FERC denies motions for stay, rehearing

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in Washington, D.C., has denied requests for a stay and a rehearing of the continuing Dorchester - Stowers case in a dispute over gas rights involving 37 independent oil operators in the Panhandle Field.

FERC information specialist Tamara Young -Allen said the FERC commissioners issued an order late Wednesday afternoon denying a motion by independents for a stay of a federal judge's decision. The commissioners also denied a motion by the Texas Railroad Commission for a rehearing of the

Allen said the commissioners indicated in their order that they didn't feel the arguments presented by representatives of the independents and the RRC warranted a stay or a rehearing of the case

The FERC commission said Phase II proceedings would continue, Allen said.

But only moments after the FERC commissioners issued their latest order, attorneys for the independents filed a motion to appeal the FERC order in the 5th Federal District Court of Appeals.

The stay and rehearing motions were presented over a FERC order ruling the independents were illegally perforating into gas formations to which Dorchester Gas Producing Co. had production

The order also states the independents had been wrongfully selling the gas in violation of federal interstate pricing regulations.

FERC had accepted a recommended proposal submitted by FERC Federal Administrative Judge Brenda Murray in January. The judge had ruled against 35 of the independents and asked for further investigation of two others.

Last month Judge Murray ruled against those two and recommended they also be included in the Phase II penalty proceedings now underway

The independents have claimed they were producing casinghead gas, a natural by-product of oil production, from their wells. The judge upheld their rights to casinghead gas, but she ruled the evidence indicated most of their gas production was instead natural gas to which Dorchester has the rights on the disputed leases in Gray and Carson

The FERC order requires the independents to cease their gas - production operations at the disputed wells, ruling they had perforated above the gas - oil contact and diverted natural gas belonging to Dorchester.

Judge Murray now is presiding over the Phase II proceedings, in which penalties and fines against the independents will be determined, expected to run way into the millions of dollars

First snow in forecast

From staff and wire reports

A winter storm watch has been issued for extreme northern sections of the Texas Panhandle for late tonight and Friday

Forecasters say there may be as much as two to four inches of snow in northern sections of the Panhandle by late Friday and snow may fall as far south as the Midland-Odessa area during the night and early Friday. But they say there will be no accumulation in that area of the South Plains.

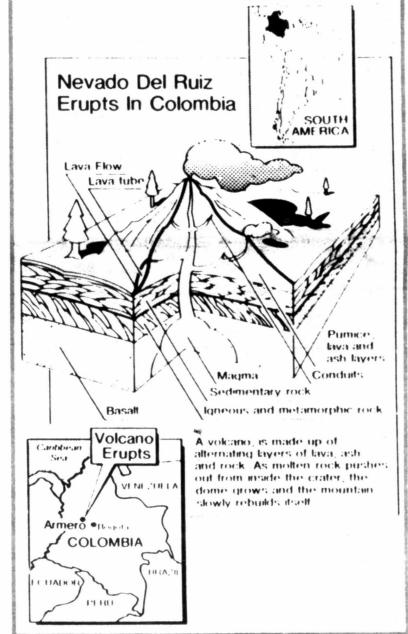

The local forecast calls for the possibility of from one to two inches of snow Friday, with temperatured dipping into the low 30s tonight.

Forecasters say cold moist air associated with a low aloft that was over northern Arizona early today is expected to move eastward through Friday crossing the watch

A low pressure system in southeast New Mexico will continue to draw colder air in from the north and moist and relatively warm air in from the southeast

Scatttered showers and thunderstorms in the the Panhandle southward early today were expected to gradually change to mixed rain and snow and freezing rain and eventually snow late tonight and Friday

It was possible a winter storm warning may have to be issued for the area later today, forecasters

Volcano eruption may claim 20,000

Colombian city buried by mud

By TOM WELLS

Associated Press Writer

BOGOTA, Colombia - A volcano in western Colombia erupted twice triggering floods and mud flows that hit a town of 50,000 before dawn today, Colombian radio stations reported. Thousands were feared killed.

about 30 miles from the volcano and 105 miles northwest of Bogota, was inundated by mud that was swept down the Langunilla River after the eruption of the 15,500-foot high volcano, Nevado del Ruiz.

Civil defense workers had found 52 bodies by this morning, the Bogota radio chain IRCN said. Thirty-eight bodies were recovered in the adjacent town of Mariquita and 14 others in the nearby town of Chinchina

Officials said most of the inhabitants of Armero apparently were asleep when the mud avalanche covered the town.

Artemo Franco, director of the Red Cross in the area, said thousands may have been killed. "It is an immense tragedy," he

The Bogota radio station Caracol quoted a pilot as saying that mud covered almost all the town of Armero.

Radio stations quoted officials as saying victims were swept away by the river Lagunilla which carried mud and snow from the avalanche.

There are other small towns along the river closer to the volcano, but they apparently were spared because they sat on hills. The town of Chinchina, with about 70,000 people, is only six miles from the base of the volcano Raul Ramirez, a reporter for the radio chain Todelar, was one of the first people at Armero. He said 90 percent of Armero was destroyed.

"The mass of mud is up to five yards high in some areas," he said. "Some people were able to escape and climb over walls that weren't covered by the avalanche and were rescued with the help of ropes and horses

The volcano had been dormant for more than a century when it began throwing out smoke, ashes and gas in October 1984

Sgt. Ruben Garcia, the fire chief of Chinchina which sits on a hill 750 feet above the river, said 14 people were killed in an area of about 200 houses along the river.

"We've rescued many injured," Garcia said. He added many of the homeless were put in shelters set up at churches and schools

Dr. Darrell Herd, deputy chief of the U.S. Geological Survey's Office of Earthquakes, Volcanoes and Engineering in Reston, Va., said he has been working with Colombians to prepare volcano hazard plan for Nevado del Ruiz. His doctoral dissertation was on that mountain.

When told of the eruption, Herd said: "Oh my God. That's very very sad because what we were trying to do is get them ready and it looks like they might not have

Herd said he was at the mountain most recently in the last week of September to help Colombians organize their response to possible catastrophic eruption of volcano.

He said the latest eruption before today, was at 1:30 p.m. local time on Sept. 11. Herd said it continued strongly into the next day and left a small coating of ash on nearby cities of Manizales and Chinchina

Facility below state standards

Roberts to seek bids on jail

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

MIAMI - Roberts County Commissioners agreed Monday to seek bids on renovation of the county jail so that it can comply with state jail standards and federal regulations for accessibility to handicapped people.

State jail standards require that the jail legally a 72-hour prisoner holding facility have a separate kitchen and booking area. In the past, the "kitchen" was a microwave oven located in the sheriff's office. Last month, state

Pampa man wounded

A 28 - year - old Pampa man was listed in serious but stable condition at Coronado Community Hospital after undergoing emergency surgery for a gunshot wound suffered at his home this morning.

James Williams, 28, 625 E. Browning, was shot once near the right lower rib, about two inches right of center, according to police reports. The incident occurred at about 3 a.m. Williams was taken to the hospital where he underwent surgery, officials said. Police Chief J.J. Ryzman said officers on the scene confiscated a .22 - caliber Browning handgun at the address Ryzman said the case was still under investigation at press time. Police had not yet arrested any suspects in the shooting.

jail inspector Joe Slater said the jail should have a double-bowled sink, a floor drain and a pantry for the kitchen and that janitorial supplies need to be kept separate from other

The county also must assure that the jail's restroom is accessible to handicapped people. There are now two small restrooms at the back

On Monday, Amarillo architect Pat Tunnell showed commissioners plans on how the jail could comply with such regulations. For the kitchen, a sink, shelves and cabinets would be installed in what is now a storage room at the back of the jail, where the restrooms in question are located. A janitor's closet and water heater closet would also be built in the

The two restrooms would be combined into one by knocking out a wall separating them. One of the toilets would be removed while the other would get a special high seat. Railings would be built onto the wall near the toilets. An exhaust vent would also be installed.

Tunnell believes the renovations could cost about $9,500.

Because state law requires that the county seek bids on any project costing more than $5,000, commissioners wondered if the work could be done in phases, so that the time consuming bid process could be bypassed. Tunnel said his fees are more if he has to draw up specifications for bids. But, in the end, commissioners decided to play it safe and seek

Tunnell will present his specification to the commissioners' court in December: commissioners are expected to open the bids in

In other building matters, county judge Newton Cox said contractors are "dragging their feet" on finishing the annex to the Roberts County Museum

Tunnell agreed that the museum annex is behind schedule; when construction began in June, the contractors figured a 70-day construction time. Tunnel said that the contractors lack about two weeks before getting the 50 by 95 foot annex completed.

'We still need to do some exterior concrete work, paint the inside and clean up," Tunnell said, adding the that the costs have run up to $127,000. "I told the contractors to sit on their pay request until the work is completed.'

Commissioners also accepted the 1985 audit, prepared by Pampa CPA Jerry Davis. 'The records for this size county are in very good shape," Davis told the commissioners In other business, commissioners agreed to wait until next month before they decide on hiring Mary Slavin as a full time employee in the tax assessor-collector's office. They want to meet with county TAC Susan Billingsley before they make their decision.

Commissioners accepted a bid of $13,259 from Culberson Stowers Chevrolet of Pampa for a one-ton pick-up truck for the volunteer fire department.

Band boosters may seek delay in Austin hearing

Pride of Pampa band boosters will probably ask for a continuance on a temporary injunction hearing scheduled this afternoon in Austin in their class action suit against the University Interscholastic

Danny Courtney, president of the booster club, said this morning that the club will probably request that the Austin hearing be delayed. He said the club is waiting until after an emergency meeting of the Pampa Independent School Board, schedule for 5 p.m. tonight, to decide how to proceed with the case.

The school board posted an agenda Wednesday afternoon for an emergency board meeting to discuss personnel matters. A possible executive session is planned. Speculation is running high that the emergency meeting in some way involves the band issue.

Band boosters learned last Thursday that a UIL committee had voted to strip the band of its Division I ranking earned at the district marching contest in Vernon and deny the band a trip to the state competition in Austin. The committee reached its decision after Pampa school officials informed it that an ineligible student under the state's no pass - no play law had inadvertently been marched in the Vernon contest. The UIL penalty was considered the minimum penalty that could have been assessed.

But band boosters gained temporary restraining orders Friday in Austin and Pampa, keeping UIL and school officials from preventing the band from marching in Austin. The band received a Division II rating in Austin, finishing behind the Snyder band chosen as an alternate from the Vernon contest, and did not finish among the top five band in state 4 - A competition.

The booster club is pursuing the case now, presumably, to keep the Division I rating earned in Vernon intact. A Division I ranking earned at regional competition in Borger was unaffected by the UIL

A hearing on a temporary injunction against Pampa school officials is scheduled for Monday at 1:30 p.m. before 223rd District Judge Don Cain. The boosters are challenging whether the state and school district had the right to prevent the band from marching in Austin and have questioned whether the student involved was actually ineligible.

FERC order_

The RRC had initially stayed out of the federal dispute, involved with its own hearings over "white oil" issues in the Panhandle Field. But earlier this year, after Judge Murray issued her recommendations, the state agency entered the federal case, eventually filing the motion for a rehearing.

In Austin this morning, RRC information specialist E Ray Grasshoff said the state commission was awaiting a copy of the order and had no comment at this time.

had no comment at this time.

State Rep. Foster Whaley of Pampa said he would like to congratulate the RRC for "finally getting involved," though he feels the agency should have intervened earlier in the federal case.

Whaley said he has had some disputes with RRC Commissioner Buddy Temple but he feels Temple has been 'halfway right' in some of his recent comments that the case has become a states' rights issue

He said he supported Temple's comments that the state should work "to get somebody on FERC that supports our views."

Whaley said he would like to see the state "spend some money" on the states' rights issue and make more contacts with federal officials "to get our rights back."

ights back."
He added he hoped the RRC "would put it in the courts and go over the heads" of FERC. Whaley also suggested "we need a hotline" to higher federal officials, "all the way to the top," to get viewpoints presented to keep FERC out of what should be the state's matters.

Whaley said FERC "is run by the Yankees." He noted "the Yankees" have always been able to buy gas "as cheap as we do down here." In the past, they also had been opposed to federal intervention in gas and oil matters, "but now they are getting FERC on their side" to insure continued cheap gas supplies, Whaley said.

Whaley is one of several state and federal elected officials who have recently formed a committee to work against FERC intervention in state oil and gas matters.

Though the RRC commissioners have taken steps to become involved in the federal case, many independents and royalty owners feel the support has come too late.

At a forum in Pampa on Nov. 5 involving independents, royalty owners, investors and others, a petition was started to seek the impeachment of the three RRC commissioners.

It was also at that meeting that the committee to work against FERC intervention in state matters was announced. Joining Whaley on the committee are State Rep. Buck Buchanan, State Sen. Bill Sarpalius and U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter.

County control of McClellan on agenda for Friday meeting

The feasibility of turning Lake McClellan over to Gray County will be discussed by Gray County Commissioners, a U.S. Forestry Service official and a representative from U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter's office at 9:30 a.m. Friday, a spokesman in the Amarillo Republican's office said.

Ernie Houdashell, Boulter's district representative, said this morning that he plans to meet with the commissioners and Allen Hinds from Cibola National Forest near Albuquerque, N.M., during the commission's regular meeting Eriday. Houdashell said Commissioner Gerald Wright told him he wants to look into the Jeasibility of turning the lake, Jocated in southwestern Gray County, over from Forestry Service control to the county.

Houdashell said he does not think any decision will be reached Friday. He said the meeting will more likely serve the purpose of "getting Hinds' feelings on" the idea.

The commissioners have expressed concern about the declining condition of the recreation area, mainly attributed to silt. In an Aug. 1 meeting with Houdashell, Wright bemoaned the lack of attention given the lake by the Forcestry Service.

At that meeting, Houdashell told the commissioners Hinds told him the Forestry Service has no plans for the site but is "open to suggestions"

Also at the Aug. 1 meeting, the commissioners, Houdashell and John Roberts, a concessionaire at the lake, discussed briefly the possibility of placing the lake under more local control. Commissioner Ronnie Rice said at the time that Forestry Service officials had previously insinuated the county was welcome to take over the site.

Neither Wright nor Hinds was available for comment.

The commissioners will also meet with County Clerk Wanda Carter concerning the hiring of a part - time deputy in her office. Carter said one of her five deputies resigned in September and she would like to try hiring a part - time deputy, rather than hiring another full - time employee.

'Silver dollar' breakfast scheduled

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce will be have its November "Silver Dollar" breakfast at 6:45 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 20, in the Starlight Room of the Coronado Inn.

Under the sponsorship of Citizens Bank and Trust Co., a real silver dollar will be given to everyone who attends, announced Chamber President Bill Duncan.

Don Lane and Doug Carmichael again will emcee the program.

"Those who have attended these breakfasts before will tell you that the program will be exciting, entertaining and fast moving," Duncan said. "They also will tell you that no one can ever tell what will happen next."

New members are encouraged to attend, he said, since they will be introduced to other members.

In addition to the "fun and enjoyment" of the informal meeting, the Chamber will be giving away $100 in cash at the meeting, Duncan noted. A door prize of $50 will be given to someone who is present, whether a Chamber member or not. Also, in a membership drawing $50 will be given to a member whose name is drawn from "the pot at the end of the rainbow" if the member is

The cost of the buffet breakfast is $5 a person. Reservations should be made at the Chamber office by 5 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 19.

Chamber leading efforts to raise decorations funds

The Pampa Chamber of Commerce is taking the lead in soliciting funds for street decorations and other related activities for the upcoming Christmas season.

Chamber President Bill Duncan noted the Chamber has taken care of providing the community decorations for a number of years. But money is needed to replace some materials and purchase others, he said.

"Money is needed annually for the decoration fund as well as to pay expenses in connection with the holiday season activities." he

"The Christmas activities and decorations are provided for the enjoyment of our visiting out of town shoppers who help our economy," Duncan said. "However, the most important of all is the fact that our citizens are showing that they have pride in Pampa."

In addition, the living community Christmas tree planted last year died from creosote poisoning and has to be replaced.

In the past, the Chamber has sought donations from local Chamber members. But this year the Chamber also is asking local residents to make donations, Duncan said, to assist with the burgeoning expenses.

After the Nativity scene is used this year, for example, the Chamber will need to spend more than $500 to repair it before it can be used again, he noted.

In 1979, the last time the Chamber purchased street decorations, approximately $12,000 was invested, he noted. Each street decoration costs from $200 to $400, depending on size, design, quality and other factors, he explained.

"Since that time, Pampa has grown, and we have had to spread the decorations further apart," Duncan said. "This year, we are having to 'retire' the 15 gold and white candles that were purchased in the early 1960s. Within two years, because the wiring is becoming dangerous, we must begin replacing the lighted decorations that were purchased in the late 1960s."

Duncan estimated the expenditures for the Nativity scene street decorations, tree and other materials "will run into thousands of dollars."

The Chamber board of directors has adopted a "pay as you go" policy, he stated, "so improvements and additions can be made only as we receive the money."

Duncan said the Chamber is asking members, merchants and residents to donate to the holiday season fund to replace and improve the related materials.

"Your enthusiastic support in helping assure a beautiful city during our holiday season will be appreciated," he said.

Checks should be made payable to Pampa Chamber of Commerce Christmas Activity Fund. The mailing address is P.O. Box 1942, Pampa, TX 79065. Donations also may be dropped off at the Chamber office in the Hughes Bldg.

Goddess of Liberty statue armless, could be headless

AUSTIN (AP) — The Goddess of Liberty, who has held the lone star over the Texas Capitol since 1888, is now armless, and there's a chance she will be headless by the time she's removed from the dome.

The weather-beaten, 16-foot statue will be brought down by helicopter Nov. 24, according to Capitol Architect Roy Graham. A replacement statue, a duplicate of the original, is in the works.

Graham said he already planned that her left arm, which holds the lone star, had to be removed before the Goddess could be lifted. But the right arm, which holds a sword, was removed Wednesday as an "extra precaution," he said.

Graham announced last month that the statue has become a potential hazard because of structural damage that could cause parts of it to fall from the 311-foot-tall Capitol dome.

After it's lifted from the dome, the statue will be re-assembled and displayed on the Capitol grounds for several days, he said.

Also Wednesday, Graham announced a plan to replace the diseased and dying elms along the Capitol's main south walk.

About three dozen sycamores will be planted next year. The existing elms, expected to live no more than five more years, will be left standing, Graham said.

"This strategy of placing new trees between the old ones provides a graceful transition into the future," he said. "We do not wish to remove the existing trees until they are actually dead.

All we need — another law

I once read a cartoon strip - the small society - that I cut out and kept. A man, standing in front of the Capitol building, is saying to his wife, "Hoo, boy! Everybody says there are too many laws on the books - yet each one of us has at least one law we'd like to see passed

Amusing, from my cynical, semi - intellectual, skeptical viewpoint. But not really too funny. Unfortunately, it's only all too

Even more unfortunately, way too many laws get passed not because they have majority support - but because the supporters are vocal, powerful or highly influential, or because legislative swaps and deals are made, or because other factors creep in (bribery, influence peddling, intensive lobbying by special interests, plain and simple ignorance, and so on).

And at times, our legislators sit in their lofty and cold chambers and pass laws knowing full well the majority of the public doesn't support them. They justify such laws by the worn - out excuse that it's really in the public's interest.

After all, they have studied the proposed law and listened to experts who know more than the average man on the street and exercised their "political wisdom" (two of the more misjoined words ever used, similar to the accuracy of "military intelligence"

Then they pass such measures as the mandatory seat - belt law. I don't deny it's probably a good idea for us to use seat belts in a vehicle, but I certainly don't think I need a law punishing me for exercising some free agency - and being ignorant, if I so choose.

But this column isn't about the seat - belt law. Instead, it's about the so-called no pass - no play rule passed in

House Bill 72 last year

Now don't think I'm against education. If I had my way, I'd be a fulltime college student for the rest of my life. I enjoy gaining knowledge - in some fields - and I really have trouble understanding why some people fear or reject educational opportunities.

But I also happen to respect freedom and free agency and the exercise of free choice.

I admit the intent of the rule is good: keep students more concerned with classroom education toward graduation.

But the educational structure already has a built - in punishment the failing grade itself is a "punishment," an acknowledgment that the student has not met the desired standards and faces the loss of credit toward getting that diploma that he or she may want. And there's the punishment of lost time if the student has to retake a course to get credit.

Why do some feel there must be more punishment? If more is needed, let it come from parents and friends and teachers, not from some "sacred" state law

The inequity, even the injustice of the no pass - no play law is seen when other students are punished because of the failure of one, even if that punishment is unintentional in its effects beyond the one

Of course, anyone in the city who has read the newspaper or listened to the local radio stations in the past week knows what specific situation I'm referring to: the punishment — and that's what it is, call it by any other name you wish - inflicted upon the Harvester Band because of the failing grade of one student

A situation that resulted as much from the failure of the system created to ward off such situations as from the failing grade itself that was eventually assigned the student.

There is no justice in such a situation, whether it's a band, a choir, a drama production or even a football team.

As far as I'm concerned — having been a student myself many times - if a student wants to participate in three or four extracurricular activities and fail one or more classes, that's his or

Let the parents and teachers worry about the failing grades and the portending loss of a diploma. More than likely, such a student is only in school because another law requires them to have to attend until a certain birthday is reached. If he wants to have some fun and gain some social skills in the process - through extracurricular activities, let him

More emphasis instead should be placed on other incentives for education than imposing another punishing law: good teachers, exciting texts, relevancy to life or to the student's interests, stimulating discussions and living examples are generally a better aid to stirring a desire to learn.

As I've stated in a previous column, not every student wants to be or can be — a member of the high tech society H. Ross Perot has envisioned and seeks to impose on the state.

But, for now, the law exists. If it is to be changed, people need to let the lawmakers know, starting with ole Mark himself

I wonder how legislators would feel if they had to live under a similar rule. What if there were a rule that for every bad piece of legislation a legislator helped passed, the legislator would be denied certain privileges for six weeks?

For example, he could be forbidden to attend any after - hours social functions like cocktail affairs (especially those hosted by lobbyists). Or refrained from ac epting any speaking engagements, especially self - fundraising affairs. Or restrained from appearing on any talk - shows. Or kept from boarding any planes for "fact finding" junkets to Hawaii.

Come to think of it, perhaps that's not too bad an idea to pursue. Heaven knows the rest of us would certainly benefit from such a rule. Except that it would be another law, and there's too many already. However, I myself do have one law I'd like to see passed: for every law that is passed, one must be repealed!

SILVERTON, Texas (AP) -After a disastrous year of chemical Larry drift-prompted cotton damage, Briscoe County commissioners have voted to ban aerial and ground applications of hormonal

But to ease the impact on ranchers and farmers who rely on the herbicides for brush and weed control, commissioners opted to allow ground application of the chemical dicamba, or Banvel, with a permit from the Texas Department of Agriculture.

They also allowed aerial

County residents have 21 days to comment on the ban's provisions. The restrictions can be reviewed and changed by commissioners once a year. While most of those attending

Tuesday's public hearing on the issue expressed sympathy for the cotton farmers who sustained damage, several said they were worried about the effect of the timing of the restrictions.

Spraying to control mesquite must be timed perfectly and delays might prove devastating, rancher Jarus Flowers said.

He noted that depending on conditions, some drifts travel for miles, making any application of phenoxy herbicides a possible danger to cotton or other broadleaf

With the extent of some of these drifts, we couldn't spray anywhere in Texas," he said. "What can we do? Are we just going to let the brush take our pasture land?"

Briscoe County is about two-thirds ranch land, according to County Extension Agent Dirk Aaron. Farming in the rest of the county is diverse, making decisions on spraying difficult.

"The commissioners have tried to make it (restrictions) equitable," Aaron said "But some farmers are going to have to plan more and think ahead. The convenience of just spraying when you want to is not going to be there

Aaron said Briscoe County had suffered almost no reported damage from drift until this year, when an estimated 5,000 acres of cotton were severely damaged or destroyed.

Border Patrol's actions disgrace

It doesn't take a whopping intellect to conclude that oviet sailor Miroslav Medvid didn't jump into the Aississippi River twice just to take a swim. Yet, the U.S. Border Patrol and the State Department concluded that he Russian sailor really wasn't all that anxious to get way from the Soviet Union. He was returned to the Soviet grain ship from which he had escaped and the ship ailed away back to the Soviet Union with the sailor

It is impossible to determine exactly what happend in he Medvid case, but it seems obvious that authorities icted hastily and with considerably less concern for ndividual liberty than officials of the United States hould be expected to exhibit.

The Border Patrol claims the sailor indicated he vasn't seeking political asylum. An interpreter used by he agency to question Medvid says, however, that he did vant to stay in the United States and that she informed he Border Patrol of his wishes

After the Border Patrol had Medvid returned to the Soviet ship, such a public furor erupted that the State Department stepped in and had the sailor removed to 'neutral ground" and interrogated again. Although he vas taken ashore overnight before he signed a tatement, he was interviewed in the presence of two Soviet Embassy officials, a Soviet doctor and the captain f the freighter. So much for the idea that his statement vas given free of duress or outside, influence. It is mpossible to know what the ship's officers did to Medvid before he was interviewed by the state department, but officials there concluded that he really wanted to return o the Soviet Union

Efforts by Sen. Jesse Helms to have the sailor ubpoenaed to tell the Senate Agriculture Committee hat he wanted were unsuccessful, so the Soviet ship was llowed to leave with Medvid.

Still, some members of Congress are calling the andling of the case shameful and outrageous. President Reagan has ordered and investigation and the Justice Department is looking into the affair. None of this i likely to help poor Medvid, through. When e gets back to the brutal Soviet system he almost surely vas trying to escape, he will probably wind up in a prison But one of the most troubling aspects of the afffair is a tatement by a Border Patrol official that returning a ailor to a ship-even against his will-is standard procedure. This is outrageous.

Jobs can't be guaranteed

Who wouldn't want to have job security? I can't imagine anyone who wouldn't prefer to work in an environment where they could be reasonably confident that the same opportunity they have to earn and receive income today would be present tomorrow. I'm further inclined to believe that this strong preference for job security is true even in those cases where an individual does not particularly like the job he has at the moment

But how can one have job security? Who is in a position to grant it? Can it be guaranteed by contract? The United Auto Workers union recently signed a labor contract with the Chrysler Corporation which contains job security language. The new contract includes a job bank, a retraining program, supplemental income for laid-off high seniority workers and a promise by the company to build its new small car in the U.S. with domestic parts and U.A.W. representation of workers. All this is supposed to translate into job security

There is absolutely no way on earth that the Chrysler Corporation can guarantee anyone job security. If I were a Chrysler employee I would like to think that they could, but thinking it and actually having it are not the same thing. Chrysler cannot guarantee job security for the simple reason that, in the only sense that matters, Chrysler does not employee those whose income derives from effort expanded in facilities under its name. People who buy Chrysler products are the people who employee those who work at Chrysler. At Chrysler the Chairman of the Board and the kid who sweeps the parking lot have one thing in common: their boss is the consumer. If there is ever going to be anything at Chrysler - or, for that matter, at any other business firm - which even closely approximates job security, it will have to come from doing what consumers want done competitive price. Therefore the only issue regarding the recent Chrysler-UAW contract is whether or not it will result in an outcome which allows the company to offer consumers what they want at the same time that it generates a return to shareholders sufficient to induce them to hold on to their stock rather than switching their capital to other activities which are satisfying consumers' wants more efficiently. In a word, the issue is whether or not the contract will allow the company to grow and prosper. If it doesn't then the job security provision in the contract isn't worth the paper it's written on.

Chrysler agreed to a contract with the UAW which calls for an immediate $2,120 lump-sum payment in return for past concessions, a 2.25 percent first-year wage increase, a 2.25 percent lump-sum payment the second year, and a so-called "annual improvement factor" equal to three percent of base pay the third year. In addition the contract calls for a $187 million "job bank" to retrain workers laid off due to outsourcing (i.e., the practice of having work done by outside firms rather than having the work done in-house), a three-year moratorium on plant closings due to outsourcing, and profit-sharing program. In general the direct effect of this contract will be to restore Chrysler hourly workers to parity with their counterparts at Ford and GM. (an estimated $24 to $25 an hour at Chrysler, $24 an hour at GM, and $24.57 at Ford). All total, the contract is expected to cost Chrysler an additional $1 billion over its three year life.

Shortly before negotiations on this contract began, Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca announced that the company would insist that the union grant a reduction in the large number of job classifications which restrict the firm's ability to reallocate its hourly workers from one job function to another. In opposition the UAW argued that job classifications could not be reduced.

Furthermore they insisted that the company ban further outsourcing and plant closings.

Chrysler did not get what it wanted. The union did. In response to this the liberal Detroit Free Press editorialized that without a significant reduction in restrictive job classifications, "there is simply no way a U.S. auto company can ne

It's not altogether certain that Chrysler will be able to survive this new wage agreement. Had this contract been in effect over the past three years. Chrysler's profits would have been substantially lower than they were. Clearly over the next three years they will be lower than they otherwise would be. The flip side to the old saying, "nothing succeeds like success" is "nothing fails like failure." A company does not have to show an absolute accounting loss to fail. Even when it shows dollar earnings in excess of costs it can still begin the painful process of failing if its net profit expressed as a percent of shareholders' equity is less than the average for alternative uses of the shareholders' wealth. When that happens the value of the company's stock will begin to weaken in the stock market and the firm's leverage in attempting to acquire new capital will begin to

The Chrysler managers are not dumb. They understand all this. I suspect that as the costs of this new contract begin to bite the company will find a way around the contract and will begin to outsource even more than they do now (already 70 percent of parts are outsourced). When this happens the jobs of Chrysler hourly workers will begin to unravel and "job security" will become a hollow mockery

It may prove to be the case that the UAW, in its efforts to appease Chrysler workers, may well have shot itself in the foot with this contract.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, Nov. 14, the 318th day of 1985. There are 47 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 14, 1889, New York World reporter Nellie Bly (Elizabeth Cochrane) began her attempt to top the fictitious voyage of Jules Verne's Phileas Fogg by traveling around the world in less than 80 days. She would succeed, finishing the trip in 72 days.

On this date:

Ten years ago: President Gerald R. Ford's videotaped deposition was played at the trial of Lynnette "Squeaky" Fromme who was charged with trying to kill him. Ford said he had no recollection of hearing a gun click when Fromme allegedly pointed a pistol at him.

Five years ago: President-elect Ronald Reagan announced he had chosen Edwin Meese III and James A. Baker III to be his top White House aides.

Today's birthdays: Composer Aaron Copland is 85. Actor Brian Keith is 64. Actor McLean

Lucky to last until age 39

MORELAND, GA. - It was my mother's birthday, so a few members of the family gathered to help her celebrate. We gave up on my mother having too many more birthdays some time ago, but she's currently making another in a long series of comebacks. My Aunt Jessie, who lives just past the clothesline from my mother, was there and brought some of her wonderful creamed corn. I ate myself under the table.

Anyway, since it was a birthday we were celebrating, the question of age came up. My Aunt Jessie said proudly she was 75 and she hoped and prayed to live to be a hundred, which she'll probably make. She stays too busy not to.

"Didn't you just have a birthday?" somebody asked me

I admitted I did

"How old are you?" asked my Aunt Jessie. "Thirty-nine." I said.

I hadn't really thought a lot about birthdays until the subject was brought up at home. I hadn't thought much about reaching 39, either Thirty-nine. It certainly doesn't seem as old to me as it once did, but 39 is sort of the year you have to admit you're losing the battle against

You fight time when you're younger. It passes much too slowly, but all of a sudden the years have sneaked away and there you stand on the threshold of 40, which is the year, if you're single man, it's time you quit messing around with women who don't know how World War II came

"It doesn't seem like it's been 39 years since you were born," said my Aunt Jessie, who is very outspoken. "I remember going to see you in the hospital. I believe you were the ugliest baby I've

My mother was eating birthday cake and not paying attention, so there was nobody in the room to defend me.

'You were just a tiny thing and you had the reddest face," my aunt continued. "I thought at first there was something wrong with you.

'There was,' said one of my cousins. I chose to ignore that remark.

My Aunt Jessie was just warming up concerning the secrets of my infancy

"I baby-sat you all the time," she said, "and you were the worst one to get galded I've ever seen. I didn't know what "galded meant, so I asked my cousin.

"Getting a raw butt," she explained. My aunt went on.

"I was trying to change you one day and I had a jar of Vaseline sitting on the table. I don't think you were a year old yet, but you picked up the jar of Vaseline and threw it across the room.

"It shattered into a thousand pieces and I popped you a good one right on your behind. I left my handprint on you, and I was scared to death your mama or daddy would see it, but they didn't. But I don't think you ever threw a jar of Vaseline

I haven't. As a matter of fact, every time I see a jar of Vaseline I get a severe pain in my...well, where my aunt popped me one

Before the day was over, I decided not to be concerned with the fact I'm turning 39 and soon will be 40. Anybody born as ugly as I was and who was subjected to such cruelty as an infant is darn lucky to have made it this far. (c) 1985 Cowles Syndicate, Inc.

El Salvador's president still a puzzle

By Don Graff

Jose Napoleon Duarte has long been something of a puzzle even to many of his countrymen.

Perhaps that should read especially to his countrymen, who have twice elected him president but may have some reason to question whether they have gotten exactly what they thought they were voting for.

The first election was in 1972, but the military establishment, which was and remains the real power in El Salvador, didn't care for the outcome and ran Duarte out of the country. The second one was in May 1984, when he was the democratic alternative to hardliners leading the country ever deeper into civil war. Duarte seemed to hold out the promise of a non-military

He appeared to be moving rapidly in that direction when he dramatically invited the Salvadoran rebels to talk peace. The meeting that followed in the mountain town of La Palma raised hopes among Salvadorans as had no other event in five years of war. The dialogue begun at La Palma soon stalled, but Duarte was still the beneficiary of hopes. In elections last March, his Christian Democratic Party unexpectedly won a clear parliamentary majority. It was a remarkable personal victory. The political initiative was now Durate's.

And then nothing happened. Why is a question for speculation. Peter Bell thinks the election victory was misread and misused.

"The temptation was very great to use it, not to make peace but to make further political gains," he says. "A lot of people in the army, the business community and the Christian Democratic Party were suffering from the illusion that negotiations were no longer necessary, unless they were to be on the terms of surrender of the guerrillas.

Bell, a specialist on Latin America with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace in Washington, is a frequent visitor to El Salvador. He was an observer at La Palma and was most recently in the country in April, following the elections

Those most familiar with Duarte's complex personality would not be surprised. Bell recalls that a Salvadoran acquaintance recently described Duarte as a man who goes to bed at night a dreamer, visionary and dedicated democrat. He wakes up in the morning an engineer, a tinkerer, pragmatist and compromiser. He is, in this analysis, both idealist and opportunist, and it is not always clear which aspect of his personality may be motivating

Obstetricians: malpractice insurance premiums soaring Textile forces, jubilant at Senate

ASHINGTON (AP) -Malpractice insurance premiums for obstetricians have risen an average of $9,871 over the last two years, prompting a growing number of physicians to leave the field or limit their practices, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists said today.

The professional organization, releasing the results of survey of obstetricians-gynecologists, said the rising malpractice insurance fees threaten to limit women's access to quality care by persuading physicians to enter medical fields with a lower risk of being sued.

"The most dramatic and discouraging trend is the growing proportion of physicians who are decreasing the level of high-risk obstetrics," said Dr. William Mixson, the organization's president.

"It is here where we need the most skillful and dedicated physicians," he said "Yet, st is here that we see a growing number shying away.

Mixson said 23 percent of the physicians surveyed said they have decreased the amount of high-risk obstetrics they perform because of the increasing chance of being sued and the higher malpractice premiums

He said other data show that young physicians entering practice are shunning the feld of high-risk pregnancies entirely. Of the 75 spcialdzed programs in the field, he said, 45 have staff vacancies.

The study said that 73 percent of the physicians surveyed had a5 least one malpractice claim filed against them, with 48 percent facing two or more claims.

That compares with about two-thirds wh had at least oe claim against them in the organization's 1983 survey. In 1983, 35.9 percent faced two or more malpractice claims.

The largest 'ype of lawsuit was gynecological injury to the patient, victory, focus on threat of veto

WASHINGTO (AP) - Jubilan after an unexpectedly solid Senate victory, textile industry forces are focusing on a drive to dissuade President Reagan from a threatened veto of major cutbacks in Asian imports.

"I still don't think that President Reagan will veto this bill," Sen. Ernest Hollings, bD-S.C., said Wednesday after the Senate passed the measure 60-39 to restrict certain foreign imports.

Even though the fiyal count exceeded by six the ill's margin of victory in the most recent test vote Oct. 30, the tally remained seven votes short of sufficient support to overrie a White House veto.

Hollings, a chief sponsor, said a veto would be "devastating" to Republicans in 1986 congressional campaigns and added that executives of the giant textile and apparel iddustries would soon pay a call on the president.

Passage of the measure, which now returns to th House for a vote on alterations made by the Senate, came after Sen. Dan Evans. R-Wash., again warned that a Reagan veto was inevitable.

Reagan has not said publicly he would veto the measure, but Evans quoted him as saying at a recent White House meeting: "I will not ... sign any protectionist legislation that diminishes competition abroad or in the United States."

The bill is the only major import which otaled $d23.3 billion in 1984 and is expected to rise by $25 billion this year.

Under ,he measure, textile and apparel imports from Taiwan and South Korea would e rolled back an averae of 30 percent and those from Hong Kong an average of 12 percent. It also would curb shipments from eight other Asian nations and Brazil, as well as place quotas on shoe and luggage imports.

Critics say the bill would hurt consumers, break more than 34 international trade agreements and trigger retaliation in Asia against farm exports and other U.S. goods. Proponents counter that cutbacks are needed to slow layoffs in the textile and apparel industries caused by imports.

"Free trade is going to destroy America," an arm-waving Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., shouted as textile forces repeatedly throttled amendments offered by

One opponent, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, charged the bill aimed not at solving U.S. trade problems but at commercial gain for home-state industries of the Senate's "raw protectionists."

"I don't mind people being protectionist," Gramm said. "I resent the cloak of the American flag that they drape over their shoulders.'

Gramm labeled as unfair fairness" in trade relations. "It's a port, it's a dock," Hollings retorted. "If you don't step carefully, you'll fall into the Sea of China." He said th, British colony accepts "billions of yards of textiles from the People's Republican apparel" for export. The Senate killed, 68-30, a Gramm amendment to exempt Hong Kong. Minutes later it also; rebuffed, 68-31, another Gramm proposal to put Taiwan on an equalfooting with mainland China. which escapes the bill's toughest provisions.

(of China) and grinds them into

The Senate rejected, 60-39, a plan by Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., to exempt overseas buyers of more than $400 million in U.S. farm products annually.

"It says to agriculture that we're going to kiss you goodbye, it's all over, we're going to send you down the drain," Baucus said

"This amendment would tend to gut the textile bill," Thurmond

As textile forces scored victories in one round after another, some critics scrapped plans to offer amendments and Senate leaders telescoped an expected two-day debate into nine hours

"This bill is really bad," said Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., who was among opponents who scrpped measure advancing in Congress provisions that impose some of the amendments. "It is an embarrassment to Congress to

EPA seen likely to approve first release of man-made organisms

Environmental Protection Agency is leaning toward approval of the first deliberate release of a genetically engineered organism environment one that nature already has put there, an EPA official says

Advanced Genetic Sciences Inc. of Oakland, Calif., wants to test bacteria. Pseudonomas syringae and the related P. fluorescens, that appear to protect plants against frost. Use of such bacteria could significantly extend the growing seasons for crops.

EPA spokesman Dave Cohen said the agency was likely to grant the company a permit today to spray the bacteria on strawberry Nature makes the bacteria by the billions onplant leaves in two forms - about 99.9 percent "ice-plus" and 0.1 percent 'ice-minus.

Ice-plus produces a protein that becomes the nucleus around which dew freezes. Ice-minus is missing the section of genetic material that directs the bacterium to make that protein.

The company makes the ice-minus form by gene-splicing techniques

Leaves slathered in ice-minus will survive temperatures as low as 22 degrees, the company says, thus enabling a farmer to extend the growing season.

The practical problem, according to the company, is getting the ice-minus strain to survive for just a few weeks, because greenhouse tests have shown that ice-plus overwhelms it.

Since nature makes the ice-minus form and it has trouble surviving, and no foreign genetic material is added, government scientists tend to dismiss fears by some environmental activists that such an organism could turn out to be a another kudzu vine or worse. multiplying wildly in an environment without defenses

Though notzing has been commercialized for agriculture, one genetically engineered product already is being sold - human insulin made by bacteria - and a hormone to treat dwarfism has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration. In those cases, the man-made bacteria never leave the factory.

The Advanced Genetsc Sciences element is nearly identical to one on potato plats for which Steven Lindow and Nikolas Panopoulos of the University of California sough approval of the National Institutes

A lawsuit by environmental activist Jeremy Rifkin, who has opposed many genetic engineering activities, brought a decision that NIH had to prepare environmental

Peres delays handing Sharon dismissal

JERUSALEM (AP) - Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who heads the shaky coalition government's Likud bloc, said today that if Prime Minister Shimon Peres fires right-wing Cabinet member Ariel Sharon, Peres must resign and bring down the government.

Rafi Edry, a spokesman for Prime Minster Shimon Peres' Labor Party, reiterated on Israel radio today that Peres plans to fire Sharon today unless the controversial minister apologizes for attacking Peres' peace efforts.

Also speaking on the radio, Shamir said Peres had agreed not to fire any ministers without Likud agreement and said if he fired Sharon, "then this coalition agreement which is at the foundation of this government will cease to exist."

In such a case, Shamir said, "It is the premier's job, his duty, to go to the president and tell him that the national unity government can no longer survive, and to resign.'

The right-wing Likud and left-of-center Labor Party, Israel's main political foes, formed a tense national unity government 14 months ago. Sharon is a leading Likud member and contender for the party leadership.

Peres announced his intention to fire Sharon at a three-hour Cabinet session Wednesday night, but delayed handing him a letter of dismissal to await an apology.

Sharon, minister of commerce and industry, told the Cabinet he regretted insulting Peres, but refused to withdraw his criticism of Peres' policies, said ministers who emerged from the late-night

Edry said Peres wanted Sharon to apologize specifically for 'six separate acusations.

Cabinet ministers were divided over whether the delay in handing Sharon his dismissal notice meant that the crisis threatening the government had been averted.

"I think there is hope of removing tensions that existed in the government," Sharon told reporters after the Cabinet session.

Sharon, a former general who was defense minister during the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon, has called Peres "weak and spineless" for some of his foreign policy decisions.

Nurse's cool actions enable doctors to reattach her arm

WEATHERFORD, Texas (AP) A nurse who cut off her arm with a bandsaw kept a cool head that enabled surgeons to save her and the arm. She staunched the bleeding, wrapped up the severed limb and then phoned for help.

Neoma Patterson was in stable condition Wednesday at Harris Memorial Hospital, where she was recovering from 81/2 hours of surgery performed after the accident last week.

"If she had panicked, she would have definitely lost her arm," said Dr. Manucher Nazarian, who took part in the operation.

Said her husband, E.A. Patterson: "This lady's tougher than a keg of nails.

Doctors say Ms. Patterson, 56, should be out of the hospital in a couple of weeks, but faces extensive physical therapy.

She severed the arm last Tuesday while working with an electric bandsaw outside her farm home northeast of here.

"It was cool that morning, and I had put on a flannel shirt," she said. "Some way, the suction from the saw sucked my shirt sleeve into

Earlier, Columbia had decided against a Christmas release for "Murphy's Romance," starring Sally Field and James Garner. Orion decided against bringing out a Tim Conway comedy, "The Longshot.

As a result of all this, the major film companes will field only 11 new holiday attractions this year instead of the usual 15 to 18. What happened?

"All of the distributors seem to have realized how important the Christmas season is," said Columbia s9okeswoman Anne Reilly. "The reasoning is that if you don't have a big attraction, you'd bette not try. It's easy to get lost in the Christmas crowd. The year's end traditionally has been the ti.e for studios to bring out their Academy Award hopefuls, but that seems to be a lesser actor this year. A glance at the 1985 entries reveals potentially popular shows but few with Oscar potential. Here is what Hollywood is giving

Bullock sees lottery to aid financial crisis

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Texas Comptroller Bob Bullock says a state lottery could prove to be the best method of easing a financial crisis he predicts the Texas treasury will face by 1987.

Speaking at a Rotary Club meeting here Wednesday, Bullock said he would not bet on pari-mutuel wagering to bolster state revenues and help meet the ever increasing demand for state

But he did endorse a state lottery, saying could generate "lots of money" when the economic outlook suggests the next Legislature will encounter a tougher budget-cutting process than was experienced this year.

During the 1985 legislative session, lawmakers faced a $1 billion budget shortfall and were forced to cut spending, raise some fees and triple college tuition.

A lottery could net Texas as much as $600 million within four years, Bullock said. He was supportive of the pro-lottery movement during this year's legislative session.

Public opinion polls have indicated that more Texans favor a state lottery than favor pari-mutuel betting on horse races.

Gov. Mark White has opposed a state lottery, saying it would be a breeding ground for corruption.

Rents are skyrocketing in quake-ravaged Mexico City

DALLAS (AP) - Thousands of people left homeless by Mexico City's twin earthquakes are battling for already scarce housing, pushing rents up as much as 100 percent in some parts of world's largest metropolis. Burgeoning inflation coupled with the peso's declining value is aggravating the housing crunch, urban planners, real estate agents and tenants told The Dallas Morning News. 'In many cases, rents for housing have at least doubled," said Martha Schteingart, an urban planner with El Colegio de Mexico, a Mexico City-based think tank.

The Sept. 19 and 20 quakes destroyed or damaged an estimated 3,300 structures and caused approximately $4 billion in damage in the Mexican capital, the Morning News said in a story published Wednesday. Officials said about 20,000 housing units, mostly rental property, were destroyed and hundreds of office buildings collapsed or were irreparably damaged. 'The effect this loss has had on the rental market is great," said Mrs. Schteingart. "Housing was expensive before, and this has made it worse. In addition, the annual inflation rate was expected to be 60 percent to 65 percent, substantially above the government's target of 35 percent, officials said. The peso, trading at about 380 to the dollar just after the earthquake, went as high as 500 to the dollar last week. The Mario A. Macias engineering firm, for instance, wasn't prepared for the time it took to find new office space or the cost of the new quarters.

"It took three weeks to find another office, and we are paying 100 percent more in rent," said Noemi Fuentes, a firm employee.

said after the quakes that the government would strictly enforce existing laws on rent increases to protect tenants' rights. But the Federal Consumer Protection Agency has received scores of complaints daily that landlords are trying to raise rents beyond legal limits.

Raul Cervantes, an agency spokesman, said Mexican law prohibits rental charges in U.S. dollars and annual housing rent increases over 85 percent of the yearly increase in the minimum

But daily advertisements in Mexico City newspapers quote dollar prices for rents. And residents pay higher and higher percentages of their salaries for

An advertisement appeared recently for a two-bedroom apartment in the fashionable Polanco neighborhood and a price of $800 was quoted in a telephone conversation. The owner, who would not give the Morning News her name, said payment would only be accepted in U.S. dollars. Another Polanco apartment which rented for 72,000 pesos in August was being offered for 300,000 pesos last month.

'The law is the law of supply and demand in the jungle of speculation," said Sergio Puentes, an urban planner with El Colegio de Mexico

Doris Bulnes, a real estate agent, said she has been inundated with requests for houses to rent since the quakes. 'We've received a tremendous amount of calls," said Ms. Bulnes. "There was a hysteria the first

"There is definitely a lack of housing," she said. "Most of the people looking are people whose homes were damaged or want to live in a safer part of the city.

Evening clothes follow simple styling this season. In fact, they often look very much like sportswear. They include sweaters and long skirts, pants outfits and unadorned, slimly cut, long

To distinguish evening from day clothes, designers have gone on the gold standard. Gold fabric, worked to look like sheets of molten gold, appears in just about every collection. Sweaters glitter and velvet pants must have tops embroidered or trimmed in gold.

For Cleopatra, gold is just part of the rich palette she's using. Floral charmeuse in dresses and pants take gold vests. Ivory evening separates are edged in black-and-gold braid, and an entire group of evening styles be-gins with a gold brocade rajah jacket and pants. The molten gold look in lame is used for the flowing lines of a wrap dress, a blouson and evening duo of tunic and pants.

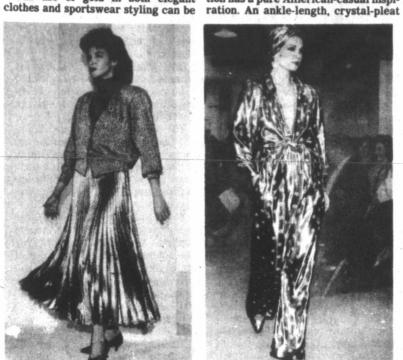

If gold for Cleopatra is part of her rajah themes, Adele Simpson uses it as an easy way to glamorize comfortable American looks. Her designer, Donald Hopson, uses the soft flow of tissue lame in coin dots of pale gold on molten gold for his palazzo pajamas and waist-knotted shirt top. Royal blue lame with gold dots for a short dress and shirt-tail coat offers a sporty contrast to gold-and-black lame in paisley for an elegant tunic dress, and roy-al, printed gold tissue lame for a or sweaters knitted as classic cardi gans or polos in gold metallic yarn. Yonson Pak uses gold coin trim on sleeves, or gives it a touch of color, as in her green and gold print charmeuse or a gold tunic over orange pants.

Mary Ann Restivo, another interpreter of the American sportswear look, gives to molten gold lame the soft look of shirred long skirts, simple bateau-neck tops and loose jackets, of-ten a black midriff band accent. Geoffrey Beene, who has been refining his American sports look for years, cuts bias panels of gold and black lame that seem to pour effortlessly over the body, often accented by a side wrap effect that shows the leg.

Designers who prefer using gold for elegance still keep the line flowing. Jackie Rogers does it with draping or shirring, shaping a tunic over a slim short skirt, or giving a side sunburstdraped shape to a strapless long gown with a floating coat. She sticks to mol-ten gold, where Jon Haggins likes a black-and-gold floral print for a tunic, with a softly slim, long black skirt in jersey or an entire halter gown in the print with a black chiffon sash.

Oscar de la Renta uses gold more sparingly than other designers but he offers a gold, sequinned sweater worn with gray cashmere pants or gold as son's molten gold lame palazzo pants with draped, waist-tied top, printed in pale gold coin dots. Matching turban by Frank Olive.

He's working drapery effects into short dresses, such as a yellow crepe with side-draping. His evening suit, with dolman sleeves and peplum waistline, comes in blush satin tapestry brocade, with rhinestone buttons and a sweeping shawl collar.

Short evening dresses divide into covered and sleeved "dinner" styles and bare, fancier designs that are really short evening gowns. Both kinds can be seen in Arnold Scaasi's boutique collection. Dear Abby

Readers offer many endings for story of sibling rivalry By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: First this appeared in my column:

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of four lovely daughters. The eldest is 11. I'll call her Agnes. When Agnes was 3, her father died. Two years later, I remarried. Every summer, the parents of my first husband take Agnes for a month. Their son was their only child, and Agnes is their only grandchild. So far Agnes has been to Disneyland, Hawaii, Mexico and Europe. My husband and I cannot afford to take our other three children on trips like that, and they are understandably envious and resentful. I'm sure with all the divorces, deaths and remarriages, this is a common problem. If you or any of your readers have a solution, I'd appreciate knowing it.

TORN "DEAR TORN: What are your alternatives? To deny Agnes those exotic trips with her grandparents in order to avoid being envied by her half-sisters? Not fair to Agnes. To ask the grandparents to take one of the half-sisters along every year in the interest of family unity? Rather presumptuous. It would be very generous if they were to offer, but that idea would have to originate with them. Readers?" Did I get letters!

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to Torn" was appalling! How can you be so insensitive to the feelings of the younger siblings? Look ahead: Agnes will grow up to be a snob, thinking she is better than her sisters, who will surely grow to hate her. It's just human nature.

"Torn" should not permit those grandparents to take Agnes anywhere unless the sisters are included. Admit you were wrong, Abby.

CHRISTMAS GIFT IDEA FROM Lights and Sights

"The Federal Trade Commission's Fair Credit Reporting Act now gives consumers some rights that can help them clear a poor credit report," says Nancy L. Granovsky, a family economics specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

For example, if you have been denied credit or employment because of information in a credit report, you have the right to be told the name and address of the reporting agency, she explains.

Then that agency must tell you the nature, content, and source of all the information in your credit file, except medical information.

Turkey still hasn't overcome dumb image

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Americans have been gobbling up turkeys for years, but the Thanksgiving fowl has never managed to shed its reputation for being stupid. "They do strange things. For instance, younger turkeys are so inquisitive that if you leave an empty bucket in their pen, they'll all climb in until the bucket fills up. The ones at the bottom could smother to death," said William O. Cawley a poultry expert at Texas A&M University

In the spring, when younger birds are raised on open ranges. some of them are so amazed by heavy rains that they gaze at the sky until they drown, said Cawley, who is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service headquarters at Texas A&M

The bird was called turkey long before the Pilgrims' landing at Plymouth Rock in 1620 and may have gotten its name from Europeans who thought the bird was imported from Turkey, said David Mellor, who also is with the extension service

"The Europeans may have been confused about the bird's origin, thinking that it, like the guinea-fowl or peacock, came from Turkey," he said. "Soon the name turkey was applied only to the bird from America.

The turkey was domesticated by American Indians before the discovery of North America in 1492, Mellor said.

Spanish explorers took the bird from Mexico to Spain in 1498 and from there the turkey was distributed to other parts of Europe. It was brought to England in 1524, Mellor said.

Most turkeys found on U.S. tables are hens — as opposed to male birds called toms or gobblers. Cawley said. The average hen is slaughtered when it is about 17 weeks old and eats about 50 pounds of feed during its life span, he said.

Couple puts in teamwork on labor of love

By PATRICIA HOWARD Corsicana Daily Sun

FAIRFIELD, Texas (AP) -Glass jars filled with the ruby red tomatoes, the deep green of peppers and the burnished gold of corn stand gleaming on shelves in a neat white house near here.

The homegrown fruits and vegetables are the reward of a spring and summer of labor for Bert and Evelyn Willard. But for them, it's a labor of love - and teamwork - that has brought other benefits as well, such as being named grand champions in the Freestone County Fruit and Vegetable Show each year since

Now the two can be seen on the cover of the November-December issue of Texas Gardener magazine as winners of a $500 prize in the first Texas Gardener of the Year contest.

'Immaculate' the word managing editor Rita Miller used to describe the Willards' half-acre garden that yielded some 3,000 pounds of tomatoes, 300/pounds of cucumbers, 250 pounds of squash and 200 pounds of beans.

"You could tell they put a great deal of love and care into their garden," Miller said. "It was beautifully kept. The simple, old-fashioned garden was chosen from more than 60 entries statewide, including an ornamental aquatic garden and another divided into areas with different themes such as Japanese and English gardens.

But the Willards' garden was well-rounded and representative of Texas gardens in general,' Miller said. "They seem to have great success with all the major vegetable crops.

"You can't argue with what success they had," she said. Other crops harvested were 10 bushels of field corn, five of sweet corn, seven of peas, six of potatoes, three of eggplant and two of onions.

Willard's philosophy, he said, is to leave the land in better shape than he found it.

He's been gardening since he was 13 and, his wife said, "Experience is the best teacher."

But more than that is the cooperation between them. As Mrs. Willard said, "I doubt if there was a couple in there (the contest) that worked together as we do."

Such teamwork is a way of life for the Willards who, after some hard times and four children, still are quick to praise - and tease each other.

The two Fairfield natives married in 1937. "He had less than $100 when we married. The first year after we married he worked for a dollar a day," Mrs. Willard recalled. "But we made it."

The 22-year-old bride came prepared. "I had 40 quarts of fruits and vegetables canned before we got married," Mrs. Willard said, as well as five quilts.

A carpenter for more than 30 Willard did some ship-building in Houston for five years - the only time they didn't have a garden - before returning with his family to Mrs. Willard's home place south of Fairfield in

"We had four good children." Mrs. Willard said. "They were brought up to mind. I never had to pick up toys.

She probably didn't have time, between gardening, housekeeping and working as county extension agent secretary. She often canned and preserved until midnight, she said, then rose at 5 the next morning to fix breakfast and prepare lunches for her family before going to her job.

"I enjoyed doing it," Mrs. Willard said, crediting her husband with gathering and preparing the fruits and vegetables to be processed.

Did all that work save them

"Oh my goodness, I guess it did," Mrs. Willard said. "There we were with four children, and they're all big eaters just like we are.

And Willard said their children have commented, "We never did have a lot of money, but Dad never did let us go hungry

"Dad" still looks out for daughter Gloria Smith of Fairfield and sons Irv, Dan and Don Willard, all of Houston. The four helped harvest this year's garden, and got plenty of good food to take home to their families in return.

Irv Willard also helped his parents by making a photographic album of the garden from beginning to end to submit to the Texas Gardener contest.

The Willards' award-winning garden, though picturesque, doesn't have any special systems or fancy equipment. The sandy loam soil is prepared by plowing, disking and tilling, with planting beginning in mid-March or April.

When plants begin fruiting, side-dressing of 10-20-10 fertilizer is applied, using two pounds per 100-foot row. Willard puts on a lot of mulch, keeps the soil in good till and hopes for adequate, gentle rains. "Heavy rain can take its toll on your garden," he said, when plants "get no air to the roots.

After a sudden heavy rain, i.e said, one can rake around the plants to loosen the soil if care is DALLAS (AP) - The Southwest Conference will be without skyscraper centers in the 1985-1986 collegiate basketball season but there will still be plenty of firepower.

Seven-foot Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist and 6-11 Joe Kleine of Arkansas are in the National Basketball Association along with Akeem "The Dream" Olajuwon of Houston, who left the league two years ago.

The SWC missed its chance at 7-2 landmark Tito Horford, who ended up at Louisiana State after the NCAA ruled he had been illegally recruited by the University of Houston where he had thought to have been signed, sealed and delivered.

There may be more balance in the SWC than in recent years but Arkansas is drawing the most

"I think Arkansas has to be the favorite with 13 lettermen coming back," said Houston Coach Guy V. Lewis.

"I think it will be really a wide open race," said Texas Christian Coach Jim Killingsworth. "It looks like Texas A&M returns the most starting talent but you just can't count out teams like Houston and Arkansas. Everyone has a chance to figure in this thing before it's over.

Texas Tech is the defending champion but the Red Raiders of Coach Gerald Myers lost all five starters.

"Replacing the five senior starters off last year's team will be a challenge for us as a team, said Myers. "Our team should have good confidence going into the season based on the way last year went for us. A lot of the players on last year's team learned about whatg it takes to win and that should help us a Myers said the SWC race could be a "crazy one. There really isn't any one team that should just dominate the whole conference. Arkansas, Texas A&M and SMU will all be strong again and Houston will be tough as always.

"The rest of us have a chance to develop into good teams as the year goes on so it should make for an interesting race."

There will be two new coaches in the SWC, Gene Iba at Baylor and Nolan Richardson at Arkansas. This is the first time the SWC has added two head basketball coaches in the same season since the 1977 78 campaign.

"I inherited a good job but an extremely tough schedule," said Richardson. "The Southwest Conference is a strong conference and I'm glad to be a part of it."

Iba said "It's very difficult for me to tell how we will do during the upcoming season. Our players have to adjust to a new system and sometimes this is

The SWC has a strong non-conference schedule which includes Clemson, DePaul, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kansas State, LSU, Lamar, Long Beach State, Memphis State, Minnesota, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Pepperdine, Oregon, Southern California, South Alabama, Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Virginia

Bowl matchups 'unofficially' begin

The official bowl invitation date still is one Saturday off. Coming up, however, is the unofficial selection date, which usually turns out to be more official than the official one.

'Most of the deals will be made this weekend," says one high-placed bowl representative.

If you don't think that deals are made in advance, you have only to remember back to last year when the Cotton Bowl and Doug Flutie became a twosome. The Cotton Bowl's head honcho is Jim "Hoss" Brock, chairman of all the bowl committees and the fellow who got the 'official' selection date pushed back a week this year to the fourth Saturday in November; the Boston College athletic director is Bill Flynn, a former president of the NCAA.

Here are several rumors:

Mets' Gooden wins Cy Young award

NEW YORK (AP) — There were still three days left before Dwight Gooden would turn 21 years old, and already he had added the National League's Cy Young award to his list of birthday presents.

"I guess things have moved along pretty rapidly in my career," Gooden said Wednesday from the dais, a birthday cake with 21 candles on it in front of him

At the tender age of 20, Gooden had been voted unanimously as the best pitcher in the league, one year after he had been recognized as the league's best rookie. "Last year, I won the rookie award, and that was special because you only have one chance," Gooden said. "And the Cy Young is a great honor after finishing second last year."

With his birthday coming on Saturday, Gooden became baseball's youngest Cy Young winner ever and also the first player to win the rookie and Cy Young awards in successive years. The right-hander had a record of 24-4 and led the National League in earned run average, strikeouts, complete games and innings pitched in 1985.

Gooden received 120 points, including all 24 of the first-place votes cast by the Baseball Writers' Association of America. He thus became the seventh pitcher to receive the award unanimously.

Pampa hosts 2A bi-district battle

By DAN MURRAY Sports Writer

What could be the best high school playoff game in the Panhandle this weekend will transpire at 8 p.m. Friday at Pampa's Harvester Stadium as unbeaten Memphis battles always rugged Panhandle in a Class 2A bi-district showdown.

Memphis brings its best team in years into the game while Panhandle offers a club that's making its seventh straight state playoffs appearance.

Eddie Hooper's Cyclones, the District 2-2A champions, are 10-0 and the state's 10th-ranked Class 2A team. Stocky Lamberson's tradition-laden Panthers, the District 1-1A co-champions, are 7-2-1, the 1984 state runners-up, and haven't lost since the third week of the season.

Memphis is a talented football team with explosive speed in all the skill positions. The Cyclones have averaged 35.4 points per game this season while allowing an average of just 6.6.

The key to the Memphis attack is quarterback Sam Carter, who rushed for two touchdowns and passed for two more as the Cyclones beat Quanah 35-14 for the district championship last week.

Carter runs the Memphis option well and has proven ability to pass accurately to his wide receivers on long routes. Two weeks ago against White Deer, Carter showed his speed by scoring on a 93-yard quarterback sneak and unleashed his arm on an 82-yard touchdown pass to flanker Otis Henderson.

Henderson's a burner who's relative Roy Henderson is another speed threat in the Cyclone's backfield. That's not all. Wide-out Lex Weatherly can beat the clock, too, and scored on passes of 38 and 40 yards against Quanah. 'They have a lot of overall team speed and they throw the ball well," Panhandle's Lamberson said. "Explosiveness is definitely the key to their football team. That's just the way they are.'

Memphis' Hooper said, "We've got some ability back there. We feel like we've got a pretty explosive attack.'

Hooper said the key to that attack has been the play of his offensive line, and it's that group that could determine the outcome

Panhandle's, led by noseguard Steve Frow, is known for its quickness and pursuit to the football. Few teams have had success turning the corner on the Panthers.

"It's a trademark of our team," Lamberson said.

"Their defense just swarms to the football real well," Hooper said. "So many times the game's determined on the line of scrimmage. We have to get on our blocks and keep our feet driving." Panhandle runs a 5-3 stack defense that has given problems to teams that rely strictly on a running attack. Hooper hopes the Cyclones' long bomb threat will keep the Panthers' eight-man front from teeing off on the Memphis

"We can throw the ball, but we're gonna do the same things we've been doing to get here," he

When Panhandle has the ball, it will present Memphis with more problems than it did teams earlier in the season. The Panthers have been playing good offensive football the past three weeks and racked up 458 yards against defensively tough Stinnett a week ago in earning the right to be here.

One reason is the return of running back Shane Mecaskey, who missed much of the early season due to an ankle injury and gained 116 yards in a 34-7 win over the Rattlers. He's not the Panthers only capable runner. Jimmy Hays contributed 124 yards against the Rattlers and got help from Chris Koetting, who scored three times and carried the load early in the year when Mecaskey was hurt.

Panhandle's offensive emergence can also be attributed to quarterback Tommy Kotara, who's entrance into the starting lineup three games ago triggered the Panthers' explosion. Kotara was 10 of 13 for 130 yards against Stinnett and twice hit Koetting for touchdowns

One of Kotara's favorite targets is senior split end Trey Charless, who Lamberson said "has enough speed to go deep" against "Our offense is really moving the ball well," Lamberson said. 'We've scored some points and played well with the pressure on Which leads to the intangibles.

While Memphis is unbeaten and should be favored, Panhandle knows how to handle the pressure of playoffs games. "Experience under pressure is definitely an advantage for us," Lamberson said. "Our attitude around here is that we really come on and start playing well in the playoffs."

Mustangs want to be among Wheeler's best

Sports Writer

WHEELER - Wheeler has had its share of great football teams. The 1985 Mustangs want to be remembered as one of them.

There are several things the state's No. 3-ranked Mustangs have to do to earn that recognition, and one opportunity will come at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Gruver

Should Wheeler do as expected and beat the Gruver Greyhounds, the Mustangs will finish the season undefeated and begin their march down the long road to greatness.

We want to go 10-0," Wheeler coach Preston Smith said. "Our kids want to be remembered with these great teams we've had here before, and to do that you've got to go undefeated and go through the playoffs and win the state championship. They want to be recognized like that.

Beating Gruver is the first step.

Going into the season, the Greyhounds were thought to have had a better team than last year's squad that made the state quarterfinals. But Gruver has disappointed and eliminated itself from the playoffs race by losing to Claude 22-14 last

The 'Hounds, 6-2-1 and 4-2-1 in loop play, were virtually out of it before, having lost to Phillips and tied Groom, two teams that are battling for District 1-1A's second playoffs berth Friday.

Smith's not taking Gruver lightly. The Greyhounds run shotgun and spread formations that will force the Mustangs to prepare differently than they have for other teams.

"I would imagine it's going to be all we're sonna want," he said. "They've still got talent and more speed than we've had to deal with before.

Gruver is a passing team that likes to pair quarterback Tim Stedje with any of a number of Steve Fry is the most prominent, but backs Loyd Cator and Kip Pittman also figure into the passing attack. All three are exceptionally quick.

"They've got speed and quickness and can go score on you in a hurry," Smith said. "Their problem's been on the other side of the ball;

The Greyhounds are very quick, but are small and have had troubles with power running attacks of the sort Wheeler features.

"We've got to make them stop us from doing what we do well," Smith said.

The Mustangs have done everything well in a season when they've scored 414 points and allowed

"Maybe we have the best offensive team we've ever had," Smith said.

He may be right. Backs Toby Collins and Dicky Salyer are having all-state seasons, and the addition of quarterback Randall Hugg has given the Mustangs a lethal passing game.

The Wheeler offense has performed so well that the starters have been playing usually only half a game because they've scored so often and early.

The Mustangs also are playing excellent on the special teams, and if they are suscept in any area, it's defense Smith said, though the numbers make that hard to believe.

"We're not big enough and physical enough that we can dominate people defensively, and we've been able to do that in the past," he explained.

Speaking of the past, Wheeler was bumped from the playoffs last season when Munday scored in the final 50 seconds to win. 20-17.

Smith makes it no secret that he'd like another shot at Munday, which is ranked on top of both the

Harris and Associate Press polls. "We'd like to play them again," he said, "and we hope to get far enough along in the playoffs where Coach John Turner huddles with the Lefors Pirates.

Pirates seek special things in their 11-man swan song

By DAN MURRAY Sports Writer

LEFORS - The Lefors Pirates are hoping for special things Friday night.

At 7:30 p.m. on Shaw Field, the Pirates will host Booker in what may be the last 11-man football game Lefors will ever play. The school board has voted to move Lefors into six-man competition next season, and if enrollment doesn't pick up in the future, Friday night will become the last memory if the 11-man game Lefors has.

"The kids are talking about it being the last game of the year and the last 11-man game, and I think the moms are trying to make it a special event," head coach John Turner said.

Turner thinks the game against the Kiowas will be a special event for his players, no matter what the pre-game activities are

"I think it may," he said. "They want to make a good showing on it.

Lefors is coming off its first win of the season, a 19-0 decision over McLean, and Turner hopes that will help his team against 4-5 Booker. "I hope it gives 'em confidence," he said. "We've had pretty good workouts, and I think they'll be ready to play... They've been giving 100 percent all year."

Booker is a wishbone team that's improved as the year's gone on, and Turner knows it will be an arduous task for his Pirates to upset the Kiowas. He thinks there's a chance it can be done.

"We usually play Booker a pretty good ball game," he said. "If we can stay up as far as endurance goes, we can play with 'em.

One of Turner's weapons he expects to use is Tommy "Deep Freeze" Parks, the huge lineman Lefors began using in its backfield on short yardage downs even before Chicago began using now-celebrated William "Refrigerator" Perry.

"I got the jump on ol' Mike (Ditka) on that one." Turner said. "Rest assured when we get in a short yardage situation the Deep Freeze will arrive.

No matter what happens Friday, Turner said he's proud of the way his kids have handled what thus far has been a 1-8 campaign.

"I really am," he said. "It's hard on them having to come back week after week after getting beat and trying to get ready, but they stuck it out with me and I really appreciate it. They've done some things they didn't think they could and worked harder than they thought they could. I think they gained a lot of character.

Groom, Phillips meet in playoffs showdown

GROOM - Phillips coach Ed Johnson thinks it may come down to who makes the fewest mistakes. Groom's Jimmy Duncan agrees. They believe their clubs are evenly matched. They'll find out at 7:30 p.m. here Friday

Groom's and Phillips' seasons have come down to this one game. The winner will be the District 1-1A runnerup and will advance into the state playoffs. The loser will put its football equipment away until next fall. The coaches think it will be close all the way.

"I think whoever makes the least amount of mistakes will win," Johnson said. "We're pretty even." Duncan said: "We would like to think we could play well enough to stay with 'em. What we would hope would happen is that it well be decided on a turnover or in the kicking game. I think maybe that's what it will come down to.

Phillips, like Groom, has played with its back to the wall through most of the district campaign. The 7-2 Blackhawks are 6-1 in the loop, but lost to Wheeler early and have had to win every game since. They've done it.

"We've been real consistent," Johnson said. "We don't try to get too emotionally up for any one game.

What the 'Hawks have done is consistently pound every district team except Wheeler. They're coming off a 47-7 trouncing of Follett last Friday, while Groom had to tough out a 7-6 win over Booker to make this game mean something.

Phillips has good size in its lines, which are led by 6-4, 210-pound tackle Brandon Hudson. The Blackhawks' backs, while not big, are hard runners. Groom can't key on any single aspect of Phillips' game, for the 'Hawks have had proven success running and passing.

For proof just look to the stats from the Follett game, when quarterback Tom Johnson passed for 152 more.

"They're so well balanced,"
Duncan said. "They rush the ball real well and they're a real good play-action passing team. We've got to play both things real well and hope they don't blow us out 'cause they're big and strong ''
Johnson, the coach's son, calls most of his own plays, possesses decent speed and strength, and runs the option well. He's also a threat on bootlegs and bootleg

"He's not blessed with a lot of speed or ability but he works hard at it," coach Johnson said.

Johnson's passes are usually thrown in the direction of receiver Tracy Jones and twin running backs Brent and Brian Heatley. The Heatleys combined for four touchdowns against Follett and Duncan said run hard and block well for each other.

"They catch well and get thrown to a lot," too, he said.

Duncan said the key to stopping Phillips' offense will be for his down linemen to control the line of scrimmage and allow linebackers Jack Britten, Daniel Lambert and Brent Thornton to get to the football.

On offense, Groom needs to be able to run the ball on Phillips, for few teams have had success passing against the 'Hawks. "They play good pass defense." Duncan said. "They line up in a 5-2 and play it sound. They don't stunt you up front."

Johnson said he's not worried about preparing for Groom's wishbone offense, because the Blackhawks have seen the 'Bone several times this season

He's more worried about the Tigers' offensive line and their big running backs. "Their offensive line does such a good job," Johnson said. "They can hurt you.' Groom's installation of Michael Rose at quarterback has moved Brent Thornton to fullback, where he has performed well and taken some of the load off of Britten. Britten has taken a more versatile role in the Tigers' offense, finding his way into the passing lanes. Phillips' size advantage in the lines could play a factor by the time the game reaches the fourth quarter and the teams begin to wear down. Duncan hopes the flu bug that's been buzzing around Groom doesn't bite his team and weaken the players before the

"I told them not to kiss their girlfriends," he said.

Duncan wants the Tigers to make the most of a position not many people thought they'd be in.

"Early in the year not very many people thought that we could be in this position right now and we are," he said. "We're happy about that and I think it'll be good for us in the future, too."

For now, however, the future goes only as far as Friday night.

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) - Syd Armistead knew from his first school days that he wanted to be a teacher. "I had a blackboard I'd put on a tree, and I taught that tree everything I learned at school that day. I had the smartest tree in the neighborhood," he said.

From educating vegetation to planting the seeds of learning in young minds, Armistead's teaching career has been fruitful and interesting. A teacher at Killeen's East Ward Elementary School, he not only is a rarity in an education field long dominated by women, but also is a curiosity in his half of one percent of kindergarten teachers in the state who are male.

He is also a novelty in the Killeen Independent School District, being one of only 24 male elementary teachers, and the only such educator teaching a class lower than the fourth grade.

East Ward Principal Johnny

Watson admitted that he had some qualms about having a male kindergarten teacher at his school. 'Honestly, I was a little apprehensive. I had never met one before. After meeting Syd, however, I came to be aware that that is exactly what he should be.

Dr. Tom Davis, assistant superintendent for personnel, said that male elementary teachers are hard to find, because "most males are more subject-matter oriented while the females seem more into the care of the child. Although we don't actively recruit male teachers, we do look with favor upon early elementary types."

Armistead made his home among the 5-year-olds after trying to teach other grades and finding it not as rewarding as his work with the younger children. He started with fourth-graders, but found it wasn't for him, then taught first grade for six years and is now in his second year of teaching kindergarten, a move he considers "the best I ever made."

"Kindergarteners walk into a world they've never seen, and my challenge as an educator is to get them either to love school or hate school. I plant the seeds," he said. "I get to shape so many young lives. I've seen little eyes open so wide to a world they didn't know existed. One little boy in class found everything so amazing, because his mom had never taken the time to explain things to him when they took a walk, such as what a stop sign meant."

The joy of discovery Armistead enjoys imparting to youngsters almost matches the wonderment with which he is greeted by the children themselves, who aren't quite sure how to regard this mountain of a man. Does he ever frighten the pupils?

"My dad wondered a lot about that, having this 6-foot 2-inch, 275-pound character with a beard greeting the little kids, but I don't think I've ever really scared them. "I did have one little girl who never spoke in class. We knew she was bright, and she did all her work fine, but she never spoke. I found out later that my beard scared her. 'Mostly, the kids like to pat and shake my tummy. They say things about my 'shelf' such as 'My daddy has one like that'. There's a song we sing about putting your knee to your chin and I can't do it, which makes the kids laugh because my 'shelf' gets in the way."

Armistead had the opportunity to meet more of his own kind at the Kindergarten Teachers of Texas Convention last month, where he found two other male kindergarten teachers who work in Brownsville.

'Toody Byrd, a wonderful woman I met at KTOT convention to which Mr. Watson sent me said 'The world of the kindergartener is all thighs and nostrils,' meaning that when they looked straight ahead it was at your thighs, and when they looked up your nostrils were all they could see.

In order to see what parents kindergarten teacher, the principal responses were the kind that initially met such foreign notions as a woman astronaut or vice president - "It doesn't matter as long as they are qualified for the

"It's as neat as a woman doctor," read another.

"You're the first teacher he's had, so I have nothing to compare you to," said one. One parent wrote, "I think Mr. Armistead is the greatest. He is revered as the best kindergarten teacher in

"After reading that one, I told Mr. Watson that I definitely deserve a raise," said Armistead. Parents seemed to like the idea of a male educator, because "boys tend to mind a man more" or they "handle hyper children better."

"Children need a loving, caring male in the classroom - it rounds out their feelings about authority and information-givers," wrote a parent, while another survey read, 'It's a change from mom. It puts a male figure into his life, and he might need someone to talk to."

A male teacher's impact as a kind of surrogate father to a single-parent family also was noted by one woman, who wrote. "(My son) is around women a lot since I'm divorced. He seems to be a little more outgoing around a all the time," wrote one parent, "because he's so amazed that a man can be a teacher, too."

"The kids also don't think that teachers wear tennis shoes or blue jeans," Armistead said. 'They are amazed when we wear them to school.'

He works with the two other East Ward kindergarten teachers in an arrangement that is unique to the district. Armistead teaches math and language arts, and then his class moves to another teacher for social studies or science while he gets another class

"We're the only kindergarten program that does this. We do it this way so all the students will have a chance to see a male teacher every day," he said.

Armistead credits his interest in elementary education to his wife, Patricia, a second-grade teacher.

He's been involved in virtually every phase of the Killeen Independent School District, as a summer maintenance worker, an aide, and then as a teacher. Will he stay in kindergarten education?

"My mom and day ask all the time - 'When you're 50 and old and gray, are you still going to be sitting on the floor and singing songs?' Someday, I would like to be a principal, but I'm in no hurry to get there yet. I'm very happy in

"I threw a temper tantrum in the second grade, bit my third-grade teacher - she still has the scar threw a book at my fourth-grade teacher and was paddled by my sixth-grade teacher after I tried to paddle her

"And I still wanted to be a teacher!'

The small investor is no longer the naive investor

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) - Now that the stock market averages are at new highs, Wall Street's brokers are concerned about their ability to attract ordinary or small investors into the marketplace.

It used to be easier to do, because it was widely believed that the stock market was the American way to wealth, and that by owning shares in a listed company you were in effect casting your vote for financial democracy

The New York Stock Exchange even promoted the idea of owning a piece of America, and for a while the shareholder population soared, because as they were saying then, the market is the elevator to a new level of prosperity.

But small investors today are not as naive as they were 20 years ago, one reason being that so many of them lost their shirts, only later realizing that their entrance into the market was a signal for the professionals to sell.

Another factor in the intellectual growth of small investors was the growth of impartial research, including the finding that you just can't trade in and out of the market and expect to make anyone but your broker rich.

Studies have shown that long-term. inactive investors do as well as or better than traders seeking to outguess the market. As one adviser, The Patient Investor, says: "The more decisions ... the greater the chance of error.

The realization was enhanced by the so-called institutionalization of the marketplace, which means that most trading is not by individuals in competition with each other but by the likes of trusts, and pension and mutual

The small investor's education was abetted by other factors too, including the realization that his neighbor who put money into a house, for example, was becoming a lot better off financially — with no professional advice at all.

Later, another breed of small investors learned that good money could be made in their own backyards, simply by investing in small, start-up companies run by local people with whom they had a direct relationship.

And, as banks became deregulated, their profliferation of products - most of them less risky than stocks — offered still more competition to the stock market, while further educating small

MONT BELVIEU, Texas (AP) - Attorneys for this refinery town filed a lawsuit seeking to enjoin industries from storing hydrocarbons in the town's salt dome and to collect $125 million in damages.

Houston attorney Lee Gill said Wednesday he will attempt to combine the latest lawsuit with one concerning a 1980 gas leak so he can get an early trial on the latest matter

Mont Belvieu, a Chambers County community of about 1,700 residents, is perched atop a salt dome and about a dozen oil companies store gases used in petrochemical production underneath the town.

City officials Monday authorized attorneys to sue and take whatever other action is "necessary to protect the public interests of its citizens."

The council approved suit seeking at least $25 million in actual damages and $100 in punitive

Mediation group's changing dream leaves building

By PRESTON LERNER Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORESTBURG, Texas (AP) -They began arriving in 1979, a polite though slightly distant group with mysterious plans to transform a wooded area near Forestburg into the Dallas-Fort Worth Capital of The Age of Enlightenment.

While they labored, the rumor mill circulated tales of people zooming through the air and of visitors who never returned Apprehensive townspeople wondered exactly what was being built: A flying saucer factory? A cultist castle? Something even stranger?

The truth proved to be considerably less fantastic. Members of the group were practioners not of devil worship but of transcendental meditation. Their purpose was to erect a building to house large weekend seminars.

An improbably immense structure adorned with 14 golden domes now stands five miles south of the tiny town of Forestburg as a testament to their perseverence despite a lack of both money and community support.

But perseverence, apparently, isn't enough to preserve the outpost. A combination of dwindling local interest and changing international policy has caused leaders to consider 'alternate uses' for the building.

Put more bluntly, the Dallas-Fort Worth Capital of The Age of Englightenment is for sale. For a cool $2.8 million, you can become the sultan of Montague

The building appears suddenly at the crest of a distant hill like an apparition, which logic tells you it must be.

Surely, you think, a structure this massive couldn't have been erected outside Forestburg, as close to nowhere as you can get Montague County is northwest of Tarrant County on the Oklahoma border.

And yet, there it is - all 55,000 square feet enclosed by white stucco walls, with 108 rooms arranged in three wings and 14 semispherical domes that glow golden in the sun.

Decatur real estate broker Renee C. Thrasher, who holds the listing to the property, calls it the Montague County Taj Majal — a description that alludes to the grandiose dimensions and Eastern motif of the building.

"It's attractive in the sense that it attracts people," said Alan Colby, who serves as caretaker of the building with his wife, Lorrie. "That's really, in a sense, what it's supposed to do - to attract people's curiosity."

That it did. Nothing like the mansion ever had been built in the Forestburg vicinity. And nothing like transcendental meditation ever had been taught in the area. The combined result was astonishment tinged with overtones of resentment.

Although some of the resentment lingers - Forestburg resident Jewell Dill, for instance, said she will be happy to see the "cult" leave the area - most people have become reconciled to the local presence.

The mansion has been assimilated into the community at least, to the extent that a castle can becme part of a small Texas town. Passers-by, though, still view it from afar as a mirage.

A deeply rutted road takes visitors on a mile-long trip to the mansion. The building grows less impressive and more tired-looking as you approach, as if it has grown forlorn

Inside, the building remains a work-in-progress. It's not clear, at first glance, whether the Age of Enlightenment already has passed

Ceilings have yet to be completed. The spiral staircase dominating the lobby is unfinished. Only 34 of the rooms are completed. Hundreds of solar panels sit outside, waiting to be installed. The strongest impression left by the building is one of emptiness. The World Plan Executive Council, which serves as a non-profit umbrella organization for most transcendental secluded areas outside Houston, Kansas City, Mo., and St. Louis after deciding that the remaining financing should come from local donations

Norin Isquith, assistant to the trustees of the council, said the sale of all the capitals is being considered because the focus of transcendental meditation leaders has shifted from building outposts to establishing two large communities in Fairfield, Iowa, and Washington D.C.

The goal, he explained, is to achieve world peace - the most ambitious of the many ends that transcendental meditation is

Transcendental meditation is a technique popularized about 25 years ago by Maharishi Mahesh

Yogi of India. Practitioners spend 15 or 20 minutes a day deep in a meditative state said to be more restful than the deepest portion of sleep.

The Colbys, like the million or so other practitioners, laud it as a way to improve every aspect of the quality of life - clearing the mind, reducing stress, increasing mental efficiency and a host of other benefits.

"Our job, in a sense, is to allow people to be more wide-awake and to achieve their true potential," Alan Colby said. "Dullness is what we're out to eradicate." An advanced technique, known as the TM-Sidhi Programme, is supposed to produce even greater powers, among them the ability to levitate. And when enough Sidhis get together in one place — the square root of 1 percent of the world population, a figure calculated to be 7,000 people — the resulting "waves of coherence" are said to be a force for world peace. This theory is responsible for the likely closing of the capitals. "What is tragic is not that this big building is being closed but that the potential of the whole area is not being used," Colby said.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - The bright spot for agricultural financial problems in agriculture will likely continue but money for farm loans is generally in good supply, according to a survey released by the American Bankers Association

The report was released in Dallas at the ABA's National Agricultural Bankers' Conference and contained in the ABA Bankers News Weekly

The ABA sent its survey to 2,600 agricultural banks and more than 1.100 bankers responded. An agricultural bank was defined as one with at least 25 percent of its loans in agriculture. The banks represent about 28 percent of the total number of insured commercial banks ABA writer William Herr described loan availability as a bankers.

Almost 60 percent of all the respondents indicated that loan funds exceeded demand.

"Adequate funds availability was also indicated by average loan-to-deposit ratios that averaged lower than in other recent years." Herr wrote. "In mid-1985, the average loan-deposit ratio was 60 percent, about two percentage points below that reported in mid-1984.
