Local store victim of company effort to streamline operations

Prayer ruling outrages religious right

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some members of the religious right are so outraged over the newest Supreme Court ruling on prayer in the schools that they are calling it "an act of war against this nation's religious heritage."

But to civil libertarians, Tuesday's decision is "a major victory to keep religious activity out of the nation's public schools."

The court fueled the controversy anew with a ruling that forbids daily moments of silence if students are told they may pray during that time. The decision, 6-3, strongly reaffirmed the court's 1962 ban on organized prayer in public schools.

Among conservative members of Congress, the immediate reaction was a vow to renew the push for a constitutional amendment to allow group prayers in public schools.

"We must hold hearings as soon as we can ... on the silent prayer amendment," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said. "The real issue isn't the form of the prayer. It's ending the governmental ban on school prayer ... which is what is offensive to most people."

At the Justice Department, spokesman Terry Eastland said, "We regret that the court did not agree with our position in the moment-of-silence case. We are pleased, however, that the court did not hold that the moment-of-silence laws now existing in some two dozen states offend the Constitution."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said only: "We haven't had the opportunity to review it. We don't generally comment on Supreme Court decisions unless they're outrageous."

Beverly LaHaye of Concerned Women for America, in a statement endorsed by such groups Moral Majority and American Coalition for Traditional Values, said the decision is unconstitutional and an act of war against America's religious traditions.

"Although we deplore this decision, we see great reason to hope," she said. "This decision is so outrageous that we confidently predict that the United States Congress will pass some form of a prayer in schools amendment by the end of the year."

Tim LaHaye of the American Coalition for Traditional Values called it a tragic day and said "Poland has more religious values in public schools than we do."

The Moral Majority's Roy Jones, calling the ruling deplorable, said it will be the spark toward a school prayer amendment.

And to Peter Waldron of Contact America, a radio ministry, the ruling "turns its back on a God who has provided such privileges."

Robert Grant of Alexandria, Va., chairman of an evangelical and fundamentalist group called The Christian Voice, labeled the decision "stupid, sad and shameful."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Rep. Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, called for passage of a constitutional amendment to overcome the Supreme Court's ruling.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., said the ruling "represents a continuation of a distorted rationale that equates the opportunity to pray with the establishment of a state religion."

But there were enthusiastic supporters, too, on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

Montgomery Ward's local store to close

Company taking close look at smaller store operations

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

Citing difficulty in 'contributing properly to the company's productivity,' Montgomery Ward officials in Chicago will close the Pampa department store, which hires 63 full and part-time employees.

District manager Peter Jensen of Fort Worth announced Tuesday that the Pampa Montgomery Ward store at the Coronado Center will close at the end of business Aug. 3.

"The store is being closed only after long and careful consideration," Jensen said in a company press release. "We have many experienced and capable employees in the Pampa store, which has made this a difficult decision for the company. However, this market has proven difficult to serve properly in terms of the company's changing long range strategy and needs."

"A lot of it has to do with growth opportunities," Jensen said later. "The store is very, very small.

He added that officials also had to "take a hard look" at Ward's overall strategy of becoming "a lean, mean profitable operation."

"This ties in with an announcement made by Mobil Oil (which owns Montgomery Ward) to streamline the operation," he said, adding that the small Pampa store was not "contributing properly to the company's productivity."

"Naturally these are corporate decisions," he said.

As for the "productivity" of the Pampa store and its contribution to the local economy, Jensen said he cannot say whether the Pampa store itself is losing money. "The decision was from the home office in Chicago."

The company is also closing the Montgomery Ward store in Big Spring, a market about the same size as Pampa.

"We are very, very strong in metro areas," Jensen said. "A great concentration of our stores are in main metro areas."

He explained that officials have to "look at the economics of supporting these small stores."

"We're not unique in this thinking," he said, explaining that large retailers such as Sears are closing their small-town department stores and replacing them with small catalog outlets or "specialty stores." Similarly, J.C. Penney's stores in smaller towns are more specialized than in larger

Parts of West Texas flooded

More rains in forecast for tonight

From Staff and Wire Reports

A second day of continuing rainstorms dumped more than an inch and a half of moisture upon Pampa and the surrounding area, bringing the total to more than two inches.

Rain falling throughout much of Tuesday brought the 24-hour total ending at 6 a.m. today to 1.68 inches. The city had received .35 inch in the preceding period, making a two-day total of 2.03 inches, according to local weatherman Derrell Sehorn.

The local rain is part of a system which has dominated most of the Panhandle and parts of the South Plains regions this week, bringing flooding and a few tornadoes in some areas. A chance for more rain is still in the forecast for today.

Heavy thunderstorms dumped as much as nine inches of rainfall in portions of West Texas, causing flash flooding across a wide area

The heaviest rainfall was at Sudan, where nine inches fell between 7 p.m. Tuesday and dawn today. Elsewhere rainfall amounts included about two inches at Wichita Falls and about one-half inch at Lubbock, Amarillo and Abilene.

Flash flood warnings were issued during the night for several counties in the South Plains, including Lubbock County. A flash flood watch was in effect today for much of West Texas and western portions of North Texas.

Flash flood warnings were still in effect today for portions of the Texas Panhandle.

Texas Panhandle.
Sehorn reported today that the total rainfall in Pampa for the year to date is 11.05 inches. The normal rainfall total for this time of year is about 7.5 inches, he said.

The rains kept Pampa in the cooler range of temperatures, with a high Tuesday of only 63 and an overnight low of 58. The high today is forecast for the upper 60s, with an overnight low in the upper 50s.

With cloudy skies remaining over the area, Sehorn said there is a chance for more showers and thunderstorms through tonight, with possible isolated thundershowers Thursday. The high is expected to reach into the mid-70s tomorrow.

The showers and thunderstorms were being triggered by an upper-level low pressure system over New Mexico that was slowly moving eastward towards Texas.

Thunderstorms were widespread from the Panhandle southward through the South Plains and Permian Basin to the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. The thunderstorms extended eastward into western portions of North Central Texas. Scattered showers are being reported early today along the middle Texas coast and in South Central Texas.

Forecasts called for showers and thunderstorms across most of the state today, more numerous in West Texas. Highs were to be mostly in the 70s and 80s, ranging from the 60s in the Panhandle to near 103 in the Big Bend area.

Lows tonight will be mostly 60s and 70s and highs Thursday should be mostly in the 70s and 80s and lower 90s.

Early morning temperatures were in the 50s and 60s north of a cold front that extended at dawn today from south of Midland northeastward to the Red River east of Wichita Falls and in the 70s and 80s to the south of the front. Extremes ranged from 58

Oil industry future tied to technology, Clements maintains

AUSTIN (AP) — Advanced technology in recovering oil from known reservoirs could bring Texas oil producers and the state billions of dollars in the future, according to former Gov. Bill Clements.

"It will have enormous implications for the economy of the state as well as our national security," Clements told the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association on Tuesday.

"We're talking about in the future producing from the known reservoirs of the state the equivalent amount of oil that we have produced to date," Clements said.

Clements founded SEDCO Inc., an international oil drilling firm in 1947. SEDCO was merged with Schlumberger Limited in 1984. Clements was the final speaker at the annual TIPRO meeting.

Clements, Texas' only

Republican governor this century, served from 1978 to 1982. He said he was making a non-partisan effort to stress the importance of the oil and gas industry to the state and nation.

"I'm not running for anything," Clements told reporters after his speech, adding that he thought Democratic Gov. Mark White was "very vulnerable."

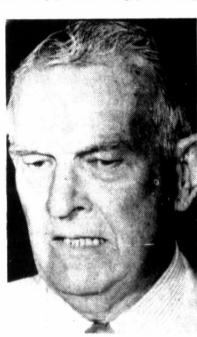

Clements has been considered a possible candidate for governor in 1986 and instrumental in getting a strong GOP candidate to run against White.

"We have had no national energy policy from the end of World War II to this date," said Clements, a former deputy U.S. secretary of defense. "This includes four Democratic and four Republican presidents. I don't think we can afford the luxury of not having an energy policy."

Clements said the nation's $63 billion trade deficit, of which about half was caused by imported oil, is a "serious problem."

"It not only affects our national security from a logistical standpoint, but it affects our relationship with both Canada and Mexico.

"If Mexico is to recover from the doldrums it is now in, it will be through its relationship through energy with the United States. That is their salvation," Clements said. "It is very important to Mexico and only slightly less with Canada."

He predicted that crude oil prices will remain "relatively stable" at about the current levels "and then gradually increase by about 50 percent by the year 2000."

The hope for the oil and gas industry in Texas and the nation lies in future technology, Clements

"It has to do with technology and research," he said. "We have not recovered more than 40 percent of those primary reserves by either primary or secondary recovery efforts.

"Think of all the billions and billions of barrels of oil we have produced," he said. "They are only 40 percent of what we know is

"I will forecast to you that by the year 2000 we will have evolved a system of research and development through technology that will let us reach out and remove half of those remaining reserves.

"And in the next 25 years we will produce another amount of oil equivalent to what we have produced to date," Clements said.

'He (President Reagan) made the right decision" by his visit to the Bitburg cemetery, Weaver claimed.

After watching the broadcast of the ceremony, he decided to write Mayor Hallet. "It's the first time I've ever written anybody overseas," he said.

Dated May 22, the letter from Bitburg arrived at his White Deer residence late last week

As translated, the letter reads: 'Dear Mr. Weaver.

"Thank you for writing about the visit from President Reagan to the Kolmeshohe Cemetery here in Bitburg. I thank you for the words of understanding and support in an open message, and I am happy that people like you support the meaning of World War II and Hitler's management.

"We Germans are very much aware of our responsibility to the German soldiers from World War II, who gave their lives for our land and would not lie about it. We know that the soldiers still living from the S.S. Association should not be blamed for the behavior and should not use any of the past for political reasons. I am happy that you think the same way.

"I hope the supporters of President Reagan from the U.S.A. and our Chancellor from Germany (Helmut Kohl) understand the meaning of the visit to the cemetery on May 5th brought us closer together, and not to blame all of the Germans for their doings.

"I myself will work hard to see that the name of the City Bitburg and the friendship with America will always be in best national respects.

Weaver said he hoped his letter helped in the new moves toward friendlier relationships between the two nations.

"Too many people just hold a The pastoral changes are made grudge over and over the years," until they get an ulcer, he said.

"As Christians, we're supposed to forgive," Weaver said. Those who committed the atrocities are dead and gone, and we should move on to better things, he added. Weaver recalled seeing on the

For Donald Yeager, picking up the bills he found in a discarded cash drawer by the side of the road would have been wrong. Instead, he left the money where he found it, climbed back on his bicycle, and went home to phone the police.

The lumber store that lost the money in a robbery calls Yeager a hero.

The police dub him a good citizen.

His friends say he's crazy for not pocketing the

But for the 19-year-old high school dropout, there was no other choice.

"I figured it was stolen so I didn't want anything to do with it. My parents always told me if it isn't mine, don't take it," he said. "And if I see someone taking something that isn't theirs, report it.'

The $950 was stolen from Pyle Lumber Co. in a May 21 robbery. Yeager found the cash May 23 along a dirt road near his home as he searched for empty cans for recycling money. Already the subject of several media interviews. recipient of a $100 reward from Pyle Lumber Co.. and the object of several companies who have called offering a job to the publicized "honest man," Yeager appears unconcerned about the attention.

His wife, Kathy, 20, cradling a sleepy 3-month-old Bertha Rose, excitedly tells him there is a stack of phone messages for him when he returns after an odd job. The police called to say they had more than $100 in contributions from people who read about his good deed.

He pages through the sheets of paper, shrugs, and

"They all told me I was crazy for turning (the money) in," he said of acquaintances' reaction to his His mother-in-law, Mae Humphries, interjects,

'We're all real proud of him. Yeager said he has already spent the $100 reward from the lumber company.

"I went and got my car fixed," he said. A hole in the gas tank of the 1975 Chevrolet was repaired, and a tailpipe and muffler replaced, he said. "I only paid $300 for it four years ago. It's a good car.

With what was left, he took his wife out to dinner on their first wedding anniversary on May 26.

"We went out for pizza," Mrs. Yeager said

"Pepperoni.

At 5-foot-2 and 105 pounds, Yeager looks more like one of the 16-year-olds who hang out at Marshall's Dairy Queen. His tiny frame and boyish face under a baseball cap belie the two years spent scrapping for small change for his family since he dropped out of

'I've been mowing some yards and picking up cans to sell. I get about $20 for a good-size yard. In a good week, I might make $15 from cans," Yeager said. "I go to the unemployment office all the time, and they tell me they've got nothing.

"Right now, it's just trying to get a job to get

They live with his wife's parents, Mae and James "Jimmy" Humphries, in the first floor of an old two-story on one of Marshall's more neglected

With the temperature nearing 100, the family gravitates to the front porch and its lawn chairs and empty wire spools turned into stools. There is a breeze there, and James Humphries can cool off after a day at his roofing job.

"It's not easy," said Mrs. Humphries. "We buy a lot of beans. There's a lot of stuff that's got to be cut

"But I was raised on the farm," she said, "and you have to learn how to economize.

Mrs. Yeager's birthday is today, Tuesday, but nothing special is planned. Instead, she and her husband talk of the job offers the publicity has brought and about whether or not they'll lead to a much-desired place of their own.

If Yeager can find a pair of steel-toe boots in his rare size 5, he can go to work for Berwind Railway Service Co. The company phoned after hearing about the cash drawer find and said they'd create'a job opening for him.

A man from Davis Farm put him to work Tuesday, delivering syrup to stores.

A retired Fort Worth bank president phoned and offered Yeager a job at an unidentified bank, Yeager said. But he wants to stay in Marshall, a town of about 25,000 in East Texas where he was reared.

"I'd like to do carpentry," he said. "I'd rather be on top of a house somewhere than anywhere else. He's been working 'on and off' since he was 12, he

"I still think I did the right thing" by turning in the $950, Yeager said.

His wife smiled, and rocked the baby in the muggy shade of the front porch.

State hopes to retrain jobless farmers

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Department of Agriculture hopes some federal job training money the state receives can be used to help thousands of farmers and ranchers driven off the land by the agricultural recession.

The department is proposing that a share of the $7.5 million in federal funds Texas should get this fall for dislocated workers can be used for training, career counseling and job placement for farmers.

"Texas continues to lose more than 100 family farmers and ranchers a week," Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Tuesday. "Many of the producers we're losing are age 35 or younger.

Gary Keith, an agriculture department official, said officials aren't certain how many farmers might need the help, but said, "Certainly it has to be in the

At the department's request, the state's Job Training Coordinating Council has agreed that retraining services are needed by the displaced farmers and ranchers, Hightower said. Seven states already offer such assistance to farmers, he said. They are Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, North Dakota and South Dakota.

Andy Welch, a spokesman for the agriculture department, said TDA officials will make a formal proposal to the Job Training Coordinating Council in August for extending job training services to displaced farmers and fanchers. A request for funding also will be made at that time, Welch said.

Hightower said he hoped some of the state's federal job training money then will be made available so programs for farmers and ranchers could begin on Oct. 1.

court documents show

Depositions from top HL&P officials indicate the list, titled "Significant Brown & Root Initiated STNP Goofs," was presented to Brown & Root when the company was fired in

The list became available after state District Judge J.P. Hardy Jr., of Bay City, last week lifted a court order that sealed documents related to a lawsuit over the case.

Documents show that on Sept. 15, 1981, STNP owners decided to fire Brown & Root for failing to live up to its contract to design the plant in Matagorda County about 90 miles southwest of Houston. The owners later filed an $18.9 billion breach of contract suit against Brown & Root and its parent company, Halliburton Inc.

HL&P and two of its three partners, Central Power & Light of Corpus Christi and the San Antonio municipal utility, agreed last week to settle the suit for $750 million. Attorneys say the offer is the largest cash settlement in U.S history

The fourth partner in the project, the city of Austin, has not yet decided to accept the settlement.

The abbreviated list prepared by the staff of HL&P project manager Jerome Goldberg was found in boxes of disorganized documents at the courthouse in Matagorda County where the recently settled suit was being tried.

YOUNG DOCTOR — Lani Lou Douglas, 22, jokes with some of her classmates after graduation ceremonies of the Texas A&M medical school. Douglas is one of the youngest medical schoolsudents to graduate this year. She is from Houston. (AP Laserphoto)

Woman country's youngest doctor of 1985, A&M says

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — For years, Lani Kay Douglas said she wanted to graduate from medical school, begin her career and start a family by the time she was 24.

It looks like she's right on schedule — the 22-year-old woman has become what Texas A&M University officials say is the nation's youngest medical school graduate of 1985.

'I don't think my age made a big difference," Ms. Douglas said after receiving her diploma last week from Texas A&M.

The Texas A&M program, which allows a student to apply after two years of college, emphasizes "the level of maturity and the development of a person as a student" rather than age, she said.

Dr. Joyce Davis, head of the admissions committee for the program, agreed, saying that officials didn't pay special attention to Ms. Douglas' age - 18 when deciding to accept her.

"Her record and work performance while a pre-med student indicated a very high level of responsibility, reliability and capability," said Ms. Davis.

'Our committee makes performance and not age the major factor," she said. "Some of adjustments to graduate-level medical school was that she wasn't making straight A's anymore. But she finished the A&M program as one of five honor students in the class of 30 new physicians.

But she said her young age gave her one advantage over some of her fellow classmates - she did not have the additional responsibilities of being a wife and parent.

"It made it a little easier for me not having those family commitments as a student, too. Although those women in my class with families did great, that would have been much harder for me. she said.

Ms. Douglas said she plans to join a residency program in family practice at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth.

Ultimately, she said, she want to practice family medicine as an overseas missionary or in a rural Minnie Houston, 41, was found dead about 9:30 p.m. Monday in a bathroom adjoining an employee dining room near the Texas Department of Corrections Ellis I Unit outside Huntsville.

Billy Linville, who investigates TDC matters for the Walker County sheriff's office, said Ellis inmate Ramon Mata Jr. admitted to the slaying Tuesday in a six-page confession.

Mata, 36, serving 30 years for a Pecos County murder, was transferred to Walker County Jail, where he was being held on a capital murder charge in the guard's death. According to his confession, Mata claimed he killed Ms. Houston because he loved her and he "couldn't live without her," Linville said. "I guess he had some kind of intimate feeling toward her . He's living in a fantasy world. That's my opinion.

Ms. Houston, a TDC employee since October 1979, was assigned to supervise the seven-member crew of inmate trusties - which included Mata — at the dining area, TDC spokesman Charles prison unit where he turned himself in to prison officials, Brown said.

Investigators said the guard had been stabbed about 10 times from behind with a 15-inch butcher knife. The weapon was found in Ms. Houston's car, and Mata's clothes were bloody, officials said.

Ms. Houston's late husband, Robert Houston, also worked as a guard at the Ellis I Unit until he died in an August 1975 traffic accident, Brown said

One of her three sons, 21-year-old Robert Houston, also is a TDC guard. Another son, Terrell Houston, 18, said he, too, plans to

Ms. Houston was the first prison system employee killed since April 4, 1981, when Ellis I Unit Warden Wallace Pack and farm manager Billy Max Moore were killed during a struggle with inmate Eroy Brown. The prisoner was acquitted on grounds he killed the two in self-defense.

The woman officer was the second prison system guard stabbed during a 10-hour period-Monday, Brown said.

Guard George Billups, 42, was stabbed about noon Monday as, prisoners at the Coffield Unit in Palestine lined up outside their cells to go to lunch, TDC spokesman Jay Byrd said. He was treated for minor injuries.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment

Bishops' statement ignore morality

The draft statement issued last year by U.S. Roman Catholic bishops on the economy showed signs of being animated in some measure by moral concerns. Indeed, though the quality of its economic analysis was (let's continue to be charitable) extremely poor, most critics gave the bishops the benefit of the doubt and assumed their moral sincerity if not their economic acuity.

The bishops' latest venture, a draft statement on U.S. farm policy, may strip away some of those benefits of doubt. It seems increasingly apparent that the bishops are interested in politics, and politics of the most dreary, soul-deadening statist variety.

The draft has only one statement with religious content and a couple of vague comments about morals and ethics

Other that those offhand references, the statement is all politics—and of the most predictable sort. Let's have quick and substantial federal help for family farmers and a reversal of the trend toward subsidizing big agribusiness. The corporation has apparently supplanted Satan as an animator of moral indignation.

Do most economists believe that the present crisis is largely the result of past government interference in agriculture? Do most authorities agree that subsidies to agribusiness grew from sentimental efforts ostensibly designed to help the beleaguered family farmer? Are most of the farmers facing crises now those who thought they could "work" the financial markets and federal programs for a little land speculation in 1979 and 1980?

The bishops are blissfully unaware. Wheels are squeaking. There must be a crisis. It must be the government's job to grease the squeakers with massive infusions of taxpayer money.

If may be just as well, though a little pathetic, that the bishops mention morality only in passing. If they took morality seriously, they might have to address the morality of recommending that the government throw money at any problem.

The little secret that any astute student might notice is that government has no money of its own. It acquires money only by taking it from others against their will. Taking money from others against their will is stealing, and we're unaware of any moral code that condones stealing

The Reagan compromise

The other day, Paul Craig Roberts, the Georgetown economist who more than any other was responsible for President Reagan's 1981 supply-side economic growth and tax-reduction agenda, wondered despairingly:

"How did the president ever get from supply-side growth theory to T-2 (the Treasury's new tax reform proposal)? It would be almost better to have no tax reform at all.'

Yet there are so many good features about President Reagan's tax reform plan (T-2), especially on the individual income tax side, it seems almost ungrateful to attack it.

Treasury Secretary James Baker deserves special credit for having preserved the best features of his predecessor Don Regan's tax plan (T-1), while repealing most of its awful 15-20 percent increase in the tax-cost of capital, the lifeblood of economic and job growth.

Having said that, however, we cannot help agreeing with Roberts' analysis that once again, President Reagan has allowed the deadly combination of egotism, the conflict of 1988 political interests of his key advisers, and the flawed agenda of the Treasury's permanent tax bureaucracy, to sacrifice his own vision of economic growth in favor of the far more illusive objectives of short-term tax revenues and the perception of "fairness."

In the process, Roberts argues, Reagan has set himself up for having to compromise with his liberal enemies in Congress - a compromise that will be a lot more harmful to the economy than even the present complex tax system. As one administration economist admitted to us, "T-2 is the very MINIMUM level of reform we should be getting - anything less isn't worth the effort.'

In the sense T-2 stands as monumentally agonizing lost opportunity - particularly when you stack it up against the Kemp-Kasten (K-K) tax reform proposal, with its 24 percent flat rate which every analysis we have seen says would produce at least 30-50 percent more economic growth and jobs - and lower deficits.

If you want to know why Reagan failed to seize that powerful K-K initiative, we urge you to go back and read Roberts' book, "The Supply Side Revolution," especially the two chapters, "Victory and Defeat," and "The Unraveling of Reaganomics.'

In them, he chronicles the devious ways in which Reagan's own top "Bush Brigade" aides used the press and the bureaucracy to push him away from his own best instincts into finally accepting Senator Robert Dole's (R.-Kan.) disastrous 1982 TEFRA tax increase - which has its parallel in the new tax reform package.

Back during December 1981 and January 1982, Reagan was being pushed to present a budget message that included higher taxes to "reduce the deficit." But the administration's anti-tax warriors were rewarded when the president "delivered a stinging rebuff to David Stockman and James Baker," when he declared, in his 1982 State of the Union address, "raising taxes won't balance the budget. Higher taxes would not mean lower deficits but will encourage more government spending." He was prophetic.

But that "victory" was short-lived, as Stockman and Baker conspired with the Senate's Dole-ful Republicans to concoct a massive tax-increase package, on the phoney premise that it would be combined with even bigger spending cuts, a package Reagan finally signed in late August 1982, admitting: "Personally, I had to swallow very hard. I believe in 'supply-side,' and that tax

They also slowed the Republican party, which two months later lost twenty-six House seats - and faced even bigger deficits in 1983 and 1984.

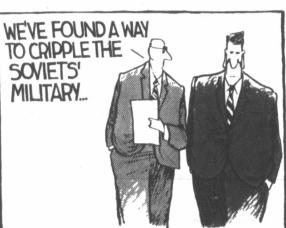

Significantly, Roberts now says that T-2 is strikingly similar in its revenue-raising approach to Dole's TEFRA, particularly in its highest 35 percent top rate, and its "populist" acceptance of the corporate minimum tax which will definitely hurt the cyclical industries, especially autos, steel, appliances, and mining, because it totally denies them the possibility of writing off the big losses they always have in bad years.

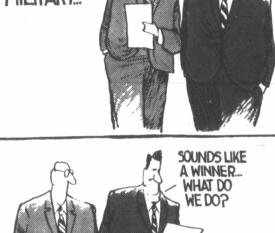

Once again, it was Dole who finally convinced Reagan to fall for the demagoguery of liberal Democrats about "big corporations that pay no taxes," and embrace the meat-ax, revenue-raising approach of a "corporate minimum tax" which will punish most those industries and workers who have been hit the hardest over the last ten years.

In 1982, Dole's TEFRA "revenue-enhancer" applied a corporate minimum tax to the mining industry. Roberts says this caused the direct loss of more than 100,000 mining jobs in copper and coal, nearly 400,000 jobs in related services, and at least $4-billion more in tax revenues than it enhanced.

Sadly, the "minimum" and T-2's unacceptably high 35 percent top rate were accepted in return for very paltry "static" revenue gains which would have been more than made up in additional

This is why, Roberts argues, "T-2 sacrifices the Reagan mission of economic growth on the altar of tax neutrality and short-term static revenue gains, and hands the tax reform issue back over to the liberals who got us into this tax-mess in the first place.

Coca Cola must repent

Coca-Cola marketing people were outsmarted. They let the competition outsell them

So they blamed the formula

And they talked Coke into changing its formula.

They've goofed again. But they can if they will recover this fumble with the most ingenious advertising since Burma-Shave.

The blind taste tests they show you on TV which indicate the public favors one soda pop over another are not contrived - but neither are they accurate

The Wall Street Journal assigned a market researcher to make some comparative tests of the old coke, the new Coke and Pepsi...and discovered that cola drinkers' loyalties are so flimsy they change from minute to minute

The first test indicated they favored one particular brand.

Given a second test with shuffled bottles the same people indicated a preference for another

Coke, in its advertising, tended to rely on the 99 years' longevity of that name, on the notion that coke is "an American tradition.

But a generation with a shorter memory matured without loyalties rooted in the past. And as the other colas began to capture an increasing market share, Coca-Cola elected to "try a new concoctin.

It is not going to work. They've left with the public the impression that they are "running scared," the net effect is negative

But before the Pepsi people take too many days off celebrating, let me suggest an 18-month ad campaign for Coca Cola which could devastate the competition.

I'm suggesting that for the first time a corporation must renege on the "new and improved" and repent in public: We're sorry, Americans, we hadn't realized that

Marriage possibility worries mothers

By Rusty Brown

This may sound strange — but two women I know are worried because their 20-year-old daughters are in

Since when do mothers worry if their daughters fall in love? Since women got smart about what it takes to make it in this world. Twenty-five years ago, nobody worried if a coed (as women students were called then) majored in education and wound up with an MRS. degree. In fact, that was the unashamed goal of many. In the years between, however, women learned we might have to go to work, or want to. We learned we might be divorced and find ourselves single parents struggling along on the low pay of the pink-collar ghetto. We learned that to make men's pay, we must be trained for men's work

This is one reason my friend Paula is so pleased her daughter is majoring in astrophysics. "That's a field that's opened up to women since I went to college," she says. "I majored in home economics, though I flirted with architecture - but that was unthinkable back then.'

So why is Paula concerned? Because she's afraid her daughter may throw aside this unique career opportunity to marry her boyfriend, a college senior headed for law school.

"What if he can't get through law school on his own?" wonders Paula. Will my daughter quit classes and get a job to help him? What if they have children before she has a chance to test her future in astrophysics?" Paula marvels at the new fields for today's young women, but asks, "Will they appreciate how fortunate they are and make the most of this?"

Another woman, Barbara, shares similar concerns. Her daughter, a business major, has followed her boy friend to two campuses already. "At her age, she should be free for selfdevelopment and self-exploration, Barbara says. "Yet she's in a relationship that I think is stifling her.

Barbara knows why she's upset. She herself was a college dropout. She completed one year before meeting her future husband, a pre-med student. She quit school and went to work: "The money was nice and my father was not big on financing my education. When Bob started med school, we got married. I was pregnant in a month at 21.

Three children later, she felt locked in and mentally underdeveloped. In 1971, when the youngest was 2, she heard about a child care co-op that would enable her to take one class She returned to school and began juggling, as she says, "diapers and

It took 10 years to earn both bachelor's and master's degrees and she was 37 before she began a career as a mental-health counselor.

"I feel I missed so much by not going to college at the normal age," she says. "I had so many other responsibilities as a wife and mother that college was hard and not much fun for me. I hope my daughter won't put herself through that, too."

Today the All-American Hot Dog is a specialty eaten around the world. Whether it's called "shien chaud" in France or "chucharro querte" in Brazil, the hot dog has gained a reputation for convenience and versatility. As a ready - to - eat processedmeat, it also offers unlimited opportunities to create terrific gourmet entrees using either cool condiments or warm melted cheeses and sauces. To further enhance the hot dog, consider the variety of buns and breads that may be used as a foundation. Traditional hot dog buns now are available topped with sesame or poppy seeds. Rye, wheat. Vienna or pita breads all add distinction. But for a real change of pace, consider crepes, thin pancakes, potato pancakes, muffins, bagels, tortillas, croissants as a base.

Now, make your selection from among these topping ideas:

KRAUT DOG - Heat sauerkraut with caraway seeds, one chopped dill pickle, and ¼ teaspoon sugar. HAWAIIAN DOG - Combine crushed pineapple, sweet and sour sauce and chopped green peppers.

GREEK DOG — Spread with chopped olives, top with a dollop of sour cream, onion dip or yogurt.

TWIN CHEESE DOG - Mix shredded cheddar cheese and shredded mozarella cheese; sprinkle over hot dog; broil until cheeses melt.

SALAD DOG - Top with shredded lettuce, chopped green onions, celery and tomato. Drizzle with one teaspoon favorite salad dressing.

DALLAS DOG — Top generously with chili; sprinkle with finely shredded cheddar cheese.

SWISS RUEBEN DOG - Wrap hot dog in slice of Swiss cheese and place in center of hot dog bun. Top with serving of sauerkraut; drizzle with one teaspoon thousand island dressing. Broil unti cheese melts.

PIZZA DOG - Top generously with prepared pizza sauce; sprinkle with shredded mozarella cheese. Broil until cheese melts.

SALSA DOG may be prepared similarly using a zesty salsa sauce. APPLE DANDY DOG - Top with apple sauce; sprinkle with finely chopped pecans. May be eaten cold or heated. SLAW DOG - Cover hot dog with your favorite style slaw - tangy or creamy. Drain off any excess liquid before using.

VEGGIE DOG - Combine your favorite raw vegetables sliced thinly such as tomatoes, mushrooms, cucumbers, chopped green onions. Top with alfalfa sprouts. Sprinkle with celery seeds, if desired.

OLD FAITHFUL DOG - Slit hot dog and fill with cheese; wrap with bacon. Broil until bacon is crispy. Use toothpicks to hold wrap tightly CHINESE DOG - Drizzle over hot dog a sauce made of half Chinese mustard and half sweet and sour sauce. Garnish with crisp noodles, bean or alfalfa sprouts.

CHEEZY-BACON DOG - Cook, and crumble bacon in bits; mix with shredded cheddar cheese. Spread over hot dog in a bun. Heat under broiler until cheese begins to ITALIAN DOG - Spread a layer of spicy spaghetti sauce length of hot dog; sprinkle shredded mozzarella cheese over top. Add a few sliced black olives. Broil until cheese begins to melt.

BARBECUE DOG - Drizzle barbecue sauce over hot dog; top with crushed potato chips. To highligh the barbecue flavor, use barbecue flavored chips.

NACHO DOG - Mix together equal amounts of taco sauce and process cheese spread. Spoon over hot dog; broil until cheese begins to melt. Sprinkle with choice of chopped onions, green or jalapeno peppers, chopped tomato or shredded lettuce

CREOLE DOG - Top with heated creole sauce.

CORN DOG - Top with prepared corn relish or make up a mixture combining whole kernel corn, chopped green peppers, chopped green onions and seasoned with Italian salad dressing.

HOBO DOG - Cover hot dog in a bun with heated mixture of pork and beans; sprinkle with chopped onions or shredded cheddar with fluffy mashed potatoes. Season with butter, salt and

NUTTY DOG - Spread a layer of crunchy peanut putter the length of a hot dog. Sprinkle with crushed corn flakes or shredded coconut. If

POTATO DOG - Top a hot dog desired, place under broiler to toast coconut and slightly melt peanut butter

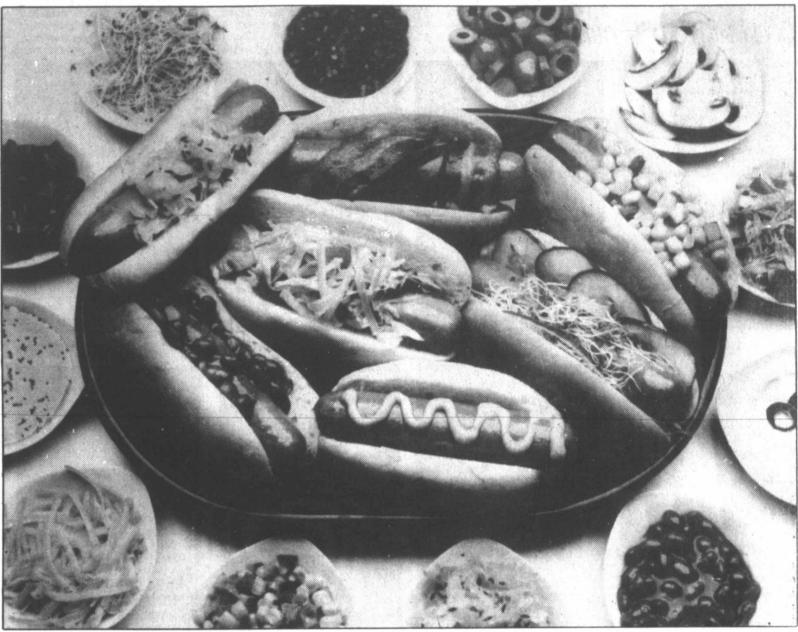

TROPICAL DOG - Mix drained, crushed pinapple with orange marmalade or currant jelly. Spread mixture over hot dog. Top with pecan bits or sprinkle with coconut, or both

CARROT DOG - Finely shred 1/2 cup fresh carrot. Add a tablespoon of crushed pineapple and mix together. Spread along length of hot dog. Sprinkle with celery seeds, if desired.

In addition to toppings, a number of marinades can be made quickly. This is particulary good to use when hot dogs have been cut in chunks for kebobs. Apple cider, pineapple juice, beer, dry wines or soy sauce mixed with orange juice all will add a special flavor to the hot dog after marinading

FRANKS WITH FRILLS — Enhance the great American hot dog by changing the traditional bun with a variety of buns and breads such as those topped with sesame or poppy seeds, or rye, wheat, Vienna or pita breads. Also consider crepes, pancakes, potato pancakes, muffins, bagels, tortillas or croissants as a base. And for further fun, make your selection from such topping ideas as sauerkraut, sweet and sour sauce, pork and beans, corn, alfalfa sprouts and bacon.

Microwave a quick and easy dinner

By AILEEN CLAIRE NEA Food Editor

In the late 1950s, when today's baby boomers were just beginning to churn their tiny legs, the wheels of technology were also churning.

The United States was off to a flying start with a bevy of airborne scientific advances in 1958. Explorer I, the first U.S. earth satellite to go into orbit, was launched on Jan. 31. The Van Allen radiation belt was discovered and the first domestic jet passenger service was opened by National Airlines on Dec. 10.

And the skies weren't the only area friendly to technology. Aon the ground, couples browsing at housing developments to see the latest in home building design found a new appliance in the elaborate kitchens - the microwave oven.

Microwave units were first introduced to consumers in 1955, and were priced from $1,200 to $1,800. But acceptance was slow and purchases mainly were by upscale professionals such as doctors or lawyers. For years they were used for little more than reheating coffee and leftovers.

However, a renaissance in cooking in the mid-'70s gave muscle to the microwave. And now sales are being spurred by the busy lifestyles of working single parents and dual - paycheck households along with an increase in seniors seeking a quick, easy way to have nutritious, hot meals.

Manufacturers estimate that microwave ovens are in 50 percent of our homes and that at least 70 percent of U.S. households will have microwave oven units by 1990. And the price now can be as low as $99

Convenience is the main reason for growing interest in this unit, especially in households with children, where 57 percent of the women work outside the home.

Busy urban apartment dwellers can shop for under-the-cabinet models and smaller subcompacts overcoming the lack of counter space. There are units with turntables to assure more even cooking, browning elements, temperature probes, computerized cooking of a set number of basic recipes and recipes on computer cards to insert. The era of the microwave oven also has spawned heat - proof glassware, glass - ceramics, heat proof plastics and paper specially designed for safe, effective use in

MICROWAVE METHOD - In 12"x8" glass baking dish, combine butter, onion, celery and mushrooms. Cover with plastic wrap; vent wrap. Microwave at

Add chicken; cover and microwave three minutes or until chicken is done. Set aside and keep warm. In one-quart measure, blend flour, cranberry juice cocktail and broth; microwave three minutes or until thickened, stirring once.

Stir in lemon juice and sour cream; microwave two minutes more or until sauce is hot. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Pour over vegetable - chicken mixture; stir until combined. Serve, spooned over cooked green noodles. Garnish with celery leaves, if desired. This kitchen tested recipe makes six servings.

In future columns, we will CONVENTIONAL METHOD discuss how a microwave cooks, In large skillet, over medium heat, melt butter; add onion, celery and mushrooms and saute for five minutes. Add chicken and saute for another five minutes. Sprinkle with flour. Stir in cranberry juice cocktail and broth.

Continue stirring until thickened and bubbly. Add lemon juice and sour cream. Stir over low heat just until hot. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve, as directed above.

Cook on Full power for 1/2 to 1 minute, or until hot and bubbly. Blend in milk. Cook on Full power for 3 to 4 minutes, stirring once or twice, or until boiling. Stir in TODAY' TIP — If you are planning to buy a microwave oven, the makers point out that the unit will work more efficiently if it is put on its own grounded circuit. If it is plugged into a kitchen outlet with another large appliance, the electrical voltage coming into the microwave will be low at times. This affects the length of cooking time, especially with bakery products.

Before using your microwave, carefully read the instructions and follow the cookbook that comes with the unit. Those who have been using microwaves for some time also will want to follow new recipe instructions carefully.

Dear Abby

Dead soldier's papers now become a troubling legacy

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Before his death some 15 years ago, a friend of mine showed me some identification papers he took from the body of a German soldier he had killed shortly before the end of the war. He said that for years he had felt guilty for having consigned another soldier even an enemy-to an unknown grave. He asked me to translate the papers and forward the information to the German authorities so the soldier's family would have definite information about his death. With my meager high school knowledge of German, I translated the information and promised to forward it to the proper authorities. I delayed doing the task, stored the papers away and forget about them. I came across them recently, and I'm wondering if, at this late date, I should do something about the matter. I feel strange to be the only person in the world to know the final saga of a dead soldier whose family must still be wondering about

I decided to ask your advice. After all these years, would it be better to withhold this information and let the survivors alone in the resignation they have probably achieved by now? Would I open old wounds by forwarding the papers? Or if I should reveal the information, whom shall I contact?

I will be grateful for your advice and abide by it.
V.H., SANTA FE, N.M.

DEAR V.H.: The families of soldiers missing in action never forget. I assure you they would be thrilled to have this information. Enemy or ally, that soldier was somebody's son, brother, husband, lover or father. Please write to: Bundesarchiv-Zentral-

Well, we are grandparents who have been denied the pleasure of having our grandchildren over-

Why? The parents say we "spoil" the children because we let them eat, drink and do whatever they want. We also let them stay up late to watch TV. We're told: "It takes a lot of hard work on our part to undo all the harm you do when you keep the kids overnight.

Abby, isn't it a grandparent's right to spoil a little one? DOTING GRANDMA

NEW YORK (AP) - Families making household moves should know that some things are better discarded than moves, while other possessions need special care, says an expert in the moving and storage industry.

One principle to follow is that the value of the object should exceed the cost of moving it, advises E. Sadler Morgan, the fourth generation Morgan to head the 134 year - old Morgan - Manhattan moving and storage firm. Such heavy objects as antiquated refrigerators, rusting barbecue grills and potted plants, which may also do poorly in another climate. are often best thrown out or given

People too often fail to safeguard lightweight valuables that are better personally carried to the new home than moved by the mover, he points out.

Senate defeats attacks on spending for 'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate, having routed repeated attempts to curb the cost and scope of President Reagan's "Star Wars" research program, is wrangling over a proposal to name an expert panel to monitor efforts to erect the proposed high technology missile defense shield.

The squabble complicated efforts to complete work on the pending $302 billion defense authorization bill for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1. And it delayed at least temporarily votes on the last remaining area of serious controversy in that bill, a decision on whether the United States should continue to observe the numerical limits on nuclear-tipped missiles set by the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty when it expires at the end of the year-

In a marathon session of debate and votes that did not end until 1:24 a.m. today, senators voicing concern over the feasibility of Reagan's drive to build a futuristic strategic defense system failed to convince a majority of the need to limit the horizons of Star Wars research.

All proposals to do that were defeated decisively. Critics of the Star Wars plan, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative, never rallied more than 38 senators to their cause.

The Senate stoutly supported the earlier decision of its Armed Services Committee to peg Star Wars spending authority at $2.97 billion. Reagan originally had sought authority to spend $3.7

Opponents of the program were unable to make a better showing than in the 57-38 roll call vote by which the Senate defeated an amendment by Sens. William Proxmire, D-Wis., and Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., to cut the authorization to $1.86 billion and to severely restrict testing which critics say could violate the 1972 Anti-Ballistic-Missile Treaty with the Soviet Union.

The debates and votes ran for more than seven hours.

Reagan is scheduled to decide soon whether or not to contine to observe the limits set by the 1979 SALT II treaty.

The Democrat-controlled House is considering a Pentagon budget smaller than the one being debated in the Republican-led Senate. Differences will be resolved by a conference committee

Pentagon probing spread of classified Army documents at General Dynamics

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Army is conducting an investigation to determine how employees of the General Dynamics Corp. gained access to classified information involving an unspecified Army weapon, the Pentagon said.

Houston leads nation's major growth

WASHINGTON (AP) - Houston and Dallas have grown the fastest since 1980 among U.S. urban areas with more than 1 million people, while Salt Lake City joined that select million-plus population club for the first time, the Census Bureau reports.

The new Census study of metropolitan areas released Tuesday reflected a continuing Western and Southern population with the shift. Houston-Galveston-Brazoria region becoming the nation's fastest-growing major metropolitan area with a 15 percent population spurt between 1980 and 1984.

That growth, to 3,565,700, pushed the Houston area past Washington, D.C., and its suburbs on the list of large metro areas. The nation's capital dropped from eighth to ninth place despite a 5.5 percent growth to 3,429,400 residents.

The study also reported that the number of metropolitan areas with more than a million people has climbed to 37, with the addition of Salt Lake City-Ogden. Charlotte-Gastonia-Rock Hill, N.C.-S.C. joined that list last year to add to the 35 such places counted in the 1980 census

In general, metropolitan statistical areas are defined as regions of common economic interest with a city of at least 50,000 people at the center.

Nationally, there are 277 such areas designated by the Office of Management and Budget, ranging from massive New York City down to Enid, Okla., with a population estimated at 65,400.

In the growth sweepstakes, close behind Houston was Dallas-Fort Worth, with 14.2 percent growth to bring its population to 3,348,000. It ranked 10th in both 1980 and 1984.

The New York City metro area, including portions of New Jersey and Connecticut, remained firmly atop the list with a 1984 population of 17,807,100 people.

That was an increase of 1.5 percent from 1980, reversing a decline that had loccurred during the 1970s, Census officials said. Of the 37 largest metropolitan areas, besides Houston and Dallas, eight others grew by 10 percent or more between 1980 and 1984, all in the South or West. They were Atlanta, San Diego, Tampa-St. Petersburg-Clearwater, Fla.; Denver-Boulder; Phoenix, Ariz.; Sacramento, Calif.; San Antonio, Texas, and Salt Lake City-Ogden.

Five large metropopolitan areas continued losing population, as they did during the 1970s. These were Detroit-Ann Arbor; Cleveland-Akron-Lorain; Pittsburgh-Beaver Valley Milwaukee-Racine, and Buffalo-Niagara Falls, N.Y.

In addition to New York City, major metropolitan areas that lost people in the 1970s but reversed that trend since 1980 included Philadelphia-Wilmington-Trenton and St. Louis.

Some of the smaller metropolitan areas, with less of a population base to start with, showed even greater percentages of growth than the large areas, the Census Bureau added. And Florida and Texas accounted for 10 of the 11 fastest-growing meiro areas, the

On a percentage basis, the bureau listed the fastest growing metro areas as: Midland, Texas, 113,600, up 38 percent; Anchorage, Alaska, 226,700, up 30 percent; Naples, Fla., 110,900, up 29 percent; Ocala, Fla., 155,600, up 27 percent; Fort Pierce, Fla., 190,200, up 26 percent

Money is plentiful and the interest rates are falling

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - Four years ago many small businesses were being tossed a water-logged life preserver in the form of 25 percent oans. It was a lose-lose situation: Take the money and drown; refuse it and go under

It's a different world today.

Money is plentiful, and it costs so much less than in 1981 that the old tables of interest costs, such as those used by mortgage lenders, cannot even be used.

More importantly, those interest rates are still falling, and as they fall excitement rises. Falling interest rates are certain to cause reverberations not just domestically but all over the world.

Among other things, they could mean more home and car sales, a business recovery from the slowdown of the past few months, a falling dollar, an easier time for U.S. exports, a rising market for bonds and maybe stocks, too.

Not all these things are promised, but the probabilities are rising each day. The prime interest rate is now down to 10 percent, and you can barely find anyone who doesn't expect it to drop soon to 9.75 or 9.5 percent.

It may not stop there, either. Merrill Lynch Economics, for example, is on record as expecting the prime - a base rate to corporate customers — to fall to 9.2 percent by the first quarter of 1986.

Combined with expectations of relatively stable prices and a pro-growth Federal Reserve policy, and perhaps even a personal tax cut, the falling rates create an economic world not seen

Analyzing it, some forecasters already have raised their sights. Disappointed by economic Christian, Provident National Bank economist, lowered his sights for 1985. But he almost doubled his forecast for growth next year to nearly 4 percent from 2 percent.

While there is nothing remarkable about economists changing their forecasts, it was only recently that a good many of them were growing increasingly wary. The possibility of recession was being planted prominently in their forecasts.

In spite of what he sees as "the current deplorable condition of the domestic and global financial system," Edward Yardeni, Prudential-Bache Securities economist, recently issued this summary of his expectations:

"1. No recession, 2. continued low inflation, and 3. still lower interest rates.

Demo leader accuses Reagan of partianship in tax plan speeches

WASHINGTON (AP) - As President Reagan embarks today on another trip to promote his tax simplification plan, a Democratic leader is accusing him of "preaching one thing and practicing another" by making partisan speeches on the tax issue.

Reagan was to speak today and Thursday at fund-raising events for Republican senators seeking re-election in Oklahoma, Georgia and Alabama. That, according to Sen. George Mitchell of Maine, chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, smacks of partisanship

"The president is preaching one thing and practicing another," Mitchell said Tuesday. "In Washington, he is asking

Democratic leaders for bipartisan support on his tax program. At the same time, his trips, which are billed as selling the tax program to the American people, are highly partisan. How can he ask for bipartisanship on the one hand and lead political pep rallies on the

Mitchell, a member of the Finance Committee that considers tax legislation, said Republican incumbents in all three states, where Reagan's appearances are expected to reap an estimated $850,000, are regarded as vulnerable. So, he said, are GOP senators who appeared with Reagan at tax simplification rallies in Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Florida last week

Reagan's remarks at a fund-raising dinner for Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., in Miami last week were sharply partisan, accusing Democrats of "pitting white against black, women against men, young against old." He avoided partisanship, however, in Williamsburg, Va., and in Oshkosh, Wis., where Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., introduced him, and in Malvern, Pa., where he shared the platform with Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan's speech at today's fund-raising luncheon for Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., would "have a number of other things involved, current issues," as well as tax simplification.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's largest teachers union, which gave strong support to Jimmy Carter and Walter F. Mondale in the last three presidential elections, is engaged in some Republican outreach that could offer the GOP a boost for its campaign to win friends in organized labor.

The 1.7 million-member National Education Association paid $15,000 — the maximum allowable contribution - for a table at a Republican fund-raising dinner last month. A few days later, officials of the union had a friendly chat with GOP chairman Frank

City in uproar over film shown children

VIDOR, Texas (AP) - Police are investigating a citizen's complaint that a film shown to schoolchildren in this small Southeast Texas town violates a municipal obscenity ordinance.

The film, titled "Whose Life Is It Anyway?," was recently shown to seventh-graders at Vidor Junior High School as part of a new district program to provide supplemental classroom materials.

The school board last month proposed the policy, which allows a principal to select supplemental teaching materials that are considered suitable, relevant and educational to students. The board must review the proposal once again before it is finally approved. But Virginia Payne, an unsuccessful candidate in the April school board election and member of a group called Citizens for Excellence in Education, said she complained to police because 'Whose Life' contains frontal nudity. The movie, she said, violates an obscenity ordinance in the city about five miles northeast of Beaumont.

The recently passed law forbids the sale and display of any "material or performance that the average person, applying contemporary community standards, would find that, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest in sex." Former wife says she tipped FBI to alleged spy

WEST DENNIS, Mass. (AP) - daughter Laura Walker Snyder The former wife of a retired Navy communications specialist charged with running a spy ring involving his son and brother said in an interview published today, "I did what I believed in" by tipping the FBI about the operation.

As John A. Walker Jr. and his son, Michael, pleaded innocent Tuesday in Baltimore to espionage charges, Barbara Joy Crowley Walker said that she and her went to authorities in Boston several months ago.

John Walker, 47, is charged with masterminding a spy ring the FBI says sold secrets to the Soviet Union for at least 20 years. The FBI alleges Walker tried to recruit Ms. Snyder, an Army communications specialist from 1978 to 1979.

Ms. Snyder has not been charged and her whereabouts have not been publicly disclosed.

"Why in the name of all that's holy did I wait so long?" Mrs. Walker said in an interview with The Cape Cod Times. "You have the answer. It is because of what's happening to my family and my children.

In an interview Tuesday at the home of her daughter, Cynthia, Mrs. Walker, divorced in 1976, said, "I did what I believed in."

At times fighting back tears, she said her son "is very important to me," adding that reporters should now "allow them (the Justice Department) to do what has to be done in order to bring this thing to an end.'

John Walker was arrested May 20; Michael, 22, on May 22; John Walker's brother, Arthur, 50, on May 29; and Jerry A. Whitworth of Davis, Calif., on Monday. Arthur Walker faces a preliminary hearing June 12 in Norfolk, Va. Whitworth was arraigned Monday and faces another hearing Friday. John Walker, a Norfolk private detective, and Arthur, an engineer with a defense contractor near Norfolk, are retired Navy officers Michael is a seaman aboard the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz.

Whitworth is a retired Navy radioman. The New York Times reported today that the FBI has turned its attention to Jacksonville, Fla., after agents found a recent navigator's map of the city in John Walker's plane and a city phone book in his office.

The Jacksonville Naval Air Station is home for two major aircraft groups and the nearby Mayport naval station is the home of two aircraft carriers, the Forrestal and Saratoga.

A spokesman for the Jacksonville office of the FBI told The Associated Press his office had no comment

More than 4 million Americans have access to government secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) -Government officials are concerned that too many people are being given access to secret documents, and a recent security report to President Reagan warned that "far greater efforts are needed to limit national security clearances."

Some 4.3 million Americans have the right to read classified information, government officials

Concern over the proliferation of security clearances has been heightened by the unfolding Navy espionage case in which four men - including John A. Walker Jr., his son and brother - are charged with selling secrets to the Soviets.

"We have an absurd number of people who are being cleared," Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn, ranking Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Tuesday.

chief spokesman, said the Defense Department has been studying ways of tightening its procedures for awarding security clearances for three years, but has yet to make any specific changes.

The number holding clearances has sparked concern by the Information Security Oversight Office, a 2-year-old agency which operates at the direction of the National Security Council.

"There's been a recognition that there's a lot of reform to be done in the personal security area," says director Steven Garfinkel.

In an annual report submitted to the president six weeks ago, the oversight office expressed concern "that far too many individuals receive clearances for access to national security information."

"All too often, agencies grant clearances by habit, or as a badge

Michael I. Burch, the Pentagon's of prestige, rather than as a requisite of job responsibilities." the report said. "Far greater efforts are needed to limit national security clearances to persons whose work necessitates access to national security information."

Of the 4.3 million with clearance for classified information, the vast majority are eligible to see documents labeled no higher than 'secret."

George Woloshyn, associate director of the Office of Personnel Management's compliance and investigations group, which monitors clearances, said 800,000 people have "top secret" clearances.

Of that number, 135,000 have the highest clearance, for what is called special compartmentalized information.

More than 3.1 million hold

Police search for Texas teen-agers

SANTA FE (AP) — State police early today began searching for 10 Texas teen-agers and their supervisor after the group failed to return from a hiking expedition in mountains near Santa Fe.

State police said the search was started at about midnight in the Glorieta Baldy area.

A state police dispatcher said the group left the Glorieta area at about 3 p.m. and had not returned by midnight.

The names of the individual members in the group were not available, police said. Authorities said the teen-agers were believed to be wearing light clothing.

'secret' clearance and the lowest clearance, "confidential," is held by about 350,000 people.

Eighty-five percent of the clearances are granted by the Defense Department, Woloshyn said. The remainder are granted by a variety of agencies such as the CIA, National Security Agency, State Department, Energy Department and others.

The Defense Department said Tuesday that of the clearance it has granted, nearly 1.1 million are held by civilians working in private industry. And it said all clearances have increased from 3 million in

Adm. Bobby Inman, former deputy director of the CIA, said the numbers with clearances mean the system of investigating and reviewing those seeking or holding clearances is swamped.

"I think we really have to relook our priorities," Inman said: "You're never going to be able to surveil the 4.3 million Americans with security clearances....

Investigators say Walker had a top secret clearance while serving in the Navy. His brother Arthur and son Michael also had security clearances.

In its report, the Information Security Oversight Office said the spread of security clearances poses obvious security threats. Moreover, it said, it contributes to a laxity in the system and a widespread indifference to the 'need-to-know' principle," in which only those with a need for certain information have access to it. Because of the large numbers of people with clearances. Woloshyn said, periodic re-investigations of those holding them have been confined to those with top-secret or higher clearances.

Jenkins presides over his far-flung projects from a modest office with a Mickey Mouse telephone and a stained glass rendition of the famous rodent in his classic role as the Sorcerer's Apprentice.

According to his wife, Bee, a vice president of the family-owned firm, Jenkins often answers the phone at home with Mickey's voice. He doesn't do a bad Donald Duck either.

But he's no slouch himself.

LARC is currently designing China's first amusement park and is a partner with the British firm of Alton Towers Ltd. in the redevelopment of the huge Battersea power station on the River Thames in the heart of London.

At any one time, the firm is involved in more than 30 projects, Jenkins says, in capacities ranging from feasibility studies to design to operational training and consultation.

It keeps Jenkins, 43, on the road much of the time and has made him an expert on everything from the most advantageous place for restroom towel dispensers (away from the sink so people use fewer) to the latest novelty food (pizza on a stick) to how to tickle a Chinese funnybone (gently).

His unique business has presented Jenkins with some offbeat problems.

Minister honored for gospel songs

DALLAS (AP) - Considering that Tillit S. Teddlie has penned 130 gospel songs and published 14 religious songbooks, hundreds of churches worldwide thought it fitting to help him celebrate his 100th birthday

So on Sunday, more than 630 churches proclaimed the day Tillit S. Teddlie Day and sang the songs he has been writing since 1906.

"It's born in you. If you're full of music, you'll want to write songs,' said Teddlie, who attended a songfest at the Prestoncrest Church of Christ in Dallas with more than 1,200 people, the Dallas Times Herald said.

The composer's songs reflect his life, he said

"Heaven Holds All To Me," was written when he was so poor he couldn't buy a 2-cent postage stamp

"Being broke is one of the hardest things to overcome," he said, chuckling

Teddlie was born June 3, 1885 in Swan, Texas. He has served as minister at more than 12 churches, preached at numerous gospel meetings throughout the country and led congregations in song for more than 90 other preachers.

The Church of Christ sent about 12,000 letters to churches worldwide asking congregations to honor his accomplishments by singing his songs on his 100th birthday, said Nelson Slater, program committee chairman.

About 633 replied, some sending letters that were signed by entire congregations.

"He's one of the most prolific writers we've had in the Church of Christ," Slater said. "His songs are remarkable. They're beautiful, and the man wrote some of them when he was over 90 years old."

Mariners edge Tigers on Bradley's homer

By DICK BRINSTER AP Sports Writer

It was a night Seattle's Phil Bradley will always remember and one Detroit's Willie Hernandez would just as soon forget.

With relatives and friends totaling 30 in the ballpark, Bradley wanted to do something unforgettable. And that he did, hitting a 12th-inning home run Tuesday night off Tiger relief ace Hernandez to lift the Mariners to a 7-6 victory

"I've had some thrills, but I'd have to say this was one of the biggest," Bradley said.

Hernandez, 4-2, won't soon forget Bradley's homer - the first the American League Cy Young Award winner has allowed in a regular-season game since July 24, 1984 - or what followed.

After the homer, Bradley's ninth, Hernandez hit Alvin Davis with a pitch and then engaged the Seattle dugout in an exchange of obscenities that resulted in his Hernandez had worked four perfect innings and had one out when Bradley jumped on the 1-0 pitch and hit it into the upper deck in left field. One out later, Hernandez hit Davis.

Roy Thomas, 1-0, got the victory and Matt Young, the seventh Seattle pitcher, retired the final batter for a save in his first relief appearance of the year. Elsewhere in the AL, it was

Lewis-Clark wins NAIA title

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) - The Lewis-Clark State College Warriors are the NAIA baseball World Series champions for the second straight year, thanks in large part to relief pitcher Tony Dineen.

Dineen threw 7 1-3 innings of relief and was backed by three solo home runs as the host Warriors came from behind Tuesday night to beat Dallas Baptist College 10-6.

Dineen, 12-2 and the Series Most Valuable Player, entered the game in the second inning with LCSC trailing 5-0, then gave up just one run the rest of the way to win his third Series game. He scattered seven hits, walked one and struck out eight en route to a spot on the all-tournament team.

LCSC knotted the score at 6-6 in the fifth on back-to-back home runs by Jamie Archibald and Kyle Brock, then Brian Thomas hit a two-run triple to give the Warriors the lead for good.

Joe Padilla added a solo home run in the seventh, his fifth of the Series and sixth of the year.

Padilla and fellow outfielders Keith Peterson and Lonnie Phillips were named to the all-tournament team, along with first baseman Brock, shortstop Thomas, catcher Bill Stevenson and designated hitter Dwight Thomas.

LCSC, 51-20, finished second in the small-college championship in 1982 and 1983. Dallas Baptist, in only its second year in the NAIA playoffs, finished 54-24

Losing pitcher Darren Hall, 4-3, lasted just one-third inning as he gave up Thomas' triple in the fifth.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) -Any hitter would be happy with a .393 batting average. As a shooting percentage in basketball, it's worse than mediocre.

For the NBA's Most Valuable Player, Larry Bird, .393 is a total

"For the past several weeks, I've been shooting the ball extremely well in practice," Bird says. "It's just that in games, the shots haven't dropped.

In his last five National Basketball Association playoff games, including the first three of Boston's championship series with the Los Angeles Lakers, Bird has made only 35 of 89 field-goal attempts.

If the Celtics are to rally from a 2-1 deficit in tonight's fourth game of the best-of-seven series, they need Bird to snap out of the doldrums.

"Of course Larry is vital for us," Coach K.C. Jones said Tuesday. "He's the MVP of the league, isn't he? But if we have to depend solely on Larry, we're in trouble."

"Larry is the guy to carry us," said center-forward Kevin McHale, who is leading the Celtics in scoring against the Lakers with 24 points per game. "We go with Larry and he can take us anywhere.'

Despite Bird's slump, the Lakers are under no illusion that he might quit shooting tonight.

"I look for him to be very aggressive offensively," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "He might take as many as 30 shots." Bird has been troubled in the postseason by elbow, finger and ankle injuries, but he steadfastly refuses to use them as an excuse.

When he sat out one game of the first-round series against

Cleveland to rest his elbow, he came back to score 34 points in his next outing

Michael Cooper, who along with James Worthy plays against Bird defensively, says in tonight's game he expects Bird to "go inside, use his weight advantage and get more rebounds. Once he gets going, it creates a different ballclub for

"I'd like to get us going because I know I provide leadership for them, but I don't think I can do everything," said Bird. "We've got some guys playing extremely well right now. Kevin played a great game Sunday (in a 136-111 Boston loss). We just need four or five guys clicking on the same cylinder. We've just been hitting and missing. Once we get four or five guys rolling, we're going to be tough to stop.

Old Roosevelt Stadium bowing to progress

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

To a Brooklyn Dodger fan, Roosevelt Stadium deserves every swing of the wreckers' ball.

To a 15-year-old kid born in Bay Ridge and raised in Bensonhurst, Ebbets Field was a shrine in the 1950s. Staten Island was a trip to the country. For Jersey City, you needed shots and a passport.

Walter O'Malley was making noises about how he wanted a new ballpark and would move the Dodgers somewhere else if he didn't get it. Yeah, sure. The Braves could move from Boston to Milwaukee, the A's from Philly to Kansas City.

But this was Brooklyn. Any comic could get a cheap laugh with a Brooklyn joke. All those William Bendix war movies, he didn't die dreaming of seeing one more game in Shibe Park. The Dodgers were

All of a sudden, the kid and his father were riding the ferry, driving over the Bayonne Bridge, to see the Dodgers. In Roosevelt Stadium. Near Newark Bay. In "Joisey." O'Malley was putting on the pressure. He had them play seven home games there in 1956, eight more in '57, then he tore the guts out of the kid and the borough.

"Alien territory," Clem Labine, the former pitcher, said Tuesday. "Sometimes I think we were more upset about being there than the Brooklyn fans."

"It flt like an exhibition game every time we played there," said another former pitcher, Carl Erskine. "Sometimes during the season we'd play an exhibition against one of our farm teams. That's what it was like. Once the game started, we knew it was for keeps. But in the locker room, during batting practice, times like that, it was foreign to us. No, it was bay." never home

"It was like San Francisco, sort of. Cold. A lot of fog. Miserable." Most of the memories of those games, those glitches in Brooklyn's

Frey sends sandpaper in protest against pitcher

CHICAGO (AP) - Manager Jim Frey of the Chicago Cubs sent a letter Tuesday to the National League, enclosing a small piece of sandpaper to make a point.

The letter was sent to Chub Feeney, president of the National League, about Houston pitcher Mike Scott.

"I'm not protesting any game," Frey said. "I just want him (Feeney) to know what the circumstances were and what happened "

Frey was not complaining about Sunday's 4-3 loss at Houston when Scott was the winning pitcher. Frey's complaint concerned a 10-8 victory over Houston and Scott on May 26 in a game in which Frey had umpire John Kibler check Scott on the pitching mound.

"When I had Kibler check Scott. the players saw something drop from his glove," Frey said. "After the inning was over, Bull (first baseman Leon Durham) went over and found this piece of sandpaper."

McEnroe advances to semifinals

PARIS (AP) - With many of the top players talking about retirement and a young Swedish contingent coming on strong, the international tennis picture may change dramatically in the next few years.

However, two of the old guard keep plugging away - the United States' John McEnroe and Czechoslovak Ivan Lendl. The No. 1 and No. 2 seeds so far have lived up to their billing in the $2.2 million French Open

McEnroe took a tough, five-set victory over Sweden's Joakim Nystrom 6-7, 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5, Tuesday to advance to the semifinals against another Swede, Mats Wilander, who eliminated upstart Henri Leconte of France 6-4, 7-6, 6-7, 7-5

Lendl, meanwhile, was in today's quarterfinals against Martin Jaite of Argentina following his 6-2, 6-2, 6-0 win Monday over Aaron Krickstein of Grosse Pointe, Mich.

1. The pipe shall be a split pipe with a minimum eight inch (8") diameter in good repair and condi-2. Asphalt covering shall not extend more than twenty-four inches (24") into the street as measured from the face of the curb. In those cases where a removable grate was removed, the property owner, so long as said drive way meets the criteria set forth above, may replace the grate or the proerty owner, or his authorized grate in lieu of the split drain pipe and asphalt covering. SECTION 5.

Any property owner whose drive way drain pipe was removed dur-ing the period from January 1, 1984, to January 1, 1985 and who wishes for said pipe to be reinstalled shall make written plication with the Office of the Di-rector of Neighborhood Integrity (Building Inspector) for such re-installation upon the form to be furnished by said Office. Said ap-plication shall be reviewed and the requested drive way involved shall be investigated by the City to de termine if it qualifies under the criteria and standards set forth in Section 4-A above of this Ordinance. If it is found to meet said standards, then the City shall issue a permit for said pipe without charge and shall proceed with the re-installation as provided in this Ordinance.

SECTION 6 A property owner or person in pos-session of any residential property with a drive way drain pipe existing at the date of adoption of this Ordinance but which has not been removed shall apply for a permit with the Office of Director of Neighborhood Integrity (Building Inspector) for the continued use of said drain pipe under the standards and criteria set forth in Sec tion 4-A above of this Ordinance. SECTION 7

Any drive way drain pipe which exists after the effective date of this Ordinance and which does not meet the standards and criteria as set forth in Section 4-A and 4-B above of this Ordinance is hereby declared to be a nuisance per se and an obstruction to the rightof-way and proper drainage within the City of Pampa. Upon written notice by the City of Pampa to a property owner that the drive way drain pipe is in violation of this Ordinance, the said property owner shall have thirty (30) days to remove said drain pipe or to otherwise bring such drive way into compliance with this Ordinance. If the property owner fails to comply within said time period (unless an appeal is filed as hereinafter provided), then the City may forthwith remove the drain pipe and / or file a complaint under the provisions hereof or seek such other relief as may be available under the law.

Written notice as required under this Section shall be deemed com-
