

Arkansas hostage released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Shiite Moslem militia chief today freed one of the 40 American hostages because of poor health, and proposed that the remaining 39 be transferred to a Western embassy or Syria until Israel frees 735 Arab prisoners.

Amal leader Nabih Berri freed 48-year-old Jimmy Dell Palmer of Little Rock, Ark., who has a heart condition and high blood pressure. Palmer appeared with Berri at a news conference at Berri's home and then was taken by Amal militiamen to the Beirut airport for a Middle East Airlines flight to Larnaca, Cyprus.

A scheduled flight was delayed more than 30 minutes to allow Palmer to reach the airport and get on. Palmer told The Associated Press as he waited to board the plane: "I can verify that we were very well treated. I don't know of anyone (among the hostages) who has been mistreated."

Berri said he also was studying the medical condition of another hostage, Simon Grossmayer, 57, of Algonquin, Ill., who has only one lung. "If he is not in good condition I will release him today or tomorrow," he said.

Berri proposed that the remaining 39 hostages be transferred to an unspecified Western embassy in Beirut, or possibly Syria, if Amal receives a promise they will not be released until Israel frees its prisoners.

The Americans, passengers on a TWA Boeing 727 that was hijacked June 14 on its way from Athens to Rome, are thought to be held in separate groups in and around Beirut.

The Shiite Moslem hijackers let more than 100 passengers and crew go, and killed a U.S. Navy petty officer in the early stages of the 13-day incident. They are demanding that Israel free prisoners it accused of planning or carrying out attacks on the Israeli

Only debris remains at plant site

Most victims of fireworks blast in teens

HALLETT, Okla. (AP) — Most of the 21 people killed in an explosion at a fireworks plant were teen-agers apparently hired to meet demand for the Fourth of July, but severe burns make identification difficult, authorities say.

Five other people, including the owner of the Aerlex Fireworks plant, were injured in a series of massive blasts Tuesday which were felt 13 miles away and hurled bodies and debris hundreds of yards.

Reports that victims may have been under 18, forbidden by law to work at plants like the one making aerial fireworks used in civic displays, sent state Labor Department officials to the scene along with other investigators.

The cause of the blast had not been determined, but Bob White of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said authorities were checking reports of carelessness outside the building as a pickup truck was loaded.

The plant had passed an inspection two months ago, he said. Dr. Joseph Pierce, a Creek County medical examiner, said he believed most of the victims were teen-agers, "but it's awfully hard to tell. They were burned so badly, almost beyond recognition."

Highway Patrol Lt. Jim King said a number of 17- and 18-year-olds had been hired for the holiday crush.

"They worked until late at night, and then started again real early in the morning to make all of the fireworks," said Mary Lewis, whose trailer less than a mile away was shifted off its foundation by the explosion.

"It was a real popular spot for teen-agers to work, and make some good money," she said, adding that the factory, about 35 miles west of Tulsa, had a normal staff of about 10 but had expanded to nearly 30 for holiday sales.

The Tulsa Daily Oklahoman reported today that a 16-year-old and the 18-year-old son of plant owner Alan Johnson were killed. Johnson, 40, of Jennings, refused to talk to reporters. He was in good condition at Hillcrest Medical Center in Tulsa, officials said.

James Aveni, an Aerlex worker who didn't go to the factory Tuesday, said only two temporary workers were under 18, the youngest 16. Aveni said the plant "had about as much precautions as anybody could have."

Authorities searching through the underbrush for victims found "bone fragments and body fragments which were blown apart because of the intense heat and explosions," King said. Four bodies were found about 200 yards away.

Pierce said all the victims died instantly of burns and the blast.

"It was a massive explosion, very intense," he said. "It melted metal into gelatin."

The blasts rattled windows 13 miles away and sent a mushroom-shaped cloud into the air. The force set several automobiles ablaze and started three grass fires about 500 yards from the plant.

Carl Ames Jr., who lives three miles from the plant, said there were three explosions that "lifted our house. They were real rapid and big. The birds quit singing, the cattle and horses started running."

It was the second explosion in six years at the plant, which opened in 1973, authorities said. A 1979 blast, which caused no injuries, was blamed on sunlight reflecting off an automobile mirror onto combustible material.

Rodeo time

Top o' Texas event adds new attractions

Plans are complete for the 39th annual Top o' Texas Rodeo to be held in Pampa July 11-13 with performances daily at 8 p.m.

Bennie Beutler of Elk City, Okla., is returning to Pampa to produce this year's rodeo. Clem McSpadden, former senator from Oklahoma, will be at the microphone once again to describe the action in the arena.

The Country Critters, a western band from San Antonio, will cue the rodeo events. The Critters will give a 15-minute concert at 7:30 p.m. before each performance. They also will give concerts in various shopping areas in Pampa.

The Pikes Peak Rangerettes, an all-girl precision drill team from Colorado Springs, Colo., will be an added attraction to this year's show. The group will be featured prior to as well as during each performance.

Another special addition to this year's rodeo events will be a free barbecue for ticket holders starting at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, July 11.

Joel Weaver and the Saturday Night Heroes will play for the rodeo dance on Friday night, July 12, and Vern Gosdin will play as featured artist on Saturday night, July 13. The dances will be held in the Clyde Carruth Pavilion, beginning at 9 p.m.

Ted Kimsey and Roach Hedaman will be the bullfighters and funnymen at the show. Specialty act Vickie Tyler has combined showmanship, beautiful wardrobes and the rare art of trick riding and Roman riding to give rodeo spectators the thrill and excitement they expect when she enters the arena.

Entries for the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association and Girls Rodeo Association members will open Friday, July 5, from noon to 9 p.m. and close Monday, July 8, at noon. Those wanting to enter may call the Central Entry Office at 1-800-525-7157.

Gray County entries will be taken at the Rodeo Office in the Chamber of Commerce offices from 9 a.m. Monday, July 1, until Tuesday, July 3, at 5 p.m.

The rodeo parade will be held Saturday, July 13, at 10:30 a.m. featuring entries from all areas of the Panhandle.

An Amateur Jackpot Double Muggin' event will be offered each night of the rodeo, with an entry fee of $35 plus a $5 stock charge. Entry fees will be split 40, 30, 20 and 10 percent for the winners.

The Kid Pony Show, with events for children through age 15, will be conducted Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings (July 8-10) at 7 p.m. Entries for the youngsters will open Monday, July 1, at 9 a.m. at the Rodeo Office for children in that age range wanting to participate.

General admission tickets for the rodeo performances may be purchased from various Pampa merchants or at the Rodeo Office.

Reserved seats may be secured by calling (806) 669-3241 or by writing Box 1942, Pampa, TX 79065. They will go on sale in the Rodeo office at 9 a.m. Monday, July 8.

BEAU BOULTER

Boulter says talks collapse 'tragedy'

From Staff and Wire Reports
WASHINGTON — Congressman Beau Boulter, R-Texas, said the collapse of a House-Senate budget conference Tuesday afternoon "is a tragedy."

The breakup of the talks on the 1986 federal budget is prompting House leaders to vow to move ahead on individual spending bills, claiming they can still achieve more than $50 billion in 1986 savings even without a budget.

Rep. Boulter, the only freshman appointed to the committee, said the main result of the collapse is that "we're not going to have a budget resolution, which is a tragedy."

Not having a budget "would be very unfortunate but not necessarily tragic," said

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, on Tuesday after negotiations broke down in a dispute over Social Security cost-of-living increases.

But the chief Senate negotiator, Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., says that without the discipline of a budget document, "it's very doubtful that we can make a dent" in the nation's $200-billion-plus deficit.

The House-Senate conference committee trying to reconcile House and Senate differences on the budget recessed indefinitely on Tuesday after Domenici accused House conferees of refusing to compromise and accept any limits on Social Security increases.

Domenici refused to meet any further with the House conferees, claiming "the conflict is irresolvable. There is no solution."

However, Domenici later opened the door to a possible resumption of talks after the week-long congressional Fourth of July recess — prompting Democrats on the panel to accuse him of posturing.

"I'm hoping that the fact that we don't have a budget ... will have a traumatic and dramatic effect on members of the House and members of the Senate in that they'll understand we're playing with dynamite. And, from that, a new approach may come," Domenici told a news conference.

More land, more wells in Pampa city limits

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Pampa will have more land and more oil wells within its city limits after city commissioners gave final approval to annexation and drilling permit ordinances at their regular meeting Tuesday evening.

The commission passed on second and final reading an ordinance annexing tracts of land northeast of Coronado Medical Complex belonging to Forrest Hills and Columbus Morgan.

Before the vote, Mahunta Hills told the commissioners, "I still don't want to be annexed. If I've got to be, please leave me 'Agriculture,'" referring to a later approved zoning change ordinance.

Mrs. Hills had protested the annexation matter in objection to the proposed zoning change from Agriculture to Retail District for the Morgan tract enclosed by Hwy. 70 and the old Miami highway.

But at the last regular meeting June 11 the commissioners had generally agreed the Morgan Addition would be better suited to retail development zoning. And last night they approved Morgan's zoning request after second and final reading of that ordinance.

The Hills' tract remains in Agriculture District zoning.

The commission approved on second and final reading an amended ordinance granting a Special Use Permit to Triple J Oil Co. for the drilling of two oil wells in the Tumbleweed Addition.

City Attorney Don Lane said he had received a letter from Howard Saunders, Amarillo lawyer representing Triple J, concerning Section 4 in the ordinance which prohibits the use of the wells for secondary and tertiary recovery operations or the disposal of salt water.

Saunders wrote that he had understood the ordinance would be amended to permit such use for the wells after discussion at the last meeting.

But Lane said he had understood such use would be allowed only upon special permit applications to be approved by the commission.

Lane suggested Section 4 could be amended to include language indicating Triple J had the right to make specific use permit applications for such operations.

Commissioner Joe Reed asked if the salt water disposal use of the wells could contaminate the city's well water supplies. Lane said that's what the commission could decide upon if a specific use request was ever made.

Lane said the salt water well could also create "an additional burden on the surface owner," a matter the commission could study under the specific use application.

Mayor Sherman Cowan explained Triple J was concerned a later commission might hold strictly to the Section 4 language as written and not allow any specific use application. He suggested including the right to make such application in the ordinance could prevent that situation.

The commissioners approved the ordinance with the amendment.

In related matters, the commission approved on first reading an ordinance permitting Triple J to drill two additional wells in the area located southeast of the Price Road and Kentucky intersection.

City Manager Bob Hart explained the wells — one already existing and the other proposed — both lay outside the Tumbleweed Addition though still within city limits. He said other proposed drilling was under consideration, but they would be handled in later ordinances if Triple J decided to make later applications.

The ordinance was approved with the same amendment to Section 4; the two well ordinances were "basically the same" in their requirements, Hart said.

In other business, the commission approved an ordinance adopting city personnel policies. Commissioner David McDaniel explained the ordinance would be bringing policies up to date and in compliance with state and federal regulations.

The commission adopted a resolution relative to a recent Supreme Court decision — Garcia vs. San Antonio — requiring all municipalities to comply with provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The resolution indicates Pampa adopts the 28-day work period for the Pampa Police Department, establishes a basic 40-hour work week for Pampa Fire Department employees and converts the city payroll system to a bi-weekly period on or before Sept. 1.

Hart explained eating and sleeping time would be exempted in determining the 40-hour week accounting for the fire department.

The city payroll is currently paid twice a month, he said. Under the new system, payment will be based on two-week periods.

In response to a question from Commissioner Bob Curry, Hart said the changes should "have no negative effects" on budget matters.

The commission approved an ordinance amending part of the ordinance on the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board in relation to the meeting dates of the board.

The ordinance would require the board to meet on the fourth Thursdays of each month instead of the fourth Tuesdays. The board had suggested the change to avoid any possible conflict with the city commission members.

Reed voted against the ordinance, saying the board should be required to meet at a regular time as well as a regular date, as with the city commission, since its meetings are public.

Hart said none of the other citizen boards and commissions are required to meet at a specific time by ordinance, though specific dates are generally established. He said the boards usually set a specific time at their organizational meetings and are required to post notices of their meetings 72 hours in advance.

In other business, commissioners formally accepted water and sewer extensions and improvements completed within the Davis Place, Unit III, Block 7, for city maintenance.

The commission also approved accounts payable. Though not mentioned at the meeting, the commission agenda packet included a copy of a document filed June 13 in U.S. District Court in Amarillo indicating a suit filed against the city by Citizens for Better Government had been dismissed upon joint motion of the parties.

The citizens group had filed suit against the city in earlier disputes regarding the removal of driveway entrance drainage pipes last summer.

The budget approved by the Senate earlier this year cancels next year's Social Security benefit increases as part of a package to trim $56 billion from the federal deficit.

The House budget, while also claiming a $56 billion savings, protects the increases for the nation's 36 million Social Security recipients and others receiving government pensions.

Next year's cost-of-living increases will take place automatically in the absence of congressional action to freeze or limit them.

Boulter claimed the "immediate impasse" that led to the breakup of the conference concerned the cost-of-living adjustments (COLAs) in Social Security.

The Senate package would have deferred the COLAs to Social Security beneficiaries in a one-year freeze, while the House bill would have allowed the increases.

Boulter said the support of the COLAs is a bipartisan view in the house. "I supported it," he said.

"I have always said that I cannot accept a freeze on COLAs," Boulter said, "and therefore I could not support the Senate package. The problem with the deficit spending is not Social Security, it is in programs that have outlived their effectiveness and become wasteful."

The Texas Panhandle congressman said the conference "just quit" yesterday after failed attempts to compromise on the COLAs and two other main areas of disagreement.

Other provisions in the Senate package included terminating 14 federal programs, including support of Amtrak, the Export-Import Bank and other services. The House bill would have eliminated only one of the programs.

In a telephone conversation with The Pampa News yesterday, Boulter said he fully supports terminating the programs.

He said his staff has been conducting a survey of residents in his district on 15 federal programs and asking them which ones should be terminated.

Though the results are still being tabulated, roughly 30 percent indicated all the programs should be eliminated, Boulter said. And "a vast, vast majority" felt the larger portion of the programs could be ended.

"The Senate identified 14 programs that I honestly feel we have to terminate, but the House majority will agree to only one," he said. "That is probably the clearest sign of the huge schism between the two budgets."

Another matter of contention in the conference concerned defense spending, he reported. The Senate package would allow defense spending to grow with the inflation rate, though not above the inflation level, he said. The House bill would keep the level below the inflation rate.

"We just did not make any progress," Boulter said of the 17 House and nine Senate members of the budget conference committee.

Boulter said there's a possibility the conference would reconvene after the July 4th recess, but he felt that was unlikely to occur.

Consequently, Congress will be left with having to use the appropriations process on a bill-by-bill basis as they come up for votes in the chambers.

Congress is going to have to eliminate some of these programs to bring about any serious reforms in attempts at drastically cutting back the federal deficit, Boulter claimed.

"So... are so luxurious (to keep) in a time of such a huge federal deficit," he stated.

The big obstacle to major budget cutbacks "has been the unwillingness of the Democrats and their leadership to terminate" a number of the programs, he said.

The excessive federal spending and the resultant deficit has resulted "because the federal government has tried to be all things to all people," Boulter asserted.

Members of Congress need to exercise "political courage to tame the federal government" and severely reduce federal spending, he stated.

Hostage freed

army in southern Lebanon.
 Israel released 31 prisoners on Monday.

Berri made his proposal today after Syria was reported to have joined efforts to secure the hostages' release. Syria is the main power broker in Lebanon.

Berri reiterated his warning that a flotilla of U.S. 6th fleet warships led by the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz must "be far away" from the Lebanese coast, and said there must be no attacks on Lebanon by either Israel or the United States after the hostage situation is resolved.

At the White House, an administration official who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, welcomed Palmer's release, but said the United States sees no reason any hostage should remain in captivity.

The official said the Reagan administration would withhold comment on Berri's proposal for moving the hostages until the Amal leader was able to make the actual transfer. "I don't think that we can allow ourselves optimism or pessimism," he said.

President Reagan threatened Tuesday to close Beirut airport and impose an economic blockade on Lebanon.

In Jerusalem today a spokesman for Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Israel is ready to consider any U.S. request to cooperate in fighting terrorism, including taking part in a blockade of Beirut.

Asked if he has the power to release all the hostages, some of whom are thought to be held by the radical Hezbollah, or Party of God, Berri said: "All of them, no. The majority are under Amal and the others under the hijackers."

However, he said all 39 are in Beirut. There had been news reports in Lebanon and the United States that about nine of the hostages were being held in Baalbek in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, a stronghold of Shiite extremists.

The Red Cross said in Geneva that it had recommended Palmer be released. Two Red Cross officials, one a doctor, visited all 40 hostages overnight.

Red Cross spokesman Pascal Gondrand said in Geneva that the two Red Cross representatives had held private talks with all of the hostages.

Two Frenchmen kidnapped near the Beirut airport on May 22 also will be freed once the hostage crisis is settled, Berri said.

Administration's patience running thin

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration, its patience running out, says it will give diplomacy a few more days to gain release of the 40 American hostages and then consider isolating Lebanon to put pressure on the radical Shiite hijackers.

Gripped in the deadlock, the White House raised the prospect of an economic blockade to deny food, petroleum and other imports to areas in and around Beirut controlled by Moslem fundamentalists.

Tuesday's announcement by Larry Speakes, the presidential spokesman, marked a toughening of the U.S. position. A week ago, President Reagan told the nation he had no option but to "wait it out."

Shiite Moslem leader Nabih Berri announced today he was freeing one of the 40 American hostages, 48-year-old Jimmy Dell Palmer of Little Rock, Ark.

Woman posing as social worker sought in adoption scam

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — A woman wanted on felony fraud warrants in Texas borrowed the 18-month-old son of a woman staying at a shelter for battered women, purportedly to enter him in a beauty contest, but then tried to sell him for adoption, authorities say.

Police have issued bulletins to law enforcement officers in both Texas and Arkansas to be on the lookout for two, perhaps three, women posing as social workers and seeking to place children for adoption.

The adoption scheme failed, police said, when a woman who agreed to pay a $30 "adoption fee" for the young boy called the battered women's shelter Monday to inquire why the child hadn't been delivered to her yet.

When shelter officials learned of the scheme, they immediately asked the woman to leave, shelter director Barbara Greene said.

"In the meantime, she denied all this and left," Ms. Greene added.

Arkansas authorities were called in later, but said they could find no trace of the woman.

"I feel like she's already gone," Texarkana, Ark., police officer Don Johnson told the Texarkana Gazette on Tuesday.

Arkansas authorities said the central figure in the scheme is a slim 24-year-old black woman who used two different names and who is being sought by Texas authorities. They declined to identify her.

Ms. Greene said the woman came to the shelter several weeks ago. Officials at a battered women's shelter at Tyler called and said they had a new resident who said she feared for her safety in Tyler and who requested to be transferred to the Texarkana shelter, Ms. Greene said.

That woman was given travel money and left Tyler with her three children, but didn't arrive in Texarkana until two days later, Ms. Greene said.

"She said she got lost and ended up in Shreveport," Ms. Greene said.

Ms. Greene said the woman first claimed to be from the Tyler area, then said she was from the Dallas area.

"Her story was never consistent after that," Ms. Greene said.

Police in Tyler said Tuesday they had no knowledge of the woman and that no complaints had been filed there about an adoption fraud, the Gazette reported.

Ms. Greene said the woman has a nurse's aide certificate, and upon arriving in Texarkana quickly obtained a job at a Texarkana, Ark., nursing home. But after three nights at the job, the woman didn't show up for work.

Shelter workers believed the woman was still working at the nursing home, because she left the shelter each night at 11 p.m. and returned at 7 a.m., Ms. Greene said.

"She only worked for three days then started this other life," she said.

Police officials said the woman told a woman at the nursing home that she was a "social worker for the battered women's shelter" and wanted to arrange for the adoption of three children staying at the shelter who had lost both their parents.

A woman at the nursing home told the woman that her daughter wanted to adopt a child, officials said.

First lady says buckle up now

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas motorists should start using their seat belts now rather than waiting for the state's mandatory belt law to take effect on Sept. 1, First Lady Linda Gale White says.

"The fact is, they need to be wearing them right now, not necessarily Sept. 1. The sooner the better of getting in the habit of putting them on," Mrs. White said.

On June 17, Gov. Mark White signed into law legislation that will require front seat occupants of cars and pickup trucks to wear lap seat belts.

The law takes effect in September, with fines of $25 to $50 beginning on Dec. 1 for violators.

Mrs. White's comments about the new law came Tuesday as she helped launch a "Buckle Up, Austin" safety campaign.

The project, which begins July 1, will offer rewards to Austin motorists who are observed wearing their seat belts. Similar projects are slated for about 11 other Texas cities, officials said.

The safety project — sponsored by the Austin-Travis County Health Department — will reward motorists with six-packs of soft drinks, ice chests, free dry cleaning service and a monthly grand prize of $500, she said.

"The campaign is an educational effort to encourage all of us to put safety first," she said.

Mrs. White noted that statistics show that 900 people a week are killed in motor vehicle accidents and another 10,000 are injured every day.

Studies have indicated that people involved in a crash are 31 percent less likely to be injured or killed if wearing a lap belt, with that margin rising to 57 percent for those wearing lap and shoulder belts, she said.

"It is a proven fact that seat belts save lives," Mrs. White said.

The way to open doors

Recently the Pampa chapter of the American Business Women's Association met for their annual Boss Night Banquet — a time to pat their bosses and themselves on the back for their accomplishments.

My boss, Louise Fletcher, and I were invited to the event. As we enjoyed the banquet, our table partner Zelma Northcutt, director of the First Baptist Church Day Care Center, told of an amusing (to me) anecdote about one of their four year old VBC students. Apparently the teacher had asked each of the children to explain how God made Eve. One little boy told her, "God took Adam, put him to sleep, and took out half his brain."

Well, I thought that was pretty funny. My husband Vic failed to see the humor when I told him about the little boy's answer later, however. Do you suppose that's why two heads are better than one? Anyway, that story and the program presented at the banquet by Connie Sitterly, a former Pampan, got my mind to rolling about women's place in society — particularly in the work world.

Most men are going to stop reading here, if they happened to get past the Adam and Eve story. But, believe it or not, I don't think I have a radically feminist viewpoint on such things. I firmly believe there is a place for both men and women on this earth. God obviously thought there was or he wouldn't have put us both on it. He'd have left everything asexual like amoebas.

But after these hundred million or whatever years since God "took half of Adam's brain" and made woman, we still seem to have a hard time living together. And for some reason, so many people seem to think it's vitally important that one sex be dominant and the other submissive.

That just doesn't set to well with me. As in all things, not everything is black and white. Not all men are meant to lead and not all women are followers, or the other way around. I feel that whoever is best suited for the role (or job), man or woman, should be chosen — without any consideration for sex, color, creed, or whatever other bias the employer might have.

That's how it's supposed to be according to our constitution, but in trying to enforce the rights of all, the government has instead created a reverse discrimination. Well - qualified men are not being hired so that a so-called "minority" of whatever type can be hired so that a specific governmental quota can be met.

And yet, it's not right, either, to turn a woman down who is as well qualified just because she is a woman.

Constantly I see reminders of the double - standard in the work world where men are paid 25 to 50 percent more than a woman who is performing the same job. I see men raised into positions of authority, while a woman with the same job experience stays where she is.

Sitterly, an assistant professor in Mid-Management at Amarillo College, said that the double standard is changing to some degree. One - third of today's management are now women, she said. However, 95 percent of the top decision makers remain men. So while, women are allowed to go further up the success ladder than before, they're still not making it to the top.

I can't believe that women really want to be able to become successful through government intervention, such as the equal opportunity plan. To paraphrase what Sitterly said, women don't want doors opened for them; they want doors opened to them.

But many of the prejudices women will have to battle and overcome are not those imposed by men.

We are going to have to realize that we are placing many obstacles in front of ourselves. Too often we tell ourselves we can't do something because we're women. Or we think that we have to become more like a man in order to be successful. Few of us are willing to give up our femininity to do that.

Women could take a few hints from men in order to further themselves in whatever direction they wish to go, but men could learn some from women, too.

Men have the quality of being powerful; they expect hard work and are not afraid to do it. And they have that "good ol' boy" system. Nowadays it's called "networking" — you scratch my back and I'll scratch yours.

In my experiences with women, I find we often want to keep things to ourselves. If we get so far, we don't want to share it with someone else. Or we just don't think to put our hand out and help someone else on their way up. In that respect, we could use some improvement.

On the other hand, men could use some of the "softer" qualities of women that they so often despise when it comes to the work force. I agree with Sitterly's comment that "women are good with feelings." Women are more respectful of others' feelings and more willing to share their own. And rather than work in a job they hate for 30 years to retirement, just because the money is good, women are less often afraid to switch jobs in an effort to find one they are happy with.

Like all extremes, men and women who hold so rigidly to their opinions as to who is best and who is right are losers. There must be a way to blend the best of both. Maybe if we had more than half a brain we could get this figured out.

Jewish leader urges blacks, Jews to unite

DALLAS (AP) — A Jewish leader addressing the NAACP convention blamed the breakdown of interaction between blacks and Jews on a lack of communication, but he added that it was not too late to rebuild relations and form "a coalition of equals."

When Rabbi David Saperstein spoke before NAACP convention delegates Tuesday, it was the first time in at least 10 years that a prominent Jewish leader had addressed one of the group's national conventions.

Saperstein, representing the Union of American Hebrew Congregations at the invitation of the NAACP, said he came to the group's 76th annual convention in Dallas to shatter some myths and stereotypes involving Jews.

"The breakdown of interaction between the two communities has made us less sensitive to each other's fears and needs, conveying a sense of betrayal and disappointment," Saperstein said.

"Jews have failed to appreciate that affirmative action is as precious to blacks as Israel is to Jews, that pride in Rev. (Jesse) Jackson's successes has little to do with his view on the PLO but everything to do with his ability," he said.

The majority of the six million Jews in America support affirmative action programs, but the very vocal and visible Jewish Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith opposes affirmative action.

"To the black community the ADL represents the entire Jewish community. I am here today to tell you that this stereotype is wrong," he said.

Also Tuesday, a California congressman told NAACP members that they would not be able to change the Reagan administration's stand on civil rights.

"Civil rights, affirmative action and equal educational opportunity are not accepted practices in Washington, D.C., namely in the executive branch," U.S. Rep. Esteban Torres, a Los Angeles-area Democrat, told convention delegates Tuesday.

He said the solution is not a prolonged anti-Reagan harangue "because we're not going to change anybody's mind up there in 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue."

Instead, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People members must prod their congressmen for pro-civil rights action, Torres said.

"Let's get on with the lamenting (about Reagan)," he said. "Let's get it out of our system and let's move on to focus on the future, because the future starts this week."

Torres, a former AFL-CIO member and ex-United Auto Workers union representative, was speaking at the NAACP's 10th annual labor luncheon where unions from around the country were honored for their accomplishments.

Other speakers included Marc Stepp, vice president of the International Union, United Automobile, Aerospace & Agricultural Implement Workers of America, who blamed the "reactionary administration in Washington" for "an erosion of civil rights."

Torres, speaking on the convention's third day, said union and NAACP members need to educate presidential and congressional hopefuls about civil rights to make sure they don't follow in Reagan's footsteps.

"They seem to ignore the fact that the legal system of this country enslaved blacks, it brutalized them and later became a silent accomplice to their injustice," he added.

Jail stormed after inmate takes two hostages

KARNES CITY, Texas (AP) — An inmate held a jailer and a dispatcher hostage for seven hours before law enforcement officers took him by surprise, authorities said.

The standoff at Karnes County Jail ended Tuesday afternoon when police stormed the building, overwhelmed Roland Garcia, 38, of San Antonio and freed the two hostages, Sheriff Bobby Mutz said.

"There was no scuffle. The officers just drew down on him and he froze," the sheriff said. No injuries were reported during the takeover, Mutz said.

Garcia had armed himself with a metal shank he apparently pulled from an air conditioning vent, the sheriff said.

Garcia had been in the jail two weeks on a bench warrant after being indicted for auto theft and forgery. Mutz said Garcia was serving a 12 1/2-year term at Huntsville for the same charges.

Garcia took the two as hostages Tuesday morning when he was allowed out of his cell to use the telephone, the sheriff said.

Mutz said the inmate asked the jailer, "What would you do if I tried to escape?"

"I'd stop you," the jailer replied.

The sheriff said Garcia then pulled the metal shank out and overpowered the jailer, identified as Eddie Garcia. Mutz said he did not know how the dispatcher, identified as Daisy Villanueva, was taken hostage.

The prisoner, who had all the jail keys, locked the door separating the jail from the sheriff's office, the San Antonio Light reported.

During the ensuing hours, Garcia asked to see his father and to be sent back to the Texas Department of Corrections prison in Huntsville, Mutz said. He also asked for an automobile and a set of handcuffs. Authorities said the standoff, which began about 9:30 a.m., ended about 4:45 p.m.

Refinancing plan approved

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A refinancing plan that will lower the city's service payments on its outstanding bonds but extends the debt for seven years got the Beaumont City Council's stamp of approval.

The plan adopted Tuesday calls for the city to keep the debt service portion of city taxes stable at 27 cents over the next few years, City Manager Karl Nollenberger said.

Councilman Mike Brumley, who cast the only vote against the plan, said the city should pay its debts faster to allow for future financial emergencies.

"We're really at risk without reserve funds," Brumley said.

Under the plan, the city will issue $50.1 million in new bonds, place the funds in an escrow account where it can draw interest and use that account to pay off the old debt service payments.

The city can obtain insurance that will make the new bond issue $480,000 less than what was originally anticipated, Nollenberger said.

Insurance and other expenses involved in the proposal will cost $1.9 million, but the city expects to recoup all costs through interest income on the reinvestment of the bond proceeds in U.S. government securities. Because the bonds will stretch out over an additional seven years until 2005, the city will pay an extra $20 million in interest.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A better method of birth control

Congress recently debated the role America should play in funding worldwide efforts to control population growth.

As usual, the debate centered on taxpayer support of international groups that supply birth-control services and even abortions to people in poor nations seeking to curb their population growth. A more fruitful approach would be to pursue the supply-side route to slower population growth.

The supply-side theory on population growth is simple: The best curb on population growth is a husky growth rate in a nation's gross national product. Economic growth, not massive government efforts to enforce birth control and abortions, offers the best hope for the third world.

The number bear out this theory. Third World nations that have experienced vigorous economic growth have consequently seen their national birth rates fall. In Hong Kong and Singapore, two economic dynamoes on the Pacific rim of Asia, national birth rates have plummeted in recent decades. Meanwhile, Bangladesh, which has struggled economically, experienced no decline in its birth rate from 1950 to 1980.

When comparing two similar nations, the pattern holds. South Korea, which has boomed economically in the last two decades, saw its birth rate decline 38 percent from 1950 to 1980. In communist North Korea, which has experienced sluggish growth, the decline has been only 15 percent.

The implications are staggering. In Communist China, brutal government coercion, including forced abortions, is being used to cut the birth rate. It has worked, but only through great suffering and loss of freedom. In Taiwan, by contrast, no coercive birth control program exists. Yet, because of the booming economy, the birth rate on Taiwan has fallen 50 percent since 1950.

America should reconsider its government support for international "family planning." The key to birth control lies in economic growth, and the key to that growth lies in lower taxes and falling trade barriers, fewer regulations, sound monetary policies and restrained government spending—in a word, capitalism.

Congress should seek to promote sound economic policies around the world to raise living standards—the surest form of birth control—rather than pursuing the desperate cycle of stagnation and government coercion.

Manipulating politicians

One of the things that drives honest government statisticians up the wall is politicians who attempt to stage-manage the media debate by releasing, out of context, fragmentary government data that reinforce their own "alarm" agenda - citing as "authority" a "study" or "report" by the particular statistical agency that applied the data - even when no such formal study exists.

A case in point: on June 7, the Washington Post led off its business section with the headline, "8-Million U.S. Jobs Said Lost Since '79" - not coincidentally, this was the day the May unemployment figures were to be released.

The Post story said that "a Labour Department report to be released today" showed that "thirty-five states and the District of Columbia have failed to recoup all of the factory jobs lost in the past two recessions, a loss that amounts to the elimination of more than 8-million jobs." The same story was carried by USA Today.

Since the U.S. now has 8.2-million MORE people employed than in 1979 - and since even manufacturing employment is only 1.4 million less than 1979's boom year, the story produced an unusually high turnout for the routine monthly Bureau of Labour Statistics (BLS) unemployment report to the Joint Economic Committee of Congress (JEC).

It also caused great embarrassment for JEC Chairman Rep. David Obey (D-Wisc.) and Washington Post reporter Jane Seaberry, because BLS Commissioner Janet Norwood took great pains in preliminary conversations with the minority staff to refute the Post story and disclaim the existence of any such report or study.

As a result, Obey was forced to tell the JEC, and the assembled media, that "someone" had apparently decided to release a few preliminary, unchecked, BLS tables, in which the numbers weren't even added up correctly. They were off by more than 6 million!

Since Obey was obviously trying to imply that the leak came from BLS, Rep. Dan Lungren (R-Calif.) asked Norwood if this was true. When she denied it, Obey was forced to admit the leak had come from his office.

In short, the whole BLS "report" story was a fraud - and Obey's staff, who had perpetrated it, had to run around hurriedly and gather up the press releases they had prepared to upstage the regular monthly unemployment data report.

Commissioner Norwood then graciously attempted to bail Obey out, saying the mathematical mistake had been made by BLS. "I take responsibility for it. It won't happen again," thus letting the Post off the hook. The paper's June 8 retraction read, "BLS Corrects Job-Loss Figures." In fact, the Post and the BLS had been badly used by Obey and his people.

Beyond this, the story shows the degree to which politics distorts reality. There is little doubt, as this column has reported, that the Federal Reserve's excessively tight monetary policy in 1984 has kept the dollar too strong, even as interest rates were trying to come down. And no doubt this not only stopped the recovery but hurt U.S. exports and import-sensitive industries. But the actual damage to the U.S. manufacturing economy has been surprisingly small, and primarily cyclical.

The plain truth is: U.S. manufacturing employment has been virtually stagnant at 19-21 million for the past twenty years, strong dollar or weak - and that trend continues today.

Between 1969's BOOM year of 20.2-million manufacturing jobs and 1979's boom of 21 million, manufacturing's share of total employment FELL from 29 percent to 23, even as the dollar FELL nearly 30 percent - a complete reversal of those who think a lower dollar would automatically stop job loss.

In the 1975 recession, 1.8-million manufacturing jobs were lost - and even two full years into the recovery in 1977, only 1.5 million of those were regained, also despite a weak dollar.

Similarly, in the 1982 recession, we lost 1.4-million manufacturing jobs and initially recovered only 1.03 million, a figure which has been cut by 160,000 since last January. While that is a disturbing trend - it should be temporary - now that the FED has finally stopped fighting the recovery.

In aggregate, though, and given the 67 percent run-up in the dollar since 1979, there has been surprisingly little difference between the current trends and those we experienced in the middle 1970s, when the dollar was so much "cheaper."

Remember, too, that a growing number of "goods producing" jobs in computer software are now being classified in the soaring services area, even though they directly replace manufacturing jobs.

Which is to say that when you keep hearing that the manufacturing job "sky is falling," don't bother to look up - because it isn't - at least not yet. And if the FED only cooperates it never has to.

'Two cheers' not enough

President Kennedy and Carter tried to simplify our tax laws.

JFK said, "The words 'it's deductible' should pass from our scene."

Carter deplored abuses. But organized interests persisted in pressuring Congress.

And, meanwhile, gradually, more and more people - not just rich people - began to learn to take advantage of the obscure provisions of the tax code, to shelter money from the tax collector, to make money by losing it.

The night following President Reagan's tax telecast Johnny Carson asked his studio audience:

"How many of you agree with the President?"

Some applause.

"How many of you disagree?"

Some applause.

"How many of you would prefer to leave the laws as they are and cheat?"

Overwhelming applause.

Everybody wants tax reform...but... ABC Public Opinion Survey shows overwhelming support for simpler taxes... Newsweek readers likewise... But...

Second-home mortgage interest deductions; don't eliminate those! State and local taxes; we simply must be allowed to deduct those.

And businesses must be allowed to deduct the cost of those box seats at the baseball game.

Incremental step-down in tax rates is no good; would encourage deferring income.

Income averaging; we can't do without that.

A stretch-out in depreciation for real estate; that's depressing!

Federal aid to college students; they can't cut that!

President Reagan's proposed reform will not be shot down yet, even while they applaud it, the nibblers may nibble it to pieces.

President Reagan's crusade needs a "handle." Americans rally best behind a slogan and so far his has none.

Almost everybody seems willing to support his new tax rebellion. Democrat Danny Rostenkowski calls it "fair and simple."

Republican James Baker calls it "fair and simple."

But it needs to be made to sound like what it is - the most dynamic, dramatic reversal of big government complexity in our country's experience.

Tip O'Neill - "tip-ically" sarcastic - can think of nothing more negative to say than, "Who's going to pay?"

But the critics can be answered and the troops rallied if somebody can give this major overhaul a worthy battle-cry.

"Two-cheers" for the tax revolution are not enough.

"Sell the humanitarian aid stuff. Then with the proceeds buy us something NON-humanitarian. Get my meaning?"

The high price of protectionist quotas

By Don Graff

After cars, textiles, steel - and we're just getting started - it comes as no surprise that protection from foreign competition is being prescribed for what ails yet another American industry.

This time the patient is shoes. The U.S. International Trade Commission is recommending restrictive quotas on most imports for five years to give domestic producers time to modernize, cut costs, save jobs and become competitive again. The very lowest-cost footwear, retailing at $5 or less, would be exempt.

In an unusual twist, the proposed quotas would be administered under a licensing system with import rights being auctioned off to the highest-bidding foreign producers. Proceeds would go to the U.S. Treasury.

There is no question but that American shoe manufacturers, like other traditionally labor-intensive industries, are in a bad way. The more than 1,000 plants that existed as recently as 1970 have declined to barely 500. Something like 100 closed last year alone. Imports have reached 71 percent of the American market, with the overseas competition coming primarily from Taiwan, South Korea, Spain and Italy.

But there is some question as to how much help quotas may turn out to be. And no question at all that, succeed or fail, they will be expensive.

Susan W. Liebler, the only one of the five ITC commissioners to oppose the quota recommendation, says American consumers may be paying as much as 18.8 percent more for imported shoes and 11.4 percent for the domestic product as a consequence. She sees the total additional cost for footwear reaching $1.28 billion a year. Even if 26,000 jobs should be saved, as the industry argues, it would be at an annual cost to the public of $50,000 for each job, which pays only $14,000 to the worker holding it.

As a good deal, that has the ring of Pentagon-style cost-management.

Doreen Brown says the Liebler figures are right on target. The president of Consumers for World Trade, a Washington-based consumer lobby, Ms. Brown says experience amply demonstrates that when quotas or other restrictions are applied to imports, the domestic price of a product shoots up.

In this case, she foresees the virtual disappearance of low-cost footwear. And she is not talking about the under-$5 shoe that would be exempt from the quotas but those costing $10 or so that many Americans on limited budgets can afford.

She is also concerned about the proposed license auction, a rarely used device that other industries seeking protection may be encouraged to press for. It appears to minimize costs by producing revenue for the government - an estimated $1 billion or more in the case of shoes. But it is actually the perfect "hidden tax," according to Brown.

"The consumer still pays, as he always does, but roundabout, without really knowing what it's all about," she says.

The quota recommendation has gone to the president for acceptance, rejection or modification by Sept. 1.

Ms. Brown says she is usually wary of making predictions, but admits to being pessimistic in this case because it is the second time around for shoes. The president may feel he has to act.

The ITC rejected an industry request for protection a year ago, but reconsidered it at the urging of the Senate Finance Committee. It may be only coincidental that much of the industry is concentrated in a few large-vote states.

In any case, Doreen Brown points out the arguments for protection advanced by the shoe industry - as by the auto and others before it - are inherently contradictory. Modernizing to meet the competition means high-tech retooling which means fewer jobs.

Nation's airlines told to look closer at travelers' baggage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airline travelers, especially those flying abroad, might find that catching an airplane will take longer as the government orders closer scrutiny of carry-on and checked baggage to thwart possible terrorism.

The Federal Aviation Administration directed airlines Tuesday to tighten the inspection of not only carry-on items but also checked bags, freight, and mail on certain flights traveling in regions of the world where skyjacking or other terrorism is a risk.

It's not known how much of an impact the new inspection procedures will have on the flow of travelers through busy airports, but industry sources acknowledge some delay is likely, especially on flights abroad where most of the hijack danger is perceived.

The new procedures direct airlines to:

- Prohibit acceptance of checked baggage at a ticket counter from anyone other than a ticketed passenger and eliminates curbside check-in on all international flights.

— Increase the number of physical searches of carry-on bags after they go through mandatory X-ray screening.

— Match checked-in bags with passengers actually boarding the aircraft to determine that the bags belong to people who are actually taking the flight. If that's not possible, the bags must be scanned by X-ray or physically inspected.

— Require that all freight or mail cargo be held for 24 hours at a terminal unless it can be scanned by X-ray or physically inspected.

The Transportation Department said the Federal Aviation Administration will determine which flights will be selected for the more intensified baggage screening requirements.

Officials declined to say where the procedures will be implemented, saying that would lessen their impact.

Meanwhile, President Reagan is considering a series of options aimed at long-range improvement of security for air travelers flying abroad, including a proposal to put armed sky marshals aboard some flights where the risk of a hijacking or terrorist attack is high.

Representatives of pilot and airline groups told members of Congress on Tuesday they oppose the use of sky marshals because of potential dangers involved in anyone carrying a weapon aboard an aircraft.

"We certainly do not want a gun battle at 35,000 feet. And if they're not going to use their guns why have them?" said Rodney Wallis, director of security for the International Air Transport Association.

Texas airports tightening security

DALLAS (AP) — Recent terrorist actions against commercial airliners are the reason security measures have been tightened at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and Houston Intercontinental, officials said.

Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., on Monday asked the Federal Aviation Administration to examine security at all U.S. airports, especially those such as the Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston facilities, which have expanded international service and are Texas' two largest airports.

At Dallas-Fort Worth, armed guards have been assigned to service entries that previously were covered by an intercom system, American Airlines officials said. Also, freight from Europe is being delayed for one or two days, officials said.

In Houston, Intercontinental Airport manager James

Ellingsworth said security agents are using metal detectors and X-ray machines to check items twice as often as the devices are usually used.

But airport officials said it is too soon to begin extreme safety measures such as checking every piece of luggage by hand or by X-ray, which is done at Israel's Ben Gurion International Airport.

Checking every bag is expensive and would bring flight service "to a screeching halt," said Joe Dealey, spokesman for the Dallas-Fort Worth airport.

An unnamed FAA spokesman in Washington told the Dallas Times-Herald that the agency may require extreme baggage checks if it determines that passenger safety is at risk.

"There hasn't been any serious discussions about it at this point, but who knows?" the spokesman asked. "If we felt like it was necessary, we would go ahead."

Such checks could become a feasible alternative "with the mood of the times — every kooky group thinking they can pick on tourists to get attention," the spokesman said.

However, officials said that recent cases — such as the hijacking of Trans World Airlines Flight 847 and the crash of an Air-India jumbo jet believed to be the result of a concealed bomb — involved only foreign airports and flights.

Travelers at D-FW's international terminals Tuesday said they had noticed the increase in security, and were pleased.

Karl Muecke, 66, a Salt Lake City resident on his way to a European vacation, said he had coins in his briefcase as he passed through a security checkpoint.

"I had to open it and they looked all through it. I was very pleased they did so," he said.

Vandals go on destructive spree

CHILDRESS, Texas (AP) — Authorities say they have made no arrests in connection with a vandalism spree at Childress Country Club that caused more than $100,000 worth of damage and forced a golf tournament to be cancelled.

Childress County Sheriff Claude Lane said 15 teen-agers ranging from 15 to 17 had been questioned about the vandalism but none had been arrested Tuesday.

"At this time I don't feel like there was any planned thing. It was just spontaneous," Lane said.

He said charges of burglary in addition to vandalism would probably be brought in connection with the incident.

Charges could be up to a month away from being filed because of the extensive nature of the investigation, the sheriff added.

"We're not going to make any deals on this. Some are going to pay," Lane vowed. He said restitution would be sought as part of any punishment.

Lane estimated the damage at $100,000 to $125,000. All the suspects are believed to be teen-agers living in the area. Laura Keys, secretary of the country club, said the club's directors would consider what to do about a possible resumption of the tournament.

More than 50 teams of men and women competed in the club's "Guys & Dolls" tournament. The competition, which drew players from several other cities, began Saturday and was to conclude Sunday.

Travel agents report numerous calls, but see few cancellations

By The Associated Press
Travel agents have been flooded with telephone calls from Americans concerned about hijackings, airport bombings and a suspicious jumbo jet crash, but few travelers are canceling their overseas plans, industry officials say.

"This has not stopped one person. I do caution them, but it's like anything else. You can fly from Little Rock to Dallas and be hijacked. It's just crazy," said Barbara Langhammer, a travel agent in Arkansas.

However, some travel agents report being hit hard. "We've already had four people cancel their trips this morning and we had approximately $100,000 in bookings canceled yesterday," said Ray Sorrell, a travel agent in Atlanta.

"It started out to only affect Greek Island, Holy Land and Mediterranean tours, but now people are canceling to all of Europe. Only Great Britain is unaffected," he said.

Meanwhile, Pan American World Airways, which suspended its daily flight from Frankfurt to Athens last week, announced the flight will resume on Thursday because "we now feel that the security at the Athens airport has improved." The airline would not elaborate on what improvements were made.

Travel agents have been working overtime during the past two weeks answering questions from prospective travelers worried about recent events: the hijacking of TWA flight 847 from Athens, the bombs exploding at Frankfurt and Tokyo airports, and the Air-India crash which killed 329 people and may have been caused by a bomb.

"There have been many telephone calls, but few cancellations," the American Society of Travel Agents said in a statement Tuesday, after an informal survey of 50 travel agents.

New bookings for European trips have been light, but the society said late June is traditionally a slow period for European bookings. And it said it anticipates no long term repercussions.

Rex Cauble is transferred to El Paso federal prison

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Rex Cauble, millionaire rancher and owner of the Cutter Bill western wear stores, has been transferred to La Tuna Federal Correctional Institute near here so he can be provided greater security than was available at the minimum-security facility at Big Spring, officials said.

Cauble, 71, of Denton County, arrived Friday at La Tuna to continue serving a 5-year sentence for a 1982 racketeering conviction, prison officials told The Dallas Morning News on Tuesday.

Bill Messersmith, executive assistant to the warden, said Cauble was completing orientation at La Tuna and had not been assigned to one of the many manufacturing jobs at the prison.

Cauble was convicted of masterminding a marijuana smuggling ring that authorities said brought more than 150,000 pounds of the drug into the United States in 1977 and 1978.

George Wilson of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons regional office, told The News the move was "an administrative decision" and denied reports that the move was the result of threats against Cauble. But he would not explain why the move was made.

"At this time, the only statement that we are releasing is that it was an administrative decision," Wilson said.

Wilson said authorities are making an "ongoing investigation" to determine if Cauble will stay at the medium security La Tuna facility or return to the lesser security facility at Big Spring.

Growing number wanting U. S.-Israeli ties lessened

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans continue to approve of President Reagan's handling of the hostage crisis in Beirut, but a growing number want the United States to cut back on its ties with Israel as a way of preventing terrorist attacks in the Mideast, according to a ABC-Washington Post poll.

Of 555 people interviewed by telephone June 20-22, 42 percent were in favor of lessening the U.S. government's ties to Israel, while 41 disapproved of such a move. Seventeen percent were undecided.

The response was in sharp contrast to the results to the same question from an ABC-Post poll of 1,016 people only a few days earlier, June 17-19. In that poll, 32 percent approved of reduced relations with Israel, while 53 percent did not.

The latest poll, released Tuesday, noted the interviews were concluded before Israel announced it was releasing 31 Shiites, and before Moslem leaders said the move would have no effect on the release of the American hostages.

The captors have demanded the release of Shiite prisoners in Israeli custody.

The poll also found a large majority of Americans want Israel to release more than 700 Shiite prisoners even if the United States does not make a formal request for their release. Sixty-eight percent were for the prisoners' release, 21 percent were against it and 11 percent were undecided.

By a 3-1 margin, respondents said they approved of the way Reagan was handling the matter, with 69 in favor, 22 percent disapproving and 8 percent having no opinion.

The poll noted that was about the same response President Carter received in the second week of the Iranian hostage crisis in 1979, with 64 percent approving and 23 percent disapproving.

Two are injured in refinery blaze

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Two workers received severe burns after a flash fire broke out at the Texaco Inc. Port Arthur Works refinery, officials say.

Wayne Lavergne, 21, of Orange, received second and third degree burns over 25 percent of his body and was listed in serious condition at Park Place Hospital in Port Arthur, hospital spokesman Jerry Rowley said Tuesday.

James Harjo, 40, of Port Arthur, was taken to Park Place Hospital and then transported by Life Flight to Houston's Hermann Hospital where he is listed in critical condition with second and third degree burns over 65 percent of his body, a Hermann Hospital spokeswoman said.

The fire occurred during the dismantling of the No. 3 catalytic reforming unit.

15,000 pay $10 each for raffle chance at winning farm

UNIONVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Despite a $1,000-a-month public relations campaign and national publicity, Bud and Hazel Hirst aren't finding enough takers to make it worthwhile raffling off their 476-acre farm.

The couple, both 53, had hoped to raise $400,000, enough to pay off their $200,000 debt on the place and give them a stake when they move on.

But so far, Hirst said Tuesday, only about 15,000 people have sent in $10 for a copy of Mrs. Hirst's book of poems, "Bitter Harvest," about the trials of farm life, and a chance to win the farm.

The Hirsts have been running their Bitter Harvest Great Farm Sweepstakes for a year. It was to have ended July 4 with a drawing in the town square of this farming community of 2,200 near the Missouri-Iowa line.

When interest in the sweepstakes declined earlier this year, the Hirsts decided to postpone the drawing until Labor Day, which is also their 34th wedding anniversary.

"I'd do anything rather than take bankruptcy," Hirst said. "I've got pride and want to pay my bills."

All money will be returned if there aren't enough tickets sold to raise the $400,000, he said. "I hope it will pick up enough ... to get people to buy more books and get us over the hump. We're so unsettled."

"We don't know if we're going to make it. We don't know if we're going to stay here."

In January, an interview on ABC's "Nightline" and a story in Time magazine sparked a flood of phone calls and book orders.

The Hirsts bought their farm in 1972 for around $85,000, planning to raise cattle and hogs and grow corn and soybeans. High interest rates, low prices for farm products and bad weather kept their debts rising, they say.

Last year, the couple took out a $4,500 loan on their car, the only property they owned that wasn't already mortgaged.

Both have taken odd jobs to make ends meet. Mrs. Hirst tried selling mail-order recipes and did a stint as a $2.75-an-hour cook. Hirst got a real estate license.

They drummed up the idea for the sweepstakes to give up their way of life gracefully.

Pre-planning a funeral costs you nothing.

Yet the savings can go beyond money.

Pre-planning a funeral does not necessarily mean even signing a commitment. It simply means making your wishes, or those of a relative, a matter of record before the need arises.

By this thoughtful act, you eliminate the pressures of last-minute, discomfiting decisions and make a difficult time less trying. National Selected Morticians has prepared an impartial booklet that tells the hows and whys of pre-planning and shows what you can do today to ease some of the burdens that must be faced by someone, someday.

Handmade glass firm closes after 95 years

By KATHY WILHELM
Associated Press Writer
GRAPEVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Triumphant but $65 poorer, Robert Lloyd gently collected a fragile, 20-year-old milk glass candelabra from the auctioneer's table. Only one month earlier, he'd grabbed the candelabra's mate for just $35.

"When that was made it went for $4.50," the auctioneer said. The sale underscored what had become ironically obvious early in the Westmoreland Glass Co.'s series of inventory auctions: going out of business can be very good for business.

"If we could (ordinarily) get anything like the prices we get at these auctions, we'd be in production," plant manager Tim Valentine said ruefully.

For 95 years, craftsmen of the once family-owned Westmoreland Glass Co. molded, crimped, etched and painted thousands of varieties of vases, candy dishes, trinket boxes, candleholders, statues and tableware.

Westmoreland's traditionally styled, homey products weren't "art glass" in a class with Tiffany products, said auctioneer George Paich, but were sold in gift shops, dime stores and department stores for daily use.

To collectors like Lloyd, of Export, and Paula K. Bland of Munhall, Westmoreland's glassware was "really the ultimate in glass ... very unusual, very functional," Mrs. Bland said.

"They seemed to give so much detailed attention to their glass ... it was just unsurpassed," said Barbara Shaeffer, publisher of The Glass Review, a monthly collectors' magazine in Marietta, Ohio.

But to the average consumer, less finished and cheaper machine-made glassware served just as well as Westmoreland's hand-pressed products, Valentine said.

"The only way to survive is to really educate your customers," he said, walking between glass-laden tables at a recent auction in Westmoreland's red brick factory about 30 miles east of Pittsburgh.

In May 1984, after several years of losses, Westmoreland cooled its glass furnaces for the last time and laid off the 100 employees left from a peak workforce of about 235. Lingered hopes of a restart were ended in October, when the company put its cast-iron molds, aging equipment and plant building up for sale.

Westmoreland opened in Grapeville in 1890. It was one of hundreds of hand-pressed glass factories that located in southwestern Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and northern West Virginia in the late 19th century because of abundant natural gas, used to fuel the huge, walk-in furnaces in which cauldrons of glass were melted.

But depletion of the gas deposits, competition from machine houses, higher labor costs and, most recently, cheap imports gradually drove most of the region's hand-made glass plants out of business.

Mrs. Shaeffer could think of only about half a dozen plants left in the area still hand pressing or blowing glass.

"There are skills that are just dying with Westmoreland Glass," mourned John Schnupp, 55, who began working for Westmoreland at age 16 in 1945 and "rose through the ranks" to become production manager.

From its original wooden-framed buffing wheels and mold presses to its domed, brick walk-in furnaces, Westmoreland's more than 4,000-square-foot factory is a museum to glassmaking.

"As far as the methods of glassmaking, there was very little change" since the factory's founding, Valentine said.

Glass was mixed and poured into a cast-iron mold fitted in a wooden press, which then was clamped shut to shape the glass to the mold. The molded glass was then crimped, pinched, stretched or swung to achieve the final shape.

When the plant was fully operating, it turned out about 10,000 pieces daily, said Valentine.

Scientists insert human growth genes into animals

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have for the first time inserted a human growth gene into rabbits, pigs and a sheep in a controversial step that could lead to bigger, more feed-efficient and disease-resistant livestock, a report says.

It is the first demonstration that a foreign gene injected into a fertilized egg of a large mammal will be taken up by the growing animal, Robin Lovell-Badge of London's Medical Research Council Mammalian Development Unit wrote in an article accompanying the report in the British journal Nature.

The report deals with research at the University of Pennsylvania, the University of Washington and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The USDA was sued in October by groups opposed to research on transferring human genes into livestock. The suit is pending in U.S. District Court.

A gene is the basic unit of heredity that issues marching orders to plant and animal cells.

The researchers worked with the gene that orders production of growth hormone in humans, joined to a portion of a mouse gene that can turn the human gene on. That combination gene had already been shown to "express" itself, or settle in and go to work, in laboratory mice.

Finnie Murray, senior scientist at the Edison Animal Biotechnology Center at Ohio University, said Tuesday the newly reported work is "a significant step forward because it demonstrates that, simply put, the phenomenon of expression of foreign genes is not restricted to the mouse."

Researchers reported that the gene was taken up by one of 73 sheep, 28 of 218 rabbits and 20 of 192 pigs that grew from fertilized eggs into which it was injected.

In some of those pigs and rabbits, the gene issued its chemical instructions to make growth hormone, and the human hormone itself was found in some of the animals.

Inserted genes might also make animals produce valuable chemicals that could be harvested from their milk or other body fluid, he said.

Fire truck firm goes from barn to big time

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer
OCALA, Fla. (AP) — Entrepreneur Robert Wormser knew that to break into the tradition-bound, sleepy little market he had in mind, he had to be innovative, turn out his product quickly and use creative selling techniques.

That is a tall order in any business. But when the business is making fire trucks, the challenge was giant. Now, 11 years later, Wormser is the point man for the industry.

His Emergency One company, based in this central Florida community, has grown out of the owner's barn into a $51 million operation, the leading maker of American fire trucks, according to Forbes magazine.

It is also shaking the industry to its conservative foundations with an aluminum fire truck, quick delivery and sharp marketing efforts. It offers on-the-job test drives, raffles off trucks and courts fire chiefs.

Although aluminum is more expensive initially, it does not corrode when exposed to salt and water, as steel does, and it is easier to work with in the assembly process.

"We weren't confused by tradition," says Wormser, a gruff, self-taught metal designer whose talk reminds people of the late actor John Wayne.

Wormser, 54, founder of 16 companies in the steel-fabricating field, retired to Ocala from Michigan about 13 years ago.

But, he says, he got bored. "I drove my wife crazy and she threw me out of the house and told me to get a job." So he started up Emergency One in his backyard.

Forbes points out that American LaFrance, which once dominated the staid fire truck market, is rolling its last truck off its quarter-mile-long assembly line in Elmira, N.Y., next month. Its owner, Figgie International, cites LaFrance's dated designs, high overhead and a string of financial losses as reasons for going out of business.

Another is Emergency One, which introduced wider cabs, and more attractive dashboards and steering wheels, and speeded up production. It builds a basic fire truck in 45 days, a fraction of the time taken by competitors.

Wormser's company makes 50 trucks a month at prices ranging from $32,000 for a small pumper to $500,000 for a 135-foot aerial ladder truck. It is shooting for 25 percent of the total fire engine market.

Wormser's not worried about the competition. "We're so far advanced right now that it's hard for them to catch up."

Despite Emergency One's success, Wormser is devoting most of his own time to another company, Federal Motors, which he founded early this year to build chassis for heavy transport trucks. Together, his two companies have 350 employees and an $8 million annual payroll.

The second company, Federal Motors, has a bigger potential for growth in a larger, more diversified marketplace than just the users of fire trucks, Wormser says.

Merger of Southwest and Muse completed

DALLAS (AP) — Lamar Muse says he isn't worried about the changes Southwest Airlines might make in the carrier that bears his name.

"I'm ecstatic," Muse said Tuesday after Southwest announced it had completed its $65 million purchase of rival Muse Air Corp. "I'd say that one of the things they bought was the Muse Air image and I would think that they would protect it."

The merger became effective immediately Tuesday after documents were filed with the secretary of state in Austin, officials with both carriers said.

Both airlines said they hope the sale, completed one day after the U.S. Transportation Department approved the deal, will strengthen both companies financially.

And Muse, whose airline reported a $17 million loss last year, says the sale takes a load off his back.

"I feel 50 pounds lighter today than I did yesterday," he said.

Ironically, Muse was Southwest's first president, a post he held from 1971 to 1978. With the merger in place, he will be vice chairman of the Muse board of directors, but will not take an active role in the company, officials said.

Although Southwest and Muse — which has never recorded a profit in its four-year history — are merging, both airlines will be run as separate companies, Kelleher and Muse said.

"I think it's a wonderful occasion. It's really a joy for us," said Southwest Chairman Herbert D. Kelleher, who became chairman of Muse as well.

Kelleher and Muse said the merger will result in few changes in the two airlines, except that they will become "better and more profitable."

Southwest last year reported profits of $49.7 million.

Under the agreement, Muse Air shareholders will receive $6 a share in cash, plus Southwest common stock and warrants, for each Muse share held.

Officials with both airlines hope to preserve their "separateness and the individuality" while maintaining "internal competition," Kelleher said.

Transportation Department officials said they delayed approval of the deal because of an objection raised by Continental Airlines.

US-European farm dispute heating up, Block reports

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The long-standing dispute between the European Community and the United States on farm policies has heated up recently. And Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says there are skeletons in both closets.

As a result, the United States and the EC are pricing themselves out of the lucrative international commodity market, Block said Tuesday. Each is trying to take up the slack by subsidizing exports.

"Both of us are using export subsidies," Block told reporters at the National Press Club. "They do that, and we do exactly the same thing. There isn't a nickel's worth of difference."

"They're priced out of the world market because their internal prices are too high, so they use subsidies to buy their market. Our internal prices are too high, so we're using subsidies to compete in the market," Block said.

He added: "We really ought to sit down and find a way to bring a halt to this whole thing."

The nudge by Block coincided with a visit by Frans Andriessen, the EC's commissioner for agriculture and fisheries, who has been meeting with Block and other U.S. officials.

Block later on Tuesday told reporters after another meeting with Andriessen that they had agreed "to intensify" bilateral efforts to work out some of the trade problems. Block also said he planned a trip to Europe next week for meetings in West Germany and Austria.

For years, Block and other U.S. officials have complained about the EC's practice of triggering more European farm production through artificially high price supports — and then unloading the surpluses through subsidized exports.

Recently, Block put into effect an export subsidy program using free surplus commodities as bonuses to help boost U.S. exports in selected markets. Algeria was singled out as the first target country, but so far it has not participated in the program.

Block said he could not predict when — or if — Algeria will avail itself of the U.S. export subsidy program.

"I'll guarantee this much," he said. "We'll offer more sales to other countries" besides Algeria. "I think we'll know what's going to happen fairly soon."

Block said the tensions that have built up between the EC and the United States "have to be brought down by some agreements between the two of us." New multilateral talks such as the ones that led to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade would be in order, he said, but some kind of bilateral understanding is necessary in the interim.

Block said he has not proposed a formal new series of U.S.-EC meetings. "We haven't agreed to do that," he said. "I'm just saying that there's going to be more intensive contact than there has been the last year or so."

IBM to acquire MCI major stake

WASHINGTON (AP) — A financial plan for IBM to become the largest individual shareholder of MCI Communications Corp. could create a telecommunications computer giant rivaling American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

International Business Machines Corp. earned major-league status in the growing telecommunications market on Tuesday with an agreement that would make it the biggest stockholder in MCI, which has been vigorously fighting AT&T for long distance telephone customers.

Under a complicated deal, the Washington-based MCI agreed to acquire Satellite Business Systems, a rival long-distance telephone network principally owned by IBM, in exchange for millions of MCI shares.

As part of the original AT&T breakup settlement with the Justice Department, the telephone company was permitted to go into the computer manufacturing business. IBM is the nation's largest computer maker.

The merger of MCI and SBS could indirectly increase competition between IBM and AT&T in the communications industry.

IBM Vice Chairman Paul Rizzo said at a news conference that he "finds it difficult to believe the merger will strike at the heart of AT&T." On the other hand, IBM and AT&T will continue to be competitors.

MCI chairman William G. McGowan said that in exchange for SBS assets and operations, MCI would issue to IBM 45 million shares of MCI common stock, and warrants for the purchase of an additional 7 million shares of MCI common stock at $15 per share.

IBM has agreed to hold the shares for a minimum of three years.

IBM currently owns 60 percent of Satellite Business Systems. Aetna Life & Casualty Co., which owns the other 40 percent, also agreed to sell its share of SBS in the transaction with MCI.

Directors of IBM and MCI have approved the transaction, but the deal also is subject to approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

MILLIONAIRE WOMAN — Tracey Thurman, 24, of Torrington, Conn., was awarded $2.3 million Tuesday by a federal jury in compensatory damages. The jury found police officers did not do enough to protect her from abuse by her husband. The National Organization of Women calls the case a landmark one for battered women. (AP Laserphoto)

Jury awards beaten wife $2.3 million

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A jury award of $2.3 million to a battered wife "spoke more loudly than we will ever be able to" about police duty to protect women from domestic violence, a National Organization of Women official said.

In its award Tuesday, the U.S. District Court jury found that 29 Torrington police officers violated Tracey Thurman's constitutional rights by failing to protect her from a stabbing and beating by her estranged husband.

The jury, after deliberating 7½ hours over two days, also awarded $300,000 to Thurman's 3-year-old son for emotional damages. He witnessed the June 10, 1983, attack that left Thurman, 24, scarred and partially paralyzed.

The case marked the first time a federal court agreed to hear the civil lawsuit of a battered wife.

"I think what happened here today will be heard across the nation. Everybody's following it. It provides a new pair of glasses," said Gayle Brooks, NOW's state coordinator and director of the Connecticut Task Force on Abused Women.

Ms. Brooks predicted that state legislatures and police departments across the country would heed a warning in this case to spend money on training in how to handle domestic disputes.

The jury found that 29 officers violated Thurman's constitutional right to equal protection of the law and that police conduct was a proximate cause of her injuries.

"I'm thrilled," she said outside the courthouse. "I'm really happy. Finally, it's proved that it's their fault."

She had argued that because her complaints about her husband's harassment stemmed from a domestic dispute, police failed to give them as much consideration as they would to other types of complaints.

The jury also found the officers negligent in handling the case. The police have 10 days in which to file an appeal.

Jesse M. Frankl, the officers' attorney, said he was "surprised" at the decision and the amount of money awarded and that jurors acted sympathetically towards Thurman without looking at the facts. He plans to appeal.

Thurman says she was stabbed 13 times and kicked in the head repeatedly by her estranged husband while a policeman watched but did nothing until other officers arrived.

Two explosions ignite South African federal fuel depot

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two explosions apparently caused by bombs ignited a government fuel depot and knocked out a power station today in the black tribal homeland of Transkei, authorities said.

In riot-torn black townships east of Johannesburg, seven blacks were killed and eight were injured in a series of grenade attacks and other incidents, police said.

It was one of the worst nights of violence in 10 months of protests against white minority rule and the racial segregation policy called apartheid. Private groups say more than 400 people have died in the unrest.

The incidents came on the 30th anniversary of the signing of the Freedom Charter, a document calling for a non-racial government that is regarded by many activists as a blueprint for a future South Africa.

The explosions in Umtata, capital of the Transkei black homeland, came only a few minutes apart and plunged the city and its suburbs into darkness, witnesses were quoted as saying. There were no reports of casualties.

Six hours after the blast at the fuel depot a large fire still raged. Firemen stood by watching the blaze burn itself out.

Capital Radio, an independent station in Transkei, quoted police chief Gen. Leonard Kawe as saying police had determined saboteurs used a limpet mine in the attack on the fuel depot.

Transkei, in southeast South Africa, is one of four black homelands considered by South Africa to be independent and the states in which blacks have civil rights. The independence of the black homelands is not recognized abroad.

Six other homelands have some autonomy but have refused or not yet been granted independence.

Teachers competing for the big prize

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 114 contestants marched into the hotel ballroom in alphabetical order by state, then stood beaming before the battery of news cameras as they posed for a class picture.

It was a little like the Miss America Pageant. There were no swimsuits, but poise and personality will still weigh heavily in the judges' decisions.

This contest was open to both sexes, and the prize is not a crown, but a ticket into space for some lucky classroom teacher.

For years, schoolteachers across America have been wheeling out televisions and letting their classes watch NASA launch astronauts into orbit. Many, from Alan Shepherd to John Glenn to Sally Ride, became instant heroes in the eyes of millions of children.

In January it will be a teacher's turn to latch onto some of that celebrity.

President Reagan, when he promised last August to tap a teacher as the first civilian passenger in space, said, "When that shuttle lifts off, all of America will be reminded of the crucial role that teachers and education play in the life of our nation. I can't think of a better lesson for our children and our country."

The 114 teachers — the cream of a crop of more than 10,000 applicants — have been treated to a whirl of Washington receptions capped by a White House party today.

The president regularly holds tea parties to honor educators. Last week he had 141 top high school seniors, the presidential scholars, in for cake and cookies, and later this year he will be distributing flags to the 277 schools his Department of Education picked last Friday as exemplars of excellence.

So what do the schools get from all this pageantry and public relations?

They get a much needed shot in the arm. For a while in the 1960s and 1970s it seemed that the only time America's schools and colleges made the news was when they were enveloped in strife or test scores were plummeting or teachers were walking picket lines.

Now the president is trying to celebrate some of the accomplishments of America's schools, even while efforts continue to raise high school graduation requirements and other standards that slipped in the 1970s.

For those who scoff at public relations, consider this: the Gallup Poll, which takes an annual reading of the public mood on education, consistently has found that people have a more positive attitude about their local schools if they have set foot inside once during the preceding year.

It doesn't matter whether they had a child in the school — most adults now do not — or attended a school function. All they had to do was to step inside those four walls to vote, attend a civic meeting or for any other reason, and they came away feeling better about the education children were receiving.

Officials say no action planned against singer

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. Customs officials say they plan no action against country singer Donna Fargo for a dispute she had last week when inspectors tried to board her touring bus at the U.S.-Canadian border.

Investigators also "found there was no wrongdoing on the part of the customs inspectors," Cherise Mayberry, a spokeswoman for the Customs regional office in Chicago, said Tuesday.

Fargo and her entourage — including husband Stanley Silver — were detained more than five hours Thursday after she asked inspectors to remove their shoes before boarding her bus at a Detroit-Windsor, Ontario, border crossing.

Fargo said in an interview that she was thrown to the floor by officers, and that she "squeezed" the face of one to free herself when he closed a door on her arm.

There was no contraband found on either of two buses and the agency doesn't plan to file any charges against Fargo, Mayberry said.

"If any charges are filed in the case, they will come from Fargo or the officers involved, filing as individuals," she said.

Our Tax Deferred Annuities* now pay 10¼ %

Everybody knows that there are many investment opportunities around today that pay a handsome rate of interest. The trouble is, in many cases that interest is currently taxable. You can lose up to over half of it to the tax man. So your retirement savings may grow very slowly.

Now, there's a better answer. It's our tax deferred single premium annuities.

Not only is the rate competitive, but the interest is free from current federal income tax. That means your savings can grow up to twice as fast as a mutual fund, time deposit, or other taxable plan.

*Taxes on the income must be paid later, of course. But usually not until retirement, when your income tax bracket will probably be lower. And after your savings have grown.

Our annuities are also ideal for IRA and Keogh plans—because they also protect against disability and provide a retirement income you cannot outlive. Most other plans don't.

And whether it's IRA, Keogh, or other retirement fund, you get our expert knowledge of annuities and our unbeatable service.

These annuities are available through most New York Life Agents. Go ahead, ask. They'll help you to a richer retirement.

Gravedigger enjoys his outdoor job

By GEOFF GORVIN
Owatonna People's Press
OWATONNA, Minn. (AP) — He's called a gravedigger. According to Lyle Bohlman, that's about the only name for his profession.

And Bohlman, 52, loves his work. "I enjoy it! I like working outside in the fresh air," said Bohlman, whose three sons are his part-time helpers.

Equipped with nothing more than two shovels, a measuring club, a pair of boots, a hat, and an earful of chatter, Bohlman talks and works non-stop as shovelful after shovelful of soil is tossed out of the hole.

Bohlman's father, Leo, got Bohlman started digging graves in 1965 when Leo was digging graves and mowing grass for a local cemetery. Bohlman was hired as a church custodian but was told that with a family to support, he'd better find other work to supplement his income.

So Bohlman joined up with his father in the gravedigging business and has been in it ever since.

"When we had our first death, we worked eight hours diggin' that grave," Bohlman said. "Since then, I've gotten better and better."

"I wouldn't cover that first hole, either. I felt like I had butterflies in my stomach," Bohlman said. "But after a period of years, you get used to it. It's like another job now."

Since then — about 1,670-plus graves later — Bohlman has improved his time to about three to four hours for a 3-by-8-foot, 5-foot-deep grave, depending on the type of soil.

There are no laws governing gravedigging except those that the cemetery association makes, Bohlman said. The law that concerns Bohlman the most is the one that requires 18 inches of soil above the vault to enable the grass to grow back better.

The Bohlmans will begin their third generation of gravediggers after Pa Bohlman retires and the three Bohlman boys take over the business. Brian, 27; Stuart, 30, and Leon, 28, have been digging graves since they were 16. They now have full-time jobs but help their father at night and on weekends.

"When us four get in there the dirt really flies. Yeah, the boys, they got a lot of good years of diggin' in them yet," Bohlman says.

Bohlman's skin is already dark and sun beaten from his work this spring. His palms are tough and leathery, offering his hands protection for the gloves he doesn't wear. The Bohlmans use nothing more than shovels to remove the hundreds of pounds of dirt from the grave and into a wagon. He bought a backhoe a few years ago, but didn't like it, he said.

"It doesn't work in cemeteries that well. It's too hard to get between some of the stones with it," Bohlman said. "I went back to the old-fashioned way. It doesn't tear everything up." Bohlman figures he dug only about 45 graves with his machine.

Bohlman charges about $130 a grave, which is comparable to what his colleagues get, he said. The funeral directors include his charge with the amount they charge the family.

But in the winter, the price can be up to $175 if the frost is thick.

Young refugee is a promising artist

By JIM NAGEL
St. Paul Dispatch
& Pioneer Press

LAKEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — Between the ages of 8 and 12, after the Khmer Rouge takeover in Cambodia, Chhomrith Un was a slave laborer in the jungles and rice paddies of his native country.

Now Un, an 18-year-old senior at Lakeville High School, is documenting the cruel and inhumane acts he witnessed in oil paintings that are winning awards, although he recognizes that the works won't end up on many living room walls.

In all his paintings, Un tries to document life as he sees it. As a result, some of his paintings depict torture and murder. However, others show less violent childhood scenes or serene views of refugee life in America.

Un won his first art contest while in a refugee camp in Thailand, and his painting titled "The Killing Fields of Cambodia" recently took top honors in the 1985 Minnesota Regional Scholastic Art Awards competition. It is one of his most graphic paintings, showing a refugee being beaten with a spiked club.

The first murder Un witnessed took place in a rice field behind his parents' farm after Khmer Rouge revolutionaries took over Cambodia in 1975.

"Three guerrilla soldiers said they were taking a man to court," Un recalled in an interview. "When the man protested that the rice field wasn't the way to court, they shot him with an M16 rifle. The bullet went into his jaw, making a small hole, and came out under his arm."

Un described the exit hole with his hands, forming an area as big as a large grapefruit.

The soldiers then ordered bystanders to bury the victim, he said, adding that it was one of the cleanest killings he witnessed following the Khmer Rouge takeover.

Later, as the revolutionaries began decimating the Cambodian population, death often was a slow and painful process, Un said, with guerrilla soldiers using torture to make examples of their victims. Un's pictures are gruesome tales of beating deaths and beheadings. Deaths often followed mutilation.

Un said paintings that show human mutilation and other brutal and inhumane acts perpetrated by the Khmer Rouge are his way of showing the world what has happened in Cambodia under the regime of communist leader Pol Pot.

In soft-spoken English, learned by listening outside English classes in a private school in Cambodia, Un downplays his artistic talent. But it apparently is a natural talent, first evident when he was about 3 years old when he drew in sand outside his northern Cambodia home because he had no art supplies.

Un, who was reunited with his family at a Cambodian refugee camp in Thailand, came to the United States in 1981 with his parents, two younger brothers, three younger sisters and his grandmother.

WARREN HASSE

THE FIRST CLEATED SHOE HAS FALLEN. The second is poised and ready to drop next January, during the regular annual NCAA convention. And by then, the full impact of last week's special meeting in New Orleans will be better understood. Right now, it is like Texas' infamous HB 72 in that much examination and refining will be needed.

But one thing is certain, in giving almost unanimous endorsement to all of the dozen propositions, the Chief Executive Officers of the 791 member schools in their clarion call let it be known that they are once again going to assume control of college athletic programs.

At least while they were on Bourbon Street and in the eye of the national sports scene. Upon returning home they will face again the realities of political and financial pressures that have put the NCAA, governing body of collegiate athletics, on its deathbed. Whether the CEOs will be strong and united enough to withstand the all-sides attack could determine the future of collegiate sports as we have long known them.

Despite the special invitation to school presidents to attend this obviously critical special meeting, just barely over half of the NCAA member schools were represented, and of those, fewer than 50 percent (under 200) had the president voting. For the first time, roll call votes were taken. And as it turned out, Southwest Conference schools were the very, very few to oppose any proposals.

Dearest of the 12 approved was the so-called "gas chamber" which could result in such minor penalty as the current probation all the way up to and including prohibition in the sport involved for up to two seasons, prohibition from coaching and recruiting, and providing of grants-in-aid in that sport for a similar period, and loss of institutional voting rights and committee representation within the NCAA for up to four years. The most severe punishment would be for a second violation within a five-year period.

This is where the problem got sticky. The CEOs decided to make it retroactive to Sept. 1, 1980, which would cause about 25 schools to already have one strike currently against them, including such biggies as SMU, Kansas, UCLA, USC, Illinois, Florida and Miami. The second would have to occur after Sept. 1 of this year, giving a two-month grace period for any to fess-up to current violations.

It is difficult to accept the retroactive phase of the rule. But any school that violated any NCAA rule knew punishment of varying intensity could be invoked, including suspension of that sport. The NCAA has precedent to stand on in the point-shaving case at Kentucky many years ago, and Southwestern Louisiana's Ragin' Cajun problems of the early 70s. Both recovered without apparent serious injury, and if anything came back stronger than ever in fan support. Plus being a bit wiser about how to deal with recruiting, legally or illegally. In neither case did the head coaches suffer over the long run, though public scorn and ridicule hurt at the time.

Probably most injured were the athletes and students. Those players involved were always tainted, and teammates and students were injured simply through association. Similar problems would exist should it ever be necessary to invoke the "gas chamber" penalty. Glaringly absent from anything we have seen printed about that punishment is one thing, educational protection for the non-involved athlete in the suspended sport.

It happened somewhat similarly about 30 years ago. Two fighting Pampa brothers, Bobby and Gary Wilhelm were on boxing scholarships at the University of Wisconsin, their choice out of the several NCAA schools participating in that sport. In a tragedy, a Wisconsin fighter was killed by a blow to the head during the NCAA championships, leading to Wisconsin dropping the sport, and eventually the NCAA doing likewise. I talked with John Walsh, coach of the Badger team, about the scholarships, and to U-W President Edwin Fred, both of whom assured me they would recommend to the Regents all boxers be kept on scholarship, a recommendation quickly approved.

The NCAA will face some refining legislation when it meets again in January. Some due process problems need clearing up. But also, retention of scholarships for any athlete exonerated from any wrong-doing in any suspended sport should be legislated. This would protect that hostage athlete educationally (they would still get punished, unfortunately, by not being able to compete unless they were able to transfer to another school), and it would further add a major financial penalty against any institution convicted of wrongdoing to the extent of "gas chamber" punishment.

It has been interesting to see how all the rules approved last week were for self-protection of the presidents and the schools they represented. None of it, apparently, not one little paragraph, appeared to show any concern for the innocent student-athlete.

And these educational leaders talk themselves hoarse trying to convince unbelieving alumni and fandom that their first concern is the athlete academically. We know one athletic director who is in disfavor because he publicly stated he was going to do something about the poor academic record of his school's athletes.

The face of college athletics, as we said, is in for some severe changes from the way we have known it. The decision makers are bidding to regain their aborted authority and will make self-serving pressure decisions with little broad understanding of what they are doing or where they are going. One certain stop will be at the courthouse.

And even worse is the fact that there are eight bills in Congress that could be termed sports legislation. If we get the federals involved it will be a real morass. Look what the Texas Legislature and State Board of Education have done to high school activities!

Johnson to play for Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — The fifth-round draft pick of the Houston Oilers has agreed to contract terms with the National Football League, team officials say.

Kicker-punter Lee Johnson, who led national champion Brigham Young with 74 points last season, will report to the Houston rookie camp July 19 in San Angelo, Oiler spokesman Gregg Stengel said Tuesday.

Johnson, a Dallas native, attended McCollough High School in The Woodlands, a Houston suburb.

Terms of Johnson's contract were not disclosed.

Yankees continue dominance over O's

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer
 It would be difficult not to be impressed with Rickey Henderson's major-league-leading .360 batting average, but that's a pittance as far as the Baltimore Orioles are concerned. Henderson, who had three hits and drove in three runs Tuesday night as the New York Yankees whipped the Orioles for the fifth straight time in a nine-day span, is hitting .700 against Baltimore, whose Manager Earl Weaver has been wondering aloud: "Doesn't he ever make an out?"

Yes, Henderson lined out hard on the one occasion he was retired in the Yankees' 7-4 victory. Henderson, who also swiped his 32nd base in 33 attempts, is 21-for-35 in his last nine games.

Ed Whitson, 3-6, recorded his second victory over Baltimore in seven days.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Detroit 3, Boston 0; Toronto 7, Milwaukee 1; Kansas City 3, Minnesota 0; Seattle 2, Texas 1; Oakland 5, Chicago 4 in 13 innings; and California 7, Cleveland 3 in 13 innings.

Tigers 3, Red Sox 0

Hot-hitting Darrell Evans slammed his 11th home run in the last 37 games for Detroit, which got four-hit pitching from Jack Morris. Evans' two-run homer, his 14th of the season, came off Boston's Bob Ojeda, 4-2, and staked Morris to a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning.

Morris, 9-5, who leads the American League with 96 strikeouts, fanned only three.

Blue Jays 7, Brewers 1

AL East leader Toronto laid waste to Milwaukee with a six-run third inning. Tony Fernandez and Lloyd Moseby reached Brewer starter Ray Burris, 4-6, for run-scoring hits, then the Blue Jays took advantage of reliever Jamie Coanower.

An error by first baseman Cecil Cooper, and four walks and a wild pitch by Coanower fueled the big inning.

Jim Clancy, 4-4, fired a six-hitter over eight innings.

Royals 3, Twins 0

Kansas City's Danny Jackson pitched his second shutout of the season and Lonnie Smith drove in one run and scored another.

HENDERSON HEROICS — The Yankees' Rickey Henderson had three hits and three RBI in a 7-4 win over the Orioles. Henderson leads the American League with a .360 batting average and 32 steals in 33 attempts. (AP Laserphoto)

Koosman hurls 3-hitter at Cardinals

By JONATHAN VITTI
Associated Press Writer
 Jerry Koosman has done twice what the rest of the National League has only done once this season. And it only took him seven days.

For the second time in a week, the NL's oldest pitcher beat baseball's winningest pitcher as Koosman and the Philadelphia Phillies beat Joaquin Andujar and the St. Louis Cardinals 3-1 Tuesday night.

The 42-year-old left-hander pitched a three-hitter — yielding only an unearned run — struck out eight and walked two. Andujar, 12-1 before he ran into Koosman, dropped to 12-3.

Koosman underwent surgery on his left knee May 8. A month later, he was pitching in relief. Last Wednesday he started for the first time since the surgery and hurled six innings as the Phillies hung a 1-0 loss on Andujar and the Cards.

"It's like a broken bone in that I should have given it longer (to heal)," said Koosman of the knee. "But I didn't. I wanted to help."

He pitches with a brace on the knee designed to prevent fluid accumulation.

The Cardinals are leading the league in batting and runs scored. In other National League games, New York edged Chicago 3-2, Cincinnati rallied past San Francisco 7-6, Montreal defeated Pittsburgh 3-2, Atlanta tripped Houston 6-4 and Los Angeles downed San Diego 3-2.

Mets 3, Cubs 2

Dwight Gooden returned to the only park where he was frustrated in his rookie campaign and went all the way to force a 13th straight defeat upon Chicago. He struck out six Cubs and walked three.

Last Tuesday, Gooden, now 11-3, beat the Cubs 1-0 in New York.

"I was glad to finally win at Wrigley Field, I knew what happened last year," said Gooden, who absorbed losses of 11-2 and 9-3 in Chicago as a rookie in 1984. Working with six days rest, he pitched his seventh complete game of the year.

Chicago's losing streak has tied a team record.

Reds 7, Giants 6

Cincinnati, trailing 6-3, rallied for four runs in the eighth inning. Cesar Cedeno's first home run as an American — a two-run shot — touched off the rally against reliever Mark Davis, 3-5.

"I hit my first home run as an American," said Cedeno, a Dominican, who became a U.S. citizen last week. "Now I'm only 754 behind Henry Aaron."

Expos 3, Pirates 2

Tim Lincecum hit a solo homer and Dan Driscoll, who had committed a costly error the inning before, drilled a tie-breaking single as Montreal rallied in the seventh and moved into first place in the NL East, a half-game in front of St. Louis.

The Pirates lost their fourth game in a row.

Braves 6, Astros 4

Six Houston errors provided four unearned runs for the Braves. The error total was one short of the Astros team record. Third baseman Phil Garner and shortstop Craig Reynolds made three each. Four errors fueled the Braves' three-run sixth — two wild throws by Reynolds and two fielding errors by Garner.

Bob Knepper, 7-4, was victimized by the miscues. The only earned runs he gave up were on a two-run triple by Rafael Ramirez.

Dodgers 3, Padres 2

Al Oliver's bases-loaded sacrifice fly with one out in the ninth scored Ken Landreaux, ending the Padres' four-game winning streak.

Trailing 2-1, the Dodgers tied the game in the eighth. With two outs, Bill Russell, batting for starter Bob Welch, dropped a single into center field that scored R.J. Reynolds and denied San Diego starter Andy Hawkins his 12th victory.

Wyatt hopes to clean up college athletics

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Joe B. Wyatt remembers attending the NCAA's annual convention in January of 1984 — when the powerful Presidents Commission was formed — and coming away "simply appalled at the actions there."

What especially gnawed at Vanderbilt University's chancellor was what he called "the overall feeling of ambivalence whether the chief executive officers had the responsibility to act" on matters concerning higher academic standards for athletes.

"It was inexplicable to me that the CEO of an enterprise doesn't have full responsibility concerning athletic matters," Wyatt said. "To me, it was a very simple matter — you shouldn't admit anyone to a college or university if you don't believe, based on his past, that he can complete the course of study he takes."

In the last year-and-a-half, Wyatt has had his eyes opened by some of the goings-on and apparently intends to become a leader in the escalating effort to clean things up.

At this time last year, Vanderbilt and Florida were the only Southeastern Conference schools that had never won the SEC football title. Florida thought it had broken through with a 5-0-1 league record in 1984 and the blessings of the SEC's Executive Committee, which ruled the Gators could keep their title but couldn't go to the Sugar Bowl because of an NCAA probation resulting from 59 rules violations.

Thanks in no small measure to Wyatt, Florida and Vandy still are officially without a championship. A letter written by Wyatt to Mississippi State President James McComas, chairman of the Executive Committee, was circulated — with Wyatt's approval — among all the SEC presidents and resulted in Florida's being stripped of the title late last month. Wyatt would like Florida to know it's nothing personal.

"This really has nothing to do especially with Florida except that they were found guilty of more than 50 violations," Wyatt said. "It seemed ludicrous in the face of that for them to be recognized as conference champions."

"I didn't lobby against anybody. To me, it was a matter that each institution had to decide. It was a matter of the utmost importance to the integrity of the conference and college athletics."

Wyatt's letter did point out that "the integrity of the SEC is in jeopardy. Indeed, the integrity of college athletics in general is close to an all-time low, from my perspective."

He urged the presidents to reconsider the Executive Committee's ruling on the football championship. They did so at the annual SEC meetings in Destin, Fla., late last month and voted 6-4 — Alabama, Auburn and Mississippi State were in Florida's corner — to take away the Gators' championship.

Noles placed on disabled list

SEATTLE (AP) — The Texas Rangers have announced that they placed right-handed pitcher Dickie Noles on the disabled list and purchased the contract of right-hander Bob Sebra from their Class AAA farm club in Oklahoma City.

Sebra, 23, was told to fly here a few hours before his scheduled

American League debut in a Wednesday afternoon game against the Seattle Mariners.

Noles, 28, was sidelined by tendonitis in his right shoulder. He is 3-6 with a 4.04 earned run average.

Sebra is 6-3 with a 2.60 ERA at Oklahoma City.

Sabatini a future Wimbledon star?

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Even before Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini made her Wimbledon debut, she was the subject of conversation at the All England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club.

The 15-year-old Sabatini, considered by many a future champion in this famed grass tournament, came from behind on Tuesday to defeat Britain's Amanda Brown 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

"I have always dreamed of Wimbledon, and I was pleased to play my first match on Court 1," she said. "It felt good and I hope to be coming back for many more years."

But if the recommendations of a special commission are followed, there's a strong possibility she would be the last 15-year-old to be seeded at Wimbledon.

The International Tennis

Federation's Eligibility Commission has recommended that no players under age 14 be allowed to compete in any professional tournament.

Those who are 14 could play in a maximum of eight pro tournaments a year, including four in the major circuits, if the recommendations are followed, while those who are 15 could play in 12 pro events, including eight on the major circuits.

"By major professional circuits, the commission means the Nabisco Grand Prix for men and the Virginia Slims Series for women, both of which encompass the four Grand Slam tournaments," the commission report states.

"By professional event, it means any tournament carrying ATP or WTA computer ranking points and any senior competition under the jurisdiction of the MIPTC, WIPTC or ITF, including Davis Cup; and Federation Cup," the report said.

Since seedings are based on computer ranking, those under the age of 16 would be unable to play enough tournaments to be seeded in their first Grand Slam event.

The commission on Tuesday submitted its 22-page report to tennis' governing bodies — the International Tennis Federation (ITF), the Men's International Professional Tennis Council (MIPTC) and the Women's International Professional Tennis Council (WIPTC). The conclusions and recommendations were made after hearings at Delray Beach, Fla., in February and the French Open in Paris earlier this month.

"After talks with all sections of the game, after studying reports from specialists, coaches and others, and after reading many articles on the subject by tennis writers, the commission has found that there is real reason for concern due to physical and mental pressures at all levels and at all ages and from all sides," the commission reported.

"A lot of people are concerned about 'too much too soon,' but she, or I, or her parents are hot concerned at all because she loves tennis, loves to travel and she is enjoying what she is doing," said Sabatini's coach, Patricio Apey.

The commission took note of the numerous junior tournaments, but made no recommendations except to say that competition, "particularly at 12 and under, should not be carried to such excess that the pressures become overwhelming..."

Rozier admits he's not another Earl Campbell

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier says he hopes Houston Oilers fans don't expect him to fill former Oiler and Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell's shoes.

Rozier was lured from the United States Football League to the Oilers of the National Football League with a $2.25 million, four-year contract.

"I'm just Mike Rozier. I'm not Earl Campbell, and I hope everybody doesn't think I'm going to fill Earl's shoes," Rozier told Houston radio station KIKK Tuesday in a telephone interview from Philadelphia.

Campbell was traded to the New Orleans Saints last year.

Monday, one day after scoring four touchdowns in the Jacksonville Bull's final regular season game, Rozier's agent, Art Wilkinson, announced that his client would jump leagues and join the Oilers.

"This is a chance for him to put a few more credits to bed," Wilkinson said. "It's a chance for him to become the first player in pro football history to put together two 1,000-yard seasons in the same calendar year."

Rozier, who set rushing records and won the 1983 Heisman Trophy while at the University of Nebraska, gained 1,361 yards this year in the USFL with Jacksonville, which tried to retain Rozier with an offer that included $1 million in real estate.

Houston obtained NFL rights to the former All-American in a supplemental draft of USFL players in June 1984.

Negotiations between Wilkinson and Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzog broke off in August with a four-year, $3.2 million deal on the table. Rozier signed with Jacksonville in February.

Wilkinson said that he and Rozier walked away three times and said they weren't coming back. But on each occasion, Rozier played well in the next game, "and we got the call the following week," Wilkinson said.

Rozier is expected to be in Houston later this week for a physical examination and to read over the contract, Herzog said. According to the terms of the proposal, Herzog said, Rozier would be paid in full over the life of the contract.

"I'm very pleased because Mike's a talented player who is coming off a great season with Jacksonville, but I'm going to be cautious until his signature is on a contract," Herzog said.

Rozier, 24, of Camden, N.J., won the Heisman, Maxwell and Walter Camp trophies in 1983, when he set Nebraska and Big Eight Conference rushing records. He then signed with the Pittsburgh Maulers of the USFL and played with them in 1984 under a personal service contract with team owner

Edward DeBartolo Sr.

He blamed ankle problems for his subpar season with the Maulers, who folded after the 1984 season.

The Oilers finished 23rd among the 28 NFL teams in rushing last season, and Coach Hugh Campbell is trying to beef up Houston's attack.

"We needed to add talent as well as depth to our team and Mike certainly feels that need. I think he's a good back and will come to camp fully motivated. As far as the Oilers are concerned, it's a good deal," Campbell said.

Palmer breaks discus mark

Wendall Palmer won the discus event and placed second in the shot during the Texas Track and Field Classic held last weekend in Amarillo.

Palmer threw the two-kilo discus 132 feet, six inches to better his own American record of 131 feet, 2½ inches in the Masters Division. He threw the 16-pound shot 35-4.

Palmer broke Fortune Gordene's discus record two weeks ago at a meet in Andrews.

In the high school division, Tommy Palmer won the javelin event and placed third in the discus. The younger Palmer also won the javelin at the Andrews meet.

The Palmers will compete in the Ozone Meet July 13.

Tourney games postponed

Rain canceled Tuesday's play in the Pampa Little League City Tournament. The games were re-scheduled for tonight, starting at 6 p.m. at Optimist Park.

In last night's action, Holmes Sporting Goods was leading unbeaten Moose Lodge, 10-0, when the game was called in the third inning. The game will be replayed tonight. Moose won the National Little title this season breaking Dixie's two-year hold on the title. Moose had a 15-0 record going into last night's game.

Dean's Pharmacy, also unbeaten, defeated Dixie Parts, 8-1, in the only complete game last night. Quincey Williams struck out 13 and also hit a home run for Dean's, the American League champions for the second year in a row.

Weather permitting, Glo-Valve Service will meet Keyes Pharmacy tonight and Rotary goes against One Bull Ranch.

The tournament was scheduled to end Friday, but it will probably be Saturday before the finals are concluded, according to league officials.

Beaumont stays on top

By The Associated Press
For the second night in a row, the Beaumont Golden Gators took advantage of fielding miscues to beat the Midland Angels and remain atop the Western Division of the Texas League.

Tuesday night, it was a costly bobble by Midland second baseman Mike Madrid on a potential inning-ending double play that allowed Beaumont to score the winning run in the bottom of the 11th inning for a 2-1 victory.

The Beaumont win, combined with El Paso's 4-1 loss to San Antonio, allowed Beaumont to take undisputed possession for first place in the young second-half race with a 5-1 record. El Paso fell to 4-2.

In the Eastern Division, Tulsa took over first place by beating Shreveport 6-4 while Jackson was falling to Arkansas 8-7 in 10 innings.

Rickey Coleman scored the winning run for Beaumont.

Pampa man entered in World Series of pool

Billy Payne of Pampa has qualified for the Lite Beer World Series of Tavern Pool, which starts Thursday in Las Vegas, Nevada.

The four-day tournament will be held in the MGM Grand Hotel.

Payne qualified for the $150,000 event by winning a regional tournament held recently in Guymon, Okla.

He won seven of nine games of eight-ball competition.

Youth paralyzed by sniffing fumes warns of dangers

By SUE FAHLGREN
Corpus Christi Caller-Times
CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The fumes rocket up the nostrils and pummel the brain. The glufu holds his head as he wavers in and out of blackness. Through watery eyes, he sees reality bobbing and weaving as he erratically struggles to maintain composure. The rush lingers 20 minutes.

Adan Orta was in eighth grade when he first held a can of spray paint to his nose. A friend showed him how to spray it into a plastic bag and inhale it for an inexpensive high that came on instantly.

"It gave me a good buzz," Orta said. "The next day I bought my first can."

In Orta's neighborhood in the Wiggins housing projects, everybody did something — drink beer, smoke pot or sniff paint. Now at 22, Orta is semi-paralyzed, unable to stand or even change the TV channel and likely has brain damage because the years of sniffing have caught up with his body.

Orta is not so different from scores of other young people, police and medical experts say, who have found the smell of paint something they cannot live without.

At the invitation of Dr. R. Marcelo Rodriguez, Orta told his story to parents at a meeting of Drug Busters, a community action group which provides information on the dangers of drug abuse.

"I tried it, but I didn't think I'd get hooked," Orta said. "Before I knew it, it was six months later and I tried to stop and I couldn't. I was hooked."

Orta's knowledge of solvents grew rapidly. He had learned that the most potent types of paint were the metallic ones — silver, copper and gold — or the clear, glossy finishing paint.

He could get cans from auto parts stores easier than from department stores but they usually would cost about $5 instead of $2.49 and they would be slipped to him when other customers weren't watching.

At other places, it was easy to shoplift the cans or to bring the manager a stolen bike or power tools to exchange for cans of paint, he said. Orta hid in brushy lots with friends while they partied and sneaked home late at night after he was sure his parents were asleep. He'd open the window so the fumes would not arouse their suspicions.

"I used to go to sleep with a can in my mouth and wake up with one in my mouth," Orta said.

His disposition changed. Too nauseated to eat, he lost weight. His face was gaunt and his eyes were continually wide and watery. His parents and teachers had trouble talking and dealing with him. He was sent to his first reform school at 14. After nine months there, he was sent home.

"The first day out, I went back to sniffing paint. I went back to my old friends and they got me sniffing again," he said.

The pattern continued through two more trips to reform schools and followed him to prison. At one point, a girlfriend who had his child gave him a choice between the young family and the paint.

"I took the paint," Orta said. "The paint was something I couldn't quit."

Orta was up to a full can of paint a day — something he said took him about six hours to sniff. By now he was sophisticated enough to spray the paint into a soft-drink can and hold it under his nose to appear to be drinking while he huffed the paint.

One Sunday in February, 1982, Orta had an accident as he burglarized a closed store for paint. He smashed out a front window of the closed store, but broke his jaw and cheek bone climbing in.

He was arrested, sent to prison and later had to have corrective surgery for his face. But even after four months in prison, the fragrance of the paint allured Orta the first day home. Later a second break-in at an auto parts store would net him another nine months in prison.

Orta said he straightened up a bit then he obtained his graduate equivalency diploma and began working on college-level courses in prison. Prison officials were so impressed by his new-found diligence, they made him a trusty. He was assigned to the shop, which had an assortment of solvents like tire sealant and paint.

"They made a mistake," Orta now admitted. "That was the wrong place to put me because I was in for paint."

He said he would slip away from guards to the shop, where he would lock the door and sniff whatever solvents were available. When he was released from prison last fall, it was second nature to stop and get a can of paint on his way home. But then something happened that made Orta quit the very thing his parents, reform school and prison could not — he became paralyzed.

"In January, I started feeling some pain," Orta said. "I was carrying a small bag for my mother and all of the sudden, my hands were getting real weak. I felt like I was carrying 80 pounds and it was just a little package. I thought it was something that would go away. It wasn't."

Gradually, Orta's central nervous system was so affected by the paint, that he lost control of muscles in his legs and hands. "The last time I walked was at Easter," Orta said. Watching TV with friends, he went to change the channel. "I tried to walk over and I couldn't get up no more," he said.

"That's the way these things happen," said Rodriguez, a preventive medicine physician at the Corpus Christi-Nueces County Department of Public Health. "Once the paint starts affecting the central nervous system, it starts from the bottom up feet, legs, hands and eventually the shoulder girdle."

"Adan is suffering from profound polyneuropathy. That means simply that many nerves are being affected," Rodriguez said. "We hope that the nerves will regenerate themselves. And there is some indication that in four to five months and in some cases several years there is a possibility some (nerves) will regenerate. But some patients will never regain use of muscles as a result of the (spray paint)."

From his wheelchair recently, Orta asserts he has been clean for four months. He is on a special diet and is trying to exercise his weak muscles.

"I feel like I'm a little bit better than I was three to four weeks ago," Orta said. "When I first went to the hospital, I started feeling good about myself. I guess because I wasn't doing the paint any more."

Orta knows it will take time and determination. Already friends have come by offering him paint and a good time.

"I ain't going to lie: Sometimes I get tempted," Orta said. "But I ain't going to sniff any more. This time it comes from inside. I should be able to resist it."

And Orta has a role model: A woman who had sniffed paint with him since they were teenagers suffered paralysis from it last year.

"It took her four months to regain her strength. I feel if I work out hard and don't do no more paint, I will be able to walk in another 10 months or so," Orta said.

If he does, he will have beaten the odds. As soon as Orta's friend was able to walk, she returned to party with the glufos.

Geter pursues civil rights and makes peace with town

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Lenell Geter lives a quiet life now, dividing his time between civil rights activities and making peace with this small, predominantly white town where his legal nightmare began.

More than a year has passed since his conviction for an armed robbery he didn't commit was overturned, and the national attention focused on his battle has waned.

But Geter hasn't forgotten the organization that initiated his legal campaign. This week, the young aerospace engineer plans to attend several events at the 76th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Dallas.

Geter, 27, talks with reverence about the NAACP and the role its attorney, George Hairston played in his case. His participation in civil rights activities continues.

Last week, Geter founded the Geter Justice For All Foundation to offer referral services for inmates needing assistance. He is a regular speaker before alumni associations and church groups and has sold the film rights to his story to a Los Angeles production company.

In 1982, Geter was convicted of robbing a fast-food restaurant in the Dallas suburb of Balch Springs despite insistence from co-workers that he was sleeping when the robbery occurred.

Geter spent 16 months in a Texas prison before he was released and then cleared of the charge after another man was identified as the robber.

Although prosecutors called the conviction a case of mistaken identity, Geter has said it resulted from racism, shoddy police work and overzealous prosecutors.

Geter said there was a time when he did not want to go back to Greenville. But he has returned to the Northeast Texas city, where he lives with his wife, Marcia, and works for E-Systems as an engineer on aerospace projects.

"Everytime I go somewhere, someone sees me and talks about it," Geter said. "I don't want to sound like I'm not honored. It's just a new thing for me."

LIFESTYLES

• Avoiding food poisoning

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — The ribs are done to a turn, the potato salad looks mouthwatering and even the common hot dog looks kingly as it sizzles over the coals. Whether this summertime meal becomes a memorable feast or a bout with serious illness has already been decided by the time it hits the table, says Gerald D. Kuhn, professor of food science at The Pennsylvania State University.

Food poisoning can ruin the most elaborate picnic if even one of several simple food-handling rules is broken, he says.

"A lot of foods contain foodborne pathogens," he says, "but in small numbers. They are part of our environment." And as such, the bacteria are normally ingested and pass through our systems without our notice, he explains.

During the summer, however, it is temperature that can "provide an ideal environment for (bacterial) populations to grow," he says. In food held at higher than refrigerator temperatures, it takes only two to four hours for normal numbers to grow to high enough populations to become toxic, Kuhn says.

Common picnic foods that are susceptible are meats, egg products, meat spreads, salads and, surprisingly, cream pies, Kuhn says. "I discourage anyone from taking a homemade cream pie to any carry-away eating activity," he says. "Bacteria grow best on these pies."

"The big three," says Kuhn, can ruin a summer meal. Staphylococcus, clostridium perfringens and salmonella are the bacteria that, when found in excessive numbers in your food, can cause food poisoning and its accompanying painful symptoms.

Kuhn says 100,000 bacterial germs per gram of food are not harmful, but if they multiply to 1 million or more per gram they can cause problems. The symptoms can include stomach cramps, diarrhea and vomiting, lasting from a few hours to several days.

Although bacteria are more commonly introduced through foods such as raw meat, poultry, eggs and dairy products, even if the food was "sterile" when purchased, how it is handled at home can turn an innocent-looking cheeseburger into a menace.

"You know those signs in rest rooms that tell employees to wash their hands before returning to the kitchen?" Kuhn asks. "They are there for a reason."

He says that 20 to 30 percent of all humans carry salmonella bacteria in their intestinal tracts, and staphylococcus bacteria are found on the skin and in the noses and throats of nearly all people.

"That's why it's critical to wash your hands when you come from a bathroom and are handling food," he says.

Improper holding temperatures and poor personal hygiene are two of the most common factors contributing to food poisoning, he says, so it is easy to understand why food poisoning is more likely with a summertime fresh-air meal.

Kuhn recommends cooling as a particularly easy preventive. "Cool foods ahead of time and pack them in ice so they will never exceed 40 degrees in temperature," advises Kuhn, who suggests packaging for the cooler should be done with plastic. "Do this and almost any food can be perfectly safe on a cookout."

As to the "myth" about mayonnaise, he says it is this condiment that can often save a sandwich or a salad from being a timebomb. "Mayonnaise is acidic. Food poisoning bacteria can grow in a normal mixture of food and mayonnaise, but they grow even better without it," he says.

Graduate at 84 finds it's never too late to learn

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Ben Narra emigrated to the United States from Korea "to study," but more than six decades passed before he completed his education.

Work got in his way over the years, but Narra finally began taking college courses in 1972 after he retired.

And he finally earned a bachelor's degree this spring from Fresno State University at the age of 84. School officials believe Narra, who came to the United States in 1922, is the oldest graduate in the history of the university located 180 miles southeast of San Francisco.

Narra became a college graduate despite arthritis, cataracts that leave his eyes abnormally dry, and a stroke that forces him to walk with a cane.

He first began taking yoga classes in 1972 at a community college "to relax my mind and body." Narra said he had been "a nervous man" when he was younger and underwent psychiatric treatment in 1929.

Narra had to quit practicing yoga because of the arthritis. That's when he began exploring other classes, including painting, and went on to earn an associate of arts degree from Reedley College in 1977.

Two years later, he began taking classes at Fresno State because "learning excites me."

The stroke restricted Narra's ability to speak, and the school's Disabled Students Services provided people to take notes in his lecture classes. He was able to compile a 2.51 grade point average, a respectable C-plus.

"By and large, I think Ben Narra is a happy man who has found lots of beauty and lots of pain and who will go on questioning," said Stan Todd, a counselor with the Disabled Student Services office. "He is a man still searching for meaning."

It has been hard for Narra to ride a bus eight miles to school from the senior citizens complex where he lives and hard to climb stairs and to keep putting drops in his irritated eyes.

"But I believe Ben has a wonderful desire to be as young and active and growing as possible every day of his life," Todd added.

Dear Abby

Juror remains tight-lipped despite husband's appeals

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is my second week of jury duty. I've committed for eight weeks of jury duty, and I am afraid by the time it is over, my marriage will also be over.

My husband, a very opinionated and persuasive man, insists that I tell him the details of the trial I am now on, knowing full well that I have sworn not to talk about it until it's over. I have refused to discuss the case with him, but he is very angry, which has created a lot of friction between us.

Today is our 19th wedding anniversary, and he's using that as a reason why I should tell him. "After all," he said, "we've kept no secrets from each other all these years, and if you really love me you would trust me enough to tell me everything."

I told him I love him enough to not ask him to do something he thought was wrong.

I looked forward to being an honest juror, and nobody is going to spoil it for me—not even my husband.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest, Abby. I'm signing my name, but for obvious reasons, sign this ...

OFF MY CHEST

DEAR OFF: You are right on! In time, your husband's anger will blow over. Meanwhile, in his heart he knows you're right, and he can only love and respect you more for your integrity.

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Tired of 'OK' in Arizona" brought to mind the following:

Few people know the origin of the expression "OK." Our eighth president, Martin Van Buren, was born and raised in Kinderhook, N.Y. In later years he was nicknamed "Old Kinderhook." During his presidency, when a bill was brought before him, he would either veto it or approve it by initiating it "OK" for his nickname. Hence an OK indicated approval.

And that's how OK became a part of the language.

DON FINN, ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR DON: Thanks for an interesting bit of trivia. And for those who wonder if I am any kin to Old Kinderhook, I am not. I took the Abigail from the Old Testament (Book of Samuel) and the Van Buren from our eighth president because I liked the aristocratic ring.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of this invitation from a 3-month-old son who was born out of wedlock:

"John Jay Smith requests the pleasure of your company at an open house to celebrate the marriage of his parents, Richard James Smith and Jane Susan Doe, Saturday, June 15th, from 2:30 until 5:30 p.m. at their home" etc., etc.

SEEN EVERYTHING IN ST. PAUL, MINN.

DEAR SEEN: I think it's unique, courageous and original.

DEAR ABBY: "Grieving in Gulfport, Miss." could have been signed "Grieving in Wichita, Kan." and written by me. Only it was my older sister who died from cigarettes.

I tried to get her to quit, but her only answer was the same as many others: "I'm not hurting anybody but myself."

But the night she died, her family had to listen to her cry out, "Help me, help me." And that's the night she hurt a lot of other people.

Kids' dramatics workshops set in July, August

"ACTION" Creative Dramatics Workshop, co-sponsored by ACT I and the Pampa Fine Arts Association is to be offered twice, July 15-19 and Aug. 12-16.

These free workshops teach acting, puppetry and mime. Performances are scheduled July 19, Aug. 16 and at the Chautauqua celebration on Labor Day.

The workshops are for third and fourth graders with fifth graders who participated last year returning also. All eligible should have received fliers in school. The enrollment slips attached to the fliers should be turned in now to assure space. Enrollment is limited to 50 students per workshop.

Those who do not have a flier may call ACTION director, Betty Hallerberg, at 665-6063 for enrollment information by July 1.

Detailed letters are to be mailed to those who are enrolled.

Enrollment deadlines are July 1 for the July workshop and Aug. 1 for the August workshop. Students must be enrolled to attend.

Taste-tempting Texas melons

By GAYLA MALONEY
TDA marketing representative
What could be more refreshing on a hot summer day than an icy cold slice of Texas cantaloupe, honeydew or watermelon. How about a slushy drink made from one of these delicious fruits?

Texas melons are available to consumers in supermarkets, roadside stands and farmers markets. In fact, the Texas fresh melon crop is the first to appear on the market for domestic use in the United States.

Honeydew and cantaloupe melons are currently being harvested in the Lower Rio Grande Valley this week. The cantaloupe acreage is up this year — 18,690 acres in the valley, according to Ann Varga, TDA Market News reporter. In the later part of the summer cantaloupe from the High Plains will also be available. The Valley currently has 5,587 acres of honeydew melons. The weather has been excellent for melon production this year in Texas.

Watermelons are grown in various areas of the state. Did you know that watermelons are 88 to 92 percent water and contain eight to 12 percent natural sugar. Watermelon is one of the cheapest fruits per pound that you can buy.

Cultivation of watermelons dates back to pre-historic times and cantaloupe seeds were brought to the new world by Christopher Columbus. Criteria for selecting melons depends on the variety you are selecting.

Paula Foucheck of the Texas Fresh Promotional Board suggests using these guidelines when purchasing a ripe Texas melon.

When selecting cantaloupe look for a good deep netting on the outside that tends to be golden in color. The melons will give off a sweet musky aroma and will yield to gentle pressure on the bloom end of the fruit.

Selection of honeydews should be based upon the color of the melon itself. Honeydews should not be a solid green but a creamy or white color. Honeydews should have a smooth waxy surface and slight softening of the blossom end also usually indicates ripeness.

Watermelons should be firm, symmetrical in shape with a waxy outer shell. Look for a yellowish underside where the fruit has contacted the ground. Signs of ripe melons are crisp, red centers with black, large seeds.

Melons are a good source of vitamins like A and C and they are low in calories. Honeydews and cantaloupes provide their own serving bowls for filling with ice cream and berries.

Remember to serve Texas melons at anytime of the day — breakfast, lunch and dinner. Serve as appetizers, salad or desserts. Watermelon, cantaloupe and honeydew melons are probably best enjoyed in their natural forms, but for a change of pace, try these recipes from the Texas Department of Agriculture.

- WATERMELON FRAPPE
4 c. diced watermelon without seeds
2 T. lemon juice
1 T. grated lemon rind
1 bottle (12 oz.) ginger ale

Lemon slices
Put first three ingredients in blender and whirl until frothy. Put in pitcher with ginger ale. Pour into tall glasses with ice cubes and decorate each with a lemon slice. Makes about five cups.

- HONEYDEW FRUIT BOATS
1 (8 oz.) pkg. cream cheese, softened
1 (7 oz.) jar marshmallow cream
1 T. grated orange rind
1 T. orange juice
Dash ground ginger
1 c. seedless grapes
1 c. halved fresh strawberries
1 1/2 c. watermelon balls
2 lg. honeydew melons

Beat cream cheese until smooth; gradually add marshmallow cream, beating at medium speed until well blended. Add grated orange rind, orange juice and ginger. Beat mixture until fluffy. In a separate bowl, combine grapes, strawberries and watermelon balls.

Cut honeydew melons into quarters and scoop out seeds. Fill each with fruit and top with a large dollop of cream cheese mixture.

- CANTALOUPE SOUP
4 c. finely chopped cantaloupe (divided)
1 1/2 c. orange juice
1/4 c. lime juice
1 T. honey
1 1/2 c. ginger ale or sweet white wine

Combine two cups of the melon, orange juice, lime juice and honey in a blender. Blend until smooth. Stir in remaining two cups melon and ginger ale or white wine. Chill thoroughly before serving. Serves 4.

For more information and recipes using Texas melons, write the Texas Department of Agriculture, 5501 West 1-40, Suite C, Amarillo, 79106.

PET OF THE WEEK—Doesn't she look sweet? This Samoyed - shepherd cross is just as good-tempered as she appears, reports Pampa Animal Shelter officers. Her former owners brought her to the shelter when they had to move. The dog is well-behaved, housebroken, responds to commands to "Sit" and "Shake" and is good with children. Anyone who would like to give this dog another good home may adopt her at the Pampa Animal Shelter in Hobart Street Park. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, and 11 a.m. to noon and 4 p.m. to 5 p.m. on weekends. Many other animals are also available for adoption at the shelter. BRUNCH FARE

Skillet Hominy & Rolls
Strawberry Bowl & Coffee
SKILLET HOMINY
4 slices bacon
1 medium onion, chopped (medium fine)
1 medium green pepper, chopped (medium fine)

- One 14 1/2-ounce can white or golden hominy, drained
4 large eggs
Pepper to taste
1/2 to 1 cup shredded (medium fine) cheddar cheese
In a 10-inch skillet over low heat fry bacon until crisp.
Drain on paper towels and crumble. Pour off all drippings except 1 tablespoonful. Add onion, green pepper and hominy; cook gently, stirring often, until onion is yellowed. Beat eggs slightly; add pepper. Pour over hominy mixture; sprinkle with bacon. Cover and cook gently until eggs are almost set. Sprinkle with cheese; cover and let stand off heat until eggs are set and cheese melts. Makes 4 servings.

Simple rice salad beats the diet crunch

A crunchy rice salad with apples and walnuts served on green lettuce with a cup of bouillon or chilled madrilene (tomato consommé) and a fresh fruit cup make a meal that satisfies.

- 2 small tart red apples, cored and chopped
2 teaspoons lemon juice
3 cups cooked rice, cooled
1 cup sliced celery

- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
1/4 cup sweet pickle relish
3/4 cup bottled Thousand Island dressing
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper.

Sprinkle apples with lemon juice blended with 2 tablespoons water. Mix with rice, celery, walnuts and relish. Blend remaining ingredients; toss with rice mixture.

Serve on salad greens, if desired. This kitchen-tested recipe makes 6 servings at 340 calories per serving, using sweet pickle relish and regular salad dressing; 230 calories per serving, using low-calorie relish and salad dressing.

Commune of the 1960's still works

By MICHAEL BASS
Associated Press Writer

LOUISA, Va. (AP) — Bradley is a 33-year-old unemployed accountant who dreams of being a singer. He left his Manhattan home and moved to the Twin Oaks commune because "you can pursue your dreams here."

"On one level, I'm not really happy here yet," said Bradley, eating a plateful of alfalfa sprouts in the commune's courtyard. "But when I look at where I came from, this looks a lot brighter and with a lot more possibilities."

Spread over 400 acres of rolling hills and expansive forests in rural Louisa County, Twin Oaks is an experiment in living, a stab at creating the Utopia that B.F. Skinner envisioned in his book, "Walden Two."

"A lot of people think there could be something better about American society as a whole," said Taylor, the commune's recruitment manager and an eight-year Twin Oaks veteran. "Twin Oaks is an attempt to create something better."

Members are known only by first names. If necessary, new members will change their names upon arriving, to avoid duplication with others.

Communes are identified with the 1960s, but Twin Oaks has been able to survive by modernizing. The commune, founded in 1967, uses a computer to streamline its hammock-making and book indexing businesses, which bring in almost $450,000 a year.

Members have even become more "style conscious," said Taylor. Rummaging through a bin in Twin Oaks' community clothes closet, she said members try to avoid looking like holdovers from the 1960s.

Like Skinner's ideal society, Twin Oaks revolves around the concept of community. Members do the laundry, cooking and cleaning. They raise crops and cows and run the businesses.

The commune is economically self-sufficient, producing about 60 percent of its food and paying for its other expenses with profits from its businesses. The wood cabins which serve as dining hall, lounges and dormitories are heated by solar energy and with wood cut at Twin Oaks.

Each adult receives a monthly allowance for personal expenses. According to the commune's written laws, members cannot increase their wealth while at Twin Oaks.

Records, books and clothes are mostly community property, available to everyone. No one owns a car, but the commune has a fleet of 10 vehicles, including a flatbed truck and a backhoe.

"So many things I could never afford to buy myself, here I was given an opportunity to own, in a sense," said Bradley, who was visiting the commune on a three-week trial before deciding whether to apply for membership.

To share in the communal wealth, Twin Oaks residents work about 48 hours a week doing chores or helping the commune's industries. Those who fail to meet the standard are disciplined and can be expelled, but Taylor said discipline is needed "remarkably little."

"The whole society is sort of based on cooperation and trust," she said. "If people aren't interested in cooperation and trust, they don't end up here to begin with. And if people don't like being cooperative and trusting, they don't stay very long."

Authority over the commune's 15 children is shared by the parents and "metas," or trained child care workers. The parents and children live separately. So do the some 20 married people from their spouses.

Since the commune was founded nearly 18 years ago, the average age of its members has risen 10 years, from 21 to 31. And as times and circumstances change, so do philosophies.

"We're probably less reckless. As people get older, they get more committed to security — in this case, the security of the community. They get more practical," said Taylor.

"Twin Oaks was defining itself as an experiment at building Walden Two (in 1967)," said Gerri, a 34-year-old mother of two who has lived at the commune for 15 years. "There have been some basic things we've drawn from Walden Two, but we don't think of ourselves as Walden Two."

"Twin Oaks' flexibility and adaptability have been very fundamental in the fact that we've continued to exist," she said.

The ages at Twin Oaks range from newborn to more than 60 years old. The nationalities include Canadian, German and Israeli. The reasons for joining vary, but have a common theme — people come to Twin Oaks to discover more about themselves.

Some people, once understanding themselves better, move on.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Use your imagination to the fullest today. If there's an financial arrangement you want to close, it can be done successfully if you take an innovative approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today your sixth sense will tell you just who to approach if you want specific things done. Do as your intuition directs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You can add to your material stockpile today by blending inspiration with perspiration. One alone won't cut it, but combined they're profitable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Pleasant happenings are in store for you today just by doing what comes naturally. Bathe those you encounter in your warmth, wit and charm.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Strive to help those who require your assistance today. Your good deeds may not be immediately rewarded, but they will be eventually.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today, if you mix with others, you will have chances to gather pearls of wisdom. What you learn won't come from one person, but through the combination of many.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Concentrate on truly important goals. This is a day for superior achievement and you'd be smart not to waste it on trivia.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Being of a visionary bent, you'll see a little clearer and a trifle further than associates today. In the final analysis, rely on your line of sight, not theirs.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The reins may be taken from your hands today, but don't let this discourage you. All will work out as well as if things were under your direction.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) For one who usually prides himself for individualism, you're a great team player today. You'll beef up associates and they'll strengthen you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) All career pieces will be favorably placed today. Now if you just follow your instincts, the results will be rewarding.

Historic house has defied hurricanes

By JERRY LYNAS
Beaumont Enterprise
CAPLEN, Texas (AP) — They don't make beach houses like they used to.

Not like "The Breakers," owned by J.B. and Marie Gordon of Beaumont, which for 101 years has stood near the base of the Bolivar Peninsula, some 25 miles northeast of Galveston.

"The Breakers," survived the 1900 hurricane that killed 6,000 in Galveston. It survived the 1915 hurricane that swept the coast. It lived through Hurricane Carla, which wiped out most other Bolivar Peninsula homes.

Two years ago, Alicia hardly bothered it.

A history of the house written in 1941 by W.D. Gordon, J.B.'s uncle, says Terrence Meche, a ship carpenter, built the house of heartpine and cypress.

"He loaded it on a schooner in 1884, and there being no other method of transportation to the land, unloaded the material in the Gulf, a short distance from the shore, and the tide brought the lumber into the shore and scattered it up and down the beach for approximately a mile," the account says. "It was then gathered up and brought to the place where the house was to be built."

W.D. Gordon bought the house and 150 acres of land from Meche for $2,000 in 1905.

The 1915 hurricane tried its best to hurt the house. The storm tore up railroad tracks and wrapped them around the building. It moved the house 20 feet from its foundation. But it survived.

No weather service existed then to warn of hurricanes, and three men and a dog spent the night in the house. One was Marris McLean — the brother of Ruth Gordon, W.D. Gordon's wife.

Water entered the house and rose several feet. McLean and his companions, Monroe Carroll and August Borsum, moved to the second floor as the storm raged. McLean returned to the flooded lower level and brought back an ax to use in case they had to chop out of the house.

After the storm passed, they had to wait two days before wading and swimming to High Island, about 12 miles north, across East Bay.

Operators of the railroad rebuilt the tracks 300 yards farther away from the Gulf. When the storm hit, the tracks had lain between the house and the Gulf.

Marie Gordon still finds rusted railroad spikes nearby and keeps a collection of them.

The elder Gordons decided they would stay in the house when Hurricane Audrey aimed squarely at the upper Texas Gulf Coast in June 1957. They refused to budge despite four warnings from the U.S. Coast Guard.

Gordon remembers finally carrying his uncle, crippled by arthritis, out of the house and bringing him and his wife back to Beaumont about midnight, a few hours before the storm hit the coast.

"The Coast Guard tried to make them leave, but uncle said the house had withstood all those hurricanes and that this one was not going to hurt a thing," Gordon said. "We asked them to come in, and they wouldn't do it."

The house has 14 rooms, 87 windows and no air conditioning.

"If we air-conditioned the house, Gulf States could give everybody a raise," Gordon said. "If you get hot, you go where the air conditioning is — back to Beaumont."

SHARLENE WELLS JENNIFER O'NEILL

Names in News

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — There she was, Miss America 1985, showing off that toothpaste smile from billboards across the land to see if motorists knew who she was.

In Albuquerque, N.M., and Tucson, Ariz., where the first of 300 nationwide billboards went up last winter, Miss America's name recognition went up nearly 700 percent, Jack Donahue, spokesman for the Institute of Outdoor Advertising, said Tuesday.

Miss America for 1985 is Sharlene Wells.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Jennifer O'Neill has been released from a Greenwich, Conn., hospital after undergoing treatment for uterine bleeding, her publicist says.

Miss O'Neill, 36, who starred in the canceled CBS series "Coverup" last season, checked into Greenwich Hospital on Monday for a dilation and curettage, a cleaning of the uterus walls, and was released Tuesday, said Terry Etlinger.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali and his third wife, Veronica, have filed for an amicable divorce, her attorneys say.

Frederick J. Glassman said Tuesday that the couple, married for eight years, filed for divorce in Los Angeles Superior Court and that all major issues had been worked out.

Three-time heavyweight champion Ali, 43, and Veronica, 29, have two children, Hana Yasmeen, 8, and Laila, 7.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Actor Mark Lindsay has been fired from a role as John Lennon in a TV movie of the former Beatle's life after officials learned his real name was Mark Chapman — the same as the man who killed Lennon in 1980.

Lindsay's real name surfaced after it was announced Monday that the actor, unknown in the United States, had been given the role.

Kim Miyori, who played Dr. Wendy Armstrong on NBC-TV's "S.T. Elsewhere," will continue in her role as Lennon's wife, Yoko Ono.

HONOLULU (AP) — "Magnum, P.I." star Tom Selleck, noting what a good year he's had, says he's still "on Cloud Nine" from all his honors and that he's considering doing a western with Clint Eastwood.

"I think there's a big audience for Westerns, and they're fun to make," said Selleck, who captured an Emmy and a Golden Globe award for best dramatic actor in television and Peoples' Choice awards for favorite male TV performer and favorite all-around male entertainer.

Of his film prospects, Selleck told the Honolulu Star-Bulletin, "I am a viable commodity in the movie industry."

LONDON (AP) — Actor Charlton Heston has topped a tough vote in tennis ace John McEnroe, accusing the defending Wimbledon champ of being "an insufferable bore" and a disgrace to the United States.

Heston said Tuesday he turned down an invitation to sit in the royal box at Wimbledon this week and watch McEnroe play because "I simply do not want to sit in that box at that wonderful place and risk the embarrassment, as an American, of seeing an American disgrace our country."

"John McEnroe is a great player. He is also an insufferable bore who demeans the game that made him a millionaire. For many of us he has ruined tennis as a spectator sport," said Heston, who is in London to star in the play "The Caine Mutiny Court Martial."

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway musicals aren't what they used to be, says composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein, whose recent reprise recording of his "West Side Story" is a hit 30 years after it was written.

"With a few exceptions, notably the shows of Stephen Sondheim, Broadway has retrogressed in a lamentable way," he says in a cover story appearing this Sunday in Family Weekly.

But Bernstein, 66, says the Grammy awards recently gave him good feelings about the world of rock — "not the music, which just isn't good enough and doesn't compare with what we had in the '60s, but the rock people."

"In that recording they made for Ethiopian famine relief, you get a sense of the stars giving, trying, seeking... They gave me a whole new feeling about possibilities in the world. For them, and for me."
