

RRC delays decision on perforations probe

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Commissioners and staff of the Texas Railroad Commission discussed illegal perforations in Panhandle Field oil wells Monday morning but delayed any decision on whether to pursue investigation of the alleged irregularities.

Brian Schaible, RRC information specialist, reported the commissioners "didn't decide anything" in the late-morning session Monday except to consider the matter further next Monday.

He said the commissioners talked with staff examiners for about 50 minutes on matters regarding the alleged perforations in wells operated by independent oil operators in the Panhandle Field.

The issue involves alleged perforations in the well bores into other formations either above or below the oil bearing strata from which the operators have reported their oil and casinghead gas production.

Representatives of Phillips Petroleum Co. and Dorchester Gas Corp. have claimed many of the independents have wrongfully drilled into other than oil-producing strata and pumped gas from their wells to increase their gas production.

The actions have been done without proper reporting of the perforations to the Railroad Commission and in violation of the separation of oil and gas rights in the field, the majors have contended. And the independents have been illegally counting the gas as casinghead gas in their production records, the majors claim.

At yesterday's meeting, the commission basically considered questions on what evidence or indications concerning the alleged illegal perforations had been presented to the commission. Schaible said in a telephone interview.

The examiners referred to testimony previously given in trials and in federal hearings, he said. The examiners said they had no details or particulars indicating which specific independent oil operators were involved, Schaible reported.

The three RRC commissioners also discussed with the examiners what courses of action might be taken in the future concerning the reporting of any illegal perforations, he stated.

Among the courses of action being considered are the sending of letters to all operators in the field informing them of the state rules and provisions regarding well perforations, Schaible said.

In addition, operators would be informed that if wells had been perforated in some manner other than what has been submitted in reports to the commission, the operators should provide documentation to show exactly where the wells were perforated.

The commissioners also discussed making an open notice to operators that if they were aware of any violations of the state rules on perforations, they could present the information to the RRC in one public hearing to be held at a later date.

Schaible said the commission also considered the possibility of looking at the applications for well classification required under the Natural Gas Policy Act and checking to see that the completion and production reports match the categories of gas actually being produced from the wells.

But no action was taken on the matters discussed yesterday. Because of the consideration of other cases and issues included on Monday's agenda, the commissioners decided that further consideration of additional questions and evidence on the perforation issue would be discussed next week during their regular Monday morning meeting, Schaible reported.

City hears options on salt woes

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa commissioners discussed alternatives regarding a proposed project to alleviate salts in Lake Meredith water during a workshop session this morning.

John Williams, representative of the Canadian River Municipal Water Authority, told the commission there are three choices to make about the project: "do nothing, seek federal help or do it ourselves."

"If we do nothing, the water probably won't get much better" and possibly could get worse, Williams said.

If the federal government is brought in, the authority and its member cities could gain some welcome financial assistance and cut down the costs for the cities and their customers, he said.

But the project could take a longer time to develop because of additional federal studies, administrative problems and budgeting concerns, Williams said.

"If we pay for the project ourselves," the project would likely get started sooner, he said.

"It's highly likely we'll be paying the costs" or at least the larger share for the project, Williams said.

While the federal government has paid for similar control projects in the past, policies are changing under the current administration and there's less certainty that the federal government would pay entirely for the project, he explained.

He said the authority will be contacting U.S. congressional representatives about the possibilities of obtaining federal funding for the project. There's a chance the federal government could pay at least a large share of the initial capital construction costs, he said.

But if the congressional members are not too optimistic about getting federal assistance, the authority will proceed to fund it locally, with the member cities having to share the costs among themselves, Williams said.

There's also a chance that some state assistance could be gained under the recently passed state water control bill, he said.

Appeals court judges hear Grandstaff case arguments

From Staff and Wire Reports

NEW ORLEANS — The city of Borger and four of its policemen have asked the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to overturn federal district court rulings awarding $1.65 million to the family of ranch foreman James Grandstaff.

Attorneys for the family Monday urged the appeals court to uphold the award, arguing, among other things, that Borger police who shot and killed Grandstaff were incompetent and untrained.

The three-judge federal appeals court took the case under consideration and gave no indication when they might rule.

"The evidence shows they deliberately did not give training concerning the use of deadly force," argued C. J. Hanby, a Houston lawyer representing the family of James Grandstaff. "They were told simply 'follow the penal code.'"

Grandstaff was killed Aug. 11, 1981, when police chased a fugitive to the 110,000-acre Four Sixes Ranch, where he was foreman.

Grandstaff, who saw the police lights, drove up and got out of his pickup and was shot down and killed by police.

Police testified they mistook Grandstaff for the Oklahoma fugitive they were chasing.

"The city of Borger never called a witness to say they did not follow police procedure," Hanby argued. "They kept the officers on the force and gave them a raise two months later."

Judge Thomas Reavley of Austin said, "The fact that they were not punished and kept their jobs, then were promoted — maybe this all adds up that this is the way they run the shop in Borger."

Wayne Sturdivant, an Amarillo attorney representing the city of Borger, said he questioned the liability to the city.

"It's obvious the jury felt some compassion for the police officers," he said.

"These were not untrained police officers that had been put out on the streets with a gun on their hip and a badge. Every one of them had been trained....

"They were not hooligans. They were a group of young men who were in a heck of a situation and scared to death."

He said, "There is no evidence in this record that this has ever occurred before, that these officers would have any reason to believe they could shoot this man without facing the problems they did."

Grandstaff's widow, Sharon, her father-in-law, Joe Grandstaff, and her children originally sued for $5 million. A federal jury in Amarillo awarded them $1.43 million in damages against the city and four officers.

In April, they were awarded another $136,000 for attorneys' fees and $49,200 for expenses.

Borger had only $500,000 in liability insurance when Grandstaff was killed.

The Houston law firm of Richard "Racehorse" Haynes will get nearly $763,000 under a contingency agreement with the family.

Court rejects silent prayer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public schools may not set aside daily moments of silence if students are told that "prayer" is one possible activity during the silence, the Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices ruled that an Alabama law allowing such periods for "meditation or voluntary prayer" by public school students violated the constitutionally required separation of church and state.

The ruling represents a strong reaffirmation of the court's 1962 decision banning organized prayer sessions as part of the public school day.

But it does not mean that public schools cannot provide for a daily moment of silence, during which students may pray if they so desire.

"The legislative intent to return prayer to the public schools is, of course, quite different from merely protecting every student's right to engage in voluntary prayer during an appropriate moment of silence during the school day," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court.

"The addition of 'or voluntary prayer' indicates that the state intended to characterize prayer as a favored practice. Such an endorsement is not consistent with the established principle that the government must pursue a course of complete neutrality toward religion," Stevens said.

The moment-of-silence case was as politically charged as any on the high court's docket this year. Numerous political candidates in 1984 — including President Reagan — called for a return of organized prayer in public schools.

The Reagan administration, entering the Alabama case as a "friend of the court," told the justices that such state laws "enhance the opportunity for students to include silent prayer as part of their activities at school."

President Reagan favors a constitutional amendment that would, in effect, overturn the Supreme Court's 1962 decision.

The 1962 ruling, despite numerous assertions to the contrary, did not outlaw "voluntary prayers" in public schools. As Forest Montgomery, a Washington lawyer for the National Association of Evangelicals, said in a recent interview, "You can hardly engage in thought control."

The decision 23 years ago drew the line at official sponsorship of prayer sessions. Even without moment-of-silence laws, no state or court can prevent any student from engaging in silent prayer.

At least 22 other states have moment-of-silence laws, but not all of them mention prayer.

For example, Arizona and Connecticut laws provide for "silent meditation" without mentioning prayer. A Louisiana law states that the "brief time of silent meditation shall not be intended or identified as a religious exercise."

Other states with moment-of-silence laws include Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Virginia.

The 1981 Alabama law was challenged by Ishmael Jaffree, an agnostic whose three children attend public schools in Mobile.

A lawyer, Jaffree initially sued the Mobile school board because his children's teachers were not barred from leading their classes in prayer. He later amended the lawsuit to challenge the 1981 moment-of-silence law.

Jaffree also challenged a law, enacted at the urging of then Gov. Fob James, that authorized the state's public school teachers to lead "willing students" in daily prayer sessions, and even supplied a recommended prayer written by the governor's son. The Supreme Court declared that law unconstitutional last year.

The direct impact of today's decision on Mobile schools is difficult to gauge. According to Jaffree, he and his lawyer receive regular reports of organized prayer sessions and Bible readings over school public address systems.

Bill Hanebuth, executive director of the Mobile County Education Association, recently confirmed for the American Bar Association Journal that various prayer activities are widespread in the county's schools.

Judge won't 'approve' housing revenue bonds

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

There is a difference between "approving" and "acknowledging something," says Gray County Judge Carl Kennedy, and he wants the people asking him to approve up to $1 million in "housing revenue" bonds to know it.

The Panhandle Regional Housing Finance Corporation is asking the county to approve the issuance of the bonds to finance a loan to Pampa Apartments Associates to build a 46-unit apartment project to be located at the southeast corner of 19th Street and Gray Avenue.

"But there really is no such place," Kennedy told the commissioners court Monday at their regular meeting. Gray Street runs to the northwest and ends near central Park near Hobart, approximately 10 blocks south of 19th Avenue. South Gray Avenue runs about 14 blocks south and ends at the city limits, one half mile south of McCullough.

"I wrote and told them that we have no information," Kennedy said, adding that he has been asked to sign a certificate noting that he approves the issuance of the bonds.

"I looked at the statutes and there is no basis for the judge to approve them," he said. "We will acknowledge that we have received the approval certificate, but we will not approve the bonds."

Kennedy said that the housing revenue bonds would be like industrial development bonds and would not involve tax money. The bonds also call for the acquisition and rehabilitation of 22

Accused spy Arthur Walker led from hearing

More arrests expected

Fourth spy suspect held

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A fourth man is in custody and more arrests are expected in a crackdown on a spy ring involving three family members who allegedly smuggled secrets to the Soviet Union for at least 20 years, authorities said.

Jerry Alfred Whitworth, 45, of Davis, was arraigned Monday and ordered held without bail after he surrendered on charges of conspiracy to deliver top-secret national defense information to aid a foreign government.

Whitworth, a retired Navy radioman, is the first person arrested in connection with the alleged operation who is not related to John A. Walker Jr., 47, a retired Navy communications specialist who authorities say ran the ring.

Walker, his son Michael, 22, a seaman on the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz; and his brother, Arthur J. Walker, 50, a retired Navy officer, have been arrested.

Court documents indicate that a fifth person, represented by the code name "F," also was involved in the alleged ring, which an affidavit said had "been ongoing since at least 1965."

John Walker, a 21-year Navy veteran, and his son faced arraignment today in Baltimore.

John Walker also tried to recruit his daughter, Laura Walker Snyder, into the spy ring when she was an Army communications specialist from 1978-1979, two FBI informants say in an affidavit filed in support of the charges against Whitworth. The affidavit did not say whether he was successful, and Ms. Snyder's whereabouts are unknown.

"There are other people involved ... yet to be taken into custody," said FBI agent Karen Alexander in Sacramento. She did not elaborate.

Whitworth, previously identified by the code name "D," faces a detention hearing Friday and a preliminary hearing June 18. He did not enter a plea.

The affidavit filed by FBI Agent John H. Peterson says Whitworth conspired with Walker and others to "communicate, deliver and transmit" defense secrets to the Soviet Union. Whitworth faces a life prison sentence if convicted.

"I think it's fair to say that in terms of number of people involved, this is the largest U.S. spy operation since the Rosenbergs," said U.S. Attorney Joseph Russoniello, referring to Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, who were executed in 1953 for giving the Soviet Union secret information about atomic weapons.

obituaries

IRENE WHEELER DUFF
SONORA — Word has been received of the death of former Pampa resident Irene Wheeler Duff, 72, who died Sunday at Sonora Hospital.

Services were to be at 2 p.m. today at Union Presbyterian Church with burial at Greenleaf Cemetery.

Born May 12, 1913, in Tishomingo, Okla., she married Clovis Duff in 1940 in Pampa. She was a member of the First Baptist Church in Wickett.

Survivors include her husband, one daughter, LaJoy Tudor of Sonora; one son, Jasper of White Deer; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

VIRGINIA MAE MILLER
BORGER — Virginia Mae Miller, 79, died Sunday. Graveside services were to be at 10:30 a.m. today in the Wheeler Cemetery in Wheeler with the Rev. James Putman, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church in Pampa, officiating. Arrangements were by Wright Funeral Home of Wheeler.

Mrs. Miller was born in Gainesville and moved to Wheeler at an early age. She moved to Borger in 1951. She and her husband, Henry Miller, owned and operated Service Cleaners.

Survivors include her husband, of the home; a son, S.D. Miller of Borger; one daughter, Pauline McCarroll of Para, Brazile; a brother, Buford Conwell of Haltom City; three grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren.

Salt problems

concentrations since its inception, Williams explained. Though several chloride salts can be found in the water, the one the authority is most concerned with is sodium chloride — "plain, old, ordinary table salt," he said.

Health and environmental agencies recommend maximum chloride contents of 250 milligrams per liter in drinking water, he said. In the past 15 years, the Lake Meredith water has seen generally increasing concentrations of salt, hitting a high of just over 400 mg per liter in 1981 following a period of drought, Williams said.

The lake now contains about 300 mg of salt per liter, moving up from just over 200 mg recorded in late 1982.

The salt level does not mean the water is condemned or unsafe at present, he stated. It's still approved for use by the state water board. But there is concern over its becoming undesirable in later years. And the salt content presents continuing problems of corrosiveness and mineral depositions in the water pipeline systems.

Following studies after the Lake Meredith project was initiated in the early 1950s, it was known the water quality would be marginable. That led to studies on improving the water quality for use by the cities, he said, including the development of water treatment plants.

Grandstaff case

spotted a truck reported stolen from Oklahoma and driven by a man they considered armed and dangerous, according to papers on file in the suit and from the official investigation.

According to the documents, this is what happened next:

Three squad cars screamed down the road after the truck. In the lead were Officer Bailey Roberts and John Wayne Turner, a recruit on his first day at work.

The truck's driver shot at them, and they shot back.

The driver, wounded, crashed the truck through two barbed wire fences and onto the ranch — a 110,000-acre spread in the Texas Panhandle east of Borger.

The policemen lost sight of the wanted man and parked on the pasture near the abandoned truck, a few hundred yards from Grandstaff's house.

Grandstaff was awakened by the commotion and by a bullet that whanged through his walls.

He dressed and drove out to see

Fight against Playboy fails

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A religious coalition fighting Rogers Cablesystem's offering of the Playboy Channel has convinced about 575 people to cancel their cable subscriptions — far short of the 10,000 cancellation goal.

The Rev. Joe West, founder of the Coalition to Stop the Playboy Channel, turned over 319 cancellation notices Monday to Rogers officials and said the drive had concluded.

West said he had resigned as president of the coalition, but he said his stepping down in no way is connected to the failure to reach the 10,000 goal. "It's time for some fresh ideas," said West, pastor of Town East Baptist Church and president of the Texas chapter of the Moral Majority.

County meet

multi-family residential rental projects within the "jurisdiction of the corporation.

The $1 million "apartment" project is part of a $29 million program to fund 21 similar projects in seven Panhandle counties. 15 of those projects are in Amarillo while one each is in Pampa, Canadian, Perryton, Dumas, Dalhart and Hereford. The Canadian project would be the sale of up to $850,000 in bonds to finance a loan to the Canadian Apartment Co. which built a 32-unit multifamily apartment project at Birch and Third Street.

In other business, county officials took no action on an airport operator's lease agreement with the Airport Board. The county's contract with the private operators, Pampa Aircraft, expires July 1. The commissioners want to amend the contract to "take some of the burden off the county's back" as Kennedy put it.

The county funds major improvements — paving and lighting of the runway — at the Perry Lefors Field while Pampa Aircraft manages day to day operations of the airport as well as a number of businesses including a lucrative aircraft fueling and repair business.

However, commissioners questioned such county-funded expenses as providing a rent-free house and utilities at the airport for an employee of the operator. The county also pays the salary of a part-time employee of Pampa Aircraft. The county has also paid for the company's phone and utility bills, as well as cleaning and office supplies.

Although no action was taken, commissioners agreed that it would be a good idea to amend the airport contract to charge $150 per month rent and a fuel charge of five cents per gallon. They also discussed shortening the contract from five years to two years. They agreed to let the current operators finish the terms of the contract, then put the contract up for bids.

At their last meeting, May 14, commissioners asked to see the airport's "profit and loss" statements before renewing the contract. Kennedy said that because Pampa Aircraft is a private business, such statements would not be part of the public record.

"I urge you to visit with anyone you know to get the feedback on the airport," Kennedy asked the commissioners. "Also look very closely at the agreement."

In other business, commissioners rehired the Amarillo firm of Dozier, Pickens and Francis to audit the 1984 records of revenue sharing, juvenile probation and other offices. Henry Davis, a representative with the firm, estimated that the audit would cost from $9,500 to $10,500. The other firm the county considered was the Pampa firm of Lewis Meers.

How Reagan's plan would affect you

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you want an idea of how you would fare under President Reagan's plan for overhauling the income tax, figure it out for yourself.

You can make a fairly good estimate, if you have typical income and deductions, by looking at your 1984 tax return and changing some of the calculations to account for Reagan's proposal. That will show approximately what you would have paid had that plan been in effect last year.

To your 1984 income, add $240 for a family ($120 for a single person) for your employer-paid health insurance (if you received at least that much). From your itemized deductions, throw away the writeoff for state and local taxes. Interest on your principal home would remain deductible, but other deductible interest — credit cards, auto loans, second homes — would be limited to $5,000 plus an amount equal to your investment income.

Two-earner couples would lose the special deduction designed to offset part of the "marriage penalty." A couple with a spouse who did not work outside the home would be permitted a maximum $4,000 deduction to Individual Retirement Accounts, up from $2,250.

If you deducted union dues, employee job expenses or other miscellaneous expenses (such as work clothes or professional journals), combine them and then deduct only the portion that exceeds 1 percent of your adjusted gross income. (That is what is left after subtracting any moving expenses and contributions to your IRA.)

The 1 percent deduction may be taken whether or not you itemize.

If you don't itemize and you claimed the special deduction for charitable contributions, you'll have to eliminate it.

For each personal exemption, subtract $2,000 from income. Non-itemizers then need only look at the tax rates below to figure what they would owe. Itemizers must subtract the new standard deduction — $2,900 for single returns and $4,000 for joint returns — from total itemized deductions and subtract the balance from income to determine taxable income.

Tax rates for couples: the first $4,000 of taxable income would be tax-free. The next $25,000 would be taxed at 15 percent; the next $41,000 at 25 percent and everything above $70,000 would be taxed at 35 percent.

If you are a single taxpayer, here's what your tax rates would look like: No tax on the first $2,900 of taxable income. Income between $2,900 and $18,000 would be taxed at 15 percent; between $18,000 and $42,000, at 25 percent, and everything above $42,000, at a 35 percent rate.

For example, a single person with $44,000 taxable income after deductions and exemptions would pay zero tax on the first $2,900; 15 percent ($2,265) on the next $15,100; 25 percent ($6,000) on the next $24,000, and 35 percent on the last $2,000 ($700). The total tax bill: $8,965.

thunderstorms statewide tonight and Wednesday. A few thundershowers severe with locally heavy rainfall. Low tonight low 50s Panhandle to low 70s southeast. High Wednesday mid 70s northwest to upper 80s southeast.
New Mexico - Scattered showers and thunderstorms tonight, most numerous north and east. Heavy thunderstorms possible over the eastern plains this evening. Lows tonight 30s and 40s mountains and north with 50s to the low 60s elsewhere. Clearing west Wednesday with a continuing chance for showers and thunderstorms east. Cooler east Wednesday with highs in the 60s mountains and northeast with 70s to the mid 80s lower elevations southwest.

Ex-board member raps prison suit handling

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas could have been out of the costly prison lawsuit many years and several million dollars sooner, says a former state prison board member who is highly critical of Gov. Mark White.

"We played hard ball in Texas and struck out in every inning. Not only did we lose, we disgraced the state by committing perjury in federal court. What an embarrassment it was to find that convicted felons in our prisons had more credibility than the prison administrators," said Harry Whittington.

"Despite all the evidence of defiance, perjury and illegal activity by our prison administrators, neither Gov. White nor Lt. Gov. (Bill) Hobby have made any public statement condemning the past practices of our state employees," the Austin lawyer said Monday in a speech to the North Austin Rotary Club.

Gov. White could not be reached Monday for comment. His press secretary, Ann Arnold, said, "It's astounding that Mr. Whittington would even suggest that Gov. White and Lt. Gov. Hobby every condoned any improprieties in prison operations when they've both been so instrumental in efforts to reform our penal institutions and to appropriate unprecedented sums to make sure inmates are confined in a humane manner."

Whittington said the state's first mistake was denying the allegations in the civil rights lawsuit filed by inmates. The denials were based on information from bad sources — prison administrators, he said.

"The obvious answer from the administrators was that we have the best prison system in the country and those inmates who are complaining about all these conditions have nothing to lose by lying," he added. "With that answer, we went on to 13 years of litigation."

"Instead of doing what responsible executives in the private sector would have done in the face of such far-reaching allegations with such potential cost to taxpayers, our leaders simply asked the prison administrators whether any of those charges of brutality, inadequate medical care, overcrowding, use of inmate-guards, mixing of violent and non-violent inmates were true," said Whittington.

"This is the same suit we fought for 13 years and incurred attorneys' fees of over $7 million. So, after 13 years of name-calling and lying, the state of Texas is recognizing the need for prison reform," he said.

The state recently agreed to settle the overcrowding issue, the final unresolved issue in the suit. Under the agreement, which must be approved by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler, the inmate population will be reduced by 5,300.

There are now about 37,000 convicts in the Texas Department of Corrections.

White did not reappoint Whittington to the prison board earlier this year.

As a former attorney general who had handled the case, White should have moved more quickly to end the court fight, said Whittington.

"I was well aware of White's knowledge of the cover-up of the autocratic way the prisons had been operated. He kept assuring me he was going to make the long overdue changes when he became governor," Whittington said.

White had "every opportunity to move swiftly to clean up the corruption and waste" in the Texas Department of Corrections, said Whittington. Instead, White reappointed board members who "had served six years without ever questioning any of the past operations."

Ms. Arnold said, "If Mr. Whittington believes there has been some coverup, perhaps he should explain when he first became aware of any wrongdoing and why as a board member for six years he did not act sooner to correct the situation."

Scientists are reviving frozen insects

HOUSTON (AP) — By the end of this decade, scientists will probably be able to freeze and preserve whole human organs for transplant use, a University of Houston researcher says.

"As far as human cells and tissues, some things have been frozen for 20 years and retained full viability, such as blood cells and sperm," said biologist John Baust.

Scientists also have been able to use frozen corneas, bone marrow, skin and embryos, but not frozen whole organs — such as hearts or kidneys — in transplants, he said.

But Baust and other University of Houston scientists involved in cryobiological research are probing the mysteries of how insects can come back to life after being frozen.

Baust said gallflies internally produce an "antifreeze" — a substance that protects them in low temperatures.

Whole human organs are not useful once they are frozen because water within the cells turns to ice when frozen, cracking and rupturing the tissue, he said.

Judge rules

State failed to provide mental health funds

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that Texas is violating his year-old order that state mental patients be discharged only to proper community programs. U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders said Monday the state's community mental health services are only "minimally adequate" and blamed the Legislature and local governments for not providing enough money for them.

His 12-page ruling said the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation has attempted to comply with his orders, but that it hasn't had enough money.

Sanders said he is "obligated to determine an appropriate remedy for failure to comply" with his orders.

But said he will wait until he receives a plan next month from the mental health department, which is supposed to include a blueprint for developing community services and complying with requirements of the 1981 settlement of a class-action lawsuit against state mental hospitals.

Last summer, Sanders ordered the department to improve staff-patient ratios in state mental hospitals.

He said that whenever possible, the state could do that by discharging patients instead of hiring workers — but he stipulated that mental patients be discharged only to proper community programs.

Reaction depends on age

Two of the surest ways to feel old are to show people your high school yearbook and to talk fashion with the younger set. I thought to know, I made those mistakes recently.

One day, out of sheer curiosity and stupidity, I showed two of my female co-workers — Senior '82 and Senior '86 — my 1977 Antler yearbook and my brother's 1974 edition to see if they like the same guys I lusted after as a teen. I reminded them that they have to apply 1970s standards, but they didn't listen.

Senior '86 took one look at the pictures of the long-haired boys with big bow ties, print shirts and wide lapels and gasped, "Look at how long their hair is."

And before I could conjure images of running my fingers through Bruce Swabb's soft locks, she remarked, "That is so gross."

Senior '82 was more understanding. She conceded that one of my brother's classmates, Jim, would be good looking if "you imagine him with his hair cut and feathered back in the middle, a sleeveless shirt and jeans."

I tried to apply 1980's standards to Jim, but those dimples and gleaming brown eyes just didn't look the same.

I was able to live with my out-of-style conceptions of "good looking" until I lunched with Senior '85 and her friends, whom I gather are closer to her age than mine. They talked about their favorite designer labels, Polo and La Cosa Nostra or something like that. I didn't want to say anything, but I'm at the age when the only label I look for says "30 percent off."

The conversation then turned to a subject most young folks consider obscene: Polyester. That's an oil by-product that once was a popular teen-age clothing material.

Said one: "I wouldn't wear petroleum."

Another: "Those awful matching pant suits."

The third: "Collars down to there."

They had just described what I wore in my senior picture, but again I didn't want to admit to anything.

I happened to wear one of those "collars down to there" shirts Sunday at church and Monday at work and nobody said a thing. It is a soft, pastel blue blouse and, looking closely, one could see the figures of an old fashioned man and woman stitched into the fabric. I used to wear it all the time with dress pants.

But the collar grows from 1 1/2 inches at the back of the neck to four inches at the front, hardly something the chic chicks of today could turn up. But I don't care, I still think it's a nice shirt. Besides, it was the only clean blouse I had.

Just don't tell Mom, who lectures me on the importance of keeping up with the latest styles. At Mom's house, pants bought last Christmas are already eligible for The Salvation Army. Tight budgets know no fashion, I say, reminding her of some of the outlandish "neon" clothes that my sister, Senior '88, and her friends go for.

Some of the garments I get the most compliments on are ones I've had for eight or 10 years.

Of course, there are some styles I'm glad to be rid of: hip huggers, fat neckties, Lady Godiva hairdos (long, straight, parted in the middle) on every girl in school, clogs. And those petroleum pant suits did get awfully stuffy.

But then, there are aspects of today's "look" that ought to go out of style: too-short bangs, choppy-looking boys' coifs that leave strands of hair dangling down the back (The Weed-Eater Look), baggy flowered shorts, hair that looks like it got flipped back after swimming, sunglasses that serve no purpose but to dangle from the neck.

Keeping up with the latest looks does not guarantee a person will look good, or even "stylish." Just ask our lifestyle editor who gets raves for a black dress that's 20 years old. Or our ad representative who keeps some of her "60's flower child" outfits.

And those who laugh at my high school yearbook take heed. The day will come when some kid will look at your yearbook, find that handsome guy with the feathered hair and say "That is so gross."

Indictments returned in teen cruising case

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury has indicted 28 people on misdemeanor trespassing charges stemming from a crackdown on loitering and teen-age cruising in DeSoto.

High school honor students, girls softball team members and a fundamentalist preacher were included in Monday's indictments. They were among about 50 young people arrested May 31 in an attempt to combat littering and vandalism in parking lots on North Hampton Road.

The grand jury charged the 28 with ignoring signs posted in the parking lots of a Baptist church and two shopping centers that said the property was private and trespassers would be prosecuted.

Assistant District Attorney Hugh Lcas said the alleged violations were "pretty clear cut" because of the large number of easily visible warning signs in the parking lots.

"We've got these kids that are guilty, and the law is clear," Lucas told The Dallas Morning News. "The notice (about trespassing) was clear, and they were clearly there."

Lucas said the defendants were charged with criminal trespass, a Class B misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in jail, because DeSoto police thought a loitering charge would not stand up in court.

But he said that "I certainly don't expect anybody to go to jail. I expect they'll just have to pay some fines."

Sue Joslin of DeSoto, whose 19-year-old son Larry was one of those indicted, said she thinks police overreacted. She said all her son did was stop his car in a parking lot to talk with his girlfriend.

"If my son was someone who picked fights or caused trouble, I'd say he had it coming," she said. "But he's a good kid, and this whole ordeal has torn him to pieces."

Seven of those indicted were from DeSoto. The rest were from Cedar Hill, Duncanville, Grand Prairie, Lancaster, Arlington and Dallas.

Twenty-one of those indicted are between 17 and 19 years old. The only three people older than 26 are the pastor of a Waxahachie church, Nathan Dean Bickerstaff; his associate pastor, Mike Theriault; and the associate's wife, Susan Theriault. The three were arrested as they passed out religious pamphlets.

The crackdown prompted a storm of protest from the parents of many of those arrested and resulted in an angry confrontation last month between the parents and members of the DeSoto City Council, which authorized the police sweep of parking lots.

City plan for abortion clinics dropped

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — The threat of an American Civil Liberties Union lawsuit has prompted City Council to drop a measure intended to protect businesses around abortion clinics.

The council voted Monday not to consider a proposal that would have required the clinics to be in free-standing buildings. Councilman Jimmy Culver proposed that ordinance after a Mesquite abortion clinic was destroyed by arson in February.

"The intimidation factor worked quite well," Culver said. "The abortion clinic operators were running a petition on one side, and the ACLU was running offense for them by threatening a lawsuit. The council got concerned."

Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Opinion

Changing views on Reaganomics

A group called Americans for a Fair Press, headquartered in Alexandria, Va., actually figured out how many times The Washington Post used the word "Reaganomics" during recession times, when the term worked as a criticism against the president, and how quickly that term started to disappear when the economy perked up.

Implicitly, in the Post's writers' and editors eyes, apparently Reagan's approach must bear full blame when economic conditions are troublesome. But when the economy improves, Reagan must be allowed little or no credit.

Americans for a Fair Press said that the word "Reaganomics" was cited 59 times in 32 stories in March of 1982 alone. In September the usage peaked, with the expression appearing 235 times in 85 stories.

When the economy picked up, which could be interpreted as a sign that the president's policies had begun to work, "the Post quickly reversed its tactics. The start of the economic recovery coincided with a decrease in the usage of the term, with 'Reaganomics' dropping sharply after Oct. 1982 and appearing in only 13 stories in December 1982. In the fall of 1984, with the recovery well under way during another election cycle, the Post didn't talk about Reaganomics anymore," the organization said.

Americans for a Fair Press gives the Post perhaps a bit too much credit for consciously trying to undercut Reagan with a blatant use of terminology.

Nevertheless, the group has demonstrated something highly interesting about how the world-view and political proclivities of one of America's media giants can lead to such usage of hot-an-cold running words in news coverage, turned on and off through the media faucet.

Legitimizing the Kremlin

The Soviets and the Americans have again been talking about how to increase trade between them. Fascinating. So are other things, such as that:

A few weeks back, East German Communists gunned down an American Army major going about his legal duties. No words of sorrow were ever elicited from the killers.

In Rome, there began last week a courtroom trial that will draw attention to Communist Bulgaria's role in trying to murder Pope John Paul II - inevitably at the bidding of the KGB, because precious little to which the KGB does not assent ever happens in the Communist bloc.

The Soviets blame the United States, which wants to build a space-based defense against their nuclear weapons, for "overt sabotage" of the Geneva arms talks.

The White House AGAIN emphasizes its hope for a summit meeting between President Reagan and Comrade Gorbachev.

It all ties together. Really it does. Concerning the Soviet Union, the United States in general and the Reagan administration are deeply ambivalent.

The Soviets, it is clearly recognized, are Not Nice (though certainly Comrade Gorbachev looks like The Sort You Can Talk To).

On the other hand, being un-nice to the Soviets - for instance, expecting as much of them, in the way of peaceful behavior, as they expect of the West - is just beyond the pale.

That is not how this interdependent world works. You Have To Do Business even with the Kremlin - search for areas of mutual agreement, find ways of defusing the nuclear threat.

Not every American is as far gone in the warm cliches of detente and accommodation as might be supposed from the prevalence of these attitudes.

One of the pleasanter surprises of the spring has been the emergence of a small but, I trust, growing student movement, coordinated by the Young Conservative Foundation, to call a spade a spade in this matter of Soviet behavior.

Two months back, a Rhode Island high school senior, Joan McEnery, boycotted a Junior Achievement banquet. She had learned that her sponsoring company, Textron, sells goods to the Soviet bloc. "Surely," she said to Textron's president in a feisty letter, "you realize that the Soviet Union is a gross violator of internationally accepted standards of human rights. Profit is no substitute for conscience. It is difficult for me to believe that Textron has sold its soul to genocide perpetrators for a few extra cents in profits."

Meanwhile at places like the University of California at Davis and Loomis-Chaffee prep school in Connecticut, some students have been making racket about the stocks their schools own in corporations doing business with the Soviets.

"The civil rights violations of the South African government pale in comparison to the consistent, systematic, and much more heinous and atrocious violations by the Soviet Union," says one student. If divestiture is sauce for the South African situation, why not for the Soviet situation also?

How much more sensible this is than anything the Washington Post has said lately on the Soviet Union.

The State Department, like the American political establishment as a whole, hates to get shirty about trade or the murder of American officers or anything like that, because if they did so the Soviets would themselves get shirty. And how are you then going to have talks?

As if talking to one's enemies rather than undermining them wherever possible (the historic Soviet strategy) were the essence of sound foreign policy!

The French journalist Jean-Francois Revel knows what is going on. In a new book, "How Democracies Perish," he writes: "The distinguishing mark of our century is not so much communism's determination to erase democracy from our planet, or its frequent success in pursuing that end, as it is the humility with which democracy is not only consenting to its own obliteration but is contriving to legitimize its deadliest enemy's victory."

This, during the presidential term of a devout lover of liberty and foe of communism, Ronald Reagan. Who might not be ill-served by taking on his staff a particular, clear-eyed Rhode Island student, now that she's out of a job with Textron.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, June 4, the 155th day of 1985. There are 210 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On June 4, 1940, the Allies' military evacuation at Dunkirk, France, ended. British Prime Minister Winston S. Churchill told the House of Commons, "We shall fight on the beaches, we shall fight on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, we shall fight in the hills; we shall never surrender."
On this date:

Ten years ago: White House News Secretary Ron Nessen said President Gerald R. Ford would announce his candidacy for the 1976 election later in the month.

Five years ago: Both houses of Congress voted overwhelmingly against a fee on imported oil that President Jimmy Carter had imposed in March. The president later vetoed the repeal resolution, but Congress then overrode it.

A compatible roommate

The last time I reported on my dog, Catfish, the black Lab, he had just completed what came to be known in my house as the "Night of Terror."
He was just a puppy back then and what he lived for was chewing things into small unrecognizable pieces.

I awakened after this particular night to find Catfish had gone on a chewing binge of which jaws would have been proud.
The dog destroyed my glasses - chewed them into tiny bits of frame and lens.

I took what was left to Pearle Vision where they have an emergency service for just such emergencies.

"Can you put these glasses back together?" I asked the woman at Pearle.

"What glasses?" she asked me back.

"These I have in my hands," I said.

"What did you do," she asked again, peering at the chewed and gnawed parts in my hand, "put your glasses through a blender?"

I had to buy new glasses.

Catfish also ate the remote control channel switcher for my television. He even chewed the batteries inside. That was even tougher to take than the loss of my glasses.

Until I could locate another remote control channel changer everytime one of those commercials for feminine hygiene products appeared I had to get up and walk to the television to switch it into oblivion.

The dog even tried to eat a wasp's nest, which resulted in an expensive trip to the vet to make the swelling in his tongue go down.

I once received a nice little promotion book from Julio Iglesias after I wrote a nice little column about his duet with Willie Nelson.

Julio personally inscribed the book to me. One night, Catfish ate the book. For weeks afterwards he barked in Spanish.

I would like to announce, however, that a change recently has swept over Catfish. Not only has he stopped chewing things, he has abandoned some of his other bad habits as well.

He no longer barks in my ear at 2 o'clock in the morning because he wants me to get up to throw a tennis ball so he can run and fetch it.

He also no longer runs up huge long-distance telephone bills calling his friends back at obedience school where he flunked out.

In obedience school every time the trainer would instruct Catfish to "heel," he would attempt to chew the trainer's shoes.

I don't know what happened to change my dog. Perhaps he matured. Or maybe it was the truck I bought him.

I used to carry him around in my regular car. Catfish shed all over the seatcovers. He wanted a little white sports car, but I bought him a little red truck instead. It is up to us to teach the young to be practical.

I moved into a new house with a little more room around it, and that might have helped, too. Catfish now has a nearby creek in which to splash around, numerous squirrels to chase and some other neighborhood dogs with whom to exchange sniffs.

Regardless of why, my dog is a good dog now and we are quite compatible. After three marriages, I finally may have found a roommate I can keep.

Radio Marti not a propaganda device

By Ben Wattenberg

Finally, Radio Marti is on the air, broadcasting into Fidel Castro's Cuba. Marti has been criticized, not just by Castro, but by Americans. The complaints fall into two categories - geopolitics and programming.

The geopolitical gripe is based on the idea that Marti will harm relations between Cuba and America and that it might lead Castro to jam American radio stations. This view deserves only a short amount of shrift. We shouldn't worry about harming relations with Cuba. It is Castro who needs good relations with us. It would help him in many ways: trade, tourism, technology, legitimacy.

What we want from Castro is a change of behavior. We don't want Soviet troops next door, or Cubans trying to export communism to Central America, or Cuban soldiers serving as Soviet mercenaries in Africa. If Castro changes his behavior, he'll get good relations with us. If not, it won't hurt us. We can live without Cuban cigars.

Will Castro jam U.S. stations? Is a mouse likely to challenge a lion? Jamming is misunderstood. When a nation jams its own airwaves, it's unfortunate and ugly, but probably legal. Thus, Russia can, and does, broadcast static in Russia in order to try to prevent Russians from hearing the news from abroad. It is a partially successful technique.

Castro is also afraid to let his own people hear the news. So, he can try to jam Radio Marti - in Cuba, using "ground wave" jamming that stays in Cuba. But he is not entitled to do it through "sky wave" jamming that could obstruct an American station in Rochester, N.Y. That would be akin to an act of commercial warfare not unlike having Cubans tell us what supermarkets we may shop in.

Castro would be foolish to try it. It might give Ronald Reagan, conqueror of Grenada, the sort of ideas that Castro should not want Reagan to consider.

What about programming? It is said that Marti will be a propaganda station. Or, it is said it will replicate the Voice of America. This is silliness. There is a third option, - a "surrogate home service."

The distinctions are important. A propaganda station - say, Radio Moscow - is an organ of government trying to peddle a party line. The VOA is different; it's a non-propagandistic national radio service for an international audience. The programming is mostly about America and about global news. It is broadcast by professional journalists in English and in other languages.

What is a "surrogate home service?" As it happens, I am a member of the board of directors of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty. These radios broadcast in 21 languages to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. We are, we believe, professional and non-propagandistic.

But, unlike VOA, the Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty stations do not deal primarily with America. Our charge from the Congress (to use one example) is to try to put on the air the kind of journalism Poles might have if Poland were a free country. So we hire the best Polish emigre journalists and let them broadcast about Polish news, culture, economics and politics. (And Poles in Poland listen. It has been said that the Solidarity union could not have happened were it not for Radio Free Europe.)

That's the sort of mandate Radio Marti has: to broadcast Cuban news, Cuban culture, Cuban politics, Cuban economics, to Cubans in Cuba. That sort of news can't be gathered and broadcast by either VOA or private Spanish stations in Miami. After all, shouldn't Cubans know how many Cuban boys have been killed in Angola?

I wish the Marti team well: Adelante! There's a tough job. With lash marks from Radio Liberty political wars on my back to prove it, I can guarantee that the Martinis will be subject to harsh criticism, mostly unfair.

States to regulate most chemical plant air emissions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency said today it plans to leave most regulation of large-scale industrial chemical emissions to the states because "the chemical industry is not the major source" of health risks from such substances.

EPA said that in its own regulatory effort, it would target widespread small sources of these chemicals — things such as industrial degreasing operations, fuel handling and the burning of wood. For example, the agency said it now plans to propose mandatory standards for new wood-burning stoves and is considering quality standards for diesel fuel.

Some actions already in the works — such as new requirements for vapor recovery in auto refueling, heavy truck emission standards and the sharp reduction of lead in gasoline — will reduce exposure, EPA said.

The EPA's two-year decision-making process on airborne chemical emissions was given greater import following the leak last December of tons of methyl isocyanate, a pesticide raw material, in Bhopal, India, that killed more than 2,000 people.

In defending its states-first strategy, the EPA said, "... states are highly competent in setting emission limits for individual sources — they do this as a matter of daily business under state implementation plans — and because different types and levels of control may well be required in separate situations."

That philosophy conflicts with the national approach favored by environmental activists and embodied in a bill introduced in the House last month by Reps. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., James Florio, D-N.J., and Timothy Wirth, D-Colo. That bill calls for EPA to set mandatory standards for about 85 substances, some within three months.

However the EPA said, "Ambient levels of these substances appear to account for a relatively small portion of the national incidence of cancer."

Of the more than 440,000 annual cancer deaths, EPA estimated last year that airborne toxic chemicals accounted for about 2,000. Another study last month concluded that measures to control conventional air pollutants, such as smoke, reduced annual cancer deaths from 16 substances from about 3,600 in 1970 to about 1,600 in 1980.

In today's statement, the EPA said it would regulate airborne emissions of the chemical chromium, but would not regulate three other chemicals. They are: methyl chloroform, a solvent used in cleaning electronic circuit boards and in coatings, abrasives and aerosols; chlorofluorocarbon-113, a dry cleaning agent also used as a degreaser in electronics, and epichlorohydrin.

Personal income gains seen; consumer confidence down

By The Associated Press
Personal income nationally will climb 2.6 percent a year over the next 15 years, with the Rocky Mountain and Southwest regions pace the gains, the Commerce Department predicts.

Consumers' confidence in the current economy, meanwhile, fell in May after rising through the first four months of 1985, the Conference Board said Monday.

But the same sluggish business conditions that have consumers worried helped fuel a rally in the bond market, where credit analysts are anticipating that the weak economy will drive interest rates lower.

Prices of long-term Treasury bonds soared by nearly 2 points, or $20 for each $1,000 in face value, and money-market rates tumbled. In addition to falling interest rates, analysts cited the prospect of lower oil prices — and the subsequent contribution to lower inflation — as also bolstering bond prices.

Other expected gains are 2.9 percent in both the Far West and Southeast, 2.7 percent in New England, 2.4 percent in the Plains and 2.1 percent in both the Midwest and Great Lakes states.

The study based its forecasts on the outlook for increases in labor and proprietors' earnings in manufacturing, construction, mining and private service and government industries.

The five states projected to have the largest average annual increases are: Arizona, 4.3 percent; Nevada, 3.9 percent; Utah, 3.8 percent; Florida, 3.5 percent; and Colorado, 3.5 percent.

Commission delays decision

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Water Commission has decided to take two more weeks before deciding whether the Edwards Underground Water District should be allowed to make it rain on its neighbors.

Several of those neighbors in the seven counties where the aquifer is "recharged" are fighting the cloud-seeding program. They are wary of the district's ability to control the weather.

insurance, he said.

Commission Hearing Examiner William Upchurch, who recommended approval of the permit, said the project probably would not pose a flood threat.

Hill Country farmers and ranchers and the city of Kerrville oppose the program. The city is concerned that heavy rains could further damage the Guadalupe River Dam, which has been damaged by flooding this year.

Gulley said no seeding would be done on clouds that could produce more than an inch of rain per hour. Heavy rains do little to recharge the underground water supply, he said. Slow, consistent rain seeps into the aquifer.

years are expected in the Midwest and Great Lakes states.

According to a study just completed by the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis and published in the May issue of the Survey of Current Business, incomes are expected to grow by 3.4 percent a year in Rocky Mountain states and 3.1 percent in the Southwest.

Other expected gains are 2.9 percent in both the Far West and Southeast, 2.7 percent in New England, 2.4 percent in the Plains and 2.1 percent in both the Midwest and Great Lakes states.

The study based its forecasts on the outlook for increases in labor and proprietors' earnings in manufacturing, construction,

"If a storm is stationary, they have no business playing with it. They can't turn the water off once they've turned it on," said A.M. Rimkus, a Knippa farmer.

Lurlene Boren of Leakey said the Hill Country has a history of nasty floods.

"We accept floods as part of God's plan, but we beg to have no chance for man-induced floods," she told the commission at a Monday hearing.

The Edwards Underground Water District wants to make it rain on Medina, Real, Uvalde, Edwards, Kinney, Kerr and Bandera counties to recharge the aquifer that provides water for San Antonio and other cities.

Commission members took no action Monday, postponing a decision until June 17. Commissioner Lee Biggart said the panel frequently reviews cloud-seeding applications from people who are "trying to make it rain on themselves."

But, Biggart added, there have been few applications from people or agencies that want to make it rain on their neighbors, such as the Edwards Underground Water District has requested.

Attorney Robert Gulley, representing the water district, said the seeding would "not cause flooding in the area and will not contribute to the severity of flooding in the area."

District General Manager Tom Fox said the program could increase rainfall by 15 percent. The project was to cost $350,000 for April through September, he said.

The district and the Utah-based company that would do the seeding would be covered by $5 million in

Art and decoration move closer

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Once, you bought your furniture in a retail store and your art in a gallery. Nowadays, the departments of art and decoration seem to be moving closer together. Just how close may be seen with the opening of an art gallery that sells home furnishings. What is believed to be one of the first examples of this type of marketing approach is the Gallery of Applied Arts, which opened recently in New York City.

According to Frances Nelson, director, the gallery's primary stock consists of one-of-a-kind and limited-edition pieces of furniture, rugs, lamps and lighting fixtures, and ceramic and glass objects.

Many have been designed by architects or made by artists and craftsmen.

The gallery also recently had its first exhibition of art works in a show of folding screens made by artists. The screens were an appropriate choice, according to Virginia Fabbri Butera, the curator of the show, since they can have both artistic meaning and practical utility.

Regardless of its "message," a screen is a decorative home furnishings accessory that can block drafts, create temporary privacy, hide an unsightly area for a while and divide a large space so it is cozier, summarized Mrs. Butera, noting however that some examples in the show do none of these things.

Some readers may associate folding screens with overstuffed Victorian parlors and with actresses' dressing rooms in old films. However, the invention of the screen actually dates back to ancient China, according to Mrs. Butera.

Her discovery that screens have been used at various times by artists as a means of self-expression occurred fortuitously, she said. While at the Philadelphia Museum of Art in a curatorial position, she learned that the photographer Ansel Adams made 13 screens. Shortly after this, she saw a screen made by artist Thomas Hart Benton.

"That's odd," she recalls saying.

Now on the lookout for screens executed by artists, she has turned up examples by painters including Whistler, Bonnard, Vuillard and Picasso as well as by Spanish architect Gaudi and the Philadelphia artist, Man Ray, among others.

Her suggestion for an exhibition of screens by artists was taken up by the National Gallery of Art and Yale University Art Gallery and an exhibition at these institutions of American and European screens created between 1870 and 1970 was held in 1984. The current show at the Gallery of Applied Art covers screens made recently by living American artists.

Screens have appeared in many guises and materials since their invention. The early Chinese screens were cumbersome and bulky structures that were employed for the same basic reasons that screens are used today, she noted.

She traced the folding screen next to Japan in the 7th century, where it had changed considerably. It was now a lightweight structure made of seven layers of paper. The Japanese developed a new use for screens in the sliding Shoji panels which are still a feature of Japanese homes. These sliding screens form movable walls and doors behind which possessions are stored on shelves.

In most cultures, including our own, the three-panel screen is most common, but the Japanese never use an odd number of panels, she discovered.

In the Western world, the heyday for the folding screen was during the late 19th and early 20th centuries. After that they appeared to fade from the scene, although they were periodically revived by home furnishings manufacturers.

Today, however, she discerns a revival among artists who are reinterpreting and reinventing the screen as both a convenience and functional art object.

"Today's screens are as different from one another as they are from the past," she said. Among the materials employed in the screens on view at the gallery are handmade paper, carved wood, painted canvas, cut aluminum and lacquered screens. She has found as many as 200 artists making screens currently.

Their interest in this medium is part of the trend toward the merging of art and craft. "Screens, whose decorative appeal lies in their surface treatment, plainly fit in today's renewed interest in surface pattern in art," she added.

Prices for most of the screens on view at the gallery range from about $2,000 to $5,000, according to Joe Duke, one of the gallery's owners.

Duke says screens are a perfect example of the marriage between art and home furnishings. The gallery itself "grew out of the resurgence of a broken tradition in home furnishings and decorative arts of the fine craftsman making objects that delight the senses in addition to being useful."

Dear Abby

Mom's gift to daughters is a breath of fresh air

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, on the morning of Mother's Day, my two teen-age daughters gave me a lovely gift. That evening I decided to join my neighbor in running because I had started to put on a little weight. At 39, what seemed to be a good idea turned out to be an impossibility. I couldn't even run half a block—I couldn't even breathe. When I got home I lit a cigarette and didn't have enough breath to take a deep drag.

I suddenly knew I had to face the facts. I had been a smoker for 20 years, never over a pack a day—just a moderate smoker. For years my daughters had been after me to quit because they learned in school that smoking was damaging to one's health. I put out the cigarette, went to my daughters, and told them that since they had given me something lovely for Mother's Day, I was going to give them a present—a mother who would do everything she could to live as long as possible.

I have not smoked since then. The first few days were difficult, but I had given my daughters a gift I couldn't take back.

It's been two years since that Mother's Day, and I have never felt better in my life. You may change this letter any way you wish, but please print it, Abby. The gift of not smoking is one that parents can give to their children (or their spouses) that will be appreciated above any other.

KAY H. RITCHIE,
MOBILE, ALA.

DEAR KAY RITCHIE: Thanks for an excellent suggestion. Children could give their parents the same gift, too.

***

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to offer a solution to "Out of Luck," whose grandmother had promised the same piece of jewelry to several members of her family. Here's how we handled that problem when my mother promised her pendant to me (her daughter) as well as to several grandchildren (I had no children, but my sister, now deceased, had three):

I suggested that on the anniversary of my mother's death, the pendant should be "passed on" on the basis of age. The first year, I had possession, then it was passed on to my oldest niece (hers for a year, whether she wore it or stored it), then to my nephew, for the use of his wife and/or daughter, then to my youngest niece, and finally back to me.

The process will be repeated—I hope to eternity—among grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and infinitum.

Certainly it makes possession of the coveted pendant far more valuable for a limited time than if it belonged to any one of us permanently and resulted in hard feelings.

IN LUCK IN COLORADO

DEAR IN LUCK: Thanks for an excellent idea. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Tangibles often cause more problems than they're worth. I had three sisters and two brothers tearing each other's eyes out over a silver teapot. When they discovered it was pewter and worth about $15, they lost interest.

SFM IN NYC

DEAR ABBY: I can feel for that 83-year-old woman who didn't know how to leave one ring to two equally deserving daughters.

I had the same problem with one ring and three deserving daughters. My solution: I took the ring to a reliable jeweler, had him refinish it to look like new, then I had him make two copies. I put them in separate boxes and gave one to each daughter. No one had hurt feelings, and no one knows who has the original.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q — I am going to attempt to reroof my house by myself. The house is 24 years old and has never had anything on it but the asphalt shingles. During the original construction, the workmen left almost a full barrel of roofing nails. They seem to be in good condition. Can I use them again?

A — You did not say whether you were going to apply the new shingles over the old. Presumably, that is your intention, otherwise you would have mentioned otherwise. If that is so, then you must be warned that the nails used for roofing when there already are shingles in place must be longer than those used in the original construction. That's because they must be long enough to go through the new shingles, the old shingles and about three-fourths of an inch into the roof decking. Speaking of nails, make a careful inspection to see that none of the original nails is loose or protruding. If they are, remove them and re nail the area before you put on the new shingles.

Q — A few shingles came up a bit at the edges after a recent windstorm. Is it better to seal the edges with asphalt cement or drive nails into the edges?

A — Use the asphalt cement. Use a small putty knife to slide it under the raised edges, which then should be pressed down. If an edge is curled up and won't easily stay down, even after the application of the cement, put some kind of weight on it for a few hours.

Q — We have a vacation house with a red roof and white siding. We are getting ready to repaint the trim, shutters and doors, which now are a kind of lifeless color. What would be the best color for these items?

A — Red would harmonize with the roof, but if you think that might make the whole thing a bit loud, try a dark green or a blue-gray. Red, though, is the first choice.

Q — Can asphalt shingles be applied in cold weather? We are thinking about a job that will be done in November.

A — The reroofing should not be done when the temperature is below 40 degree Fahrenheit. (For a copy of "A Homeowner's Guide to Quality Roofing," including an asphalt shingles color chart, send 50 cents to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NJ 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Peres ready for talks with Hussein

JERUSALEM (AP) — The prime minister of Israel says he is ready to start direct peace talks with Jordan's King Hussein and the Palestinians, but opposes prior U.S.-Jordanian talks, or an international peace conference.

Israel is "ready to consider any proposal put on the table by a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation," Prime Minister Shimon Peres said Monday.

"If the king and the Palestinians want peace, let's come straight ahead in direct negotiation, put all the issues on the table, negotiate, solve it and make peace," he told an audience of about 1,000 people at Hebrew University.

In Washington meanwhile, an aide to U.S. Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., said 68 senators are co-sponsoring a resolution declaring that advanced military equipment should not be sold to Jordan until it enters into direct negotiations with Israel.

The aide, Richard Bryers, said Heinz believes "it's important that we demonstrate that proffering arms prior to a peace settlement or a face-to-face meeting that leads to a (peace) settlement is not the right approach."

Earlier, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate

Foreign Relations Committee, said he was leaning in favor of economic and military aid to Jordan to enhance its role as a potential key to Middle East peace.

The comments were Peres' first public statement after he received a message from U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz indicating Hussein was ready for direct peace talks. Hussein was in Washington last week.

Israeli analysts say the United States and Jordan appear anxious to move the peace process along before Peres turns over premiership to Yitzhak Shamir, foreign minister and leader of the opposition Likud bloc in October 1986.

Peres' Labor Party has expressed readiness to relinquish some occupied Arab territory in exchange for peace. Likud will not go beyond the 1978 Camp David accords calling for limited autonomy for the 1.3 million Palestinian residents in the Gaza Strip and West Bank of the Jordan River.

Peres reaffirmed Israel's rejection of Hussein's proposal that negotiations lead to an international conference, and U.S. plans to hold preliminary talks with a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation.

Israel opposes the international conference because it would involve the Soviet Union, which has severed diplomatic ties with Israel, the prime minister said.

Directing his words at PLO leaders, Peres said: "Either you want dialogue, talks, negotiations, or killing and hate. ... Make up your minds, you can't have it both ways."

NATO ministers to discuss Soviet aims, 'Star Wars'

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO foreign ministers meet in Portugal on Thursday for their first review of East-West relations since the Soviet Union and the United States resumed arms control talks.

In two days of talks at the seaside resort town of Estoril, the ministers are scheduled to discuss a wide range of issues affecting relations between the Warsaw Pact and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The 16 ministers may announce that they will represent the NATO countries in August at ceremonies in Helsinki, Finland, marking the 10th anniversary of the 35-nation Helsinki human rights agreement, according to senior NATO officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, while reporting on the latest round of arms negotiations that opened May 30, also will ask the allies' views on future U.S. compliance with the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. American officials have said.

"We have informed the allies that the secretary wants to raise this question" at the conference, said Stephen J. Ledogar, the deputy U.S. ambassador to NATO.

President Reagan is due to tell Congress by June 10 whether his administration intends to continue adhering to the SALT-2 treaty. The pact never was ratified by the U.S. Senate, but both the United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to comply with its terms.

Reagan administration plans for placing a new Trident submarine in sea trials this fall would put the United States in violation of SALT-2 missile restraints. But the administration could stay within the limits if it chose to retire some older missiles.

The meeting will be the first session of NATO's highest political authority, the North Atlantic Council, since U.S.-Soviet arms control talks resumed March 12 following a breakoff that lasted more than a year.

The Soviets had said NATO's decision to deploy the first of 572 medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe had prompted them to walk out of the negotiations.

The foreign ministers are likely to follow the alliance's pattern of formally declaring their willingness to abandon the missile deployments if the Soviets agree to a balanced and verifiable cut in Warsaw Pact missiles.

Another major topic of discussion is expected to be the Reagan administration's "Star Wars" research into a space-based defense against Soviet missiles. Ledogar said the Americans will press for a formal NATO declaration of support for the research.

High-tech heaven: dial-free phones, devilish computers

CHICAGO (AP) — Dial a number with your voice. Open the door of your home while you're away at work. Close the dining room curtains. Or take pictures of visitors who dropped by while you were out. It sounds futuristic, but it's not.

These gadgets soon will be standard as a stove in a modern U.S. home, if corporate America has anything to say about it.

The items are among thousands — from 99-cent watches to stereo and video equipment costing thousands of dollars — on display at the international summer Consumer Electronics Show.

It's high-tech heaven at the four-day show: video vending machines; solar watches; dial-free telephones; compact disc players that fit in the palm of a hand; crafty computers that speak thousands of words — with impeccable grammar.

And, of course, televisions. Some have two-inch screens, others have 40-inch screens. A few have two screens in one — even nine in one.

Some of this gear already is available, but other equipment will not be in sales rooms for at least a year.

Among the latest for phone fanciers are "dialless telephones," made by California-based TCC Inc. Touted as the world's only hands-free, voice-recognition phone, a caller announces one of up to 80 previously-stored numbers or code names — such as "office" or "mother" — and the phone dials it.

Mitsubishi Electric Sales America Inc. has a digital TV, not yet available, with a screen that can be divided in nine blocks — offering a visual guide of what's on each channel at the time.

Each image updates every few seconds. Television viewers also can watch two shows at once, one in a corner of the screen.

Mitsubishi also is developing a home automation system that controls and monitors household functions and communicates, too.

"You can check the temperature, the lights, the air conditioning, the heat and the appliances," while at work, said Laszlo Kovacs, director of marketing and sales.

The system also can close the curtains, turn off the oven, alert police or fire departments and pay bills or make airline reservations via home computer.

Nation's capital also nation's heroin capital

By PAUL PAGE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the shadow of the federal government, where the nation's top law enforcement officials work to combat drug trafficking around the world, the purest, strongest heroin in the country is readily available to the city's 15,000 addicts.

"If you want to buy heroin, you go where it's easy to get," said Lt. Hugh Irwin, commander of the U.S. Park Police narcotics branch. "And everybody knows it's easy to get in D.C."

The strong heroin is killing more people than ever — nine over one weekend in March and three in one night in May. Street sales are growing despite a massive police crackdown and concern by Washington officials that the city is getting an image as the heroin capital of the world.

"Some parts of this city ought to be declared a disaster area," said Calvin Lockridge, a member of the school board from Anacostia, the poorest section of the city. "It's destroying the fiber of the community. We've got areas where there are 200 to 300 addicts standing on the streets."

District Police Chief Maurice Turner recently told Congress that $190 million in heroin, which he called a conservative estimate, changes hands in the district each year and that 16,000 arrests for drug violations over the last two years have "not had an impact on the problem."

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., who chairs the House Select Committee on Narcotics, said at a recent hearing, "What I don't understand is how... in this small city, by New York's standards, that we have given communities over to the drug pusher and say we are doing a great job."

Turner and others said part of the problem results from what is perceived as relatively light sentencing for drug-related offenses. Dealers believe "D.C. is lenient and you don't have to do time," Turner said.

Irwin, of the park police, said officers from his force recently arrested a man with 70 bags of heroin worth some $2,800 and $14,160 cash. "He got five years probation, and he's a major heroin distributor," he said.

"In Virginia and Maryland, dope peddlers know they're going to get heavy time," said Carl Jackson, special agent in charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration's Washington field office. "Sentencing in D.C. is not that even. It sends a message that this might be the place to come and try things because you might not be treated as harshly."

The U.S. attorney for the district, Joseph E. diGenova, told a congressional hearing recently that although his office has been disappointed in some cases, drug sentences handed down by federal judges in Washington are "a lot longer than they have ever been."

The District of Columbia had just seven overdose deaths in 1978. A total of 140 deaths were attributed to heroin last year; there were 71 heroin-related deaths by May 21 this year. There also were 69 deaths attributed to the hallucinogen PCP in 1984.

By contrast, in larger urban areas like Los Angeles County, with a population of 7.7 million, 224 overdose deaths involving heroin were reported in 1984.

Donations for ego?

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some people keep scrapbooks. Retiring senators fill cardboard boxes for posterity.

Of the seven senators who left office last year, all but former Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., donated their papers to historical collections or college libraries.

Baker, who did not seek re-election but is exploring a 1988 presidential bid, held onto his.

By contrast, ex-Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., defeated by Democrat Paul Simon, gave "1,800 feet of Senate papers" to the Chicago Historical Society, according to a recent publication of the Senate Historical Office.

But Senate scholars must wait 20 years to see much of the material. Percy stipulated that only press releases and speeches during his 1967-1984 tenure could be scrutinized before then.

Republican Roger Jepsen of Iowa applied even stricter rules to his paper legacy: everything's to remain sealed until his death. Defeated by Democrat Tom Harkin, Jepsen shipped all his office documents to the Iowa State Historical Department in Iowa City.

The tax break that officials could once claim for such donations was ended by Congress in 1969. Tax deductions claimed by Richard M. Nixon for the donation of his vice presidential papers helped prompt the change.

"There are now no tax advantages. I guess it's done for ego purposes mainly," said Richard Ruge, a lawyer for the Joint House-Senate Committee on Taxation.

Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., who retired last year, stuffed 900 boxes with papers, photographs and memorabilia from a congressional career spanning 50 years and shipped them to Salem College in West Virginia, his alma mater. The papers are "closed pending processing," reports the Senate Historical Office.

Texas Republican John Tower, a Senate retiree who became a U.S. arms negotiator in Geneva, gave his papers to Southwestern University in Georgetown, Texas — with no decision yet on access.

Retired Massachusetts Democrat Paul Tsongas gave 400 boxes to the University of Lowell in his home state. The university reports it is making request-by-request decisions on access.

Administration attempt rebuffed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House panel, in the latest rebuff of Reagan administration efforts to cut mass transit funds, swiftly derailed a bid to take $223.6 million in federal funds away from several cities preparing to launch major transit projects.

The Urban Mass Transit Administration, arguing that the government "should not start projects it so clearly cannot afford to finish," sought Monday to shift the money to 19 smaller transit modernization and bus related projects in 14 cities this fiscal year.

But within hours, the House Appropriations transportation subcommittee rejected the request.

"We put the ball back in their court," said Rep. William Lehman, D-Fla., noting that the Transportation Department now had a choice of either not using the money or using it for the projects earmarked by Congress.

Congress last year authorized $223.6 million to begin paying for new or expanded rail projects in Los Angeles, Miami, St. Louis, San Diego and Jacksonville, Fla.

Any change in how the money is distributed must have congressional approval, and in recent months Congress has shown little support for the Reagan administration's attempts to reduce or dramatically change federal transit programs.

Government nears settlement with Cauble Enterprises

By JULIA MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer
DENTON, Texas (AP) — A year after millionaire rancher Rex Cauble went to prison for masterminding one of Texas' largest drug-smuggling schemes, attorneys say they are on the verge of a $12 million buy-back deal that could leave the cowboy's empire nearly intact.

Cauble, 71, the horseriding, gambling godfather of an oil, banking and real estate empire, was convicted in 1982 of violating federal racketeering, banking and criminal travel laws.

He was sentenced to five years in prison and ordered to forfeit his nearly one-third interest in Cauble Enterprises — a three-way partnership valued at more than $80 million.

But legal wrangling has kept the government from settling the forfeiture, and has made federal officials partners in business with Cauble's family.

For more than three years, lawyers have battled in and out of court over how to carve up Cauble's 31 percent share of the partnership, owned by Cauble, his wife and son. Defense lawyers have contended that the government legally can't split it up.

"All the government is entitled to is what Mr. Cauble was entitled to," said Raymond A. Krell, a Houston attorney representing Cauble's wife, Josephine.

Said Sam Buffone, an attorney for Cauble in Washington: "We contend that the government is not entitled to any rights greater than any other creditor."

So for the last 3 1/2 years the government has become a minority partner in Cauble Enterprises, taking over Cauble's 31 percent interest.

Federal lawyers have taken on the added role of overseer and part-time manager, approving checks and contracts and making life miserable for the Cauble clan, according to Krell.

"It's difficult to do business while the government is essentially your partner. The government's involvement has caused substantial harm ... Other businessmen don't know if the government has the right to seize any assets so they'd rather not do business," Krell said.

The millionaire's family has presented plans for getting rid of their unwanted partner, but until now those offers have been rejected.

"Everyone agrees that the government needs to get out of our business, but we've had to agree on what we wanted to do that would get them out," Krell said.

Now, Cauble's attorneys say they have made a new offer they hope the government won't refuse.

Krell said a solution is possible "within 30 days." But on Friday, government attorneys said "the chances of a settlement occurring in the next few days is very high."

No one will reveal the terms of a possible solution, but sources agree the government stands to gain about $12 million — one of the largest forfeitures under the Racketeering, Influence and Corrupt Organizations Act.

At the same time, Cauble Enterprises will lose a few properties but remain largely intact.

The deal etched in top-secret sessions would enable Mrs. Cauble and Cauble's son, Lewis Rex, to buy back the confiscated properties from the government, attorneys on both sides said.

Cauble — whose rich and powerful friends include former Texas Gov. John Connally — was convicted by a federal jury in January 1982 on charges of engineering an elaborate drug-smuggling operation.

The scheme involved shrimp boats and seafaring cowboys — dubbed the "Cowboy Mafia" — who ferried more than 150,000 pounds of marijuana valued at about $55 million from Colombia, South America, into Texas in 1977 and 1978. Twenty-six members of the smuggling ring also were convicted.

Once in Texas, the drug was transported to Cauble ranches, sold and the money laundered through Cauble businesses, according to U.S. Attorney Robert Wortham, who handled the case for the government.

One of those businesses was Cutter Bill Western World — the western apparel store Texans call the Neiman-Marcus of the cowboy jet set. The store's merchandise includes items such as $3,000 silver belt buckles and $6,000 suede crocodile boots.

"He (Cauble) was laundering drug money through his western wear stores," Wortham said.

Attorney Mikz Joplin of Dallas, who represents the government in the forfeiture, said the two Cutter Bill stores were among Cauble Enterprises' most valuable properties.

Other prize holdings include some 15,000 acres of land in Denton and Leon counties, oil and gas holdings in Leon County, Western State Bank in Denton, which is 87-percent Cauble owned, and Exxon stock, Joplin said. Converted into cash and excluding debt, the properties are said to be worth about $83 million.

On June 8, the Cutter Bill store in Dallas will close its doors — a victim of "circumstances beyond our control," according to a radio ad. The closing date for the Houston store has not been announced.

While store president Steve Mallow insists the closing is strictly a business decision because "the property has become more valuable than a retail establishment can be," attorneys on both sides agree the stores have become casualties of the drug operation and of heavy debt.

Heavy indebtedness and a need for an injection of new capital is what led the cigar-puffing rancher to look for profits in the drug trade, according to evidence presented during Cauble's trial.

"The closing of the Cutter Bill stores is part of the business plan in handling Cauble Enterprises," Joplin said.

"One of the reasons for the closing of the stores is just a general business decision by Cauble Enterprises," said Krell, "and also to use the proceeds from the sale of those properties to settle with the United States."

The western wear stores aren't the only casualties of the government's claims. Cauble's once-thriving Denton horse and cattle ranch is a little quieter these days. Many of the horses have been sold with the government's permission, Joplin said.

"The limited partners have made a decision to sell assets to liquidate debt," Krell said. "There's nothing we're dying to sell, but we would entertain an offer to sell just about anything."

Rangers pick Witt as top choice in amateur baseball draft

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers' scouting braintrust, all of them adults, yelled like children when the Giants announced they had taken Mississippi State first baseman Will Clark with the second pick in the amateur free-agent draft. As expected, that left Bobby Witt for the Rangers during the choosing Monday.

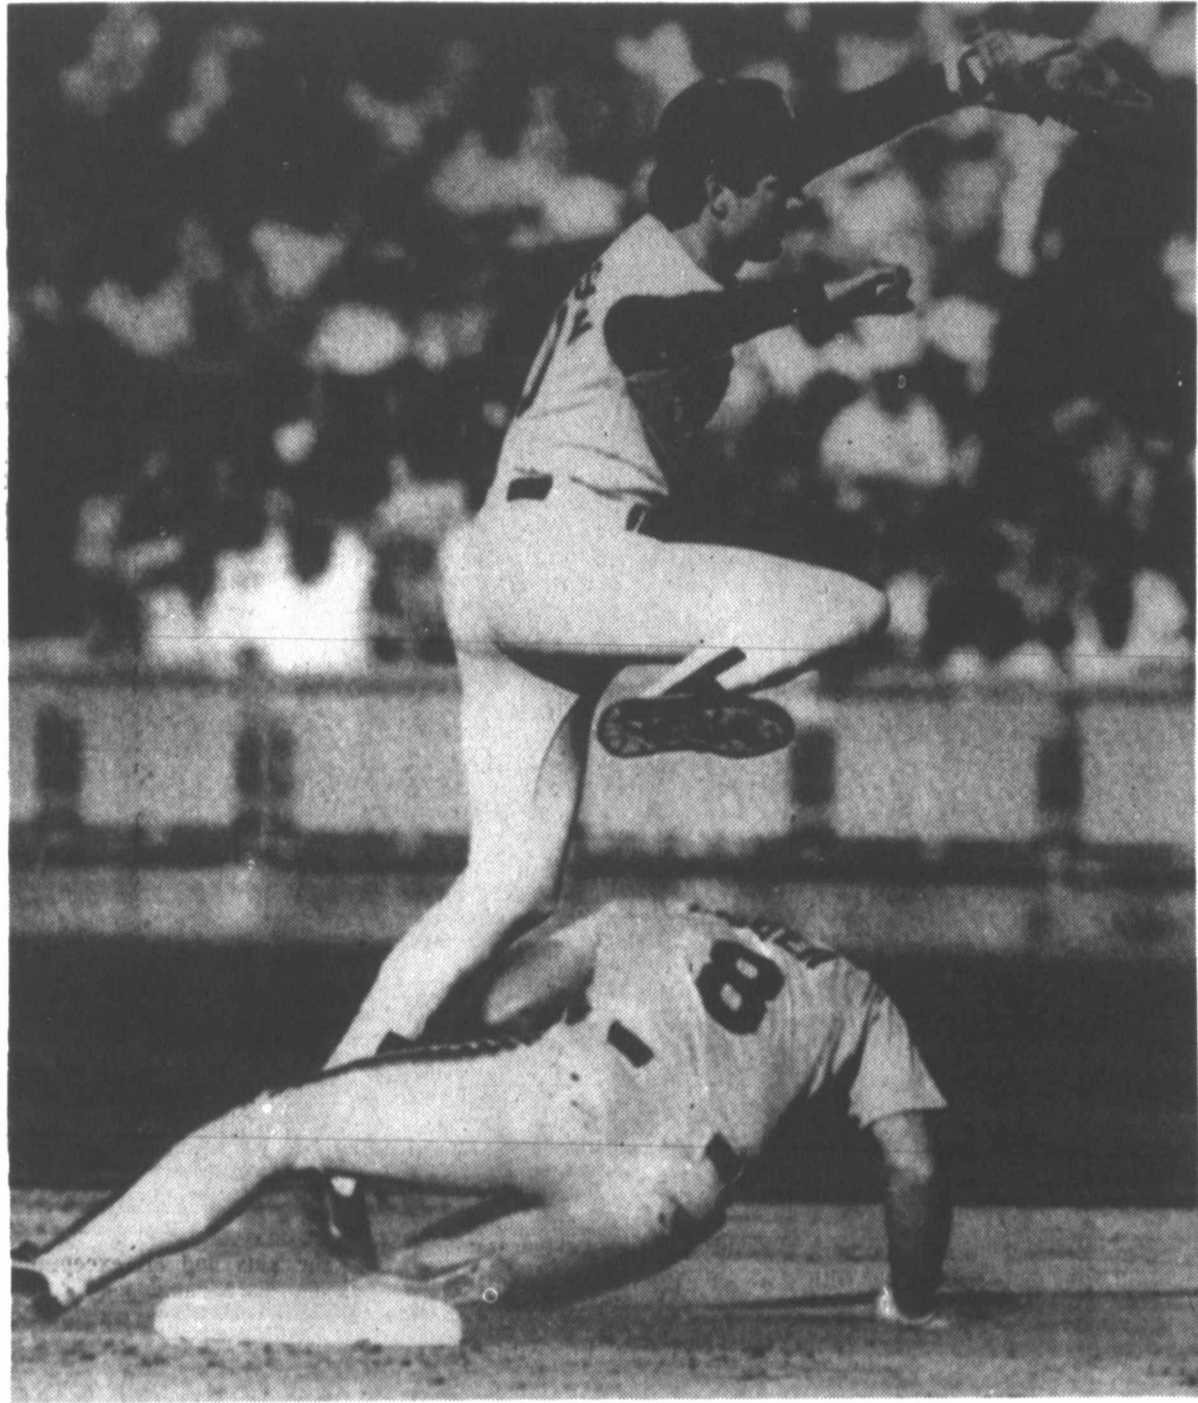

Rangers scouting director Sandy Johnson said Witt, a 21-year-old righthander from the University of Oklahoma, was their No. 1 choice all along. Because of the Rangers' need for pitching, Witt was the easy choice over Clark and North Carolina catcher B.J. Surhoff, selected No. 1 by Milwaukee. Johnson says he'll fly to Witt's home in Canton, Mass., Wednesday and that he hopes to have him signed by the weekend. He adds that Witt will be assigned to Tulsa (AA) and will probably stay there the whole season. He said Witt is scheduled to play two minor-league seasons before going to the big leagues. But once he gets there, he's there to stay. "As far as stuff goes, I'd compare him to (Houston Astros pitcher) Nolan Ryan," said Rangers pitching coach Tom House, who scouted Witt. "He's got everything. That type of arm doesn't come along very often. He throws easy heat, not the grunt-from-your-toes type like Goose Gossage." Red Sox scout Danny Doyle said Witt "is almost unhittable" when his location is sharp. Stan Meeks, pitching coach at Oklahoma, said Witt reminds him of Toronto's Dave Stieb. The major league scouting bureau rated Witt a perfect 80. It is now believed that Witt is the only perfect 80 in the 10-year history of the scouting bureau. Witt, a redshirt sophomore at Oklahoma, was 7-3 with a 3.90 ERA and 118 strikeouts in 97 innings this year. As a freshman, he was 10-3 with a 3.34 ERA and 113 strikeouts in 99 2/3 innings. He was the only college freshman to play on the U.S. Olympic team this summer, where he was 3-0 with an 0.69 ERA and 36 strikeouts in 26 innings. His fastball has been timed at 94 mph.

Dodgers' shortstop Dave Anderson avoids a sliding George Foster.

Dodgers win in extra innings

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer
Steve Howe feels as if he's aged 10 years in the last 12 months. "I'm making it tough on myself," said the left-handed reliever of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who earned his first victory since 1983 Monday night. "I feel like I'm 37, not 27."

When the Dodgers scored an unearned run on Mets shortstop Rafael Santana's throwing error in the 12th inning for a 5-4 victory over New York, Howe could celebrate. He hasn't had many good moments in a while. Howe was suspended for the entire 1984 season because of repeated involvement with drugs. He also injured his elbow during the winter and required surgery. But, in the last three days he has pitched in two games and warmed up in another.

"I'm excited about the three days in a row," said Howe, who threw the 11th and 12th innings and fanned George Foster with the go-ahead run on third base in the top of the 11th. He last won on July 23, 1983.

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Philadelphia 3, San Diego 2; Montreal 4, San Francisco 2 in 15 innings; and St. Louis 9, Houston 5.

Phillies 3, Padres 2
Ozzie Virgil slammed two homers to break the Phillies' three-game slide and lift them past

Pittsburgh and out of the NL East cellar. Virgil — whose father coaches for San Diego — homered in the second inning, then added a two-run blast in the fourth. The Phillies have the worst road record in the majors, 5-17. San Diego's Dave Dravecky saw his personal four-game winning streak end. "He'll probably say not to hurt him so much tomorrow," Ozzie Jr. said, referring to Ozzie Sr.

Expos 4, Giants 2
Rookie pitcher Randy St. Claire bunted for a hit in his first major league at-bat to spark a two-run rally in the 15th inning which was helped by shoddy Giants' fielding. St. Claire also got his first big-league decision by shutting out the Giants on two hits over the final four innings.

St. Claire batted for himself in the 15th because Montreal had exhausted its supply of rested relievers. Third baseman Chris Brown fielded St. Claire's bunt and made a throwing error to first, allowing St. Claire to reach second. An infield out moved St. Claire to third and U. L. Washington was walked intentionally.

Cardinals 9, Astros 5
Andy Van Slyke and Tommy Herr doubled and singled home two runs apiece and Jack Clark belted a two-run homer for the St. Louis Cardinals. Van Slyke and Willie McGee contributed three hits for St. Louis, while Herr — the top hitter in the majors — improved his mark five points to .377 with two hits in three at-bats. John Tudor, winless for a month, received the heavy-hitting support against Nolan Ryan. Tudor restricted Houston to four hits before leaving during a rain delay that lasted 84 minutes in the sixth inning.

AL roundup

Lacy sparks O's past Angels

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer
What a wonderful time for Lee Lacy to hit his first home run as an American Leaguer.

"You could feel the momentum building," Lacy said after hitting a two-run homer that climaxed a four-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning Monday night and gave the Baltimore Orioles a 7-5 triumph over the California Angels.

Lacy connected on a 0-2 pitch from Donnie Moore with one out. He sliced an opposite-field drive that sailed just inside the right-field foul pole. "When the ball left the bat, it stayed straight," Lacy said.

Lacy, who played 13 seasons in the National League, signed a four-year, free-agent contract with the Orioles in December. He spent April and part of May on the disabled list, often watching Baltimore rallies.

"These guys are something else," said Lacy after the Orioles, who trailed 5-0 early in the game, recorded their 16th come-from-behind victory this year. "They seem to play their best ball in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings."

In other AL games, Seattle beat Detroit 9-8, Boston downed Cleveland 6-5, New York defeated Oakland 5-2, Texas tripped Chicago 7-3 and the Milwaukee at Kansas City game was rained out.

Jim Presley had a pair of two-run singles to help Seattle offset a pair of home runs by Detroit's Darrell Evans.

The Mariners, who trailed 5-0 after two innings, rallied for four runs in the sixth to take a 7-5 lead. Presley singled home two of the runs as Seattle roughed up reliever Aurelio Lopez, 0-3.

Yankees 5, A's 2
Phil Niekro gave up five hits over the first eight innings to win the 291st game of his career. But when the 46-year-old Niekro, 7-3, left the game, Oakland made things interesting against reliever Dave Righetti.

Dave Kingman, who had struck out three times against Niekro, hit his 12th homer to lead off the ninth against Righetti. The visiting A's went on to load the bases on a one-out single by Dwayne Murphy, a pinch-hit double by Steve Henderson with two outs and walk to pinch-hitter Dusty Baker before Dave Collins flied out to deep center field to end the game.

Rickey Henderson hit a two-run homer and Dave Winfield went 4-for-4 for New York.

Rangers 7, White Sox 3
Larry Parrish hit a three-run homer to break a 2-2 tie, and Texas went on to score two more runs in the eighth inning to beat visiting Chicago.

With one out, Toby Harrah and Buddy Bell singled before Parrish connected off Britt Burns, 6-5. Gary Ward followed with a single, and Cliff Johnson greeted reliever Dan Spilner with a triple. A sacrifice fly by pinch-hitter Pete O'Brien capped the five-run uprising. The loss snapped a five-game winning streak for the White Sox.

Bird voted most valuable player

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Consistency and hard work have made Boston's Larry Bird the National Basketball Association Most Valuable Player for the second straight year.

"A lot of guys had great games, but he was the most consistent MVP I've ever seen," Celtics President Red Auerbach said after Bird was named a near-unanimous winner of the award Monday. "To win the MVP from the forward position is a great deal harder than to win it as a center or guard. To do it from a corner position is difficult."

Bird, who received 73 first-place votes from a panel of 78 members of the media on a nationwide panel, said he tries to make his game consistent at the 25-point, 10-rebound level, rather than trying to have 40-point games. "Once you start to score a bunch of points, it puts a lot of pressure on you because people expect it from you," he said. "I'd rather be consistent and reach a level where my teammates will know what to expect of me night in and night out."

"He's the kind of guy that companies try to use as a motivational example," Celtics

Coach K.C. Jones said. "Larry has the talent — shooting, passing and rebounding — but what I look at is that he has the work ethic to work hard at practice, dive after loose balls and play hard defense."

The 6-foot-9 Bird was second in the league in scoring with a 28.7 average and was eighth in rebounding with 10.5 per game. He also averaged 6.6 assists, led the Celtics in steals and shot 88.2 percent from the free-throw line.

College World Series

Longhorns meet Hurricanes

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Texas sophomore All-American pitcher Greg Swindell says he could pitch against Miami tonight and come back Thursday to pitch in the winners bracket finale at the NCAA College World Series.

Although the 18-1 left-hander said after the Longhorns 2-1 victory over Arizona Saturday that he feels strong enough to take the mound again tonight, Texas coach Cliff Gustafson said he'll start Bruce Ruffin, 12-2, against sixth-ranked Miami. Miami thumped top-ranked Stanford 17-3 in the other Saturday game, setting a series record with five home runs.

"I could do it," Swindell said of pitching both games. But Gustafson said he plans to rest Swindell tonight and come back with him either Wednesday or Thursday.

Swindell said Miami's hitting has impressed him.

"They reminded me of Arizona State of last year the way they were swinging the bats," Swindell said of the 60-15 Hurricanes. Arizona State scored 37 runs and hit over .340 in the CWS to finish third in last year's national college baseball championships.

"It looks like Miami has a lot of .200 hitters and not many .300 hitters, but they sure swing the bats," he said. "In pitching, you have to go out and pitch your game and not worry about them."

Swindell had offensive help Saturday night from All-American second baseman Billy Bates, who scored the tying run after walking in the seventh and then doubled home the winning run in the eighth.

The winning hit may not be that unusual for Bates, but the way he did it was. Hitting twice from the left side of the plate against Arizona left-hander Joe Magrane, he grounded out and struck out.

The last two times up Bates jumped to the right side, only the third game this year he has done so.

"Coach Gustafson asked me to give it a try," Bates said. "I wasn't picking up Joe's curve ball so I thought I'd switch. I'd only done that about seven times or so this year."

Bates said he jumped on an off-speed pitch to line a double to the left-field corner in the eighth with Robbie Byers on base.

Whether Bates decides to switch again tonight against scheduled Miami starter Dan Davies, 15-1 and also a lefty, depends on how Davies pitches, said the Longhorn junior.

Gustafson said Miami's showing Saturday was impressive.

"They're a great ball club," he said. "Stanford was No. 1 in the country and Miami flat overwhelmed them."

Streck qualifies for U.S. Open

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Ron Streck, one of seven sectional qualifiers for the U.S. Open, once vowed never again to compete in the preliminary event.

"I said five years ago that if I had to go through qualifying I wouldn't do it," Streck said after finishing with an even-par 140 Monday at the Diamond Oaks Golf and Country Club.

"And I don't know if I'll ever do this again to qualify for one stupid tournament," he added. "But I finished fourth when they played the PGA Championship at Oakland in 1979, so I felt I needed to play."

Curt Byrum, who learned his game on a course with sand greens in Onida, S.D., ended up as the medalist in the sectional qualifying play Monday. He had a 36-hole total of 3-under par 137, one stroke ahead of Danny Mijovic, a Yugoslavian-born, Canadian-raised golfer from Texas Wesleyan.

Lakers reverse role with Celtics

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — It was envisioned as a matchup of Boston's rugged and determined blue-collar workers against the laid-back, frolicking quiche-eaters from Beverly Hills.

But there's been a weird role reversal in the National Basketball Association Championship Series.

The Boston Celtics suddenly are implying that the Los Angeles Lakers are playing too rough in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association Series, now led 2-1 by the Lakers.

"There's a fine line between physical and dirty," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said after the Lakers' 136-111 victory in the third game. "They're crossing that line."

Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley, whose club lost the 1984 NBA title to the Celtics in seven games, said after Monday's practice, "He's responding the same way I did last year when I called them thugs."

"We're playing Celtic-style basketball," Riley said. "That means we're playing aggressively, but I never saw any of my players clothesline another player."

Sunday's game at the Forum was marked by numerous scuffles involving practically every player from each team at one time or another.

And it may get even more physical in Game 4 at the Forum.

"On Wednesday night, I'm sure they'll bring their clotheslines with them," Riley said, alluding to a controversial play last year when Boston's Kevin McHale hacked the Lakers' Kurt Rambis with his forearm.

The Celtics trailed 2-1 at that point of the series — same as now — and some thought that was the turning point as Boston went on to win the title.

"That was the most insidious, vicious, malicious play I've ever seen in basketball," Riley said.

"All the attention now has been on our hard play," continued Riley, whose club in the past has been known for its fast-break, finesse style of offense. "But the problem was that they (the Celtics) wouldn't let go of us after there was contact."

Laker forward Rambis, bearing some nasty welts on his arm, said, "I think Wednesday's game will be very intense and physical."

"It's only natural," he added. "When you want something really bad, that's just the way it is in this game. It's even that way on the playground."

Cedric Maxwell of the Celtics said, "When we get pushed and shoved around, we always come back real strong."

Lefors eliminated by Gunter

VERNON — Gunter defeated Lefors, 7-3, in a Class 1A regional baseball game last Saturday.

The loss ended the season for the Pirates, who had defeated Windthorst, 22-3, in the opening round of the regional tournament.

"I think the kids were just trying to hard," said Lefors coach John Turner. "We had a good chance to win, but we lost the game on errors."

Lefors jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning, but fell behind as miscues took its toll.

Cap Pittman hit a two-run homer for the Pirates. Other leading hitters were Kent Kerbo and Ricky Withers.

Losing pitcher was Preston West.

"The kids had an exceptional season," Turner said.

"We lose a lot of seniors, so we'll have to regroup for next year. We've got a bunch of younger kids coming back who are pretty decent. We should make a good showing."

Astros draft eight players

HOUSTON (AP) — The National League Houston Astros finished the first and second rounds of the 1985 June free-agent draft picks armed with eight players that included two college outfielders.

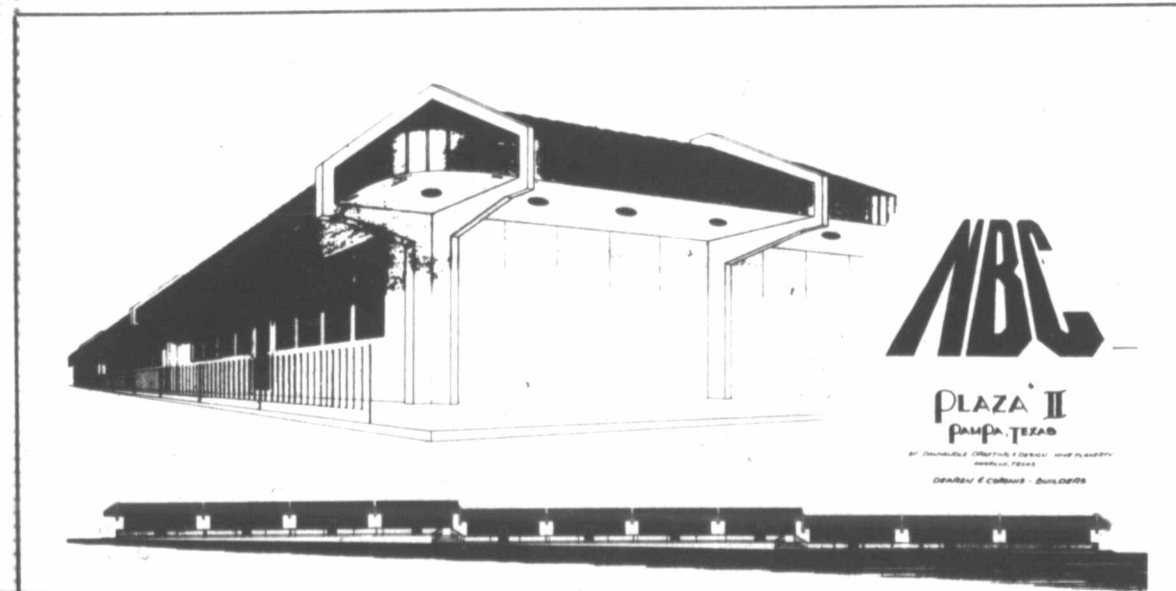

Houston picked up four outfielders, two right-handed pitchers, a catcher and a shortstop Monday during regular and secondary phase selections.

Regular phase selections were to continue today with the third round.

In the regular phase, the Astros chose Cameron Drew, 21, an outfielder from the University of New Haven, Conn. Drew a 6-foot-5, 210-pound junior, hit .388 with 12 home runs and 39 RBI last season. The left-handed batter set a school record with 110 total bases.

Houston also selected Bertram Hunter, 17, a 6-foot-2, 185-pound shortstop from Notre Vista High School in Riverside, Calif.

JOAN JETT PAUL SAMUELSON

Names in News

LONG BEACH, N.Y. (AP) — Rock singer Joan Jett rushed into the surf at a Long Island beach and pulled out a 3-year-old boy who had fallen in over his head, the boy's father said.

Ms. Jett was at the beach Sunday with friends Jory and Nora Belsey and their son, Jeb, when the boy fell into a low spot while wading in the surf, according to his father.

"Joan saw it and went in the water after him," said Belsey, 33, of Long Beach, who runs a supermarket buying office.

Ms. Jett, 25, whose hits include "I Love Rock 'n' Roll" and "Gotcha (Where I Want You)," pulled the boy out and put pressure on his stomach to push out the water he had swallowed, Belsey said. He said the youngster did not actually lose consciousness.

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Kennedy Jr., son of the late Sen. Robert Kennedy whose law career was put on hold after he was arrested on drug charges in 1983, has been admitted by the state Bar Association to practice.

Harry Reynolds, chief clerk at the Appellate Division and a former campaign worker for the slain senator, said Monday he gave Kennedy the character and fitness part of the bar exam on May 28, and Kennedy, 31, passed.

He passed the written portion of the exam after two tries in 1983.

Kennedy, a former assistant prosecutor in the Manhattan district attorney's office, checked himself into a hospital and was treated for heroin addiction after his arrest on drug charges in Rapid City, S.D., in September 1983.

Reynolds said he did not include Kennedy's name and address among the New York Law Journal list of attorneys who passed the final portion of the bar because to do so would have been "imprudent."

Kennedy also was not required to appear in court Monday morning with the 180 other attorneys to take an oath, said Reynolds.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Paul Samuelson, Nobel Prize-winning economist, says his formal retirement at Massachusetts Institute of Technology won't alter his life dramatically.

Samuelson, author of what is considered the bible of neo-Keynesian economics, retired as a professor Monday and became a professor emeritus.

"There won't be any change at all in my lifestyle: same office, same secretary, same committee," he said. For nearly 50 years, Samuelson has followed in the steps of John Maynard Keynes, the English economist who held that government intervention is essential to a stable economy.

Following a series of controversies that lasted through the 1950s, he won with his MIT colleagues undisputed control of the worldwide economic mainstream with a point of view he called "neo-Keynesian."

Support for Samuelson's theories began to wane in the late 1960s, but have recently begun to return to favor. In 1970 he was awarded the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics.

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy says it has embarked on a multimillion-dollar program to improve the accuracy of the giant 16-inch guns carried by its World War II-era battleships.

Eventually, the program calls for a switch to more modern warheads, or munition charges, inside the shells; development of a new, extended-range shell, and installation of more modern radars and "fire control systems" for the heavy guns. Details of the program were released Monday.

The program has already produced a decision to reblend and rebag the explosive propellant that is used to fire the heavy shells, which can weigh up to 2,700 pounds, the Navy said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Denver man has been placed on one-year supervised probation for illegally entering the White House on Inauguration Day.

Robert Latta, 45, was sentenced after pleading guilty Monday to the misdemeanor offense in District of Columbia Superior Court. Judge Paul F. McArdle said Latta will serve the sentence in Denver.

Despite extensive security measures in place for President Reagan's inauguration, Jan. 20, Latta wandered around the floor of the White House just below the Reagans' living quarters before he was spotted. He apparently had walked into the executive mansion with members of the U.S. Marine Orchestra and gave himself a tour, White House and Secret Service officials said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has agreed to recall 515,000 1982-83 Escort and Mercury Lynx cars to correct rear seat belts that can twist and bind, the government says.

National Highway Traffic Safety Administration spokeswoman Roslyn Kaiser on Monday confirmed a report of the Ford recall first announced by the non-profit Center for Auto Safety.

SEATTLE (AP) — An agreement between Alaska Airlines and nearly 700 groundworkers calls for a two-tier wage system under which newly hired workers will receive up to 50 percent less than new employees had previously.

A four-year contract, which also provides for a 2 percent raise, was signed Monday to end a three-month-old strike by ground employees represented by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

Austin women walked rocky path to East Coast jails

AUSTIN (AP) — They are alike in many ways, the three Austin women arrested and jailed last month in New York and Philadelphia and accused of participating in terrorist conspiracy to overthrow the U.S. government.

Marilyn Jean Buck, Linda Sue Evans, and Betty Anne Duke — charged in connection with the 1981 robbery of a Brink's armored truck — grew up in relative affluence, did well in school and, in the turbulent 1960s, joined student protest movements against racial segregation and the war in Vietnam.

Friends say Ms. Evans went to Hanoi in 1969 with Tom Hayden, now a California state representative, and others to plead for the release of prisoners of war.

Ms. Buck became involved with black separatist movements in California, and Ms. Duke worked in an ecumenical religious project to improve life in the poorest Chicago neighborhoods.

But unlike most of their liberal friends who drifted away from radical causes after civil rights, poverty legislation and the war's end, Ms. Buck, Ms. Evans and Ms. Duke turned to revolution, the Austin American-Statesman reported Sunday.

The FBI says Ms. Buck became a gunrunner for the Black Liberation Army.

Ms. Evans and Ms. Duke recruited protesters for demonstrations against speedboat races on Austin's Town Lake in 1978. They also left their mark on Austin as recently as 1983, when a radical protest group they founded and led — the John Brown Anti-Klan Committee — was blamed by a Travis County grand jury for inciting violence during a march that year by the Ku Klux Klan.

Since then, the John Brown group apparently has disbanded. Yellow and black "wanted" posters naming traitors to the liberation army are gone now. A telephone listed in the group's name has been disconnected, and there have been no demonstrations by its members for more than a year.

The FBI says Ms. Evans and Ms. Duke have moved on to become full-time members of the May 19 movement — a small, American communist successor to the Weather Underground, which was a radical spinoff of the Students for a Democratic Society groups common on university campuses in the 1960s.

The FBI says Ms. Buck also has been active in the May 19 movement, which officials characterized as composed mainly of radical lesbian feminists.

Affidavits filed in federal court in New York City after Ms. Buck's and Ms. Evans' arrest near there May 11 link them to guns bought in Austin in 1979 and used two years later by the Black Liberation Army in the bloody robbery of a Brink's armored truck in Nanuet, N.Y. Two police officers and a Brink's security guard were killed.

Ms. Buck, then a four-year fugitive from a federal prison in West Virginia, is accused of driving a getaway car in the robbery.

The affidavits also connect Ms. Buck and Ms. Evans to most of about 900 pounds of powerful explosives stolen in 1980 from the Bland Construction Co. of Austin and recovered by the FBI in New Jersey in the fall of 1984.

A federal court affidavit in Philadelphia links Ms. Duke to the rest of the stolen Austin explosives, a mixture of dynamite and nitroglycerin.

When FBI agents arrested Ms. Duke near Philadelphia May 23, she carried a key to a Doylestown, Pa., garage rented in her name and containing about 100 pounds of the Austin explosive, according to an affidavit by FBI agent Gregory Auld.

Auld later testified at Ms. Duke's arraignment that she also carried a key to a metal box in the garage containing 135 electrical blasting caps.

Ruben Garza, manager of Bland Construction, said the explosives were stolen in March 1980 from one of the company's utility-line job sites. In his affidavit, Auld said the 5-year-old explosive found in the Pennsylvania garage had "crystallized and was very, very dangerous."

Ms. Buck, 38, the daughter of a former Austin veterinarian, apparently met Ms. Evans, 37, daughter of a successful Iowa contractor and Republican state committeewoman, in Chicago in 1968.

The women worked for the SDS and participated in the student riots at the Democratic National Convention, the American-Statesman said.

Ms. Evans later was sentenced to 90 days in jail and placed on three years' probation for her participation in the "Days of Rage," four days of riots in Chicago in the fall of 1969.

It isn't known when Ms. Buck and Ms. Evans met Ms. Duke, the American-Statesman reported.

Ms. Duke, 44, whose father is the president of a medical supply company in San Antonio, graduated in 1968 from North Texas State University, where she was active in the anti-war movement. Ms. Duke had been in Chicago prior to 1968 with a former husband, working to improve life in the city's ghettos.

The three women came to Austin in the early 1970s.

Ms. Buck, who grew up in Austin and was enrolled for one year at the University of Texas, soon was confined in a federal prison in West Virginia for California and Arizona convictions for buying guns under false names for black revolutionaries.

Ms. Buck left behind some Austin friends who would later become prominent and still be shaking their heads over her refusal to let the activism of the past mature into something responsible.

"She obviously just got carried away," said Larry Waterhouse, president of the Austin Independent School District board of trustees.

Waterhouse said he knew Ms. Buck in the anti-war movement at UT.

"I'm totally amazed by this stuff she's accused of," said Waterhouse. "It's a shame, a real tragedy. She was a typical middle-class person, educated, who mostly talked about mutual friends and their affairs."

A few years after Ms. Buck went to prison, Ms. Evans went to work as a printer for Red River Women's Press, a feminist publishing company backed by federal grant money managed by the City of Austin.

When the federal funds ran out, the company folded, and Ms. Evans moved on to a job as a press operator and typesetter at a Kwik Kopyprint shop.

When she and Ms. Buck were arrested, the FBI said Ms. Evans had been harboring Ms. Buck in apartments in Maryland, New York, and Connecticut while working in print shops in those states under phony names. FBI affidavits say Ms. Evans' fingerprints were found on "masters" for printing false driver's licenses, Social Security cards, and FBI identification cards.

In 1977, Ms. Buck failed to return from a one-week furlough from the West Virginia prison and became a fugitive on the FBI most-wanted list. A year later, Ms. Evans was one of 19 persons arrested at a boat race protest in Austin. A municipal court judge later ruled that Ms. Evans had done nothing wrong, and charges against her were dropped.

Fired in 1971 as a teaching assistant in English at North Texas State for cursing school administrators during an anti-war demonstration, Ms. Duke had come to Austin newly divorced, the mother of two children, and a full-time researcher for the Legislature's liberal House Study Group.

"She was radical about prison reform," said a former acquaintance at the study group. The acquaintance asked not to be named. "She was a loner who spent a lot of time doing research between legislative sessions. She was a left-leaner, but it's hard to believe she was planning to blow up anything."

The FBI believes that Ms. Evans harbored Ms. Buck in Austin in the fall of 1979. The next summer, a few months after Bland Construction Co. explosives were stolen, Ms. Evans and Ms. Duke began organizing the John Brown Anti-Klan Committee.

The group's national office is in Chicago and, then, was run by a former member of the Weather Underground, according to FBI officials.

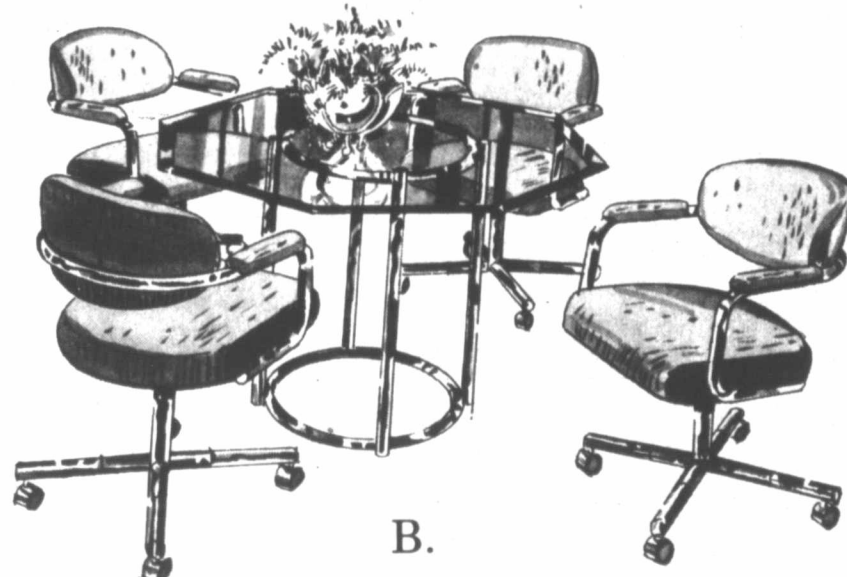

The Brink's robbery was committed in the fall of 1981. Soon after that, Ms. Duke lost her job with the House Study Group because of what she said were necessary trips to New York to help in the legal defense of those arrested during the robbery.
