

Hostage ordeal may be near end

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri said today that the two-week-old ordeal of the 39 American hijack hostages in Beirut was nearing an end.

He talked to Western television reporters at his heavily fortified house in west Beirut minutes after coming from a 30-minute meeting with French Embassy First Secretary Marcel L'Augel.

"I'm waiting for an answer. Until now I don't receive any answer from U.S. government," Berri said in English. "But I think we're in the end, end of this thing."

Beirut radio stations said France had offered to house the 39 Americans, taken hostage in the hijacking of a TWA airliner on June 14, and two kidnapped Frenchmen at its west Beirut embassy for two days on condition Israel freed 735 Lebanese prisoners.

But the French Foreign Ministry in Paris issued a statement saying: "We cannot act as substitute jailers. We are ready to welcome liberated people, not hostages."

L'Augel said after meeting Berri that "moving the hostages to an embassy would be a long-term matter. It will take a lot of talks to get them there."

In Bern, Switzerland, the government said it was studying an offer from Berri to transfer the American hostages to the Swiss Embassy.

The wife of one of the two kidnapped Frenchmen said French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas told her today that her husband, magazine writer Jean-Paul Kaufmann, and the other Frenchman, scientific researcher Michel Seurat, had been handed over to Berri.

Gunmen kidnapped the two Frenchmen on the highway to Beirut airport May 22.

Berri told a news conference Wednesday men who kidnapped the Frenchmen had contacted him to say they had decided to put the pair in his charge "in the same position" as the hostages from the TWA flight.

Berri, 46, is leader of the Amal militia guarding 36 American hostages in secret Beirut hideouts. Three crew members remain aboard the jet at the Beirut airport.

In Fitchburg, Mass., the girlfriend of hostage Ralf Traugett, 32, said he telephoned her Wednesday night and said his captors want her to come to Lebanon. "I understand they may be inviting family members to Beirut, but as of yet, I am the only one who has been invited," Niki Assimakopoulos told The Associated Press in Boston this morning.

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Vice President George Bush also insisted that seven other Americans missing or kidnapped in Beirut since March 1984, be freed with the 39 others.

Sources in Israel said as many as 70 of the remaining prisoners it holds could be released today. However, they cautioned that the release could be delayed to avoid the appearance of caving in to terrorist demands.

The U.S. hostages were all passengers and crew members on TWA Flight 847, which was hijacked June 14 en route from Athens to Rome. The hijackers released more than 100 passengers and crew, but they killed a U.S. Navy petty officer.

Berri freed Jimmy Dell Palmer, 48, of Little Rock, Ark., on Wednesday because of his heart condition and high blood pressure. Palmer left Beirut on a Lebanese Middle East Airlines flight for Cyprus, and later flew to London, where his wife, Sammie, arrived to meet him.

Berri said he also was considering releasing 57-year-old Simon Grossmayer of Algonquin, Ill., who only has one lung. He told a news conference he was studying Grossmayer's medical condition. Palmer told reporters that he had been held in the same group with Grossmayer in Beirut.

Co-pilot Philip Maresca was taken to the American University Hospital on Wednesday because an insect bite he received a week ago had become inflamed, officials at the airport control tower reported.

The seven other missing Americans are: William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer; the Rev. Benjamin Weir, a Presbyterian minister; Peter Kilburn, a librarian at the American University of Beirut; the Rev. Lawrence Jenco, a Roman Catholic priest; Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press; David Jacobsen, director of the American University Hospital, and Thomas Sutherland, dean of the university's school of agriculture.

Blackout on news suggests progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — An administration news blackout, coupled with intensifying contacts with Syria and other countries to win the freedom of the 39 American hostages in Beirut, suggests diplomatic efforts are at a particularly sensitive stage.

Hints that the 13-day old drama may have reached a turning point revolved around comments Wednesday by Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Richard Lugar and the Rev. Jesse Jackson and — before the blackout — by White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

The administration-wide secrecy lid, a tactic often applied when a negotiating effort may be bearing fruit, was another indication of diplomatic movement.

William Quant, a Carter administration Middle East expert, said Wednesday when asked for his interpretation of the news blackout: "Maybe it's on the way to a solution."

Jackson said after meetings with top State Department officials on the situation in Beirut that he has "reason to believe" President Reagan has been "more directly in touch" with Syrian President Hafez Assad. "That is a step in the right direction," he said. Jackson, who traveled to Syria last year to win the release of a downed U.S. flier, was accompanied to the meetings by Sheik Muhammad Jawad Chirri, a Detroit-based American Shiite leader.

Chirri said, "President Assad is a man who can deal with the problem efficiently," a reference to the dominant role Syria plays in Lebanon.

Lugar told reporters after a meeting with Reagan that the crisis was "at a very important stage, and it's very hopeful." He later amended the remark somewhat by saying that his observation was a personal view, not necessarily that of the administration's.

Before the blackout was imposed, Speakes said the United States had been "in close touch" with Syria and that Assad had expressed a desire to be helpful.

Once the blackout was imposed, however, Speakes and State Department deputy spokesman Edward Djerejian limited themselves to saying that "the proper solution is the release of all the hostages."

Court ruling may affect Texas' Blue Law repeal

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas attorney general's office will review a Wednesday U.S. Supreme Court ruling concerning religious days off to see if it affects legislation repealing the state's Blue Law.

The high court said states cannot force employers to give workers their choice of a religious day off each week.

Texas lawmakers this year voted down the 1961 Blue Law that effectively forced most stores to close on Sundays. The repeal bill includes provisions guaranteeing that Sunday work won't interfere with religious services.

"We have requested a copy of the opinion," said Loretta Hendley, spokeswoman for Attorney General Jim Mattox.

"We will have no comment or opinion on it until we get a copy."

The Supreme Court action struck down a Connecticut law that protected employees from retaliation for missing work on their religious Sabbath.

With the decision, the Supreme Court, nearing the end of a term with the potential for sweeping change in the constitutional relationship between government and religion, appears to be reaffirming long-standing principles in church-state issues.

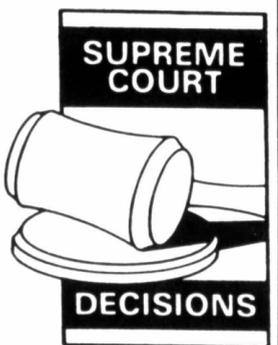

The ruling reinforced the court's strict standards for separation of church and state — reaffirmed in an Alabama case earlier this month when the court outlawed daily moments of silence in public schools if students are encouraged to pray during that time.

Still pending before the justices begin their summer vacation is a case that could have broader impact than those already decided.

The court is to decide, probably next week, whether it violates the Constitution to allow public school teachers to conduct classes in parochial schools. The issue was raised in two cases — involving state aid to pay public school teachers in Grand Rapids, Mich., and federal aid to the needy to pay New York City public school teachers.

In Wednesday's ruling, the court said states may not give workers the absolute right not to work on their Sabbath because it favors the religious at the expense of all others.

In other decisions, the court:

— Made it easier for people who sue successfully for libel to collect whopping sums of money by narrowing in a Vermont case the constitutionally required limits on such awards.

— Sent back to a federal judge in Miami a still-simmering dispute over the treatment of Haitian refugees by immigration officials.

NAACP members boo GOP official

DALLAS (AP) — Republican National Committee chairman Frank Fahrenkopf braved boos at the NAACP national convention to plead for black converts, saying they should not continue to align themselves with one party.

"Democrats were not just rejected but repudiated by more than 16 million voters, 49 states and 525 electoral votes" during November's presidential election, Fahrenkopf told delegates at the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's 76th annual convention on Wednesday.

Speaking where thunderous GOP applause greeted President Reagan's nomination in August, Fahrenkopf prompted boos instead when he asked, "Why did black Americans isolate themselves ... from other Americans, including other minorities, in supporting a Democratic ticket out of step and out of tune with the overwhelming majority of Americans?"

The boos got loud enough for NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks — who earlier had said Fahrenkopf was invited in the interest of learning and equal time — to call for quiet.

"The NAACP does not insult a guest," Hooks interjected. "This man had the courage to come and face us, and that's a hell of a lot of courage, and this is a bad way to receive him."

Fahrenkopf, in his second two-year term as committee chairman, went on to tell the gathering of more than 300 delegates that "we perceive the Republican Party today is on the crest of a rising demographic wave."

"But the victory is not yet complete because of one last statistic," he said. "Ronald Reagan got only 8 to 11 percent of the black vote."

That remark prompted a standing ovation, but the Nevada Republican continue to plead for GOP converts.

"After all, the Republican Party was the original party of civil rights a century before that phrase became popular," Fahrenkopf said. "Yet we lost each other somewhere between the time of Abraham Lincoln and the time of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and that's a tragedy."

Just before Fahrenkopf spoke at the Dallas Convention Center, Civil Rights Commission member Mary Berry told the crowd that "anybody who becomes a Republican — any black person — based on Reagan's record has to be uninformed or unaware or opportunistic."

But Fahrenkopf urged them not to chastise blacks who switch to the GOP and said "it would be a tragic mistake for any group to ally itself with just one party."

House votes to cancel weapons tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has voted to bar the Pentagon from performing final tests on anti-satellite weapons while allowing it to use lie detectors for catching spies and ships and planes to hunt down drug smugglers.

House decisions on a variety of defense issues came Wednesday as the chamber worked toward final approval of a huge bill authorizing most of a proposed $292 billion Pentagon budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The version that passes the Democratic-controlled House will have to be reconciled with the version that passed the Republican-led Senate earlier this month.

The Senate's bill would provide $10 billion more and contains none of the three major provisions approved Wednesday by the House.

The House voted 229-193 to reinstate a ban on final-stage tests of an Air Force anti-satellite, or ASAT, weapon — as long as the Soviet Union refrains from more tests of its ASAT.

It also approved, 364-51, a measure allowing the Navy and Air Force to use ships and planes to hunt down and arrest suspected drug smugglers.

Another provision, approved on a 333-71 vote, would give the Defense Department wide-ranging authority to administer polygraph tests to its 3.1 million employees to try to curb espionage.

In further reaction to Pentagon procurement scandals, the House also voted 383-32 to order new studies of what weapons and spare parts should cost. The "should cost" proposal is also contained in the Senate's defense bill.

The ASAT ban was proposed by Rep. George Brown, D-Calif., who noted that the Soviets have proposed a halt to tests while the superpowers try to agree to a ban at the current round of arms control talks.

"As long as the Geneva talks are in progress, it is to our best interests to accept the Soviet offer of not testing," he said.

Brown won approval for a similar ban last year, but that prohibition has now expired. The Air Force is expected to try its first final-stage test of the ASAT next month. That trial would be banned if the House-passed provision is contained in the defense authorization bill signed by President Reagan.

The U.S. system, which has been tested by components, is a small two-stage rocket launched by a high-flying F-15 fighter. The Soviet weapon is a small satellite fired into space from a ground-launched rocket.

The anti-drug proposal was authored by Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., whose son died of a drug overdose eight years ago. It was strongly supported by Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn.

Number of blacks in prison being ignored, NAACP told

DALLAS (AP) - The number of blacks being incarcerated is constantly increasing, but the problem largely is being ignored by the black community, a former parole board commissioner told NAACP members.

Theodore Kirkland, former commissioner for the New York State Parole Board, also told NAACP national convention delegates Wednesday that apathy toward black-on-black crime constitutes a form of "genocide."

Kirkland, speaking to about 150 NAACP members at a convention workshop on criminal justice and prisons, said many blacks don't appear to be care that blacks represent a disproportionate amount in United States jails and prisons.

"Not since the legalization of slavery have we had so many of our people under physical control," Kirkland said. "And if they were Jews, they would turn this country upside down."

Kirkland said blacks were not only being punished for crime but they are victims as well.

"We're very cool about it, and that's frightening," he said. "I call that genocide."

About two out of every 100 black men are in prisons and jails throughout the United States, he said. Of the estimated 700,000 people incarcerated, more than 320,000 are black.

Kirkland also questioned the role blacks have in the criminal justice system, adding that little progress has been made to put blacks in policy-making positions.

"And those that we have, act as if they owe no damn allegiance to us," he said.

"Take a very close look at us, and you'll find we are just like South Africa, blacks guarding blacks," Kirkland said.

Kirkland urged the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to use its power to pressure government to put a cap on incarceration of blacks and the building of prisons.

The money used to build prisons could be better spent rebuilding urban areas, he said.

The NAACP should remember that when blacks are sent prison, it decreases the number of registered black voters, he said.

CLEVELAND, Texas (AP) - An explosion believed triggered by a gas leak ripped through a building in the downtown section of this town of 6,000 people early today and fire quickly spread to other buildings in the block.

No one was reported injured and the fire was declared under control about 7:30 a.m. CDT, authorities said.

By mid-morning the blaze was out although officials were worried that another gas leak could set off a second explosion, said Steve Wheeler, fire chief in Cleveland, a community about 45 miles north of Houston.

Police dispatcher Maxine Smith said no one was evacuated. The blast levelled the Trinity Valley Floor Co., a floor-covering firm, with the fire spreading to three adjacent businesses.

"At first they told us the whole block was on fire," she said.

But later she said it was learned only about four buildings were on fire, including a jewelry store, an attorney's office and the Cleveland Advocate, the town's weekly newspaper.

"It's in the business area, and we don't think anyone was around at that time," Ms. Smith said.

Property insurance rate decision is delayed

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance, facing a staff recommendation for a 2.2 percent hike and an industry request for a 10.2 percent increase, has postponed a decision on property insurance rates.

The staff proposal includes a $58 million, 6.7 percent raise in premiums for homeowners' insurance. The industry wants a 15.8 percent hike in those rates.

After hearing more than two hours of testimony Wednesday, board Chairman Lyndon Olson said the three-member panel would take the case "under advisement." He did not indicate when a ruling would be made.

Any new rates approved by the board would go into effect Dec. 1.

Overall, the board staff recommended a $28 million hike in property rates, including the 6.7 percent increase in homeowners' coverage and a 25 percent drop in renters' insurance.

The insurance industry wants a 10.2 percent overall increase in premiums, including the 15.8 percent average hike in homeowners insurance.

The staff recommendation was presented by actuary Gaylon Daniel, who told the board that property insurance "offers the potential for catastrophic loss."

"We were all recently reminded of the Gulf Coast's vulnerability to hurricanes. And it is an accepted fact that northern and western areas of the state have experienced severe tornado and hail losses on several occasions," Daniel said.

The industry proposal, presented by the Texas

Insurance Advisory Association, includes a 17.2 percent cut in renters' insurance.

All figures are statewide averages. The board sets rates by region — seacoast, central and north-northwest.

Seacoast residents would see the highest increase in homeowners' rates — 19.9 percent — if the staff plan is approved. Central residents would see only a 0.9 percent hike. Residents of the north-northwest territory would see a 6.2 percent cut.

The industry plan calls for increase in homeowners' insurance for all Texans — 25 percent for seacoast residents, 12.3 percent for central and 4.6 percent for north-northwest.

There were no consumer groups represented at the hearing.

The TIAA made no recommendation in the previous property insurance rate-setting, which resulted in a statewide average 5.3 percent decrease, including an 8.6 percent cut in homeowners' rates, that went into effect in March.

The industry association has been conducting a study of how Texas sets property rates.

Irene K. Bass, a vice president with Crum and Forster in New Jersey, told the board Wednesday that the state needs a process that would "respond to changes in the economy, demographics and expected loss experience."

"It serves neither the insurance-buying public nor the insurance industry to have large increases followed by large decreases and then again followed by large increases," she said.

Bridge ordered torn down

WACO, Texas (AP) — The owner of a bridge built over the Brazos River has been ordered to tear down the 4-month-old, $100,000 structure and pay $88,000 in damages to the state for obstructing a public waterway.

A jury deliberated six and a half hours Wednesday before ruling that the bridge, built by sand & gravel company owner John Trice, obstructs a navigation route and trespasses on state property.

Trice testified in the six-day trial that he built the bridge to shorten the distance from his company, J&J Sand and Gravel, on the river's south side to markets on the river's northside.

The bridge is located on the Brazos River between the Patrick Community and Gholson.

Trice said he cannot remain in business without the bridge, which shortens the route from Waco to Dallas by 35 miles.

In his final summations to the jury, Assistant Attorney General John Richard Carter said the Brazos River has been reserved for the public since the first Spanish land grants were issued.

"It belongs to the state of Texas and the people of Texas," Carter said. "It's for all of our use. The bridge is not for everone's use."

The bridge is the river's only man-made obstruction between the Lake Whitney dam and Waco, he said.

"For air boaters, the Brazos is cut in-half."

After the verdict was read, around 7:15 p.m., Carter said the decision "preserved the public's right in its waters. The state won, and the people who use the Brazos River won."

Defense Attorney Charles McGregor left Waco about noon Wednesday for a court case in Austin without making a comment to the press, the Waco Tribune-Herald reported today.

In his defense, Trice said he received permission from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to alter the river bed as well as approval of the bridge's design before building it in March.

Carter said in his summation that, that was not true, that the state has never relinquished control of its waterways to the U.S. Army.

Voters protested the bridge's effects upon navigation to McLennan County commissioners in March after a media blitz that prompted the state's lawsuit and a second suit by the county, McGregor said.

The county is contending the bridge was built in violation of the 100-year flood plain ordinance.

Helicopter crash kills off-duty police pilot

DALLAS (AP) — An off-duty police pilot killed when his helicopter crashed in a residential area of southeast Dallas may have been trying to make an emergency landing, when the fatal accident occurred, authorities said.

Cpl. James A. Redmon, 41, of Kaufman, had completed a charter flight and was heading to his base Wednesday when the helicopter clipped a clump of trees and crashed, police spokesman Bob Shaw said. No other injuries were reported and no passengers were aboard.

The helicopter — owned by Telstar Transports, a firm operated by off-duty officers — crashed into a field near houses.

"It looked like he had some trouble going over the houses, and to avoid going down on top of houses, he headed for this field," Lt. J.E. Haley said.

The helicopter's rotor blade hung in trees near the crash site.

Redmon had already dropped off the passengers at Redbird Airport and was apparently headed back to his base in Lancaster, a Dallas suburb, when the helicopter crashed, Haley said.

The pilot apparently started experiencing "some kind of malfunction" with the aircraft, he said.

"I was working in my back yard. I saw the helicopter lose altitude," said Mark Julian, 29. "You could hear the engine cutting off."

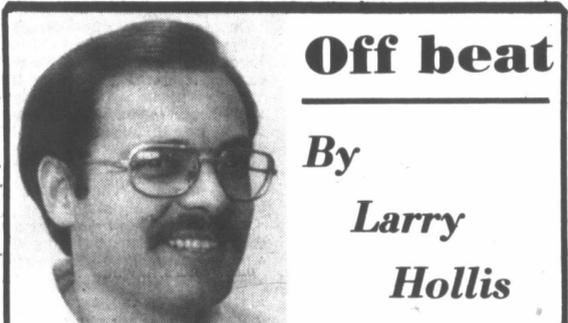

Redmon was thrown 10 yards and the helicopter broke into pieces, but there was no fire, Haley said.

Investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration were called to the scene.

The accident was reported to police at 11:41 a.m., police spokesman Ed Spencer said.

Redmon also was a major in the Air National Guard and had been on the Dallas Police Department Helicopter Section since 1972, Shaw said. He had had a helicopter instructor in the U.S. Army and flew helicopters for a year in Vietnam, he said.

Sgt. R.P. Sanders, a member of the city's helicopter force, said Redmon was a very good pilot.

Oh, those little frustrations

Americans held hostage - again - in a third-rate Middle Eastern nation. Hundreds died in an airplane crash. At least 20 killed in an explosion of a fireworks factory. Growing federal deficits, nuclear radiation, toxic wastes, starvation in Africa, widespread poverty.

Day after day the news media reports on these events, and most of us feel some frustration, anger, despair and other varying emotions. But most of us learn to handle feelings of such matters. Let's face it: most of those incidents, terrible as they are, don't affect us directly. They happen in distant places or to other people.

Most of us may get upset, even distressed by such news, but we don't get ulcers from them and we don't go around kicking our dogs to take out our frustrations because of repressed feelings of inadequacy and helplessness over such situations.

Oh, we talk about them and complain about them and vent sometimes rabid opinions about them. But after awhile, we go on to other feelings about other news events, really keeping a distance from such matters that don't impinge on us directly.

Instead, the things that really get to us are the small happenings and frustrations we encounter on a daily basis in town. Those little incidents are the ones likely to arouse our ire and cause us to go around in a blue funk or to kick our car doors for no apparent reason.

I for one know of a number of things more likely to cause me to get really angry and to feel frustrated - because though small, they affect me more directly than some distant though tragic event.

For example, I hate to go to a fast-food restaurant and have to ask for salt and pepper. Those spices of life should always be available on the tables, not begged for at the counter.

And when I order a hamburger or other item from the menu display, I'd like to know exactly what I'm getting. Does it come with mayonnaise (or salad dressing) or do I need to order it with mustard, as I prefer?

It's frustrating to me to have dressed up to go to some fancy banquet and then be served Cornish hens. I'm the type to eat even fried chicken with a fork. Tearing up a Cornish hen is not something to be accomplished gracefully without invariably getting some of it on your suit sleeves.

And what about getting stuck with a 50 cent piece for change at a store? There's little use for such a coin now since you will never find a vending machine anymore that will accept it. All you can do is find some other store quickly in which to palm it off to someone else.

Television has become a great source of frustration. Much as I might be interested in the weather, I hate to have my programs interrupted by weather bulletins about a possible tornado that might develop 150 miles away. Why don't they interrupt one of those commercials I've already seen 30 times that week? Or sound the beeper during their station identification? I already know what station I'm watching and don't need to be reminded of it.

Or why do I need to watch a segment of one of my favorite series for the third time because of reruns? Why don't they go back to making 39 programs for a season instead of only 22? Or why don't they just put on some new program for the summer instead of reruns I've already caught?

And I really don't like checking the TV schedule, turning to a channel and then finding out the network has put on another program instead of the one they promised. Or finding out the local station has decided to run Rev. Billy Bob's eternal revival in place of a rerun I do want to see because I missed it the first time around.

And one of these days I'm going to chase down some young kid who revs up his motorcycle as he drives by my house, the thunderous rumbles drowning out my favorite song.

I approach long-distance telephone calls very cautiously now. Will the long-distance access line be busy? Will the number I dialed go through directly to the correct number? Will I get a busy signal before I've finished dialing? Will my conversation be drowned out by static? It's almost easier just to write a letter.

And... well, I could go on. I'm sure all of us could go on with other little frustrations that can ruin an hour or a day.

But when we see another starving baby in Ethiopia, hear another mother sobbing over her child killed in Lebanon, watch newfilm of another search for victims lost in a disastrous air crash or listen to another hijacker's demands with a pistol against a hostage's head — Well, our little frustrations perhaps aren't so bad, are they?

Lucas enjoys celebrity status on death row

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Confessed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas, who recently has recanted his confessions to several hundred slayings, said he is enjoying his celebrity status on death row.

"He's a celebrity," said death row inmate John Michael Lamb, 27. "Everybody in the dayroom went to the windows to see what he looked like" when Lucas arrived.

Lucas was transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections' Ellis I Unit last week from the Williamson County Jail.

"All the guards are treating me pretty good and all the inmates know me," Lucas told the Houston Chronicle in the visiting room of the prison on Wednesday.

"It's 100 percent better than the county jail," he said. "I don't feel so isolated here and at least now I got a private room. I get out to the (recreation) yard and I mostly play dominoes."

The Dallas Morning News, which also interviewed Lucas, reported in today's editions that he expects to be set free.

Private school gets recognition

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A lingering enrollment and financial burdens may have clouded Kelly High School's image 14 years ago.

But today the school is being recognized as a top-flight private school.

The U.S. Department of Education recently recognized Kelly as one of 65 exemplary private schools in the nation.

"We were very honored," said Mary Gagne, who has been principal of Kelly for five years. "We have worked hard for this."

The school's survival and distinction is leading school officials on a cross-country tour to other private schools to explain the school's program.

"When I get out, I want to start a Christian halfway house for people who are poor and unfortunate and have no place to live," Lucas said.

Earlier this month Lucas' attorneys filed a $1.5 million lawsuit, alleging eight Texas law enforcement officers used drugs and threats to coerce the confessions.

"I had some fears about coming here because of what I said about law enforcement but everybody has been treating me good," Lucas said.

Lucas' attorney, Gary Richardson of Tulsa, was with Lucas for most of the press interviews Wednesday. Death row inmates are not usually allowed to have their attorneys present during visiting room interviews.

Lucas was used by law officers, Richardson said.

"Law enforcement would breathe a sigh of relief when Henry Lee Lucas came along and say 'I did it,' and they'd give him another hamburger and a milkshake," the lawyer said.

Ms. Gagne's travels will end in Washington, D.C. with an awards ceremony honoring her hard work at the White House.

The school's challenge, she says, has shifted from fighting creditors to meeting educational goals.

Democracy hasn't saved Argentina

Most Argentines cheered 18 months ago when their country returned to democracy after almost a decade of military rule. There is a lot less cheering in Argentina today and a lot more muttering about an economy in chaos. Democracy, it seems, is no proof against economic mismanagement.

Granted that President Raul Alfonsin faced some daunting economic problems the day he took office in December 1983. Argentina's foreign debt stood at something between $37 billion and $40 billion and the government, $1.6 billion in arrears on repayment, was poised on the brink of default. The inflation rate approached 400 percent a year and the Argentine economy had almost ceased to grow.

So how are things a year and a half later? The debt has swelled to $48 billion—the third largest foreign debt in the world—and only successive bailouts underwritten by the United States and the International Monetary Fund have kept Argentina from formally defaulting. The annual inflation rate has been racing at more than an incredible 1,000 percent. And unemployment continues to rise as business and investment confidence sag.

In a bid to head off economic collapse, the Alfonsin government recently abolished the Argentine peso, replacing it with a new currency known as the "austral" valued officially at 80 U.S. cents. President Alfonsin also announced a series of economic reforms intended to restore confidence and reignite economic growth. He pledged specifically to lift government controls and promote a free-market economy. That might have sounded more convincing if Alfonsin had not also slapped on wage and price controls, which are hardly conducive to free markets. Nor are they, in the long run at least, effective antidotes to inflation.

Argentina has had two overriding economic problems for as long as anyone can remember. Problem one is a lack of monetary discipline. Successive Argentine governments have not been able to resist the political lure of buying support by printing money. Problem two is statism, which in Argentina's case can be defined as too much state ownership and control over too large portions of the Argentine economy.

There is reason to believe that President Alfonsin recognized both of these problems when he took office. Sadly, he failed for political reasons to act accordingly. Unless he can do so now, the Argentine economy is heading for the rocks. And, with the Argentine military leaders increasingly dissatisfied with conditions, Argentina's democracy could be short-lived.

What about the Yuppies?

One hates to use a wormy cliché; but, OK: "Yuppie."

I raise the subject out of amusement. Our young upwardly mobile professionals have lately been taking their lumps in the media, now they no longer are new and exotic. Comic strips and columnists regularly unload on them.

The ostensible reason is Yuppie "materialism." The Yuppie, you see, is wedded to fame and success and Rolexes and German cars and closets full of objects I doubtless never had heard of. (Rolexes, indeed! My motto is: "If the Elgin pocket watch was good enough for Grandpa, it's good enough for me.")

This makes Yuppies objects of scorn and derision on the part of - notice this - people with little good otherwise to say about the freeing up of the American economy.

The greeding of America is an on-going theme over there in the liberal fever swamps.

Thus the columnist Richard Reeves unlimbers his howitzers and bangs away: "Go for it! What is it? Money. 'Go for it, America!' President Reagan said in his tax reform speech. We already were, with or without that bit of cheerleading. Reagan didn't invent the greed that is the dirty exhaust of the engines of capitalism - some would argue it is the fuel - but he sure does his best to make it seem more respectable." And so you get corporate crime and Yuppies.

No, Reagan didn't start it. "What Reagan did was to go too far in removing regulation on the business activities of people and institutions driven by greed or greedy superiors, and, at the same time, give the impression government regulators were enemies of the people."

Cut taxes and regulation, and all you do is encourage General Dynamics and Jake Butcher. Capitalism, capitalism, capitalism! Greed, greed, greed!

Baloney, baloney, baloney! Reeves and his brother pundits think they have made a theological discovery - that greed lurks in the human heart, just awaiting an invitation to jump out. It does. Nor is this news. "Avarice" is one of the Seven Deadly Sins: older even than America's oldest president.

Adam Smith, being a moral philosopher as well as an economic thinker, had no delusions about capitalists. He understood greed well enough. He also understood that, in the nature of things, men work most effectively when they pursue self-interest.

Smith's insight is the foundation stone of free enterprise. You let people alone insofar as possible, and they put their energies to work. What benefits them personally benefits society in larger ways, like more jobs and more innovative products, sold at steadily decreasing prices.

Greed, being a human vice, figures into whatever human beings do. But, you see, that includes every possible economic system - yea, even unto Marxism. Nobody, it turns out, not even Jake Butcher, is greedier than a Communist party functionary. To the functionaries, on account of their power, belong the spoils of the whole empire: fine cognacs, Black Sea villas, Western perfumes, the works.

But what about the Yuppies? Well, what about them? What are we supposed to do - expropriate them, just because they buy German cars that everyday working stiff can't afford?

Instead of clamping down on the economy, as some Yuppie critics would like, maybe society needs to strengthen its tenuous commitment to ethical teaching. It might be useful, for example, if pundits and intellectuals stopped denigrating religion - the greatest civilizing force of them all.

When you spend all your time bashing Baptist preachers, you overlook the essential content of the preacher's message, which, among other things, is Christian perfection: no lying, no stealing, that sort of socially useful thing.

You don't have to love Yuppies unless you want to, or the raw materialism that, sadly, drives so many of them. (I have some Anglican theologians I'd be happy to recommend to them.)

On the other hand, what do you gain by sneering at enterprise and endeavor? Are you trying to promote honesty, or more power for government? An enlarged sense of public mission or just enlargement of the public sector?

Greed indeed is one of the deadly sins. So - I hope, devoutly - is economic blather.

"He got that medal from the contras."

Decoding of rock lyrics

A group of Washington's most influential women have banded together for the purpose of obtaining a ratings system for records like the ratings system for movies.

They are greatly concerned about the explicitness of today's rock music, and they think it would be a great help to parents if records were marked, say, PG-13, so they could make sure their children aren't listening to musical versions of "Deep Throat."

The idea is worth trying, I suppose, but I don't think rating records and albums will keep kids from listening to explicit music.

Most children are much smarter than their parents think they are, and given enough time, they usually will figure out a way to do whatever it is their parents don't want them to do.

There was much concern about the kind of music young people were listening to when I was growing up. Elvis was looked upon as the devil's own Pied Piper. Listen to Elvis sing and watch him wiggle, young girls were warned, and you could wind up pregnant.

The more our parents tried to convince us not to listen to Elvis and other pioneers of rock 'n roll, the more we were determined to do just that.

The music then wasn't nearly as daring as it is today, but what our parents didn't know - and only now can it be revealed - was that some of the supposedly nonsensical phrases in our music were really coded messages that meant all sorts of things, all of them deliciously erotic for their time.

For instance, our parents didn't know that "gop-shoo-bop" really meant, "Can I come over to your house and look at your dad's Playboy magazine that he keeps in the drawer with his socks?"

I always was going around the house singing, "Ram-a-lam-a-ding-dong," which my parents thought was just some silly chorus I had picked up listening to "American Bandstand."

All teen-agers knew better. "Ram-a-lam-a-ding-dong" meant "I want to put a hickey on your neck at the drive-in Saturday night, baby."

There were many other such sounds that were secret communications between the musical groups and the kids who listened to them. For instance: "Sha-nah-nah" sounds harmless enough, but it was really an ancient tribal chant that meant "I want to kiss you so hard it'll knock the Clearasil right off your zits."

"Dip-dee-dip-dip." This really turned us on. Translated, it meant, "when they started putting back seats in cars, they had you in mind, my sweet little sixteen."

"Do-ron-run-dun-do-ron-run." I think it was the Shirelles who were always singing that. Translation: The first time I put on your letter sweater, I busted out all over."

"Ooo-eee-ooo-ah-ah-ting-tang-walla-walla-bing-bang." That wasn't a secret phrase at all. It was what the guy who was singing the song said when one of his guitar strings snapped and hit him square in his left eyeball.

If you had children during that era and you didn't have any idea your kids were listening to such suggestiveness in their music, don't feel like you were stupid.

We never let Dick Clark in on the secret, either. (c) 1985 Cowles Syndicate, Inc.

Terrorism demands strong defense

By U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter

Few of us, I suspect, truly appreciate the freedom and security we enjoy as Americans. But when terrorist acts like the recent hijacking of TWA flight 847 occur, we fully realize the value of democracy. At the same time, we realize that we are vulnerable to the irrational acts of terrorists abroad.

The discussion of what should be done in the Beirut situation is complicated, and highly emotional. We cannot afford to become a nation of isolationism. We must continue to interact in a global economy and a world whose borders have grown closer and closer together with advancing technology. We should not, however, tolerate heinous acts of terrorism that jeopardize innocent American lives.

I do not have the answers to questions of what should be done to combat terrorism. I do agree with the President's statement that "you can't give in to the terrorists without knowing that you're then sentencing someone else to go through the same agony and other people to also be victimized."

As a member of Congress, however, I do believe that Congress has a responsibility to make certain that the President has the ability to react as he sees fit. It is ironic that the House of Representatives is discussing the spending levels for the Department of Defense at the same time that over 40 Americans are being held hostage abroad as victims of terrorism.

I have said many times that the central role of a government is the protection of its people and the security of the nation. For that reason, I strongly disagree with the House of Representatives Budget resolution which would freeze defense spending at 1985 levels with no allowance for inflation increase.

The loss of defensive strength that would result from this type of budget would be irresponsible, and potentially dangerous. Research weapons systems and further development of the Strategic Defense Initiative would have to be severely cut.

In 1972, we signed the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty with the Soviets, which stated that one ABM system was allowed, surrounding the nation's capital. We do not have such a system. The Soviets, on the other hand, have one in Moscow, and began constructing another one in Siberia shortly after signing the treaty. This clear violation of the ABM treaty has not stopped. At the present time, the Soviet Union is constructing at least four other ABM systems.

In a world of international terrorism and disregard for international treaties, we cannot afford to reduce our efforts to build a strong national defense. The Budget passed by the House of Representatives would do just that. As a member of the House/Senate Budget Conference Committee, which is assigned the task of hammering out the differences between the budgets passed by the House and Senate, I will continue to fight for a strong defense.

Defendant expected to testify today

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Deborah Rae Tanner, charged with 19 counts of mail and wire fraud in an adoption scheme, was to be called to the stand today as the final defense witness, said her attorney, Martin Verhoef.

Prosecutors say 180 couples in Utah and 39 other states paid more than $750,000 to arrange adoptions of children from Latin America, but few children were placed.

The prosecution rested its case against the 36-year-old Willcox, Ariz., woman Wednesday after presenting testimony from about 35 witnesses in the trial expected to go to the jury by the end of the week.

The first defense witness, Felipe

Rivera, an attorney from Bountiful, Utah, testified Wednesday he referred some couples to Mrs. Tanner for adoption assistance in 1980 and 1981, but became "very uncomfortable" with a new arrangement of hers in 1981.

"She said the Mexican lawyers required all the money up front before they would initiate an adoption," said Rivera, who became concerned about prospective parents paying advance fees for children who might not be available.

The second defense witness, Don C. Cluff, 53, Chandler, Ariz., testified he was satisfied with Mrs.

Tanner's assistance in his adoption of two Mexican boys in 1983.

Another witness subpoenaed by the defense, Maria Carmona, Fort Bliss, Texas, was to have testified concerning business dealings of her former husband, Bryan Hall of El Paso, with Mrs. Tanner, but did not appear.

Hall pleaded guilty to two charges and was sentenced to three years in prison in exchange for his testimony in her trial.

Mrs. Carmona's husband, Reynaldo Carmona, told the jury Wednesday his wife is unreachable in Mexico, "visiting a very sick aunt."

Out of the presence of the jury, Carmona told the court that Hall, after giving his own testimony, contacted him and threatened Mrs. Carmona to discourage her from testifying.

"She was very worried about what he would do," said Carmona. Judge Bruce S. Jenkins ruled Carmona's account of the threat was not admissible as evidence.

Terry Tanner, former husband of Mrs. Tanner, was subpoenaed by the defense, but his attorney, Joseph Fatton, said his client would exercise his Fifth Amendment right of refusal to incriminate himself.

Terry Tanner originally was charged with Mrs. Tanner, but prosecutors dropped the charges because they said his alleged role in the adoption network was minimal.

Also charged in the indictment was Lorenzo Prospero Arzola, an attorney from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, who has not been arrested.

Earlier, Judy Dixon, a former aide to Mrs. Tanner in Willcox, testified Mrs. Tanner decided to get out of the adoption business in late 1983 because "it was getting too much for her to handle."

Vicky Lynn Duke Price, Utah, testified she paid more than $5,000 to Mrs. Tanner's associates in 1982 and 1983, hoping to adopt two toddlers from Mexico.

Pine beetle levels approach 1976 levels

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Infestation by the southern pine beetle statewide is worsening and may surpass the record infestations of 1976, a forest service official said.

"There has been considerable publicity lately about southern pine beetle control in the five new wilderness areas in Texas' national forests," said Bruce R. Miles, director of the Texas Forest Service. "But the problem is much bigger than that."

There beetle infestations in all of the five wilderness areas, and much of East Texas, Miles said Tuesday.

Destruction caused by these insects is not limited to the forests. They are also destroying valuable yard pines in Houston, Beaumont and other urban areas," he said.

The beetle outbreak is worst in Southeast Texas. In addition, the Alabama-Coushatta Indian Reservation in Polk County and all seven ranger districts in the four national forests in Texas have beetle infestations, Miles said.

Beetles are also killing timber owned by private individuals and forest industries, according to the state forester.

By June 20, a total of 8,718 beetle "spots" had been detected on national, state, industrial and other private lands, Miles said. Spots are groups of 10 or more infested trees.

A month ago, there was a cumulative total of 4,400 spots, he said, amounting to an additional 4,318 infestations in a single month.

"Just like a cancer or a fire, southern pine beetle infestations are easier to successfully treat when they are small," Miles said.

In 1976, a total of 41,000 acres of pine timber valued at $17 million was killed by pine beetles.

The loss was equal to 215,128 cords of pulpwood, enough raw material to make facial tissue for a year for nearly 102 million people, or the daily newspapers read by 7.3 million people in a year.

In addition to the 1976 pulpwood loss, the beetles killed 213,552,000 board feet of sawtimber, or enough lumber to build 18,966 average size homes.

"Dramatic forest fires have destroyed hundreds of thousands of acres of timber in the southeastern United States this spring and are still raging in Florida. But untold billions of beetles, are silently razing the majestic pine forests in Southeast Texas," Miles said.

Ag department to coordinate study

AUSTIN (AP) — A national organization has chosen Texas for a comprehensive study of rural water problems, and state agriculture officials say many of those troubles have been ignored for a long time.

"To most of us in Texas, getting a clear, clean glass of water simply means turning on the tap. But over 1 1/2 million Texas farmers, ranchers, farmworkers and other rural residents still cannot take their water quality for granted," said Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

Hightower will head a 24-member task force overseeing the water study.

The study was announced Wednesday by Kathi Stanley, deputy director of the National Demonstration Water Project Inc., a Washington-based organization which has helped numerous rural areas develop and maintain water supply systems.

Hightower said an Environmental Protection Agency study indicated that two-thirds of rural water sources may be contaminated at levels greater than federal standards.

He said the task force would seek legislative and administrative steps to make certain the 1 1/2 million rural Texans have access to quality water supplies.

As Texas has struggled with explosive growth, Hightower said, rural water quality problems appear to have been ignored.

"In planning for the future, we have forgotten that 10 percent of our population must still get its drinking water from individual wells."

For these 1 1/2 million people, there currently is no government agency — state or federal — which is responsible for monitoring or improving the quality of their water.

Hightower cited several examples of the seriousness of water quality problems in the state, including:

— A state Health Department official says at least half the approximately 3,000 water systems serving fewer than 500 people fail to meet minimum health standards each year.

— Up to 40 percent of residences served by independent wells or small water systems may have bacteria levels greater than national standards. Nearly 2 percent of these drinking water systems are in violation of standards for swimming or water skiing.

— In 1982, the health department said 51 of 86 public water systems in non-compliance because of high nitrate levels were located in rural areas.

— In 71 counties, 5 percent or more of all households still lack indoor bathrooms.

The Texas Rural Water Task Force and its study will cost $150,000.

Missing teen-age girl found slain

DALLAS (AP) — The body of a teen-age girl who disappeared from a doughnut shop last weekend was found stabbed to death beside a dirt road about 10 miles away, authorities said.

A construction worker found the nude, decomposed body of Jennifer Day, 14, about 7:15 a.m. Wednesday in the suburb of Plano.

Miss Day died of multiple stab wounds to the neck, Plano Justice of the Peace Tom Kelly said.

She was identified through dental records by the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office, Kelly said.

Her body was found near the site of a residential subdivision that is under construction, police said.

An autopsy was unable to determine if the girl had been sexually molested, Dallas police Lt. David Clary said.

Miss Day had been missing since she after opening the doughnut shop early Sunday morning.

"The (construction) workers came out Monday and Tuesday, but it was too muddy to work so they left," he said.

Store manager Joe Hight told Dallas police investigators that he talked to Miss Day shortly after she opened Preston Road Donuts about 5:30 a.m. Sunday to begin cleaning, stocking display cases and waiting on customers.

She was reported missing at about 6:30 a.m. when a customer found the store unattended.

Police later found the girl's purse and jewelry in the store and her apron on the floor, but discovered no signs of a struggle. No money was missing from the cash register, and two sales had been recorded.

A roofing worker across the street from the shop said he saw a man driving a white car with a blond girl in the passenger seat speed away from the shop area.

Police said the car sighted is believed to be a white 1977 General Motors Corp. model, possibly a Pontiac Catalina or Le Mans.

Miss Day had just finished the eighth grade at St. Rita School and was to enroll in Ursuline Academy in the fall.

Dear Abby

Wife worries that husband's eyes behold too much beauty

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married less than a year and we really do love each other, but whenever we are out in public he "eyes" every attractive woman he sees. He's very handsome, and of course these women look back at him, which irritates me. I feel unattractive and inferior, although I know I'm not. We have talked endlessly about this. He says it's "normal" and I am nuts.

Abby, I don't check out other men. In restaurants, his eyes are everywhere but on me. When we're shopping his head is always turning to get a better look at some pretty woman. He blames my attitude on the fact that my mother divorced my father because he was a girl-watcher and philanderer.

Do other women feel this way? What do they do? Can my husband change? Should he? Should I try to change? If so, how? I hate myself for hating my husband for making me so miserable. And finally, does girl-watching go hand-in-hand with infidelity? He's never been unfaithful as far as I know.

If you advise counseling, where can I go if I can't afford a psychologist once a week at $50 an hour? Please help me. Except for this one fault, he's a wonderful man, but I can't live like this.

WATCHING HIM WATCHING HER

DEAR WATCHING: A man who eyes strange women in a way that causes them to look back is either consciously or unconsciously sending her a message.

I agree, you can't live like that, nor should you.

Do other women feel this way? Yes. What do they do? Some of them go on making themselves (and their husbands) miserable, but the smart ones realize that they can't change anyone except themselves, so they contact a local mental health facility and arrange for low-cost counseling at a price they can afford to pay.

Also, some husbands can—and do—change, but not those who insist that girl-watching is "natural" and their wives are "nuts" to resent it.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing for all the tea lovers and hope the restaurant owners will take note.

Most restaurants offer as many refills as a coffee drinker wishes, but just try to get a refill of a cup of hot tea—or glass of iced tea—and see what happens.

The tea drinker usually gets one tea bag with his tea, and if he wants to reuse the tea bag for a second cup he must ask for more water, which he eventually gets, but he can't expect a second tea bag at no charge. I could bring my own tea bags and ask for water, but that would look tacky.

Maybe it's time for another Boston Tea Party.

TEA LOVER

DEAR TEA LOVER: I think your suggestion is a good one, and not at all "tacky." Since tea bags take up practically no space, carry a spare in your purse or wallet.

You have my blessing. And if you get hassled, have your tea—and my sympathy.

Older women opt for that special flair

By Florence De Santis

NEW YORK (NEA) — Today about 30 million American women are 50 or over and some 40 percent of them are members of the work force. Fashion is as much a part of their lives as it was when they were younger. If they live in an adult community, fashion can be especially important.

Adult communities, once erroneously labeled "retirement" centers, seem to be hotbeds of fashion-conscious, working older women. Some, like Leisure Village West in Manchester Township, N.J., and Harbor's Edge in Del Ray Beach, Fla., take advantage of nearby shopping malls, with fashion store branches and specialty shops. Other locations, such as Rosmore Leisure World in Silver Spring, Md., and Leisure World in Laguna Hills, Calif., plan their own fashion facilities.

A pioneer in catering to the fashion needs of this often-neglected group of women is the twin Arizona development of Sun City and Sun City West. With some 25,000 active women 50 and over, there are no less than 12 shopping centers, which include a wide variety of fashion stores.

"It's not true that mature women wear nothing but polyester pantsuits," says Ann Card, manager of Draper's, a fashion mini-department store. "We carry something for everyone."

Arizona adult communities include an unusually broad mix of population, unlike New Jersey's Leisure Village West, where most residents are from the surrounding area. The fashion range in Sun City reflects regional tastes rather than age.

"There's no such thing as dressing for age," says Jan Gordon, owner of the boutique called Design Expressions.

"In fact, older women often have more fashion nerve than the young, who look trendy only when every other young person does. The mature woman doesn't bother with ideas of what's correct. She is more concerned about how she looks and feels in a certain outfit."

Often her own designer, Jan Gordon shops far and wide for her avant-garde boutique. Local talents, or those she ferrets out in places such as Wichita, Kans., create her embroidered and hand-painted denim skirts, her sweaters knit with fur trims and such evening costumes as a two-piece beige homespun skirt and top with a capelet of pink and beige yarn layers.

Such fashions are obviously not for the larger figure. Are most mature women large? Ann Card, who caters to the broadest segment of the local Sun City population, says "No more than the general population. In fact, we have a petite department, and the large-size section is about the same size as the petite. Like most women, over-50s run 6 to 14."

With Phoenix nearby and Scottsdale about 40 miles away, Sun City women with "name designer" tastes can find Bill Blass and Oscar de la Renta styles easily.

It's hard to say where the idea started that mature women aren't fashion customers. All high-fashion designers know that their expensive clothes go mostly to mature customers — they've got the money to spend.

FOR WATCHING a golf course match, resident Thelma Ward chooses a design from local fashion store, Draper's, in Sun City, Ariz. The gray-and-white culotte outfit is from Setiage by Wilroy, with red blouse.

Sun City even uses local residents as models. They're attractive and perfect size 8s.

Firm upper arms

Even thin arms can develop a flabby look in maturity. Being active in sports can help prevent the muscle decline that causes this look.

So can simple exercise. Do this three or more times daily. With elbows out, press palms together in front of chest, pushing against each other until you feel tension in upper arm muscles.

Push for steady count of 6 seconds, relax for 4 seconds, repeat. Do five times a session.

Puffy under eyes

Puffiness beneath the eyes in youth is caused by either heredity or some physical condition. When hereditary, it usually means there are fat pads beneath the skin. These can be removed surgically. Physical causes include alcohol, drugs, too little sleep, or inflammation from some eye condition.

In all cases, hereditary or physical, check a doctor, preferably a dermatologist, about constantly puffy eyes.

Sunny climates

Women who move to the Southwest often think the dry climate causes the appearance of complexion lines they hadn't seen before.

While dryness may be a partial cause, the sun is by far the more dangerous cause of skin aging to those living in the Sun Belt.

To combat early skin aging, use creams with sunblock ingredients, restrict tanning and shade the face with brimmed sports caps or straw hats when in the sun. Many will want to wear long-sleeved shirts and also protect the hands to avoid signs of aging.

Extra complexion care must be taken to avoid leathery, lined skin.

"Shrinking" pores

Large pores are a natural skin condition, particularly for those with oily skin.

Pores are structural and cannot be shrunk. To make them less conspicuous, use a grainy cleanser two or three times a week.

Hugh Smith

Hugh Smith is from Joshua, Texas. At the age of 12, he was called to preach but did not respond. Instead, he set his goal to be a fighter pilot. In 1962 he entered the US Air Force and began his training. During his Air Force career, he received many medals for valor and gallantry in combat, including the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Silver Star. To Hugh, however, the greatest honor is to be a child of God.

While in England and Viet Nam, Hugh experienced having the same dream seven times. During his 7th month in Viet Nam, on his 7th penetration in North Viet Nam, this dream became a reality. When he later awakened from sleep after flying the mission, he realized that this dream was from God and that there was more to the Hugh Smith-God relationship than he had previously known. Becoming dissatisfied with his career, and coming to the conclusion that there had to be more to life than what he had experienced, he resigned his regular commission with the Air Force and began flying for Braniff International.

While attending UTA of Arlington, in preparation for medical school, he began to seek God for some answers to the problems he was having with his grades and finances. He asked God to send him a flesh and blood man who spoke English, that could tell him what he needed to know. In a few weeks, the man came. He received the baptism in the Holy Spirit and understanding of the Word of God. By applying the principles of the Word of God he was able to complete his fall and spring semesters on the Dean's list.

For the next two years he drew upon the wisdom of God and received A's and B's in Trig./algebra, chemistry, physics, and biology.

In 1972 the Hugh Smith Evangelistic Association was formed. Since that time, Hugh has ministered with Kenneth Cope, and in campmeetings and has appeared several times on the 700 Club, the PTL Club, Trinity Broadcasting, FGBMFT Good News, Daystar and the Something Beautiful Program.

One of the most outstanding miracles that has ever happened in Hugh's ministry took place in his own life. While pulling the prop through during the pre-flight of his plane, the engine fired which resulted in the propeller almost cutting off his nose. He was knocked to the pavement and without any conscious effort, began to confess God's Word concerning his healing. The following day, he flew to South Dakota to begin a seminar. He preached twice a day as scheduled and three additional times as well.

Hugh shares the Word in a very down to earth and humorous fashion. He has authored several books and has a large teaching tape ministry.

SPEAKS TO CONVENTION — You don't burn toxic wastes on the Gulf of Mexico and you don't store nuclear wastes on a watershed, Gov. ## Prison guards investigated in inmate's stabbing death

ROSHARON, Texas (AP) — Prison authorities are investigating whether some guards were involved in a recent stabbing death of an inmate at a high-security recreation yard at the Texas Department of Corrections' Darrington Unit.

"There'll probably be some dismissals or charges filed. Some guards either didn't follow procedure or actually took the weapons out (to the yard)," Darrington Warden Tim West said.

Brian Mimier, 26, was killed Monday, becoming the 14th Texas prison inmate killed this year. Another 140 prisoners have been stabbed at the TDC's 27 units.

"We're going to find out what security problems we have down there. Some people are either going to bite the bullet or go work somewhere else. If we find out that people are just lazy and there is a breach in security, they're out," Ron Angelone, regional director for the southern units, said Tuesday.

Mimier was attacked by two inmates wielding sharpened pieces of metal that prison officials now believe were taken into the recreation yard by guards or inmates who weren't searched properly.

"I know that they're under a lot of pressure — handling inmates who would kill their own mother for fun. But we're paying them money to do a job," Angelone said.

Mimier, serving 20 years for killing his grandparents in Rusk County in 1978 and nine years for escaping from Darrington in April 1984, was stabbed 16 times in the chest, neck and face Monday evening, officials said.

Another weapon made of plexiglass was thrown near Mimier's body to make it appear as if the stabbing was in self defense, West said.

A specific motive has not been established, but officials suspect the killing is gang-related.

Mimier was a member of the Universal Life Church, which is affiliated with the Aryan Nation, a group that has been linked to the Aryan Brotherhood, a racist white inmate gang, according to officials.

Reagan's patience runs out

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who last week described himself as frustrated but willing to wait out the Shiite Moslems holding Americans hostage in Beirut, is being portrayed this week as a man losing his patience.

"He wants some action," one aide said privately in explaining Reagan's order for a list of options the president might take to put pressure on the Lebanese. "He wants something done now."

But Reagan, by most accounts, was handling the hostage crisis with more aplomb than some of his aides, who ached for relief from an unfamiliar sense of impotence.

"I just can't imagine how the Carter people stood it for 444 days," said one presidential assistant, comparing the current situation to the Iranian hostage crisis that ended the day Reagan succeeded Jimmy Carter as president in January 1981.

The aide, speaking with the understanding he would not be identified, was expressing his exasperation at the end of an afternoon trying unsuccessfully to convince a hostage's wife the White House was doing all it could to keep her informed of efforts to free her husband.

It had been less than two weeks since the June 14 hijacking of TWA Flight 847, but already, he said, officials felt an intense pressure to do something — anything — to end the standoff.

One official said the administration was beginning to alter its initial assessment that the case was one in which a few radical hijackers could be persuaded by their more rational leaders to release the men still in custody.

"It now appears that the situation is being manipulated by those who oppose us in the Middle East and have made us targets in the past," the source said, apparently referring to the Soviet-supplied Syrian government and perhaps the fundamentalist Moslem rulers of Iran. "If the hostages were Syrians and (Syrian President Hafez) Assad wanted them out, they'd be out by now," the official said, expressing some skepticism that the Syrians are, as they have said, doing all they can to win the release of the American captives.

While the United States is seeking to increase pressure on Syria and other Arab nations to push for the hostages' release, the official said administration spokesmen are trying not to leave the impression that Reagan plans a retaliatory strike as soon as he gets the Americans home safely.

Such action, or the threat of it, might provide an incentive for the captors to hold onto at least some of the hostages as protection against an attack, the official observed.

Lawsuit on police search before jury

TYLER, Texas (AP) — After nine weeks, the fate of a $3 million lawsuit filed by a Texarkana insurance man against area law enforcement officers has been turned over to a federal jury.

A three-man, three-woman jury got the case at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday, and was instructed by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice to return at 9 a.m. today to begin their deliberations.

Louisiana drinking age bill apparently is dead

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A proposed law hiking the legal drinking age to 21 in Louisiana is apparently dead for this session of the Louisiana Legislature — shelved by the House of Representatives.

Louisiana is one of three states where 18 year olds can buy alcohol legally. Hawaii and Vermont also allow 18 year olds to legally drink.

A move to increase the drinking age to 21 in Vermont was killed by that state's legislature a few weeks ago.

The Louisiana bill by Rep. Jon Johnson, D-New Orleans, had backing from safety council officials and Mothers Against Drunk Driving, as a means to reduce injuries and fatalities on highways.

Those organizations say that those 18 to 21 account for 7 percent of the state's drivers but are involved in 14 percent of the accidents where alcohol plays a factor.

In addition, Congress says that any states not enacting such laws by fiscal 1987 will lose a portion of their highway funds for two years.

A special study committee chaired by Sen. Oswald DeCuir of New Iberia heard testimony earlier this year that Louisiana would lose more money by passing such a law because of the loss of alcohol and beer taxes and the impact on the industry.

Reps. Quentin Dastugue, R-Metairie, and Robert Adley, D-Bossier Itly, led the opposition during Wednesday's debate.

"I look at the DWI arrests in the paper here every day," said Dastugue. "Out of the last 18 days, only one person out of over 200 was in the age bracket you're getting at. The highest percentage of DWIs in the nation is 20 to 24. The second highest is 60 to 64. Why don't we raise the drinking age to 65, Mr. Johnson?"

"When you turn 18 you can do all kinds of things. You can be a member of the Legislature. You could be a member of this august body and not be able to drink. You can be elected but Mr. Johnson doesn't think you have enough sense to be able to drink..."

Adley said the Legislature still has time to deal with the problem before facing the loss of federal funds.

The congressional order is under attack in the courts.

"I don't think the federal government has got a right to put a pricetag on Democracy in this country," said Adley.

Much more than simply personal reward will come to you this year through your own creative effort. When you are inspired by a bright idea, act upon it immediately.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't make financial impositions today on someone you once helped in a small way. He will resent your using this type of unfair leverage. Major changes are ahead for Cancer in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today you might take the course of least resistance and allow a relative or in-law to pressure you into doing something you'd rather not. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will be judged more severely than usual today for your mistakes. To avoid embarrassing developments, think your actions through carefully.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It will prove wisest at this time to clear up old obligations before assuming any new ones. You might not have enough financial spread for both.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Avoid tearing up today with an individual who always opposes your way of doing things. He may try to put a damper on your efforts once again.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Strive to be realistic about issues that confront you today. Don't pretend serious matters will rectify themselves without your taking appropriate action.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will later have feelings of remorse if you are overly generous with a friend today who doesn't truly deserve it. Be kind, but not ridiculous.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In competitive situations today, bank more heavily on your common sense than chance. The best that Lady Luck may offer you is second place.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Rather than going along with the suggestions of someone you're peeved with, you might reject this person's ideas and act against your best interests.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Unless you are extremely prudent and cautious in joint ventures today, the larger slice of out-of-pocket costs may fall to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may have difficulty making major decisions today because of a tendency to overemphasize both the pros and the cons. You could remain on dead center, doing nothing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) It is likely that you'll be saddled with more responsibilities than you can handle today if you mingle with people who can't fend for themselves.

Comics attract not just kids, but also the adult collectors

By MICHELLE STEIN
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Move over, Archie and Veronica. Comics aren't just for kids any more.

Companies that gave kids of the 1930s and '40s adventures such as "Superman" and "Captain Marvel" now produce flashier funnies designed for an older — and wealthier — generation.

"There's no money in selling comic books for kids," said Trip Reynolds, 31, of Arlington, a comic book collector for 25 years. "Adults are the serious collectors."

Local experts estimate that between 50 percent and 60 percent of all comic books are purchased by people aged 15 to 25. The majority of those readers are men.

"Ninety percent of all comic books on the market today are super hero," said Craig Miller, 25, manager of Lone Star Comics in Arlington. "There aren't too many women interested in super hero comics."

Not only are more adults buying comics, more adults are collecting comics. Reynolds and Craig both said they have thousands of comic books in their private collections — such as "The X-Men," "Tales of the Teen Titans" and "Six From Sirius."

"I buy everything that comes in," said Tim Nolen, a comic book collector for 10 years and a back-issue employee at Lone Star Comics. "We usually get 10 to 20 titles (comic books) each week."

Nolen, 21, said he spends "a fair amount of my day" with his head buried in a comic book. Some collectors, like Miller, only read their favorite comics but buy other books for their collections.

"If I've been collecting a certain title since it started, I'll keep buying the title, even if the story has gotten boring," Miller said.

At 75 cents a shot for most titles, comic books still are cheap entertainment — except for the serious collector. In 1983, Reynolds said he spent $1,368.46 — or about $26 a week — on comics. Miller estimates that most serious collectors that visit Lone Star Comics spend between $50 and $100 a month.

Most of those comic books are read once or not at all, sheathed in plastic and stored in cardboard boxes, Miller said.

"I keep them for the fun of it," Miller said. "I like to look through them... look at old issues."

There is money to be made in comic book collecting. Comic books that are rare and in mint condition — like the first issue of a popular series — can be sold for several hundred dollars, Miller said.

Most serious collectors, however, aren't interested in selling.

"Since comic book collecting became popular again (in the early 1960s), old comic books have been surfacing," Miller said. "Most of my comic books won't be worth a lot of money for some time."

According to comic book fans, today's super hero is nothing like his predecessor. The super hero is "easy to identify with" and deals with "real life" problems, Reynolds said.

COMICS NO LONGER FOR KIDS — Craig Miller, owner of Lone Star Comics in Fort Worth, poses with some of his wares. Companies that made comics for kids are now catering to the older, and wealthier generation — adults. (AP Laserphoto)

Video peace messages recorded for Soviets

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Sometime later this year, if all goes as planned, the good citizens of Novokuznetska, Siberia, are going to sit down in front of a video cassette recorder, slap in a tape and hear good tidings from a faraway place called Tucson.

"Hi. My name is Bill and I would really like to send you the spirit of peace straight from my heart to yours," one smiling Tucsonan will tell them.

"Hello," another Tucsonan will say from the video screen. "My name is Bill Preib. I just want to say that nobody wants war — and everybody wants peace."

"I love you," a Tucson woman will inform the Russians, speaking their native tongue with a heavy American accent.

The spontaneous messages, a project of the Tucson-Novokuznetska Friendship Project, were recorded on videotape recently at a "Peace Fair" in Reid Park.

People attending the Tucson Peace Center's fair, which featured displays by numerous human rights and pacifist organizations, were invited to "Speak Your Peace to the Soviets on Video." They also were invited to pay $3 for doing so.

Anne Goldman, a member of the Friendship Project, said the 80-minute videotape is to be sent, along with a video recorder, to Tucson's sister city in the Soviet Union in an effort to let the Russians know that "we want peace, and we need to work together to get a world that works."

Proceeds from the participation fees will be used to pay travel expenses for students from Tucson and Novokuznetska to visit their respective sister cities, Goldman said.

Hannis Latham, using donated equipment and donating his services as a cameraman, spent a Saturday afternoon recording the goodwill messages against the spring-green and sunny backdrop of the park.

"It's not really what they say, but how they say it," explained Latham, as he prepared to shoot a segment of some Tucson high school students singing in Russian. "It's their faces, their eyes, their expressions. These carry the message."

"We aren't trying to tell them (the Soviets) that our way is better. We just want to give them a 'hit' of Americans, and we think that the videotape is a beautiful way of doing that," he added.

Four University High School students, all holding kittens, and their guitar-playing Russian teacher, Cindy Seaborg, went before the camera.

The students — Susan Moine, Laurel Lamb, Margaret McClelland and Carmi Turchick — started off with a Russian rendition of "Old McDonald." They went on to sing a Russian folk song called "The Dream of Stenka Razin."

Why the kittens? Laurel Lamb explained: "Because kittens speak Russian. They say 'Meer,' and meer means 'peace' in Russian. It also means 'world.'"

On another segment of tape, a Tucson couple wished their Soviet "neighbors" a life of peace, and invited them to visit Tucson.

Connors wins Wimbledon opener, Wilander shocked

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "It takes more than just playing good tennis to win this tournament," said Jimmy Connors, a three-time winner of the Wimbledon tennis championship. "You have to learn to cope with the waiting around."

Connors should know, having waited three days because of the rain to play his first-round match against Sweden's Stefan Simonsson. The 32-year-old American won in straight sets.

After playing late into the night on Wednesday, Connors was off today, and it was Hana Mandlikova's turn to make her first appearance in this year's championships.

Mandlikova was scheduled to be first up on center court against fellow Czechoslovakian Iva Budarova. That match was to be followed by the resumption of a first-round men's meeting between Boris Becker of West Germany and America's Hank Pfister. Becker led 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 2-2 when the match was halted because of darkness Wednesday night.

After the conclusion of that match, Kevin Curren was due to face Larry Stefanki, followed by the first appearance of Chris Evert Lloyd, who was matched against fellow American Mary Lou Piatek.

On court No. 1, Miloslav Mecir, the 12th-seeded Czechoslovakian, was scheduled to open against Tom Gullikson, with Annabel Croft of Britain playing next against Hu Na, the Chinese-born player who defected to the United States in 1982.

Despite the weather problems, Buzzer Hadingham, chairman of the All England club, said there were no plans to change Wimbledon from a grass court event to another surface. Wimbledon wouldn't be the same if not played on the hallowed grass, he said.

Connors did not agree. "I don't think that losing its surface would hurt Wimbledon at all," he said. "It will always have the same magic no matter what surface it's played on."

Mats Wilander, the No. 4 seed from Sweden, found the Wimbledon grass too tough to handle in his first-round match on Wednesday.

Wilander, who was going for the Grand Slam after winning the Australian and French championships, was no match for big-hitting Slobodan Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia and tumbled out in the first big upset of the tournament.

Zivojinovic, ranked 77th in the world, won 6-2, 5-7, 7-5, 6-0 in his first-ever match at Wimbledon.

Also ousted was 10th-seeded Aaron Krickstein, a baseliner like Wilander, who fell 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, 6-4 to fellow American Bud Schultz.

The third seed to go out was Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden in the first round of the women's singles. She lost to America's Barbara Potter in straight sets.

Two other Swedes, both men, made it through to the second round. Anders Jarryd edged Claudio Panatta in the fifth set while Stefan Edberg crushed Peter Doohan of Australia in three straight.

Other men's seeds to advance were Americans Johan Kriek, No. 9; Eliot Teltscher, 13th; and Tim Mayotte, plus France's Yannick Noah.

Slumping Astros lose in extra innings

Astros' pitcher Mike Scott steals second as Braves' shortstop Rafael Ramirez awaits the throw.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Atlanta Braves have won three straight games in their attempt to move up in the National League West, where they now trail the San Diego Padres by 10½ games.

The Braves' latest victory was a 3-1 decision over the Houston Astros in 11 innings Wednesday night and improved their record to 31-38.

Relief pitcher Jeff Dedmon improved his record to 4-0, while Albert Hall — who had only two hits in his 20 previous at-bats as a pinch hitter — slammed a triple that scored Glenn Hubbard with what proved to be the winning run in the 11th.

The teams had been tied at 1-1 since the second inning.

Dedmon pitched two innings of scoreless relief as his ERA was reduced to 1.84. Bruce Sutter came on in relief to finish the 11th-inning and notch his 13th save.

"My sinker was my best pitch, and it's been sinking real well lately," Dedmon said. "We want to get a streak going and make up some ground before the all-star break (July 16). When you're getting good hitting, pitching and defense, those are the things needed to build momentum."

Dedmon was the third of four Atlanta bullpen performers, who worked eight innings allowing only three hits. Dedmon gave up one of the hits in his two innings. He also struck out two and walked one.

Besides Hall's triple, Atlanta's offense consisted of Bob Horner's second-inning homerun to left field off Houston starter Mike Scott, who pitched nine innings and gave up only three hits.

"Scott hung the ball up in the strike zone exactly where a pitcher doesn't want it," Horner said about his homerun.

Invaders top-seeded team in USFL playoffs

By the Associated Press

Though they lost more games this season than they did in their first two years combined, the Baltimore Stars may be the team to fear when the United States Football League playoffs start this weekend.

The defending USFL champion Stars, 35-6 during their first two years in Philadelphia, finished this season at 10-7-1 and are seeded sixth among the league's eight playoff teams. But they've won five of their last six games, heading into their playoff opener next Monday at New Jersey, and seem to have regained their missing offense.

"We're playing better than we have all year," said Coach Jim Mora. "If we are peaking, we couldn't do it at a better time."

The USFL playoff format was set Monday night when Oakland beat Houston, 31-21, in the league's final regular-season game.

The seventh-seeded Gamblers, without injured quarterback Jim Kelley, will open the quarterfinal round Saturday at second-seeded Birmingham. Third-seeded Denver will be at fifth-seeded Memphis and eighth-seeded Tampa Bay will play at top-seeded Oakland Sunday, followed by Monday night's contest between the fourth-seeded Generals and the sixth-seeded Stars.

But the real seedings for the playoffs have more to do with attendance than records for the financially troubled USFL, which dropped from an average attendance of 27,115 in 1984 to 24,452 this year. League officials say they want to "maximize" the potential revenue from the playoffs by drawing larger crowds.

Denver, for example, is seeded third and Memphis fifth because Denver qualified for the playoffs by finishing second in the Western Conference and Memphis qualified as a wild-card team from the East. However, the Gold averaged only 14,519 fans per game compared with 30,941 for the Showboats, so their game will be at Memphis' Liberty Bowl.

Moreover, if Oakland wins Sunday, it will be on the road for its second game despite a 13-4-1 record that was the league's best, because baseball's A's will be playing in the Oakland Coliseum.

If the four top seeds win, the Invaders would play at New Jersey, which despite its fourth-place finish could spend the entire playoffs at home — the championship game will be played on its home field at Giants Stadium.

New Jersey's biggest problem may be holding off the resurgent

Stars, whose offense has flourished in the last quarter of the season to augment a defense that allowed the fewest points in the league. The two teams split this season — the Stars winning 29-9 at College Park, Md.; the Generals winning 10-3 at Giants Stadium.

"Earlier in the season, I was worried about making the playoffs," Mora said. "The fact that we started so slowly made every game a pressure game. But we seem to be scoring now and are healthier on offense than we've been all season."

Wiggins to join Orioles

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pending final approval from league and union officials, Padres second baseman Alan Wiggins was on his way to joining the Baltimore Orioles under terms of a deal struck between the teams, according to Padres president Ballard Smith.

Smith said Wednesday that the Padres agreed to be liable through 1987 for half of Wiggins' four-year, $2.8 million contract should he have a relapse of the drug problems that led to his admittance in April to a rehabilitation center.

Smith said Wiggins would also forfeit one-third of the remaining value of his contract, should he suffer a relapse.

"We have no obligation the last year of his contract (1988)," Smith said.

The American and National League offices, the Major League

Players Association, and baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth must still agree to the transaction, which reportedly would give the Padres two of Baltimore's minor league players.

Smith, however, said that report, which appeared Wednesday in The Los Angeles Times, was inaccurate. He refused to provide additional details of the deal.

Orioles General Manager Hank Peters said he would issue a statement today.

Wiggins, 27, signed a four-year, $2.8 million guaranteed contract with San Diego over the winter and was the Padres' starting second baseman and leadoff hitter until suffering a relapse of his cocaine dependency.

Wiggins was discharged from a drug treatment facility May 26 after undergoing a month of in-patient therapy.

Gamblers close to being sold

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League is "very close" to being sold "within the next week or so" says team part owner Jerry Argovitz.

"All I know right now is that I'm dealing with one major individual, and I can't say what he has in mind," Argovitz said.

He denied reports that he has met with New York financier Carl Icahn.

A spokesman for Icahn in New York, said Tuesday that Icahn has not met with Argovitz and is not buying the Gamblers.

"Carl Icahn has never met Jerry Argovitz to discuss buying his team. I am denying that Carl is negotiating to acquire the Houston Gamblers," spokesman Peter Rosenthal said.

But when asked if Icahn could be part of a corporation interested in buying the club, Rosenthal said, "My inclination is to say yes, but that is a different question. I don't know the answer to that one."

Argovitz said the team needs to be sold soon since the management failed to meet the players' payroll on Monday.

Argovitz said that unless the club meets its payroll by Monday, all player contracts would be considered defaulted and the club risks takeover by the league.

"If the league comes in, we get zero. We get nothing."

NOTICE OF INTENT TO IMPLEMENT RATES

General Telephone Company of the Southwest in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the Rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas gives notice of its intent to implement new exchange access rates for the provision of shared tenant and tenant resale services.

These proposed rates are applicable to customers of General Telephone Company of the Southwest, excluding hotel/motel customers, who provide local exchange telephone service of General Telephone Company of the Southwest to their tenants or patrons on a resale or shared use basis. This resale or sharing arrangement is normally provided utilizing a customer-provided PABX or other similar stored control switch capable of common control processing or other features commonly associated with a PABX "Smart" switch.

These proposed rates are designed to recover costs on a usage basis for local exchange telephone service access and are identical to General Telephone's "Optional Measured Service" rates. The monthly access rate will be $28.95 per trunk line and the usage rates are as follows:

Over	Up To and Including	Band	Set Up	Full Rate Period Each Minute
0	7 miles	A	$.025	$.015
7	14 miles	B	.035	.021
14	21 miles	C	.050	.030
21	28 miles	D	.070	.042
28		E	.090	.054

As this is a new service offering, we are unable to determine the number of customers who may be affected. Currently, there are no known prospective customers. Until any customer utilizes this new offering, there will be no effect on the revenues of the telephone company, and in any event, the telephone company does not expect revenues to be affected by more than 2½ percent. These proposed rates, where applicable, will provide tariffed local exchange access to customers who then will provide shared or resale services to tenants.

These proposed rates have been suspended by the Public Utility Commission of Texas and will become effective as proposed or modified by order of the Commission on a date to be determined by the commission.

The proposed rate schedule is on file with the Commission for public inspection and is also available at any business office of General Telephone Company of the Southwest. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N Austin, Texas 78757. Bryan Ellis of Keyes Pharmacy pitched a no-hitter and lost during City Little League Tournament action last night.

Little League roundup

Quincy Williams pitched a no-hitter and won. Bryan Ellis pitched a no-hitter and lost as the Little League City Baseball Tournament moves into the third round today at Optimist Park.

Dean's Pharmacy bested Dixie Parts 8-1 Tuesday as Williams allowed only two baserunners and aided his own cause with a home run. Dean's is unbeaten so far this season.

Ellis struck out eleven, but eight walks and six Keyes Pharmacy errors led to an 8-1 Glo-Valve Service victory.

Andrew Ramirez scattered three hits, struck out five and walked only three to notch his fifth win of the season against one loss. Ramirez was aided by two double plays and outstanding defense by Daniel Tolbert, Brad Smillie and Nacho Vargas.

Moose Lodge, trailing 10-0 Tuesday after three innings when rain delayed their game with Harris Sporting Goods, came back Wednesday with six runs in the fourth and single runs in the fifth and sixth to fall, 10-8, in a heartbreaker which saw them leave the tying runs on second and third. Tony Byee was the winning pitcher while Chris Howard suffered his first loss of the year. Byee and Rodney Killough homered for Harris.

Moose Lodge then dropped a 7-4 loss to Duncan Insurance as Tyson Beck picked up the victory, while Brent Skaggs suffered his first loss for Moose. Moose won the National League regular-season championship.

Rotary Club, a 7-6 winner over One Bull Ranch, will play Dean's Pharmacy in the American League Park at 8 p.m. in the winner's bracket. Rotary finished in seventh place in the final American League standings during the regular season. Harris Sporting Goods meets Glo-Valve Service in the National League Park tonight.

The championship finals will be Saturday at Optimist Park.

Pampa Hardware wins Babe Ruth championship

Pampa Hardware came back through the loser's bracket to defeat J.T. Richardson twice last Saturday to win the Babe Ruth Baseball Tournament held at Optimist Park.

Hardware defeated Richardson, 6-3, in the opener to force a second game for the championship. Hardware won a 5-4 squeaker as Kerry Brown and Chad McDougall led the hitting attack with three hits each. Brown had two singles and a triple in four trips to the plate, while McDougall had three singles in four times at bat. Troy Owens went two for three, including two doubles.

Right fielder Shannon Hammer came up with some outstanding catches to preserve the victory.

Winning pitcher was Terry Rogers while Grant Gambelin suffered the loss. Rogers has five mound wins without a loss.

In the opener, Brown was the winning pitcher while Jason Garren took the loss.

Kenny Smith knocked in four runs for Hardware, while McDougall and Owens had two hits each.

Richardson had defeated Hardware three times before Saturday night's finals. Hardware has now won seven consecutive championships.

Owens was the tournament's leading hitter, going 10 for 17 with three singles, five doubles, a triple and a home run.

Cariello wins Kessler Open

DUBLIN, Calif. (AP) — Tony Cariello of Chicago knocked off top-seeded Mark Baker, 204-154, to capture the $125,000 Kessler Open Wednesday night.

It was the first Pro Bowlers Association title for Cariello, who earned $18,000 and a trip to next year's Firestone Tournament of Champions.

To reach the title match, Cariello got past Tom Milton of St. Petersburg, Fla., 214-172, and Jim Harvey of Tucson, Ariz., 268-210.

Milton eliminated Mike Edwards of Tulsa, Okla., 277-209, in the opening match of the TV finals.

"When I came out on tour this year I had two goals," said Cariello, a rookie on the PBA circuit. "I wanted to shoot a 300 and I wanted to win a title."

He did both this week, rolling a perfect game during the qualifying rounds.

Pampa golfer has ace

Sharon Crosier of Pampa had a hole-in-one during a Ladies Partnership Scramble Tuesday at the Perryton Municipal Course.

Mrs. Crosier used a three wood to ace the No. 2, 140-yard, par three hole. Witnesses were Betty Parker, Debra Blackshear and Shirley Stafford.

Mrs. Crosier and Mrs. Stafford placed second in A flight competition with a 74.

Texas Sports Topic

Ex-Wimbledon player now a club pro

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Adrian Bey remembers the time Kurt Nielsen, who had made it to the men's singles finals the year before, was eliminated from the Wimbledon field by the English subway system.

"I'm not sure if this still happens today," Nielsen, now the pro at Del Lago on Lake Conroe, said. "But when we were playing they would send a limousine to pick us up anytime we required transport."

"One year, Nielsen ... was on the underground, and I think there was a power failure. He turned up late for his match, and he was out of the tournament, because the rule states that you will be ready to play five minutes after the preceding match is over."

"I'm not sure they'd still do that today."

Money has changed what began as a "gentleman's game," according to Bey, who played in six Wimbledons during his career, reaching the final 16 twice.

The 47-year-old Rhodesian now lives with his wife and daughter in Panorama and has spent his days as the pro at Del Lago for the past 3½ years. But, in these two weeks of Wimbledon, his mind will be far away once again — back on Centre Court, where the world's oldest and most prestigious tennis championships are underway.

"I never lost the feeling of being a little boy in a big city playing there," he said. "It does something to you. It's the premier tennis event in the world."

But the Wimbledon of 1985 is not the same game it was in Bey's day, the late 50s and early 60s. Nor is tennis the same game it was during the era of Australians Rod Laver, Lewis Hoad, Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle — the men Bey calls true "champions and sportsmen."

"Some of the current players appear to think that Wimbledon is just another tournament. I think that probably comes about because they cannot be bothered with the tradition of the game," Bey said. "Money, while it's been good for the game, has also been bad for the game."

Today's officials, Bey said, overlook bad-boy tactics from players such as John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors because they "bring in the money."

"It appears that the player is far bigger than the game, which to me is a sad state of affairs," Bey said.

Bey had several of his own moments in the sun during a career that began in Rhodesia at the age of 16.

Like many of his classmates in Salisbury, rugby was Bey's passion. But a back injury put an end to that sport, and the tennis court in his yard gave birth to another.

"Tennis was always a Cinderella sport there," Bey said. "Like most kids, I did everything. We had a tennis court at home with a backboard, and I started hitting around and goofing off. I didn't get serious until I was 16."

Bey began touring when he was 19 and helped make history in 1963 when Rhodesia won its first-ever Davis Cup match. He was Rhodesia's No. 1 player for several years, capturing eight closed and three open singles titles from 1958 to 1971.

In 1963, the year he played in the first of five Davis Cups, finished in the top 16 at Wimbledon for the second time and won both the closed singles and doubles crowns, Bey became the first tennis player to be named the Sportsman of the Year for the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland.

Strange eyes Memphis win

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Curtis Strange wasn't talking like a man who has collected more money on the PGA Tour this year than any other professional golfer.

"It's a little bit of everything," Strange said Wednesday after a par-72 round in the St. Jude Memphis Classic pro-am. "I'm not playing real good."

Strange and 155 other golfers began play for serious money today over the Colonial Country Club's 7,282-yard South course.

The winner of the $500,000 tournament will leave town with $90,000.

The 30-year-old Strange has earned $429,424 this year with victories in the Honda Classic and Las Vegas Invitational and runnerup finishes in the Bing Crosby and the Masters.

But he also finished 65th in the Colonial National and missed the cut in another tournament.

It's been a year of feast or famine for the Kingsmill, Va., golfer.

He had a hot streak in March and April when he had two wins, a fourth-place finish and a second.

But since the Masters, Strange has had only one top-10 finish — a fourth at the Kemper Open — and he failed to make the cut at the Manufacturer's Hanover Open.

Strange, who has earned more than $1.8 million since joining the tour in 1977, has done well at Memphis, with a third in 1982 and a sixth-place finish in 1981.

He has won $48,000 at Memphis to stand 20th among the money-winners in the tournament which benefits St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Like most of the golfers who played Colonial this week, Strange said he was happy with the condition of the course.

The fairways have been widened and the rough trimmed back. Low scores still are predicted by some, but not Strange.

Texas briefs

AUSTIN (AP) — Although he hasn't made a formal announcement yet, state Land Commissioner Garry Mauro appears to already have started his re-election bid.

Mauro has sent a mailing to 50,000 potential contributors listing his accomplishments and suggesting ways "in which you can join in my re-election effort."

Recipients were invited to check off any of a number of boxes, including one advising the candidate, "I have an airplane you may use."

Mauro said his Austin campaign headquarters should open next month.

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas crude oil production averaged 2.27 million barrels daily in April, a decrease from the previous month, the Texas Railroad Commission said.

The commission reported Wednesday that the April daily production figure compared with 2.29 million barrels a day in March and 2.32 million barrels in April 1984.

Texas oil production for April totaled 68.1 million barrels, down from 71 million in March and also below the 69.8 million barrels produced in April 1984.

Through the year, the state had produced 272.33 million barrels of oil, down from 279.76 million in the same period last year.

HOUSTON (AP) — Political papers of Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, an alumnus of Princeton and the University of Texas, are being stored at Rice University, officials say.

"The significance of Mr. Baker's political files as chief of staff of President Reagan's White House during his first administration and now as secretary of treasury at the time of his proposed income tax reform is self-evident," Rice President Norman Hackerman said Wednesday.

News briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — New Zealand's top diplomat says he's confident that his country's dispute with the United States over visits by nuclear-armed U.S. warships can be settled.

Secretary of Foreign Affairs Merwyn Noorh, who held discussions on the issue Wednesday at the State Department, declined to say how the disagreement would be resolved, however. State Department officials said there has been no change in the U.S. policy of refusing to confirm or deny whether a particular ship is carrying atomic weapons.

Soviet couple pleads guilty in spy case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who along with her husband pleaded guilty to conspiring to commit espionage says the FBI agent also charged in the case was a willing participant in the plot and offered to sell the Soviet couple "whatever they wanted."

Svetlana Ogorodnikov and her husband Nikolay Ogorodnikov entered surprise guilty pleas Wednesday in a deal which included dropping bribery charges against them.

U.S. District Court Judge David Kenyon sentenced Ogorodnikov to eight years in prison. Mrs. Ogorodnikov, 35, whose sentencing was delayed until July 15, told the court that co-defendant Richard W. Miller, 48, who was fired by the FBI last fall after becoming the first agent accused of trying to betray his country, was a willing spy. The guilty pleas came after 31 days of testimony in a federal trial peppered with lurid testimony about Mrs. Ogorodnikov's love affair with Miller, the first FBI agent ever indicted on espionage charges.

Miller, who has yet to stand trial, testified against his two co-defendants under an immunity grant which prevents the government from using anything he said against him.

The prosecution and Miller's attorneys said they wanted the Ogorodnikovs to testify at his trial, as he had testified at theirs.

"It seems to the court that we're talking about one of the most serious types of crimes that can be committed," Kenyon said in sentencing Ogorodnikov.

Ogorodnikov, 52, insisted he acted only to help his wife. He asked the judge to sentence him immediately.

"I did everything so as to help her!" he cried. "I became a sacrifice."

Kenyon commented, "Perhaps to a great degree the motivation was to protect a member of the family."

Unlike Ogorodnikov, who spoke at length, his wife offered few words. Her attorney, Brad Brian, simply read a brief statement in which she admitted to conspiracy to commit espionage and a few specifics.

Part of her statement condemned Miller as a willing spy.

"Miller told her he wanted to work for the Soviet government and told her he would sell them whatever they wanted," Brian read.

The statement also said she knew Miller was going to take FBI documents and give them to a Soviet agent.

The couple remained in court as Kenyon explained to the jurors, who had been absent during the pleas and sentencing, that the trial which began April 24 was over.

In a rambling discourse explaining his participation in the espionage scheme, Ogorodnikov accused the FBI of using her.

"They took my wife and used her like a prostitute. I was left outside like a dog," he said.

Agca refuses to testify

ROME (AP) — Papal assailant Mehmet Ali Agca refused to testify today at the trial of seven men he has accused of plotting to kill Pope John Paul II.

The 27-year-old Turk did not show up, as is his right, and wrote the court from his jail cell that he wanted to "think about" whether to continue testifying.

In 12 days on the stand, Agca has given erratic and contradictory testimony.

Report says tax proposal would cost jobs in Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Long-term results of President Reagan's tax revision act would mean a healthier Texas economy, but it also would slow job growth by 40,000 jobs per year, according to projections by State Comptroller Bob Bullock's office.

The reforms would slow Texas' annual increase in jobs to 140,000 from 180,000, officials said Tuesday.

The Reagan tax package "would dampen (oil) drilling activity and slow construction," said Claudia Stravato, an associate deputy comptroller, during a forum on the proposed tax package at Southern Methodist University.

The forum was sponsored by SMU and Touche Ross & Co., a Big Eight accounting firm.

If the law is passed this year, it could cost Texas taxpayers $400 million in disposable income in 1986 and an additional $1.2 billion the following year, Ms. Stravato said.

In real estate, the reforms initially will depress the value of property, "but beyond three to five years, we will see rent increases to offset that," said William Brueggeman, an SMU real estate professor.

Because Texas' economy is so strongly tied to industries that will be affected by the reforms, its state and city economies will be among the hardest hit, Ms. Stravato said.
