TOWERING SMOKE — A tower of smoke rises from a burning tank truck at the Pampa Water Disposal plant east of Loop 171 on Tyng Road Tuesday. According to the Pampa Fire Department, the fire erupted at about 4:30 p.m. Tuesday when a tank truck filled with condensate was being unloaded and was ignited by a spark. When three Pampa fire units arrived, two tanker trucks, an automobile and a small metal office structure were in flames. A third tank truck also burst into flames and rolled toward the entrance of the unloading facility. The fire was brought under control at about 5:30 p.m. although fire fighters stood by mopping up the liquid and extinguishing smouldering embers until about 6:30 p.m. Darrell Brown, 25, of Skellytown was treated for minor burns to his arms, upper chest and face. Pilot warns against rescue

'We would all be dead,' captive says

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hijackers of TWA Flight 847 fired shots across the airport terminal today to scare reporters after some journalists were allowed to talk to the captive pilot. With a gunman brandishing a pistol behind him, Capt. John Testrake said, "We would all be dead men" if a rescue was attempted.

Gunman hijacked the Athens-to-Rome flight with 153 passengers and crew last Friday. One passenger, 23-year-old U.S. Navy Petty Officer Robert Dean Stethem of Waldorf, Md., was killed by the hijackers.

Officials of Amal, the Shiite Moslem militia, said most of the remaining 40 American hostages were being held in Shiite-controlled western and southern Beirut, to press the hijackers' demands that Israel release more than 700 Shiite prisoners accused of planning or carrying out attacks on the Israeli army in southern Lebanon.

Tom Goodman, an ABC spokesman in New York, said correspondents Charles Glass, Julie Flint and Derwin Johnson were permitted to approach the plane and stand under the cockpit for eight minutes to interview pilot

Capt. John Testrak talks to reporters

Asked about the remaining hostages, Testrake said: "... We've been told that they've been taken to a safe place, that they are comfortable and being well taken care of."

In Washington, a State Department official who spoke on condition of anonymity said Testrake's remarks confirmed for the first time that three crewmen remain on the plane and the passengers have been removed.

Asked by Glass about a possible rescue attempt, Testrake replied:
"I think we would all be dead men

if they did because we are continually surrounded by many, many guards."

Testrake and his two remaining crewmen appeared frequently in the cockpit and occasionally peered out of an open window.

First Officer Philip G. Maresca, 42, of Salt Lake City, Utah, told the ABC reporters: "I'm fine, and the message to my family is they can worry a little bit, not too much. Our treatment has been tolerable." Flight Engineer Benjamin Zimmermann of Cascade, Idaho said: "Everything is okay. We're surviving."

A gunman with a rifle fired six or seven times over the terminal, where dozens of reporters and photographers watched the plane from balconies.

In Washington. President Reagan said at a news conference Tuesday night that the United States would not make concessions to the hijackers to win the release of the American hostages. He called for their release "without condition."

Spokesman Larry Speakes said the White House had asked the International Red Cross to find out Israel's plans for the release of its Shiite captives, and the Red Cross confirmed that in Geneva.

Possible cuts in vocational staff okayed

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Pampa school trustees approved a possible reduction in force for instructors in the Vocational Agriculture and Arts and Crafts departments at Pampa High School during their regular board meeting Tuesday evening.

The reduction is something "we don't like to be caught up in," Supt. James Trusty told the trustees of the Pampa Independent School District. But a decline in student enrollment in the two areas indicates fewer personnel are needed in the two departments, he explained.

There has been "a marked drop" in students taking classes in the two areas based on pre-enrollment figures this spring, Supt. Trusty noted.

He said he felt the new course requirements imposed by House Bill 72, specifying what courses students have to take toward graduation, has caused the shift away from enrollment in elective areas.

Trusty said the state's efforts to shift students into more academic courses has affected enrollment in some elective courses, with the arts and agriculture programs here showing the decline in enrollment for the next school year.

Under the action taken by the school board last night, the district will look at the criteria and policies to be used in deciding what teachers to drop.

Criteria will include certification, performance, professional background and seniority, Trusty said. Employees involved in the force reduction will be contacted in writing. They will have 10 days in which to request a hearing, if they so desire, he said.

Asst. Supt. John English said there would be no decrease overall in the staff because of the additional courses added to the curriculum under new state rules.

Board member Joe VanZandt asked if the district had considered going to seven periods instead of the current six at the high school.

English said the state allows the district to have that option. But the greater number of periods would cause shorter class periods, he said, adding he felt that additional class time was needed for proper instruction of students.

Another problem with more class periods is that teachers would "end up with another period to teach," acquiring additional students and assignments to grade, English English explained seven periods are used at Pampa Middle School.

The district had considered dropping back to six, but it felt the seven periods were needed to keep all the courses required by HB 72, he said.

He admitted an extra period at high school would probably see students signing up for more electives. But he wasn't sure the shorter periods would help to give the proper time for instruction to students who are facing having to pass standardized tests to receive their diplomas.

In other personnel matters, the board approved 28 changes in employment.

The board accepted six resignations: Beverly Douglass, Austin Elementary fourth grade; Holly Roberts, Baker Elementary first grade; Sandra Osborne, PHS math; Lyle Roberts, PHS coach and Baker physical education; Sue Brent, Austin fourth; and Janice Spearman, who had been on a leave of absence for the past school

Brent's resignation is effective June 17; all the others are effective May 24.

The board approved the retirement of Elena Donald, Pampa Middle School choir instructor, effective May 30.

Fourteen teachers were approved for employment. They include Joy Rice, Austin first grade; Cindy Harris, Austin Spanish instructor; Sharon Martindale, PHS reading; Misty Muse, Mann Elementary first grade; Nan Hubbard, Mann fifth grade; Margarent Spearman, PHS history; and Darrel E. Adkins, PMS coach and PE.

Others hired were Jay L. Barrett, PHS English and tennis coach; Janelle Bohon, PHS chemistry; Kloette Camp, Baker music; Sam Chappell, PMS English; Mark Elms, PHS math and coach; Penny Summers, PHS history and geography; and Margaret Williams, PMS science.

Seven teachers were approved for reassignment in the district. They include Monta Hinkle, Mann first to Mann third; Sue Thornton, Austin first to Austin fourth; Mindy Earl, Austin one-half day to PHS one-half day Spanish; and Eric West, Baker TMR to Baker fourth.

Other reassignments include Donna Briscoe Stamp, PHS pre-vocational to Baker TMR; Steve Porter, PMS history and coach to PHS history and coach; and Frank McCullough, PHS assistant basketball and girls golf coach to PHS head golf coach.

In other matters, board member David Robertson, elected May 4, was administered his oath of office See SCHOOL, Page two

Reagan rejects retaliation in absense of identification

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he has no choice but to wait out the terrorists holding about 40 Americans from a hijacked airliner because to retaliate "would probably be sentencing a number of Americans to death."

Openly expressing his own frustration as the hostage crisis in Beirut entered its sixth day, Reagan nonetheless reiterated his policy of refusing to give in to terrorists' demands while holding his own fire to avoid injuring innocent victims.

At his first nationally broadcast ness conference in nearly three months, Reagan acknowledged Tuesday his long-announced policy of "swift and effective retribution" against terrorists has been stymied by the United States' inability to locate and identify the instigators of attacks against Americans.

"Retaliation in some peoples' minds might just entail striking a blow in a general direction," Reagan said. But he added, "If you just aim in the general direction and kill some people, well then, you're a terrorist too."

Although he refused to go into detail, Reagan said, "We have used our utmost capacity and intelligence gathering to try and find these people and these places. ... I can only say that we have gathered a considerable body of evidence, but I'm not going beyond that."

"I'm as frustrated as anyone," Reagan said. "I've pounded a few walls myself ... but as I say, you have to be able to pinpoint the enemy. You can't just start shooting without having someone in your gunsights."

While acknowledging that the hijackers "hold all the cards once they have these people in their power," the president resisted suggestions that he was caught in the same bind in which his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, found himself during the 444-day Iranian hostage crisis that ended the day Reagan took office in 1981. Reagan said Tuesday night, "I have to wait it out as long as those peope are there and threatened and alive and we have a possibility of bringing them home."

Asked what he would do if his wife or children had been aboard the hijacked jetliner, the president said, "It would be a horrible situation" but no more so "than it is for those people that are presently waiting for some reply. But you cannot ... give in to the terrorists without knowing that you are then sentencing someone else to go through the same agony and other people to also be victimized."

Blaming lax security at the international airport in Athens for letting the armed hijackers get aboard the Rome-bound Boeing 727, Reagan advised Americans not to use the airport and suggested that American air carriers stop using the airport unless steps are taken to make it safe.

He also directed his Cabinet to consider putting armed sky marshals on international flights of U.S. carriers.

The hijack drama dominated the questoning, but Reagan said he is sticking to his schedule and not neglecting domestic issues such as budget issues and his tax overhaul plan.

He also disclosed the United States and the Soviet Union are discussing the time and place for a possible summit meeting later this year between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Pampa minister suffers a setback after transplant

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — The Rev. Raymond Lockwood suffered a mild heart attack Tuesday after his "piggy-back" heart transplant and is now relying on his transplanted heart to keep him alive, a spokesperson at Baptist Medical Center said.

Meanwhile heart surgeons at the medical center are waiting to see how well the transplanted heart operates before doing any further surgery.

Lockwood, 63, the associate pastor of Lamar Full Gospel Assembly, had the heart transplant Monday evening during a 6½ hour operation at the medical center. The hospital received the second heart from an anonymous Oklahoma donor. Tuesday morning, the hospital listed Lockwood in critical but stable condition.

However, the minister's condition worsened to unstable late Tuesday morning after he suffered a mild heart attack.

"That sort of took away the advantage of the piggy-back transplant," BMC public relations officer Brenda McGann said, explaining that in the piggy-back operation, the donor's heart is sewn on to the patient's heart and the two hearts work in tandem.

Such a procedure works "in cases of rejection," she said.

"We're hoping that the transplanted heart will fully take over the functions," she said. "No additional surgery is planned at this point."

She explained that the hospital's chief heart transplant surgeon, Dr.

Nazih Zuhdi, said the team will wait for about 48 hours to see how well the transplanted heart operates.
Lockwood is reportedly the oldest person to receive such a transplant, and according to reports about previous transplants, 58 is the usual age for receiving a donor heart.

McGann said that this morning

Lockwood remained on his respirator, but is alert and responsive.

responsive.

"I have not heard any comment about what his current attitude is," she said.

Lockwood's wife Bernita, his sister, Evelyn White, and Lamar pastor, the Rev. Gene Allen are at the medical center with Lockwood.

Mrs. Lockwood said earlier that her husband had four-way bypass surgery six years ago, but his arteries got clogged. Zuhdi and the heart transplant Zuhdi and the heart transplant team are working with Dr. Christiaan Barnard of South Africa, who did the world's first heart transplant.

Discovery's third satellite launch goes without a hitch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) Discovery's astronauts delivered a third communications satellite to orbit today and sped on to a rendezvous with a "Star Wars" laser beam. "We're glad to be 3-for-3," astronaut John Fabian reported as the satellite. Telstar 3D, spun away from the shuttle's cargo bay, giving the crew a perfect record on the trio of launches.

Forty-five minutes later, a satellite motor ignited to propel it toward a permanent outpost 22,300 miles up

Telstar 3D joins a fleet of AT&T satellites that beam telephone, television and other communications services to the United States and Puerto Rico. It is capable of handling 21,600 long-distance calls at once

Mitchell wins court ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court today shielded former Attorney General John N. Mitchell from a lawsuit involving an unlawful 1970 federal wiretap.

In a 5 to 2 decision, the court said the former Nixon administration official is entitled to immunity from the suit because in 1970, when the wiretap took place, it was not "clearly established" that the wiretap was unconstitutional. Justice Byron R. White, writing for the court said that a short time after the wiretap was ended federal judges rejected the Justice Department's claim that the attorney general was authorized to order wiretaps without court warrants in national security defense system, astronauts planned tomount an 8-inch reflector in a shuttle window as a target for a laser tracking system in Maui, Hawaii The laser, a tightly focused beam of light, is not meant to demonstrate the ability to destroy an object in space, but rather to gather data on how much the light spreads while traveling through the atmosphere and how corrections for such spreading can be made.

The Pentagon described the beam as low-power.

The test also will help determine if such a laser can track a fast-moving missile warhead. The shuttle, 220 miles above Earth, will be streaking along at 17,400 mph, slightly faster than the warhead of an intercontinental missile. The laser has been tested on reflectors on aircraft at 30,000 feet

The Star Wars research is aimed at determining if a combined space-and ground-based system can intercept and destroy ballistic missiles in flight.

On Monday, the first day of the weeklong mission, the astronauts launched Morelos-A, Mexico's first communications satellite, and on Tuesday they dropped off Arabsat-1B, owned by a consortium of 22 Arab League members, including the Palestine Liberation Organization.

When the astronauts were awakened today, Mission Control told them that Arabsat minutes earlier had successfully fired into a stationary orbit 22,300 miles high. "That's a good way to start the day," the crew replied.

The Mexican satellite successfully reached its high outpost Tuesday night. Saudi Arabian Prince Sultan

Salman Al-Saud was an excited observer Tuesday as Arabsat spun out of Discovery's cargo bay.

"Very, very good," he exclaimed.

On Thursday, the astronauts plan to put an experiment platform overboard to examine what may be a black hole lurking in the center of the Milky Way galaxy.

Skellytown decides to use dumpsters for trash pickup

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

SKELLYTOWN - City officials Tuesday opened two bids for a city landfill operator, but didn't bother to hire one, deciding instead to have BFI industries of Amarillo provide trash pick-up services for city residents

Although some city residents have reportedly voiced strong opposition to the dumpster services, city council members reported that most of the townspeople seem to want the dumpsters.

The city has conducted several "town meetings" in which residents gave their opinions on the trash pick up. At the last such meeting in May, several people reportedly criticized the city's dumpster proposal. But no townspeople attended Tuesday's rescheduled regular meeting.

"There'd be a lot more happy than there is mad if we go with the dumpsters," said council member Neal McBroom.

City secretary Sherry Daves said "people on fixed incomes seem to be the ones who want the dumpsters."

"But we should tell BFI about our decision, they have called almost every day," she said. "We need to tell them something."

At the May Skellytown council meeting, BFI representative Willis Malone said the best price the company can offer would be $8.05 per resident per month. The contract, renewable on a five year basis, would allow for regular dumpster service, possibly one dumpster per three households.

The landfill lease the city currently has with Bill Arrington expires July 1. City officials have discussed such options as finding another landfill or finding different ways to dispose of city trash.

Operating the dump has been a terrible, terrible burden," said council member Edna Chaney.

Council members discussed keeping the landfill open only on certain days and only for such large items as junked appliances and tree limbs.

The city currently has a woman, Leona Coday, working at the dump, but council members charged that landfill fees had not been collected. So they sought bids for a new landfill operator. When the city advertised for the bids, it said "bids can be submitted by the hour, week or month, based on an 18-20 hour work week At the Tuesday meeting, council members opened the two bids. One was from the current operators. the Codays, who bid $5 per hours. Jerry Ledford submitted a bid of $1,500 per month, but did not specify how many hours he'd work.

Lefors names superintendent

LEFORS - Wesley Earl Ross, superintendent of schools at Sanger, will become superintendent of the Lefors Independent School District on July 1, board president Arnold Story has announced.

Meeting in a special called meeting Monday night, the trustees interviewed Ross and then offered him the post.

Ross has been superintendent at Sanger for the past five years. A former U.S. Air Force serviceman, he has also been a teacher and a principal in public schools.

Sanger, located near Denton, has a student population of approximately 1300 students, Story

Ross and his wife have three daughters and a son, all graduated from public schools and now living

Story said the trustees, in consultation with Ross, will probably hire an elementary school principal at their next regular meeting on July 11.

The board has interviewed a number of applicants for the elementary school post, but it decided to wait until a new superintendent was employed before making a final decision.

Ross replaces Jimmy Collins, who has moved to the Austin area. Current elementary school principal Jess Baker has resigned to become superintendent at the Grandview-Hopkins Independent School District

Family urges negotiations

LAREDO, Texas (AP) - Family members of two men still being held by Shiite Moslem terrorists say President Reagan's speech to the nation lacked "muscle" and are urging him to negotiate directly for their release.

"We just want everybody to pray and call to the White House." Irma Trautmann, whose husband and father are somewhere in west Beirut, told reporters Tuesday before losing her composure and going inside her mother's home.

In a televised speech Tuesday night, Reagan repeated his stand that he would not give in to terrorists nor ask any government But "overall, thinking about the speech, it was a letdown," family spokesman Javier Santos told the Laredo News. "But maybe they can't say everything in the news media. We have to be hopeful as possible.

Santos said the family had "high hopes" of a possible breakthrough in negotiations or that "more muscle" might be used to gain the release of Vicente Garza Jr., 53, and Robert Trautmann Jr., 37.

Choking back tears earlier Tuesday, Mrs. Trautmann said she believes her the pair is fine, but she the aircraft in Beirut. "I think Vicente ... is strong," Mrs. Garza said. "But, you know, in these cases you can only hold so much. It's hard for him. Bob is strong. Vicente is strong and I think they will come up all right.'

Mrs. Trautmann said she believed her husband also is doing

Robert Trautmann reportedly was among several passengers taken off the plane in Beirut Friday night because he had a Jewish-sounding name. Relatives now believe the men have been reunited.

"He's pretty quiet when he's under stress," she said earlier in the news conference. "As long as everybody kept quiet and did what they said ... everything would be all right.

Other relatives have been staying up around the clock during the weekend and friends have continued prayer vigils at a nearby church.

Robert Trautmann Sr., who chartered a jet Monday to bring back the five relatives from St. Louis, Mo., said he believes the Reagan administration is doing all it can to resolve the problem. "I feel they are going to resolve

Police: sexual assault may have been motive

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) -Police say sexual assault may have been the motive for the stabbing death of two young sisters and that a male boarder may have been killed because he was a witness.

The girls had received threatening, sexual phone calls for weeks, and the 17-year-old boarder had received harassing phone calls before moving in with the girls' family, police said.

Investigators said Tuesday they are unsure whether the slayings were related to the phone calls or that they were sexually motivated. They said one girl was clothed and the other was partially clothed although initial police reports indicated that both girls were nude from the waist down.

Killed at a southwest Arlington home late Monday were Renee Lemieux, 12, and her sister, Danielle Lemieux, 14. The male victim was John Paul Bradley, 17. All three had been bound and died after being stabbed at least a dozen times, said Bill Fabian, a spokesman for the Tarrant County medical examiner's office. Only Bradley had been gagged.

Fabian said Medical Examiner Dr. Nizam Peerwani told him that he would not speculate on whether the girls were sexually assaulted until after lab tests are complete.

The girls' mother, Jo Anne Lemieux, discovered the bodies when she returned home from work at about 10:15 p.m. Monday. She called for help after finding Renee, said to be clothed, lying on the bathroom floor.

Paramedics discovered Danielle's partially clothed body at the foot of her bed in an adjacent bedroom. Just before midnight, police found Bradley's body partially covered with soiled clothes in the utility room.

"I guess the spookiest thing we're finding out about this whole affair is that no one seems to have heard or seen anything unusual,' investigator Jim Willett said. "We're finding that hard to

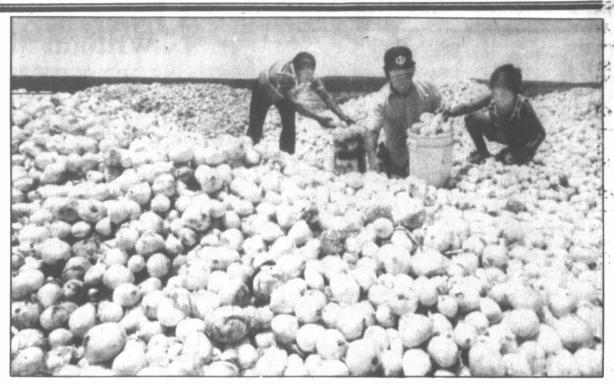

"Any way you look at it, we have evidence there was a struggle inside the residence," he added, 'and there likely was a great deal of noise.

Police Tuesday said they believe that Bradley was bound and gagged first and taken to the utility room. Then the killer or killers attacked the girls in the other part of the house, police said.

Although police initially believed the killer may have known the victims because there was no sign of forced entry, detectives later said neighbors told them that the girls often left the doors open for their friends.

Willett said detectives still are investigating a possible connection between the deaths and the obscene phone calls.

Sgt. Ruben Puente said harassing calls were made to several residents in the neighborhood, and Willett said several of Renee and Danielle's female classmates also had received threatening calls.

Texas economy will make gains

HOUSTON (AP) - Texas' economy is expected to have considerable gains in industrial production, employment, retail sales and international commerce. according to a statistical annual report. The state can look towards a bright economic future partly because of its low tax rates and interest in research and development, according to Texas Facts and Figures, a report released Tuesday by Texas Commerce Bancshares Inc.

"The longterm outlook for Texas looks exceptionally promising. Texas is still the most attractive state in the nation for new industrial activity," said Carol Bennett, vice president and economist for Texas Commerce.

Texas' retail sales of $95 billion in 1984, ranked second in the country to Calfornia which had sales of $155.6 billion, according to the Houston-based bank's report.

Ms. Bennett said the retail outlook in Texas continues to be bright, with sales expected to exceed $100 billion this year for the first time ever and rising to more than $150 billion by 1990.

Industrial production in Texas rose 10 percent last year and should increase 6 percent this year and 4 percent in 1986, she said.

Texas has somewhat suffered along with the energy industry in recent years, but still can expect a favorable future because of increased demands in developing countries and the rising need abroad for engineering and energy-related equipment, according to the report

Among the Texas cities hurt by the energy industry's woes is

'The city of Houston has received some adverse publicity in the past three years," said Texas Commerce President Charles Beall. "Reports out of East Coast cities would have you believe that grass is growing in the streets of

But Beall predicted that Houston will recover from the energy industry woes.

'Houston has both the will and the wherewithal to recognize opportunities and convert them into accomplishments," he said.

Houston's economic outlook is particularly good because of the city's link with the space program, Beall said, adding that commercialization of the space industry will play an important role in economic growth.

Contributing to the city's recovery are an increase of new plants and manufacturers in the area, growing international commerce and commercialization of space.

Beall said he expects the glut of unleased office space in Houston to be eliminated within three years. In the Dallas-Fort Worth area, construction is the only industry that is not expected to grow significantly in 1985, according to the bank study. Sales in the area will increase to $35 billion this year, compared to $23 billion in Wholesale trade will continue to be important to growth in Dallas, where 25,000 manufacturers do business and buyers spend $7 billion each year.

San Antonio also can expect to grow over the next several years because of land availablity, a low cost of living and a productive labor force, Texas Commerce predicts. The medical industry will be San Antonio's primary source of growth, according to the report. The University of Texas last year announced plans to set up an Institute of Biotechnology in the city and the Texas Research and Technology Foundation, a private agency, was established there last

A welcomed phone call

Generally, I dread getting phone calls on Sunday, because it's generally from someone who hasn't gotten their Sunday paper yet, and the publisher isn't home, and the managing and city editors are smart enough to leave their phone off the hook, so they call me because I'm foolhardy enough to let my name appear in the paper periodically and my picture once a week.

Once I got a call from a man after 10 p.m. to tell me how great Jeff Langley was. Jeff wasn't home and he remembered my name, so he called me. I promised to pass the word along to Jeff in the morning. When you get a little bigheaded, something like that will help bring you down to size, I assure you.

Anyway, I received a Sunday call recently that just made my day - the good way, not like Dirty Harry. Mary Felix called to tell me about a serendipity that had happened to her Saturday and it was such a wonderful thing, I think everyone in Pampa ought to know about it.

Mary was returning from the cleaners when she saw a little garage sale going on at a house she passed. (She must be like me - never pass a garage sale if you're going less than 100 mph.) Three children and their grandmother were attending the tables loaded with small items for sale. As she talked with the children, she discovered that the kids were selling a few of their unused belongings to raise enough money so they could go swimming

Finding a few things she couldn't live without (about 20 cents worth), Mary paid for them, adding a bit more to help them towards their goal. She got in her car and proceeded down the street only to have the vehicle spit and splutter to a stop. Out of gas. Mary climbed out and pushed the car over to the curb.

As she was pushing the car, she saw the three kids running towards her as hard as they could. They skidded up to her, but not before she had already gotten the car out of the street. To Mary's amazement, they apologized and apologized for not getting to her in time to help her push the car.

The oldest, a boy of 13, asked her what was wrong with the car. She admitted she had let the gas tank go dry. Taking the situation in hand, he went and got gasoline for her. While they waited, the youngest girl continued to tell Mary how sorry they were that they had not gotten to her in time to help push. The other child informed Mary that their grandmother would take her anywhere she needed to

After the boy arrived and filled the tank, the car still wouldn't start. Mary was totally helpless, having no idea what to do next. Not so the boy, who told her, "When a car runs out of gas, sometimes you have to prime it." Prime it? Mary said. But he knew what to do; he climbed onto the car's engine and primed the carbuerator, whereupon the engine started. Mary thanked the children, and made sure they would have money to go swimming, no matter what they sold at the garage sale. Why," she asked the kids, "did you do all this for me?" "Because we're interested in keeping our friends," was the answer

Mary may not have known those kids but a few minutes, but I can tell you now that they have a friend for life. Who were these resourceful, helpful children? They are Tonya Brown, 8; Valerie Brown, 10: and Billy Ray Brown, 13, of 745 W.

I think they deserve some recognition for trying to earn money to swim instead of begging it off of their parents. But even more, for having the maturity, at their ages, to help their fellow man

Some juicy pork in heart of Dixie

At long last-after 96 years of planning and 14 years of construction—the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway has been dedicated to posterity.

On June 1, almost 60,000 people witnessed official opening ceremonies which took place in Columbus, Miss., and in Mobile, Ala. The evens marked the connection, by a man-made waterway, of the Tennessee Ribert on the north with the Tombigbee River to the south, at Demopolis, Ala.

Actually, the 234-mile-long waterway has been in operation since January. It can affect shipping in 23 states, if tugs and barges use the new waterway as an alternate route to the Mississippi River system—leaving the Mississippi at Cairo, Ill., and navigating up the Ohio River to reach the Tennessee. That way, the barge tows would reach the Gulf and unload at Mobile, Ala., instead of New Orleans

The project cost was enormous—at least $2 billion. Channel excavation required moving more dirt than for the Panama Canal. The Tenn-Tom is called the largest water project in U.S. history. Was it worth it?

Congressmen from the mid-South states involved say it was. They say the waterway has enormous potential for economic development along its route. Congressional critics, however, call the Tenn-Tom an economic dinosaur. They say it will never come close to paying for

The project never was economically feasible. There is too much competition from railroads and truckers to make canals self-financing. If those who will benefit from the waterway had to pay the construction bill instead of the taxpayers, it never would have been built.

Amnerican canals date back to colonial times, but now most of them serve only as tourist attractions.

The Tennessee-Tombigbee was the last hurrah as far as canals go. If common sense prevails, there never will be another federal project like it. There should't be, not with the national facing $200 billion in annual deficits

Those who celebrated were right to hold a big barbecue in the hear of Dixie. Another project and fat and juicy as this one will never come out of the old pork barrel.

End New York subsidy

Plainer and plainer it becomes that the president's tax reform plan was tailored for the special pain it would bring on - well, the state of New York. I mean, why else would the most vitriolic complaints about said reform be coming

The president-host of New York City's "21" restaurant, Sheldon Tannen sees the horror of capping at $25 the full deduction for power lunches. If the reform goes through, "21" would lose the power lunch trade.

"This could mean an end to a whole way of life," complains Tannen. Maybe, likelier, an end to Dungeness crab that costs $27 and "21 Burgers" that cost $17.50 (not counting $3.75 for french

But this is incidental. Even Mayor Koch responds that "it's a helluva of a thing if the only thing that keeps restaurants and hotels and theaters going is because somebody else is paying your bill. Am I clear?"

The mayor elaborates, with great good sense: "I just happen to think there is something wrong with everyday taxpayers' paying for the cost of rich taxpayers who use their credit cards to take off what everybody else has to pay for themselves.

This leads, as so much else does these days, to New York's governor, Mario Cuomo. Cuomo made the front page of the Times recently with a blast at President Reagan's communications director, Pat for state and local taxes - a deduction especially beloved of New York politicians, given the astronomical state and local taxes New Yorkers pay. The federal tax deduction keeps them from minding so much.

At a press conference, Buchanan had defended Reagan's proposal to abolish the federal deduction

Thus Buchanan observed: "We do not believe in a neo-socialist approach to government that redistributes wealth. This plan will force people to take a second look at government and see what they are getting from it." It might, he added, force states and cities to cut taxes.

Cuomo found Buchanan's remarks "wrong, insulting, unfair, and denigrating to the state as a whole." Abolish deductions? That would impair the delivery of local services. "As though," the governor continued, "there were no need for education, for housing, for police, for roads, for hospitals, for nurses to care for children with cerebral palsy.

As though there were Mario Cuomo-recognized limits to the things he will say when the rhetorical

Tax reform means kicking cerebral palsy kids,

What does Cuomo argue for? Something like Ed Koch, concerning the business-lunch deduction, argues against - keeping "restaurants and hotels and theaters going...because somebody else is paying your bills.'

Subsidies is what we are talking about - the plucking of money from one group so as to hand it to another group. Cuomo and, I am sorry to report, Mayor Koch himself, want Texas and the other states to go right on paying New York's bills subsidizing its services and programs, well, just because

In an article several months back, Sen. Pat Moynihan (D.-N.Y.) made this perfectly clear. Moynihan pointed out that the base on which New York levies taxes is 11 percent lower than the national average; yet New York taxes are 71 percent higher than the average.

At the polar extreme is Texas, with a tax capacity a third larger than average and taxes a third less.

Thank heaven, gasps Moynihan, for the federal tax code, which, "by following state and local taxes to be deducted from income for federal tax purposes...enables us to pay such taxes in much discounted dollars."

"In all," he continued, "the federal deduction is worth more than $4 billion a year to New Yorkers, with the average New York taxpayer 'saving' $892. By contrast the tax deduction is worth only

What a wonderful state of affairs, if you're a New Yorker. Tax the Texans, subsidize the Gothamites - never mind equity, nor the relative merits of those spending programs that keep New York taxes so high.

'Neo-socialism' is the word, Brother Buchanan. How bracing to think this sort of thing might yet be brought to an end. How poignant to think of New York politicians plotting anti-reform strategy over $17.50 hamburgers and $3.75 french

Today in History

By The Associated Press Today is Wednesday, June 19, the 170th day of 1985. There are 195 days left in the year.

On this date:

In 1586, English colonists sailed from Roanoke Island, N.C., after failing to establish England's first permanent settlement in America. In 1862, slavery was outlawed in U.S. territories. In 1867, Mexico's deposed emperor, Maximilian, was executed. In 1910, Father's Day was, celebrated for the first time, in Spokane, Wash.

In 1934, the Federal Communications Commission was created.

In 1964, the Civil Rights Act of 1964 survived an 83-day filibuster in the U.S. Senate and was approved by a vote of 73 to 27. In 1977, Pope Paul VI proclaimed a 19th-century Philadelphia bishop, John Neumann, a saint of the Roman Catholic church.

R. Ford called on Congress to enact stiffer laws against certain violent or dangerous federal crimes.

Bet your life on pilots

All of us who fly high-performance airplanes are on a leash. We don't just strap that flying blowtorch onto our britches and take off whenever we want and fly wherever we please anymore.

We are bound by invisible radio communication, computer programmed to stay out of one another's way

Early on during the United Airline's pilot's strike you heard complaints by non-striking United pilots that somebodies were jamming their broadcast frequencies with static; sometimes with broadcast obscenities.

President Henry Duffy of the pilots' union was as distressed by these reports as you were.

The Airline Pilots Association under no circumstances condones any interference with radio transmissions, and he promptly ordered all non-striking pilots to "cut it out!" "The pilots' association has not, does not and will not encourage, endorse or condone" such misconduct. Yet, the reports of jamming kept coming until the Federal Aviation administration called it a serious breach of safety and threatened legal action "criminal sanctions" against the jammers. Well, now, hold the phone. Our nation's Air Traffic Control (ATC) system is excellent: never better.

Nonetheless, traffic is such at major hubs that ATC may be broadcasting seven or eight clearances at the same time.

Clearance delivery frequencies are congested. Communications overlap. Every flight crew on every airline understands the problem and learns to live with it

But during this strike we had some pilots flying left seat who have not been on the line in 22 years.

They'd been yanked from desk jobs into the cockpit though many or most have barely kept themselves flight proficient and they were being harassed. The fact is that all of us all the time have to accommodate a degree of interference.

This is not to say that nobody was maliciously iamming. That is possible and it could be some non-flier on the ground who did it

And inevitably some few guys awaiting ground clearance behind United may flip the key and say

But the modern flight crew is aware that all communication is monitored, readily traceable. More than that, professionalism in the commercial cockpit is such that sabotage is inconceivable. I would bet my life on it. Almost every day I do

Right decision for the wrong reason

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - When the House of Representatives recently refused to appropriate any money for 31 water development projects, it perpetuated the congressional tradition of doing the right thing for the wrong reason

Water projects, although often economically unsound and environmentally destructive, long have been treated with exceptional reverence and respect on Capitol Hill.

That's because they offer a unique opportunity for members of Congress to demonstrate their ability to produce federal largess, in the form of multi-million-dollar government contracts, for their states and

Thus, the House acted out of character in early June when it voted, by 203-202 margin, to strip from a supplemental appropriations bill water projects that were expected to cost almost $100 million this year and approximately $1.5 billion when completed

That surprising House vote was, in great measure, the product of pique on the part of legislators resentful of the disproportionate share of "pork projects in districts represented by members of the House Appropriations Committee.

In addition, none of the disputed initiatives had been previously authorized because Congress has not approved legislation designating new projects for almost 10 years.

The House, having taken the extraordinary action of rejecting (at least temporarily) so many traditionally sacred pork barrel initiatives, ought to consider doing the right thing for the right reasons and halt funding for the unjustifiable water projects Congress authorized in earlier years.

Among the logical candidates for termination are these projects, each of which will cost in excess of $1 billion to complete:

The Garrison Diversion Plan in North Dakota, designed to benefit 408 farmers by irrigating 130,000 acres at a cost of $1.3 billion. At the same time, the project would destroy thousands of other acres of farmland and waterfowl habitat. The Red River Waterway in Louisiana, conceived to provide a navigable link between Shreveport, La., and the Mississippi River at a cost of $1.6 billion.

The Bonneville Unit of the Central Utah Project, an elaborate system of of reservoirs, tunnels and aqueducts to carry water over the Continental Divide into the Salt Lake City area at a cost of $1.6 billion. Among the projects costing under $1 billion is the Stonewall Jackson Dam in West Virginia, whose construction would require the seizure of more than 20,000 acres and the permanent displacement of about 1,800 people, some of whose families have farmed the land for more than a century Those people's homes would be sacrificed for a dam of dubious value and for an adjacent recreational complex containing a golf course, swimming pool tennis courts

In Nebraska, the O'Neill Project would flood a valuable nature preserve at the nation's biological crossroads. In Oklahoma, the headwaters of Muddy Boggy Creek would be dammed to provide water nobody wants or needs

Other federally financed water projects of questionable value are underway in California, Oregon, Colorado, North Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee and elsewhere.

All of this extravagant activity is occurring during a prolonged fiscal crisis that has led to chronic deficits federal budget deficits of approximately $200 billion a year.

Efforts now are underway in Congress to induce an unprecedented degree of rationality in the process of approving water projects and allocating scarce federal funds for their construction.

As long as individual legislators persist in selfishly promoting unwar-ranted public works projects for their states and districts, however, those attempts to produce needed reform will continue to be undermined.

Syntech International lost its bid to legalize manufacture of lottery machines for use in other states when Gov. Mark White included the proposal in 45 bills he vetoed

So the company is moving its lottery-machine operation to Traverse City, Mich., in three to four months and taking as many as 50 jobs along with it, Syntech president Gordon Graves said Monda v

Michigan officials offered Syntech "a nice financial package as an incentive" to move there. including tax breaks and a loan of about $500,000, Graves said.

Although Syntech will keep its headquarters in Dallas, the move may cost the Dallas plant about half of its 80 to 100 employees, Graves said.

"As a Texan, I think it was a mistake," he said of White's veto. 'I think he didn't understand the issue and that it's going to cost Texas some jobs and tax revenue. It wasn't necessary

The company's decision to move construction of the controversial devices ends an eight-month battle against a 1907 law that makes possession of gambling devices a

Prison violence top priority for new prison director

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) -The new head of the Texas Department of Corrections says curbing violence within the nation's second-largest prison system is at the top of his priority

Lane McCotter, 44, who describes himself as "compulsive to get things don," replaced 61-year-old Raymond Procunier who resigned Monday. Procunier said he just "ran out of gas" after being at the helm of the prison system for 13 months of unprecedented violence.

"There will always be violence but there's no reason why we must accept this," McCotter said. So far this year, there have been 13 homicides behind prison walls, running at a pace equal to a year ago, when 25 killingsoccurred. Nearly 400 stabbing incidents were reported in 1984.

Two weeks ago, a female prison guard was slain. On Sunday, an inmate died after being stabbed 58

Procunier said the slaying of guard Minnie Houston contributed to his decision.

"You can only bear so many tragedies in life," Procunier said. "I had my last one.

During his term, Procunier dealt with the violence as well as the reorganizing of the 37,000-inmate system saddled with a federal court mandate for reform. The job, he said, was 100 times more difficult than he expected, even with extensive experience in the Board of Corrections Chairman Robert Gunn, in an interview published Tuesday in The Huntsville Item, said the intensity of negotiations to resolve a 13-year-old civil rights lawsuit and the reluctance of Gov. Mark White to go along with the settlement - prompted Procunier to offer his resignation several tmes. Gunn said it was necessary for Procunier to remain.

'I don't know if the courts would have approved the settlement if Procunier hadn't been there,' Gunn said. "We had to have him on board when the signing took place. "He was pretty upset that last week when we couldn't get the governor to go along," Gunn said.

White's criminal justice aide, Hershel Meriwether, denied there was a lack of support from the governor. And Procunier on Monday praised the cooperation he received at all levels of the state 'bureaucracy.

McCotter was White's choice to direct Texas prisons at the time the job went to Procunier, who had headed the nation's largest prison system in California, as well as the Virginia and Utah systems.

But the prison board selected Procunier instead and named McCotter to the No. 2 job.

McCotter came to Texas last July after a career in the military, retiring with the rank of colonel. In Vietnam, he was with headquarters of the 18th Military Police Brigade.

Mrs. Baker said. Her simple vellow taper, in a lime - green holder, is lit as a signal that a story is about to begin. When she talks, she leans forward, occasionally punctuating a remark by patting the listener's arm. She prefers African tales, Br'er

Appalachian folklore. Mrs. Baker credits much of her philosophy to her 37 years as a librarian and storyteller at the New York Public Library, and the strong influence of Ann Carol Moore, who began the first children's library there.

"I was terrible at it at first. I did all the things I wasn't supposed to," she said of storytelling.

A strong opponent of changing voice tone to re - create story characters, Mrs. Baker cited The Three Bears as the most tempting example. "How do you know what a bear sounds like? Have you ever had conversation with a bear?"

Timing is the key, Mrs. Baker maintained. "The color in your story comes from timing. You know when to make that dramatic pause - then when to go on with your story," she said.

Known nationally as a distinguished children's librarian, educator, author, raconteur and folklorist, Mrs. Baker said she considers her art a way of sharing books with children.

"I guess I'm thinking of storytelling as a kind of motivation for reading — for love of books," she said. "A child can be skilled in

Grist mill ready for daily gr

EAGLE POINT, Ore. (AP) - It has been 113 years since the two 1.400-pound French quartz grinding stones came around Cape Horn in a clipper ship, but they are still doing the daily grind at the Butte Creek Mill.

"It's antiquated, but it does the job," said Peter Crandall, who left Camarillo, Calif., and a career in aerospace engineering to revive Oregon's last water-powered grist

"I get a lot of satisfaction that this is not just a historical object sitting dead in the water," he "It's a producing mill, producing a product I am interested in, which is these whole grains.

A growing market for whole-grain health foods has allowed Crandall and his family to make a living from the mill that went broke during the Depression.

years ago," said Crandall. "There wasn't the interest in nutrition." Powered by the waters of Little Butte Creek, a tributary of the Rogue River, the mill grinds about

"I couldn't have survived 30

5,000 pounds of grain per week. The mill produces mixes for pancakes, biscuits, corn bread and muffins with its own stone-ground whole-grain flours and meals.

It also distributes 11 varieties of stone-ground flours and meals, 20 kinds of cereals and rolled grains, 14 whole grains and 11 other grain products

About half the mill's products are sold through its own country store on the premises, while a quarter are distributed to area markets and a quarter are sold through the mail, said Crandall.

Though it's the only mill of its kind in Oregon, Butte Creek is part of a growing industry taking advantage of the interest in whole-grain foods.

"Just about every couple of months an old mill is being restored and being put back in full operation or partial operation," said Fred Beals, president of the Society for Preservation of Old

In a telephone interview from his home in Mishawaka, Ind., Beals estimated about 250 water-powered grist mills are running in the United States, mostly in the East.

Only about 100 of them are commercial enterprises, with the rest being museums or hobby mills, he said The Butte Creek Mill was built from whipsawed pine boards and 12-by-12 mortised beams pinned together with oak pegs in 1872 by John Daley and Eber Emery.

The grindstones were quarried in France, dressed in Illinois, barged down the Mississippi River, shipped by clipper ship to Crescent City, Calif., and hauled by wagon over the Siskiyou Mountains to the small southern Oregon farming town of Eagle Point.

The mill went through two more owners before 1932, when the Putnam family gave a nail keg filled with 600 silver dollars to a bank that had taken over the mill during the Depression.

Three generations of Putnams ran the mill before Frank Putnam sold it to Crandall in 1970. It was 1972 before Crandall tookover operation of the mill. He has been steadily restoring and improving the mill ever since keeping alive a nearly forgotten

Stone grinding died out in the 1920s, with the advent of the steel roller mill. Sometime around the turn of the century, the Butte Creek Mill was converted to the modern technique. But Crandall has gone back to the old way.

The new technique was cheaper and faster, but it removed the bran and the wheat germ, producing a white flour from the starchy endosperm of the wheat.

"You end up with a product that is almost nutritionally barren," Crandall said.

Stone grinding, however, cuts the grain with a scissors action, evenly distributing the bran and germ.

Craftsman turns from working silver to wood

CROSBY, Minn. (AP) - Karl Alla of Crosby, a retired silversmith, does woodcarving. He does artistic work but he claims he's not an artist.

"There's a difference. A laborer works with his hands. An artisan works with his head and his hands. But an artist works with head, hands and heart. These carvings do not make me an artist," he said as he showed off a table top full of his

Alla carves mostly birds, but he has done lions and decorative items such as clocks and candleholders

He travels as far as Lake

Superior to get wood, but sometimes uses pieces found in the woods near his home

"I use white pine and ponderosa pine for the birds," Alla said, but the stands upon which they are fastened are made of anything from driftwood to cactus. "I make everything by hand, except the wire used for the legs.

He draws a pattern on the block of wood with pencil, then cuts the basic shape with a band saw. Then he works with a knife, shaping and shaving the wood.

He soaks the wood in water and sands it three times, allowing the natural grain to rise and take on the appearance of feathers. The birds are stained and varnished to a high gloss

"Birds with long, slender bills are not carved in one piece," Alla said. "I make the bill separate and drill a deep hole in the head to mount them. That way they don't break off so easily.

Alla sells some of his carvings to tourists in gift shops. Other people make their way to his door to look and buy after hearing about his craft.

"It's no big thing," he says with nodesty. "Just a hobby. modesty. Something I like to do. I'm sure not making money at it.'

EST SEA

He says he has a whole box full of

IUM MAI IKESS

"mistakes" in the basement; wood that cracked, or holes or blobs of pine wax that showed up in the wood grain as he was carving.

He discovered that sumac wood cannot be left to dry in sunlight because it cracks. When he finds a nice piece for carving he brings it inside and it cures in the dark for two years.

As a silversmith, Alla was used to making jewelry all "by hand," and says he doesn't like the way things are mass produced now with machines.

"Working by hand, without so much help from machines, is still the best way," he said.

Greenville program helps deaf children and their families

By MARY LOU HAZAL Greenville Herald Banner

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) -They may grow up not experiencing the pleasure of listening to kittens purring, birds singing, popcorn popping, a sibling's laugh or their parents' reassuring voices.

For children with a silent handicap, sounds are only noises to be tuned out. But with early detection of a hearing loss and professional help, these youngsters can learn to make sense out of the garble that interrupts their quiet

Ty Hubbard, the 2-year-old son of William and Jackie Hubbard of Greenville, is a rambunctious, outgoing child with a hearing impairment. For the last five months, Becky Spivy, a deaf education teacher with the Greenville Independent School District, has been visiting the Hubbards' home weekly.

During a recent visit, the teacher suggested some activities for Ty to work on this summer to develop his language and listening skills in an effort to overcome the serious problems a child with a hearing impairment faces.

Exercises such as blowing bubbles, blowing out candles and blowing on whistles will help Ty to say "whhhhh" sounds and "get him aware of the breath streams required for speech," Mrs. Spivy

"Are you having any problems with the hearing aids?" she asked the boy's mother.

Ty, who has a moderate to moderately severe hearing loss, got his hearing aids late last November and after a two-month adjustment period is now content to wear them all day without taking them out, Mrs. Hubbard said.

Getting a small child accustomed to wearing hearing aids takes time and perserverance on the parents' part to put the aids back in unless they are hurting the youngster's ears, the teacher said.

As Mrs. Spivy and Mrs. Hubbard talked in the living room, Ty's attention was divided between the televison set and what the two women were doing. During the teacher's visit, the youngster demonstrated a few exercises he and Mom had been practicing, but the "student" was Mrs. Hubbard.

Helping parents to help their hearing impaired children is the goal of the Parent-Infant Training Program which the GISD offers as a Regional Day School for the

And listening, something usually taken for granted, is a skill that a person with a hearing impairment must develop. Without a hearing aid, those with a hearing impairment hear "garble. They don't have any idea of what it is, the teacher said.

Since getting his hearing aids, Ty has had to "learn to listen like a little baby and how to discriminate sounds," Mrs. Spivy said.

"He's improving quite rapidly and learning to listen," she said.

"He likes for you to talk to him all the time, and he likes to listen," Mrs. Hubbard said as her son played.

The program has also been beneficial for the Hubbards, who now know how to help their son.

"It's shown me some direction. things to do and steps to take," the mother said.

Mrs. Spivy has also provided information for the Hubbards to read on deafness.

"Just the information alone is vital. The program has helped us a lot," Hubbard said. But books and brochures on the causes of deafness cannot explain to them why their son is deaf. "The doctors don't know what caused Ty's hearing loss," Mrs.

Shortly thereafter, the family visited five different doctors.

When a new school year starts this fall, Ty will continue in the home program, but after his third birthday he will attend the pre-kindergarten class for hearing impaired children at Houston Elementary School.

This year teacher Bernie Herlt has six children ranging from ages 3 to 6 in her class. Buses from Quinlan and Sulphur Springs pick up the students each day.

The mornings begin with Mrs. Herlt checking the students hearing aids. Three of the youngsters wear auditory trainers which act like a radio, keeping the sound of their teacher's voice constant as if she were no more than 18 inches away.

The children, whose hearing losses vary from mild to profound work on pre-academics and language development.

Texas-New Mexico chili war heats up

WASHINGTON (AP) - A proposal to make chili the national food has erupted into red-hot debate on Capitol Hill, embroiling New Mexico and Texas in a tongue-in-cheek clash.

Is it "chili" or "chile?" Not to mention the more incendiary question, "To bean or not to bean?"

"Where I come from, we spell it 'c-h-i-l-e,''' says Manuel Lujan, R-N.M.

He has introduced House Joint Resolution 255, "to provide for the designation of chile as the official food of the United States of America.

Under Lujan's resolution "chile" would be right up there with the bald eagle, the Star-Spangled Banner and the flag.

From a basic philosophical standpoint, this is fine with J.J.

"Jake" Pickle, D-Austin. Nevertheless, he introduced his own chili resolution.

Why is Pickle so picky? Why did he eschew Lujan's resolution? "His reasoning was it had beans in it," Lujan said. "He wouldn't have anything to do with chile with beans, so he introduced his own resolution.' Pickle's version of the legislation would designate chili - with an "I" and without beans - as the nation's official food. The first shot in the "chili war" was fired back in April, when Lujan rejected Pickle's chili without beans - recipe. Rising to the defense of his Texas colleague. Rep. Eligio "Kika" de la Garza, D-Mission, said Lujan "didn't know a chili from a chestnut."

"That's like declaring war in the Southwest," said Lujan's press secretary, Steve Goldstein.

The controversy has elicited diplomacy worthy of the Geneva arms talks from the two combatants' Capitol Hill colleagues.

Lujan proudly noted that one of the co-sponsors of his version of the resolution is a Texan, Dallas Republican Steve Bartlett.

"The congressman is an advocate of chili of choice," explained Bartlett's administrative assistant, Mary Jane Maddox. "He believes everyone should have the right to choose the chili to chew."

In signing onto Lujan's resolution, she said, Bartlett was "extending the hand of consensus from Texas across the Guadalupe Mountains to New Mexico.'

However, Bartlett spells chili with an 'I,' she said.

Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, sits geographically and philosophically on the border.

"Of course we in El Paso do use a lot of the good red and green chilis from New Mexico and we use the recipes from Texas, "he said.

Ice cream for June

By GAYLA MALONEY

TDA Marketing Representative Dairy products and summer months automatically seem to go together. The familiar sound of themusic from the ice cream man's truck sends children begging for the cool, creamy confection

Ice cream has been around for hundreds of years. The Italians. Chinese, and French all developed crude versions of what we call ice cream today. Some of the common ingredients used in earlier ice cream recipes included snow, fruit juices and honey. Ice cream was first advertised in 1774 in New York newspapers. George Washington and Thomas Jefferson loved ice cream. In fact, Jefferson developed his own 18 - step formula for making ice cream. Dolly Madison was famous for serving ice cream at many White House functions.

According to Gail Corley, education specialist with Associated Milk Producers Inc., the story of the invention of the ice cream sundae is an interesting one. In the late 1890s, the city commissioners in Evanston, Ill., passed an ordinance forbidding the sale of ice cream sodas on Sunday because of the bad influence of such "Sunday afternoon dallying" by the town yought. A resourceful soda fountain operator bypassed the law by serving ice cream with syrup but without the soda. This became the "Sunday soda" or just the "Sunday" and it was so popular that hundreds were sold everyday of the week. When the town fathers objected to the name "Sunday, the spelling was changed to Dairy products are an important part of our diet. It is recommended that children have at least three servings a day of foods in the dairy group. Teenagers need four or more servings, adults need two or more servings and pregnant and lactating women need three or more servings a day. A serving is considered to be a half cup. Foods in the dairy group include milk (while, low fat, skim, non - fat dry and buttermilk), cheese, cottage cheese, sour cream, cream cheese, yogurt, ice cream, ice milk, butter. cream and half & half.

Dairy foods are our primary source of calcium in the diet. When we are young, an adequate source of calcium is important for the development of strong bones and teeth. As we become adults, calcium is also essential for the prevention of osteoporosis, a soft and week, thus making them more susceptible to breakage.

Osteoporosis is common in women after the age of 40 and in elderly men. From birth to age 40, we can build up the density of our bones, after age 40 we cannot. However, people over age 40 can slow down the rate at which their bones lose calcium by exercising and eating a variety of foods, including calcium - rich foods

If you are dieting, substitute skim milk for whole milk, ice milk for ice cream, non - fat yogurt for regular yogurt, etc. By substituting the lower fat dairy products a person can keep the fat content from dairy products at a low intake and still keep a balanced diet rich

Remember to look for the 'Real" seal on all dairy products. This seal, developed by the American Dairy Association, assures consumers that they are buying a real dairy product and not an imitation product

The number of milk cows in Texas stands at 316,000 head, down from last year by two percent. During April, Texas dairy farmers produced 356 million pounds of milk. Production per cow average 1,125 pounds. Texas has around 2,600 dairymen. Dairy farming is a seven - day - a - week, year - round

The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) figures show that more than 90 percent of the commercial dairy farms have disappeared in one generation. Efficient, modern dairy farms, which produce more milk of higher quality from fewer cows, means fewer opportunities for families wishing to have their own dairy

A combination of pineapple and strawberries

Ice wins applause

By CECILY BROWNSTONE AP Food Editor

A young friend of mine, who loves fruit ices, recently became allergic to dairy foods. Because she couldn't find a fruit ice on the market made without milk, she worked out a recipe of her own. It calls for pineapple and strawberries, sugar and corn syrup and a little dry white wine.

Various friends have tried this Two-Fruit Ice and it always wins applause from tasters. One of its features is that it stays just malleable enough to be scooped up the moment it is taken out of the freezer. Other virtues: this ice has more body than other ices of its kind because it has plenty of fruit in it, and it stores extremely well.

The following recipe for the Two-Fruit Ice calls for two 8 ounce cans of unsweetened crushed

In previous testimony, Agca had insisted that his only other accomplice in the square on May 13, 1981, was Oral Celik, a fugitive Turk charged with also shooting

But under intense interrogation by Judge Severino Santiapichi, Agca suddently changed his testimony and said there was a third man in the square with him

Agca said the man's name was Akif and that he was supposed to set off some "panic bombs" to cover the escape of the two gunmen Agca and Celik. In previous testimony, Agca had said Celik was carrying the small hand grenades in a handbag.

But today, he admitted he had lied about that.

When he was shown a photograph taken by a tourist at the time of the shooting, Agca pointed to a face in the crowd and identified him only as as "Akif." The man in the picture was looking toward the place where Agca said he and Celik were standing right before the shooting.

Everyone else in the photograph has their eyes to the front, toward the pope in his white car.

Agca said Akif had come to Rome with Celik, and all three Turks met in Rome three days before the shooting.

Agca, 27, who is serving a life sentence for his attempt to kill the pope, claimed that Akif was a noted terrorist who had carried out 'noteworthy'' attacks in Turkey.

The trial recessed until the afternoon session Prosecutor Antonio Marini told reporters during the recess, "Everything Agca says must be evaluated.

Marini said, "I don't have any feeling one way or another" about the identification of an alleged third accomplice. However, the prosecutor said it was the first time that Akif's name had come out in the investigation.

Agca is the chief prosecution witness against four Turks and three Bulgarians charged with conspiring and participating in the attempt to kill Pope John Paul II. Only two of the Turks and one Bulgarian are in custody.

Sense of deja vu' in crisis

The yellow ribbons. The helpless fury of ordinary Americans. The bitter anger of bearded young Moslems. The terrorist demands that begin piously, "In the name of God the merciful, the compassionate."

These echoes of an earlier crisis - the 1979-81 ordeal of the Tehran embassy hostages - reverberate through the hostage drama now unfolding in Beirut.

And U.S. officials say they fear that the current impasse, like the 444-day Iran affair, could drag on for weeks or months of threats, bluster and fruitless negotiation.

Warren M. Christopher, who was chief U.S. negotiator in the Iran crisis, says he feels "a sense of deja vu" in today's hostage-holding, especially in the U.S. government's reliance on a "moderate," Lebanese Shiite leader Nabih Berri, to gain the release of the hostages.

In Iran in 1979, American officials also tried to deal with Westdrnized professiona men like Berri and got nowhere, Christopher recalled in a telephone

"I hope the results won't be the same this time," said the former deputy secretary of state, now practicing law in Los Angeles.

The two crises have their obvious differences. One involved the takeover of a U.S. Embassy, the other the hijacking of a U.S. jetliner. But parallels between the two are striking:

 Both hostage seizures were carried out by militant believers of Islam's austere Shiite sect, which is the dominant religion in Iran and the faith of the largest segment of the population in pluralistic

AnAP News Analysis

- In both countries, the lines of civil authority were blurred or broken down. And, just as it was uncertain who controlled the Iran "student" militants, it is still unclear what forces are behind the Lebanon skyjackers.

- In both, the holders of American hostages focused their demands on thid countries. The Iranian militants and government demanded that Panama, and later Egypt, hand over the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The Lebanon hijackers demand that Israel release more than 700 Lebanese Shiite prisoners.

WARREN HASSE

IT WAS DR. WILLIS TATE, I believe, then serving as president of Southern Methodist University, who warned the chief executive officers of other NCAA schools that they had better immediately take control of their athletic departments or suffer the subsequent consequences

For whatever reason, that warning was ignored and as a result a special NCAA convention opens tomorrow in an effort to deal with some of those consequences. Having been associated on the perimeter of the college athletic scene since the early 1950s, it is easy to see where the programs have gone, and why

One Division I president told me within the past year that "I don't know a thing about running an athletic program; I'm just a good sports fan." I'm sure that is a primary cause of the problem in most cases. The other is fear.

As with any major diversified industry, it is impossible for the CEO to have expertise in all areas of operation. Thus, specialists are hired to run those different sections, all directly accountable to the CEO. A university president doesn't have a problem controlling the School of Fine Arts or School of Business. It becomes a bit more difficult to handle the area of Journalism or University Food Service, because the students are more deeply involved. And when you get to athletics, you bring into play all groups...alumni, students, fans, major financial donors, media, NCAA...each with their own demands and opinions and goals. The athletic director serves as the liason between the CEO and these groups, a role that demands a heavy hand and total blind support from the institution. And this is where the fear factor comes into play. Most of the aforementioned groups feel it is easier to secure another titular head of the university than to find a winning coach; thus the president has had to walk a fine line, which up to now has seen any leaning go in the direction of the athletic department. This is what Dr. Tate was forthrightly

Now the school presidents' feet are going to the fire, and in a most appropriate place, New Orleans, home of Tulane University which has had major athletic department problems within the past few months. For years the presidents have issued statements condemning all of the malpractices. But secret voting procedures, done in most cases by emissaries at the annual NCAA conflabs, did not result in actions that supported the presidential edicts. Subsequently, this special meeting call.

A special invitation has gone out to the 791 member school presidents to attend. The first test will be to see how many actually do. Though always welcome, history proves that less than 30 percent attended previous meetings. The second test will be a hard one, voting. This time it will be "on the record", no secret ballots. The folks back home, the media, contemporaries will all know whether the president has been blowing smoke or not. It will be interesting.

There are 12 items on the agenda for the two-day session. Seven directly give the NCAA Enforcement Division (35 employees, only 10 fulltime) more power in the fight against cheating. AND six of those seven were proposed by the newly formed NCAA President's Commission, which called the special convention. It will be a real integrity check. Those six special propositions deal with

1. Asking each institution to conduct a self-study of its athletic progam at least every five years and provide the NCAA with documentation

2. The school's athletic budget be controlled by the institution and

3. Annual audits of that athletic budget by a firm selected by the CEO or his designee

All of the above most people would have assumed were already being accomplished as standards of good business practices. But they are items over which control has eroded. The final three aren't aseasy

4. Any penalties given to a coach must remain in force even if that coach moves to another institution

5. Mandate all coaches and student-athletes sign a one-time affidavit vowing that they are clean, individually, when it comes to following financial aid rules 6. Mandate support for future NCAA legislation that would hold student-athletes accountable for knowingly violating NCAA rules The final three proposals are a start in putting some teeth into regulations. If approved, attempts to enforce them would unquestionably result in many long, expensive trips to the courthouse. That is unfortunate, because the CEOs have more important concerns in providing higher education. Had they farced up to the problem when Dr. Tate first warned it would be a smoother time now. Had they been in charge when Georgia and Oklahoma Universities went to court against the NCAA, rather than taking advice of their football-influenced athletic directors, most of this could have been avoided. It is indeed going to be an interesting show on Basin Street, a show that could start to restore some common sense and integrity to the collegiate athletic scene...or result in its total demise as we have known and appreciated it for many years.

Mavericks draft two seven-footers

MAVS' DRAFT CHOICE — Detlef Schrempe hasn't played a game yet for the Dallas Mavericks, but he's already collecting autographs. Freddy Ybarra, 13, of Austin gets Schrempe's signature at the Dallas-Fort Worth International

Big men abound in 1985 NBA draft

NEW YORK (AP) - Dave DeBusschere called it "a landmark day in the history of the New York Knicks," and with Patrick Ewing to make it so, no one was arguing with him.

Draft Day 1985, however, could have an impact even beyond the considerable expectations for the former Georgetown center, if just three or four of the seven centers drafted among the first 17 players become fixtures in the middle for their National Basketball Association teams

Ewing's long-awaited selection by the Knicks was followed by five more big "impact" players before the first guard, Chris Mullin, was taken seventh by Golden State.

Forward Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma was picked by Indiana, 7-0 center Benoit Benjamin of Creighton by the Los Angeles Clippers, 6-7 forward Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State by ttle, 7-0 center Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist by Atlanta and 6-11 center Joe Kleine of Arkansas by Sacramento

'Prior to the draft, we had pegged the top centers as Ewing, Benjamin, Koncak and Kleine, and that was the order they were selected in," said the NBA's scouting chief, Marty Blake. 'There were no surprises. It was truly the 'Year of the Big Man.'"

Every other team is going so big up front," Knicks Coach Hubie Brown said of his plans to pair Ewing with 7-footer Bill Cartwright on New York's front line next season. "It becomes a league of match-ups. The size factor at all the positions is increasing.

After Mullin, five forwards were taken before another player ticketed for backcourt action, Alfredrick Hughes of Chicago Loyola, was picked 14th by San

They were 6-9 Detlef Schrempf of Washington by Dallas, 6-9 Charles Oakley of Virginia Union by Cleveland and 6-9 Ed Pinckney of Villanova by Phoenix, 6-10 Keith Lee of Memphis State by Chicago, 6-7 Kenny Green of Wake Forest by Washington and 6-9 Karl Malone of Louisiana Tech by Utah

Lee was later traded by the Bulls, along with guard Ennis Whatley, to Cleveland for Oakley and 6-3 guard Calvin Duncan of Virginia Commonwealth, a second-round pick of the Cavaliers.

Hughes was followed in order by three more 7-foot centers, Blair Rasmussen of Oregon by Denver and Bill Wennington of St. John's and Uwe Blab of Indiana, both by Dallas, which had three first-round

Of the six guards picked in the first round, four were among the last seven choices.

Detroit took 6-2 Joe Dumars of McNeese State, Houston grabbed 6-5 Steve Harris of Tulsa, Boston selected 6-2 Sam Vincent of Michigan State, Philadelphia took 6-8 forward Terry Catledge of South Alabama, Milwaukee picked 6-8 forward Jerry Reynolds of LSU, the Lakers selected 6-9 forward A.C. Green of Oregon State and Portland finished the first round with 6-3 Terry Porter of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

The Knicks, assured of getting the rights to Ewing on May 12 when they won the "Patrick Ewing Lottery," now must turn to the task of signing him, probably to a contract in excess of $1 million a

"We are going to enter into negotiations immediately with his representatives," DeBusschere said. "We are looking forward to an amicable and speedy negotiation. We don't anticipate any problems."

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Mavericks went into the National Basketball Association draft seeking a 7-foot center, and they came out with two.

Dallas used the eighth pick in Tuesday's draft to tap Washington's Detlef Schrempf, a play-making "poor man's Larry Bird," and then used its two other first-round choices for its own 'twin towers.

The Mavericks drafted 7-foot Bill Wennington of St. John's and 7-foot-2 Uwe Blab of Indiana — a move Coach Dick Motta said should give the team the NBA-caliber center it has craved since its founding. "If one touches and succeeds and carries his position, we can surround him now with quality players," Motta said. "If one of these two fellows can hit, we're going to have a very nice team." Depite the longing for a center,

Motta said the 6-foot-9 Schrempf was too good to pass up with the eighth pick of the draft

'Schrempf is the only player we did not interview, which is typical," Motta said. "We didn't think he'd be there.'

"I just get tired of saying it, almost as much as you guys do of writing it or asking it — what are needs are," Motta told reporters, referring to Dallas' need for a

"I really believe it would have been foolish to pass up Schrempf to take Wennington - we felt Wennington was the next-best center in the draft.

When Wennington was still available at the 16th spot, Dallas was doubly delighted, Motta said.

One attraction of both Schrempf and Blab, both natives of West Germany, is that they began their basketball careers late and are likely to have more room for improvement than U.S.-bred athletes.

"They're on the upside of their potential," he said. "(Schrempf) has a flair for the game. ... He's a Schrempf has been called "the poor man's Larry Bird" because of his versatility, passing and scoring ability. Scouts say he can play either forward or guard in the NBA

He averaged 15.8 points per game his senior year at Washington, with a shooting percentage of .558. In three NCAA playoff games, he averaged 23.7 points per game and 8.7 rebounds, and in Olympic competition with the West German team, he averaged 18.8 points and 8 rebounds per game.

"I'm very excited," Schrempf said by telephone from New York. 'Dallas already has some small forwards and big guards, and I guess I'll just fill in where they have some needs. I just hope I can contribute.

Schrempf was the only Pac-10 player to rank in the top 10 in four different categories - scoring, rebounding, assists and field goal percentage.

Wennington said he thinks he can start next fall for Dallas.

"I feel that I'm capable of doing that," he said. "I like it a lot more than going into a team where I'd have to sit on the bench a long Wennington averaged 12.2 points and 6.4 rebounds per game for St. Johns, where he finished his collegiate career as the school's leader in blocked shots with 151 and field goal percentage at .579.

Competing with Blab will improve both, he said.

'Dallas doesn't have big men right now and I knew that they wanted to fill that void. I think it was good (to draft both). It's going to be great. In practice, when two big men play against each other, they can only improve and make each other better...

"With Detlef, we're really going to make our presence felt in the NBA and help Dallas come a long wav.

Blab was on his way to Dallas from New York and not available for comment.

Blab averaged 16 points and 6.3 rebounds per game his senior year at Indiana, where he steadily developed under Coach Bobby Knight. He finished the season with 72 blocks shots and a Big 10-leading field goal percentage of .565.

Dallas had eyed Arkansas center Joe Kleine, but he was tapped by Sacramento with the sixth pick. Golden State opted for guard Chris Mullin with the seventh choice, leaving the Mavericks with Schrempf

Asked if he had any misgivings about drafting a player — Schrempf — he had not interviewed, Motta responded in his own whimsical fashion.

"No," he said. "I didn't interview my wife before I married

Leading rookie eyes AL roundup Mayflower Classic

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Penny Hammel, the leading rookie on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, is ready for a rest. But she won't get it this week.

"I haven't played well the last three weeks. I'm taking next week off. Slowly but surely, I'm getting mentally, physically and emotionally drained," Hammel said Tuesday during preparations for the $250,000 Mayflower Classic.

Hammel, a 23-year-old from Decatur, Ill., joined the tour after twice winning All-America honors for the University of Miami. She ranks 40th on the money list with $29,301

Cindy Flom of Tucson, Ariz., is second among the rookies and 64th overall with $19,362, followed by Cathy Kratzert of Fort Wayne, Ind., No. 69 overall at $16,556.

"I'm not totally satisfied with my game," said Hammel, who will be among 107 pros teeing off in Thursday's opening round of the 72-hole tournament, to be played over the 6,203-yard, par-72 Country Club of Indianapolis course.

Many of the game's top names have taken the week off, but leading money-winner Alice Miller will be on hand in search of her fourth victory this season.

"I'm swinging a little more solidly this year," said Miller, an eight-year pro who has won $280,750 while doubling her career victory total this year.

Among the women not playing here are Nancy Lopez, Patty Sheehan and Beth Daniel. Their absence helps make Miller a leading contender for the $37,500 top prize, which would make her the LPGA's all-time single season money leader.

Betsy King, the 1984 Player of the Year and seventh on the current money list, figures to be one of Miller's challengers.

"I think it's the best course we play all year," King said the tree-lined layout. "It's fun to play. You can't scramble. You have to

Tigers snap Red Sox winning streak

AL ROUNDUP By DICK BRINSTER

AP Sports Writer Somebody had to cool off the Boston Red Sox, and Detroit's Lance Parrish figured his chances were as good as anybody's especially with Bruce Hurst on the mound.

Parrish was right, and his fifth career grand slam and sixth career homer off Hurst was enough to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 9-8 come-from-behind victory Tuesday night that halted a six-game Boston winning streak

It led a 17-hit Tiger assault on a night when American League batters pounded out 145 hits, but would take back seat historically, at least - to Reggie Jackson's 512th career homer.

Parrish's homer keved a five-run Detroit sixth inning that handed Boston only its third loss in the last 20 games and moved the Tigers into second place in the AL East two percentage points ahead of the

"When I stepped in the box, I said to myself, 'This would be a nice time to hit a home run," said Parrish

The suit was filed Monday against former estate comptroller Ed Shimp, alleging he illegally charged trips and purchases to the estate that were not business expenses.

There were no specific damages sought in the suit, but estate officials claimed Shimp took about $40,000.

The suit alleged Shimp "misappropriated for his own use and benefit money, property and services that rightfully belonged to the Hermann Hospital Estate."

He charged the estate for trips he took on commercial airlines and chartered aircraft for his personal purposes, the suit said. Shimp also charged personal expenses to Hermann credit cards, the suit said. Neither Shimp nor his

HOUSTON (AP) - A mockingbird whose kamikaze dives terrorized Houston mail carriers for two months has stopped her attacks since her babies left the nest, postal officials said. 'The baby birds have matured and left the nest. so the mail carrier no longer appears a threat to the mother," U.S. Postal Service spokesman Mike

West said Monday. The attacks began in late March as the mother mockingbird zoomed down or bombarded mail carriers with angry chirps as they walked down the 1600 block of Kipling in central Houston.

Letters carriers apparently were the mockingbird's only target, residents said.

Mail service was interrupted for three days. But postal officials refused to take drastic measures against the bird, hoping the attacks would stop when her babies left the nest.

Some residents of the block defended the postal service's feathered nemesis. "I don't believe that bird deserved the bad publicity it got," said Mark White Sr., father of the state's governor. 'Mockingbirds are our state birds. We want them to take up for their rights.'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Country music star Roy Acuff, 81, who has been singing and playing his fiddle on the Grand Ole Opry for 46 years, has been released from a hospital after treatment for a blood clot in the lung. Opry spokesman Jerry Strobel said Acuff and his doctor would decide when he could perform again. He was hospitalized twice last July for chest pains and did not perform on the Opry for five months. Acuff, best known for the songs "Wabash and Great Speckled Bird," was released Tuesday from HCA-Edgefield Hospital. He was NEW YORK (AP) -

First Lady Nancy Reagan took a break dancing lesson when she visited a home for runaway and homeless youngsters. She joined with four Gus, one of Mrs. Reagan's partners. "I've been doing this for six years, and I've seen a lot of people who didn't do as good as Mrs. Reagan the first time. Earlier, Mrs. Reagan discussed the perils of street life with nine young residents of Covenant House, a home for runaways near Times Square founded by the Rev. Bruce Ritter. WASHINGTON (AP) -

Children are crying out for help about alcohol and drug abuse, says actor Bruce Weitz, who plays the seedy but sensitive detective Mick Belker on NBC television's "Hill Street Blues." But too many parents, teachers and principals are turning their backs on the problem, he told the National PTA convention Tuesday. Weitz, honorary chairman of the PTA's Drug and Alcohol Abuse Prevention Project, received more than 10,000 letters from Chicago-area children after the PTA and a television station there launched a campaign in January encouraging youngsters to "Write Bruce" about drugs and alcohol.

The PTA has published excerpts in a pamphlet. 'If My Parents Only Knew..

Cross-Florida Canal is still hotly debated

A canal across northern Florida has sparked imagination and controversy for more than 150 years. As early as 1828, Congress authorized a study of building a canal across north Florida to save some 600 miles of navigation

As noted, Florida's Legislature

asked Congress to end the project.

And it was during a discussion in 1979 that Rep. Frank Mann of Fort ditch is dead."

and the canal should not be built.

By RON WORD

Associated Press Writer JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A state lawmaker once summed up the fight against the Cross Florida Barge Canal by saying, "The wicked ditch is dead.

However, both opponents and supporters of a shipping lane across the state from the Gulf of Mexico to the Atlantic Ocean know that although the canal may be terminally ill, it is hardly dead.

Congress has never eliminated the project from the federal government's list of public works projects, although President Richard Nixon suspended work on it in 1971 when it was about one-third complete.

Last week, a standing-room-only crowd of about 250 people jammed a meeting room at the St. Johns River Water Management District headquarters in Palatka where a congressional subcommittee heard testimony on the project's future.

The subcommittee is expected to vote on the measure next month.

Gov. Bob Graham and other state leaders, along with environmentalists, pushed for taking the project off the list of public works projects, while business and civic leaders urged continuation of the 110-mile canal.

'We do not want this canal. Period," said the governor. "We have many, many needs — we need new schools, more teachers, roads, bridges, mass transit, water and sewer lines — but there is one thing we don't need, and that's the Cross Florida Barge Canal."

Graham said the stat Legislature, governor and Cabinet have asked repeatedly since 1972 that the project be killed.

Florida Defenders of the Environment and the Sierra Club also supported discontinuing the project.

On the other side was George Linville, chairman of the Cross Florida Barge Canal Association.

"The bottom line is that the canal ought to be built and it should be built as soon as it is possible," said Linville.

U.S. Rep. Bill Chappell of Daytona Beach Shores, a longtime supporter of the project, said

Nuns participating in major study of bone disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 200 nuns, now entering a critical age group for older women, have been serving as subjects in a long-running study that is yielding important information about a crippling bone condition.

As America's population grows older, scientists are paying more attention to "brittle bone disease." which results in fractured hips and stooped backs among the elderly. And a key focus of this research is the nun study, which is approaching its crucial third decade

Dr. Robert P. Heaney of Creighton University in Omaha, Neb., the project director, said Tuesday that duration is the big difference in this study of the bone-thinning condition known as osteoporosis.

"There have been a fair number of studies of women who are osteoporotic," Heaney said in an interview. "But we decided to start with women who are clearly normal and to start 25 years before typical onset of the condition.

The researchers selected nuns who are members of several religious orders for the study because they are conscientious and easy to locate at any time, said Heaney while attending the annual meeting of the American Society For Bone and Mineral Research.

More than 18 years ago, 200 women were enrolled in the study when they were between the ages of 35 and 45 years, and more than 90 percent are still participating. The average age of the nuns today isabout 58 years.

Every five years, the nuns go to Omaha for a nine-day, in-hospital round of testing that looks at more than 200 variables, including bone mass, hormone levels and metabolism checks.

Heaney said the study, funded by National Institutes of Health grants of about $240,000 annually, hopes to chart the earliest stages of the disease which has a median age of onset of 65 years in the United Osteoporosis is a thinning of the bony material making up the skeleton, leading to brittle, easily fractured bones. Fractures in vertebrae result in the height loss and humped back seen in many of the elderly.

The condition, brought on by a loss of bone minerals, especially calcium, is four times more common in women than men. Experts estimate that up to 15 million Americans have osteoporosis to some degree. Heaney said the nun study already is producing useful information about osteoporosis even before the appearance of any bone fracturing.

Hostages say hijackers treated them well

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Greek singer Demis Roussos and two Americans released by hijackers of a TWA jetliner said future generations should decide today their captors made them as comfortable as possible and "The atmosphere is not became "emotionally attached" to conducive for completion now," he their hostages. Roussos, who marked his 39th birthday in Other supporters, such as U.S. captivity, said: "We have been Rep. Charles Bennett of treated quite well. They gave me a Jacksonville, said no action on birthday cake and they gave me a deauthorization should be guitar, to sing. They have been considered until the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers completes a very polite and very nice with us." Roussos, his secretary Pamela Smith, and college student Arthur Targontsidis arrived on the Mediterranean island of Cyprus today after a boat trip from Beirut. They were released by their Shiite Moslem captors on Tuesday.

All three said they were treated well by the hijackers who commandeered TWA Flight 847 last Friday and forced it to fly between Algeria and Beirut before ordering it to land for a third time in Beirut on Sunday.

They said they were taken off the Boeing 727 on the second stop in Beirut, along with other passengers.

Targontsidis, 18, of Brockton, Mass., described his captors as "very emotional people." He added: "They were very understanding. They were very emotionally attached to us."

Ms. Smith, an American who lives in London, told reporters at a news conference that the hijackers made us as comfortable, I think, as they possibly could."

'They were probably very poor people and they went far beyond their means to see to it that we were comfortable," she said.

Ms. Smith was born in Los Angeles and grew up in St. Petersburg, Fla.

All three of the released hostages said they were taken to a house after being removed from the plane, but that they then became separated.

'They separated us, and Pamela and I, we were put together in a flat where we stayed, I think, about three days," Roussos said.

All three said they had lost track of time during the incident.

He said he asked the hijackers why he was being released, but they would not answer.
