Amendments, local issues on ballots in election today

DALLAS (AP) - Texas voters will decide today who will be mayor of Houston, whether San Antonio's drinking water should have more fluoride. and if the state should adopt a $1.4 billion water plan.

In Beaumont, the fates of the mayor and a councilmen are at stake in a recall election that stems from the city's loss of about $20 million in the collapse of an investment company.

The water package is split between Propositions 1 and 2, which are among 14 proposed changes to the Texas Constitution.

The first amendment would authorize $980 million in state bonds to raise money for reservoirs pipelines, treatment plants and flood control projects. It also would set up a $250 million insurance fund to back local water bonds.

Proposition 2 would authorize $200 million in bonds for low-interest loans to farmers who buy water-saving irrigation equipment.

Lawmakers approved the water plan this year. Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis have been campaigning in support of the

The scattered opposition includes groups who fear the plan could lead to a program in which water collected in East Texas reservoirs would be sent to

Among other amendments is a proposal to allow the Texas Department of Corrections to trade troublesome inmates with other states

Voters in Houston must decide whether to keep Kathy Whitmire as mayor for a third two-year term or return Louie Welch to a job he held for 10 years.

The campaign, in which both candidates spent more than $1 million, was sparked by Welch's inadvertent comment, broadcast live on television two weeks ago, thata way to combat the disease AIDS in Houston would be to "shoot the queers."

The candidate later apologized for his self-described "blooper," adding that he didn't believe he had the support of Houston's gay community anyway

Welch, whose candidacy was spurred by a gay rights referendum he helped defeat in January, made the battle against AIDS the foundation of his campaign

Mrs. Whitmire, a former city controller, said that her administration is educating people to the dangers of AIDS, has passed laws to oust porn peddlers, widened and repaired streets, improved the mass transit system and hired additional police officers, resulting in a lower crime rate.

Also in Houston, eight political newcomers known as the "Straight Slate" are running for City Council seats, saying they want to protect the populace from what they consider the rampant spread of AIDS.

"Our main issue is health cards and AIDS," says council candidate O.J. Striegler, a spokesman for

He said the slate supports the reinstatement of the health cards used to combat tuberculosis in Houston from 1941 to 1978, but with two changes - checking for AIDS and re-testing every six months

In San Antonio, after months of heated debate, voters will decide whether the nation's 10th largest city should boost the natural .3 parts per million of fluoride in the water supply to .8 ppm.

Mayor Henry Cisneros calls fluoridation long overdue, but the Homeowner-Taxpayer Association contends it's too expensive. The City Water Board has predicted it would take $703,000 for the startup, with recurring costs of about $20,000 annually In Beaumont, voters will go to the polls for the city's first recall election in 16 years. The recall vote was added to the ballot after a citizens group launched a petition drive calling for the removal of Mayor Bill Neild and Councilman intelligence community turned its resources today to trying to penetrate the riddle of Vitaly Yurchenko, the KGB official who turned the CIA's biggest coup into its biggest embarrassment and stirred a diplomatic hornet's nest just before the Geneva summit.

Yurchenko stunned Washington by telling reporters Monday at a news conference without precedent in the Soviet Embassy residence that he is a victim of "state-sponsored terrorism." He claimed he was grabbed off the streets of Rome three months ago, drugged and brought unconscious to the United States, where CIA officials offered to make him a millionaire.

Those U.S. officials who would speak called that story "baloney. The State Department said Yurchenko is a spy who voluntarily came in from the cold, defecting at the U.S. Embassy in Rome in late August

Some speculated he simply changed his mind or got homesick; others wondered if he had been sent all along as a double agent to embarrass the United States.

There the matter will not rest Yurchenko is ensconsed in the Soviet compound. "At the moment, my only wish is to return as soon as possible to my country, my family, my kin and my friends," he said.

But the State Department, unwilling to accept that he voluntarily went back, said it "will insist on a meeting with him in an environment free of Soviet coercion to satisfy ourselves about his real intentions

That raised the specter of a U.S.-Soviet tug-of-war over Yurchenko in Washington as President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev prepare to meet at a Geneva summit conference two weeks hence.

But Yurchenko in his bravura one-hour news conference seemed to go out of his way to separate the political leadership of the United States from his allegations of 'torture'' and "barbarism" at U.S. hands

"I'm not sure whether your president knew about my situation." he said at one point. He also said the group that guarded and allegedly threatened him seemed separate from CIA Director William Casey and a top Casev assistant

Former CIA Director William Colby said those comments might have signaled a Soviet decision not to use the Yurchenko affair to sabotage the summit, as Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev used the U-2 spyplane incident to derail a 1959 summit with President Dwight D. Eisenhower

For its part, the CIA had nothing to say. Spokeswoman Kathy Pherson would not confirm the names of CIA officials Yurchenko

Fiscal-year building totals increase sharply

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Construction valuation in Pampa is still running less than half of the previous calendar year, but figures for the beginning of a new fiscal year show a doubling of values.

Based on monthly figures released Monday by the city's Building Inspection Department, valuation of building projects issued permits by the city in October reached $5,288,539.66 for the calendar year to date. That's only approximately 47 percent of the $11,278,521.18 recorded through October, 1984.

However, the latest totals are approximately $1.4 million higher than September's calendar year totals of $3,883,198.66, when the comparable figures were running at 36.5 percent in the department's report

For the fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, the city listed a valuation of $1,405,341 for buildings issued permits, indicating a jump of 101 percent over the $699,104 registered in the first month of the 1984-1985 fiscal year, when 52 building permits were issued.

The valuation for the 1984-1985

building permits, collecting $2,608

The department issued permits for six single family dwellings with a valuation of $458,400; one commercial building, $809,000; one relocation or demolishing, $3,000; three mobile homes, $21,000; seven alterations or additions to dwellings, $83,400; two alterations or additions to commercial buildings, $13,041; seven garages, $17,500; and two miscellaneous, no value listed.

For the calendar year to date, 216 building permits have been issued with fees of $12,875.25 collected.

The city issued 27 electrical permits last month, collecting fees of $653.32 for the beginning of the fiscal year period. In October, 1984.

New auditorium fees recommended

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

Members of the M. K. Brown Auditorium Advisory Board approved recommending new rental contracts and agreements and revised fees at their regular meeting Monday evening.

The new contracts and agreements will provide more specific details regarding the rental of the auditorium facilities, including the Heritage Room, the foyer, the Green Room and the auditorium proper, noted Danny Parkerson, auditorium manager. They also will allow the renters to specify in more detail what equipment and materials will be needed for various functions, activities and events in the auditorium. In conjunction with the new contracts, the board also recommended a revised fee schedule for submission to the

Pampa City Commission for its Base fees for the facilities will be $35 for the Heritage Room, $25 for the foyer, $15 for the Green Room and $200 for a day or night session, or $350 for all - day use of the auditorium.

Other fees will be set for use of auditorium personnel, security officers, sound and lighting crews, backstage crews, ushers, dishwashers, and ticket sellers and takers. Other charges will be specified for tableware and linens.

Such items as piano, a portable stage, public address system, tables, chairs, risers and ice machine will be available at no

Parkerson noted these charges are flat rate fees. Special rates will be available for non - commercial. fund raising and non - profit organizations and activities. Rehearsal rates for use of the Heritage Room and auditorium also will be set

The Green Room, which can be used for small receptions and similar activities, will be available at no charge if any of the other facilities are rented

The auditorium also will be reaching a contract for use of the concession area in the foyer. The city commission is expected to approve a bid on the concession operation soon, Parkerson said.

The concession vendor will be available for use at any event at no charge to the renters, he noted. The concession will provide soft drinks, candy and other light snack items, with part of the proceeds going to the auditorium.

The board also discussed rules and regulations for use of the auditorium facilities which will be distributed to individuals and groups renting facilities.

In other matters, the recently reorganized board selected Dudley Steele as chairman. Homer Johnson as vice chairman and Suz Anne Langley as secretary. Parkerson reported on recent maintenance items, repairs and

Royalty, mineral owners meeting slated for tonight

Royalty and mineral owners, elected officials and other interested parties have been invited to a Panhandle - wide public meeting and forum tonight to discuss the issues in the on - going oil and gas controversies.

To be held at 7 p.m. in the M. K. Brown Auditorium, the meeting has been called by Ron Slover, who has served as a spokesman for royalty owners and independents in the state and federal issues nvolving the Panhandle Field.

Slover said he had invited a number of state and district elected officials to attend the meeting and speak on the issues. Slover has been critical of federal involvement in the so - called 'white oil" controversy and has attacked the Texas Railroad Commission for its actions and inactions in keeping the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission out of the matter. He also has criticized the policies actions of the major oil and gas ompanies that he claims have kept royalty and mineral owners from receiving proper compensation and have deprived taxing entities of millions of dollars in revenue The forum will allow discussion of the issues and of alternatives for citizen involvement in the matters, Slover said.

The meeting will last "until everyone has his say," he added.

Three dead in family shooting

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - A "stormy" relationship erupted in violence when an estranged husband opened fire on his wife as she sat talking with friends, killing two people before turning the gun on himself

Police said Bernard Sharp, 29. 'went beserk." Family members said he was angry over the cancellation of a joint credit card. Killed in the Sunday shooting were Sharp, his wife, Denise Sharp, 28, and her friend, Deborah De La Torre, 25. Sharp, the operator of a janitorial service, also shot his cousin, Zenith "Zeni" Walker, 28, who was in fair condition at Arlington Memorial Hospital Monday

Sharp then turned his .357 Magnum revolver on himself, said Jim Willett, an Arlington police spokesman

"It appears to have been a very stormy relationship," Willett said. 'It has been an on-again, off-again thing for a couple of months.

Police say Sharp had been staying with friends in California after arguing with his wife last week. Investigators believe he returned home early Sunday, forced open a window and crawled inside. Willett said.

Walker said the three women were sitting in the kitchen when they heard a noise in the living room and went to investigate Sharp then opened fire with a six-shot pistol, hitting the women several times. Willett said.

Ms. Walker told police that Sharp first shot her three times, shot three times at Ms. De La Torre reloaded, fired five times at his wife and then shot himself in the head with the remaining bullet.

A neighbor, Benny Dollar, said he heard the shots while he was facilities is also being considered.

Parkerson reported the live Christmas tree southeast of the auditorium is being replaced. The one planted last year apparently has died because of creosote poisoning coming from the railroad ties which had been placed around Pampa Chamber of Commerce Manager Floyd Sackett said the new tree should be available soon. He said a smaller tree will be planted to cut down on the "shock" of transplanting. He said it will be located away from the present site to avoid any chance of lingering creosote residues.

Parkerson said ushers and ticket

Ticket sales booths will be placed at both entrances, Parkerson said, with ushers placed at auditorium hallway entrances to collect tickets

Parkerson said plans are also being studied to erect a marquee at the auditorium

The board also approved development of a showcase of entertainers who have performed at the auditorium. The historical mementoes presently located in the foyer showcase will be placed in the White Deer Lands Museum or other locations. The portrait of M. K. Brown and dedicatory plaques will remain.

The auditorium also is considering hiring a third person for part-time work to help in overtime situations and relieve the workloads of others from night-time and weekend events at the auditorium, Parkerson said.

Other maintenance items being implemented include reupholstering the foyer benches and hiring a service to clean the entrance rugs regularly.

DAILY RECORD White House beats retreat from 'Star Wars' statement

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House, trying to stave off a new reading of American military policy, staged a hasty retreat from President Reagan's declaration that the United States will not deploy the "Star Wars" defense shield against nuclear weapons until U.S. missiles are eliminated.

White House officials refused to say publicly or privately Monday that Reagan had erred. But they described U.S. policy on Star Wars in completely different terms than the president, insisted that the policy had not changed, and underscored that the United States will not disarm unilaterally.

The president's statement was contained in a rare interview with four Moscow reporters, the first such session between an American president and the Soviet press in 24 Openly displaying their political bias, the Soviet journalists told Reagan that his answers to various questions were "unbalanced and one-sided in favor of the U.S. side." Reagan said some of their questions contained misstatements or assertions that were "totally unfounded.

Arguing over which superpower has more nuclear warheads, Reagan and the Soviets both disavowed superiority. The disagreement ended with Reagan saying, "Oh, no we don't" and a Soviet journalist saying, "Yes, you

The interview was released in Washington on Monday, the same day it was published in Moscow in a full-page display on page 4 of the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia. The newspaper did not run a text of the interview and omitted some key points by Reagan on arms control, the role of Soviet troops in Afghanistan and Eastern Europe and other issues.

Distribution of Izvestia was delayed in Moscow, and several newspaper kiosks in the city center closed before they received copies.

Reagan appeared to break new ground on Star Wars when he said, We won't put this weapon - or this system in place, this defensive system, until we do away with our nuclear missiles, our offensive missiles

"But we will make it available to other countries, including the Soviet Union, to do the same thing," Reagan said.

Suggesting that the Kremlin should join the United States in disarmament, Reagan said, "And if the Soviet Union and the United States both say we will eliminate our offensive weapons, we will put in this defensive thing (Star Wars) in case some place in the world a madman some day tries to create these weapons again - nuclear weapons - because, remember, we all know how to make them now.

At three separate points in the interview, Reagan firmly linked Star Wars deployment with disarmament, a position never before voiced by the administration.

Taken at face value, Reagan's statement put the United States on record as pledging to keep any missile defense system on the shelf until America eliminates the nuclear arsenal that for four decades has been used to deter attack against this country.

White House spokesmen Larry Speakes and Edward Djerejian said the president was not spelling out a new policy.

They said the program envisions sharing missile-defense technology with the Soviets, and then an agreement between the superpowers to cut nuclear arsenals as the components of a defense shield are put into place by both sides.

"There has to be a transition period from offense to defensive weapons," Djerejian said. "The president is not implying doing away with all offensive weapons immediately.'

Speakes said the United States would not disarm its missile arsenal unilaterally.

Asked directly whether the elimination of U.S. missiles was a prerequisite for deploying Star Wars, Speakes said, "It's to be worked out. I mean, it's clearly an area that is somewhere in the distant future that these discussions would involve

Pedestrian dies in accident

GROOM - An argument along Interstate Highway 40 proved fatal for a St. Paul, Minn., man Monday

Faint Harris, 46, was pronounced dead on arrival at Coronado Community Hospital in Pampa after he was struck by a car while walking across the highway. The accident occurred at about 6:15 p.m. in Gray County, about 8.6 miles east of Groom.

The council's communications commission in 1983 began to examine the use of sex and violence in movies, in cable and network television and in home

Committee members said they decided to concentrate on the terms "exploitative sex" and gratuitous violence" to avoid any attempts to "sanitize" the dimension of sexuality and violent action found in everyday life. In the two-year study, the committee conducted hearings in New York, Los Angeles and Washington, D.C., with authorities in the fields of psychology, research, behavioral science, government, public education and entertainment.

Panel members said in a 48-page report to the church council that 'laboratory studies have shown conclusively that there is a causal relationship between viewing violence ono television and subsequent aggressive behavior.

'For the media industry to demand absolute proof of such a relationship before action is taken is self-serving and unprincipled,' the committee said.

The committee said, in a hearing in Los Angeles, individals who were asked who could do something about the problem of exploitative sex and gratuitous violence placed the responsibility on someone else.

'The committee discovered that people working in the media industries are part of a vast and complex system which parcels out responsibility ... so that in the end, no one is ultimately responsible, the study said.

The committee cited three principal reasons for what it said

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Railroad Commission has decided to hold a public hearing to determine if construction of an oil pipeline across the state would harm underground water sources.

Th date of the unprecedented hearing is expected to be announced this week.

At the hearing, the All American Pipeline Co. will present its proposal to build a 30-inch heated pipeline from California to Freeport on the Texas coast. The company says the construction will create new jobs and boost the state econom v Opponents, including U.S. Rep. J. "Jake" Pickle of Austin, are concerned because the pipeline will cross the environmentally sensitive Edwards Aquifer recharge zone.

San Antonio, San Marcos, Buda, Kyle and Georgetown get their drinking water from the aquifer, which also provides a small portion of Austin's drinking water through Barton Springs.

The purpose of the hearing "is to determine whether the ground water will be protected from said Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple. "The burden is on them (All American) to make that showing.

'The Railroad Commission, to anybody's knowledge, has never had a hearing on one of these things. This is the first one, Temple said.

Patrick Thompson, an attorney for the commission, said the company has offered to use several measures to guard against a leak or a break that would allow oil to go into the underground water. including double-thickness pipe across the aquifer and automatic shutoff valves. Thompson says there are 66 miles of pipelines already crossing the aquifer, including 32 miles of crude oil pipelines. None of them are heated

However, some landowners and environmentalists along the route from McCamey in West Texas to Freeport on the Gulf of Mexico are not convinced.

Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, and a gubernatorial candidate, already has persuaded the company to shift the pipeline route north of an earlier path through Comal Pickle said he does not think the pipeline should go through Hays County, south of Austin, either. He said the company assured him March 21 the pipeline would not cross the recharge zone.

10-ton magnet used to study matter, origin of universe

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) Scientists at a research center here say tests will be run on a 10-ton, 92-foot superconducting magnet to determine whether it can be used to control beams of subatomic particles in a study of matter and the origin of the universe.

The magnet, nicknamed 'SuperTex,' was trucked from a General Dynamics Corp. plant in San Diego and arrived at the Texas Accelerator Center on Monday. Scientists from Rice University, Texas A&M University, the University of Texas and University of Houston are scheduled to run several months of tests on the

In the supercollider each proton will move at an energy level of 20 trillion electron volts. By comparison, the most powerful machine now producing proton collisions is the Tevatron at Fermilab near Chicago, which produces beams with an energy of trillion electron volts

The Houston Area Research Center, based at The Woodlands north of Houston, is competing with several other national laboratories for the federal project, which could be worth up to $5 billion.

Russ Huson, manager of the project, said a ring of 4,000 SuperTex magnets 100 miles in circumference would meet the requirements of the supercollider. The magnets would be cooled to 450 degrees below zero to make them superconducting, allowing them to pass electricity with virtually no Joe Augustine, an usher at the church, suggested that the building close early instead of allowing late resistance and thus produce very strong magnetic fields. The SuperTex magnet is the first of three to be delivered to the Houston Area Research Center and McIntyre, an associate professor of physics at Texas A&M.

By a factor of 10, it's the least expensive superconducting magnet that has ever been made for the purpose of these new accelerators," he said. "We believe that marks a major breakthrough that comes just in time for this new supercollider. Since we need 100 miles circumference, we better pay attention to the costs.

The SSC Central Design Group, based at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory in Berkeley, Calif. working under a Department of Energy contract, settled in September on what is called a conductor-dominated magnet. That type of magnet has a very high field so the accelerator would require a ring only 60 miles in circumference, rather than the 100-mile ring required by the Texas

But McIntyre said the Texas group is going ahead with its plans primarily because its version of the supercollider costs half as much for the magnets alone - $420 million.

"The idea of this is to keep the United States at the forefront of high-energy physics," said Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, who poured champagne over the magnet as part of ceremonies marking its installation

How to spend a day off

I may be the only person in the universe to feel this way, but I think having a "day off" is more trouble than it's worth

Under the paper's day off system, our three staff writers — Larry, Paul and I — have a rotating schedule in which the writer who works Saturday gets the following Monday off. The other two writers, who are not scheduled for Saturday, work on Monday.

But more often than not, the two Saturday off reporters show up at work on Saturday because there's usually something that didn't quite get done on Friday. As for the Monday day off, don't count on it. There's always something that needs to be done. Last week, Paul spent his Monday off covering a murder, sitting in on a trial and driving to Canadian to cover a politician's visit. Next week, Larry will spend his Monday off at the Lefors city council meeting (My, our area towns are busy, aren't they). My Monday afternoon was spent wondering what to say in this column.

And there's something else about the rotating schedule that doesn't work. Most of my "Mondays off" fall on the second Monday of each month. This allows me to spend my "valuable vacation time" at the Roberts County Commission meeting in the morning, the McLean school board meeting in the afternoon and the White Deer, Miami, or, Groom school board meeting (and sometimes city of White Deer) at night. As a result, I spend all night on my Monday off at the office getting those meetings covered for the Tuesday paper. If this is supposed to be The Pampa News, why do I end up spending my days off in these towns?

Experience at other newspapers has taught me not to even dare skipping town on my day off. That's when The Story of The Year occurs. One year when I worked in Woodward, I spent a day off in Oklhoma City for my mother's birthday. As I was baking Mom's birthday cake, unknown to me at the time, the grain elevator at a nearby town (Fargo) collapsed, killing a visiting farmer When I worked at the Sapulpa (Okla.) paper, I decided to spend a

"needed" day off with my mother. On my return trip from Oklahoma City, I heard a radio report that Frankoma Pottery - Sapulpa's sole reason to exist — had burned to the ground only months after its 50th

It was also my day off when there was a jailbreak in Guthrie, Okla., and a major downtown fire in Okmulgee, Okla. I was out Christmas shopping when a Pampa woman was killed in an auto accident last December. As a result, even on my days off, I make it a point to show up for work to make sure there's no "important story."

Another argument against periods of rest and relaxation is that they remind me of all the housework that needs doing. Every month, I let the dishes pile up in the sink, my clothes scatter all over the floor and the cat get hair all over the carpet because I could always find something at the office that needs tending to. Having to go to work is the best justification in the world to ignore housework; it's even better than having to go to church or to class.

When I have a day-off and I'm alone in the boring stillness of my apartment, I have no choice but to tend to my dishwashing duties, if only to find out what that fuzzy object humming in my water drain is supposed to be I'd rather spend my day off at the office than at the kitchen sink with The 700 Club or The Price is Right as my only

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Would cuts cause recession

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

By the time this appears in print the House of Representatives either will or will not have approved the Senate's Gramm-Rudman-Hollings proposal for reducing the federal budget deficit to zero by 1991. Even though Gramm-Rudman-Hollings (hereafter referred to as G-R-H) was approved as an amendment to legislation authorizing an increase in the federal government's debt ceiling and, therefore, requires immediate action from the House to permit continuation of federal operations, there is the very real possibility that the whole thing could fall

But, quite frankly, I'm less interested in what the House will do than I am in what the opponents of G-R-H reveal about the power of old ideas to persist in the act of contrary evidence.

G-R-H is not especially complicated. Its whole thrust is clearly aimed at reducing deficits through spending cuts. Under its initial provisions, the president would be required to propose, and Congress to pass, budgets which reduce the deficit by $36 billion each year until 1991 when, presumably, budget balance would be reached. In the event that Congress failed to cut spending enough to reach this goal, the president would be empowered to make automatic spending cuts at his own discretion.

Since such presidential discretion in the matter of spending cuts did not sit well with Senate Democrats, the original proposal was altered to require that any cuts initiated by the president be "across-the-board" in the interest of Michigan Senator Carl Levin's obsession with "fairness". Thus, as the issue now stands, either Congress or the president must cut federal spending on a five-year path toward a balanced budget.

Economist Walter Heller thinks the whole thing is a recipe for economic disaster. In testimony on G-R-H before the House Senate Joint Economic Committee, Dr. Heller said, "Like any mandated and rigid formula, it would undermine, perhaps even pervert, the role of the federal budget as an economic balance wheel in the economy...Rigid reductions of the deficit through thick and thin through recovery and recession - could wreck havoc on the economy." Heller went on to argue that in the event of recession when falling revenues fed deficit growth, spending would have to be cut even more to meet the deficit-reduction target set forth in G-R-H. In such an event, Heller argued, cutting spending would "simply kick the economy in the groin and bring on an even deeper recession.

In a similar vein Dr. James Duesenberry, Professor of Economics at Harvard, argues that while everyone agrees that something must be done to reduce deficits, it must not be done at such a pace as to "plunge us into recession."

Duesenberry agrees with the general goals of G-R-H yet is concerned that with its emphasis on absolute spending cuts it may well make the "greatest backward step in fiscal policy in 50 years." Why? Because the requirement that spending be cut absolutely to the right the deficit spending be cut absolutely to shrink the deficit may, in the face of recession-induced revenue short-falls, collapse the economy even further.

Both Heller and Duesenberry approach this issue from the perspective which sees the deficit as a source of economic stimulation in the fact of recession. Even though G-R-H has a recession escape clause (the deficit would be allowed to expand above the targeted trend line if the deficit were itself the product of recession) Duesenberry feels that it would still fail to allow for sufficient growth stimulation if a so-called "growth recession" happened to be occurring. Indeed, even in an alternative to a G-R-H which he proposes, Professor Duesenberry worries that even holding the growth of federal expenditures to the rate of inflation would be a "severe discipline for any economy.

In one final remark in his commentary on G-R-H, Professor Duesenberry opined that while we need budget cuts and tax increases, "we don't need it in a form that forces us to put the brakes on when "The U.S. economic engine is going too

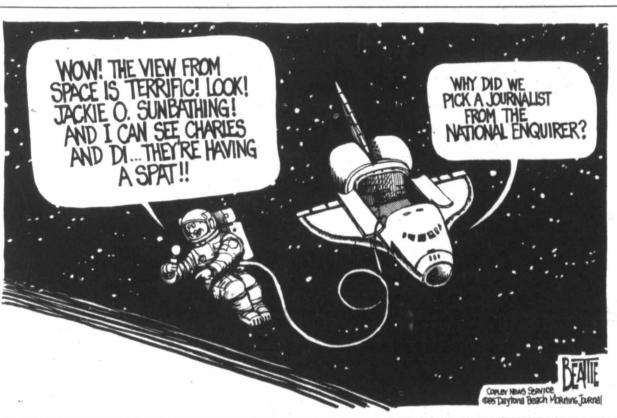

In my judgment that puts the U.S. deficit issues in a nutshell when seen from Heller's and Duesenberry's Keynesian perspective: we can't cut spending when the economy is robust because that would curtail its expansion; we can't cut spending when the economy is on a slow growth path because that would bring on recession; and we can't cut spending when the economy is in recession because that would make the recession worse. In a word, we should never cut spending.

But suppose federal spending has nothing to do with economic expansion. Suppose that deficits do not stimulate the economy. Suppose that recession and expansion have nothing to do with fiscal policy. Can a case be made for that? If it can, wouldn't it follow that sustained spending cuts, taken alone, need not plunge the economy into a

The federal government publishes data for something called the cyclically adjusted budget. These data show the impact of purely discretionary fiscal policy on the budget excluding cyclical factors. By this measure fiscal policy has been expansionary since 1974. Yet we have had three recessions during that period of time. By Heller and Duesenberry's reckoning, we should not have had recessions.

Recession is purely a monetary phenomenon. It has nothing to do with more or less federal spending as such. There may be a political case to be made against G-R-H but, despite Keynesian counter arguments, there is no real economic case

Surviving in a hospital

There are some good things about an extended stay in the hospital. I just spent a month in the hospital, so I ought to know

I even made a list of the good things about a month's stay in the hospital. Here's the list:

1. The hospital is the only place a grown man can wear a nightie and not be considered strange. That is the end of the list

I managed to avoid long hospital stays for nearly four decades. A recent infection in the aortic valve of my heart is what broke my string. I was in the hospital for six days several years ago after my surgeon replaced my original aortic valve with a new one, the one that wound up

Six da s isn't long enough to learn fully how hospital work, however. You can refuse hospital food for six days and not starve to death, for

If you're in the hospital for a month, you have to eat some of the hospital food. One morning, I even ate some hospital pancakes. As soon as I get around to it, I plan to alert Aunt Jemima. She needs to call one of those television lawyers to discuss a lawsuit.

The only other time I was in the hospital was when I was born. I was only there a couple of days, and about all I remember is people, including my parents, saying strange things to me such as, Gitchie, gitchie

They either thought I was crazy or that I was an Indian. "Gitchie, gitchie," is Indian for "What time is the tribal dance tonight?'

Speaking of crazy, what happens when a person spends a month in a hospital is he or she slowly goes out of his or her mind

First, there are the hospital beds, most of which were bought at bargain prices when castles that had torture chambers went out of business. Ever try to sleep in a hospital bed for a month?

They're too narrow, for one thing, and for another, I could never learn to operate my controls. I spent an entire month with my feet high over my head, which made it impossible to take part in a favorite hospital pasttime, staring at the ceiling. I couldn't see the ceiling for my feet. Then, there's the age-old hospital ritual of taking blood. In a month's time, they took enough blood out of me to film another "Rambo" sequel.

Drac?" I asked a blood-taker who was poking around with a needle in my veins looking for one that still had some blood.

"I was a butcher in ze old country," he answered, with a thick, eastern European accent. There are many other things about a long stay in a hospital that will make you bananas. Getting a bath while lying on your back is quite unpleasant. The nurses learn to ignore you when you whine after about a week, and it is amazing how short a time it takes to watch all the good movies available at your local video store. I was forced into watching such movies as the first "Rambo" and "Godzilla vs. the PTL Club.

I did just think of something else good about staying in a hospital for a month, however. You get lots of nice cards, one of which particularly stands out in my mind.

On the outside, it read, 'Did you know everything in a hospital is color-coordinated?"
On the inside was, "If it's red, it's blood. If it's white, it's a nurse. If it's gray, it's probably the getting infected.

UNITED NATIONS (NEA) - The United Nations is frequently dismissed as a do-nothing organization. Don't you believe it. It has just provided ample evidence that it can do at least one thing superbly well: create traffic jams. The United Nations has been marking its 40th anniversary during the current session of the General Assembly, an event that has attracted platoons of presidents, prime ministers and even a king or two. Street barricades and official motorcades made the East Side of Manhattan near U.N. headquarters virtually impassable to normal traffic, pedestrian vehicular.

With so many of the world's movers and shakers concentrated at one time in one place, security was taken very seriously. No one passed the barricades without repeated pass checkings. At one point, near the U.S. Mission, a dapperly dressed black man was observed being pinned to the pavement by a half-dozen of New York's blue-clad finest. It must be assumed he was not a delegate.

Inside, the U.N. headquarters was uncharacteristically bustling. Delegates and aides hurried along the wide corridors with a brisk air of purpose. Surprising numbers actually showed up in the great green and gold assembly chamber as speaker after speaker droned on. Occasionally they had their rewards. You've probably heard about Ronald Reagan's stem-winding attack on Soviet misbehavior throughout the world that had a packed chamber hanging on every blunt word. There were other highlights. Israel's Shimon Peres dramatically offered to go to Amman to begin peace talks immediately and directly with Jordan's King Hussein. The drama, however, was lost on most Arab delegations, which, at the time Peres was speaking, apparently had urgent business elsewhere.

And for comic relief, there was Imelda Marcos of the Philippines declaring for all the world to hear that the world's problems "have their roots in injustice, intolerance, greed and dominance by the strong." At least the assembly was hearing it from an expert. If anyone knows firsthand about injustice and greed, she does.

The anniversary festivities went on for a week. Then, it was back to U.N. business as usual. Which means the presidents departed, the barricades came down, the pace in the corridors slowed and attendance was down to a normal corporal's guard as the assembly resumed the regular agenda. The top item was South African apartheid, but with no one from South Africa to hear the complaints. Its Assembly representation has been suspended.

The speakers list was a U.N. who's who, including all the major powers and also the likes of the Seychelles, Brunei, Diibouti, the Comoros and Vanautu for a total of more than 70.

It could have been worse. Membership is now 159, up from 51 40 years ago. That is both the organization's strength and its weakness.

The latter because so many of the new members in recent years are so small, tipping the balance of assembly power to a voting majority representing a tiny minority of the world's peoples. Several have populations of a few thousand, some 30 of under a million each.

But bloated membership is also a strength, because it has made the United Nations a genuinely world organization.

Its predecessor, the League of Nations, it should at least occasionally be recalled, peaked at some 60. It was losing members rapidly when, after 20 years of ineffective existence, it was engulfed by world war.

The United Nation's effectiveness may be debatable, but it is still going and still growing. No one has yet dropped out. Even battered South Africa hangs in there.

The United Nations at 40 is for all practical purposes universal, the only reasonable facsimile of a forum of world opinion that exists. The presidents and prime ministers may not think much of it, but they can't completely ignore it. They feel obliged to at least stop by now and then to explain themselves.

That alone should suggest that it must be doing something, and worth the occasional traffic jam.

New trust policy leaves two Texas tribes in the lurch

Two Texas Indian tribes say they may soon be on the brink of bankruptcy because of a new state policy that removed them from the guardianship of the state.

The Alabama-Coushatta tribe which lives on a reservation near Livingston, and the Tigua tribe, which lives near El Paso, have received state assistance since 1954, when the federal government relinquished its guardianship of about a dozen tribes in the U.S.

But Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox recently ruled the trust relationship is improper and that the reservation should be treated no differently from "an Elks lodge.

An Indian reservation should not be a "beneficiary of the gratuitous trust relationship with the state," Mattox said, because such treatment would violate the state's 1972 equal rights amendment. The law prohibits discrimination on the basis of national origin.

Tourism and pottery sales kept both the Tiguas and the Alabama-Coushattas self-sufficient until the industry dipped two years ago.

The state has been giving the tribes up to $260,000 a year to pay But since September, the Alabama-Coushatta tribe has been forced to pay tax royalties from oil and gas production on the reservation and could soon face taxes on other properties.

The tribe already has lost $148,000 in state funding and $100,800 in mineral royalty taxes from which it was previously exempt. And the tourist trade, which once poured substantial funds into the tribe's coffers — has fallen into a slump, resulting in a jeopardy.

"If it's going to happen, it's going to happen," he said.
Russell De Metz, the Alabama-Coushatta financial officer, said the tribe has enough money to remain solvent until next June and predicted it will be short $2.3 million by August. "I'm frustrated as hell.

Something has got to happen quick," DeMetz said. The Alabama-Coushattas have filed a federal lawsuit over Members of the Tigua tribe fear

If not for the reservation, where would we be?" asked Carol Battise, 34, a bookkeeper who grew up on the Tigua reservation. Voters in New Jersey and Voters in New Jersey and Virginia chose governors and legislators today in off-year elections watched for signs of whether President Reagan's popularity has laid the foundation for a Republican majority across the nation

Republican Gov. Thomas H. Kean of New Jersey was heavily favored to defeat Democratic challenger Peter Shapiro and win a second four-year term. With the latest polls saying Kean was leading by as much as 40 points, the big question seemed to be whether his coattails would enable the GOP to gain the five seats it needs to win control of the New Jersey

Assembly. In Virginia, Democrat Gerald L. Baliles and Republican Wyatt B. Durrette were battling to succeed Gov. Charles S. Robb, a Democrat barred by the state constitution from seeking re-election.

Elsewhere, Mayors Ed Koch of
New York, Maurice Ferre of Miami, Coleman Young of Detroit, George Voinovich of Cleveland, Kathy Whitmire of Houston and among dozens of city officials running for re-election.

majority party.
For the Republicans, the best shot at a boost for their claims that such a realignment is under way was in the battle for control of the New Jersey Assembly, where the Democrats have had a majority for Polls of Virginia voters said on the last weekend of campaigning that the Democratic ticket, which includes state Sen. L. Douglas Wilder, a black, as the candidate for lieutenant governor, and Delegate Mary Sue Terry, as the nominee for attorney general, was leading the Republicans.

State Sen. John Chichester was the GOP candidate for lieutenant governor, and Delegate W.R. "Buster" O'Brien was the nominee for attorney general. Members of the House of Delegates, Virginia's up for re-election, with the Democrats now in control by an the state AFL-CIO and Coretta Scott King, widow of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

His 33-year-old opponent tried to make the cleanup of toxic waste dumps a major issue in the campaign. "We've got to be ashamed that the state is not doing it better," he said of the cleanup

But Kean largely ignored Shapiro and concentrated on helping GOP assembly candidates.

In New York City, Koch was regarded as a shoo-in for a third four-year term. His opponents were Carol Bellamy, the Liberal Party candidate who finished far behind the mayor in the Democratic primary, and Diane McGrath, a Republican.

Witness testifies nursing home officials claimed harrassment

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) -Autumn Hills nursing home executives pressured state officials to reassign an inspector who had been highly critical of a company facility in Texas City, a former medical administrator for the state has testified.

Small-town mayor leading community through changes

By SARALYN FENNELL Denton Record-Chronicle

PONDER, Texas (AP) - She's made bookcases, helped to build a patio, painted umbrellas and sun visors at craft shows and written children's books when time allowed. One of her goals now is to learn how to bake bread. Her other goal is help the city of Ponder get through a transitional period. "Ponder is growing fast, and we're having to make a lot of changes because of that growth," Jo Montague, the mayor of Ponder, said. "I just want to make this a better community for everyone We have to support the laws we already have. Some of them (the laws) are just not being used. It's hurtful in a lot of ways because some people can't do what they used to."

And it is what she used to do that helps her to do what she does now. I became interested in politics in 77 when I lived in Denton. I was a member of the League of Women Voters and was selected Outstanding Woman of America for two consecutive years. The league taught me a lot. I learned to really study the issues and to be precise, Mrs. Montague said. When I moved to Ponder, I started attending the council meetings and became involved. The last council voted in a planning od zoning committee and I was a member of that, but I think the eague helped me more than anything," she said.

Mrs. Montague says she had not considered running for mayor until several people encouraged her to go for it.

I thought I would take the plunge. It seemed like a good idea for a person not working full time to take care of the city," the mayor thing to men and women. I don't believe that there is any resentment toward me for that, but I do think sometimes that I am being tested where fellows are not," Mrs. Montague said. "It's just another transition. "I believe not living here long or not being from here is more of a resentment than my being a woman," she added. "I was raised in Cheney, Kansas, a small farm town outside of Wichita. I went to three different colleges and studied journalism, English and literature. guess I never finished because it was more work than I wanted to do all the time.

Mrs. Montague decided volunteer work was more satisfying for her than writing courses. If there had been college courses in volunteering, I guess I would have graduated, but I like that type of work. I've done a lot of community service work," she

The biggest problem facing the city, she said, is water storage.

Water is our biggest issue right now. We have people wanting to come in and develop subdivisions, but we don't have the water storage system to take care of all of these people," she said.

"By the time my term is up, I hope I can establish fair subdivisions and zoning laws, get equipment for the city so we can be independent of outside contracting, establish a stable tax system that would support the city for police protection and maintain the streets," the mayor said.

To accomplish this by 1987, Mrs. Montague said she needs the support of the community. "Some people did not know me before I was mayor, and I wish people who don't know me would come out and get to know me. They would see that I am sincere, and I want to do a good job, but I realize that everyone will not perceive me trying as hard as I think I am.

Mrs. Montague doesn't know if she'll run again for another term as Ponder's mayor. "I'll see how this term goes first. I don't want to neglect my family too much. They still come first," she said.

Her husband Dan, psychologist, is supportive of what she is trying to do.

"I don't think he feels slighted because his wife is the mayor. We talked about how it would affect him before I decided to run. He's happy for me, and Seth (her 11-year-old son) doesn't seem to, mind either, but he has decided that he doesn't want to go into politics," Mrs. Montague said.

With set goals in mind for a city in transition, the mayor of Ponder doesn't fear the outcome of the future. "I never thought I would be a failure at this," she said. Failing wasn't one of her thoughts on election day either. While the voters were marking their ballots, Mrs. Montague was building a bookcase and rearranging her kitchen.

"I was too busy trying to decide if my bookcases were square," she said. "When I found out that I had won, I was a bit surprised. It was kind of a nice feeling."

Interpol chief says three suspects may have directed victims to site of ambush

MINATITLAN, Mexico (AP) -Officials said they arrested three men in connection with the slayings of 22 members of an anti-drug team, and vowed that police would conduct drug raids more carefully in the future

The chief of Interpol in Mexico, andr. Florentino Ventura, said Monday that the three men were arrested on suspicion of telling agents they would find a large marijuana cache at the site in southern Mexico where they allegedly were ambushed and killed by drug traffickers last

The three suspects, whom police would not identify, and some of the victims' bodies were taken Monday to Mexico City, authorities said. At least 60 other people have been questioned so far, Ventura said.

Ventura said at least 80 drug traffickers armed with high-powered rifles were awaiting the agents when they arrived before dawn Friday at a marijuana plantation in the mountainous jungle of Veracruz state

WORDS TO GROW BY-

All summer your lawn has actively developed both its top vegetative growth and its root system using energy from photo synthesis (the sun) and from minerals in the soil converted to carbohydrates (the same energy that powers humans) by the roots. Though grass appears to "die" in winter it continues to feed itself on the most abundant energy source, the soil, to sustain its roots after its top growth freezes and photosynthesis ceases. The quality, quantity and balance of minerals available determine how well your grass will "winter over" This is why applying a winterizing fertilizer is important. A high Potassium formula (noted on the label as K) balanced with Nitrogen (N) and Phosphorus (P), such as Ferti-lome Winterizer, provides all the energy your lawn needs to sustain its roots and to give it a head start on growth next season.

Man fights to save his property from river erosion

By PAUL ROBERTS The Brazosport Facts

BRAZORIA, Texas (AP) -Eighteen years ago, Leston Childs climbed into the cab of a 20-ton bulldozer, fired up the engine and shoved 125 cars into the Brazos River

"I lined them up, maybe three or four deep and just pushed them the 73-year-old landscaper says

Refrigerators followed, along with chunks of concrete, stoves and anything else Childs could get in front of his earthmover.

Nobody missed the cars, old junkers sentenced to rust in some junkyard had Childs not found them first. They rest now beneath tons of clay and rock, the foundation of Childs' fight to keep the river from stealing his land.

Childs and his wife, Flora, live two miles east of Brazoria, on a tract of land squeezed between the river and County Road 400. For more than two decades, Childs has been filling in a 350-foot strip on his side of the Brazos, taking back the acres lost through natural erosion.

"I'd say I've probably lost two or three acres to erosion," says Childs, perched in one of two bulldozers he keeps behind his house. "That's why I started doing this."

Childs can't begin to estimate the amount of material he's bulldozed into place. But the trees marking the position of the river bank before he started are now a good 50 feet from the river's edge.

'On average, we get about 10 truck loads of stuff a day," Childs says. "I come down here about once a week and level it all out and put it where I want it."

He doesn't haul in dirt, however, depending instead on the nature of the fill material stumps, logs and branches to trap flowing silt and retard erosion. The 125 cars seemed like a good way to start.

"I got 75 from a man in Clute and 50 from Brazoria," he says. "I only wanted ones with engines, transmissions and rear-ends in them. Needed the weight to hold them down.'

Childs is proud of his work, as is Flora, who claims her husband is happier on his "dozer" than anywhere else. Watching the cab of his bulldozer disappear down the bank, she stiffens, waiting nervously until it reappears again.

"It's dangerous, I don't care who's doing it," she says. "When he's pushing material in like that, I don't even watch. But he'd rather be up there than eat and he knows what he's doing. He put those cars in a long time ago. He knew back then what he'd have to do to stop the river from eating his land."

Childs is not the first to battle erosion on the Brazos. In 1959, county engineers had to reroute a segment of County Road 400 that the river threatened to wash away Aerial photographs show the old route dissapearing into the Brazos.

The proper care of furniture can keep it looking fresh and new, even after years of use. So to help you, we thought it would be a good idea this week to present a few tips to remember in caring for your furniture:

Be sure to pre-test polishes and cleaning materials on an inconspicuous part of the furniture before applying to more exposed surfaces.
If liquid spills on furniture, remove

Childs' problem is particularly severe because of a sharp bend in the Brazos just west of his property. Under such conditions, the strongest current runs next to the bank bordering the curve, pulling away dirt and depositing it in the form of a sandbar on the opposite bank.

One side recedes, the other grows. But just up river, where the bend runs the other way, the situation is reversed. Over time, the process makes the river slither back and forth, like some huge slow-motion snake. The number of oxbow lakes in the area are tribute to the Brazos' wandering nature. Childs says the river is again menacing County Road 400 and, indeed, at one point the water runs no more than a stone's throw from the pavement

"The river isn't going to stop," Childs says. "It's going to wash the road out again if they don't do anything about it.

Precinct 4 County Commissioner John Gayle Jr., though not aware of Childs' efforts, concedes that erosion along the Brazos may necessitate future action but says there are immediate plans.

"There's no question that it's something to be concerned about there if it (the river) is coming in on the (County Road) 400 side," Gayle says. "But I don't think there's any imediate danger. There will be if it continues to erode.'

Gayle says erosion of this type is common and that often changes in river currents bring the river back to its original course and shape.

"The nature of the Brazos is that changes over the years," Gayle says. Childs is not content to wait for nature to takes its course and is disappointed that the county does not move in and prevent erosion. Gayle says lack of funding makes such a project unfeasible, leaving Childs to mend the river bank on

"I'll just have to keep doing what I'm doing," he says. "But it sure wouldn't hurt them to start doing some filling on their own.

Childs is used to working alone. Temporarily crippled by rheumatism in his teens, Childs was too lame to sit in a school desk past the seventh grade. Later, his condition made it impossible for his to stay on his feet, so he took a job driving a milk truck from Goliad to Victoria

After that came dump trucks, and Childs joined the workforce that cleared the tangle of trees and Dow Chemical Co.'s Plant B. Gradually, he worked his way up. Today, his landscaping business ranges throughout the county and he estimates his worth on paper to be in the neighborhood of $1 million.

"I've heard people say he's the best in the business," Flora says. "He can handle a dozer as well as anybody in the county.

Watching the 73-year-old maneuver a 20-ton bulldozer along the river bank, her comment comes off as an understatement. Childs negotiates the muddy terrain effortlessly, giving no sign that he spent most of his teens on crutches and was told by doctors his chances of survival were nonexistant.

His chances of stopping the Brazos, however, are less predictable. The river will continue to move, though no one, from of Engineers, can predict where and how far.

"That's practically impossible to say, more than just generalizing," says Paul Wilson, of the Corps of Engineers. "You can get some idea with aerial photographs, but as far as a time-frame, only the good Lord can answer that.

Wilson calls the Brazos a 'working" river, one whose banks are always moving. While this explains the water's reddish color, the term is little help to residents battling erosion.

Wilson says federal funds can be released only if erosion threatens a publicly owned facility. Childs' property doesn't qualify.

'We can't really offer any guidance, other than to send him some literature on the subject,' Wilson says. "And not only is a project like that pretty expensive but there's usually some

UNITED NATIONS GURU — Twice a week nearly 100 delegates and staff of the United Nations gather during their lunch hour to meditate with Sri Chinmoy, an Indian spiriitual master who has been working in a quiet way to bring peace to the sometimes turbulent halls of the U.N. (AP Laserphoto)

Scary tales part of Texas Storytellers Guild's arsenal

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Eyes sparkling in the jack-o'-lantern's glow, his face contorts and his voice trembles with anguish like that the mother must have felt as she knelt over her daughter's corpse.

"Only 16 years old, never married, and she's dead," Finley Stewart wails. "It just isn't fair. She can't be dead!"

He glances at the fellow storytellers gathered around him and notes with satisfaction that their attention is wrapped around every word of "The Calico Coffin."

The story was Stewart's contribution to a night of ghostly tales, and it was all part of a Texas Storytellers Guild attempt to revive the almost-lost art of storytelling in the Southwest.

Tale-telling is already on the rise along the Eastern seaboard and some Southern states, where some storytellers are so particular about their art that they will only record—never write—their tales, says Dr. Ted Colson, a North Texas State University professor who founded TSG last month.

"People here just don't think that much about storytelling in this age of media saturation," Colson said "But of all places, Texas, with its rich history, should be a place where storytelling thrives."

Nearly 25 people, some of them professional tale weavers, have signed on with the Texas Storytellers Guild, and Colson hopes to garner interest in the art form from residents across the state.

Listening to artfully spun tales is only one of Colson's aims. As member Will Powers says, "If we can teach parents here how to tell good stories, then they can use that skill to help teach their children better."

After all, he adds, 'many parents aren't good storytellers, and their kids know that. They'll look up and say, 'Oh God, here comes dad with another story about how he had to trudge to school through five miles of snow."

Besides, the stories are simply

Members like Stewart — who with Jaffnes Howard founded his own business, the Krum, Texas-based Story Weavers — take their skills to schools and libraries, where they can keep kids enthralled with stories like "The Calico Coffin."

That tale, which Stewart told at a recent TSG meeting, involves ghostly screams, weeping parents and a burial that turns out to be horribly — and fatally — premature.

Many of the stories have been around for centuries and become mixtures of the artist's imagination as well as his recollections.

Tale-teller Julie Judd told one called "The Wooden Box" that warns of the pitfalls of laziness and greed, and Howard noted his repertoire included the same tale—only his involved a jug instead of a box.

The group's first big outing into the public is scheduled for March, when it and the Story Weavers kicks off a weekend-long festival.

Barge burns, sinks

CHANNELVIEW, Texas (AP) — A barge caught fire and exploded near the Houston ship channel Monday, killing at least one person, authorities said.

The docked vessel ignited, exploded and sank about 500 feet from the docking site of the Lynchburg Ferry just south of Channelview, investigators said.

"The barge probably blew up and ruptured the tank and it all went together," said Highlands Fire Chief Richard Bosley.

Harris County sheriff's deputy Joseph McFerrin said one person was killed and another was reported missing.

Texas prison reformers move to Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pauline Sullivan, a recently arrival in upwardly-mobile Washington, attended a brunch that included several young urban professionals.

"A guy said, 'Oh, what do you do?" she recalled. "I said, 'First, I'll ask you a question. If you've been robbed lately, I won't tell you what I do."

Pauline is a former nun. Her husband, Charlie, is an ex-priest. They are prison reform lobbyists. They call their organization CURE, "Citizens United for the Reform of Errants."

They had lobbied the Texas Legislature for 12 years before moving their operation to Washington last summer.

Before they left, a group of Catholic bishops gave them a plaque and a small cash award for their work. A fundraiser by supporters netted about $10,000, and a woman whose son had died in a Texas prison donated $1,000.

If the money runs out, they say they will take part-time jobs.

They said they left behind a 3,000-member organization in Texas, but so far in Washington, CURE is just the Sullivans.

They work out of a $375-a-month apartment they were delighted to find. The computer is in the living room, the copier in the bedroom.

Derelicts sometimes sleep in the hallway. Vagrants on the corner ask for money.

But it is only a 15-block walk to the Capitol, where budget deficits, trade, terrorism and arms talks dominate the news.

"There was a hearing on the death penalty," Pauline said. "I thought a hearing on the death penalty in Washington, D.C. would be standing-room-only. I went a half-hour early to be sure. The room was empty."

"We're losing," Charlie said.
"They're incarcerating more, the death penalty's happening across the South, they're about ready to pass it on the federal level. I mean, we're losing. Of all of our issues, I don't know of one issue where we're winning."

Their hopes are modest; they are taking their time, learning the ropes, the said

But Charlie said when he saw no one else stepping in, he submitted testimony to the House Judiciary Committee on the federal death penalty, pointing out that there is no federal death chamber. States would have to execute federal prisoners. Though he and Pauline oppose the death penalty, Charlie said, they think that if the federal government is going to execute prisoners, the federal government should do it itself.

A tax credit for employers who hire certain groups, including ex-convicts, expires at the end of the year. The Reagan administration opposes it. The Sullivans hope to save it.

They want the federal government to establish nutrition requirements in exchange for subsidizing prison food. They want prisoners who work in prison to get paid, and to be allowed to pay into Social Security.

Eventually they would like to take on federal sentencing reform and the federal prison system, which they say also faces overcrowding.

They met through friends in St. Paul, Minn., in 1970.

"We talked for hours, and it was like the missing piece of the puzzle," Pauline said. She said she had left the convent because she felt isolated from the rest of society. Charlie said he left the priesthood in Alabama in 1969, shaken by the death of Martin

e Luther King Jr. and wanting to do e more for civil rights.

"As I look back on those years, I think everything was kind of in the fast lane," he said. "Everybody was changing."

"We'd left for probably many of the same reasons and wanted to continue in some kind of service but didn't know what," Paulinc said

Publicity about the riots at Attica two years later gave them an answer. They had lived in Texas previously and decided to return and start a bus service for families who wanted to visit relatives in prison.

In San Antonio alone, they filled five buses

"Some of them hadn't seen their loved ones in 10 or 12 years," Charlie said. "Some of them couldn't speak English. We charged $3."

"And we provided lunch," Pauline added.

Later, they founded CURE, hoping to organize prisoners, and especially to prisoners' families, into a lobby group.

In Texas, they worked for a statewide adult probation commission and a jail commission.

USDA admits shortcomings in storing genetic material

WASHINGTON (AP) Agriculture Department is not guarrelling with at least part of a federal lawsuit that charges the department is inadequately caring for its priceless collection of plant genetic material, the world's

But USDA officials contend while there are shortcomings in their stewardship of the collection of nearly 200,000 plant strains, they are doing the best they can with the limited money available.

In the suit, filed Monday in U.S. District Court, an international group of genetic and agricultural activists charged the department is keeping plant germplasm seeds that represent the family heirlooms of agriculture - in poor conditions; that much of its extensive collection is inadequately identified and labeled; and that priceless crop strains are being lost through inattention.

"The raw resource of the new biotechnological age is the rich genetic pool of the planet," said Jeremy Rifkin, who heads the Foundation on Economic Trends and was among those filing the "Millions of years of information are stored in the world's remaining supply of germplasm," Rifkin said in a statement. "Whoever controls the germplasm reserves of the planet will exercise vast control over the world's economy as we enter the age of genetic engineering.

The department accumulates germplasm, mostly in the form of seeds that carry each strain's genetic code, from around the world and stores it at the National Seed Storage Laboratory in Fort Collins, Colo. Its collection there is the world's largest

The laboratory acts as a backup to four regional germplasm stations, which conduct research, and to other "special curators" which also act as rare seed repositories.

With an annual budget of about $14.5 million, administrators of the U.S. germplasm program admit they cannot do everything they want to do. New facilities are needed to house the growing collection, and more personnel are needed to flesh out sketchy descriptions of many items in the collection.

TENSION HEADACHE

If you're bothered by headache that seems to have its origin at the base of your skull, you may be suffering from tension headache.

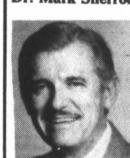

Tension headaches can be caused by an irritation of the nerves in the area of the spine im-mediately under the skull. These are called the suboccipital nerves. They pass through small openings in the spinal column to muscles in the surrounding area. Any abnormal pressure or dysfunction of neck and muscles can irritate the nerves, causing tension.

The tension doesn't cause the headache. To treat this form of headache, attention should be paid to the bone and muscle structures. They should be returned to normal balance so they can function properly again.

Medication is not the answer to tension headaches. Aspirin and other painkillers may give you temporary relief - but they won't solve the problem. Once the source of the problem is found and treated, THEN you can get the relief you need.

A recent informal survey of New York City restaurants turned up at least five with menus and decor based on the American West. This fall, an American furniture company introduced a 24-piece collection based on the West, and Tex-Mex cooking has been identified as one of the hottest trends in fast food.

Even Western movies are back in fashion, says Mary Emmerling "American Country West," a new decorating and source book. The author, who has been identified with American country decorating, about which she wrote several books, sees a difference between country and Western decorating.

Both styles are informal and rustic and feature lots of white on walls and ceilings as well as folk arts and crafts. "However, the textures are quite different, and Western country furniture is usually oversized and comfortable. The textures are rough as in adobe. stucco and animal hides and baskets," she said.

Even the accessories are outsize. Antlers are often mounted over the fireplace or exterior of the house; rough animal hides may be slung over the arm of a sofa, placed on the floor or hung on the walls and American Indian woven rugs, pottery and baskets are often decorative elements.

Emmerling says she expects this, style of decoration to grow in the coming years, an opinion borne out by the introduction in October of a large new furniture collection by Lane Co. Lane and the Museum of American Folk Art collaborated on the collection of Western-style furniture, which includes characteristic wood pieces brought by immigrants from Germany, France and Mexico who came directly to the West. The furniture was introduced at the recent furniture market in North Carolina According to Dr. Robert Bishop, director of the museum, interest in the American West has two major sources. The distinctive color palette was popularized by the use of desert colors in makeup. The palette which includes white, beige and gold, turquoise and red "just looks right to use, now," he said. Bishop added that Western style was a kind of American country, which contributed to its popularity as a home furnishings design theme. Country appears to have a special appeal to Americans that even design authorities cannot discourage.

"Three years ago, people in the know said country was dead, but sales figures didn't bear the experts out. It was one of the few times that the tastemakers said 'forget it' and it went on despite what they said," according to Bishop.

Among the appeals of the Western look to Emmerling is the fact that life seems to flow in and out of doors. Porches and verandas which are a feature of Western-style homes are used as additional "rooms" by Westerners. She traveled through the Western section of the country for more than two years, gathering material for her book and photographing the homes that are described and pictured in the book's largest section. She recalls feeling quite different there compared to the Northeast.

"Everything seems bigger than life. The quality of light kept making me think of the words 'spacious skies.''' She came to see the essence of Western style as an interaction of Indian culture and the pioneers who went West in "Ohio was the dumping ground of America because when the pioneers got there they began dumping many of the things they had carried so far in preparation for the rest of their voyage. They took with them only those things so solidly made they could withstand the harsh trip and so loved that they couldn't bear to part with them," she said.

Once they got to states like New Mexico, Texas, Wyoming, Colorado, Nevada and North and South Dakota, they found Indian rugs and baskets, Indian blankets, and the soft wood known as pinon from which they made new furniture, she said.

It took present-day Europeans to help Americans recognize the Western culture. "All Europe wants to know about cowboys and Indians, to wear jeans and cowboy clothes and to admire the traditional Western blankets and Indian rugs," the author noted.

"Once you begin to look for it, you can find Western motifs in many areas of life," she said. She singled out cowboy gear, the Navajo designs now found on fashion sweaters, and fabrics such as sheets and yard goods whose designs and colors reflect the low and angular lines of the mesas.

Western-style boots are now a status fashion among the youth of Europe and even leather handbags and belts sport Western motifs, she

Dear Abby

Youthful high spirits leave stain on man's clean record

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Here's the problem: Years ago, when our son was a freshman in college, he and a bunch of kids his age went to Fort Lauderdale over Easter vacation. Well, he got drunk and urinated on a parked car. A policeman witnessed this. and our son was charged with indecent exposure, which is a felony.

Our son is now in his 30s, married with children, active in Scouting and owns his own business. He is interested in moving to Florida but is terrified of this incident hanging over his head.

Indecent exposure sounds as if he was exposing himself to people, but, Abby, he was just a college kid who drank too much and chose a handy place to relieve himself. I'm sure the police have arrested many kids in Florida over Easter break. My question: Is there a way to rase this from his record? He and his family went to Disney World, and he was afraid to drive for fear of an infraction of the law because of this happening years ago. You have my permission to run this in your column to warn other young people that what they do can follow them all through life.

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: In some states, if the offender was under 21 years of age and subsequently proved himself to be of good character, the record can be expunged (destroyed). Your son should consult a lawyer. It might cost a few hundred dollars, but the peace of mind for him and his family would be well worth it.

DEAR ABBY: I had to write after reading the letter from "Massachusetts Birdseed Lady" who had had a mastectomy and used birdseed in her bra to make her look "even." Two years ago I had a mastectomy, and the cup size of my bra was a "D." I love to swim, but a prosthesis to equal a D cup is very heavy and pulled my bathing suit away from my chest, so I came up with the idea of using birdseed in a

Selby

This worked great at first. Then I began to notice that the pouch of birdseed was getting "tight," causing me to look like a one-sided Dolly Parton. Upon opening the bag, much to my surprise, I discovered that the birdseed had begun to sprout!

Needless to say, I had to do numerous "lumpectomies" on my bag of birdseed until I had my reconstructive surgery.

If you use my letter, please omit my name as I am well-known in this ANOTHER BIRDSEED LADY

DEAR LADY: Thanks for writing. For those who need it-to avoid a bumper crop of embarrassment, change the birdseed after each plunge. (That stuff is for the birds, you know.)

DEAR ABBY: Please, just one more time! Will you please tell us where to write for copies of "The Living Will"?

If we should become terminally ill and incapacitated, we do not want artificial life support. Many of us HEARTBROKEN feel the same way.

SENIOR CITIZENS IN ROLLA, MO.

DEAR SENIOR CITIZENS: You can obtain the Living Will by writing to: Society for the Right to Die, 250 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10107. Please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. The Society for the Right to Die is a non-profit organization. It does not charge for Living Wills, but in order to cover the cost of my documents, I sent a check for $10 requesting five documents. In my view, it's the best investment in peace of mind I've ever made.

Locks tighten security, lessen insurance rates

COLLEGE STATION - Simply adding locks to your doors and windows may do more for your security — and your pocketbook than an elaborate burglary alarm system.

"Before buying expensive gadgets and alarms, secure the critical points of entry into your home," advises Dr. Peggy Owens, a housing specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service

"With a relatively small investment, you can make the job of getting inside so tough, time consuming and risky that most would-be intruders won't consider it worth the effort," she says. Better quality locks may cost a little more, but will provide tighter security, she says. Whatever you pay for added locks, it's a small price when compared to the cost of the televisions, silver, video-recorders, computers and other consumer goods burglars are likely to take, Owens points out.

According to Dr. J. Fred Cross, Extension community development specialist, installing locks can also qualify you for a five percent reduction in homeowner's nsurance premiums.

Cross says the following burglary prevention measures are insurance reduction:

lock with a bolt throw of at least one inch, that penetrates a metal strike plate. The lock must be key operated from both sides, if there is breakable glass within 40 inches of the lock.

—On double exterior doors, the inactive door must be secured at top and bottom by bolts into metal strike plates. If there is glass within 40 inches of the bolts, the bolts must be flush mounted in the edge of the door

-Dutch doors must have concealed bolt locks to interlock

Playoff dreams fade for most area football teams

By DAN MURRAY

Like the fair weather of Fall, football season is waning. It is that bittersweet time of year when a select few teams start thinking playoffs, while the rest ponder what might have been.

Only a few weeks ago, as many as six area teams looked to have legitimate shots at reaching post-season play, but now only Wheeler is assured of continued action once the regular season ends. Groom still can make the playoffs, as can Miami, though its chances are very slim.

Under Friday night stadium lights, the rest have fallen. For some, great expectations are now ost dreams. Others didn't look to be threats entering their respective district schedules, but found new life only to have it crushed a few

Take Pampa, which was struggling until it upset Perryton 23-20 in its homecoming. That spurred a Harvesters' streak in which they won three of four games Dumas and Canvon were the other victims — and compiled a 2-1 district record. Playoffs suddenly seemed entirely possible. Then the Harvesters lost to Lubbock Dunbar, 14-8, and were eliminated by archrival Borger last Friday. For them, Friday's game with Lubbock Estacado is for nothing but pride.

Canadian and White Deer certainly didn't expect their fates to be decided so soon.

Canadian won its first four games, including victories over Sanford-Fritch, Stinnett and Panhandle, two of which are assured of making it to post-season action.

Two of those first four games were thrillers, and the Wildcats have played three nail-biters since. But they haven't won any of them. Canadian is 1-2-1 in games that matter, and the losses haven't been easy to take.

The Wildcats lost to Perryton, 15-14, after they rallied from a 15-0 fourth quarter deficit only to fail in their try for a two-point conversion. They then beat Dalhart handily before losing a bitter "all the marbles" battle at Childress,

Last week, Dalhart gave Canadian a chance to get back in it when it knocked off Childress, but the Wildcats were in the process of tied by River Road, which scored with a minute and a half to play Canadian will play Boys Ranch next, but for the same stakes as Pampa.

White Deer's in the same boat. The Bucks got off to a quick 3-0 start, but they are 1-4-1 in all games since then. Their losses, too, have been bitter.

Three points have kept White Deer from going into its game final game with Clarendon with a chance at making the playoffs.

Wellington scored on its first possession then was shutout by the Bucks, but they lost 7-6 after missing the extra point kick in the fourth quarter.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Even with his team behind, Pat Tilley believed something good would happen to the St. Louis Cardinals. What the wide receiver didn't know was how

'When we came in here at halftime, nobody said much," Tilley said after triggering St. Louis' 21-10 comeback National Football League victory Monday night over the Dallas Cowboys. "Nobody had to. We knew that unless we turned things around, our season was pretty much gone."

Tilley, by using the sure hands that have long made him one of St. Louis' most reliable receivers, triggered the turnaround in the third period.

"I don't know how he caught that pass," St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan said of Tilley's reception on a 46-yard touchdown play. "He had to have marvelous concentration, because there were hands all over, many of them in his Actually, said Tilley, two hands tipped the Neil Lomax spiral that launched the Cards' rally from their 10-0 deficit.

"J.T. (Smith) was running a breaking pattern, and their nickel back was following me on a crossing route," Tilley said. "Both of them touched it. It just hit my hand, and it stuck. I just said, Tilley, with Dallas rookie Ricky Easom giving futile pursuit, ignited St. Louis by scoring to cap an 81-yard drive.

It also turned on Lomax. The St. Louis quarterback, who had been in a slump, began seeking out and finding his receivers. In seven plays, he guided the Cards to a 14-10 lead on a 65-yard march that Earl Ferrell capped with an eight-yard run.

"Once we had shown that we

Cardinals shock Cowboys

could put some points on the board, that seemed to get the Cowboys' attention," Hanifan said.

"The team just played hellaciously after that, both offensively and defensively," St. Louis coach said. "It was Lomax" best performance this year by far. He was more decisive. He was the old Lomax.'

For clinchers, the Cards mounted one more impressive drive. It covered 80 yards after starting innocently enough with an incomplete pass.
Stump Mitchell stepped into the gap created when Ottis Anderson was sidelined by a sore toe. The backup St. Louis back broke off a 21-yard run, then tucked in a 25-yard pass that preceded three more catches by Smith.

"What turned me on was J.T.'s touchdown," right guard Joe Bostic said of Smith's determined lunge to the end zone on a eight-yard play with 4:13 left.

That sort of typified the way we played this game. We'd been getting beat. We just decided to let it all hang out. It just showed what can happen when you refuse to give

St. Louis, by winning, unlocked the stranglehold the Cowboys had had on the Cards since 1981 in Busch Stadium.

The outcome also knocked Dallas out of sole possession of first place in the National Conference East. The Cowboys and New York Giants are now co-leaders at 6-3, with St. Louis sharing fourth place at 4-5.

"It's kind of early to tell what this victory will mean, but I still want to savor it," a beaming Tilley form, the Cards and their opponents had been locked in what Dallas Coach Tom Landry labeled one of the dullest first halves I have ever seen."

Cowboys quarterback Danny White caught fire just long enough to march his team 93 yards to a touchdown late in the first half on an eight-yard pass to Tony Hill. But after Rafael Septien booted a 19-yard field goal with one second left, Dallas never seriously threatened again.

"We were fired up. You have to give them credit for stopping us," said White, who completed 21 of 36 passes for 202 yards and was intercepted once.

"Tilley's catch was the biggest play of the game. He's been a thorn in our side ever since I remember," Dallas quarterback said. "They (Cards) just played the best defense we've played all year without question.'

Lomax, with top receiver Roy Green on the sidelines with a leg injury, went six times each to Smith and Tilley in engineering the Cards' comeback.

"I think tonight I was just a lot more aggressive. J.T. made some fine catches," said Lomax, who wound up with 17-of-32 passing for 261 yards. "I was happy for Pat on his touchdown. But to tell you the truth, I didn't even see him catch

Oilers share division lead

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers are trying to get used to a new feeling: winning. The Oilers haven't had a three-game winning streak or a winning record since 1980.

They still don't own a winning record. But Sunday's dramatic 23-20 victory over Kansas City gave the Oilers a three-game streak and a share of the American Football Conference's Central Division lead with a 4-5 record. The entire Central Division membership of Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Houston claims a share of first place with 4-5 records. "It seems like no one's going to win the Central Division. quarterback Warren Moon said. 'It's just a matter of who doesn't lose it. We'll just let the other guys knock themselves out of it."

But Moon still has bruises to remind him of 37 quarterback sacks and a five-game losing streak earlier this year.

"We can't really start fantasizing about (winning more games) this season because we're playing Buffalo this week and they are another team looking for respect," Moon said. "They'll be revved up at home for us. Still, heroes are even starting to

In Sunday's game, kicker Tony Zendejas missed a field goal and extra point in the first half, but went from goat to hero with a game-winning 38-yard field goal with 14 seconds to play. "Believe it or not, I really wanted something like this to happen," Zendejas said. "You always want to decide a game with your kicks. I wanted to prove that I could do it.' Zendejas, cut by Washington, missed two fourth-quarter field goals in a 16-13 loss to Washington, and missed a field goal with the score tied against the Dallas Cowboys.

Oiler wide receiver Tim Smith set up the winning kick with a gutty 24-yard reception to the Chiefs 20 just before he was knocked unconscious.

Smith recovered, and was able to measure the Oilers' chances. "It's a seven game season now," he said. "The confidence that we've derived in these three wins will help us in similar situations. The wins aren't always pretty but they're effective. The Oilers defense continued to yield large yardage, including 389 total yards to the Chiefs. But they've kept scoring to a minimum.

Dumas coach suspended one game

AUSTIN (AP) — Dumas football coach Barry Coffman has been suspended for one game by the University Interscholastic League because he criticized officials'

"It's something that's always done," he said of questioning referees Officials who worked the Dumas game against Guymon, Okla., complained to the UIL about Coffman's behavior. They also said he touched one of the officials after the Sept. 27 game. Coffman denied any physical contact. The UIL executive committee also on Monday supported a four-game suspension for a Crowell football player who said he shoved a referee because he thought the man called him a "nigger. Overall, UIL Executive Director

Bailey Marshall said fan and coach behavior at Texas high school football games has gotten worse in recent years 'Our role models at the professional level create some problems in that people tend to think this is accepted practice because they see it on TV," said Marshall. This is the second year in which the UIL can punish individual players or coaches. Prior to that, only schools could be punished.

Marshall said six to eight complaints have been filed this year by game officials. In the Crowell incident, game officials alleged junior Gerald Dorsey verbally abused and shoved referee Frank Harriman after Crowell's 12-6 loss to Paducah on Sept. 27.

Crowell is in Foard County in Morth Texas.

"Dorsey told us we stunk, and he appeared to want to fight with our referee," one game official said in aletter to the UIL Dorsey, a special education student, testified briefly, saying Harriman called him a "nigger. Testimony indicated Dorsey pushed Harriman on the shoulder from behind, causing no injury. Harriman denied using the racial

Crowell school officials suspended Dorsey from football when they learned a complaint had been filed. He has missed four games. The committee unanimously voted to adopt that suspension as Dorsey's penalty. Dorsey also was placed on probation for the duration of his high school career

It will be up to Crowell school officials to determine when Dorsey, a starting running back, can return to action.

Dumas coach Coffman was suspended for this week's game, issued a private reprimand and placed on probation for one year. He denied using profane language or touching the referee, but he did acknowledge telling the officials they had done a poor job.

Tudor issues apology

LOS ANGELES (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals' pitching ace John Tudor, who won two 1985 World Series games but distanced himself from the public and antagonized reporters with verbal barbs, apologized Monday.

In a telephone conversation arranged by his agent. Tudor told a Los Angeles Times reporter he was sorry for comments he made during the series, including the query, "Want me to take a swing at you?

"I wanted to get ahold of you after this whole stuff was over and apologize for the way I acted," he said from his home in suburban

Boston. Tudor, 31, won two games during the World Series and was a prime candidate to be named the most valuable player before he and the Cardinals received an 11-0 drubbing by the Kansas City Royals in the seventh game.

Tudor then vented his anger and cut his pitching hand when he punched an electric fan in the St.

Florida Gators jump to number one

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Football Writer

The Florida Gators are the No. 1 team in college football for the first time in the 50-year history of the Associated Press poll.

While Florida was defeating sixth-ranked Auburn 14-10, No. 8 Ohio State was knocking off No. 1 Iowa 22-13, a setback that dropped the Hawkeyes from first place to sixth and left room at the top.

That enabled the Gators, 7-0-1, to move up from second place to the top spot. They received 42 of 59 first-place votes and 1,159 of a possible 1,180 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

taking the Cougars lightly.

Akers said, "I don't imagine anybody will be looking ahead to anyone. I can't imagine - surely we've got enough guys that have played against Houston before to know better than that.

"Houston is a talented football team," said Akers. "I know they've had some problems, and they were having some of those problems last year about this

Texas was 6-0-1 last year when Houston capitalized on nine Texas turnovers to snap the Longhorns' 18-game SWC winning steak 29-15.

Akers said Stafford, a redshirt sophomore, would start at quarterback against Houston, which has been allowing over 33 points a game on defense. But he added that senior signal caller Todd Dodge still figured in Texas' plans this season

Redshirt freshman Shannon Kelley relieved Stafford late in the Tech game, and Dodge did not play. "I didn't see any point in putting him (Dodge) in there at that stage of the ball game," Akers said. "We had the game won, and he doesn't need that kind of development. That's when you take your younger guy."

Akers was asked how he hoped to contain Houston quarterback Gerald Landry

"I hope we do it a good portion of the time. I don't think you will completely. He's just too dangerous for that. He does too many things."

The game will be televised statewide by the Raycom SWC Network, with kickoff at 12:05 p.m. CST. A crowd of 40,000 is expected at the Astrodome, or about 15,000 short of capacity.

Embassy Minister Counselor Victor Isakov nodded approvingly throughout the proceedings on Monday while scores of Soviet diplomats and employees lined the walls, smiling frequently and savoring each word.

Americans are accustomed to Soviets fleeing to safety in the United States, but Vitaly Yurchenko turned that custom on its head by describing how he freed himself from the clutches of American authorities with an escape to freedom Saturday to the Soviet Embassy.

He told a tale of kidnapping torture, barbarism, bribery and intimidation and of drug-induced stupors - all carried out against him, he claimed, by American agents during three nightmarish months

For a Soviet patriot, living in Washington can be a trying experience. Anti-Sovietism fills the air, with lurid stories of oppressed Jews, of jailed dissidents, of forced labor camps, of bugged telephones. of systematic regimentation part of a Reagan administration

Most American reporters at the scene felt it was a virtuoso performance, but a single overriding question gnawed away: Was Yurchenko telling the truth?

The State Department said he wasn't. The doubts may never be resolved Wherever the truth lies, it was a knew something special was happening when the Soviet Embassy called news media outlets around midafternoon to announce an event that has had few precedents since the two countries re-established relations 52 years ago: an embassy news conference.

Surprise turned to astonishment when the embassy disclosed Yurchenko would appear.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - A campaign advertisement for two city commission candidates was stolen from an advertising agency after burglars broke several windows before finding one that was open.

The advertisement, which was to be used in Monday's edition of the Brownsville Herald, was stolen sometime Sunday night or early Monday from the offices of Breeden and McCumber

The file belonged to the ticket of Harry McNair and Robert Rodriguez who are vying for two of five seats on the city commission. The incumbent holding one of those seats is not seeking re-election, but McNair, 5 Special Notices 29, is challenging the other incumbent Jesse Sloss, 73. *

Rodriguez and McNair have spent more than all other candidates in the race. As of Oct. 29 they had spent $18,493, but had raised more than $20,000 in contributions.

AUSTIN (AP) -Eleven women veterans of World War II, including a former prisoner of war, will be honored Nov. 14 at the second annual Texas Women's Hall of Fame

Gov. Mark White announced Monday he would be the first Texas governor to honor women, from all branches of service, by giving them the Distinguished Citizens Awards for distinction in military service.

The Texas Legislature passed a resolution in 1983 which established the Distinguished Citizens Awards to honor Texans who have "contributed significantly to the quality of American life," White said. "It is fitting in 1985, on the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II, to give long overdue recognition to Texas' women veterans."

SPRINT PLUS 4-DOOR HATCHBACK... is the addition to the Chevrolet Sprint lineup that is available nationwide in the 1986 model year. The 2-door hatchback version of America's smallest, most fuel-efficient model carries the Sprint nameplate in 1986. New functional improvements on both models include "all season" tires, a new lane change flasher and a temporary spare tire.

SPECTRUM AVAILABLE NATIONWIDE... as Chevrolet spreads its small-car lineup across the United States in the 1986 model year. Spectrum is offered as a 2-door hatchback coupe and a 4-door notchback sedan with such standard features as a 1.5 liter, 2-barrel transverse-mounted 4-cylinder engine, five-speed manual transmission with fourth and fifth gear overdrive, McPherson-strut front suspension, rack-and-pinion steering, power front disc brakes and chip-resistant lower body protection. Among new features available in 1986 are full wheel covers with the Custom Feature Package, standard rear window electric defogger on the two-door hatchback and optional ETR radios on all models. Spectrum, introduced in November 1985 in 16 Eastern states, is now one of Chevrolet's five small-car lineup sold nationwide with the start of the 1986
