U.S. warplanes capture hijackers

By JOHN WINN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

CATANIA, Sicily — U.S. warplanes acting under orders of President Reagan today forced an Egyptian jet carrying the Palestinian hijackers of a luxury liner to land in Sicily, U.S. and Italian officials said.

The four pirates, who Western officials say killed a partially paralyzed American Jew aboard the Italian cruise ship, were seized by police for prosecution.

The Palestinians, who identified themselves as members of a Palestine Liberation Organization splinter group, commandeered the Achille Lauro off Egypt on Monday and terrorized more than 500 passengers and crew for two days.

They surrendered to representatives of the PLO on Wednesday, and the hijacked ship steamed into Port Said, Egypt. It was only then that officials confirmed the death of 69-year-old Leon Klinghoffer from New York City.

Egypt put the four Palestinians aboard an Egyptian Boeing 737 Thursday for a flight out of the country. Israel quoted unidentified U.S. officials as saying two PLO officials also were aboard.

As the plane was over the Mediterranean on its way to Tunisia, where the PLO has its headquarters, U.S. Navy F-14 fighters took off from the aircraft carrier Saratoga to meet it, White House spokesman Larry Speakes told a news conference late Thursday.

U.S. officials said Tunisia had refused landing rights for the plane.

"The president directed that U.S. forces intercept the aircraft," as part of a U.S. policy of "apprehension, prosecution and punishment of terrorists," Speakes said.

"This operation was conducted without firing a shot," Speakes said. The airliner touched down at Sicily's Sigonella airport, a NATO base near Catania, at 12:30 a.m. (7:30 p.m. Thursday EDT), said a spokesman for Italian Premier Bettino Craxi. Once on the ground, the jet "was surrounded by American and Italian troops," Speakes said. U.S.

sources in Washington said American units deployed included Navy SEALs, an elite combat unit.

The hijackers were taken off the aircraft for trial in Italy. The spokesman for Craxi told The Associated Press. "They are already in the hands of Italian authorities, the carabinieri (military police)," he said. It was not immediately clear what charges might be brought.

Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti said today the United States will let Italy prosecute the hijackers rather than have them stand trial in America first. He said the agreement was reached during telephone negotiations with U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz.

Earlier, Speakes said that the United States would "pursue prompt extradition" of the Palestinians. The United States and Italy signed an extradition treaty in Sept. 1984. But Italy does not have capital punishment and has previously rejected requests to extradite suspects if they risked receiving the death penalty.

Andreotti also said Italy would "likely" release PLO members who accompanied the four pirates on the jet. Israeli army radio said the officials were believed to be Mohammed Abbas, head of the Palestine Liberation Front to which the hijackers claimed to belong, and Hani Al Hassan, the senior aide to PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, the radio said.

Al Hassan is said to have had a major role in negotiating the hijackers' surrender.

Arafat, who was in Senegal today, made no immediate comment on the U.S. military action that forced the hijackers to Italy.

A spokesman for Craxi said the hijackers had been moved to a location off the NATO base, but would not say where.

'We'll do it again,' U.S. says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Without firing a shot, U.S. warplanes forced an Egyptian plane carrying four Palestinian hijackers to land in friendly territory as President Reagan committed American muscle to fight terrorism with a declaration, "we will do this again."

"There can be no asylum for terrorism or terrorists," White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Thursday night in announcing the hijackers of the cruise ship Achille Lauro were in U.S. and Italian hands.

His decision could set the United States on a new course.

An exultant Speakes, declaring he spoke in Reagan's name, sent a clear signal that "the international scourge of terrorism" would be met with American might.

"There is no doubt in our mind. If the opportunity presents itself, we will do the same thing again," Speakes said. "We cannot tolerate terrorism in any form. We will continue to take every appropriate measure available to us to deal with these dastardly deeds."

Speakes also announced in a near-midnight news briefing that the United States was asking Italy to extradite the terrorists so they could be tried in an American court for the hijacking and for the murder of Leon Klinghoffer.

The wheelchair-bound, retired New Yorker, 69, apparently was shot in the head and cast into the sea during the two-day ordeal, in which more than 500 passengers and crew were held hostage by the hijackers.

Freed in a deal struck with the Egyptian government, the Palestinians were headed for Tunisia, where the Palestine Liberation Organization has its headquarters, until U.S. F-14 fighters took to the skies over the Mediterranean from the carrier Saratoga.

Ordered to head for Sigonella, the NATO base in Sicily, the pilot of the Egyptian plane complied, after being denied landing permission in Tunisia and at Athens airport. The Egyptian plane then "accepted our intercept and agreed to be taken," Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told reporters early today.

"The operation was conducted without firing a shot," Speakes said. Italy gave its permission to land, the Boeing 737 was surrounded immediately and the hijackers taken into Italian custody.

Asked what the hijackers said when they found themselves surrounded, Speakes smiled slightly and replied: "They probably had an expletive or two."

Terrorism has taken a heavy toll of Americans. Diplomats and Marines have been killed in troublespots around the globe.

The car-bombing of the U.S. Marine barracks near Beirut airport in Lebanon two years ago took the lives of 241 Marines and sailors. Navy diver Robert Stethem was killed in the hijacking of a TWA jetliner out Athens last June.

United Way donations nearing quarter mark

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

Contributions to the Pampa United Way edged near the quarter mark of the fundraising drive's goal based on reports turned in Thursday afternoon by campaign volunteers.

Jan Lyle, United Way office secretary, said pledges totaled $69,635.91 at the conclusion of the second report session.

That represents 23 percent of the 1985 goal of $301,760, Lyle reported.

The second week's total is more than double that of last week's report, when $33,105 or 11 percent of the goal had been turned in, she noted.

Lyle said some firms are doubling their contributions from last year.

Among those firms reporting their donations this week are Security Federal Savings and Loan Assn. and Titan Specialties, Inc., both of which reported employee donations at double that of last year.

"And what's made the difference? Agency tours!" Lyle said while figuring up totals late yesterday afternoon in the Hospitality Room at Citizens Bank and Trust.

"So many more employees are going on the agency tours this year," she said, and that has really helped increased contributions.

Businesses wanting to arrange the tours for their employees may contact Lyle at the United Way office on the second floor of City Hall or call her at 669-1001.

There are two tours available, Lyle explained.

Tour A lasts from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and usually includes visits to the Community Day Care Center, Pampa Sheltered Workshop and Genesis House. The employees then help to deliver a route for Meals on Wheel, followed by a lunch at the Pampa Senior Citizens Center, where another agency director joins them to discuss that agency.

"In this way they are exposed to six of the agencies," Lyle said, with the opportunity to see some of them in action.

Tour B is a shorter version, lasting only an hour and a half. The group visits the day care center, sheltered workshop and the Meals on Wheel office, though no deliveries are made. That tour also is held on weekday mornings, she said.

The tours are also available to groups and clubs.

"The Fatheree family also gave a big boost to the total," Lyle stated, commenting on yesterday's report session.

Assisting Lyle yesterday with the reports from volunteers were Charlie Loeffler, drive chairman, and Dean Copeland, Commercial Division chairman and drive chairman-elect.

Loeffler noted volunteers are working in White Deer this year to help the organization reach its goal. He explained that though most of the United Way agencies are located in Pampa, they provide assistance to many area residents.

Most of the contributions to date have come from individual and employee pledges.

Area bands march for UIL honors

By CATHY SPAULDING

BORGER — Sunny skies and high hopes are expected Saturday as 36 high school and two junior high school bands march onto the Borger High School football field for the District Marching and Twirling Contest.

Area bands, which often practice on the football field or a parking lot, were hampered a bit by the rainy weather Wednesday and Thursday, but that doesn't worry area band leaders.

The Pampa Middle School Patriot Band, under the direction of Joe DiCosimo, will be the first band of the day to perform. It is to take the field at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, 10 minutes before the only junior high competition, Dumas Junior High.

One of four 4-A bands to compete, the green-clad Pride of Pampa high school band, will perform at 6 p.m.

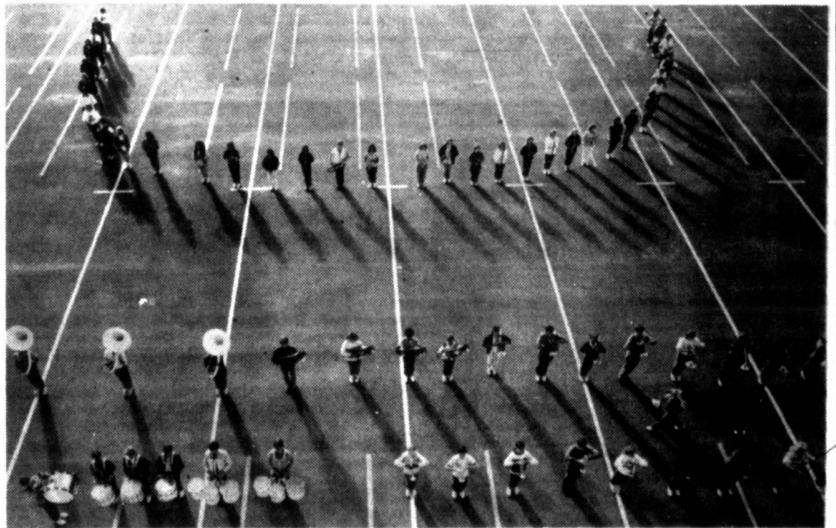

Pampa band director Charles Johnson is confident that both Pampa bands will take First Division "superior" ratings. He expects the PHS band to win Sweepstakes and advance to state competition.

"As a band, we have worked 1½ hours a day, 2½ hours on some days," Johnson said.

Johnson said he has worked with the different sections "so it comes off as a total program."

Johnson said that his Pride is working on a harder routine than other bands, and he has made sure his students mastered it.

"I personally don't feel anyone else around would do the caliber of performance that we have," he said. "What the kids are doing will be harder."

And Johnson admits that some 4-A bands could give the Pride of Pampa good competition. He said Canyon and Borger both have good sounding bands. Of smaller bands, Johnson said the Canadian High School band in class 3-A has a good sound.

He should know. Earlier this week, Johnson conducted a marching band workshop for the Wildcat band in Canadian.

Canadian band director Fred Pankratz also expressed confidence that his 78-member band will take a first division rating. The Canadian band will march at 4:35 p.m.

"Our strong point is our playing," Pankratz said. "The players have really done a super job for us, and our marching is good."

"I feel we are as strong as we were last year, maybe stronger," he concluded.

In Class 2-A, the 47-member White Deer High School Band follows the 120 member Sanford-Fritch Band at 2:24 p.m.

But White Deer band director Dana Reynard does not believe the size or the band's young age will diminish its chances.

"It's going to be judged not by our size, but by the sound," he said, adding that his band is working on a relatively short piece. "The minimum time is five minutes and the maximum time is 10 minutes. Our piece is 5 minutes, 30 seconds."

Reynard said the band will not be featuring any twirlers or flag corps because "we want to work on our sound."

"We have quite a bit of talent that needs to be tapped," he said, noting that the key to success is Held in the Heritage Room of M. K. Brown Auditorium, the Pampa Fine Arts Association sponsored festival will open to the public at 10 a.m. Saturday, with viewings until 6 p.m. The show will open Sunday from noon until 6 p.m.

A private viewing for PFAA members will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday, with a reception for exhibitors scheduled for 6 p.m. Sunday after the close of public viewing.

Exhibitors will be from the Pampa area and throughout the state, plus others from parts of Oklahoma, New Mexico and Kansas.

Arts and crafts will range from sculpture, paintings and jewelry to pottery, wood work and dolls.

Pampa artists and craftsmen displaying works at the festival include Jil Branan, fiber art; Mabel Crossland, dolls; Kay Crouch, watercolors; Evelyn Epps, paintings; Pernie Fallon, jewelry; Mark Frels, wooden belt buckles; Arthell Gibson, jewelry; Lois Minnick, paintings; Mary Noel, ceramics; Peggy Palmier, copper enamel; and Jack Towles, stained glass.

Band contest

the co-operation and the determination by the kids. "It's a young band, but we have a lot of spirit."

The class 1-A bands will march between 10:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m.

The first of the smaller bands to perform is the 22-member Groom High School Band, which follows one of the largest of the 5-A school bands, Hereford.

"I don't think it will affect the ratings," said band director Jerry Crowell, admitting that it may be harder for the band.

The Groom band will march in corps style with pinwheel turns, sharp angles and a block form. One number, "The Yellow Rose of Texas," will feature the percussion section while the modern hit "Easy Lover" will feature a trumpet duet.

McLean, Wheeler and Miami will march in succession, with McLean scheduled at about 11:50.

McLean High School junior Cindy Hembree is the only twirler from the eight area high schools contacted who will be participating in the district competition.

Band director R.Z. Myers said his band has been practicing two hours each night in addition to the band's regular class time.

One strong point in McLean's favor will be the band's maturity,

Myers said. In the past, the band was open to grades 7-12. But this year, the high school and junior high school bands split, although there were five eighth graders who qualified for the band through auditions.

Wheeler band director David Hawkins said the rainy weather this week hurt practices. The band, which had been practicing outside, has had to practice in the gymnasium, which had an effect on the way the band looks and sounds.

"But I think our strength is the character of the kids," he said. "They want to get a First-Division rating."

Miami band director Jeff Witcher expects a I rating from his 38-member band.

"They have performed at superior levels at different times," he said. The MHS band received a first place rating for out of town bands when it participated in the Tri-State Fair parade in Amarillo in September.

"This year, we have seven cornets, so they're strong in numbers," he said. "Our low brass has a strong sound."

4-H banquet set

More than 200 Gray County 4-H Club members and leaders are expected at the annual 4-H Club Banquet at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Pampa Optimist Club, 601 E. Craven.

The banquet will honor outstanding members of the eight 4-H clubs in the county. According to county extension agent and 4-H leader Jeff Goodwin, two Gold Star awards will be presented to the outstanding members in the county.

Lefors trustees to apply for energy efficiency grant

By LARRY HOLLIS
Staff Writer

LEFORS - Trustees of the Lefors Independent School District approved seeking a grant for improving the energy efficiency of the high school building during their regular board meeting Thursday night.

Supt. Earl Ross said the Department of Energy has grants available for updating old buildings to better conserve energy. He suggested Lefors High School would be a good candidate for a grant.

The grant would pay half of the costs of developing energy efficient repairs for the high school building, he said.

"They try to do that for people trying to make school buildings, hospitals, others like that more energy efficient," he said. "We fit the pattern" and would be a good candidate for the awarding of a grant.

Supt. Ross said there are two routes for making application for the grants.

In the first one, the district could seek an award for an energy audit of the building, with the department paying half of the costs for the audit. Then, in the next year, the district could apply for the grant - again, half of the costs - for the actual repair and renovation work.

But that route would take about two years to get final approval of an award, he said.

In the other route, the district could pay for its own audit prior to applying for the federal grant, he explained. Ross recommended the district take that route, saying he had contacted an engineer familiar with the department's guidelines.

The audit would cost the district as much as $3,900, but he didn't think it would be that much, he said.

By conducting its own audit without having to wait for a federal award to help with the audit, the district could make its application before January and learn by March whether it would have the energy Technical Assistance grant, Ross explained.

If the district received the grant in March, work could begin next year instead of having to wait another year under the first alternative, he stated. He said the district would have a year in which to use the grant, allowing two budgets from which to find the money for the district's share of the costs.

The board authorized Ross to check into getting the engineer to conduct an energy audit of the building in preparation for applying for the federal grant.

In other business, the trustees approved steps toward developing a gifted and talented program for students.

Ross said the Region XVI Education Service Center in Amarillo is forming a cooperative effort to help schools develop gifted and talented programs.

He said the Lefors district would develop guidelines and qualifying criteria during this year and implement the program in the next school year for students in grades K through 6.

The program is limited generally to 5 percent of the student population. He estimated there would be five or six students who would qualify for the program if it becomes operational next year.

Next year the program would be evaluated to see if the district wants to continue the program and expand it into grades 7 to 12, Ross said.

UT regents offer more talk on South Africa investments

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The chairman of the University of Texas board of regents says there's room for more compromise on the issue of divestment of funds from companies that do business in the apartheid country of South Africa.

But the board took no action Thursday after hearing what board chairman Jess Hay praised as a "rational" approach by students calling for divestment.

"I want to give some thought to what they propose," he said after the meeting.

Before the meeting, a few hundred students held their second rally in two days at the University of Texas at Arlington where the board met.

But later, dressed in business suits, the students made a low-key, businesslike pitch to the regents.

Darrick Eugene, a 22-year-old student at the UT Austin campus who helped organize the effort, said he hadn't expected a vote from the all-white board on Thursday.

He said he expected to meet privately with board chairman Jess Hay "to discuss what sort of dialogue might be implemented."

Hay told the students the board finds apartheid "appalling and repugnant."

He said the university system has about $773 million invested in companies that do business in the apartheid government of South Africa. But he estimated that only about $2 to $3 million of that is actually invested in South Africa by those companies.

Ironically, the fight to take a stand against apartheid was made on a campus where most of the students in the 1960s protested not the Vietnam War but a proposal to dump "Johnny Reb" as the school mascot.

Today, UTA teams are not the Rebels, but the Mavericks, and the president of the Student Congress is black, although minorities make up only one percent of the 23,000-member student body.

Still, Donna Darovich, UTA's news services director who also attended UTA as a student, said, "This has always been a fairly conservative, working student body."

Almost half the students are commuters from Dallas, Fort Worth and area suburbs. The average age is 25.

Sarah Wood, a fifth-year elementary education major, said there hasn't been widespread interest across campus in the apartheid issue, although she sympathizes and thinks the political activity gives UTA a good image.

But she considers two protests in two days to be "overdone. As a matter of fact, my professor let us out of class because the protest (Thursday) got so loud," she said.

Music major Troy Patterson said, "I'm not sure that will convince people whose minds aren't made up. Facts might, but rah-rah won't."

But fact was part of the student effort Thursday, along with the protests.

"We will exhaust the avenues of diplomacy and dialogue first," Eugene said.

Calling for a "moderate, but reasonable withdrawal" of funds from companies doing business in South Africa, Black Student Alliance leader Barron Wallace, urged the board to join the ranks of progressive schools like Harvard and Columbia University.

UT ARLINGTON
CAMPUS PROTEST — Students at the University of Texas at Arlington march across campus in an anti-apartheid protest Thursday. Teen-age girl testifies man wanted to become millionaire

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Brownsville man charged with inducing sexual performance by a child planned to become a millionaire by selling sexually explicit photographs of a teen-age runaway girl, the teen-ager has testified.

Juan Moran, 34, is on trial on one of 12 counts of inducing sexual performance by a child.

"He said that if he sold them for $1 a piece he would become a millionaire at 35 and that was what he wanted," the 15-year-old girl testified Thursday. "He told me he would split it with me 50-50."

The girl, a runaway from Missouri, said she came to Brownsville in January after hitchhiking her way to Houston and then joining a carnival there. She arrived in Brownsville sometime in February.

She said that in March, about two weeks after the circus left

Brownsville, she met Moran at a bar and he asked her to be a model for him.

"I told him it had always been my lifelong dream to be a model and in the movies," she said.

She said that in the first session she appeared fully clothed.

"The more along we got into it, the more undressed I got," said the girl, who was 14 when the sessions occurred.

Cameron County Assistant District Attorney Gustavo Garza presented into evidence a twin-lens camera, an 8mm movie camera, a cassette recorder and clothing found at Moran's office and which prosecutors allege Moran used in photographing the girl.

Also introduced into evidence were numerous pictures of the girl which were seized by Brownsville police at a discount store where they had been taken for processing and printing.

The girl looked at the pictures and said she remembered them.

"Who is the person photographing you?" Garza asked the girl.

"Juan Moran," she replied.

The girl told the nine-woman, three-man jury she was paid $50 per photo session. She said she posed for him for four months and that Moran took between 600 and 700 photographs of her.

Defense attorney Dale Robertson repeatedly objected to State District Judge Robert Garza when prosecutors attempted to introduce the photographs into evidence.

Robertson said some of the photographs did not apply to the case for which Moran is on trial.

The girl, wearing a red-and-white striped jacket and white blouse with a tie and black slacks, had been wiping tears from her eyes when shown the photographs.

But when a silent movie was shown in which was in sexually explicit poses, she began to cry.

The girl said under cross examination that she had told almost everyone she met that she was 19 years old, including the defendant.

But the prosecutor asked if she ever told Moran her real age. She said yes.

The girl also testified that she came from a broken home, was a repeated runaway, was a prostitute in New York City and had had a baby three years ago.

Defense attorneys also argued they had not had an opportunity to see a diary the girl kept of her ordeal and the judge allowed them to see it.

Students challenge prices at state fair

DALLAS (AP) — The "Texas Star" ferris wheel isn't the only thing reaching new heights at the Texas State Fair, some Dallas schoolchildren contend.

Dallas 13-year-old Elizabeth Valdez, armed with 169 letters from other youngsters confronted city officials with complaints that state fair prices are too high for kids.

"My brother and I save pennies every year," Elizabeth wrote in her own letter. "This year we saved $53 worth of pennies and it isn't even enough to get on three rides."

For example, she said, "it costs $1 to purchase one dart at most booths. Whatever happened to $1 for three darts?"

"Please consider some ways to lower State Fair prices," she concluded.

Suzanne Webster really showed disgust writing, "I surely won't want to go to it next year. I'd rather go to school."

A letter from student Phillip Brannon said: "My whole family was mad about paying coupons for food ... My father bought forty dollars worth of coupons. After we ate lunch and rode about three rides we were out of coupons."

Byron Mitchell threatened: "I won't eat the food if you don't lower the prices."

And Christopher Neal Franks took the case even further: "This is outrageous. I demand the prices be lowered."

"By the time I came out of the fair, all I had done was eat french fries, drink a Coke and see a boring sideshow."

Laura Vaden wrote, "The only way that I see someone would be able to go to the fair is not go ... just just thinking about the prices and especially paying them spoild the day."

While Miss Valdez took the letters to City Hall, she was referred to fair officials, although Mayor Starke Taylor said he wanted to look into the matter.

State Fair general manager Wayne Gallagher said he agreed that prices are high, but said he is powerless to do anything about it.

"I think prices on everything are too high. I think fairs are something kids should be able to come out and enjoy," said Gallagher, who asked his staff to research the prices and told Valdez he'd meet with her Tuesday.

A&M clinic to resume physical examinations

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M University has hired a new physician at the campus health clinic and students will again be able to get physical examinations and birth control prescriptions, a college spokesman says.

John Koldus, university vice president for student services, said the student health center "will try to accommodate everyone who calls," beginning Monday.

Koldus' announcement came Thursday, a few hours after 75 students gathered to protest a decision to halt physical examinations at the clinic because of a shortage of doctors.

Some students argued the policy discriminated against women because it would be costlier and less convenient to get gynecological examinations and birth control prescriptions off campus.

Koldus admitted that the administration has not been "sensitive to female issues." He said the clinic's director, Dr. Claude Goswick, made the decision to stop physical examinations without regard for its effect on women.

The furor surrounding the decision has taught administrators something, Koldus said.

"We're more sensitive to the issue than we were a month ago," he said.

Goswick said the decision because the clinic's seven physicians were overworked and often were unable to do anything but care for ill students. He said the clinic is understaffed, largely because budget cuts have made it impossible to fill two vacant positions.

Koldus said the salaries offered for the vacant positions — $50,000 to $61,000 annually — made it difficult to attract qualified applicants.

However, Koldus said, a physician has agreed to start work on Monday. He said A&M will continue its efforts to fill the other vacancy.

Katie Cokinos, a Beaumont senior who helped organize the protest, said she was surprised but pleased by the school's announcement.

"That (the physical exams) was the crux of our protest," she said. "We'll be pretty much happy with that."

Expert: Bell rate request unwarranted

AUSTIN (AP) — Local telephone users should not be charged more because Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is afraid big business users will build or lease their own telecommunications systems, according to Dr. Francis Collins.

Collins, a Boston telecommunications engineer, appeared Thursday for the Office of the Public Counsel which is opposing Southwestern Bells' request for $323 million in higher revenues. The OPC says current revenues should be decreased by $133 million.

Southwestern Bell has argued that lower charges should be given long distance companies, such as AT&T, to encourage big business users not to build or lease their own telephone systems.

"I do not believe that rates should be designed to avoid the alleged threat of bypass because bypass is not a viable threat at this time," Collins testified. "and to consider it may cause immediate economic harm to ratepayers and eventually to Southwestern Bell as well."

Collins said many customers purchase competing technologies because they desire a different quality or grade of communications and not just because of Southwestern Bell's pricing structure.

It must come to an end

During the past weeks this space has been mine, the only trouble I've had was deciding among the dozens of topics I wanted to discuss with you. Now I know precisely what I must say, and I regret it.

Commitments I made before coming to work for the Pampa News have now become a priority in my life and I must resign my position as staff photographer. I wish I could remain, but I would not be able to do a first rate job for the News, and I value these friendships too much to give them less than my best.

It is an illuminating experience, being a newspaper photographer. I witness a remarkable cross section of mankind through the lens of my camera: from the sordid to the sublime, and all points in between. The colors of life forever rendered in black and white has a profound effect upon me.

I hope it has touched you, too.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

A real education in wasting money

For the first time in 13 years, our nation is without the services of the National Institute for Education. The sun rose this morning the east. Chances are, it will set tonight in the west.

Chances are, too, that no one save a few sheltered academics will notice the absence of this bureaucratic bunch of bumbler who spent millions in their time, did little to improve the quality of education, and provided an extremely limited return on the taxpayer dollars they squandered.

From a president who promised five years ago to cut back on government (and then presided over its largest growth in history), the expiration of the NIE is one of the very few examples of a promise kept. Good riddance.

The institute was born under Richard Nixon, found favor with a Democrat-controlled Congress and set about to "reform and renew" American education through research and development.

The NIE's development, however, hardly brought about a renewal and its research nary a reform. It tended — after vast infusions of taxpayer money — to discover the obvious.

One study, analyzing elementary education, concluded that the more time students spent on a subject, the more they learned. Wow!

Then there's the study which reported that, in affluent and poor neighborhoods alike, an active and caring principal generated more success among students than one who was apathetic and uninvolved. Gosh. That one cost taxpayers only a few million dollars.

Even the most ardent backers of the NIE admit that was restating the obvious — but they say it served a purpose because school systems throughout the country used it to redirect or replace principals who saw their role as office-bound bureaucrats instead of educators.

Is it worth millions of taxpayer dollars to deliver a study that local school boards can point to in order to justify the obvious? No. Did the nation truly benefit from an agency that, in the beginning, used up some $140 million and this year cost taxpayers $53 million? We don't think so.

Finally, after repeated cuts in the NIE budget, Congress, too, saw the light. And the NIE, written out of the 1986 federal budget, went out of existence at midnight last Monday.

Well, not entirely. Washington's bureaucracies never seem to die completely. The NIE will continue as a much smaller unit within the Department of Education. Its supporters complain that the smaller unit doesn't have the necessary funds for any meaningful research. But even on this limited basis, the scam continues. Maybe next time.

Liberals lose 'Liberal-town'

Not for the first time, political writers have all but ignored the national significance of a story right under their noses.

Consider: The Democratic Party is the more liberal of our two major parties. Several weeks ago, this more liberal party held a primary election for mayor in what is often called the most liberal city in America — New York. It is a city heavy with allegedly liberal voting groups — blacks, Hispanics, Jews, activist women.

Liberal party, liberal city, liberal constituencies. In addition, two of the three candidates in the primary were clearly liberals: the activist City Council president, Carol Bellamy, and Herman Farrell, a black assemblyman. The third candidate in this contest in a liberal party, in a liberal city, with liberal constituencies was the incumbent mayor, Ed Koch. Mayor Koch, oddly enough, is often described as a neo-conservative.

In New York, Koch has been pummeled by liberals for eight years now as being too tough on crime and too insensitive and harsh on minority and women's issues. He has been accused of "polarizing" the city. He has even been attacked for being too hard-line on foreign policy issues; in New York, everyone — including the mayor — is allowed to have a foreign policy.

So who won the race in liberalism's capital city? Why, the neo-conservative, Ed Koch. Not only did he win it — he got almost two-thirds of the votes! He got more than three times the number of votes as his closest competitor. According to an NBC exit poll, he got about as many black votes as the black candidate, and carried the Hispanic vote by 3 to 1. He beat feminist Carol Bellamy by more than 3 to 1 among female voters. He swept the votes of those who describe themselves as liberals. He also won by a landslide in Manhattan, which is the most liberal borough in the most liberal city with the most liberal constituencies, in the more liberal party. In the words of Richard Scammon, America's premier elections analyst,

Koch put together "a neo-conservative Rainbow Coalition."

What's going on here? Well, of course, Koch was the incumbent. He raised much more money for his campaign than his opponents raised for theirs. He's been a good mayor. He's an irrepressible personality. All that helps.

But his main opponent, Ms. Bellamy, was no unknown. She raised about a million dollars. She received plenty of free media publicity in the media capital of the world. There were five public debates.

Koch could have been seriously challenged if only one condition had been met: if the voters disagreed with him. If the voters had disagreed with his views, there would have been electoral profit to be made by attacking all his alleged neo-conservative hard-line sins. That such a campaign never successfully materialized should give us a clue about the status of the old knee-jerk liberalism.

Clue: It is deadlier than a doornail. It should be remembered that the "new politics" strain of liberalism began in the overheated political climate of New York City, and had real strength for a while. But today, even liberal constituencies don't support the sort of liberalism that is perceived to be soft on crime, pro-quotas, pro-welfare-giveaways, pro-militant feminism. As a New York observer with a harsh but alliterative way with words put it to me: "The limousine liberal, lemming left — was liquidated."

Although the political press largely ignored the meaning of the election, the Koch victory should send a message — no longer a new one — to the national Democratic Party.

This: The old days are over. Either accommodate to a more hard-headed, common-sense sort of progressive thinking — Koch-style — or kiss it goodbye as a potent national party. After all, if liberals can't even carry liberals anymore — who can they carry?

France's 'underwater-gate'

The government of France could be toppled by a scandal which in many of its aspects will sound very familiar to you.

Especially the allegations of coverup — and the official response.

Let's review briefly the chronology of events leading up to President Mitterand's embarrassment.

The French scheduled nuclear weapons tests in the South Pacific.

An organization called Greenpeace, which opposes nuclear testing, intended to sail its own ship into the testing ground to protest and perhaps prevent the tests.

But the ship was sunk.

In the harbor in New Zealand July 10, the ship was sunk by underwater frogmen with explosives.

Now it turns out that the underwater frogmen were agents of the French government.

Orders to "sink a peace ship" have been traced back to the French Defense Ministry to the embarrassment of the President of France who, it is said, "had to know about it."

And this will sound very familiar: The Defense Ministry has ordered a crackdown on the news media which exposed the scandal.

Underwater-gate! Well...

The defense minister has resigned, has been replaced.

The head of the DGSE, the General Directorate For External Security, has resigned, been replaced.

French officials who at first stonewalled are acknowledging that the bombs were planted by DGSE agents.

But the public confession has not satisfied the prime minister of New Zealand in whose harbor the bombing took place.

And area newshawks are digging into an assortment of peripheral scandals.

Three French officers and a mysterious doctor on the frogman mission were also involved in amorous escapades ashore.

Another pair of French agents masquerading as Swiss honeymooners made "imprudent telephone calls."

They have been arrested by New Zealand authorities and indicted for murder and conspiracy.

A significant question remains: At what level was the initial coverup ordered.

The answer to that could cost President Mitterand his job.

Underwater-gate.

Where war might start

The Cuban missile crisis of 1962 is the classic example of a superpower confrontation that might have exploded into nuclear war.

Since then, how it developed and how it was managed on both sides have been intensely studied for clues as to how future explosive situations might be defused.

But textbook case that it is, there is general agreement that the Cuban crisis is history that will not repeat — thus, it might not be so instructive.

For one very important thing, Frederic Mosher points out, the Soviets have corrected the gaping disadvantage in intercontinental strategic forces that compelled them to back off then.

Mosher, on the staff of the Carnegie Corp., is coordinating a joint American-Soviet study of causes and ways of preventing nuclear war. It is joint in that Soviet specialists have been invited to participate periodically in study sessions with their American counterparts.

Underway now for two years, the project has produced a book, "Hawks, Doves & Owls: An Agenda for Avoiding Nuclear War," (Norton) that analyzes a number of scenarios considered most likely to escalate to the nuclear level.

Such as a crisis in Europe, where nuclear-armed forces of the two powers are already eyeball to eyeball. The spark could be a new Berlin crisis, disarray in NATO, which the Soviets might seek to exploit, or an uprising in their restive Eastern Europe empire.

Another much-discussed possibility is accidental war — human or technological error triggering a full-scale nuclear exchange. This raises a scary element of pure chance. But the more it is studied, the less threatening it seems.

"If you are in otherwise a relatively calm peacetime situation," Mosher explains, "the control systems are such that an accident probably won't provoke a war by itself. The danger is when you're already in a real crisis."

But neither an accident nor a crisis in Europe, where the superpowers would be most able to directly control developments, scare the nuclear-war students as much as a third scenario: a crisis in an area where the forces of the nuclear powers might not be directly engaged, but where their vital interests are, with the Soviets backing one side and we the other.

The place best fitting that description is the Middle East, where Arab-Israeli animosities are not the only irritants. Soviet sensitivity is also a volatile factor. The Soviets, aspiring to recognition as a superpower in more than just weapons, feel they've been cut out of the area and it rankles.

"They're like Rodney Dangerfield," Mosher suggests. "They're looking for respect."

There is no guidance as to what might happen if third parties in the Mideast or elsewhere drew the superpowers into a nuclear confrontation. Recent technological advances on both sides greatly complicate the uncertainty. There has not been a major crisis, Mosher points out, since the strategic systems of both sides reached their present stand-off levels.

Back to scenarios, of all the hot spots around the world, the one least likely to spark a nuclear war, as Mosher sees it, is the one that preoccupies the Reagan administration.

Central America.

It lacks an essential element: Interests considered vital by one of the nuclear rivals are not at stake. But it does, Mosher thinks, symbolize the way we respond to crises — thinking that all somehow are infected by Soviet involvement. That attitude in itself creates a problem. It encourages us to play the international political game like chess, where the loss of a pawn can blow everything.

He thinks we would do better thinking in terms of another game, one at which we ought to be especially adept.

"The American forte ought to be playing it like poker," he suggests, "where you can lose a hand and win a hand. That probably would be wiser. We'd be a littler calmer about these things."

Senate raises debt ceiling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has agreed to raise the national debt above $2 trillion, after including an amendment to gradually stop the overspending that's been adding $200 billion a year to the government's ocean of red ink.

But the Treasury, which has run out of borrowing power and used up its cash reserve, remains on the edge of insolvency. The debt ceiling increase won't take effect until the House and Senate can settle their differences over the deficit-reduction amendment.

The Senate spent most of Thursday revising details of the deficit-cutting plan of Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., which was first approved Wednesday. That accomplished, the lawmakers voted 51-37 to approve the Reagan administration's request for a new debt ceiling of $2.078 trillion, more than double the national debt when President Reagan took office. They then rushed away for a long Columbus Day holiday weekend.

The House scheduled a legislative session today to receive the Senate plan, but no decision was expected.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings amendment sets targets to gradually shrink the deficits until fiscal 1991, when the budget would be balanced. The measure would force the president to impose spending cutbacks if Congress and the president failed to meet the targets with spending cuts or new taxes, or both.

The cuts could hit a wide range of programs, except for Social Security, which was exempted.

House Democratic leaders, although supporting the basic goal of forcing gradual reductions and eventual elimination of deficits, fear the enforcement mechanism might give too much power to the president.

The Democrats have been stalling for time to draft alternatives to the amendment, which was pushed through the Senate without the usual hearings and study reserved for major legislation.

Despite the deficit-cutting fervor, the Senate on Thursday rejected several amendments that would have moved toward the deficit targets of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings proposal. The lawmakers turned down a cut in defense spending, refused to include Social Security in the cutbacks and rejected a proposal to increase the federal gasoline tax.

Wholesale prices show slight drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, driven down sharply by lower automobile prices, fell 0.6 percent in September, the Labor Department said today.

It was the third decline in the last four months and means wholesale prices have declined at an annual rate of 0.1 percent so far this year. Wholesale prices had declined 0.3 percent in August.

Analysts are projecting that the government's Producer Price Index could show the smallest rise in decades, and indeed the current pace for the first nine months would be the first yearly decline since the 0.2 percent decrease in 1983.

Wholesale prices increased 1.7 percent in 1984.

Retail inflation is running at an annual rate of 3.3 percent so far this year, the lowest in nearly two decades.

The September index showed food costs declining 0.9 percent following a 0.7 percent decline in August.

Energy costs edged down 0.1 percent in September after two months of more sizeable declines.

But most of the September drop in the overall index was due to a 3.8 percent decrease for passenger cars and a 2 percent decline for light trucks — both a reflection of the industry's traditional end-of-model-year sales coupled with low-interest financing.

The 0.6 percent decline in September was the sharpest one-month drop since the 0.7 percent decline in January 1983, and caught most analysts by surprise even though they foresaw no surge in wholesale prices for the remainder of the year.

Changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. However, the Consumer Price Index, due out later this month, checks a broader range of items and generally does not follow the PPI's tendency to bounce around sharply from month to month.

The Labor Department offered these specifics on September wholesale price activity:

— Reduced prices for pork and fresh fruits and vegetables accounted for most of the food price decline. Beef and veal and fish prices also moved down but eggs and coffee and chicken cost more.

— Gasoline prices fell 2.2 percent in September and barely offset rises for both natural gas and heating oil to account for the overall slight decline in the fuel component. Heating oil prices jumped 10.7 percent in September after declines the two previous months, and natural gas inched up 0.5 percent, also coming on the heels of two declining months. Those figures are not seasonally adjusted.

— Before seasonal adjustment auto prices plunged 8.1 percent last month and light truck prices fell 7.1 percent. Auto prices had fallen only 0.2 percent in August and truck prices 0.7 percent. Because lower auto prices are anticipated this time of year, the seasonal adjustment formula tempered the impact on the overall figure.

— Capital equipment fell 0.6 percent after seasonal adjustment, following a 0.2 percent rise in August. Auto costs accounted for much of that, along with declines for businesses purchasing agricultural machinery and woodworking tools.

If last month's 0.6 percent decline held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly rate would be a 6.7 percent decline. The actual annual rate provided by the department is based on a more precise calculation than used to report the monthly percentage change.

Puerto Rico declared disaster area; search for victims of flood continues

PONCE, Puerto Rico (AP) — President Ronald Reagan declared parts of this Caribbean island a federal disaster area, and Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon vowed to search for hundreds of bodies believed buried in the Mameyes shantytown "as long as humanly possible."

The National Guard ordered everyone out of the shantytown Thursday after Hernandez Colon said he was considering turning the community into a common grave to avoid outbreak of disease.

The proposal drew a storm of protest and he later changed his mind. A mudslide triggered by a 30-hour tropical deluge covered Mameyes on Monday, burying up to 500 people. Seventy-five people are known dead throughout the island.

The governor said the idea for a common grave had been proposed by Ponce Mayor Jose Dapena Thompson and approved by the commonwealth health department to avert an outbreak of disease which could result from the decomposing bodies.

Dapena Thompson denied he proposed the mass grave and the governor said later in the day that Health Secretary Luis Izquierdo Mora had decided the health danger was not as serious as originally believed.

However, Col. Luis Manuel Carrillo, who is in charge of the search effort, said an "orientation effort" was under way to prepare survivors and relatives for action such as that suggested by the governor.

He said the government had sent 35 psychologists and 60 other "crisis specialists" from the department of social services to talk with the people.

Victorio Reyes Quiles, 74, who lost his wife and daughter in the avalanche, learned of the governor's plans while waiting anxiously at the Ponce District Hospital for bodies to be brought to the morgue.

"My God, man, we are human beings, not beasts. We are Christians and we want to bury our dead," Reyes Quiles said. "I won't rest until my wife is found."

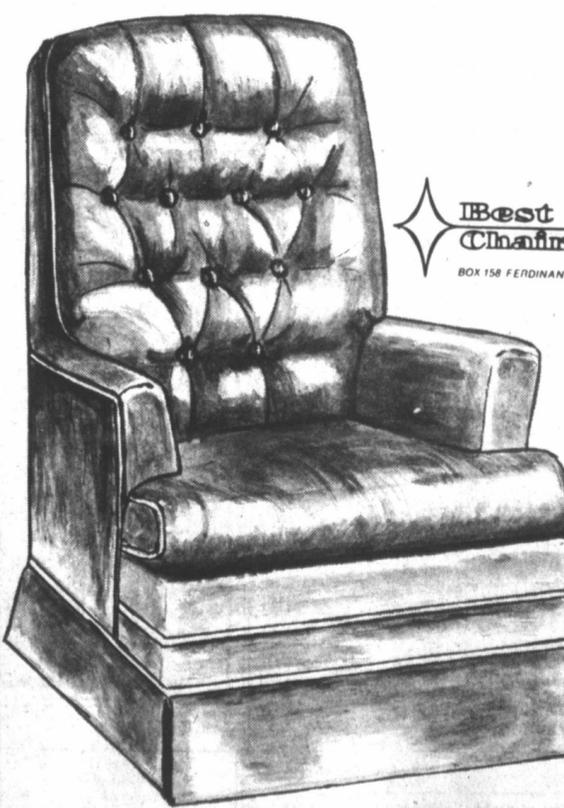

President Reagan on Thursday designated four of Puerto Rico's flood-stricken cities as major disaster areas making them eligible for federal funds.

U.S. counterterrorism as good as it can get: panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of a presidential task force believe the government is doing about the best job it can fighting terrorism and they are unlikely to propose any major changes in U.S. anti-terrorist efforts, according to sources familiar with the panel's work.

Terrorism "is a modern-day fact of life, and this country is one of the prime targets," one source said Thursday. "No matter what we do, there are going to be more incidents."

The group, headed by Vice President George Bush, is expected to make its report to President Reagan shortly before Christmas.

The panel's proposals are unlikely to be affected by the latest attack, in which a crippled

American man was killed by four terrorists during the two-day-long hijack of an Italian cruise ship in the Mediterranean.

The United States successfully apprehended the hijackers Thursday when Navy warplanes intercepted an Egyptian aircraft that was flying the Palestinians to Tunisia, the White House said.

The American warplanes, without firing a shot, forced the plane to land in Sicily, where the Palestinians were turned over to the Italian government for prosecution, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said.

The presidential task force probably won't propose major changes in U.S. anti-terrorist policies because "there's a feeling on the task force that the United States is generally doing things right," said one administration source, speaking on condition he not be identified.

A congressional source familiar with the panel's work said, "most of the people think no major changes are needed."

Reagan appointed the panel last June when a U.S. Navy diver was killed and Americans were held hostage in Beirut after a Trans World Airline jetliner was hijacked from Athens.

Bush heads the panel, which also includes representatives of the State Department.

One proposal under consideration by the panel has been creation of a multinational, standby force that could be used to try to free hostages or for pre-emptive strikes against planned terrorist operations, the sources said.

U.S. demonstrates military might in Mediterranean sky

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — High over the nighttime Mediterranean Sea, four U.S. Navy F-14 jets from the aircraft carrier Saratoga circled south of Crete, waiting for their quarry — a chartered 737 carrying four Palestinian hijackers.

When the jets spotted their target Thursday evening, they intercepted it and flew wing-by-wing with the plane to a landing at a NATO base in Sicily, where the hijackers were arrested.

It was the most dramatic turn yet in the saga of the cruise ship Achille Lauro and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger rushed from his Maine vacation home to a post-midnight Pentagon news conference to praise his troops.

"The work of the Navy planes and the carrier cannot be commended too highly," said a happy Weinberger. "It is a difficult task on very short notice both to assemble planes and make an intercept."

The surprise ending to the Palestinians' odyssey began earlier in the day in Chicago as President Reagan toured a Sara Lee baking plant and the Saratoga steamed on normal operations in the Adriatic Sea, running northwest along the Albanian coast.

Reagan ordered preparations made ready for an intercept, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, and the order was sent to the giant ship about 2 p.m. EDT. The 30-year-old Saratoga and its 85 warplanes turned around and steamed south.

Two hours later, Reagan gave the final approval and the carrier's warplanes were launched along with radar planes and tankers for refueling. Weinberger said the F-14 Tomcats streaked south across Crete and circled, waiting for the chartered Egyptian 737.

It carried the four hijackers suspected of killing a 69-year-old crippled American, as well as two other Palestinians, four Egyptians, and the plane's crew. Weinberger told the news conference.

Ship's hijackers made a death list

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The four hijackers of an Italian cruise ship singled out a crippled American to be slain, and made up a "death list" of other passengers by shuffling their passports, the husband of a freed hostage said today.

Neil Kantor, whose wife, June, was among 11 Americans who left the Achille Lauro in Port Said late Thursday after two days of terror at sea, told reporters that he heard of the plan from the passengers. "They made up a list of who they were going to kill and they were just going to go down the list," said Kantor, who planned to return to the United States in the next few days.

"Leon Klinghoffer was number one," Kantor said. "Mildred Hodes was number two. This was what the captain said."

Kantor said he could not remember the name of the third person on the list, but "the fourth name was Silvio Sherman."

The 69-year-old Klinghoffer, who was left partially paralyzed by a stroke six years ago and was often confined to a wheelchair, was slain by one of the gunmen Tuesday and his body was thrown into the Mediterranean off Syria, according to Western diplomats.

5:30 p.m. EDT and the two sides began talking on their radios. The Egyptian crew radioed to Tunis for landing approval, but was rejected. Another call for an OK to land at Athens was also turned down.

At that point, the 737 "accepted our intercept and agreed it would be taken by us to a NATO base" in Sicily, Weinberger said. No shots were fired.

Weinberger refused to answer one of the biggest questions remaining from the incident: what the F-14s would have done had the Egyptian plane refused to follow to Sicily.

"That's a hypothetical question," Weinberger said, declining to go into detail about the "rules of engagement" guiding the Navy pilots.

The F-14 is one of the Navy's most potent planes and normally carries both cannons and rockets.

Guided closely by the F-14s and followed by the other Navy planes, the 737 was escorted for 75 minutes until it landed at the joint U.S.-Italian NATO base at Sigonella. There the six Palestinians were arrested and the Egyptian crew was told it could take its plane back to Cairo, Weinberger said.

The Reagan administration has threatened to act before against terrorism and has been under pressure by critics here to do something.

This time, the United States was ready, Weinberger said. "We were prepared to take action against the ship (the Achille Lauro) and we were prepared to do that effectively and successfully."

He didn't spell out what that action was.

But when the 737 touched down at Sigonella, specially trained American troops were reportedly on the base, although there were conflicting stories about whether they were Navy SEAL commandos or members of the super-secret "Delta Force" anti-terrorist team.

Another big unanswered question was how much, if any, help the United States had from Egypt. Speakes said Egypt was not a party to the operation and Weinberger declined to go beyond that comment.

But the Pentagon leader did say "we had very good intelligence." The fact that the F-14s were launched even before the 737 left a military airbase outside Cairo and the Navy jets were waiting over Crete indicates the United States had been closely watching its target.

Weinberger disputed the contention that the United States had not acted before against terrorists.

"I'd go back to the Barbary pirates," he said with a smile, recalling the use of Marines in 1805 and 1815 to fight pirates on the North African coast.

WELLES DEAD — This is the most recent photo available of Orson Welles, made Oct. 3, 1985, who died Thursday at his home in Hollywood, Calif., at age 70. (AP Laserphoto)

Actor-director-innovator Orson Welles dies at 70

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Orson Welles, a "king" discarded by Hollywood, is dead of a heart attack at 70, leaving a legacy of more than 60 films, including the great "Citizen Kane," which revolutionized cinema.

Welles, whose 1938 radio tale of invaders from Mars panicked listeners nationwide, rode that success into Hollywood where at age 25, he stunned the film world with his first feature, "Citizen Kane." He wrote, directed and starred in the story based on the life of newspaper tycoon William Randolph Hearst, won the Oscar for writing and was nominated for directing and acting.

Welles died Thursday at the Hollywood home of a friend, Aleksandar Devic, police said. His physician, Dr. Thomas Dailey, said Welles died of a heart attack after a long battle with diabetes.

"What a shame, and I mean that literally, that one of the finest talents motion pictures has ever had was rejected out of hand," said filmmaker John Huston. "It's been years since any studio offered Orson an opportunity to direct, and it's the world's loss."

"His ability to abide the presence of others far less able than himself and far more successful always astonished me. I take my hat off to him as well I might. ... Orson was a king."

Burt Reynolds, who had been working with Welles on an "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" television episode, said, "I am just totally devastated."

"It seems so many giants have left us," said actress Janet Leigh, who starred in "Touch of Evil" with Welles. "This has not been a good week for show business."

Actor Yul Brynner also died Thursday, in New York City. Composer-arranger Nelson Riddle died Sunday, and actor Rock Hudson died last week.

Welles starred in such classics as "The Third Man," "The Magnificent Ambersons," "Lady from Shanghai" and scores of other films, including two memorable Shakespearean productions: "Falstaff," based on Henry IV (also released as "Chimes at Midnight") and "Othello."

Welles was "a learned Shakespearean" and "a bit of a genius," said Sir John Gielgud in London. "He began as a remarkable prodigy but he never quite realized a huge popular success after 'Citizen Kane.' He always went his own way."

Welles' 1938 Mercury Theater of the Air radio adaptation of H.G. Wells' "War of the Worlds" terrified millions of listeners who believed the nation really was being invaded by Martians. During the same period, Welles staged an all-black production of Shakespeare's "Macbeth" in New York, set in Haiti instead of Scotland.

After "Citizen Kane" in 1941, Welles' dealings with the studios deteriorated. "The Magnificent Ambersons" and "Journey Into Fear" were badly edited by others and dumped on double-bills. He starred with his second wife, Rita Hayworth, in "The Lady From Shanghai" and made a low-budget "Macbeth."

Disillusioned, he moved to Europe where he hired out as an actor ("The Black Rose," "The Third Man") to finance his own projects, such as "Othello" and "Chimes at Midnight."

Welles returned to the United States in the 1970s with his third wife, Countess di Girafalco, who acted in Italian films as Paola Mori.

He received a special Oscar in 1970 for "superlative artistry and versatility in the creation of motion pictures." In 1975, he received the Lifetime Achievement Award of the American Film Institute, and last year the Directors Guild gave him its highest honor, the D.W. Griffith award.

His final performance was an introduction to a 1940s black-and-white sequence for next week's episode of ABC-TV's "Moonlighting," and executive producer Gádn Caron said the episode would be dedicated to Welles.

Witnesses testify

Patient bedsores were crawling with maggots

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An elderly woman who died at a Gulf Coast nursing facility in 1978 had a bed sore infested with maggots before her death, a witness testified in the murder trial of the company that owned the home.

Sheryl Johnson, a nurses' aide at the Autumn Hills nursing home in Texas City, was one of two nurses testifying Thursday that they saw maggots on patients.

Registered nurse Jurline Boone testified she saw such an infestation on a patient's foot a few weeks earlier.

The testimony came in the murder-by-neglect trial of Autumn Hills Convalescent Centers Inc. and five of its current or former employees.

They are accused in the Nov. 20, 1978, death of Elnora Breed, an 87-year-old woman who died 47 days after entering the Autumn Hills nursing home.

"They were just crawling around, just crawling. I just wanted to howl," Ms. Johnson testified about her experience with the maggots on Mrs. Breed.

Mrs. Boone said she worked at the nursing home for two weeks in September 1978 before Mrs. Breed entered the facility.

She said she quit because the nursing home was "a mess" and because she found maggots on a patient's foot.

One day while she was working, Mrs. Boone said, "I smelled a different smell that didn't smell like the urine smell I was used to smelling. I followed my nose to her room. Her slipper fell off and there were maggots in her foot."

Mrs. Boone said her first day on the job another nurse told her "I was going to be sorry I came."

The nurse said she found the nursing home severely disorganized, grossly understaffed and the workers lacking in training.

"There wasn't the supplies I thought should be there to give basic care," she said.

Mrs. Boone said she reported her observations to nursing director Cassandra Canlas, a defendant in the case.

"She told me she realized this and would very much like to do something about this," Mrs. Boone said. "She told me she didn't have the budget."

The nurse said the aides were not washing their hands to prevent cross contamination and they weren't turning patients often enough to avoid bedsores.

The nurse also testified some of the aides shirked their duties and one could not read or write.

"If they had been my staff I would have fired half of them," she said.

Earlier testimony indicated the aides were responsible for bathing patients, turning the bedfast residents, feeding them and changing linens.

Ms. Johnson said she did not receive any training until May 1979 after she had worked at Autumn Hills nearly five years.

She also testified the only nurse on duty during the overnight shift often slept all night.

"Any person who learns of abuse or neglect at a nursing home has a duty to report it to the state," the Galveston County district judge told Mrs. Boone.

"Do you understand that in the event the state decided to bring charges against you, you have the right to consult counsel and to refuse to answer questions?" he asked.

"It's the truth and I'm not going to retract it," Mrs. Boone said. "I don't have anything to hide and I'll continue."

Minority students have low teacher test scores

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — In the wake of a state battle defending teacher training exams in federal court, minority students scored poorly on the most recent skills test.

Only 17 percent black and 27 percent Hispanic students who took the Pre-Professional Skills Test passed it, results showed. Those figures compared to a 66 percent passing rate for white education students and a 57 percent passing rate overall.

More than 7,000 college students, mainly sophomores, took the state-required exam in June which students must pass to be admitted to any of the 65 state teacher training institutions.

The results were released in the midst of the state's appeal of a ruling from U.S. District Court Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler. Justice suspended use of the test on Aug. 27 citing potential discrimination against minorities.

Minority scores on the exam, given three times a year, were increasing slightly until the June test.

Marvin Veselka, the Texas Education Agency's assistant commissioner for assessment, said the latest results won't hurt the state's appeal.

McLean church to mark founding with celebration

McLEAN - The McLean United Methodist Church will be having a celebration Sunday in observance of the church's being the first one founded and built in Gray County.

The anniversary celebration will begin at 11 a.m. with special recognitions and music. Dr. C. B. Melton, Pampa District superintendent, will bring the message.

The morning service will be followed with a "dinner on the ground" and an afternoon of historical remembering, music and visitation.

In the collecting of stories for the Gray County History Book, which will come out later this year, members of the congregation became aware that McLean Methodist was the first church built in the county. The church was founded on Oct. 12, 1902, with Rev. G. R. Forte as pastor.

A celebration committee was formed to make plans for observing the church's anniversary, even though it is not a typical year for noting an anniversary.

But committee members thought that learning the fact of the church's being the first in Gray County was significant and that this would be as good a time as any to celebrate the church's beginning and its continuation through the years.

All former pastors, former members, present members and friends of the church are invited to attend the observance activities.

There will be displays of old pictures, former Sunday School rolls, old church records and artifacts.

The dinner, furnished by congregation members, will be held in the Fellowship Hall, with out-of-town guests being honored at the meal. Local members who do not belong to the United Methodist Women are asked to bring either a salad or a dessert. The UMW group is taking care of other items on the menu.

The church's Administrative Board has approved the erection of a permanent sign identifying the church and its founding pastor and of a conjunctive marker commemorating the site as that of the first church established in Gray County.

Though the sign and marker will not be in place by the date of the observance, committee members feel they will serve as a fitting reminder of this first anniversary observance.

Persons having mementoes of the church, including pictures and other items, through the years are asked to get them to Mrs. Ted (Imogene) Longino, 617 N. Commerce, or Box 234, McLean, TX 79057 as soon as possible. Out-of-town persons may bring them to the celebration and give them to Longino or Ruth Magee upon arrival.

The mementoes can relate to the church, Sunday School, the Women's Missionary Society, the Women's Society of Christian Service, the Wesleyan Service Guild, the Epworth League or the Methodist Youth Fellowship. Pictures are also being sought of former members who are now deceased.

The photos and other mementoes will be exhibited in or about the Fellowship Hall.

Members of the celebration planning committee are Ruth Magee, Bob Black, Martha Parker, John M. Haynes and present pastor Rev. Bill Wilson.

Company's files tell nation's history

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Insurance, often thought of as a business of dry tables and charts, has its fascinating side, researchers here at one of the oldest insurance companies in the country have learned.

Studying The Hartford Insurance Group archives in connection with the celebration this year of the company's 175th anniversary, researchers came up with some sidelights to the nation's history.

Among the items they unearthed was the original insurance policy issued to Abraham Lincoln on his Springfield, Ill., home, processed just 30 days before he left for his March 4 inauguration. He paid $22 for fire insurance coverage on the structures and $2 surveying expense.

The policy was for a face amount of $3,200, which included $3,000 on the simple two-story structure, an additional $75 coverage on the carriage house and $125 coverage for a detached frame wooden house and outhouse.

The Lincoln homestead, the only one the president ever owned, was a frequent meeting place for the incoming administration as they pondered the fate of the nation in the wake of the secession of seven Southern states. During Lincoln's tenure in the nation's capital, the house was rented to Lucian A. Tilton, president of the Great Western Railroad.

If you were to ask what U.S. Army Lt.-Col. Robert E. Lee was doing at the time he was called to quell an insurrection at Harper's Ferry, Va., the answer would be he was signing a fire insurance policy.

On Oct. 17, 1859, while the agent was preparing the policy for Arlington Lee's handsome mansion in Fairfax County, Va., across the Potomac from Washington, Lt. Jeb Stewart arrived with orders for Lee to report immediately to the secretary of war. He did not return home until after he had captured abolitionist John Brown and his men and released their grip over the arsenal. When he returned, his policy for $5,800 insurance on the property was ready. His cost was only 40 cents per hundred dollars annually.

On the night of Dec. 15, 1835, a fire started in lower Manhattan that eventually destroyed more than 600 buildings and a major part of New York City. Flames engulfed the area for over 15 hours and a large section of the wealthiest part of the city was in ruins. The destruction has been estimated at between $15 and $26 million.

In order to pay the claims as soon as possible, the then president of The Hartford, Eliphalet Terry, hitched up his horses, wrapped himself in a warm blanket and drove his sleigh over a hundred miles through the night from Hartford to New York, where he set up temporary headquarters to meet policy holder demands.

Another disaster on the other side of the country in 1906 was the great San Francisco earthquake. Since damage was so severe and there was a constant fear of aftershocks from the major quake, the records of the company were kept in a pit in the back yard of the agent's home, covered each night and reopened for the start of business in the morning.

Business was conducted out of doors on a folding table. Since many records had been destroyed, a great many of the transactions were based both on the memory of the company and the honesty of the policy holders.

According to the researchers, the first rain insurance policy in the United States was on a rodeo held in Dewey, Okla., in 1920. It rained that day and the company paid a $2,000 loss.

Probably the shortest length of time an insurance policy was in force was one and a half hours. In 1955, the 1,600-year-old Yonan Codex, said by scholars to be the only complete New Testament in the original Aramaic-Syriac language used by Christ and his disciples, was covered by a $1.5-million policy when it was removed from the vault of the National Savings and Trust Co. and brought to the White House for then President Eisenhower to view the document.

A German U-boat covered by an American insurance policy? Not during the World War II, but in 1945, U-505 finally found its way to Chicago from near the coast of Africa, where she had been captured. To be installed in a museum the boat had to be moved across the famous Lake Shore Drive. It was insured against damages for its short and uneventful land trip.

The animal kingdom has come in for its share of insurance coverage over the years, records show. One of the most unusual was the case of Ramar, a lowland gorilla. Zoological experts hoped to mate this species in captivity a few years ago but discovered that the 350-pound, 13-year-old gorilla found the climate and atmosphere of the Philadelphia Zoo not to his liking.

He was carefully shipped to the Dade County Zoo in Florida in hopes that he would find the climate more relaxing. He was sent by air.

Plants cover research center grounds

STANTON, Minn. (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of flowers cover hundreds of acres at the Northrup King research center in what amounts to one of the largest gardens in the state.

"We have field corn, vegetable crops like cucumbers, squash, pumpkins, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, we have forage crops like alfalfa, we have sorghum and sunflowers and soybeans," said Bruce Wiese, the research center manager. "And we have the flowers. We put the flowers out by the road, where they'd catch some attention."

"This is not a breeding patch, this is purely a quality assurance program for checking the seed to make sure it's running true to type," said Ted Lamm, the research center's operations manager. "You know, if we advertise a package of red petunias, we don't want them coming out white."

And, he said, the research center is not even involved much in producing the flowers.

"The work on the flowers is really done up in Minneapolis," he said. "Down here, we just grow them."

The research center's plants appear as well tended as a master gardener's backyard plot. Not only is the soil some of the best around, but the entire 412 acres is irrigated.

Row after row of flourishing squash plants flash white and golden-yellow fruits at passers-by, thousands of cucumbers curl snugly under their deep-green vines.

What happens to it all?

"Most of it is just plowed under," Lamm said.

Wiese said that while some of the crops are used for further seed experiments, others can't be sold because of the way they are grown.

The research center, he said, is often attempting to learn as much as it can about a certain plant or a certain crop, and doesn't want to deal with the common problems of the backyard gardener.

Therefore, the center may, under controlled research conditions, use special pesticides in a manner that would make the vegetables inedible.

It's all part of the effort necessary to stay a leader in the huge plants and seeds market — a market where an ounce of petunia seed may bring $10,000. "But there are an awful lot of seeds in an ounce," Wiese noted.

"We've just about finished an expansion that will cost about $3 million," Wiese said. "There are 13 computer-controlled greenhouses, 11 growth chambers with controlled environments, and 47 employees, including seven with Ph.D.s."

Family group Local group plans concert to speak here

The Jerry Pollard family, missionaries to Peru, will be ministering at Lamar Full Gospel Assembly at the 7 p.m. services Sunday.

The Pollards have been involved in church planting through discipleship, according to Pastor Gene Allen.

In the last three years of service in northern Peru, the Pollards have established 14 new churches through discipleship training seminars. Through the discipleship principles, they have also seen small churches grow into larger churches and larger churches grow into even larger churches, Pastor Allen said.

The Pollards believe that discipleship can affect the growth of any church anywhere and that this is becoming the new philosophy in church evangelism, he explained.

Discipleship training has carried the Pollard family — Jerry and Wanda, with their two children, Jerri and Daniel — across the Andean Mountains numerous times and into the Upper Amazon Jungle Basin.

They will be sharing more fully about their ministry during the service.

Pastor Allen invited the public to attend the special services.

Lutherans slate Palo Duro meet

Area Lutheran congregations in the Texas Panhandle will sponsor a Mission Festival Celebration in the Palo Duro amphitheater beginning at 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 20, for the public.

Speaker for the event will be Dr. Alan Abel, former missionary to the Philippines.

Plans for the festival include evangelism balloons for the children, a hymn sing and an informal worship celebration emphasizing "Jesus Is Lord of the Nations."

A picnic pot-luck will follow the celebration.

In case of inclement weather, the Mission Festival Celebration will be held at St. Paul Lutheran Church in Canyon.

Question brings protests

CHICAGO (AP) — A statement by an Episcopal Chaplain Rev. Sam A. Portaro Jr. in the ecumenical weekly, the Christian Century, has brought a wave of protests from letter writers. Rev. Portaro questioned the oft-quoted "God sides with the poor" cliché, saying God does not love "any one of us more than another."

Local contemporary Christian music group Power and Light will present a free concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the Pampa Middle School auditorium.

The seven-member band see their music as a means of fighting a spiritual battle in sharing the gospel of Christ with other young people.

Members of the band are Randy Ray, Sherry Smith, Andora Smith, Oly Scalise, Tim J. Turner, Tammy Smith and Harlon Hatcher.

The group has been together for more than two years, playing in various auditoriums and other places in the Texas Panhandle and parts of Oklahoma.

Ray, bass player, said the group doesn't feel their music as preaching; instead, the music is a way of sharing their personal beliefs with others.

There is a spiritual battle going on in the world today, Ray stated, "and this music is our way of fighting."

The group was formed when Ray and Turner got together and wrote some songs that "turned out pretty good." Ray was in another group and Turner had moved back to Pampa from Alabama. But after their initial song writing experience, they decided to form their own group.

The two young men found other musicians to join them for jamming sessions. When they discovered other people enjoyed listening to them, they started the group with other musicians. They were later joined by the Smith sisters, who provide vocal back-ups. The three sisters have sung in a local family group.

The group plays all original songs written by the band members.

Also assisting the band in its performances are Kelly Russell, lights; Randy Cunningham, ministry coordinator; Cheryl Knipp, concessions, and Brian Bradley, stage manager.

IN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

America the Beautiful...

From the time that Columbus discovered America men have thought of this country as something special. It was here that Ponce de Leon sought the Fountain of Youth, and men have long admired America's majestic mountains and beautiful valleys. However, the real beauty lies not in the land, but in the people. The people came seeking a land where they could worship God in freedom, and under God developed a kind and loving spirit. This is what makes America beautiful.

Attend church regularly... help keep America beautiful

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Annual Christian Women's Retreat set for Oct. 18-19

The sixth annual Panhandle Christian Women's Retreat will meet again this year at the Episcopal Conference Center in Amarillo on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 18 and 19.

Pat Kennedy of Pampa, steering committee chairman, said the interdenominational retreat is open to all women in the Panhandle.

This year's retreat is entitled "The Necessities of Life: Choosing the Better Part."

Guest speaker will be Martha Hook, a writer, teacher and homemaker from Tyler. A graduate of North Texas State University, she also has a master of arts degree from Southern Methodist University and has attended Austin College and the University of North Carolina.

She taught literature at Philadelphia College of Bible for two years, has authored four books and has published several magazine articles. Presently Hook is teaching two weekly women's Bible classes and a weekly women's discipleship class. She also has a weekly radio program entitled "The Reading Well."

Her husband is Dr. Phillip Hook, who has taught theology at Philadelphia College of Bible, Wheaton College and Dallas Theological Seminary. After serving as director of the Pine Cove Conference Center near Tyler for 11 years, Dr. Hook has recently become the executive director of Educational Radio Foundation of East Texas, headquartered at KVNE radio station in Tyler.

Dr. and Mrs. Hook have traveled and taught together through the United States and in Guatemala, Mexico, Belize, England, Wales, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Africa and Eastern Europe. They have three grown daughters.

Lorna Hubbard, publicity chairman, said the 24-hour retreat is set up to allow busy women to attend. "It only lasts from 4 p.m. Friday, the 18th, to 4 p.m. the 19th," she said. "We also think the $30 cost is reasonable," covering three meals and a night's lodging.

Hubbard stressed that reservations need to be made by Sunday, Oct. 13, by calling Florene Watson at 1-224-3554 in Borger because space is limited.

Religion Roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the Bible "has formed not only American culture but also the cultures of many other nations around the world."

In a message for observance of National Bible Week Nov. 24 to Dec. 1, he said "we sometimes forget that for most of America's history, the only book most Americans possessed was the Bible."

"It formed not only our moral habits but even our language," he said, adding that it "remains far and away the most popular of all books." He said "the principles it contains are of timeless relevance and its beauty is forever discovered anew by millions of Americans."

He urged appropriate ceremonies and reading of the Bible in the non-sectarian observance sponsored by the Layman's National Bible Committee to encourage increased Bible reading.

NEW YORK (AP) — A spokesman for 39 national Jewish organizations has assailed U.S. failure to veto a United Nations Security Council resolution condemning Israel for its raid on headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Tunisia.

"America's determination to resist Arab terrorism has been tested and found wanting," Kenneth J. Bailkin, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, said of U.S. abstention from the vote.

"Terrorists everywhere will take heart from America's refusal to stand with Israel by vetoing the resolution."

TIMISOARA, Romania (AP) — Crowds flocked to see American evangelist Billy Graham on a recent crusade in Timisoara, Romania. While 5,500 crowded into an Orthodox Cathedral, about 35,000 crammed streets and adjoining roof-tops in the Communist-ruled city.

Do you have old photographs that you cannot identify? Try a "trick-or-treat-o-gram." Send a xerox or duplicate of the picture to someone that might be able to identify the person with a note asking for assistance. The treat might be a copy of the picture for the individual helping identify or giving information that leads to the identification. When taking photographs, remember that 20 years in the future someone else might have a problem identifying your family. List the names of each person and position, where and when the picture was taken and what the occasion was. Identify everyone in the picture, including pets, by name and nickname. If several families are involved, group them by family. Pretend that you are showing the photograph to a stranger and introducing your family. Take time now instead of trying to remember at the end of the year. If you have children, start a book for them and have duplicates made of the important snapshots for each book. Happy Hunting!

Extended education program offered to future physicians

CHICAGO (AP) — A new program at the University of Chicago is designed to help future physicians cope with a fast-changing profession. It will offer selected medical students advanced degrees in fields becoming increasingly important to the practice of medicine that are not usually included in traditional medical education.

The program will provide participants Ph.D training in such areas as economics, law, theology, philosophy, sociology, business, public policy and health administration.

"It has become clear that addressing our nation's health care concerns today requires broadening the education of many physicians in leadership roles beyond what may be regarded as traditional medicine," said Dr. Donald W. King.

Book on professors brings mixed reactions

CINCINNATI (AP) — Nasty notes are mingled with positive comments that turn up in the mail of a woman who co-authored a book about lecherous professors, skeletons the book says higher education keeps in its closet.

"Some complained to the dean. They said the book reflected on the institution," said Billie Wright Dziech.

Ms. Dziech, 43, a slim, blond English professor at the University of Cincinnati, and Linda Weiner, the college's vice provost of student affairs, co-authored "The Lecherous Professor," a 219-page book published last spring.

The comments — negative and positive — come from people across the country, said Ms. Dziech, who has accepted invitations to appear on talk shows and to lecture at college campuses.

"It has been most widely read by institutions," she said. "It makes me feel frustrated with parents, who aren't reading it much."

"I've gotten hundreds of letters, but always from victims. I have not yet gotten a letter from a parent. The stats on this are worse than the stats about herpes. Parents are angry about herpes, why not about this?"

She said she and Ms. Weiner, who has worked at UC about 16 years, believe sexual harassment is an epidemic. About 20 to 30 percent of college women experience sexual harassment from professors, whether their school is private, public, small or big, Ms. Dziech said.

"It's a very serious problem. Sometimes, you assume when you don't see something in the open, it's not there. But it's not the kind of behavior someone advertises," she said.

The writers interviewed about 400 students and college officials nationwide, Ms. Dziech said. She says her own students complain about sexual harassment from male professors, and that students motivated her to write the book.

"We all knew it went on, but we didn't know what our responsibility was," she said. "I had a sense of guilt because for so many years I had not done anything about it. This is my way of wanting to help."

The book discusses studies at Arizona State University, Iowa State, Rhode Island, Michigan State, Florida, California-Berkeley, Cincinnati and East Carolina.

Ms. Dziech, who is married and has a 15-year-old son, says she is not a "women's libber" attacking men.

"I'm trying to say the lecherous professor is different from the rest of those in his profession," she said. "He's not characteristic of most of the men I work with. He's embarrassing."

Dear Abby

Double the pleasure when you buy gifts for twins

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A reader wrote that she was going to a shower for a friend who was expecting triplets. Her question: "Must I bring three presents, or is one gift acceptable?"

Your reply: "Give three gifts—one for each baby; the cost of all three should amount to whatever you would have spent had your friend been expecting a single."

Abby, triplets are three children born together; had they been singles born a year apart, they would have been entitled to separate "whole value" gifts. Neither the parents nor the children should be shortchanged at this time.

The issue of multiples and gift-giving is far-reaching. When twins attend a birthday party, mothers should send them with two gifts of value that they would like to see reciprocated. Since parents of singles often spend in the manner that you suggest, multiples rarely receive a gift of similar value to what was given.

In the reverse circumstances, when gifts are given to teachers, mothers of multiples should give the full amount per child because the teacher had the responsibility for two (or three) children. The per-child gift acknowledges that the teacher had two hands to hold and two noses to wipe.

Friends and relatives could help by understanding that the circumstances of the birth should not affect the value of the gift. Each child should be treated as an individual.

DIANE WEISS, PRESIDENT, NASSAU COUNTY MOTHERS OF TWINS CLUB

DEAR MRS. WEISS: You are absolutely right: Every child should receive a "whole" gift, but did you overlook the fact that the letter was signed "Over Budget"?

In the interest of treating each child as an individual, I recommended three individual gifts instead of something all three could share, such as a box of dusting powder, a record album or a game.

Read on for another point of view.

DEAR ABBY: As a twin yourself, you should have used better sense in your reply to "Over Budget." I, too, am a twin, and I have plenty of bad memories of receiving half a gift at birthday parties. My sister and I were better off when we received a "normal" gift that we could share, like a game. Instead, we got a lot of low-cost gifts that were totally useless because mothers would try to buy us two gifts for the price of one!

Sure, I enjoyed the fun and benefits of being a twin—and I am not spoiled—but multiple-birth babies should not be treated as a half or a third of a person. I know what it feels like, and I'm sure you do.

JILL COUSINS, MARIETTA, GA.

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 years old and female. I am either confused or stupid, but there is something I need explained to me. I heard that a man determines whether the baby will be a boy or a girl.

For example, my dad had the mumps when he was in his teens, and the mumps fell on the left side of his private parts. After Dad got married, Mom had six girls—no boys. The doctor told him that the mumps had fallen on his "boy side," so he could only have girls.

Is that true?

IN THE DARK

DEAR IN: No. Although the male does determine the sex of the child, it has nothing to do with either the left or right side—or the mumps, for that matter. Either your dad misunderstood the doctor, or the doctor was joking.

Priest took varied path to East Texas

By VALERIE CULP WILKERSON
Lufkin Daily News

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — The road that led the Rev. John Zabelskas to Lufkin has been a long one, full of twists and side trips that have taken him all over the world.

He has found himself in a variety of situations, from being on crocodile-infested rivers to joining in a private Mass with Pope John Paul II. There have been several stints as chaplain aboard the Pacific Princess — better known as "The Love Boat."

Zabelskas became the new pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church this summer.

"I wasn't quite sure if I wanted to go 'back on the farm after seeing Paris,'" he joked, adding, "I wanted to get back to parish work.

Working with the people, you feel that this is where your call is. In a parish situation, you have the opportunity to use all your abilities. It is a lot more fulfilling of your priestly vocation."

He succeeded the Rev. Maurice Linehan — for the second time in both men's careers. This time Linehan moved on to be administrator of the Lady of Guadalupe congregations in Diboll and Corrigan.

The last time their paths crossed, Zabelskas succeeded Linehan to the elected post of Provincial Superior for the Missionaries of La Salette, heading one of four La Salette provinces in the United States.

During the six years he served in that post, Zabelskas traveled around the world, visiting Poland, the Philippines, South America, New Zealand, Europe and Madagascar.

He says that opportunity to meet other church leaders was very rewarding. "It makes you aware that the church is not only here in Lufkin. It ripples out..." he said.

Lufkin also is a good place to practice his other hobbies — cooking, photography and golf. In Zabelskas' kitchen is a long row of cookbooks and he has pictures he has taken all over the world in albums and frames.

Among his golf mementos are a hole-in-one trophy and a picture of himself with Nancy Lopez.

Zabelskas says he enjoys the challenge of golf.

"It is an individual thing that you know you're never going to perfect but you always try to improve. You can still do it at any age. Also, there is the opportunity for meeting a lot of people."

He says he would like to promote a golf tournament next year to benefit St. Patrick's School.

Zabelskas set out on his career at the age of 14 in Connecticut.

"My motive was not very noble," he says. "It was 1943. I saw a lot of my friends leaving for war. The option was either the war or the factory. Some priest came along and said, 'Hey, don't you want to go to the seminary?' I said 'sure.' ...A lot of people couldn't believe I went."

Eventually, he says, his motive became more correct.

"You do realize that there is a calling, so you do accept it. You always have to work at it."

Pampa hosts improved Lobos tonight

Sports Forum and Agin 'Um WARREN HASSE

"OUR DEFENSE HAS STARTED to play well the past two games." Those were the words of Borger Bulldogs coach Butch Henderson after his team blanked Lubbock Dunbar 7-0 last weekend. But you can bet the very same thoughts are felt by head coaches of the two clubs which clash here in Pampa tonight, the Levelland Lobos and the Harvesters.

In fact, Coach Gene Mayfield's troops haven't been scored on in a month. Littlefield, in the second game of the season, was the last to turn on a scoreboard light. Pampa, meanwhile, after allowing its first three opponents an average of 34 points, sliced that to an average 13 in the last two victories. It is easy to pinpoint the exact spot of the defense turnaround. It occurred in the second period of the Perryton game, when the Rangers made an ill-advised decision not to punt on a fourth and twelve situation at the Pampa 33. Up until then they had moved the ball with ease. But since the Pampa defense held on that play, it has been a new season. From pourous, soft, unsure, unfriendly, the defense has become aggressive, confident, solid.

So tonight's game promises to be low-scoring, like the 3-0 Pampa win two years ago. In that game, offensive ineptitude on both sides of the line cause the failure to score. Not true tonight. Both squads also have ball-moving ability. PHS has produced the most points of any district team, 109, in building a 2-3 record. Levelland has the second toughest defense, and a 2-2 mark, as it opens conference play.

The series between the two is the shortest on the Pampa schedule. It extends through only three games, with the same head coaches on each sideline, and Pampa undefeated, owning two wins after an 8-8 tie in the initial encounter at Levelland in 1982. Last season PHS used a mishandled punt snap for a 9-7 win, first of the season for the Green and Gold. The 3-0 win the previous year also was fortuitous for Pampa, Devon Cross booting a 43-yard field goal with 18 seconds left in the game. Pampa had punted on the previous series, the wind-aided kick apparently sailing into the end zone, at least according to one official. The referee however, overruled, saying the ball was downed at the Lobo 1-yard line. Three plays later the visitors punted into the wind, setting up the game-winning boot. The two teams managed only a total of 11 first downs between them, indicative of the lack of offense. In the three-game series, Pampa has outscored Levelland, 20-15.

Although Mayfield has never beaten Pampa as Lobo mentor, his history against Pampa is quite different. Denied the Pampa job in 1958 after a successful tenure at Littlefield, the Quitaque native drove 28 miles to Borger, was hired there, and proceeded to beat Pampa annually the next seven years, including one of the worst in PHS history, 66-13 in 1958. In those seven meetings, his Bulldogs allowed Pampa only six touchdowns while scoring 242 points themselves.

Mayfield has been one of the most successful high school football coaches in Texas history. He reached the state finals one season at Borger, eventually moving on to Odessa Permian where he gained two state titles. He accepted the athletic director-head football post at his alma mater, West Texas State, in 1971, and shared the Missouri Valley Conference co-championship with Tulsa the next season. He left in 1977 for private business but was lured back to coaching four seasons ago by Levelland. Last summer he was placed in the Texas High School Coaches Association Hall of Honor, and is also a member of the Panhandle Sports Hall of Fame.

There is no question about his coaching ability.

GAME NOTES: Dumas is at Borger tonight, while Dunbar and Estacado clash at 2 p.m. tomorrow in Lubbock. Canyon draws the open date...Lobo running back Ron Arrington has scored 6 TDs, teammate Mike Shepherd four...Pampa's offense is averaging 254 yards per game, Levelland 288. Mayfield ballclubs are traditionally ground oriented, and has only 180 passing yards this season...Mayfield reportedly sought the Pampa job four years ago when Kendall was hired from Liberal, but also wanted the athletic directorship, too, which was filled at the time...He quarterbacked the 1950 WTSU Buffaloes to their best season in history, 10-1, culminating in a 14-13 Sun Bowl victory over Cincinnati. Now his nephew, Tod, former Panhandle HS star, is setting new passing records each weekend at WT as a junior quarterback...Former PHS Coach Odus Mitchell has been elected to the Texas Sports Hall of Fame by the veterans committee of the Texas Sports Writers Association...Harvester basketball coach Garland Nichols was back on the job this week after a two-week hospital stay. Official date for start of basketball practice is October 21...Houston Aldine (5-0) moved up a notch and is ranked as the No. 21 schoolboy football team in the nation this week by USA Today. Still No. 1 is East St. Louis, Ill. (6-0), and with a 32-game winning streak...A victory tonight would give Coach John Kendall a total of 10 wins as head coach at PHS, only the eighth football coach to reach double figures...The first effects of "pass-play" legislation will be felt in all extra-curricular activities after this weekend as the first six-week period concludes...Former Amarillo HS head coach Bum Phillips, now leader of the New Orleans Saints, asked if he had played college football, said: "I thought I did until I look at some old game films." (He really did play at Lamar JC and Stephen F. Austin as an offensive lineman.)

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

It's a whole new ballgame for the Pampa Harvesters, who welcome Levelland tonight in a District 1-4A game at Harvester Stadium.

The Harvesters entered last year's clash trying to end a five-game losing streak. This season, it's a different story. After dropping their first three games, the Harvesters are riding a two-game winning streak and the confidence level is much higher.

Pampa is 1-0 in district play after a 33-6 rout of Dumas last Friday night. Last season at this point, the Harvesters were 0-1 after losing to Dumas, 35-16. Levelland, which gave Pampa its only win last season in a 9-7 spine tingler, is much improved. The Lobos are 2-2 this season and have shut out Andrews, 13-0, and Hobbs, N.M., 39-0, in their last two games.

"Our defense is coming along good," said Levelland coach Gene Mayfield. "There's no question we're better than we were last year."

The Lobos have a balanced offense led by leading rusher and scorer Ron Arrington, a 155-pound halfback, and Michael Sheppard, a 180-pound junior.

Levelland's defense is led by 212-pound tackle Randy Brown and 200-pound linebacker Timmy Escup.

Mayfield said the Harvesters were impressive in their victories over Perryton and Dumas.

"Pampa beat a good Perryton team," Mayfield said. "I don't think anyone expected them to go to Dumas and whip them as bad as they did."

As a result of the Dumas victory, the Harvesters were picked as the Team of the Week by the Amarillo Globe-News.

Senior fullback Gary Jernigan scored the first four touchdowns as the Harvesters rolled to a 27-0 advantage at halftime. Jernigan rushed for 99 yards while quarterback Brent Cryer threw for 105 yards and a touchdown.

It was also an outstanding night for the defense, which never allowed the Demons past its own 43-yard line the first half.

Dumas quarterback Tommy Clark was sacked six times and threw three interceptions. Clark was sacked twice by 175-pound junior end Joel Farina, who also caused a fumble. James Worthum and John Roe also sacked the quarterback. Farina, Roe and Mark Williams also recovered fumbles.

Lance Ripple, Mike Lopez and Courtney Nickleberry had three pass interceptions for the Harvesters.

The "Big Hit" award, presented weekly by the Harvester coaching staff, went to senior linebacker David Carter, who had three solo tackles and five assists.

Senior cornerback Bryan Gordziel was Pampa's leading tackler with seven solo tackles and six assists. Other leading tacklers were James Miller, six assists, two solos; Mike Lopez, five assists, two solos; Lance Ripple, four assists, two solos, Mark Williams, four assists, five solos; Farina, four assists, five solos, and James Worthum, four solos.

Pampa head coach John Kendall looks for a close contest with Levelland tonight, especially if the rain continues.

"Levelland has got about the same team they had last year," Kendall said. "They've probably got more starters back than anyone else."

Cryer, who has passed for 425 yards and six touchdowns, is slowed by a bruised leg, and the speedy Jernigan may be slowed by a muddy field tonight.

"This rain isn't going to help us. Our offense is going to depend on how bad the field is," Kendall said. "There's not much grass in the middle of the field and if the rain keeps up, we'll be running a lot of plays to the sideline."

Ripple, a senior cornerback, hurt his leg in Tuesday's practice, but is expected to play tonight. So is Cryer, according to Kendall.

Tonight's kickoff is at 8 p.m.

Dodgers continue mastery of Cards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers' secret to dominating St. Louis in the first two games of the National League playoffs isn't much of a secret. The Dodgers simply don't do anything wrong.

"Everything they're doing is right," said Cardinals shortstop Ozzie Smith after the Dodgers won the second game of the best-of-seven series 8-2 Thursday night.

"It couldn't happen at a better time for them. They're pitching very well, hitting very well, fielding very well. What else can you say?"

The Dodgers, who won the opening game 4-1 on the strong pitching of Fernando Valenzuela and reliever Tom Niedenfuer, could wrap up the NL pennant by taking two of the three upcoming contests in St. Louis on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. No game was scheduled today.

Bob Welch, 14-4 during the regular season, is scheduled to take the mound for Los Angeles in Game 3 against the Cardinals' Danny Cox, 18-9, in a battle of right-handers.

Pitcher Orel Hershiser was the most prominent Dodger doing things correctly in the second game of the series, escaping virtually unscathed from early-inning trouble to throw a complete game at the Cardinals.

Hershiser, who closed out the regular season with 11 consecutive wins, won his 12th straight game at Dodger Stadium. He added insult to injury when he started the Los Angeles offense rolling with a run-producing single to tie the score 1-1 in the third inning.

He then scored the go-ahead run on the first of two doubles by Ken Landreaux.

After the three-run third inning, the Dodgers poured it on against St. Louis starter Joaquin Andujar, adding two runs on Greg Brock's homer in the fourth and another on Mike Marshall's RBI single in the fifth for a 6-1 lead.

Landreaux and Bill Madlock each had three hits in a 13-hit Dodger attack.

Hershiser said his early pitching problems were caused by being too pumped up for his first-ever playoff appearance.

"The type of energy I felt, it wasn't nervous energy," said Hershiser, 19-3 during the regular season. "I wasn't scared or shaky. It made me feel so strong I thought I could throw the ball through a wall. That's not good for a sinkerball pitcher. "I felt like I wanted to be Dwight Gooden and throw the ball past people," he said. "If it would make me throw like Gooden, I'd love it. But it doesn't."

He finally settled down, he said, after his trip around the bases in the third inning.

"Driving in the run wasn't as important to me as being able to run the bases," he said. "That took some of the strength out of me. I seemed to get in a good groove after that."

The Dodgers, meanwhile, were piling up runs against Andujar. His downfall began when, after allowing Steve Sax's one-out single in the third, he tried to pick him off first and threw wildly, with Sax winding up at third.

Hershiser twice failed to lay down a squeeze bunt but then slapped a high bouncer over the head of drawn-in St. Louis third baseman Terry Pendleton.

"He (Andujar) started off with very good stuff," St. Louis

Manager Whitey Herzog said. "But for some reason he made that throw to first despite the fact we were going to get an automatic out when Hershiser bunted."

"Then he came in with that pitch to Hershiser," Herzog said, shaking his head.

Bears put unbeaten record on line against San Francisco

RECORD QUARTERBACK — San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana, who set three team records last week, leads the defending Super Bowl champions against the unbeaten Chicago Bears Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
The National Football League's two undefeated teams, the Chicago Bears and Los Angeles Rams, on Sunday face opponents who stand at opposite ends of the NFL spectrum.

The 5-0 Bears, who have been dominant on both offense and defense, visit the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers, 3-2. The Rams, hopeful that star rusher Eric Dickerson has recovered enough from a hamstring injury to play, are at winless Tampa Bay.

Elsewhere Sunday, it will be Buffalo at New England, Cleveland at Houston, Denver at Indianapolis, Detroit at Washington, Minnesota against Green Bay at Milwaukee, the New York Giants at Cincinnati, St. Louis at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh at Dallas, New Orleans at the Los Angeles Raiders, Kansas City at San Diego, and Atlanta at Seattle.

On Monday night, Miami visits the New York Jets.

The last meeting between the Bears and 49ers, now 3-2, was in the 1984 NFC Championship game, when San Francisco demolished Chicago 23-0. But Jim McMahon, the Bears' No. 1 quarterback, was injured then.

"McMahon is the big difference," San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh said. "He is the premier runner as a quarterback in the league. This man can break any defense wide open. We are very concerned. Containing him would mean sort of corraling him because if you keep him from releasing outside, then he bursts up the middle on you."

The Bear running game is not focused on McMahon; of course, but on Walter Payton, the NFL's all-time leading rusher. For once, though, Chicago is explosive through the air as well, with wide receivers Willie Gault and Dennis McKinnon requiring lots of attention from the defense.

"I think we're playing a little bit better in some areas than we were a year ago, and I think the passing game is one," Bears Coach Mike Ditka said. "I think we have a few more tools to use on offense than we did a year ago."

McMahon, who missed seven games and the playoffs last year, is the leading passer in the NFC with 79 completions in 123 attempts for 1,194 yards and 10 touchdowns.

The 49ers aren't exactly overmatched on offense, however. Quarterback Joe Montana set three team records against Atlanta last week as he threw for five scores. He is rated third in the NFC with 106 completions in 172 attempts for 1,273 yards and 10 TDs.

The 49ers also have the NFL's leading running back combination in fullback Roger Craig and halfback Wendell Tyler. Craig has 672 total yards, including 401 receiving, and Tyler has 367 running yards among his 434.

Walsh says he's worried about Chicago's league-leading rushing defense.

"Their defense is beautifully conceived and virtually impossible to move the ball against," he said. "We're meeting the team that has set a standard on defense for the rest of football. It's being emulated throughout the rest of the league."

Winless Tampa Bay faces its second straight unbeaten club. The Bucs led Chicago 12-3 at halftime last week but lost 27-19.

"For five weeks in a row they have tried and tried and tried and still haven't won," Bucs Coach Leeman Bennett said. "The important thing is they can't start thinking it's not going to happen."

Rams Coach John Robinson considers his team lucky to be 5-0, especially after beating Minnesota 13-10 last week when Viking running back Darrin Nelson was stopped at the Ram 1-yard line on the last play of the game.

"I'm almost gleeful in jumping on all our problems," Robinson said. "One of the best things about this team is that it's not pat."

SWC roundup

SMU favored over unbeaten Baylor

SWC ROUNDUP
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Baylor Bears try to hold onto their Southwest Conference football leadership Saturday while the sixth ranked Arkansas Razorbacks visit Lubbock, a place that has been as friendly as Fayetteville.

Baylor, 2-0 in SWC play, faces red-faced Southern Methodist, a 28-6 upset loser to Arizona last week, at Texas Stadium. The 16th-ranked Mustangs are six-point favorites over the 19th ranked Bears, who have lost four straight games to SMU.

Arkansas, which has lost to Texas Tech only once in 13 games in Lubbock, is a 13-point choice over the Red Raiders. The Razorbacks are 1-0 in SWC play while Texas Tech is 0-2.

Texas Christian is a five-point favorite over Rice and Texas A&M is seven-point favorite over Houston in other SWC games.

No. 2 ranked Oklahoma rated a seven-point favorite over 17th ranked Texas in the other game involving SWC teams.

Nine of the last 13 meetings between Baylor and SMU have been decided by a touchdown or less. SMU scored two touchdowns in the last three minutes of the game to win 24-20 last year.

"SMU is big and strong, a lot like Southern California," said Baylor defensive end Eugene Hall. "We're expecting a physical game. We've already beaten one top 10 team (USC) I don't see any reasons why we can't do it again."

SMU Coach Bobby Collins said "It's a big challenge for our team to bounce back. Our kids have shown they can handle adversity and now we've got to show that we can do it again."

Arkansas will welcome back noseguard Tony Chericco and running back J.R. Brown, who were suspended a game for disciplinary reasons.

Arkansas has won eight in a row against Texas Tech and leads the series 24-4. The only Red Raider victory over the Hogs in Lubbock came in 1966. The 21-6 loss kept Arkansas from a third consecutive trip to the Cotton Bowl.

"Texas Tech is the type of team that never gives up," said Arkansas Coach Kenny Hatfield. "Three of their first five games have been decided in the final minute."

Tech Coach Jerry Moore said Arkansas isn't big but "makes up for it with excellent quickness. We are a lot alike in the things we try to do. Their top 10 national ranking shows what kind of talent they have. The last three weeks they haven't even been tested. I think Arkansas has the best defense in the conference."

The TCU-Rice game which is being regionally televised at 12:04 p.m. will mark the starting debut of Horned Frog quarterback David Rascoe, who will be taking over for Scott Ankrum. It was announced on Monday that Ankrum suffered torn ligaments in an ankle against Arkansas and will be lost for the season.

For the first time since 1981, the Texas Aggies will be taking a 1-0 SWC record into a game against Houston.

Houston is 0-1 in conference play but Aggie running back Anthony Toney says "They are a tough team."

Running back Coach Jim Helms said "Houston has great athletes, but we'll have to line up and go pound on 'em."

Pro Picks

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

When the Chicago Bears lost to the San Francisco 49ers 23-0 in last year's NFC title game, Jim McMahon watched from the sidelines as Steve Fuller failed to generate any offense.

McMahon is healthy (at least for now), which is one reason the Bears are unbeaten in five games this year, and he'll be at quarterback when Chicago goes into Candlestick Park Sunday. But that hasn't convinced the 4-point favorites despite a sputtering 3-2 start marked by losses to New Orleans and Minnesota.

Chicago isn't New Orleans or Minnesota, which may turn out to be a blessing for the 49ers — good teams play up to challenges, particularly at home.

Add the injuries that make Dan Hampton and Richard Dent questionable for the Bears.

Add the need factor — the Bears are two games ahead in their division; the 49ers two games behind in theirs.

Mix well and it comes out

- 49ERS. Pittsburgh (plus 6) at Dallas.
- STEELERS. Miami (minus 3½) at New York Jets (Monday night.)
- DOLPHINS. Minnesota (plus 3) at Green Bay.
- VIKINGS. Kansas City (minus 3½) at San Diego.
- CHIEFS. New Orleans (plus 9½) at Raiders.
- SAINTS. New York Giants (minus one) at Cincinnati.
- GIANTS. Rams (minus 6) at Tampa Bay.
- RAMS. Other games (HOME TEAM in caps) St. Louis (minus 3½) over

- Philadelphia Detroit (plus 9½) over
- WASHINGTON Denver (minus 5) over
- INDIANAPOLIS NEW ENGLAND (minus 10) over
- Buffalo Cleveland (minus 2½) over
- HOUSTON SEATTLE (minus 14) over

Major retailers post lackluster sales, business confidence off

By The Associated Press

Severe weather along the eastern seaboard and the automakers' sales incentive programs are being blamed for a lackluster sales performance at the nation's major retailers in September.

The nation's top business executives, meanwhile, are taking a more dour view of the business climate, according to a private survey released Thursday.

The September retail sales results were hurt by Hurricane Gloria's sweep up the eastern seaboard and competition from auto dealers, who were offering reduced financing and other sales incentives, the retailers said.

In addition, analysts noted that the September results were compared with strong sales in the same period a year ago when retailers resorted to sharp markdowns in order to move their merchandise.

Industry leader Sears, Roebuck & Co. said its sales for the five weeks ended Oct. 5 edged up 0.3 percent. K mart Corp., ranked second, said same-store sales were down 5.2 percent and third-ranked J.C. Penney Co. said its sales slipped 0.5 percent.

"Overall, I'd say the sales in September were a continuation of a sluggish retail environment," said Thomas Tashjian, a retail analyst with the investment firm Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York.

The 1,000 executives responding to the nationwide survey by The Conference Board, a private business forecasting concern, indicated a lower appraisal of current and future economic conditions during the third quarter than during the first six months of the year.

The Conference Board's index of business confidence, which is based on the survey results, dropped to 51 on a scale of 100 for the third quarter, one point lower than in the second quarter and 10 points below the first quarter.

In other economic developments Thursday:

The nation's basic money supply rose $5.3 billion in late September, the Federal Reserve said. The gain was twice as large as most analysts expected, leaving money growth well above the targets which the Fed has set to assure steady, noninflationary economic growth.

West Germany's bright future

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur F. Burns, at 81, has the perspective of age and rich experience, much of it at the highest levels of government.

His four years in Bonn as the U.S. ambassador saw a closing of ranks between the United States and West Germany.

Looking back to 1981, when he took up the post, Burns recalls the tense debate over installing new U.S. missiles, the fast-growing Green Party calling for unilateral disarmament and a hard swerve to the left by the major opposition Socialists.

All this spelled trouble for the United States, which considers West Germany the bedrock of the NATO alliance. It's not said too often publicly, but U.S. officials have always worried that in its eagerness for reunification, the Germans might be seduced by Moscow into a deal or to abandon the alliance for neutralism. All that has changed, Burns said during a retirement celebration with some American and German friends as he reflected on the past and tried to predict the future.

A polite man, he made no mention of the uproar over President Reagan's visit last spring to the Bitburg military cemetery, with its Waffen SS graves. Emotions ran high.

American Jews and veterans made impassioned pleas to shun Chancellor Helmut Kohl's invitation to visit the cemetery. The West Germans insisted, as a matter of national pride, that Reagan keep to his schedule.

The president went ahead. The furor quickly died down.

As Burns looks ahead, he sees a few potential causes for concern in the German-American relationship. But the forecast by the onetime Columbia economics professor and presidential adviser is overwhelmingly optimistic.

The anti-nuclear protests have virtually disappeared. The new U.S. missiles are being accepted in West Germany even though they are aimed at the Soviet Union and could make the country even more of a nuclear tripwire.

The Greens are losing members and influence. The party's founders are almost as critical these days of Moscow as of Washington.

There is still anti-American rhetoric in West Germany, but it is less strident.

To Burns, though, the most important change since he was named ambassador, is a "revival of hope" among the majority of West German students. "They are hopeful about the future," he said, and they will be the politicians, businessmen and government leaders of tomorrow.

The blips on Burns' radar screen: the West German economy and tensions over "Star Wars" technology.

Inflation is way down in West Germany, to about 2 percent from a range of 5 percent to 6 percent. But unemployment is still high, around 8.5 percent.

Star Wars, the U.S. search for an anti-missile shield, probably will spin off rich commercial technology.

Unclaimed stocks benefit treasury

AUSTIN (AP) — Treasurer Ann Richards says the state treasury earned $1.6 million from its first sale of "lost" securities.

The sale took place to clean out corporate stocks and bonds that have been accumulating in the treasury since the unclaimed property law was passed in 1961.

LEBANON, Ind. (AP) — Singer Engelbert Humperdinck put in a 2 1/2-hour performance on the witness stand in a breach-of-contract suit filed against him for canceling a series of 1982 concerts in Indianapolis.

The 49-year-old entertainer said Thursday a combination of a sinus infection, bronchitis, laryngitis and pharyngitis kept him from performing in Indianapolis. "I only cancel when I am desperately ill and can't walk onstage," he said.

Judge Ronald E. Drury repeatedly warned spectators to refrain from applause and other outbursts during the singer's testimony. "We're trying to keep the pressure off the jury," Drury said.

HONOLULU (AP) — Vice President George Bush planned to rough it as he joined 25th Infantry Division troops at the Army's Schofield Barracks for a lunch of field rations, military officials said.

Bush and his wife, Barbara, spent Thursday night here on a rest stop before continuing their trip to the People's Republic of China.

After arriving at Hickam Air Force Base on Thursday, Bush was taken on a one-hour boat tour of Pearl Harbor during which he was given a briefing by the U.S. Pacific military commander, Adm. Ronald J. Hayes.

From Hawaii, Bush's party will fly to Saipan where he will meet with leaders of Pacific Island governments administered by the United States.

DOLOMITE, Ala. (AP) — Actor Robert Duval put his hands on his hips, took a deep breath and convulsed his fellow mercenary students by saying: "I love the smell of tear gas in the morning."

Duval, preparing for a new film role in which he plays a mercenary, said he chose the Frank Camper school, 10 miles west of Birmingham, to learn the tricks of the trade.

He spent several days at the school last week dodging tear gas and training in hand-to-hand

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police are stepping up their patrol of the Texas State Fair following several violent crimes at Fair Park.

Police said Wednesday they would add eight more uniformed officers outside the fairgrounds and work schedules will be juggled to boost the number of police working the fair on weekends where crowds are heaviest.

Twelve assaults were reported during the first week of the 18-day fair. The attacks include the fatal stabbing and the homosexual rape of a 10-year-old boy.

DALLAS (AP) — Homosexual members of city boards and agencies who say they can't obey the state's anti-sodomy law may have to give up their posts, city officials said.

State law requires members of certain commissions to sign an oath stating they will uphold all laws.

Anyone refusing to sign such an oath would be subject to legal challenge, city council members said they were told by the city attorney in a private briefing Wednesday.

The board member most obviously affected was Dallas Gay Alliance president Bill Nelson, who was appointed to the city's Civil Service Review Adjunct Board.

In the Vietnam War movie "Apocalypse Now," Duval played a rugged officer who uttered to his comrades the now-famous line, "I love the smell of napalm in the morning."

CHICAGO (AP) — Former Mayor Jane Byrne, tooling up to a campaign to regain the office in 1987, can be seen rocking and rolling to a Chicago group's new rock video.

"We're All Crazy 'bout Chicago," taped Thursday, is the creation of Jonathon Brandmeier, a local disc jockey who fronts a band called Johnny and the Leisure Suits.

Mrs. Byrne told reporters she was taping the video because "this is something light and positive."

"We've seen a lot of strife and fighting and turmoil in this city and people are awfully sick of it."

Air show will commemorate end of WWII

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — More than 150 World War II fighter planes, from trainers and Axis warplanes to a B-29 similar to the one which dropped the atomic bomb, will be part of a weekend airshow commemorating the war's end.

Officials of the Confederate Air Force, sponsors of the show, said they expect 40,000 people to take part in activities and to view two weekend performances which will have narration, sound effects and explosions.

More than 1,600 CAF personnel also will be on hand during the four-day event, which begins Thursday.

"The uniqueness of this event is that it is commemorating the 40th anniversary of the end of hostilities," said CAF Flight Operations Chief Archie Donahue. "One of the many celebrations in a war is the end of the war and as far as we're concerned to see that it does not happen again, by creating a deterrent."

Donahue, a Marine veteran of World War II, said the show will include demonstrations of air battles from Europe to the Pacific. Donahue, who shot down five Japanese Zeros in one battle in 1943, will fly with the "Tora, Tora" group that will represent the Japanese side.

An authentic Japanese Zero also will be part of the performance, Donahue said.

CAF officials said the organization, founded 28 years ago in Mercedes, is unique because it has many one-of-a-kind fighter planes that have cost thousands of dollars and years to refurbish.

Privately, its members own 180 vintage planes.

Donahue said there are many other groups that have World War II aircraft, but the one-of-a-kinds rarely are flown.

"In our opinion, an airplane that doesn't fly and sits is a dead plane," said Ralph Royce, CAF executive deputy director.

Tragedy struck the CAF during its airshow last year when a seaplane crashed in the Laguna Madre near South Padre Island, killing all seven men aboard.

The National Transportation Safety Board has ruled that the co-pilot misjudged the depth of water in which he was trying to land. The plane broke up in less than 2 feet of water.

But Donahue and other CAF pilots said flying is among the safest ways to travel.

"There are accidents. Most accidents are avoidable, but you do your best," Royce said.

Donahue added, "Last year we had a crash, yes, it was a very unfortunate circumstance. Everybody regrets that and we try to learn from it. Our flying is probably a little more hazardous, but it's safer than driving a car."

The organization's museum attracts thousands of visitors each year, many of them World War II veterans who reminisce, Donahue said.

"People actually have tears in their eyes," he said. "It's one of the most touching things you'll ever see."

"One of our purposes is to teach history to the younger people who only read about it in the history books," Donahue said.

But Donahue admitted he had a personal interest when he joined the CAF staff in 1981.

Vietnamese refugee cooks up the American dream

DENISON, Texas (AP) — Hoang Vi Tran was 15 when Saigon fell to the communists. He was not yet 20 when, in Arkansas, he learned to be a chef. Now 25, he owns on the edge of the American Southwest a restaurant named for an ancient Oriental capital.

The cuisine isn't Vietnamese, or Little Rock barbecue, or Texas chili, or even Denison highway hamburger. It's seafood and steak — Japanese style.

"I love America ... the freedom, whatever you want to do," says Tran.

Tran lives in Denison, across the street from Kyoto, his restaurant, but he could easily forgo the rent at his apartment. He spends all of his days and most of his nights at the restaurant. Seven days a week. His brother, who helps in the restaurant sometimes, says Tran wants to make the restaurant succeed. Then, maybe, he will take some time off.

"Vietnam was so terrible. Still, I went to a Chinese school. My father was the owner of a big factory. A rubber company. When the communists came in 1975, there was no food. The factory closed."

Tran's family was lucky, however. Before the communists, they had money. His parents hid some away, and when the time came to escape, three years after the fall of Saigon, they could pay for their freedom. His father, his mother, four brothers and two sisters are were able to leave, for thousands of dollars in gold.

They left on a 16-foot boat with 39 people aboard. After three days and three nights at sea, with no water, they landed in Thailand as refugees. Eight months later, Tran and his family were able to come to the United States.

Their first home was, appropriately, the Land of Opportunity — Arkansas. Tran learned to cook at a Japanese steak house in Little Rock. "I worked real hard and learned fast. The boss was good to me so I moved up real fast."

In 1983, Tran was head chef and the Fuji restaurant was named best in the state in a poll conducted by Arkansas Times magazine. At the same time, he was managing a sushi restaurant in Little Rock, the Tokyo Garden.
