR D.P. - The quickest way I know to blow a job is to walk in to your boss and say, "You're taking advantage of me." You can believe that most bosses will blow you out of the door faster than you came in.

This is a time for diplomacy. I'd go in and chat with the boss. I'd

Supporters of Papandreau celebrate Socialists' victory

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - Huge crowds poured into the streets today to celebrate the election victory of Premier Andreas Papandreou's Socialists, who have cooled ties with America and NATO and pledged to shut down U.S. military bases.

Papandreou, 66, an American himself for 20 years and a former University of California at Berkeley college dean, told

"I believe this vote is a triumph ... It's a great defeat for the reactionary forces, whether they're Greek or foreign. The Greek people don't expect anything from anyone."

As he spoke, tens of thousands of cheering supporters surrounded his home in the fashionable suburb of Kastri. Traffic jams blocked traffic from Kastri to the city center, about 12 miles away.

Some supporters outside the premier's home carried black wooden coffins and chanting, "The right is dead."

Incomplete returns showed the Socialist party, known officially as the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement, with 46 percent of the

Among those elected by the Socialists was Papandreou's American-educated son, George. The premier's wife, Margaret, 62, also is American. As head of the Women's Union of Greece, she campaigned vigorously all around the country for her husband.

Papandreou was elected in 1981 on a pledge to withdraw from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Common Market and to close the four American bases in Greece. The bases were scarcely mentioned in the current election campaign,

This week, archaeology students from the University of Texas at El Paso are expected to start digging into the past there "to protect something that is very important to Texas history," said Rex E. Gerald, a UTEP associate professor of anthropology and coordinator of the dig.

Residents of the rural community of Socorro have recounted the odd tales about a grassy mound in a cotton field and a time when Indians inhabited the area known as the Lower Valley. Researchers say the mound was the original site of the Socorro Mission, established in the 1680s by Spaniards and Christianized Indians fleeing an Indian uprising in New Mexico

Staff/Archaeologist Mark Denton of the Texas Antiquities Commission said the site is a 'major archaeological deposit.''

Researchers say they want to prompt government officials or private benefactors to buy the site. preserve it as a historical landmark and protect it from development.

They said the mission was originally abandoned in the early 18th Century after it was damaged by Rio Grande flooding. The site 15 miles southeast of El Paso is less than a mile from the existing Socorro Mission, an active Roman pottery remnants.

The structure, dating from the 1840s, still has huge "vigas," or roof beams, of pine and cottonwood that are believed to have come from the original church.

Researchers looking for the original site began compiling oral accounts of elderly residents in the area, including Tigua Indians. A 98-year-old man led Gerald in 1970 to the plot in the cotton field and identified it as the site.

A team of scientists from UTEP began investigating the site in 1981 after obtaining permission from landowners. They found pottery shards and evidence of a wall, and students the next summer found bases of 7-foot-thick walls and

Simon's "Biloxi Blues" and "Big River," a musical version of Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," were the big winners Sunday night as Broadway honored the best of the 1984-85 season at the 39th annual Tony

"I have always dreamed, naturally, of winning a Tony," said Simon, whose first Broadway play was "Come Blow Your Horn" in 1961. "I just didn't think I'd have to dream through 22 plays to do it. But it was worth the sleep.

In 1965, Simon won a Tony for "The Odd Couple" as best author, a category eliminated the next year. but he lost the best play award to Frank Gilroy's "The Subject Was Roses." Simon was given a special Tony in 1975.

"Big River" was the night's biggest winner, capturing seven prizes including best musical and a best score award for country and western superstar Roger Miller, who bounded to the Shubert Theater's stage and proclaimed: 'Thank God for Mark Twain.'

Other "Big River" winners included Ron Richardson, as Jim, the runaway slave, for featured actor in a musical; Des McAnuff for direction of a musical; Heidi Landesman for scenic designer and Richard Rydell for lighting.

President Reagan can find plenty of support when he says the tax system is turning many Americans into cheats, but the drive for tax reform could backfire politically if voters are disillusioned with the Taking to the road last week to drum up support for rewriting the tax code, Reagan denounced the current law as "so rigged, so unfair, that it corrupts otherwise honest people by encouraging them to cheat.

Polls indicate most Americans would respond, "You bet!"

They'd also agree with Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., that working families file their tax forms with the nagging feeling that they're the biggest suckers and chumps in the world.

But as the president and Congress rush to exploit that sentiment, they could be jumping on the back of a political tiger. The feelings they are stirring could bring a political backlash if the legislation is produced is just another package of goodies for the special interests.

It's at that point, suggests Democratic pollster Peter Hart, that voters "will turn mean" if they conclude that once again they've come out on the short end of so-called tax reform.

Both Presidents Kennedy and Carter failed to get the changes they wanted. Those efforts almost consistently have ended with the organized interests making their cases more effectively than individual taxpayers.

Gradually many people, especially those who could afford the expert advice, learned to take advantage of some of the more obscure sections of the code. Photo of kidnapped American released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (A.) - The Islamic Jihad group today released a color photograph of kidnapped American David Jacobsen, but denied earlier telephoned claims it killed a Briton and carried out bombings in Kuwait and Saudi

A typewritten statement in Arabic accompanied by the photo of Jacobsen was sent to a Western news agency in Bzirut.

The statement, which did not mention Jacobsen's kidnapping, accused the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency of killing British teacher Denis Hill, 53, in Beirut last week

It charged that the CIA was behind the attempted assassination May 25 of the Emir of Kuwaiz and two bombings in Rivadh, Saudi Arabia, May 17 in a bid to "sabotage" the fundamentalist Moslem group.

The photograph showed Jacobsen from the waist up wearing a blue shirt against a backdrop of a white sheet with a Emir escaped with minor facial red pattern of ducks and leaves. cuts. The American's face was grim.

Jacobsen, 54, manager of the American University Hbspital in Beirut, was abducted last Tuesday as he walked from the university campus to the hospital a block

In a telephoned statement a day later, a caller claiming to belong to Islamic Jihad, said the group kidnapped Jacobsen and killed Hill, an English teacher at the American University, as he tried to escape from gunmen who kidnapped him.

Islamic Jihad is a shadowy underground group that is believed to have links to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime in Iran.

Last month, anonymous callers claimed that Islamic Jihad was behind two bombings in Riyadh that killed one person and a suicide bombing against Kuwait's ruler, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, May 25 that left four dead. The

Police searching for sniper who wounded six on I-95

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) - A sniper who hit at least nine cars on busy Interstate 95 with small-caliber shots, wounding six people, continued today to elude a manhunt by about 140 police officers and searchers, authorities

Two men were detained near the scene of the shootings, which began about 9 p.m. Sunday along a stretch of I-95 near Jacksonville International Airport, but they were cleared of any involvement, said Sheriff's Capt. J.C. Green.

None of the victims, passengers in some of the nine cars hit by gunfire, was seriously injured, officials said. All of the victims, including a 3-year-old child and a woman shot through the nose, were treated and released.

Several people reported seeing the sniper in a wooded area. Two youths told police they saw a man with a rifle who hesitated as if he were going to shoot, then ran into the bushes

"We believe it's a small-calibzr weapon, possibly a .22 rifle," said Ken Canode, an engineer with the fire department's Emergency Operations Center. The sniper eluded a search effort that included about 123 police and 14 members of the Four Wheel Drive Posse, police said.

A bullet hit the car driven by Jim Clark, 42, of St. Augustine, but nobody in that vehicle was injured. "An inch this way and it would

Baseball escapes cocaine taint—for now

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

Major league baseball escaped a rundown in Pittsburgh. But the ball is still in play and the next time the game could be nailed - hard.

In fact, it will be a major-league surprise if some ballplayers don't find the taint of cocaine dust clinging to them as the judicial process unwinds.

During the grand jury's investigation, Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said he expected the outcome to be bad for baseball. After all, at least 11 players, some of whom had admizted their own drug involvement, had been called to testify

What happened was that seven men were hit with 165 federal drug charges. Not one was a baseball player. Other than being fans, only one is even remotely connected with the game - a one-time food supplier for the Philadelphia Phillies clubhouse

No players were named, not even peripherally. When the lawyer for one of zhe defendants mentioned the generic term "ballplayers" (as opposed to a specific one) during a bail hearing, a federal attorney successfully objected

AP sports analysis

It is understood, though, that some players were granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony. That raises the question: prosecution for what?

Besides, an indictment is only the first step. There is the more public matter of trial - unless all seven men either plead guilty or plea-bargain their way down to lesser offenses and softer punishment.

If there is even one trial, players' names will be mentioned. Some players could be called to testify. It is not inconceivable that some could find themselves implicated. As Bill Madlock, infielder of the Pittsburgh

Pirates said, "Next time the ballplayers won't get off so easy. Baseball is a business in which image counts as much as talent. A man who can throw a ball 100 miles an hour or hit it a country mile had better be able to survive an investigation into everything else

And whether or not it is true, it is is beginning to appear as though for every Dale Murphy, every Steve Garvey and every other player whose character is exemplary, there are an equal or greater number of baseball players whose character couldn't survive even a cursory look.

In an earlier time, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was rarely, if ever, shown in an uncomfortable circumstance despite being paralyzed with polio. Photographers and newsreel cameramen protected him, averting their lenses while he was lifted out of his wheelchair or walked with his crutches. Today, politicians have to watch their every step, lest they be shown unflatteringly.

Similarly, a generation or two ago, baseball players who routinely drank themselves into a stupor or otherwise caroused beyond the legal limit often were protected by the fraternity of teammates and sports writers of the day. They weren't really criminals; just good ol' boys having some good ol'

But today, even something as innocent as a disagreement in a restaurant can be magnified into a major brouhaha that becomes a permanent part of the public's perception of the athlete. The mere hint of involvement with drugs can impair a player's ability to perform to his peak, even if he's never touched the stuff.

What may trouble baseball even more than the potential for revelations at future legal proceedings is that all of this is coming down at the same time talk of another strike is escalating

A number of baseball players are already perceived by some as nothing more than overpaid, overprotected, overgrown children. The average salary is in the $350,000 range. Many of them can supplement their income with public appearances and endorsements. They also get everything from $60 a day meal money to public adulation.

A few franchise owners are already perceived by some as wealthy egomaniacs to whom the ticket-buying fans are less important than tax shelters the teams provide.

And four years after a strike that left a bitter aftertaste, the players and owners are talking seriously about going through it all - and putting us all through it all - once again.

Rebound muscle key for Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) -Thanks to a massacre of their own, the Los Angeles Lakers have a 2-1 advantage in the National Basketball Association's Championship Series.

And they have that advantage mainly because they've hit the backboards with a fervor and improved their defense

As Coach Pat Riley has said many times, "No rebounds, no rings," as in championship rings.

"I thought definitely the key again, as it was in Game 2 and as it was in Game 1, was in the rebounding department," were Riley's first words to reporters after the Lakers overwhelmed the Boston Celtics 136-111 Sunday.

The Lakers had 20 fewer rebounds than did the Celtics in both the seventh game of last year's Championship Series, which the Celtics won 111-102, and the first game of the present series, Boston's 148-114 Memorial Day Massacre last Monday.

The Lakers outrebounded the Celtics 49-37 Sunday. The numbers were exactly the same in Los Angeles' 109-102 Game 2 win at Boston last Thursday night.

"They beat us on the boards and were able to get their running game going," said Boston guard Danny Ainge, who scored only seven points.

After a miserable first game, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has been brilliant in the last two games. He had 26 points, a game-high 14 rebounds and seven assists Sunday to follow his 30-point, 17-rebound, eight-assist performance in Game

Abdul-Jabbar's 20th point of Sunday's game, scored with 9:06 remaining in the third quarter, made him the leading all-time NBA playoff scoring leader. It gave him 4,458 post-season points, one more than former Laker Jerry West.

Forward James Worthy led the Lakers in scoring with 29 points all of them in the second and third quarzers - and grabbed nine rebounds; reserve Bob McAdoo contributed 19 points and six rebounds; and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 17 points and a game-high 16 assists.

Kevin McHale scored a career playoff high 31 points and had 10 rebounds, but was the only Celtic to play an above-par game. Larry Bird had only 20 points and seven rebounds. He made just eight of his 21 field-goal attempts. It appeared thz Celtics were on their way to taking it early on Sunday. They led 29-25 after one quarter of play and 48-38 early in the second period before the Lakers exploded

Los Angeles outscored Boston 27-11 in the final seven minutes of the first half to go ahead 65-59 at the intermission, and the Celtics never issued a serious threat after that. It was 100-85 after three quartzrs. Boston wasn't closer than that 15-point margin in the final

The Lakers, who have won 25 of their 26 games at home since Feb. 1, could beat the Celtics for the first time in nine Championship Series meetings by winning the fourth and fifth games here Wednesday and Friday nights. The sixth and seventh games, if necessary, will be in Boston next week.

Lopez wins 2nd straight

MASON, Ohio (AP) - Nancy Lopez may be forced to alter her schedule if she keeps her championship golf touch this week.

The winner in the LPGA Championship on Sunday goes after her third straight 1985 victory at the McDonald's Championship in Malvern, Pa., starting Thursday.

If she wins that tournament, she will be within two of her LPGA record of five straight triumphs, accomplished as a rookie in 1978.

However, Lopez plans to play only at Malvern and the Rochester, N.Y., International before taking one or two weeks off.

"The way I'm playing, I feel good. I'm excited. But it's going to be tough (to win five in a row), she said after her eight-shot runaway over Alice Miller in the LPGA Championship

Miller watched Lopez shoot a closing 7-under-par 65 for a 15-under total of 273 over the Nicklaus Sports Center's Grizzly course. After tying Lopez for the 54-hole lead, Millzr struggled to a 73 for a 281 total. "I definitely didn't expect her to shoot 65," the runner-up said. "But once she makes birdies, she's very capable of shooting those numbers.

Lopez said she's a more mature player now than in 1978, when she won nine tournaments. And she's not sure that when she was a rookie, she could have handled the two-stroke penalty she received Thursday for slow play.

She turned the opening-round controversy into a positive note in the final round. "I was mad positively," she said.

reported Sunday that any new television sanctions the NCA. could levy against SMU's football program out of its investigation will not start until 1986.

A source told the News Saturday the SMU-Oklahoma football game in Norman has been moved to Dec. 7 for national telecasz by ABC-TV.

Tentative arrangements to reschedule the game for TV from Sept. 14 were made last month, pending the outcome of the NCAA investigation into the Mustangs' program.

The News quoted sources as saying SMU gave ABC clearance to officially switch the game, confirming the Mustangs will make TV appearances in 1985.

eight hits for the victory.

By The Associated Press Jose DeLeon, who had worried about his major-league future, can rest easy. The 24-year-old right-hander was on a 1-16 streak that extended back to last season, after a 13-7 start over his first 11/2 years in the majors. He was 0-7 in 1985 and had a string of 11 winless starts.

DeLeon took a load off his mind Sunday, combining with Al Holland on a two-hitter as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Atlanta Braves

In his last start, DeLeon was knocked out by the Astros in the second inning, and had wondered if it would be his last start. The Pirates had sent two other struggling pitchers to the minors.

"I was really thinking that they'd send me down," DeLeon said. "I went to bed that night in Houston and only slept a couple of hours. I was thinking about it because I knew I hadn't been doing the job.'

In Sunday's other National League games, San Francisco downed Philadelphia 3-1; New York defeated San Diego 7-3; Cincinnati toppled St. Louis 8-3; Los Angeles outscored Montreal 8-7 and Houston edged Chicago 4-3.

DeLeon allowed only one hit in five innings to gain his first victory this year. He walked one batter and struck out five before being forced out by a blister on his pitching hand.

Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner called him that night, but it wasn't what DeLeon feared.

"I figured that he wasn't feeling so good," said Tanner. "I wanted to tell him not to worry, that his season started with his next start." Tanner's call "really helped," said DeLeon.

DeLeon not only pitched himself out of trouble, he pitched the Pirates out of last place in the NL East. Philadelphia's loss left the Phillies in the cellar

'Todd who?' will lead Gamblers

HOUSTON (AP) — Todd Dillon, who has labored for most of two United States Football League seasons in the shadow of Houston Gambler quarterback Jim Kelly, will introduce himself to the Birmingham Stallions tonight.

He hopes it's a lasting impression. Dillon was a seldom-used backup until last week, when Kelly suffered a knee injury on the first half's final play that will be out at least three more weeks. That left Dillon, who likens himself to a scrambling Fran Tarkenton, to help the Gamblers, 9-5, advance to the USFL playoffs. He's even been getting the "Todd who?'' jokes from his teammates.

"I've been backing up one of the greatest quarterbacks in football, that's why I haven't played much,'' Dillon said. Dillon played the second half of last week's 41-20 victory over Arizona, completing six of 14 passes for 92 yards after Kelly had thrown three touchdown passes and completed 13 of 18 passes for 258 yards in the same time frame.

Ron Reeves to replace injured Flutie

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Replacing the injured Doug Flutie with Ron Reeves won't change the New Jersey Generals offense much. It will still be the Herschel Walker show.

Flutie, the Generals high-priced quarterback, will be sidelined for the rest of the regular season with a broken left collarbone and may be out of the lineup when the United States Football League playoffs begin in four weeks, the Generals team physician said Sunday. The Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College suffered the injury after being tackled in the second quarter of the Generals 17-7 victory over the Memphis Showboats on Saturday.

Baseball escapes cocaine taint—for now

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

Major league baseball escaped a rundown in Pittsburgh. But the ball is still in play and the next time the game could be nailed - hard.

In fact, it will be a major-league surprise if some ballplayers don't find the taint of cocaine dust clinging to them as the judicial process unwinds.

During the grand jury's investigation, Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said he expected the outcome to be bad for baseball. After all, at least 11 players, some of whom had admizted their own drug involvement, had been called to testify.

What happened was that seven men were hit with 165 federal drug charges. Not one was a baseball player. Other than being fans, only one is even remotely connected with the game - a one-time food supplier for the Philadelphia Phillies'

No players were named, not even peripherally. When the lawyer for one of zhe defendants mentioned the generic term "ballplayers" (as opposed to a specific one) during a bail hearing, a federal attorney successfully objected.

AP sports analysis

It is understood, though, that some players were granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony. That raises the question: prosecution for what?

Besides, an indictment is only the first step. There is the more public matter of trial - unless all seven men either plead guilty or plea-bargain their way down to lesser offenses and softer punishment.

If there is even one trial, players' names will be mentioned. Some players could be called to testify. It is not inconceivable that some could find themselves implicated.

As Bill Madlock, infielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates said, "Next time the ballplayers won't get off so easy.

Baseball is a business in which image counts as much as talent. A man who can throw a ball 100 miles an hour or hit it a country mile had better be able to survive an investigation into everything else

And whether or not it is true, it is is beginning to appear as though for every Dale Murphy, every Steve Garvey and every other player whose character is exemplary, there are an equal or greater number of baseball players whose character couldn't survive even a cursory look.

In an earlier time, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was rarely, if ever, shown in an uncomfortable circumstance despite being paralyzed with polio. Photographers and newsreel cameramen protected him, averting their lenses while he was lifted out of his wheelchair or walked with his crutches. Today, politicians have to watch their every step, lest they be shown unflatteringly.

Similarly, a generation or two ago, baseball players who routinely drank themselves into a stupor or otherwise caroused beyond the legal limit often were protected by the fraternity of teammates and sports writers of the day. They weren't really criminals; just good ol' boys having some good ol'

But today, even something as innocent as a disagreement in a restaurant can be magnified into a major brouhaha that becomes a permanent part of the public's perception of the athlete. The mere hint of involvement with drugs can impair a player's ability to perform to his peak, even if he's never touched the stuff.

What may trouble baseball even more than the potential for revelations at future legal proceedings is that all of this is coming down at the same time talk of another strike is escalating

A number of baseball players are already perceived by some as nothing more than overpaid, overprotected, overgrown children. The average salary is in the $350,000 range. Many of them can supplement their income with public appearances and endorsements. They also get everything from $60.a day meal money to public adulation.

A few franchise owners are already perceived by some as wealthy egomaniacs to whom the ticket-buying fans are less important than tax shelters the teams provide.

Rebound muscle key for Lakers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) -Thanks to a massacre of their own, the Los Angeles Lakers have a 2-1 advantage in the National Basketball Association's Championship Series.

And they have that advantage mainly because they've hit the backboards with a fervor and improved their defense.

As Coach Pat Riley has said many times, "No rebounds, no rings," as in championship rings.

"I thought definitely the key again, as it was in Game 2 and as it was in Game 1, was in the rebounding department," were Riley's first words to reporters after the Lakers overwhelmed the Boston Celtics 136-111 Sunday.

The Lakers had 20 fewer rebounds than did the Celtics in both the seventh game of last year's Championship Series, which the Celtics won 111-102, and the first game of the present series, Boston's 148-114 Memorial Day Massacre last Monday.

The Lakers outrebounded the Celtics 49-37 Sunday. The numbers were exactly the same in Los Angeles' 109-102 Game 2 win at Boston last Thursday night.

"They beat us on the boards and were able to get their running game going," said Boston guard Danny Ainge, who scored only seven points.

After a miserable first game, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has been brilliant in the last two games. He had 26 points, a game-high 14 rebounds and seven assists Sunday to follow his 30-point, 17-rebound, eight-assist performance in Game

Abdul-Jabbar's 20th point of Sunday's game, scored with 9:06 remaining in the third quarter, made him the leading all-time NBA playoff scoring leader. It gave him 4,458 post-season points, one more than former Laker Jerry West.

Forward James Worthy led the Lakers in scoring with 29 points all of them in the second and third quarzers - and grabbed nine rebounds; reserve Bob McAdoo contributed 19 points and six rebounds; and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 17 points and a game-high 16 assists.

Kevin McHale scored a career playoff high 31 points and had 10 rebounds, but was the only Celtic to play an above-par game. Larry Bird had only 20 points and seven rebounds. He made just eight of his 21 field-goal attempts.

It appeared thz Celtics were on their way to taking it early on Sunday. They led 29-25 after one quarter of play and 48-38 early in the second period before the Lakers exploded

Los Angeles outscored Boston 27-11 in the final seven minutes of the first half to go ahead 65-59 at the intermission, and the Celtics never issued a serious threat after that. It was 100-85 after three quartzrs. Boston wasn't closer than that 15-point margin in the final

The Lakers, who have won 25 of their 26 games at home since Feb. 1, could beat the Celtics for the first time in nine Championship Series meetings by winning the fourth and fifth games here Wednesday and Friday nights. The sixth and seventh games, if necessary, will be in Boston next week.

Lopez wins 2nd straight

MASON, Ohio (AP) - Nancy Lopez may be forced to alter her schedule if she keeps her championship golf touch this week. The winner in the LPGA Championship on Sunday goes after her third straight 1985 victory at the McDonald's Championship in Malvern, Pa., starting Thursday.

If she wins that tournament, she will be within two of her LPGA record of five straight triumphs, accomplished as a rookie in 1978.

However, Lopez plans to play only at Malvern and the Rochester, N.Y., International before taking one or two weeks off.

"The way I'm playing, I feel good. I'm excited. But it's going to be tough (to win five in a row), she said after her eight-shot runaway over Alice Miller in the LPGA Championship.

Miller watched Lopez shoot a closing 7-under-par 65 for a 15-under total of 273 over the Nicklaus Sports Center's Grizzly course. After tying Lopez for the 54-hole lead, Millzr struggled to a

73 for a 281 total. "I definitely didn't expect her to shoot 65," the runner-up said. "But once she makes birdies, she's very capable of shooting those numbers.'

Lopez said she's a more mature player now than in 1978, when she won nine tournaments. And she's not sure that when she was a rookie, she chuld have handled the two-stroke penalty she received Thursday for slow play.

She turned the opening-round controversy into a positive note in the final round. "I was mad positively," she said.

Light hitter slugs Twins to victory

By BEN WALKER AP Sports Writer

Ken Schrom and the Minnesota Twins seemed headed for their 11th straight loss - until little-used Mike Stenhouse hit a two-run homer in the eighth to rally the Twins past the Milwaukee Brewers

Stenhouse, batting only .196 with just one hit in his last 23 at-bats, homered Sunday off reliever Bob Gibson after Kent Hrbek doubled with two outs.

"I had to tell myself to stay calm," said Schrom, 4-4, after pitching a five-hitter. "It's a backpack off everybody's back."

"It was a low slider on a 3-1 count," Stenhouse said. "I'm a low-ball hitter."

Gibson is now 5-2.

Gold medal the opportunity of a lifetime for pianist

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Jose Feghali, the seventh gold medalist in the 24-year history of the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, says he had been preparing for the event since he was 13 years old.

"It's the opportunity of a lifetime," the Brazil native, who first played in public at the age of five, said as he triumphed over 35 other pianists in the prestigious contesz on Sunday.

The 24-year-old Feghali, who now lives in London, triumphed over 35 other pianists in the prestigious contest.

Feghali received a standing ovation as he walked onstage to receive the medal from Van Cliburn, who became an overnight celebrity when he won the Tchaikovsky International Competition in Moscow in 1958.

Feghali played the first movement of Tchiakosky's Piano Concerto No. 1 at the award ceremony, the same piece with which Cliburn won his famous debut recital at Carnegie Hall in New York, a 30-month concert tour of North America and Europe, the chance to make several recordings and a $12,000 cash prize.

With the medal, Feghali won a recording as well as $6,000

Awards ceremony host F Murray Abraham, the Oscar-winning actor who played Mozart's rival in the film "Amadeus," announced before opening the award envelopes that a video screening of the six finalists would be presented. "I shouldn't do this," Abraham told the audience estimated at 3,000 people. "We're getting so close. It's much easier to be up here (on stage) than out there (in the audience where the six finalists sat). I know!"

Second-place honors went to Philippe Bianconi, 25, of France, who received a New York recital debut, $8,000, a 30-month concert tour and a recording on the Vox Cum Laude label.

Third was Barry Douglas, 25, of Northern Ireland, who represented the United Kingdom. The bronze medalist also will get the 30-month concert tour and a Vox Cum Laude cash. Fourth place went to Emma Takhmizian, 27, of Bulgaria; fifth to Karoly Mocsari, 22, of Hungary; and sixth to Hans-Christian Wille, 27, of West Germany.

Two special prizes were also awarded by the 11-person international jury. The award for best chamber music performance was shared by Feghali and Kathryn Selby, a semifinalist from Australia. The award for the best performance of Fantasia on an Ostinato, a work by John Corigliano commissioned by the Cliburn competition, went to

Israel prepares to withdraw as Syria returns to Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - With Israel planning to complete its withdrawal from Lebanon this week, Syrian troops in the east reportedly are grouping for a move to put down the chaotic fighting in Beirut.

On Sunday, the Christian commander of Lebanon's main air force base was assassinated and his son was seriously wounded by a carload of gunmen in eastern Lebanon.

Christians and Moslems fought with grenades and anti-aircraft guns along the Green Line that splits Beirut into Christian and Moslem sectors, with two people reported killed and seven wounded.

Two people were killed and 18 wounded in continued fighting between Shiite Moslem militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas in Beirut's refugee camps, and the Shiites raided a Palstinian camp in southern Lebanon as well.

Since the Shiite Moslem militia Amal attacked the Palestinian refugee camps of Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh on May 19, 502 people have died and 2,063 have been wounded in the fighting, by police count

Prime Minister Shimon Peres of Israel announced Sunday that Israel would complete its withdrawal by Thursday, the third anniversary of the invasion that Israel launched to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization. Syria reportedly will not move toward Beirut until Israel completes its withdrawal.

The killers of Col. Suleiman Daoud Mazloum, commander of the air base at Riyaq, in the Bekaa Valley, sped away after the attack. The reason for the assault in the eastern village of Ablah was not

In nearby Baalbek, Lebanese sources close to Syrian intelligence said Sunday that Syrian army troops are grouping in two remote bases to move to Beirut's eastern outskirts under a joint Lebanese-Syrian security plan.

They reported they have seen Syrian army units and "some tanks changing positions" north of this ancient city 30 miles east of

The Syrians reportedly plan to to advance to Beirut and link up with about 5,000 Lebanese army men loyal to President Amin Gemayel.

Amarillo Victory Highlight Of Harvester Grid Season

(Another in a series of review-

A late season slump in which they lost their last three games left the 1953 Fightin' Harvester football machine just above the .500 mark in the won-lost column. The Green and Gold gridders wound up with six wins and four losses for a ,600 percentage. Coach Tom Tipps concluded his seventh season as the Harvester head mentor with the '53 season. The 6-4 Harvester record this past year gave Tipps an enviable over-all record of 54 wins, 17 losses and one tie for an .885 percentage. The '53 campaign marked only the second time under the Tipps regime that the Harvesters lost as many as four games. Tipps' first Harvester team in 1947 compiled the same record as the '53 team-6-4. Since that time, the Harvesters rolled up records of 7-2-1 in 1948; 8-3-0 in 1949; 10-1-0 in 1950; 9-1-0 in 1951; 8-2-0 in 1952; and 6-4-0 in 1953.
