Hijacked plane's passengers in secret place

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite militia leader Nabih Berri announced today that all hostages aboard a hijacked TWA jet have been removed from the plane and taken to an undisclosed location in Beirut. There were believed to be about 30 Americans still held hostage in their fourth day of Berri said the action was taken for security reasons because of what he called a "possible Israeli landing" at Beirut airport. There was no independent confirmation the passengers had been taken off the plane, but Berri has been involved in the negotiations for their release and his Shiite Amal militia is the strongest armed force at Beirut

In Washington, a State Department official said the United States has "no reason to doubt" Berri's

The hostages were those remaining from the 145 passengers and eight crewmembers, mostly Americans, aboard the TWA flight 847 that was hijacked by Arabs Friday morning en route from Athens to Rome. The hijackers' main demand to release the hostages was that Israel free more than 700 Shiite Moslem prisoners it holds.

government, announced the hostage transfer at a Beirut news conference at his sandbagged house in mostly Moslem west Beirut. He spoke in both English and Arabic and would not disclose the secret hideout of the hostages except to indicate it was in

"I have personally ordered their evacuation because we were afraid of an operation or a battle in which all of them would have been killed," the Shiite

The evacuation was carried out after midnight when there were fears of a possible rescue operation by foreign troops, he said. Berri's Amal militiamen had cleared newsmen and photographers from the airport and switched off the lights, plunging the area into darkness.

He said Amal guards were still protecting the the hostages "somewhere in Beirut." When asked if the hostages were all together, Berri replied, "I think President Reagan's national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, spoke with Berri by telephone today, according to sources close to Berri. The sources, who asked for anonymity, said McFarlane urged redoubled efforts to secure the safe release of the hostages.

Reagan adminstration policy has been not to negotiate with terrorists. "We do not give in to demands. We do not encourage other nations to do this," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Bassam Tleiss, a representative of Berri's militia, said there were 32 passengers and three crew members on the plane. He denied the State Department's claim that six to 10 American passengers were removed from the plane during an earlier stop at Beirut, saying, "This is a false report." The State Department had said it did not know the passengers' fate.

In Jerusalem, an Israeli official said today the government will consider any U.S. request for the release of more than 700 Moslem prisoners but wants any such demand made public.

He added that Israel "will not volunteer to release the prisoners" even though the government had planned to release the Shiite prisoners in the near future anyway

In Washington, a State Department spokesman said he had no information about the reported Israeli demand.

Berri said he was continuing to negotiate through the Red Cross for release of the Lebanese Shiites being held by Israel

Berri said he also had talked with the U.S., French and Spanish ambassadors and U.N. representatives. He stressed negotiations could be lengthy

Two hijackers commandeered TWA Flight 847 on Friday morning with 153 passengers and crew, mostly Americans. The hijackers have forced the plane to land in Beirut three times, interspersed with two trips to Algeria. Twelve to 15 additional gunmen joined the hijackers on the early stops in

A total of 108 hostages have been released in groups in Beirut and Algieria. The terrorists shot dead an American, identified by senior flight attendant Uli Derickson as a U.S. Marine. She said also told reporters in New York that the gunmen removed to an unknown location seven passengers with "Jewish-sounding names."

Twenty-nine Americans on the plane signed a petition Sunday night asking President Reagan to

Dog terrorizes local youngsters

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

Shepherd "guard dog" that "terrorized" youths at Central Fisher, 15, of 738 Brunow and Dave Park Sunday night has been impounded at the Pampa Animal Shelter for observation after biting an 8-year-old boy

The boy, Christopher Allen of 1221 Charles, was treated and released from Coronado Community Hospital Sunday night after the dog bit him in the arm.

Animal Control Officer Dave Smith said that the dog is one of two German Shepherds owned by William Ma of 130 W. Georgia. According to Smith, the dog's spree began Sunday night when he apparently broke from the chain that keeps him in the front yard of the Ma residence. Smith said the chain is "fairly strong," but apparently are not strong enough to restrain the Shepherd which he described as a "guard dog.

Ma was not at home during the

Smith said the dog started chasing Brig Martinez of 1032 Neel Road, who was riding his bicycle through the neighborhood, and knocked the youth off his bike

"I tried to outrun the dog, but my bike chain broke," Martinez said this morning, adding that he tried to throw things at the dog to get him away

Then the dog took off after two boys (Allen and another youth) who were walking through the park, and encircled the boys,'

Smith said. "Two other boys were driving by on their bikes and told

An 85-90 pound German the boys to get away from the dog." Smith added that the boys, Mike Snider, 12, of 819 Brunow, got off their bikes and threw things at the dog to keep him away from the younger boys.

'They stayed around and kept him off the boys," Smith said. "I think they were the ones who called the police.

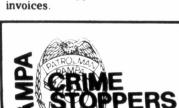

When a police car arrived at the scene, the dog "went after the Smith said. "The boys abandoned their bikes and got on top of the police car. After a while the dog decided he couldn't get to the boys, and the boys got into the patrol car

Smith said the Sunday incident was not the first time people reported trouble with the dog. He said he has had four reports of the dog terrorizing people.

The dog is one of two German Shepherds which are chained in the terraced front yard of the Ma residence.

"It is a real placid dog, who just follows the lead of the bad one," he said. "But with dogs of that type (the one that chased the youths), you have to be extremely aggressive, and be very commanding.

'As far as my job is concerned, I'll issue two complaints against the owner: allowing a dog to run at large and failure to show rabies identification," Smith said.

Governor completes survey of 1985 Legislature's work

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Mark White has completed his survey of the 1985 Legislature's work, signing into law a no-new-tax $37.2 billion state budget, a mandatory seat belt law, and higher tuition for state colleges.

placed ourselves in an enviable position for the future," White said Sunday. After reviewing more than 1,000 bills passed by the 140-day regular legislative session, White vetoed approximately 50 bills and let about 100 most critical human needs in this budget, we have bills become law without his signature. The vetoes included $9.8 million in the general appropriations bill because he said the items did not represent "good public spending policy.

He said he signed the seat belt law "reluctantly" after considering whether it would infringe on individual freedoms. White said in his approval of the budget that "we have laid paths toward the more diverse and dynamic economy which we will need as we work to become less reliant on the oil and gas industry as the central element of our economy The 1986-87 budget includes $26.3 billion from general revenue, a 12.5 percent increase over the current general revenue appropriation. Public school and highway financing increased as decreed by the 1984 special session.

The state prison system and mental health and mental retardation institutions also got extra money to comply with federal court orders. Needy children on welfare got a $4 a month raise and state employees were given a 3 percent a year pay hike, but lost two state holidays.

The appropriations bill leaves about $70 million to begin funding a package of indigent health care Sunday midnight was the deadline for White to act on bills and resolutions, or they would go into effect without his signature. The governor's vetoes on specific items of the appropriations bill included grants from the Criminal Justice Division to the Department of Public Safety, Commission on Jail Standards, Department of Corrections, Prosecutors Council and Supreme Court

The governor's office said Sunday that in the past the Criminal Justice Division, which is part of the governor's office, has received a lump sum to dispense to law enforcement and allied agencies. But this session, legislators specified how the money would be spent.

"The specific itemization of these funds will eopardize several currently funded criminal justice projects, restrict the funding of new projects and severely limit Texas' ability to provide matching funds to receive federal funds available under the Federal Justice Assistance Act of 1984," he said in his veto message

The governor's office said the agencies involved will still get money — but at the discretion of the White said he vetoed $202,000 to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation because that was the only state agency where the equivalent of a full-time salary is appropriated for a part-time citizen board.

'My veto of this item is not a reflection on the members of the Highway Commission. I simply am opposed to this appropriation as a matter of policy," White said.

The commission members will be repaid for the actual cost of their travel, meals and lodging while on state business.

A $325,000 appropriation to Stephen F. Austin State University for an anticipated claim against the state also was vetoed. "There are currently no monetary claims to be paid and this contigency may not be necessary," White said.

White said he signed the selt belt law after "a great deal of research and review. There are strong arguments to be made on both sides of this issue. I am reluctant to sign any legislation that would infringe on individual freedom," he said. "That reluctance, however, dissipates when the legislation serves the greater purpose of the public safety of all Texans," White He said there are estimates that the law, which requires all front seat occupants of cars and pickups to wear lap seat belts, would save 1,071 lives annually and prevent 28,800 injuries.

The law is effective Sept. 1, with fines of $25 to $50 to begin on Dec. 1 for violators.

The state college tuition increase bill would triple tuition rates for resident students this fall, from $4 a semester hour to $12. Another $4 would be added next year. Tuition for out-of-state students also would be tripled, from $40 per semester hour to $120. The $285 million revenue from the bill was necessary to finance the state

'This session we had the option of not raising tuition, which would have forced us to cut back in programs and services higher education anad consequently diminish the value of degrees from Texas institutions, or we could have increased tuition," White said. "We chose the latter, but in doing so insisted that money be set aside for those students who might not be able to otherwise afford the cost of tuition.

In 1984, U.S. consumers bought the equivalent of 1.05 billion 288-ounce cases of regular Coke benefiting its sales. Roger Enrico, president of Pepsi-Cola USA, the domestic unit of Purchase, N.Y.-based PepsiCo Inc., said earlier this month: "Our actual case volume was up 14 percent in May compared with the previous May. That's the largest one-month gain in the 87-year history of our company.

In the final analysis, however, the Coke reformulation will not have a great deal of impact, Zurkuhlen predicted.

"I think it's going to turn out to be a non-event," he said. But changing the Coke formula has prompted 1,500 calls a day to Coca-Cola

'The majority of them are negative," Coca-Cola's Coleman said. "Oh sure, we're concerned about it.'

Munitions plant explodes, no injuries are reported

ALVARADO, Texas (AP) - A munitions plant east of here blew up shortly before midnight, sending a fireball into the sky, shattering windows for miles and spewing chunks of concrete and light explosive charges for hundreds of yards.

The Goex ammunitions plant, which makes explosives for both domestic and military use, was shut down at the time of the 11:50 p.m. blast, and no one was injured, Johnson County Sheriff Eddy Boggs said.

Residents of nearby towns said they felt the explosion and could see the fire from the blast, in a secluded area about four miles east of Alvarado on Farm Road 1807.

Alvarado is 25 miles south of Fort Worth on Interstate 35.

Boggs said the Goex plant, a satellite of a larger operation at nearby Cleburne, made Class A explosives, including linear explosives, shaped charges, hand grenade fuses, and plastic

Firefighters from the nearby communities of Alvarado, Venus, Grandview, Keene, Midlothian and Lillian were on the scene within minutes and had the grass fires that sprang up under control in less than an hour, authorities said.

But because of recurring explosions, firefighters were kept back from the ammunitions plant itself. Roads to the plant were blocked off, and newsmen weren't allowed within four miles.

"We're just going to let the fire burn itself out and the explosions run their course," Boggs said about 21/2 hours after the blast.

Projected oil, natural gas prices in 1990s reduced

The projected price of oil in the next decade has dropped by 35 percent while natural gas is expected to be 53 percent less costly than predicted only three years ago, according to the survey.

Current expectations are that 10 years from now a barrel of oil will cost $38.56 and natural gas will be priced at $4.26 per thousand cubic

The society's 1982 survey showed that the petroleum industry anticipated that by 1992 oil would be $58.87 a barrel and natural gas would cost $8.98 per thousand cubic

This year the group surveyed 126 oil and gas producers, bankers, financial advisers and consulting engineers to determine the outlook for the movement of petroleum prices over the next 10 years, said Dr. L.K. Nemeth, a society member and chairman of J.R. Butler and Co., a Houston-based oil and gas consulting company.

"We began the survey to try to get some consensus on pricing and the future direction of pricing," Nemeth said. "Reservoir engineers in particular were looking for some common ground at a time when the whole pricing scheme was completely out of AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Mark White, in stamping 'veto' on about 50 bills, has voided two gambling measures passed by the Legislature because he said they would be bad public policy.

Governor vetoes 50

One of the measures vetoed Sunday by the governor would allow the manufacture of slot machines and other gambling machines in Texas, provided they would be offered for sale outside the state.

White said such legislation, by Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas, "would be bad public policy in our state where the use of such machines is illegal.

A second measure, by Rep. Brad Messer, D-Belton, would have changed the legal definition of "bet" when it was an offer of merchandise worth more than $25 made by the operator of a "bona fide carnival contest. "This bill is vague and would seriously hamper the efforts of law enforcement officials to prosecute those persons who run dishonest, weighted or other illegal gambling operations," said White.

would have increased the state's significant salary increase for a responsibility to help defend state employees involved in court fights concerning their jobs.

The measure, by Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, would have required the state to pay judgments unless a court found that the employee acted with "This would virtually indemnify nearly all acts or omissions of an employee, even those committed in bad faith, and would broaden the accepted criteria for determining the state's liability," White said.

The governor said he liked the general purpose of the bill but said

"it needs to be more carefully restricted in coverage to provide financial assistance to only those state employees who have been wrongly or falsely accused of crimes in conjunction with their official duties.

Other bills vetoed by White would have:

 Permitted private club owners and various organizations to sell alcoholic beverages in public areas of dry counties. "There is no provision for a local option vote by the citizens affected by this measure to express their opposition or support for further cessibility of intoxicating liquor in their communities," White said.

- Provided an emergency appropriation to pay the National Guard Armory Board's utilities for June through August of this year. The Senate failed to take a record vote on the bill, making its effective date Aug. 26, which is too late. Although the governor vetoed the bill, he granted the Armory Board $156,000 from his emergency funds to pay utilities.

- Created the post of mental White also vetoed a bill that health administrator at a probate court in Harris County. The Harris County commissioners court asked for the veto, saying it was preferential treatment for one

- Expanded the jurisdiction of the Williamson County Court-at-Law. The bill was opposed as unnecessary by the Williamson County commissioners court, the county judge, and the county court-at-law judge who would be affected.

 Allowed a naturalized citizen to obtain a voter's registration application without providing the court of naturalization or its location. The governor said this information is necessary to insure validity of the application.

 A bill to allow proceeds from a campus tax at a junior college branch to be used to purchase real estate and finance construction. White said this measure, originally intended to apply only to Wharton Junior College, would create another form of taxation and interfere with the policy considerations of the Select Committee on Higher Education.

 A measure to allow the judge of a probate court to appoint a surrogate judge. White said this was an unconstitutional delegation of the powers of the judiciary to an individual

- A bill that would require the Board of Pardons and Paroles to set a tentative parole release date for inmates shortly after arriving in the state prison system. White said the bill would establish a procedure which could be interpreted to require the board to release prisoners earlier than might be prudent.

 A bill that would require school crosswalks to be of yellow paint. White said current law says the cross walks will be in white paint in accordance with state and federal safety standards.

 A bill requiring signs on motor-fuel pumps that dispense gasoline-alcohol mixtures to say whether the fuel contained ethyl or methyl alcohol. White said this was excessive regulation and needless bureaucracy

Thoughts on Father's Day

Although Father's Day for this year will be a thing of the past by the time you are reading this, I thought I might share some of my feelings on that one day of the year set aside to honor fathers. Although this column appears in the Monday edition of The Pampa

News, I usually write it on Sundays when I am at the office, after doing numerous other chores which must be undertaken on that day. As I was tinkering with equipment and cleaning out the newsroom's computers Sunday I reflected upon the joys and responsibilities of being a father

Having children ranging in age from 31 down to that wonderul age of being almost 2, I feel a wide range of emotions - those of apparently having been successful in imparting ideals and knowledge, along with some failures, in those who are now adults and also the daily challenges presented by those who are younger and still in the formative age

To me, every day is "Father's Day." There is the pleasure of having one of the boys still at home asking me to help with some project, or of the "little guy" climbing up into my lap and resting his head upon my shoulder There is a pleasure in showing one of the boys how to do something. whether it be helping the high school senior work on his car, the middle schooler repair his bicycle or putting back together a toy the toddler has mangled. While adjusting the laserphoto machine Sunday - without very much success — I also reflected upon my relationship with the each of these boys. One is my stepson, one is my adopted son and one is my own. Unless I stop to think about it, there is no realization of these facts - they are all my boys. I had always wondered if a person could love a child which was not his or her own, about what the relationship would be. Now I know that the relationship and the love comes about because of the feelings of those involved. Children do not have to be your own for you to love and cherish them.

I love my adopted son as much as I have loved each of my own children. The feeling is also the same for my stepson. There is a special pride and joy felt in the accomplishments of each, although many times I have overlooked telling them of my feelings

Over the years I have found that being a father is difficult. It has been especially so after having raised two children to adulthood, then spending several years without children around before undertaking the joys of a second family.

There are times when I would rather rest or do something else, but the boys want my time and attention. I try to give each of them time, but deep in my heart I know that I should be spending more time with

In a way this column is for each of my five children — each an individual — all of them sharing my love. I may not tell them of that love as often as I should, but I hope that I show it as we go about our I do not have the opportunity to show my love like I would prefer to do to the two who are grown and on their own. Now, I know the feelings of my parents when I left home as a teen-ager and they didn't hear from me as often as they should have, especially while I was in the Army when in their minds I was still a child Yes, being a father is an awesome responsibility, but for me it is Personally, I'm glad I have had the opportunity of a second family.

Sodomy case appeal to be argued

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Both supporters and opponents of a Texas law against sodomy say that efforts to fight the mysterious killer called AIDS will be jeopardized unless their side wins an appeal argued today.

The full 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals was scheduled to hear arguments in an appeal of U.S. District Judge Jerry Buchmeyer's 1982 decision that the law unconstitutionally banned certain homosexual behavior

"The sobering reality of the situation in New Orleans Monday is that, if indeed, the appellate court should overturn Buchmeyer, 700,000 lesbian and gay men will again be classified as criminals in Texas." homosexual activist Don Baker said last week.

Baker first challenged the law as discriminatory and unconstitutional.

His lawyer, Jim Barber, said that because of "hysteria" about acquired immune deficiency syndrome, he has submitted affidavits from physicians that reinstating the law would threaten efforts to combat AIDS

The appeal filed by Dallas Doctors Against AIDS and Potter County District Attorney Danny Hill of Amarillo contends that the law is needed to control AIDS.

Homosexual men are one of the groups most at risk for the disorder, which breaks down the immune system which protects people from disease.

Barber said that although the AIDS issue was not brought up in 1981 trial of the suit, it is now the biggest question

Hill and the Dallas doctors' group appealed after Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox and Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade, the original defendants, refused to do so.

On Sept. 30, 1982, Buchmeyer declared the law against homosexual behavior unconstitutional because it

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Reforms in trade starts at home

The aftermath of the economic summit in Europe may indicate that the public relations fiasco of Bitburg may, incredibly enough, have been almost a blessing in Disastrous as the fallout was for the administration it may have diverted attention from just how little was accomplished at the economic summit.

At the meeting, you may remember, the summiteers were unable even to agree on when and where to get toger again to have yet another media event

Now the Reagan administration is threatening that if France continues to block a new round of international trade talks, the U.S. government may be prepared to start subsidizing U.S. farm exports.

Some result for a conference that U.S. spokesmen beforehand claimed was designed to lead the way out of the protectionist bog in which too many of the world's countries find themselves mired.

In other words, it's the old, childish tit-for-tat game that so often develops when economic decisions are made by political means. If you guys are going to keep abusing your country's taxpayers by subsidizing special interests we'll abuse the taxpayers in our country, too.

That'll show you, you dirty rat. Perhaps it is time to step back from the childishness and reflect how good economic ideas actually gain currency in the world.

The breathless reporting and media hype surrounding these staged meetings among heads of state reinforce an unfortunate illusion - that economic reform is the result of somber multilateral negotiations. In the real world, it hardly ever works that way. Good ideas are more often adopted unilaterally and then spread through a combination of self-interest and example. The multilateral accords usually ratify policies already in place - policies that have gained currency through a much more subtle and free-flowing process of to local conditions. All this suggests that if the United States really wants to lead the world away from protectionism, its best policy would be unilaterally to lower our own trade barriers and government blocks to exporting.

innovation, copying and adapting what works elsewhere

The government, for example, has an embargo on export of Alaskan oil and logs from federal lands in the Wst - goods for which there is a lively potential market in Japan. If that embargo were lifted, the trade deficit with Japan would probably be cut in half within a year.

Because the administration is trapped in the illusion that reform happens as the result of meetings, and that barriers can be dropped only if everybody agrees to do it equally and at the same time - a virtually impossible precondition - those barriers remain in place. And the U.S. economy is a little poorer for them.

T. Boone not a hostile raider

BY CHARLES VAN EATON

As one who writes a regular column on economic issues I'm naturally interested in reading others who do the same. One such individual whose work I follow closely is Robert J. Samuelson, who writes for Newsweek and The Washington Post. More often than not I find myself in complete agreement with what Samuelson has to say. In my judgment one of his better pieces is one he recently published in praise of a gentleman who wears the marvelous Texas name of T. Boone Pickens.

T. Boone Pickens is the principal stockholder and Chief Executive Officer of Mesa Petroleum Company of Amarillo, Texas. Several times over the past few years Mr. Pickens has put together groups of investors for the purpose of raising funds to buy shares of common stock in other companies. A few months ago it was the Phillips Petroleum Company. Most recently it has been Unocal (the Union Oil Company of California). In so doing, Mr. Pickens has been accused of being a corporate "raider" trying to accomplish a 'hostile' 'take-over financed by "junk" bonds.

Unocal is for sale. In fact every company in America whose voting shares are traded on the stock exchanges is for sale everyday.

The market value of each share of such stock at any given moment of time reflects the market's perception of the present and future income-earning capacity of that particular corporation. Many people are content to hold on to their stocks so long as they receive regular dividends and the dividends, when measured as a percentage return on the dollar value of their original purchase price, are at least equal to what their money could earn in some other asset. In addition, of course, shareholders enjoy seeing the market value of their shares increase because it means that, if and when they choose to convert their stock into cash by selling it, they can obtain a stock of principal greater than the sum initially invested in addition to all the dividend income they have received.

However satisfactory the stream of dividends received on stock may be judged to be, there is always some principal price which, if offered, would induce a shareholder to convert his shares into cash and receive a capital gain. The trick then, if you want to buy, say, Unocal, is to offer Unocal shareholders a price for their stock sufficient to induce them to accept your money and give you the stock.

That's exactly what T. Boone Pickens and his associates did. In February Mr. Pickens' group bought (the key word is "bought" - no shareholder was forced to sell) 7.9 percent of Unocal's outstanding shares. By late March, through additional open-market purchases, Pickens' stake had risen to 23.7 million shares, 13.6 percent of those outstanding. At that time Mr. Pickens announced that his group was prepared to offer $54 a share on the way to acquisition of over 50 percent of Unocal. This offer was above the market price of Unocal stock at the time. Obviously any shareholder who reasoned that the chance to sell at $54 was an attractive offer holding the promise of a substantial capital gain was free to sell. If, on the other hand, a shareholder judged that by not selling at that time, Mr. Pickens would be forced to reason with a higher offer, the shareholder could keep his stock. Clearly the issue of whether to sell or not sell, buy or not buy, is purely a market decision between owners of stocks and buyers of stocks. Force never really enters the picture.

Yet Mr. Pickens move to acquire Unocal stock was labeled a "hostile takeover." Hostile to whom? Certainly not to shareholders. As far as I'm concerned, anyone who wants to offer me a higher price for my stocks isn't being hostile toward me. In fact they're being downright

Mr. Pickens' offer was viewed as hostile by Unocal's top management. Unocal's Chairman, Mr. Fred Hartley, has been reported to have argued that the actions of Mr. Pickens and others, such as Carl Ichan and Saul Steinberg, constitute to manage their business or long-term goals.

T. Boone Pickens (and Carl Ichan, et. al.) is not "attacking corporations, he's merely offering the opportunity to decide whether or not they want to keep their financial assets tied-up in one form as opposed to another. If that's "attacking" or "raiding", then a handshake is assault and battery. That point cannot be over-emphasized. The only people who are threatened by the actions of Mr. Pickens and others are those who are comfortably esconced in the executive suites. The only true owners of corporations are those who own stock. They are not threatened by anyone who makes an arms-length offer to buy their shares.

But what would motivate anyone to assume the risk of heavy debt to buy controlling interest in a company such as Unocal? Samuelson correctly notes why: the current structure of many corporations is such that their true market value and, therefore, their social wealth-generating capacity - is greater when they are restructured and sub-divided into smaller and more market-specific operating units. Current management is often slow to engage in the type of divestiture and reorganization needed. Entrepreneurs like T. Boone Pickens are not.

What many corporate chiefs have done is incur massive debt (Unocal's management has quadrupled shareholders' debt to $5.3 billion) to resist the likes of Pickens. What this amounts to is theft from Unocal's real owners (its shareholders) to deny them the right to sell their property to whomever they please.

Samuelson notes that the "sins of Pickens is to discomfort the barons of business who are now running to Washington for protection." To grant their requests would be to violate the right of those who own valid property to engage in open, non-coercive transactions so that a few entrenched executives can keep their favored positions.

The elderly should beware

A crime is a crime, I suppose. Yet, however the law categorizes them, to me the most heinous crimes are against the most helpless - infants, elderly and animals.

Old can be agony. To be old and suddenly, through no fault of your own, to be broke and homeless is more than most of us dare to think about.

We have to. The number of Americans over 65 has doubled in 30 years Americans over 65 now outnumber teen-agers and Americans over 85 are the fastest-growing segment of our society

And the gerontological explosion is creating its own problems.

The No. 1 of those problems is where do they go when house is too much to keep and grass is too

The retirement home has been a logical response and in most instances a worthy one. I'm thinking of one in the Chicago area which is near luxurious, on a firm financial and actuarial

You are familiar with what are called "life-care communities." Three hundred such have been built in the last 10 years.

An elderly person or couple can surrender assets and-or savings and be cared for for life. Ninety-thousand elderly Americans live in such

'life-care communities.'' Some are excellent But Money magazine recently identified 40 of these continuous care communities which have gone bankrupt or almost

Many life-care community operators - some with the best of intentions - have miscalculated

In the worst instances, the operators are con men who never had any intention of delivering the services they promised And some, Money investigators discovered, are 'con men in clerical collars.

In 1981 the United Methodist Church was sued by the residents of seven of its church-sponsored facilities which failed. The church conceded it had let its name be used by "developers." So how can When you sell the house and deliver that money plus your savings to some such facility, is there not some way you can know for sure that you will be properly cared for from now on? Not really.

Insurance companies are presently experimenting with policies that could be used to ensure the holder of a life-care contract. That way the insurer would assume the risk and police the facilities' finances

Bills are pending in several states which will minimize risk to the tenant.

The American Association of Homes for the Aging is trying to police the industry

But presently your best bet is to insist that the facility provide you with a copy of the report of a responsible actuary. If you are refused such a report, look elsewhere.

Slicing the political pie not easy job

By Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - An Arizona Republican describes it as "probably one of the most traumatic things I ever went through." An Ohio Democrat calls it "the political equivalent of genetic engineering.'

They're both talking about the process of adjusting the boundaries of congressional and state legislature districts to conform with the population shifts measured by the census.

Reapportionment is of crucial importance to legislators because the composition of their districts can make the difference between victory and defeat in future elections. "There are two things that excite the (state) Senate — reapportionment and horse

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Chicken-and-egg query hatches a controversy

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem, but you seem to have one. The answer you gave to "I Am Serious," who asked, "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" was ridiculous!

Didn't you learn anything in school? I knew the answer to that 50 years ago while I was still in grade

The facts are: The chicken is a bird, and all birds evolved from the reptile family approximately 100 million years ago. Reptiles had been laying eggs for millions of years before that time, and the chicken evolved from the reptiles.

Of course, the egg you laid in your column when you cited the Bible as your source of information is another matter. Next time you want an answer to a scientific question, consult The Book of Knowledge. Darwin was right. The book you referred to has no answers, only questions. C.G., McPHERSON, KAN

DEAR C.G.: Read on for more letters on the chicken-and-theegg subject:

DEAR ABBY: You cited Genesis 1:20 to support the theory that the chicken came before the egg. Wrong!

Abby, birds did not show up until about 150 million years ago. Eggs have been used as a form of reproduction for a much longer period—even counting the eggs with shells hard enough to survive out of water. The first eggs were laid by reptiles more than 100 million years before the first bird existed.

I'm reminded of the "news" last year, when the Vatican finally decided that Galileo was right about the Earth revolving around the sun. It seems hard to believe that once upon a time people actually thought that the faith would be weakened if anyone thought the Earth was not the center of the universe. It may take another 300 years before we admit that the Earth is 4 billion years old—not 6,000 years.

the chicken evolved from the egg of a bird. The correct answer is: The egg preceded the chicken by several

DEAR ABBY: Reliance on Scriptures as authority for facts is not always valid. Since all forms of life begin as a seed or an egg (even us), it's obvious that the egg had to be the predecessor of what evolved into the chicken.

Each week he spent his 25 cents on candy and gum, but he never really thought much about his savings—until he got his first $10. When he realized what he could get if he saved up his money, he began saving all his allowance.

Every year on his birthday, his allowance was increased 50 cents, so he had 25 cents more he had to save. Also the amount he had to

La Leche League celebrates founding

La Leche League of Pampa is to be among the 3,800 La Leche League (LLL) groups in the United States and 42 other countries celebrating the organization's Second Founding. La Leche League is a mother - to - mother helping network providing information and encouragement to breastfeeding mothers. Currently, 62 percent of new mothers in the U.S.A. breastfeed their babies.

The Second Founding tf La Leche Leage was announced in October 1984 by the 29-year-old organization's international organization's international headquarters in Franklin Park, Ill. An immediate influx of cash was needed. LLL groups all over the world were asked to join together in fund raising projects to support the second founding. Pampa's LLL group participated by sponsoring a "Toy Party" Christmas booth at the Pampa Mall and miscellaneous

In just eight weeks, the LLL groups responded by raising more than $200,000. Raising this amount is a remarkable accomplishment since the membership consists primarily of mothers with young children who were also busy with holiday plans in November and December. The successful fund drive is seen as a tribute to their strong belief in the importance of their organization.

Other Second Founding activities will continue throughout the year as part of the League's commitment to today's breastfeeding mothers and their families. The Pampa group has been serving this community for six years. Monthly meetings are open to all women who are interested in breastfeeding. Nursing babies are welcome to attend along with their mothers.

This month's LLL meeting is set for 10 a.m., Tuesday, at 1209 S. Faulkner. The discussion topic is to be "Baby Arrives: the Family and the Breastfed Baby." For more information, contact Jennifer Hancock, 665-7816 or Judith Loyd at

Tutu urges blacks unite against black rule

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) -Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu, speaking at the commemoration of a 1976 black uprising, urged blacks to halt their in-fighting and unite against white minority rule.

After the Sunday service in the black township of Soweto, police fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse black protesters. A similar clash occurred in New Brighton, a black township near Port Elizabeth.

Tutu, an Anglican biship, has been involved in thus far futile efforts to make peace between feuding black factions and focus the current wave of unrest against apartheid, the legal system of racial seb. egation.

Five million whites deny the vote to more than 22 million blacks in South Africa. More than 370 people, all but two blacks, have been killed in the latest wave of anti-apartheid rioting, which began in August.

Several speakers at Sunday's services condemned South Africa's commando raid into Botswana on Friday in which 12 people were killed. The government said the raid was on guerrilla targets.

Soweto activist Dr. Nthato

Motlana called on Western governments to follow the lead of the United States and recall their ambassadors to South Africa in

One police officer was slightly hurt by a rock and four police vehicles were damaged in a five-minute clash outside Regina Mundi Roman Catholic Church in the vast black township of Soweto, where nationwide riots began on June 16, 1976. Nearly 600 people were killed in the year-long violence that followed.

Most of the 5:000 to 6.000 mourners left the Soweto church peacefully after a memorial service. But about 1,000 blacks, mostly youths, began to march toward several armored vehicles.

Police ordered the crowd to disperse, then fired rubber bullets and tear gas canisters toward the marchers as some in the crowd threw rocks.

Police also tear-gassed rock-throwing black youths leaving a commemoration service in New Brighton, a black township near Port Elizabeth in the riot-torn eastern Cape Province, witnesses said. Witnesses and police said they knew of no injuries.

In Daveyton township east of Johannesburg, a crowd of blacks attacked the home of Mayor Tom Boya with rocks and gasoline bombs, and a guard posted outside shot dead one youth in the group, a police spokesman said.

In Cape Town, about 2,000 people attended services to pray for the downfall of the government. The services were peaceful, but police said a grenade was thrown at the home of a black community councilor near Cape Town. The councilor escaped harm, but police wounded and apprehended one of the alleged assailants.

22-year-old black man, a spokesman said.

City Press, a Johannesburg Sunday paper for blacks, said its research showed only five of the 12 victims of the Botswana raid had links to the African National Congress, the main anti-apartheid guerrilla movement. The paper said none of the victims was involved in armed sabotage.

"Mere words cannot describe our people's anger, horror and disgust," City Press editor Percy Qoboza said in a front-page

Budget, MX, Star Wars on Congress' agenda this week

WASHINGTON (AP) - The fight over the Pentagon's budget moves to the House floor this week with major battles expected over nerve gas, the MX missile and President Reagan's "Star Wars" strategic defense plan.

At the same time, House-Senate negotiators will be trying to work out an agreement to produce a compromise 1986 budget blueprint, although consensus could be several weeks away.

The major floor action will be in the House, where legislators beginning Tuesday will vote on a number of key issues as part of the effort to come up with a bill authorizing Pertagon spending.

The bill on the floor proposes to freeze spending at current levels of about $292 billion, some $10 billion less than the defense bill approved two weeks ago by the Senate.

Whatever passes the Democratic-controlled House will have to be reconciled with the bill from the Republican-run Senate in process similar to the effort to develop a budget package.

inflation for defense spending, but he reluctantly has approved the Senate measure which limits Pentagon increases to next year's expected inflation rate.

A major fight is expected over nerve gas, which the Reagan administration wants to produce after a 16-year U.S. moratorium.

The Senate approved the proposal, but the House has turned it down for the past three years. Nerve gas proponents say the vote will be close this year.

Another dispute centers around the MX. Reagan wanted 48 more of the weapons next year en route to a total deployment of 100 of the weapons, but the Senate cut that to 12 and limited the overall force to 50 of the 10-warhead missiles if they are deployed in vulnerable Minuteman missile silos.

The House bill also proposes buying a dozen MXs in 1986, but would limit total deployment to 40, a cap supported by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the influential chairman of Reagan wanted the program's budget raised from the $1.4 billion this year to $3.7 billion, but the Senate cut it to $2.95 billion. The House proposal would hold spending to $2.5 billion.

Off the floor, the 26 members of the budget conference committee will be trying for a second week to reach agreement on the differing budget packages passed by the two chambers

The Senate Judiciary Committee will meet Tuesday to listen again to William Bradford Reynolds.

Death penalty for military spies may end up in courts

By RICHARD CARELLI

Recently asked what should be done in the Walker spy case in which four men with ties to the Navy are accused of passing military secrets to the Soviet Union, Weinberger said they should receive the death penalty if convicted.

'When asked what I thought should be done if the people were guilty, I said I thought they should be shot, though I suppose hanging is the preferred method.

Weinberger told reporters. The four men - John A. Walker Jr., Michael Walker, Arthur Walker and Jerry A. Whitworth will be prosecuted by the Justice ment under civilian law

Federal law - in section 794 of Title 18 of the United States Code authorizes capital punishment for 'gathering or delivering defense information to aid (a) foreign government." But the statute is widely considered unconstitutional.

Supporters of the death penalty for espionage concede that the law, last amended in 1954, does not include the procedural safeguards mandated for capital punishment laws by the Supreme Court in 1974 and 1976

For military personnel convicted of spying, experts say the Uniform Code of Military Justice and court martial regulations do not authorize the death penalty for peacetime espionage

Weinberger will seek to have the military code amended to allow executions of military personnel in peacetime — and only Congress of hard times on the PGA Tour since winning the 1978 U.S. Open, was scuffling along Sunday, paired with T.C. Chen of Taiwan and hoping that something, anything, might happen.

On the par-four fifth hole, it did - and it was North's ticket to his first victory since Cherry Hills in Denver seven years ago.

North had a final-round 74 over the par-70 South Course at Oakland Hills Country Club. It gave him a four-round 279, the only sub-par score over what vas supposed to be a Monster but what rain had turned into a pussycat for the first three Chen had domesticated the course in astonishing fashion on the first day with a double-eagle, the first in the U.S. Open's 85 years, on No. 2. It gave him a lead he would hold for the first three rounds.

On Sunday, The Monster ate him alive in one equally electrifying instant.

Chen double-hit a sand wedge antis ook a quadruple-bogey-eight

Suddenly North, who had trailed by four strokes, was tied atop the leader board. From then to the end, North, Chen, Canadian Dave Barr, South African Denis Watson and Payne Stewart vied for the lead. "T.C. opened the door for a lot of us at that point," North said. "It was a freaky thing that happens.

We've all done it too many times. T.C. bogeyed the next three holes to lose seven strokes to par in just four holes. But, almost as remarkably, he recovered his cool and regained a share of the lead.

With four holes to go, though, mt belonged only to North and Barr and when the Canadian bogeyed No. 17 with a poor second shot out of the left rough, North was alone in the lead.

"I can't complain. I just played bad, terrible golf," said Chen, who appeared outwardly unflappable whether things were going swimmingly or sinkingly.

Chen's patience runs out

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) -The silent message hovers permanently over the storied South Course at the Oakland Hills Country Club, warning ambitious golfers who might be packing a bit of greed in their golf bags. Be patient.

Don't reach for what is not there. Accept what Oakland Hills offers, or surely The Monster will make you pay a steep price for your avarice.

For three days, slender T.C. Chen, the smiling little pro from Taiwan, dealt deliberately with the course, posting three straight sub-par rounds to lead one of golf's most prestigious tournaments, the U.S. Open.

And then, on the last day, when he decided to challenge Óakland Hills, the price this legendary layout charged him was nothing less than the championship.

Going into Sunday's final round, Chen had a two-stroke lead over Andy North. His birdie at No. 2 following North's bogey on No. 1 had doubled the lead. Now Chen started thinking.

'After No. 4, I had a four-shot lead," he said. "If I make par every hole, maybe two more birdies in the first nine holes, then nobody will catch me. I told my caddie on the front nine I will go for every shot. Then I will have no pressure on the back nine. We can just relax and take off.

The par-four fifth hole at Oakland Hills is a fairly uncomplicated 457 yards, although a new tee has made it somewhat more difficult by putting some traps into play on the right side. Chen had played it in par on each of the Open's first three days. When he went for another par on Sunday, it was beyond reach and, predictably, Oakland Hills made him pay dearly for his indiscretion. After three shots at No. 5, Chen was caught in that right-side rough, looking at bogey. Instead of accepting that fate, he fought it. "I was still trying to get close to the pin," he said. "I thought I still had a chance to make par. It was stupid thinking. Using a sand wedge, Chen mis-hit the ball on his fourth shot. It skipped into the air and, incredibly, Chen's club struck it again. The double hit is an automatic one-stroke penalty. And the problem was compounded when the ball flew off the club to the left, complicating Chen's task even

On the next shot, Chen changed sand wedges but was still trying to chip into the hole. By the time he finally got down, it had taken eight strokes. "Double par," he called it.

The troublesome fifth hole had played reasonably easily throughout Sunday's final round. There were seven birdies, 42 pars, 15 bogeys and one double bogey And then there was Chen. "No. 5," he said, ruefully. "I never played golf like that.

Obviously shaken, Chen posted bogeys on each of the next three holes as he dipped two strokes behind North

A birdie at No. 12 helped Chen regain a share of the lead, but he bogeyed again at No. 14 and at No.

With the championship slipping away, Chen made one more desperate grab at it. Caught in a bunker at No. 18, he reached for a wedge and went for the pin. His shot slipped no more than six inches away from it. The bid was

"Everybody knows I feel bad," Chen said. "I am angry with myself."

Banks leaps 58-11½ to set world record in triple jump

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Willie Banks, the first American in 74 years to hold the world record in the men's triple jump, has found a tough opponent in the California bar examination.

'I know I can pass the exam.' said Banks, who leaped 58 feet, 111/2 inches to claim the record Sunday in the USA-Mobil outdoor national championships

The 29-year-old UCLA Law School grad, who erased the record of 58-81/2 set by Brazil's Joao de Oliveira in the high altitude of Mexico City on Oct. 15, 1975, has failed the exam three times and plans to take it again in February. "I have total confidence in myself," he said. Overcoming challenges is nothing new to Banks, who failed in his first attempt to enter law

His record, which came on his second jump of the night, highlighted the finest triple jump competition in history. Overall, four jumpers cleared 57 feet - the first time that ever has been done

Banks became the first American to set the world standard in the event since Dan Ahearne legally

cleared a modest 50-11 on May 30,

'There have been a lot of exciting times in my life," Banks said. "This is like the greatest moment of my life.

Michael Conley, who earlier had won the long jump for the second year in a row — at a wind-aided 28-0, making him only the sixth to reach that distance in history wound up second in the triple jump at 58-11/4, the third-best performance in history, behind only Banks and de Oliveira. It was the first time a performer had soared 58 feet - and lost

Charles Simpkins finished third at 57-5% and Al Joyner was fourth at 57-31/2. The first four finishers are the top four performers in American history.

Meanwhile, sprinters Kirk Baptiste and Jamaica's Merlene Ottey-Page completed doubles Sunday by winning the men's and women's 200-meter dashes, respectively.

Baptiste, winner of the men's 100 Saturday night, took the 200 in 20.11, just ahead of high school sensation Roy Martin, the runner-up in 20.13. Ottey-Page, winning both women's sprints for the second year in a row, followed her victory in the 100 Saturday night with a 21.93 triumph in the 200. Her time was the fastest in the world this year.

In addition to Banks and Ottey-Page, there were four world-leading performances Sunday night — by Andre Phillips, Henry Marsh, Johnny Gray and Doug Padilla. Phillips improved his hold as the

No. 3 all-time performer in the men's 400-meter intermediate hurdles and handed NCAA champion Danny Harris of Iowa State only his fourth defeat in 30 races — the previous three were to world record-holder Edwin Moses winning in 47.67. Harris was second in 48.65.

Marsh, winning his sixth national title in the men's 3,000-meter steeplechase, was clocked in

Gray zipped past early pacesetter Earl Jones, the Olympic bronze medalist, with about 150 meters remaining in the men's 800 and won in 1:44.01, the fastest automatic clocking in the world in

And Padilla repeated as national champion in the men's 5,000, winning with a personal best of

Thomas KOs Weaver to retain title LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - "I saw him cheering Weaver on, but I couldn't stop and say anything,' said Pinklon Thomas of Larry Holmes' reaction during Thomas' fight against Mike Weaver.

But after Thomas stopped Mike Weaver with a one-punch knockout in the eighth round to retain his World Boxing Council heavyweight title Saturday night, he had something to say to Holmes, the unbeaten International Boxing Federation champion.

"I think I proved to the world who's the real champion," said Thomas, who shares heavyweight title recognition with Holmes and Tony Tubbs, who is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association.

"I want him (Holmes) to get in the ring and prove he's the champion he says he is," the 27-year-old Thomas said. "He's gotta come out and fight a real champion.

Holmes will fight a real champion sometime in September in a bid to tie Rocky Marciano's 49-0 record, but it will be undisputed light heavyweight champion Michael Spinks.

The 35-year-old Holmes signed a contract here Saturday to fight Spinks sometime in September for promoters Don King and Butch Holmes reportedly will get $3 million-plus to fight Spinks in a bid to match the record of Marciano, the only heavyweight champion to retire without having lost.

The last light heavyweight champion to bid for the heavyweight title was Bob Foster, who was knocked in the second round by Joe Frazer in 1970. No holder of the title in the 175-pound class has ever gone on to win the heavyweight championship. King and Lewis said the total purse for both fighters would be between $5 million and $6 million.

Stars clinch playoff spot

By The Associated Press The Baltimore Stars, the

defending United States Football League champions, clinched a third straight playoff berth with a bang and a whimper.

The Stars, who have struggled to a 9-7-1 record after making the USFL championship game in each of the league's first two seasons, assured themselves of another postseason appearance with a 41-10 victory over Orlando Saturday night.

Stars Coach Jim Mora said it's still too early to look two weeks ahead to the playoffs.

"The approach we are taking right now is that we want to win our last game," Mora said of next Sunday's game at home against Tampa Bay.

Memphis and Tampa Bay also clinched playoff spots Saturday, joining Baltimore, Birmingham, New Jersey, Oakland and Denver. Houston could clinch the last berth tonight with a victory at home against San Antonio.

Anchorage may be site for 1992 Winter Olympic Games

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The U.S. Olympic Committee's endorsement of Anchorage, Alaska, to be the host for the 1992 Winter Games is no guarantee the International Olympic Committee will concur.

But even if the 1992 bid is rejected, Anchorage "will be in a fine position" to bid for future Winter Games, said USOC president Robert Helmick.

The USOC, which ended three days of meetings on Sunday, picked Anchorage over Lake Placid, N.Y.; Salt Lake City, Utah; and Reno-Lake Tahoe, Nev., as the American city that will bid for the 1992 games.

The Olympics normally are alternated among continents, which might work against Anchorage because the 1988 Winter Games are scheduled for Calgary, Canada But Helmick Saturday's vote, "We're serious about supporting this bid. You never can tell what's going to Every bid is a serious bid. Realistically, the chances are very good that Anchorage will ultimately get the Games (if not in 1992). These people are going to do it. They convinced us the're going to go out and get it done," Helmick

The selection by the USOC followed a series of presentations by Anchorage and the three other cities. Helmick said Anchorage won on the first ballot. He wouldn't divulge the vote totals or the order of finish, but said that Anchorage "was more than several votes ahead of the next city.'

The IOC will make its selection in October 1986.

Rich Mystrom, chairman of the Anchorage Organizing Committee, said the biggest factor working against Anchorage was a 'misperception of Alaska as too dark, too cold and too far away," mistaken notions both he and Helmick felt were wiped away by the city's impressive video presentation.

American cities The presentations were part of the USOC's three-day executive board meetings held here in conjunction with the annual USA-Mobil outdoor track and field championships.

During Sunday's meeting, the USOC passed unanimously a resolution outlawing the practice of 'blood doping' but heard disagreement on its proposal for random drug testing at Olympic Training Centers.

The USOC appointed a committee last fall to look into a drug control program and sent a memorandum to the national governing bodies of each Olympic sport, asking for voluntary compliance. George D. Miller, the USOC secretary general, reported that 20 of the 38 NGBs had approved the memorandum.

There was no disagreement on conducting drug tests at the time of various competitions, but some USOC members, including athletes themselves, said the proposal was Opponents also protested plans to test randomly at the training centers, where many athletes live The leaders for months at a time.

"Who's going to want to go to the training center?" said runner Henry Marsh, chairman of the USOC Athletes Advisory Council.

NEW YORK (AP) - You don't necessarily need high technology, money or even material aid to make some startling economic gains in developing countries — as dairy farmers in Kenya, onion-growers in Panama and rice-growers in Ghana have all found out, an international aid group says.

"In El Salvador, cucumber growers increased their yields tenfold simply by growing a corn crop first and then using the corn stalks as supports to keep the cucumbers off the ground and avoid moisture damage," said William F. Farren, vice president of the group, Technoserve Inc.

'In Panama," Farren said, "the problem was timing. The onion-growers were all planting and harvesting their crops at the same time. There were either no onions to be had or there was a glut, and the farmers then got rock-bottom prices for their onions.

'We taught them to stagger their planting times six weeks apart and bring a steady supply to market. The increase in their income was astonishing.

Technoserve, a non-profit development organization based in Norwalk, Conn., was founded by American businessman Edward P. Bullard in 1968 and now operates in nine countries in Africa and Central and South America.

Technoserve trains owners and managers of smallto medium-size enterprises in modern business practices. Last year, it says, it provided assistance to 162 community-based enterprises, projects and institutions from which nearly 700,000 people benefited from projects with annual gross revenues totaling more than $16 million.

"We usually work through a cooperative or trade organization," Farren said. "We need such a degree of organization as proof that the producers are actually doing something to help themselves before we come in. And we provide no money or material help, only ideas and know-how.

Francisco Lino Osegueda, Technoserve's program director in El Salvador, where the organization provides assistance to 17 cooperatives, said he had noted a visible change in co-op members aided by Technoser ve

When they first show up at co-op meetings they are barefoot and wear ragged, torn clothing, he said. Within months "one sees a change in their clothing and their demeanor. Within a couple of years it is as if there was a new person participating in the work of the cooperative.

John C.L. Doku, program director for Ghana, said Technoserve's projects in that country include rabbit-rearing in one village and a rice-growing cooperative in another. The rabbit farms provide protein and the rice cooperative puts into production 1,500 acres of previously unused land, he said.

Technoserve employs 15 people in Ghana in such projects to achieve healthier and more productive lives for local people, Doku said.

Technoserve currently has teams working in Ghana, Kenya, Zaire and Rwanda in Africa, in El Salvador, Nicaragua, Panama and Costa Rica in Central America and in Peru in South America

FORT PAYNE, Ala. (AP) - Musicians in the country group Alabama are stars across the nation, but there's nothing like playing for the folks back home, says guitarist Jeff Cook

More than 50,000 fans packed a field here Saturday to hear the group and other country stars, including Glen Campbell and the Charlie Daniels Band, perform in the annual fund-raising June Jam, sponsored by Alabama to raise money for northeast Alabama

Alabama guitarist Cook, 31, said the record crowd made the band feel special.

'I know we all feel a little bit different coming back here to play in our hometown,' he said. 'There's a lot of people from here who can't or won't go to Birmingham or Huntsville to hear us, and to perform for them is really something special.

Guidelines for a great GARAGE SALE

With a little planning and preparation, you can turn your garage sale into a big event! To assure that both you and your customers have the best possible garage sale experience, follow these tips:

Advertise what people want! Children's clothing, dishes, collectibles, tools, books and antiques are the most popular items.

2. Make it convenient to shop at your garage sale! Be sure there is adequate parking space. Post signs with directions to parking areas. Make arrangements with neighbors. 5. Hope for the best. Expect the worst. Be prepared for accidents. Have small bandages, aspirin and a rest area for minor problems. Also, be sure to have emergency numbers for police, ambulance, fire and doctor in a handy location. 4. Make it easy to pay! Have plenty of change and a system for handling it: muffin tins, nail aprons, small compartments of some kind to keep coins separated. Make sure one person is on duty at all times at a centralized location, preferably with a calculator or adding machine. Checks? No checks? Decide ahead of time if you will accept checks; then stick to your decision.

Be kind to your customers. Assist them with purchases. Provide a place to try on clothing. Answer all questions courteously. Help them carry large or unwieldly purchases to their cars. Offer a free cup of coffee. Provide prices. Do not make every person ask, "How much is this?" Prices make for quick, effective sales or a good place for customers to start

• Get an early start! Set up displays the evening before, if possible. Departmentalize. Separate the inexpensive items from the more costly ones. Group furniture, clothing, toys, lawn equipment and other items with similar

10. Specialize. Establish one area for "Under $5," another for "Under $1." Consider having a batch of items that are "Free with purchase of $3." Remember the youngsters, too. Children enjoy visiting garage sales and buying treats for themselves and gifts for family members. Encourage this with small, low-priced items that are appropriate for this purpose. . Time your sale carefully! Do not hold it on or near a holiday. Have it at a time when most people are at home and unconcerned with special events. Combine your efforts! Incorporate your sale with a neighbor for more variety and greater impact. If you follow this suggestion, be sure to label all items with color-coded tape or initials so proper credit can be given. Use an inventory sheet to keep track of sale items as they are sold.

sale is to turn your unwanted items into cash!

Don't simply say, "several things available." Each time you list an item, you are broadening the list of potential customers. Be generous! If you have items left over, give them to a charitable organization. If you see that some items are not moving well during the sale, mark them down during the last hours. Remember, the prime reason for holding the

Be specific! When advertising your sale in the newspaper, list individual items.
