They catch more than dogs, cats

By PAUL PINKHAM Staff Writer

It's not raining just cats and dogs at the Pampa Animal Control office these days.

And although those who read comic strips may think animal control officers have a vendetta against the Marmadukes of this world, local animal control officials are much more than simply dogcatchers.

'Anything that is an animal, if it get in the city limits, we've got to handle it," said Sandy Burns. director of the local office.

She cited statistics showing 99 animals other than dogs and cats that the local office has had to deal with since January. These include bats, snakes, skunks, opossums, birds, farm animals and even a U.S. government banded hawk that found itself injured in Pampa several months

Each of the local animal control officers can tell of strange animals and situations involving animals that have livened up their work. For Burns, it could be the time she roped a covote on Tignor Street.

"I don't know who was more scared, me or the coyote," she

But Burns's work since becoming an animal control officer has been filled with strange occurrences. Like the time, while working in Amarillo. she had to capture an alligator that had escaped from the circus.

Then there were the porcupines — two of them — one in a revolving door downtown and another in the elevator shaft at First Baptist Church. She also mentioned a skunk in the police department, a snake in the Post Office and a six - point buck in a woman's back vard For animal control officer Jackie Denham, one of the most rewarding moments began when fellow officer Dave Smith called and said he had a government banded hawk that had been shot in the wing. Denham said she took the bird to the vet, who did some minor surgery and told her to keep the bird as still as

Once at the Denham home, the hawk, which Denham said answers to Big Bird, feasted on a diet of rats, rabbits, roast and steak for about three weeks. "She ate better than we did. really," Denham recalled.

When it came time to let Big Bird go, Denham said she took the bird to a tree near the creek and left. When she returned the following morning the bird circled overhead three times, seeming to call to her each time. before disapearing into the atmosphere

"I have seen her twice since then. She's still in town, Denham said

Burns noted that she had to contact a licensed rehabilitator in Amarillo because the bird was government - banded, but the rehabilitator never showed up in Denham also recalled getting a call from a distraught citizen who said her home was filled with gila monsters, not normally found on the Texas Panhandle. The 'monsters' turned out to be a congregation of salamanders.

Needless to say, she was at a great relief to find out it wasn't gila monsters." Denham said.

Smith recalled tracking down a 10 - foot Burmese python that its owner had lost in Pampa. He said he kept watching for reports of missing chickens or some clue to the snake's trail

One day, he said, a man was reported carrying a large snake into his home. After getting verbal permission from the landlord, he said, the snake was recaptured.

Burns said skunks in town can lead to many problems because. among other things, they often carry rabies. They often play with dogs and cats and, even in play if the skunk bites a pet, the pet can catch rabies and possibly turn the disease over to its owner.

Skunks can crawl under houses that are not properly sealed. causing some smelly problems for the tenants if startled, she said. She also urged people not to feed pets outside or in open garages because this draws in skunks.

But most important for pet owners, according to Burns, is to abide by the law and have their pets vaccinated for rabies once a year. She called rabies vaccinations the only guarantee against an epidemic.

'These rabies shots are a life insurance policy for the owner. she said.

Although Pampa has not had a rabies problem. Burns said no statistics exist telling how much of the disease is out in the wild. Perryton, 70 miles to the north. has reported a dog with rabies in the past year she said

'Where'd that dog get rabies? Perryton's not that far," she

Despite porcupines, alligators, skunks, hawks and snakes, the animal control officers agreed there is one everyday creature far more unusual in habit and temperament

Said Denham: "Human beings are the strangest animals we

No-pass rule takes toll in area schools

By CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

It wiped out nearly one fourth of the Pride of Pampa Band, half of the Lefors girls' cheerleading squad and one third of Pampa High School's DECA club for six weeks.

Vol. 78, No. 169 3 sections, 36 pages

The malady: failing grades. Despite that, school officials and extra-curricular activity sponsors say their programs survived this year's first installment of the no-pass no-play law, which mandates that students making less than a 70 in any class at the end of the six-weeks grading period cannot participate in extracurricular activities for the next six weeks During the fall semester, the no-pass, no-play law strikes cheerleading squads, football teams, and any organizations that might have after-school meetings or activities.

Area high school principals say that the number of students who failed a class at their schools is about what they expected, or lower. The schools also echoed the area trend that fewer students in upper grades failed while junior high students were hit hardest.

Pampa High School Principal Orin Chappel said 400 out of 1,250 PHS students failed at least one subject, with the number of failures decreasing with each class. According to Chappell, 148 freshmen, 112 sophomores, 98 juniors and 51 seniors failed one or more classes. He pointed out, as did other principals, that not all the students were involved in extracurricular activities.

The group that seemed to be the hardest hit in the high school was the Pride of Pampa Band, which took a Superior rating last week in district marching competition. The band lost 24, or nearly one fourth.

or its 97 members.

But, band director Charles Johnson feels he could make up for the loss, even with regional marching competition coming up

"We didn't lose entire sections. just members here and there." he said, confident that the band will still sound good, "just not as big. The revised band did its first public marching Friday night at the Canyon football game. "They did just super," Johnson said. "The color guard - this week only - filled in a lot of holes left by band members. But they won't in the future. They did too much work not to let them perform. Johnson spent Saturday morning at his computer terminal revising marching formations in preparation for its next football game performance and regional competition in Vernon. The no-pass rule had different effect on other bands. At Miami's homecoming game Friday, MHS band director Jeff Witcher had to fill in for a disqualified sousaphone player. Miami's band lost four players to failing grades. One student, who says she averaged 80s and 90s in all her other classes, was knocked out of band for making a 68 in American History Other bands hit by the rule was the Canadian band, a regional qualifier in Class 3-A marching competition, which lost four members and White Deer, which lost one member. Groom High School's 22-member band remained intact.

Area cheerleaders also fared well in first six-weeks grading with varsity and junior varsity squads at Pampa, Wheeler, Miami, White Groom and Mobeetie untouched. Lefors High School lost two cheerleaders out of its five member squad: a fifth cheerleader, Kent Kerbo, is on the football team.

PHS cheerleading sponsor Mary Sturgeon and Miami head cheerleader Karrie Bailey say squad members at their schools must maintain an average grade of 80 or above to stay eligible

This seems to help Pampa cheerleaders stay on track. according to Sturgeon

'We had a few close calls," she said, adding that she expected her girls to pass. To keep the members of the squad on their toes, Sturgeon said she checked the girls' grades several times during the first six weeks. At Pampa, other organizationswere not hit as hard as the band. The chair lost 13 of its 100 members, while five out of 44 drama students were knocked out of eligibility

Choir director Fred Mays says this will have little effect on the upcoming choir-drama production of the Lerner and Lowe musical 'Brigadoon' in November. Only three cast members - from the ensemble, not the lead roles were ruled ineligible

The show choir, which performed at Saturday's annual Chamber of Commerce wing-ding. remained untouched.

''It has always been a requirement, even before the new state mandate, to pass every class before one can participate in an honor program, such as the show choir," Mays said

Monday night's fall choir concert, to be held at 7:30 p.m. at the M.K. Brown Auditorium is also unaffected because Mays arranged for it to be a co-curricular activity. 'It is an extension of their classwork through the performance," he explained.

NO NEED TO WORRY - Pampa policewoman Katie Morse explains the Operation Identification program to Lindy Johnson, 1247 Finley, during a recent visit under a new police program. Policemen are now going to residences to encourage participation in crime prevention programs. ### Pampa police knocking on doors and explaining program to residents

By LARRY HOLLIS Staff Writer

There's something about a police officer coming to your door when you haven't called for one: Oh, oh, what did I do? What's happened?

Coupled with that, too often, is an element of fear in having a policeman knock on your door.

'But it's not always something said Katie Morse, a patrolman with the Pampa Police Department

In an effort to remove some of that element of fear, the sense that something must be wrong if a policeman's at the door, the Pampa police currently are visiting a number of residents in the Operation Identification

Three days a week policemen are knocking on doors to ask residents to participate in Operation ID, Morse explained. In addition to explaining the crime prevention program, it also gives residents an opportunity to get to know the police better, she said.

The police are taking engravers, stickers and brochures to Pampa residents to aid the crime prevention efforts in the city.

Morse said crime prevention programs, such as Operation ID and the Neighborhood Watch program, have been available through the department for a long time, but people have not always taken advantage of the opportunity All it takes is a short trip to the police station to pick up an engraver and various printed material, or just a phone call to get a police officer to come out to the house to talk about the programs. But many residents just have not done that, she said.

So, the police are taking the message to the homes

Under the visiting program, which has been in effect for about four months, policemen go out Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons and evenings, generally between 3 and 8 p.m., to explain

Operation ID and other programs briefly. Morse said the police officers will go up to the door, introduce themselves and ask for a few moments to talk with the household residents about the programs. The policemen carry with them engravers to be used to mark various items, such as stereos, television sets, appliances and larger items. The engravers are loaned to the residents for two days, with the policemen coming back to pick them up. In addition, Operation ID stickers are left with the residents to be placed on doors and windows. serving as a warning to would - be burglars that the residents are participating in the program. Smaller stickers are also available to be placed on some of the articles Operation ID "often discourages burglaries," Morse said, since the burglars know that the marked articles "are usually more difficult to get rid of.

The officers also leave an inventory list with the residents. They can list all their valuable household goods, especially the smaller items and others on which engraving a driver's license number would not be practical, Morse explained. Residents are also encouraged to take photographs of their valuables, she

Dr. James Jolliff of Waco testified Friday in the punishment phase of Spence's trial.

Jurors deliberated less than a hour before deciding Spence should die for the murder of 18-year-old Kenneth Franks, one of three teen-agers found bound, gagged and repeatedly stabbed in a park near the lake in July 1982.

"I consider (Spence) extremely dangerous, and I consider it very likely that he will continue to be dangerous all his life," Jolliff said. "I think he's very dangerous to the people in this courtroom. If he had access to kill us, I think he would.

Jolliff said he became frightened by Spence during their two-hour interview at the McLennan County Jail in April 1983. He said Spence talked about beating his girlfriend with the ease of someone 'getting up and brushing their teeth.'

A 21-year-old Waco man who said he had been beaten, cut and sexually assaulted by Spence and an accomplice also testified Friday.

"He (Spence) put a knife to my throat and said. 'I'm going to cut your Adam's Apple out and eat it,' Davin Pack told the jury.

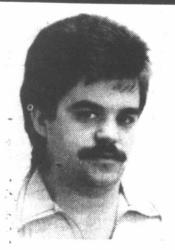

Joliff said the 26-year-old defendant is an "anti-social personality" without a conscience or

"I felt he not only did not have one, but was the worst I have ever encountered to this day," Jolliff said. "I am very frightened. I do not want that man to know my address.

Prosecutors say Spence was a hired killer who mistook one of the teen-agers for his intended victim, then killed the others so there would be no witnesses. They said they sought a second death penalty as insurance in case the first was overturned

In July 1984, Spence was sentenced to death by injection for the slaying of Jill Montgomery. He still faces charges in the death of Raylene Rice, 17. Both women were also sexually assaulted and their bodies bore the marks of Spence's teeth, witnesses

Spence is not the only one sentenced to die for the slayings. Muneer Mohammad Deeb, was given the death penalty earlier this year.

Off beat

Paul Pinkham

And here's Mr. 'Pinkhamm'

Add this to your list of liberties the State of Texas can take away Not only can the bureaucrats force you to wear a seat belt, buy insurance and meet stringent inspection requirements, some of which border on the absurd. They can also change your name, all in the name, I presume, of public safety!

When I retrieved my mail Tuesday, I noticed an envelope marked 'Department of Public Safety' amongst the other junk.

"Aha," I thought, "my long awaited drivers license, complete with Anxiously, I tore open the envelope to see if the photo they snapped of this suave, handsome reporter did me justice. What I saw upon examining the rectangular, plastic document inside shocked me.

The picture, as expected, was hideous. Makes me look like I just got out of the drunk tank. She apparently snapped it as I had looked down to make sure my fly was zipped up or for some reason or another, so my hair's falling in my eyes, which are staring straight down, and the position of my head reveals an exaggerated double chin I never knew I had

My head's also cocked to the side, apparently caught in the fluid motion from staring at the floor (or whatever) and back to the camera, and my lips are parted open as if I'm about to mutter something I shouldn't.

"Gosh, that's awful," I thought. Then I glanced over at my name and was even more horrified.

In one glitch of the almighty computer, the Texas Department of Public Safety had changed me from an American of British descent to one of a more German variety. Paul Pinkham had become Paul Pinkhamm.

Good Lord, I don't even know how to pronounce it. And with all the problems people have with my real name — it's one of those names one always has to spell over the phone, without fail — I can't even imagine the problems this one will cause.

Well, after I got over the initial shock, I looked back at the ripped pen envelope which proclaimed indiscrepancies or misspellings on my new license, I should immediately contact the local DPS office. "This shouldn't take too long," I thought, a belief accented by the fact that I was supposed to be back to work at 1 and I left for the DPS

Five minutes later I strolled into the DPS office, where I had triumphed over its driving test only a month earlier. I joked a minute with the woman behind the counter about doing something about my picture and after determining she was not amused by my banter, I informed her of the true nature of my problem.

"This isn't my name," I said, confident the problem would somehow be solved in a matter of seconds and I could proceed happily on to work.

'Just a minute,' she replied and turned around to punch some buttons on one of those God - awful computers. She turned around with an evil gleam in her eye and announced, "Well, that's the way it was entered in the computer in Austin, so that's the way it is."

My bravado quickly disappeared and I snapped, "What do you mean, 'that's the way it is?' I do know how to spell my own name, I

"I'm sorry sir (I can never get used to people calling me sir) but that's the way it went down on your application and unless you can prove otherwise with a legal document, that's your name," she

'This is just great,' I thought to myself. Is nothing, not even my name, sacred anymore?

'Wh - wh - what kind of legal document do I need." I stammered. Birth certificate, draft notice, college i.d., life insurance policy or family Bible," she rattled off, obviously used to such mundane questions as mine. The DPS, or more correctly the DPS computer, seemingly makes such mistakes quite often, even when I spelled my name for them and provided them with my previous state's drivers I quickly surveyed her list of options.

My birth certificate could be in any one of four states; I never got a draft notice because, in what at the time I thought was a stroke of good luck, I missed President Carter's selective service starting point by two months — guess I wasn't so lucky after all; my college i.d.'s were discarded shortly after I left those institutions; I don't have a life insurance policy; and family Bibles probably went out as legal documents sometime in the 19th century ( I don't think my old weather - beaten Revised Standard Version would qualify).

I blurted out a mumbled thank you — always trying to be polite no matter how exasperated I am — and headed for the door.

"Don't you want this, Mr. Pinkhamm," she called out after me, accenting the second syllable of my name instead of the first, and holding out Mr. Pinkhamm's drivers license.

'Not really," I thought, but took it anyway.

Now, to some people, my last - name problem may seem trivial. But I'm proud of it, strange as it may be.

After all, it was a Pinkham who came over on the Mayflower and several Pinkhams who helped settle the New England region of our country, mainly the State of Maine. Uncle Daniel from Boston is famous for his Christmas Cantata and cousin Lydia - well, she made a name for herself too.

I did some checking and learned there's a Paul K. Pinkham living in San Antonio and a John in Amarillo, but no Pinkhamms anywhere. In one fell swoop, the DPS has created a whole new family coat of arms but from whence it came, nobody knows.

Maybe the DPS was afraid of getting me mixed up with Paul K. in San Antone but that shouldn't be a problem. My middle name begins with the letter R. And, after all, I'm sure there's more than one John Smith in Texas. Do they find a variation on the spelling of Smith every time one of them wants to drive a car?

Of course, I may be able to work this to my advantage. My friends at the student loan office (remember them?) and the IRS both have on file a Paul R. Pinkham in Pampa. But he doesn't exist anymore, at least according to the Texas DPS, which has provided me with my only legal document to date, so maybe...

Only kidding, folks. (Pinkham (or is it Pinkhamm?) is a staff writer for The Pampa Sites in 17 other states in the East and Midwest, currently being considered for a second waste dump, could become candidates for the first dump if the current candidates all prove unsuitable, a DOE spokesman testified last week at a hearing held in St. Paul, Minn., by the House subcommittee on energy, conservation and power.

The controversial Deaf Smith site, located beneath the massive Ogallala Aquifer water supply, is listed by DOE as one of the top three candidates for the first nuclear dump.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Fear of the police cause for concern

In the past two weeks The Pampa News has published several letters to the editor concerning the city's recent action discontinuing the policy of allowing police officers to take their patrol cars home with them. All of the writers but one have requested that their name not be published.

It is understandable for those on one side of the issue to ask that their identities not be revealed, but it is disturbing that those on the other side feel they have to ask the same thing.

Those who were criticial of the city administration for making the decision have, we think, a valid reason to conceal their identity. Most of them had ties of some sort with police officers. In fact, one of the letters was from a police officer. And when an employee, or someone close to him, starts publicly criticizing the decisions of his bosses, he usually doesn't remain an employee very long. We have no way of knowing if that would have been the case in this instance, but at least their concern is understandable.

What bothers us is the reluctance of those who support the city administration's decision, and consequently oppose the position of many police officers, to have their

One of the letter writers asked that his name be withheld "for obvious reasons." A couple of others have indicated to us that they are wary of publicly taking positions in opposition to police officers, who want to keep their take-home cars. These individuals were obviously concerned about some sort of reprisal from

That is what worries us. If we have reached the point where citizens, for whatever reasons, are afraid to disagree with a person simply because that person is a police officer, then this society may be in worse shape than any of us realize.

Again, we don't know if there is any justification for such fears or not. But the fact that they do exist is cause

If there is no justification for them, then the police department should be concerned about how it is perceived by some segments of the public.

And, if there is any basis for those fears, every resident of this city should be scared to death.

Kick all pigs from trough

The hope for America promised by the Republican party's ascendancy to power is dwindling. The Republicans have squandered their opportunities to make the difference between America continuing to be the hope of free people or falling like Great Britain.

The Republicans' acts demonstrate that morality in government is not the issue; it's whose ox is being gored. The GOP leadership marches to the beat of the drum of expediency, leaving legitimacy behind.

The record speaks for itself. Since 1980, Republicans have led the fight against growing welfare handouts. While failing to make cutbacks in these "social programs," they've managed to reduce the nation's growth rate. But what about welfare handouts to farmers? They rose from about $6 billion in 1980 to about $30 billion today. Where's the morality in kicking one pig away from the federal trough while laying down a welcome mat for another

And farmers aren't the only Republican invitees. There's the aircraft industry, hosted by the Export-Import Bank; the steel and auto industries, hosted by the International Trade Commission; and the guest list goes on and on.

The dangerous ineptitude and-or immorality in the Republican power structure is underlined by the way it has managed racial matters. The Justice Department has launched a long-overdue assault on racial quotas. Racial preference violates not only the letter and spirit of the Constitution but virtually every other standard of moral conduct.

With its attack on quotas, the Justice Department gives the impression that the economic game is fair but for the fact of racial gifts. The game is NOT fair. There are government regulations, superficially race-neutral, that seriously handicap people and have a particularly devastating impact on blacks and Hispanics: the Davis-Bacon Act, minimum wage laws, and occupational licensing to name a few. All are forms of collusion in restraint of trade. Anti-competitive practices are within the purview of the Justice Department, but the bureaucrats have chosen to look the other way. How can blacks be told to play fair in a rigged

There are other instances where the Republicans failed to seize the moral initiative. They've had a chance to produce a permanent solution to the Social Security crisis; but it's more expedient to let some other administration face that task when the system collapses. They've had a chance to let terrorists know we're not timid; they've had the chance to stop Communist infiltration into the Western Hemisphere. And what did they do? They blew it.

But should the Republicans bear the full blame? Maybe they're merely following the will of the people. Americans may think the government should send able-bodied people to college or help farmers with somebody else's money. It's safe to say no American wants a national decline. But what you want and what you get are often two different things. Nobody wants inflation or depression; however, the individual acts of millions of people may produce them. And politicians, by giving in to each of us lobbying for our favorite handout, helps it along.

What America needs are politicians lke 19th-century Rep. Davy Crockett of Tennessee. Crockett, in a brilliant speech before the House, said it was immoral for Congress to give away the taxpayers' money. Colonel Crockett's reasoning was quite simple: the money wasn't theirs to give.

It's late in the day for Republicans to get religion, but they still can provide the nation with the necessary leadership. Reagan should start vetoing all congressional appropriations that take one person's money to give to another. This act would yield a budgetary super-surplus because more than two-thirds of our federal dollars are spent on giveaways.

Columnists have to agree with us

We have never subscribed to the latter practice. We think the editorial page of a newspaper should reflect the paper's beliefs, and that is what we attempt to do at The Pampa News. We feel no obligation to publish the views of columnists who disagree with us.

Still, that doesn't make the task of selecting editorial page columnists any easier for us. Our problem is that most columnists are either liberal or conservative and we are neither. We follow a libertarian philosophy which holds that individuals ought to be free to behave as they wish as long as they harm nobody else, and that they ought to be free to do whatever they wish with their own property.

That means that in political terms we are sometimes to the right of Sen. Jesse Helms and sometimes to the left of Sen. Ted Kennedy.

Since there are few libertarian columnists around, we have to subscribe to the services of both liberal and conservative thinkers. We agree with each about half the time, using the columns which coincide with our philosophy and throwing the others away.

We disagree with conservatives who want to bomb other countries or throw people in jail who have different sets of values. But we generally agree with what conservatives say on economic matters since they usually claim to favor free markets and free enterprise rather than government-controlled economies.

Since economic issues have been dominant in the United States for several years now, that probably explains why we drifted into the use of columns by three conservative economists. Walter Williams, Charles Van Eaton and Warren Brookes

But I have been aware that this is probably a bit more commentary on economics than most people care to digest. So we have finally discontinued the Warren Brookes column and replaced it with M. Stanton Evans, who comments on a wide range of issues rather than concentrating solely on economics.

Mexico City: Things may never be the same

MEXICO CITY (AP) - One month after earthquakes here brought widespread death and destruction, residents are realizing that life in this huge, sprawling city may never be quite the way it

The "return to normality" that the government promised would occur days after the first quake Sept. 19 now appears months, if not years, away. It took days just to comprehend the scope of destruction.

President Miguel de la Madrid now says the destruction was so vast that reconstruction "will be prolonged for some years" and has called on all residents to cooperate.

"The enormous and complex consequences of the earthquake cannot be confronted successfully only by the government," he said recently.

Even now, an accurate death toll remains elusive. Most officials and private counts now speak of 7,000; others say privately it could reach 10,000 once all the rubble is carted away.

Few in the metropolitan area of 18 million people escaped the effects of the first quake, which registered 8.1 on the Richter scale, classifying it as a 'great quake''; or the second quake, which struck Sept. 20 and measured 7.5.

at the Military Hospital. While the horror is remembered, the focus is on the future. "Sale adelante" - "move forward" has become a refrain in conversations, in the rhetoric of politicians and in graffiti on walls of devastated neighborhoods. An estimated 1,500 buildings collapsed or were damaged so severely they can no longer be used.

Affected the worst were major structures - the Commerce Department, the attorney general's office, the Juarez Hospital, the 14-story Nuevo Leon public housing project.

Daily living is always against the backdrop of the earthquakes. Few news stories, statements by public officials or conversations among neighbors fail to make some mention of the quakes.

The homeless, estimated at anywhere from 30,000 to 250,000, are the most immediate problem. Thousands have found refuge in government shelters, but many more, because they distrust the government and desire self-sufficiency, live in hundreds of tent cities in neighborhood parks, street corners, vacant lots and sidewalks.

Thousands of residents of the devastated areas marched the previous weekend to the presidential residence to demand more help. De la Madrid met with them and promised the government will take care of their needs.

Basic public services gradually are being restored, but thousands still are without running water. For them, daily life means repeated trips with buckets to a water truck or some nearby pipe where water flows.

Residents still are cautioned over television and radio to boil water before drinking it.

Cooking gas and electricity have been nearly restored to prequake levels in all but the most severely damaged parts of the city. Long-distance telephone service, which crashed in seconds during the quake, slowly is being restored.

Tied to the rebuilding effort is de la Madrid's new decentralization program, intended to reverse the influences that have caused thousands of people to move into the city each day for years.

The government has banned erection of new buildings on the rubble from the quake, and pledged that thousands of government employees will be relocated to provincial cities.

In the first days of the disaster, there was an unspoken but palpable bond of sharing. Thousands of volunteers scurried to damaged areas to bring food and offer a multitude of services.

Conversations began with the questions: "How is your family? Is everybody safe?'

But with time, attitudes have changed. The streets again are snarled with vehicles and pedestrians putting their lives at risk to cross against traffic.

Newspapers again are filled with daily police reports of murders, robberies and street crime.

Nation's around the world condemn S. Africa hanging

By The Associated Press

The hanging of a South African black man convicted of killing a police officer sparked indignation, condemnation and regret around the world, with both the Soviet Union and the United States voicing their opposition.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said the Friday hanging of Benjamin Moloise, 30, "will not deter those who struggle for freedom and for their rights." It said South Africa is taking harsh action against its opponents and added:

"There is every indication that in so doing the racists count on full impunity which is ensured for them by the U.S. patrons." The Soviets claim the United States and other Western nations back South Africa's white-minority government

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said: 'We hoped that this action ... would not be taken.

"We want to see tensions reduced and confidence restored in South Africa," said Speakes. 'Accordingly, we hoped that this action, which could only exacerbate the situation, would not

Entwined by their prayers to the same God and their individual pursuit of Mammbn, the lives of a boy business wonder, a patriarchal financial czar, and a rare documents dealer collided because of their fascination with old writings purporting to reveal fresh details about the Mormon church's birth.

Primary among those documents is the "Salamander Letter," which was sold by bombing suspect Mark W. Hofmann to victim Steven F. Christensen, who then gave it to the Mormon

On Saturday, the church announced it will turn the "Salamander Letter" over to the FBI on Monday at the request of the U.S. attorney's office "because it might be pertinent to the current investigation of

Anthony Mandia complained of mild pain from the incision but was doing "remarkably well" one day after five hours of implant surgery at Hershey Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Dr. John W. Burnside

Mandia, a 44-year-old Philadelphia bachelor who was near death when surgeons decided to implant the 1-pound, plastic, air-driven device, was taken off a respirator Saturday afternoon and a breathing tube was removed from his throat.

He was talking freely, his head was elevated and he drank some fluids, Burnside said.

He said Mandia prised his doctors, and said, "Between you guys and the man upstairs, I'm doing fine.'

The Penn State heart, named after the hospital's affiliated university, will stay in Mandia until a suitable human dono heart can be found, possibly within a week or so, said Burnside Burnside said doctors could see no evidence of bleeding or other complycations that have plagued recipients of other artificial hearts. Mandia's relatives told reporters Saturday they had initially resisted the idea of an artificial heart implant, but changed their minds

Thursday when they realized there was no other option. Mandia was told after he suffered heart failure in March that he was a likely candidate for an implant, but his reaction was "no go," said his brother, Ernie,

"When they said there was a possibility you might need a heart transplant, he wouldn't believe that, until he finally got worse and went in the hospital," Ernie Mandia said. "... He couldn't breathe. And then he decided it was the best way to go.

The patient's father, Ernest Mandia Sr., 69, appeared with his family at a news briefing Saturday and called the operation "a miracle. This hospital is the greatest."

THE CHURCH OF THE LORD

"Take heed unto yourselves, and to all the flock, in which the Holy Spirit hath made you bishops, to feed the church of the Lord which he purchwith his own blood" (Acts 20:28.) Paul's admonition to the elders of the Ephesian church were words of prophetic warning of the apostasy to occur after his departing. The church of the Lord is the church Christ promised to build (Matthew 16:18.) The church of the Lord was to be built upon the Deity of Jesus Christ (Matthew 16:16-18.) Paul states: "For other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (I Corinthians 3:11.) Conclusively, then, the church of the Lord is the church of Christ which realized its beginning on the First Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ from the dead (Acts 2.)

Isaiah prophesied of the laying of the foundation in Jerusalem (Isaiah 28:16.) Isaiah also prophesied that the Lord's house would begin in Jerusalem in the last days (Isaiah

2:2-3.) Paul tells us that the Lord's house is the church of the living God (I Timothy 3:14-15.) Peter told those Jews who were gathered in Jerusalem on Pentecost that those were the "last days" (Acts 2:15-20.) So the prophecies of Isaiah and the prophecy of Christ were fulfilled when Peter and the rest of the apostles preached and the rest of the apostles preached the gospel and some three thousand people were baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of their sins (Acts 2:36-47.)

Baptism is the means of admittance into Christ (Galatians 3:27.) It is also the means of admittance into His Church, which is His body (I Corinthians 12:13; Ephesians 1:22-23.) What was true in the days of the apostles is still true today. That is, those today who believe in Christ, repent of their sins, confess Him as the Christ, the Son of God and are baptized for the remission of their sins become members of the Lord's church, the only one you read about in the New Testament.

the number of things in the house burglars are interested in," Morse said, adding a good, detailed list of items and photos could be very helpful in case the need to account for them ever arises.

In addition to helping make identification easier in case goods are stolen and recovered, the inventory list — a copy of which should be left with a relative or friend, or placed in a safety deposit box - can also be used for insurance purposes in case the house is burned down or otherwise destroyed, she noted.

"Many people have trouble describing their possessions," Morse said, even such things as wedding rings, paintings, clothing and other items they feel they would know anywhere.

The inventory list and photographs can be very helpful in making needed identifications, she said, often aiding the person to recall details.

The policemen also briefly discuss the Neighborhood Watch program and leave crime prevention brochures with the household residents. Policemen have started using the visitation program as a means of better educating and informing the public and providing service to residents, Morse said. All patrol officers are involved in the project.

But it also serves as a means of getting people to know the police petter, to realize that a policeman knocking at the door doesn't necessarily mean bad news.

"I'm really excited by this program," she said. In addition to bringing a service to the people, 'it's a learning experience for us."

The home visits "help us to remember that not all people are bad," she said, explaining that policemen, because of their duties and the situations in which they are often involved, are "so used to dealing with angry people."

Morse said people have generally been cooperative in letting the police in to talk about the program and have appreciated the service.

"I think there should be more lines of communication between the police and the public. This helps," she said.

"I like this part of my job. I like all the other aspects, too, but I like this part best," she said, adding that she has enjoyed the visits with other residents.

It has also helped her to realize the need for citizens to practice better crime prevention techniques in their homes.

Stepping from behind the cash register to stardom

By JERRY BUCK AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The television screen is liberally stocked with the image of Kenneth McMillan, who is currently starring in his third series, ABC's 'Our Family Honor." He was not always so fortunate.

Look back to 1960. McMillan was working at Gimbel's, the department store in New York City. His agent used to drop around to buy things on his employee discount.

But what was a young and frightened actor to do? He really wanted to act, but he had this fear of the boards. He'd done some summer stock and a little off-Broadway stuff before the trepidation set in.

So he started working part time at the store. One promotion followed another until he was floor manager. "I was assistant to the toy manager one year," he says. Then I ran the department for two Christmases. I stayed with them for eight years. I was 29 when I

After eight years before the cash register, there was a chance for another off-Broadway role.

But what really swung him back to acting was an offer to join Edie Adams in a stock production of 'Sweet Bird of Youth." After that, the offers tumbled in.

He was soon working in soap operas on the side. He made his Broadway debut in "Borstal Boy," then went into the original production of "Streamers." Television and movies quickly followed.

He starred in two other series, Rhoda" and "Suzanne Pleshette Is Maggie Briggs."

"Our Family Honor," from Lorimar Productions, is the story of the McKays and the Danzigs. McMillan as Patrick McKay, the newly appointed police commissioner, is the patriarch of the McKays. Eli Wallach, as Vincent Danzig, Patrick's boyhood chum and godfather to a criminal empire, heads the Danzigs.

'We're two pals who grew up in opposite directions, one good, one bad," says McMillan. "We're Pat O'Brien and James Cagney from 'Angels with Dirty Faces' - Tr O'Brien became the priest and Cagney the gangster."

But there's another genre tossed in for good measure, "Romeo and ?s Juliet." McKay's daughter, Liz, a rookie cop, is living with her boyfriend, Jerry Cole, who conceals the fact that he's Danzig's

"It's not really a cop show," says McMillan. "It's a show about es relationships. There's a scene in the pilot that I think's beautiful. Of I'm in bed and my wife comes in. I'm worried about a lot of problems. She lies down beside me and we just have a few words about nothing. She says we don't seem to be close any more. I say to her, You could make the first move. She says, 'You're right. I want to. I think about it.' Not much happens. She asks me what I'm thinking and I say I'm thinking how blessed I am. It's a wonderful scene and I loved doing it."

McMillan joined "Rhoda" in the 1977-78 season, the final one for the

"I came in at the tail end," he says. "I'd done 'Streamers' and 'American Buffalo' and Jim Brooks and Allan Burns had seen me in both shows," he says. "I was still doing 'American Buffalo' when they came backstage to see me. I remember they said, 'You probably don't want to do a series. do you?' Why not? They flew me out here and I tested and Valerie Harper and I hit it off immediately.

McMillan may have been a slow starter, but he's made up for it M since then.

Rice University marching Owl Band not your typical college band

By RUTH RENDON Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - You won't find traditional block formations, perfect strides, full uniforms and snappy turns in Rice University's known as the MOB.

At halftime of last year's Rice-Texas football game, for example, the stadium lights were turned off as the MOB, draped in white sheets, flocked to the field playing the theme song from the movie "Ghostbusters.

Then it sang the words, with 'Hornbusters' replacing the title refrain in honor of Rice's effort to defeat the Longhorns.

While most college bands rehearse to perfect their straight lines, the 230-member MOB is off seeking props for its humorous

Rains halt harvesting in the Panhandle and South Plains

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Rains this week were a mixed blessing to farmers, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, giving a boost to small grain crops but playing havoc with crop harvesting operations.

With most of the cotton, sorghum and sugar beet crops still to be harvested in the Panhandle and South Plains, the past week's rains kept operations at a standstill, Carpenter said.

The rains also kept cotton harvesting from getting untracked in Far West Texas and the Trans-Pecos region and slowed operations in the Rolling Plains and West Central Texas.

In addition, peanut harvesting was slowed in central, southwestern and coastal regions. For small grain crops, though, the rains were a big help, Carpenter said. The moisture should provide early planted wheat and oats with good growing conditions and should enable late plantings to get off to a good start. With improved prospects for fall grazing on wheat and oats, interest has grown in stocker cattle grazing operations and has caused some strengthening of stocker cattle

Also on the plus side, the rains have enabled pasture and range grasses to make some growth, thereby boosting livestock conditions prior to the onset of winter weather, Carpenter said. However, many stockmen are continuing to cull cow herds and to move a lot of calves to market.

Some additional hay also will be harvested due to the recent rains, thus adding to already plentiful supplies over most of the state. However, local shortages could develop depending on the extent of windr feeding.

Harvesting of what should be a bumper pecan crop is under way in most areas as early varieties are hulling, noted Carpenter.

Also, some vegetable harvesting continues in the Rio Grande Valley and Winter Garden, with fall crops making good progress.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Saturated soils are keeping field operations at a standstill. About 2 ercent of the corn crop, most of the sorghum and virtually all of the cotton remains to be harvested. Most of the sugar beets also are still in the field, and a lot of wheat has not yet been seeded. However early planted wheat looks good, and stocker cattle are moving into the area in anticipation of good grazing.

SOUTH PLAINS: Rains of 6 to 8 inches in some locations over the past week have played havoc with harvesting operations. Most sorghum and sugar beets and virtually all the cotton remains to be harvested. Early wheat is making good growth under the favorable moisture conditions.

ROLLING PLAINS: Rans of up to 5 inches the past week slowed most field operations, including wheat seeding and cotton harvesting. Early planted wheat and oats are making excellent progress, boosting prospects for stocker cattle grazing. Early pecans are starting to hull and a good harvest is expected. good harvest is expected.

NORTH CENTRAL: Additional

rain is needed for small grain planting, fall vegetables and pastures. Some peanut harvesting continues although scattered rains have caused delays. Culling of cattle herds remains active.

NORTHEAST: Much of the area remains dry, with rain needed for wheat, winter pastures, fall vegetables and stock ponds. Cotton harvesting is about 90 percent complete, and final hay cuttings are under way. Early pecans are starting to fall.

FAR WEST: Rains of up to 6 inches are continuing to delay cotton harvesting and other field operations. However, the moisture should boost small grains and range conditions before winter weather sets in. Pecan harvesting has started and crop prospects are good. Livestock are in good shape, with a few cases of bluetongue in WEST CENTRAL: Scattered showers are helping small grains and ranges but are hampering cotton and peanut harvesting. Most cotton has been defoliated and early yields are averaging 1-3 to 1-2 bale per acre. Irrigated peanut yields are good but dryland production is below normal. Range conditions remain below average, with livestock in fair to good condition. Some ranchers have started feeding stock.

CENTRAL: Seeding of small grains--wheat and oats--remains in full swing. Early planted fields making good growth. Some peanuts are being harvested while some are slow to mature due to recent cool weather. Pecans are maturing, with early varieties hulling. Cooler weather is boosting milk production in dairy herds.

EAST: Despite some scattered rains, much of the region remains dry. Producers are planting wheat and oats and harvesting a little hay. Harvesting of a limited peanut crop is under way, with fair to good yields. Early pecans are falling. UPPEOAST: Soybeans are maturing and need open weather. However, rain is still needed in some locations to get winter pastures off to a good start. Fall vegetable gardens are showing good progress. A good pecan harvest is getting under way. SOUTH CENTRAL: Heavy rains over the region should boost small grain crops, but the wet conditions are also hampering the completion of cotton harvesting. Harvesting of each pecan varieties is under way; crop prospects look good. Livestock and grazing conditions are improving.

SOUTHWEST: Rains of up to 3 inches in a few locations should help wheat and oats. Harvesting of peanuts, collards, mustard greens and squash continues in areas missed by the rains. About 15 percent of the cotton crop remains to be ginned. Ranchers are culling herds heavily as feeder and stocker calf prices have strengthened

COASTAL BEND: Good rains in some locations slowed peanut harvesting and wheat seeding. About 10 percent of the peanut crop has been harvested, with poor yields. Wheat seeding a about 60 percent complete. A little more hay is being harvested; supplies are good. Livestock and range conditions continue to improve.

SOUTH: Good rains in some areas will continue to boost crops pastures and ranges. Hay crops, soybeans, sugarcane, small grains, fall vegetables and citrus are making good progress. Seeding of wheat and oats is past the halfway point, and some fall vegetable planting continues. The citrus crop remains short due to the devastating freeze of two years

On Monday, Branstad had said he did not plan to invite Reagan to help in his re-election campaign next year because the administration had made farm policy mistakes that had diminished the president's popularity in his state.

> LOWER PROPERTY TAXES DON'T PREVENT EVENTUAL LOSS OF FARMLAND

Tax programs that reduce property taxes on agricultural land are generally unsuccessful at saving the land from urban development. However, the programs do delay the conversion of farmland until it is actually needed for urban growth.

These are the findings of a recent

Experiment Station to determine the effectiveness of differential assessment legislation. Such legislation is designed to provide tax relief to farmers and to reduce conversion of agricultural land to non-agricultural uses. The study analyzed the effects of differential taxes in thirteen southern states from 1950 to 1980.

The study found that the benefit of lower property taxes is not the determining factor in the final disposal of agricultural land. For example, in some cases, farmers sell their land to finance their retirements, particularly when they have no heirs to take over the

Although urban growth raises the value of land and increases the tax burden of farmers, the demand for development may not be sufficient to warrant the sale of farmland. In such cases, differential tax assessment gives producers an incentive to avoid premature idling of their land. However, other policies are needed to prevent the eventual loss of farmland to non-agricultural uses.

Winning

It's not just a game, it's a philosophy. It is not inherited. It is developed. It eludes lots of people. Not because of circumstance-because of decision. Want to start winning? Change your mind.

Some folks get lucky. Winning comes fast, and without much effort. Others have to work long hard hours. They dedicate themselves to situations most people would not touch. Each of us must decide what winning is - a first step, a good year, working out a bad situation.

The coaches are right. Winning is important, but it isn't everything. Persistence is everything... .. winning is inevitable.

TODAY MARKS THE START of National High School Activities Week, so designated by the National Federation of State High School Associations. Headquartered in Kansas City, Mo., the organization is composed of nearly all statewide groups supervising and directing public school extra-curricular activities. The National Federation, loosely operated, attempts to provide a medium to interchange ideas, coordinate national records, serve as an information exchange, motivate educators. Sort of a United Nations of public school sports programs.

If it can find anything of a positive or instructional nature within any of the school systems in the Fifty States, it assesses the value and passes the results on to its membership. It is interesting to note that problems in one area of the country are not unique; similar obstacles confront educators almost everywhere. Finding the solutions, as ever, are the questions the organization attempts to answer. All of this is compiled and forwarded to members in a publication each month of the school year.

Having worked with and observed school superintendents here and in other parts of the country for nearly a half-century, I am of the firm opinion that most want successful athletics programs. It is a very valuable public relations tool for the administration, probably the most significant sign of a good school system in the minds of most patrons, unfortunately. And the superintendent finds himself caught in the middle, trying to satisfy that element and at the same time strongly support the true purpose of the school, provide a good education.

Bridging the two is not simple, but John W. Blaser, superintendent of the Middleton, Idaho School District does a good job in an article in the current Federation publication. Titled "Athletics - the third curriculum", Blaser writes:

"I am often asked why we place so much emphasis on athletics in our high school. I am tempted to 'So much emphasis relation to what?" Actually, school districts place smaller emphasis on sports than the rest of the program. Less money is spent on salaries and equipment and less time is devoted to it than to the academic program by a large percentage

"It only seems to be emphasized highly because this is where much of youthful motivation lies and where much adult interest and enthusiasm focuses. Why does so much of our interest vest itself in these "games"

"Perhaps it is because in this area we can see all that is good and all that contributes to success on a small playing field. And what are these things, you may ask.

"A sign in our locker room read "It takes hard work, sweat, and perseverance to get into shape, and 'guts' to stay that way." Are these some of the traits of success? Are hard work and perseverance traits that help people to succeed? Is 'guts' another word for self-discipline?

"Another slogan that is common among athletic teams is "Winners never quit, quitters never win." Is that a trait of success - to hang in there? When you come to the end of your rope, to tie a knot and hang

"When the going gets tough, the tough get going." There's one we all grew up with. After you had heard your coach say it for four years, your drill instructor hit you with it again. In athletics we learn to get up after being knocked down, again, again, again - and to get back into the game. Is life after athletics a carryover of the 'game''

'Great teams make great goal line stands." Perhaps only football players will understand this one. Football games are won or lost at the "line of scrimmage" - a yard..36 inches..of expensive real estate between teams. Protecting that scant piece of property at any cost - within the rules - is what football is all about. Are there values in life that should have the same respect and protection? And, if so, where is a young person to learn the loyalty and devotion to "protection of a principle"? We don't do it in Reading, Writing or Arithmetic.

"So, then, how can these extra-hours activities teach success principles to our youth? Let's review the slogans.

- 1. Hard Work
- 2. Perseverance 3. Patience
- 4. Self-Discipline 5. Never Quit
- 6. Get Going 7. Loyalty

"Why do so many adults follow the activities of the student athletes? It seems to me that we adults derive a great pleasure as we see young people learning, practicing, developing and demonstrating these tremendous traits of character.

'Maybe we need to develop some slogans for the History class. Those the thoughts of one school superintendent from a non-populous area of the United States. Those thoughts are obviously the result of personal experience in athletics in growing-up years. Blaser obviously does as the Federation theme for the week suggests: Support School Activities.

Harvesters shoot down Eagles

By L.D. STRATE Sports Editor

CANYON - When offensive statistics favor the losers, often it's because the best offense was a good defense for the winners.

Sometimes, in less than a minute, it's because an opportunistic player decides to take matters into his own hands, literally.

That's just what happened in Pampa's 14-7 District 1-4A win over Canyon Friday night when tailback Mark Williams scored the deciding touchdown early in the fourth Canyon held almost an overwhelming edge in first downs (19-8) and total yardage (271-165), but the only statistics that really count is the final score. The Eagles saw Williams prove it in lighting fashion.

Before you could say Tim Anuszkiewicz (Canyon running back) three times. Williams had recovered a fumble, ran 14 yards for a first down and romped for a 32-yard touchdown, all in three consecutive plays.

While Pampa's offense staggered most of the night - the Harvesters had to punt six times the defense was outstanding in the clutch even though Canyon had rolled up the most offense.

Canyon's offense, led by the passing duo of King Hodson and Kurt Gonzales, spent most of the night in Pampa territory. But on five possessions inside the the Harvester 32, the Eagles could come up with only one score.

"Our defense was out there a long time, but I felt they did a good job," said Pampa head coach John Kendall. "We couldn't control the football the second half. We had only 16 running plays, but they only scored once on us.

Canyon's hurry-up offense with 2:48 to go and Pampa ahead, 14-7, provided some tense moments for the Harvesters.

Canyon used the pass including Hobson's 24-yarder to B.J. Head — to put the Eagles on Pampa's 27 after driving there from its own 14. "They split the seams on that last pass, but after that our defense really came alive," Kendall said. And how!

Led by end Joel Farina, the Harvesters first sacked Gonzalez for a six-yard loss and then got to Hobson, dropping him back to the 27 for a three-yard loss. Pampa took possession then and ran out

Gary Jernigan and David Carter did most of the damage on the ground in the 14-play drive, but the biggest play came when quarterback Brent Cryer hit Jernigan with an 18-yard pass to the Canyon 12. Five plays later, Carter plunged over from the one and Michael Mitchell's PAT made it 7-0 at the 7:00 mark of the first

A goalline stand by the Harvester defense in the closing seconds of the first half turned out to be as important as Williams' TD

Canyon took over at midfield after a Pampa punt and relentlessy drove deep into Harvester territory on the arm of Hodson. A 31-yard pass to Anuszkiewicz and a 13-yard pass to Tracy Clark gave the Eagles a first down at the seven.

Hobson then faked a pass and scooted to the two-yard line. Hobson next threw a pass into the corner of the end zone which James Ellison knocked down. With time running out, the ball went to 190-pound tailback Clint Olson, who was met head-on at the goalline by a host of Pampa defenders. Time expired before the Eagles could get another play off.

"The kids made a super tackle on that last play," Kendall said. "Olson's helmet was over the goaline, but the ball wasn't."

Canyon, however, did come back to tie the score at 7-all on its first possession of the third quarter. Olson, who finished with 89 yards rushing, wasn't to be denied this time. Olson carried the ball seven times in the 10-play, 69-yard drive, plunging over from the two with 5:54 to go.

Pampa missed a golden opportunity to come right back with a score when Canyon's B.J. Head muffed a Harvester punt and Mike Lopez recovered on the Eagles' 21. The Harvesters. managed only three yards in the next three plays and had to settle for Mitchell's 36-yard field goal attempt that went off to the left.

Pampa, though, cashed in on Canyon's next turnover when Williams, playing in the defensive secondary, recovered Olson's fumble on the Harvester 41. Two plays later, Williams slipped away from two Canyon tacklers and darted down the sidelines for the winning score with 11:52 to go.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) -Texas' Jeff Ward kicked a school-record five field goals and his Arkansas counterpart, Greg Horne, missed three as the Longhorns beat the fourth-ranked Razorbacks 15-13 in a Southwest Conference football game Saturday.

Safety John Hagy preserved the victory when he intercepted Mark Calcagni's pass at the Texas 22 with seconds remaining.

Ward's field goals were from 34, 33, 49, a personal-best 55 and 34 yards. In his first two years at Texas, Ward made 27 of 35 and Longhorn Coach Fred Akers once said he didn't know of a kicker in the country he'd rather have than

Other than Ward, the Longhorn offense consisted of the scrambling and passing of Bret Stafford - best known as a runner - and the running of tailback Edwin Simmons, hardly a factor since he was injured against Arkansas in Stafford, who had completed five of 17 in the first four games of the year, was 10 of 14 for 137 yards. Many of the completions came after he ducked away from the Arkansas rush.

WHEELER - Maybe Class 5A Palo Duro can beat the Wheeler ustangs. You'd have to line them

Groom thought it might have a chance, but the Tigers didn't even come close, losing 55-0 in a game that finally left Wheeler alone atop the District 1-1A standings.

The Tigers came in here Friday night with a 3-0 district record and opes of a big upset. Those dreams vanished as quickly as the Mustangs got the football.

Cody Wiggins returned Groom's first punt (there were nine) 46 vards to the Tigers' 10, and three plays later Toby Collins blasted in from two yards out and the

Wheeler romp was on. The Mustangs scored 21 points in the first period and built up a 34-0

No team has come within three touchdowns of the 7-0 and No. 3 state-ranked Mustangs, who moved to 5-0 in the loop.

Wheeler has scored 299 points so far this season — an average of 42.7 per contest - and allowed just

"We've got 30 kids who can play football," Wheeler head coach Preston Smith said.

Wheeler gained 416 rushing yards and added 106 passing while limiting the Tigers to 132 overall. Groom's top runner, Jack Britten, was never a factor in the game.

Groom, however, is far from eliminated from playoffs contention. The Tigers are now 3-1 in the district (3-3 overall) with four loop games remaining on their schedule. Groom challenges league contender Gruver next week while Wheeler hosts Lefors in the Mustangs' homecoming game.

The Tigers had hoped to control the football on the Mustangs, keeping it from the volatile Wheeler offense, and in fact did in the first quarter

Groom ran 19 offensive plays to Wheeler's 11, but three of those snaps resulted in Mustangs' touchdowns.

'Wiggins' punt return was a big play in the game," Smith said. 'Good things happened for us

Wheeler's second touchdown came at the 4:41 mark, as Collins broke around left end for a 76-yard scoring romp. As he did following the first score, Richard Smith made the PAT kick and the fustangs led 14-0.

With 1:34 to go in the stanza, quarterback Randall Hugg went 16 yards to Randy Horton on a flag pattern and Smith's kick gave the Mustangs a 21-0 advantage. The second play of the second quarter saw Dale Hazel blaze 70 yards around right end (it was a reverse) for another Wheeler TD. The Mustangs muffed the conversion.

The Wheeler defense constantly held Britten and the Tigers in check. Ocassionally quarterback Brent Thorton, who wasn't expected to play, found a receiver downfield or carried successfully himself

But Groom never got more than two first downs in a drive as the Mustangs' defense, led-by linebackers Collins, Smith and Charlie Miller filled every possible

Groom's Ken Ruthardt recovered intercepted a pass and the goal line on Wheeler's next drive, but the Mustangs' David Jones returned the disfavor with a diving catch at the Wheeler 41.

The Mustangs then drove to the Groom 1, where Grayson Benson got the call and obliged. Smith's kick gave Wheeler a 34-0 halftime advantage

Wheeler's next touchdown was set up when Groom fumbled to Smith at the Tigers' 43. Two plays and 14 yards later, Dicky Salyer went up the middle, made a slight shift to his left and outran everyone. Smith's kick made it 41-0 at the 8:31 mark

At the 5:10 point, Hugg found Collins on a curl pattern.

Collins caught the ball, turned quickly toward the end zone and made the completion into a 34-yard touchdown. It was 48-0 after Smith's kick.

Hank McConnell recovered a Wheeler fumble on the fourth quarter's first play, but the Tigers immediately fumbled back to Wheeler's Benson

The Mustangs' final score followed on a six-yard Bobby Sword dash around right end. Smith kicked and 55-0 was it for the Groom did score on a 49-yard Thorton run with five minutes to play, but an illegal procedure call brought it back.

Smith said it was his team's best continuous effort, though the Mustangs didn't try to run up the score. Wheeler substituted freely.

Pirates fall to Claude, 27-7

CLAUDE - Lefors found some life in its offense here Friday night, but the Claude Mustangs scored on a big play just before the half and rode it to a 27-7 win in District 1-1A

The Mustangs grabbed a 7-0 lead in the first stanza on a 17-yard burst from Arthur Dziuk, who carried eight times for 137 yards. Mark Hall made the kick.

But the Pirates struck back in the second on an 84-yard Shane Bridwell to Kirk Kerbo bomb that tied the score at 7-7 after Kerbo made the kick.

Lefors appeared to be in for the duration, but Kerbo (118 yards on three catches) was ejected from the game just before halftime, and Claude quickly took advantage of his Lance Wood found Jeff Whelchel on a

69-yard TD toss and the Mustangs found themselves with a 13-7 halftime advantage. "We could've played with 'em, but everything kind of went bad after that," Lefors coach John Turner said. Claude padded its margin in the third quarter as Jerry Johnson (98 yards on 18 carries) bulled in from two yards out and Wood hit Hall for the two-pointer. Dzuik

Turner said the Pirates hurt themselves defensively by over-pursuing the ball carrier, including on Dzuik's final scoring run. Claude, which had been known for its passing attack, surprised Lefors with 302 rushing yards while adding 93 in the air. Lefors' offense found life of its own, gaining 233 total yards as Bridwell completed six of 15 passes for 167 yards. "We passed on 'em well," Turner said. "I was proud of the 'ol kids. They put in a gutsy performance. Claude went to 3-2 in the loop (3-4 overall) while Lefors dropped to 0-4, 0-6.

Warriors in thick of six-man chase after blasting Patton Springs, 41-12

MIAMI — Homecoming was happy indeed for Miami, which welcomed Patton Springs with a 41-12 Warriors' blitzkrieg.

Brett Byrum and David Scott carried the majority of the fatal spears in Miami's attack, combining for five of the Warriors' six touchdowns Scott caught three scoring passes

It didn't last long as the Rangers' Kevin Scarbrough scored on a four-yard run. Miami blocked the conversion kick and the score was knotted 6-6.

The Warriors blew the game open in the second quarter as their homecoming became festive.

Byrum found Scott on a 20-yard TD pass and Deaver made the kick to make the score 14-6.

Scott rambled in from one-yard out and Miami led 20-6 after the PAT kick failed.

Then the Byrum-to-Scott combination clicked again for a 46-yard touchdown (the kick again failed) as the Warriors went on top

Wright scored Miami's last touchdown before the half on a four-yard run. Scott passed to Byrum for the point-after and the Warriors took a 33-6 lead to the intermission

Scott and Byrum reversed their proven successful combination in the third quarter, with the former hitting the latter with a 14-vard TD spear. Deaver made the two-point kick and Miami went on top 41-6.

Later in the third, Patton Springs' James Lewis caught a 61-yard touchdown pass from L.G. Little (the kick failed) to finalize the scoring at 41-12.

Miami's win sets up a key district battle next week as the Warriors put their 2-1 loop record on the line against 2-2 Benjamin, which fell 32-14 to Higgins Friday and is 4-3 overall. The game will be played at 7:30 p.m. Friday in

'Cats reign 34-6; showdown awaits

CANADIAN — As possible playoffs elimination looked on, the Canadian Wildcats took matters into their own hands Friday night here.

The Wildcats relocated their offensive groove with 21 second quarter points and disected Dalhart 34-6 to reaffirm that they are a part of the District

The win by Paul Wilson's Canadian team, now 1-1 in the loop and 5-1 overall, sets up a "Texas Death. Match" next Friday in Childress, whose Bobcats lost 36-22 to Perryton and fell to 1-1 (5-2).

The loser of that game will be all but dead in its battle to reach the post-season rounds. The winner will be able to control its destiny, as each team still must face River Road, which shares the loop lead with Perryton. Both have 2-0 records.

Canadian got to where it is by exploding for 34 points in the middle 24 minutes of the game. Shawn Wright scored twice; quarterback Bobby White dashed 66 yards for one TD and passed for another to Jeff Kirkland (who also ran for a score) as the Wildcats ignited an offense that fell dormant against Perryton.

Canadian tallied 252 rushing yards and added 84 through the air against a Dalhart team that fell to 0-2 (2-5 overall) and out of the playoffs picture.

Defensively, the Wildcats awakened from their McKinley nightmares and limited the Wolves to 41 rushing yards, offsetting a 14 of 29, 183-yard passing performance by Dalhart's Dan Field. Canadian intercepted two of Field's passes, while the Wolves grabbed an interception and a fumble recovery of the Wildcats.

The teams went scoreless in the first quarter, but Wright got the Wildcats that way on a six-yard touchdown burst to start the second stanza. Geoff Dockray made the PAT kick as Canadian took a 7-0

It didn't remain that close for long. On Canadian's next possession White called his own number and raced 66 yards for another TD.

Dockray converted to make it 14-0. That lead became 21-0 just before intermission when White found Jeff Kirkland on a 21-yard scoring route and Dockray added the point-after. The late TD was set up when the 'Cats blocked a

Dalhart punt with 36 seconds left in the half. As he did in the second quarter, Wright opened the scoring in the third, rumbling over from two yards out put the 'Cats 27 points in the black. The kick failed

Kirkland scored Canadian's final touchdown on an eight-yard run later in the period, and Dockray's kick gave the Wildcats a dominating 34-0

Dalhart made its lone score on a three-yard pass from Field to Mike Mitchell in the fourth quarter. The Wolves failed on a two-point conversion attempt, making the final 34-6.

White gained 109 yards in five carries for Canadian and completed five of 11 passes for 84 yards. Wright added 59 yards on 12 tries.

Rockets 'Nash' Bucks in key 2-2A battle

WELLINGTON — Wellington 'Nashed' its way back into District 2-2A title contention here Friday night, at the expense of the defending champions.

Fifty times the Skyrockets handed the football to halfback Johnny Nash, and his 204-yard response is the primary factor behind Wellington's 7-6 win over the White Deer Bucks.

White Deer had hoped to wash Wellington from the playoffs picture. The Rockets entered the battle 0-1 in the loop and facing elimination in the event of a loss.

But now the Bucks and Wellington are tied at 1-1, trailing Quanah and Memphis, which White Deer hosts in consecutive weeks. Now White Deer knows how the Rockets feel.

"We're up against it now," White Deer coach Windy Williams said. "We've got to play well every time

The Bucks are in that position because Wellington controlled the ball for 31 of the game's 48 minutes, calling Nash's number 76 percent of the time.

Wellington ran 66 plays to White

"They made it tough for us to even have many opportunities to put it in the end zone," Williams said, adding that Nash's running was a factor.

"He's big and strong and fast," he said. "He's a fine football player...It's hard for 11 men to bring him down.'

The Rockets scored what was to be the winning touchdown on the game's first possession.

In 14 plays they drove from their own 33 and capped the march on a four-yard run by fullback Kenny Peeks. Neal Duncan kicked what was to be the deciding point and Wellington led 7-0 at the 6:45 mark.

It might have been 14-0, but White Deer made a fierce goal line stand just before the intermission.

The Rockets drove 67 yards to the Bucks' 4 and a first down. Four Nash runs later, Wellington was only at the White Deer 1.

Ron McIntosh made the fourth down stop with 23 seconds left in the half.

White Deer retaliated in the third quarter, taking the opening kickoff 84 yards for a score

McIntosh ran for 13 yards and quarterback Jeff Cox found receivers James Ingle and Brent Bridwell as the Bucks moved to the Wellington 5.

White Deer lost three yards, then McIntosh swept around left end to make it 7-6, but Travis McIntosh missed the PAT kick and the Bucks never neared the Wellington end zone again.

Williams offered no blame, saying, "We felt like we had opportunities to win the ball

Rice edges Texas Tech

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) -Though the scoreboard showed it was Rice that defeated Texas Tech Saturday afternoon, Tech Coach Jerry Moore knew his own squad really was responsible.

"We took ourselves out of every opportunity to win the game," Moore said after the 29-27 Southwest Conference defeat, which left the Red Raiders winless in league play this year.

"The dropped passes and missed passes ... we have to correct these mistakes," Moore said

The mistakes included four Tech turnovers — three lost fumbles and one pass interception. And while Rice had its share of problems in the seesaw battle, including six fumbles, the Owls only gave away the ball twice. In the end, it came down to kicking for Rice and missed passes for Tech. Rice senior James Hamrick booted three field goals, including a 57-yard game-winning kick with 18 seconds left to play, in the Owl Hamrick set a new Rice record for longest successful field goal with his final kick, which capped an 18-yard, four-play drive by the Owls, who boosted their record to

3-3 overall and 2-1 in the conference with the win Tech fell to 3-4 overall.

The Raiders tried unsuccessfully to regain the lead in the closing seconds of the game when freshman quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver threw to Lemuel Stinson from the Tech 47, but had the pass tipped near the Owls five.

Seven seconds later, Tolliver hit Stinson in the chest in the end zone but the ball bounced off.

Tech quarterback Aaron Keesee summed up the frustrations of the afternoon: "I can't tell you what the problem was. We don't have any excuses ... We didn't execute on offense."

For Rice, Coach Watson Brown said the victory was due to "the kids. These kids are winners, but that doesn't mean they win every game. But they never quit."

Hamrick put the Owls on the scoreboard first on their first possession when he kicked a 22-yard field goal. He gave Rice three more points in the second period on a 27-yard attempt.

Rice, which added seven points on a 21-yard touchdown pass from freshman quarterback Quentis Roper to tightend Darrell Goolsby in the final seconds of the second period, went in at the half up 13-12. But nine of the Raiders first 12 points came off of Rice turnovers. Tech's Leonard Jones intercepted a Roper pass and ran 30 yards to set up a Marc Mallery field goal in the second quarter The 20-yard kick by Mallery gave Tech a 6-3 lead. On Rice's next possession, junior quarterback Kerry Overton went back to pass, but had the ball knocked from his hands by Tech's Carl Carter and Jones recovered it at the Rice 14. Two plays later, Tech got its first touchdown on a 4-yard run by Dale to go up 12-3.

After taking its half-time lead. Rice opened the third period with a

73-yard touchdown run by senior Antonio Brinkley, and took a 20-12

Brinkley carried the ball 19 times for 143 yards to lead Rice in rushing. Tech regained the lead after tying the game at 20 in the fourth nuarter when Price ran in from the left for a two-point conversion. On the Raiders' next possession, Price ran in again from the left from five yards out to put Tech on top 26-20. Mallery made good on an extra point attempt to make the score 27-20.

Rice recovered a Price fumble. with 4:48 left to play and five plays: later, Roper hit Goolsby in the end zone from eight yards out to come within one point. A two-point conversion play, however, failed. Price led Tech in rushing with 71 vards on 12 carries.

Rice starting quarterback Mark Comalander was forced to leave the game after the Owls' third play when he separated his right shoulder.

The Owls used four quarterbacks during the game, which was their second Southwest Conference victory after a 26-league losing Brown knows, however, that his team still has "a long way to go.

"We were facing a tremendous uphill battle ... but the kids deserved to win the game. They hung in there against some pretty big odds.

Brown said he sees Rice "getting better every week, but we still have a long way to go.

"I don't know if I was sharper, but I had a different attitude," said Bell, who threw for 806 yards in his first three games this season but managed just 294 yards combined against LSU and Tennessee while also throwing four interceptions. "I wanted to be more aggressive going downfield. I have been looking to my receivers too much in the flats," he added. "I went back to doing what I've been doing since I came here, throwing to my wideouts downfield.

The TD passes, including one covering 70 yards to Neal Anderson and another of 55 yards to Ray McDonald, were Bell's first since Sept. 28 when he threw three against Mississippi State to give him 10 in his first three games.

Eric Hodges also caught a 12-yard TD pass from Bell, and Anderson scored on a 1-yard run in the second quarter when he became the Gators' career touchdown leader.

The shutout was the second in three games for Florida, which started the day ranked ninth in the nation in total defense. Southwestern Louisiana amassed 212 yards of offense, but saw its only threat stopped by one of four fumbles the Ragin' Cajuns lost.

"Our defense had an outstanding game," Florida Coach Galen Hall said. "They were concerned about trying to preserve the shutout and succeeded in doing that.

"I think they played a very adequate game, although I don't think that they are an awesome defense ... yet," Hall added. "I think we have improvements that can be made in all phases of our Southwestern Coach Sam Robertson said he was encouraged by some aspects of his team's play. We just made the mistake of putting the ball on the ground ... The things that beat us were our own mistakes.'

Texas Realtors magazine tells about sale in Pampa

The October issue of Texas Realtor magazine contained an article written by Gene and Jannie Lewis of Pampa's Action Realty on the sale of the property where the restaurant, Danny's Market, is located in front of the Pampa Mall.

The article was entitled, 'Ingenuity boosts Pampa's Pride." It told of the efforts of the local real estate firm in selling the property, which had formerly housed a steakhouse and a seafood restaurant, both of which closed

The article told about how the owner, who lived in South Texas, insisted the property was worth $400,000, while the local realtors had set the value at between $250,000 and $275,000

They told how they contacted a number of franchisers, from Wendy's to Red Lobster, but couldn't convince them that Pampa was large enough to insure their success

Local residents, they said, were stunned when they learned about the asking price of the property.

Finally, the article said, a New Mexico resident expressed interest and asked a lot of questions about Pampa's economy

By driving him around two for two hours, we 'sold our town,' " the article stated. He eventually offered $250,000,

The center provides a noon meal each weekday for 150 to 250 people in addition to sponsoring a program of various activities at other times for many of Pampa's senior citizens. The United Way also helps fund the South Side Center, which offers week night programs and daytime referral services.

KNOCK, KNOCK - Individual Gifts chairman Evelyn Johnson, left, hands out Pampa United Way campaign material to Millie McKinley at her home. Johnson coordinates the volunteers who go from door to door during the annual fund drive to seek contributions and pledges to help fund the various United Way supported agencies. McKinley is also a volunteer.

The annual United Way campaigns are not conducted without a lot of hard work by numerous volunteers who put in many hours of effort to make the fundraising drive a success.

Among the workers are the drive chairman and his cabinet, volunteers who actually spearhead the organizational tasks of getting others out to visit businesses, knock on doors, turn in reports and total up the contributions.

And while heading up the various activities involved in conducting an annual drive, these volunteers often find that the best part of their work is getting to know more about the agencies and programs they encourage others to support with their donations.

They wouldn't be participating in the drive unless they cared about the United Way effort. And after all their labor, their contacts with the agencies, their involvement with other volunteers, they find they care even more.

Drive chairman for the 1985 Pampa United Way campaign is Charlie Loeffler, who has been busy coordinating the drive activities since his appointment by the board of directors in January.

He has spent the past 10 months getting acquainted with the various agencies and programs supported by United Way funds, reviewing the budgets, gathering members for the drive's organization and setting goals for the drive — $301,760 is the fund goal this year.

Technical manager at the plant, he has instituted some changes in the drive this year.

He has recruited 10 loaned executives, individuals provided by businesses or industries to give at least a half day each week of the drive, away from the office, to help with the drive efforts. In the past, there had usually only been two or three loaned executives.

Loeffler has created seven divisions covering the areas of emphasis for seeking donations from contributors: Professional, Special Gifts, Public, Commercial, Major Firms, Individual Gifts, and National and Regional, with chairmen or co-chairmen for each division.

These division chairmen, like Loeffler, have been spending a lot of time in getting further acquainted with the services and programs funded by the United Way.

One of the chairmen is Tommy Lindsey, principal of Mann Elementary School. He received his bachelor of science degree in education from Oklahoma University and his master of education degree from West Texas State University.

County Spelling Bee director, Lindsey also serves on the Red Cross board.

He and his wife Sondra have three children: Lisa, 15; Leigh Ann, 11, and Lori Beth, 4. "The United Way enables each of us to assist in supporting our community by helping our neighbors of all ages through the various organizations," he said.

Lindsey and Loeffler recently had an opportunity to see the wide range of ages assisted by the United Way agencies.

Lindsey drove down the street from Mann one morning to visit the Community Day Care Center, where he observed a group of 2-year-olds enjoying some fun activities in a class. Loeffler dropped by the Pampa Senior Citizens Center at lunchtime one day, chatting with some of the older residents enjoying their lunch and visits with each other.

Heading up the National and Regional Division is Carol Cofer, who served as the Corporate Development Division chairman last year. Her duties include writing to various national corporation and foundation headquarters to seek contributions for the local drive.

Employed with IRI International, Cofer is a graduate of White Deer High School. She also attended West Texas State University at Canyon. A member of First Baptist Church, she has served as an officer of the Business and Professional Women's Sunday School Class. She also is a member and past president of the Pampa Desk and Derrick Club.

One afternoon recently she visited the Pampa Sheltered Workshop and observed some of its clients busily engaged in some of their work contract projects. She chatted with some of the clients and staff members in learning more about the workshop and its facilities.

"The United Way is the best way to make one contribution to help people of all ages right here in Pampa," she said. "The results can be seen immediately."

Another volunteer cabinet member is Evelyn Johnson, who heads up the Individual Gifts Division, a position she also held as co-chairman in last year's drive.

Having attended Amarillo College, Johnson has also served as a board member of United Way, a board member of Genesis House and a member of the Executive Council of Boy Scouts, the latter two agencies part of the United Way programs. She is a past president of the 20th Century Culture Study Club.

Her responsibilities on the United Way cabinet involve coordinating the many volunteers who visit the homes of Pampa area residents to seek donations during the drive.

"The United Way is essential for the good of our community," Johnson said. "The agencies that are helped by contributions are certainly worthwhile. And by people giving to United Way, all these worthwhile causes receive benefits from each individual's contribution."

But working on the annual drive cabinet is not the only way volunteers can serve the United Way and its supported agencies.

Try homemade Halloween paint

By DONNA BRAUCHI County Extension Agent

With Halloween only days away, children begin thinking about masks and costumes. Often masks are too large for children and they have a hard time seeing out of the mask eves.

This year, why not try Halloween grease paint? The formulas below are easy to make and certainly not harmful, as they are made from food products. However, they should not be eaten as they are indigestible in an uncooked state. The grease paint can be easily removed with white shortening, cold cream or baby oil White Formula

2 tsp. white shortening 5 tsp. corn starch 1 tsp. white flour

Glycerin and food color Using a rubber spatula, blend first three ingredients on a white plate to form a smooth paste. Add 3 to 4 drops of glycerin for a creamy consistency. The yield should be enough for a child's face. If you need more, make the amount you need before adding coloring; then add food color, a drop at a time, blending after each drop, until you have the desired shade. Using fingers and stroking in one direction, spread mixture over

Brown Formula

1 tsp. white shortening 2-1/2 tsp. unsugared cocoa

Mix as for white formula. Because brown mixture is the same general consistency as the white formula, you can use it effectively to paint details. An eyebrow pencil is often too hard of an instrument to use with this soft makeup as it tends to push makeup away instead of marking. Using a soft paint brush, paint lines on face over the base mixture. Procedure: (1) Lightly coat the face with shortening or cold cream. Remove excess with tissue, leaving mere film as a base for makeup to come. (2) If face is to be marked into sectons for color areas, outline the areas with an eyebrow pencil. (3) Mix colors (see white and brown formulas). (4) Fill in areas on face with mixture. The warmth of the skin tends to make the makeup shine after a while. (5) Mark details with brown mixture and lipstick if desired. Do not dust makeup with powder as it tends to flake off.

Another costume addition you can make is glasses or goggle eyes. Cut two adjoining individual sections from egg carton. Cut eye holes at bottom of each section. Cut small half-circle away from between sections so glasses fit over nose. Punch holes on each side of glasses. Reinforce holes with tape. Attach string or piece of elastic through reinforced hole to tie on glasses. Loop over ears or tie at back of head. Decorate with marking pens to make funny glasses or silly goggle eyes. Keep safety in mind as you help children prepare their costumes. Costumes should show up in the dark. If they do not, purchase and use reflecting tape to help make them visible. Short costumes are easier for children to move in from place to place.

Clean Pampa encourages student awareness

By LARRY HOLLIS

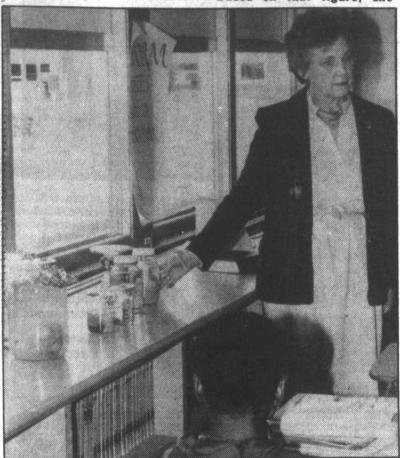

Making strides to bring its anti litter message to youth, Clean Pampa, Inc., has been visiting Pampa schools to discuss the goals of the organization and to encourage students to become more aware of trash problems.

Clean Pampa coordinator Jo Potter and board of directors secretary Betty Henderson recently taught earth science classes at Pampa Middle School to Mangold and Larry Hanna.

Prior to the instruction by the Clean Pampa members, the students had been asked to conduct an at - home project to estimate how much trash their families disposed of yearly.

noted that in one 24-hour period she and her husband accumulated 3 pounds of trash in their home, or an average of 1½ pounds per person.

MURKY WATERS - Betty Henderson, board of directors secretary for Clean Pampa, Inc., discusses a water jar experiment with earth science students at Pampa Middle School. The jars contain decomposing vegetable matter, with methylene blue added to the water to show the oxygen content. As the matter decomposes, the waters turn murky, indicating oxygen is being depleted from the water, she explains. Similar situations, resulting from man-made litter accumulating in some bodies of water, threaten animal and plant life. (Staff photo by Deborah Hendrick)

In addition to instructing the students, the two women also conducted a contest for the eighth grade students in which the students submitted acronyms and slogans for use by Clean Pampa.

Fifteen students submitted 39 entries, which were judged by a panel of Clean Pampa members. Jennifer Massick won first place and a $5 award in the acronyms division. Her winning entry was CUP (Clean Up Pampa).

Second place and a $3 award went to Candace Mack for her F.I.S.T. entry (Forgetfulness Instantly Signals Trash). Ross Johnson won third and a $2 award for his PUP entry (Pick it Up, Pampa)

A special mention went to Chuck Urbanczyk, who came up with TATTLE (The Association To Trap Litterbugs Early).

In the slogans division, first place and a $5 award went to Tory Peet for "Dunk Your Junk." Chris Hite won the second place $3 award for "Dump Your Trashy Habit." The third place $2 award was given to Lynn Davis for "Don't Be a Trashy Dumper on the Road."

Special mention was awarded to Shawn Weatherford. His entry was "Shout, Shout, Shout It All Out, Trash Is the Thing We Can Do Without. So Come On, We're Talking to You," based on a recent Number 1 pop tune by English group Tears for Fears.

The winning entries have been marked with a special gold sticker from Clean Pampa. They and the other entries all will be displayed at McDonald's Restaurant.

All entrants received cards for free French fries compliments of McDonald's, with the special mention winners receiving two

The contest entries grew out of three days of teaching conducted by Potter and Henderson in the

PMS earth science classes of Willie

Methylene blue, a chemical substance which indicates the presence of oxygen, was then added to the water, Potter reported.

At the time of the classes, the jars had been prepared for one to three days. The water without the added trash was still blue, indicating oxygen was still present, she noted

But the jars containing the decomposing vegetable trash had begun to show murky water, indicating oxygen was being used up, Potter said. At least one jar had produced bubbling methane gas.

Animal and plant life in many ponds, lakes and rivers are threatened because of the additional litter added to the waters by mankind, the two women

The most effective way to battle litter and trash problems is a change of attitude by people, the Clean Pampa members told the students. That's the major goal of Clean Pampa and the national Keep America Beautiful organization.

The principles of behavioral psychology are being applied in the organizations' programs to get people to become more aware of the litter and trash problems which result from "man - made and man -used" materials often carelessly discared and disposed of, Potter and Henderson noted.

Litter has become a costly problem for the nation, with taxpayers paying a growing share of tax money to combat the clean-up operations.

Henderson noted the Texas Highway Department has spent $17 million on cleaning up trash and litter from the state's highways in one recent year, with $20 million allocated in the last budget.

The decomposition time for litter is dependent on a number of factors, including sun, humidity and rain. Even vegetable matter, which many think decomposes quickly, may take up to six months for such items as banana and orange peels to decompose, the two women explained.

A gallon plastic milk bottle requires 50 to 80 years for its decomposition. An aluminum can, based on "educated guesses," takes 80 to 100 years to disappear, Potter said, which means it could be found on some roadside by our great - grandchildren

A glass bottle has no decomposition time period determined, she said, noting glass items have been found in archaeological sites dating back thousands of years.

With increasing population growth and a multitude of throw-away products, litter has become an increasingly threatening problem in our society,

And the best way to attack the problem is to change people's attitudes about litter, she told the students, noting people need to become more aware of and more concerned with the millions of pounds of litter, trash and discarded materials accumulating in the state, nation and world.

Potter said one of the most frequently asked questions about Clean Pampa is its connection to the city. She said the organization is ran or operated by the city.

Instead, it is a group of private citizens concerned with litter and efforts to alleviate the resulting problems associated with it. It is completely separate from any city government operations, though it tries to work closely with the city on developing and implementing anti - litter programs.

BEAUTIFUL DAYS! Cold, rainy days, yes, but the news is good!

Halloween arrived ahead of schedule at the Leah and Billy Orrick home to celebrate Justin's seventh birthday. Part of the fun was a tour through the haunted house that began with two bales of hay, courtesy of Susan and John Tripplehorn, plus a large pumpkin on the front porch. Twenty nine guests, all costumed, entered the house full of spider webs, cardboard coffin, guillotine and set of stocks, made by Leah and all properly decorated by Billy, who took his post at the coffin. Leah served as the witch and Heather Gikas "fell" from the guillotine. Rene (Mrs. Frank) McCullough assisted. That had to be a birthday to be remembered for a long time.

A warm Pampa welcome to the Rev. John Denton and his wife. Recently of Fritch, John has been named pastor of Calvary Baptist Church. Interim pastor was Jim Powell, a full-time employee of the Texas Highway Department. At one time, the Dentons were full-time mission field workers in New Mexico. They have five grown children.

Pampa Shriners have bought five wheelchairs to be placed on permanent loan to the Coronado Nursing Center for residents who are unable to buy or rent their own.

Recently Medicare discontinued payment of rental of durable medical equipment for all nursing home residents, leaving many who could not pay for their own wheelchairs, walkers, oxygen concentrators and other such

Pine trees lose some needles

By JOE VanZANDT County Extension Agent

I see that some pine trees are in the early stages of dropping their old-inner needles. This is an annual natural occurrence. They do not retain all of their needles for the life of the tree. Most pine trees retain needles for about 2 to 3 years, then as newer growth has occurred, the older needles receive less sunshine and are less functional to the tree so they drop the inner needles. This process is just starting on some of the pine trees and will increase during the next month. Don't get alarmed when you see some dead needles on the inner part of your pine trees. PEACH TREE BORER

If you did not use an insecticide spray treatment for peach tree borers on the trunk of your fruit trees either during the summer or early fall, it is now time to forget those methods for this year.

However, these borers can be controlled by an application of paradichloro-benzene crystals applied around the base of the tree during the period of October 20 to November 15. The use of these crystals in the proper manner will, in most cases, eliminate the infestations. The crystals should be applied when the soil is dry and the temperature is 55 degrees F or above. Weeds should be removed from around the base of the tree and the soil leveled one foot from a narrow groove encircling the tree and size of the tree. In general, about two inches from the tree trunk. Care should be taken to keep any of the crystals from coming in direct contact with the tree. Clean soil should be placed over the crystals so as to form a cone-shaped pile about six inches high around the base of the tree. When putting and compacting the soil around the base of the tree, care should be taken not to put any of the crystals against the tree. During the winter, the peach tree borers that are at the base of the tree will be killed. In late March or early April, the cone-shaped pile of dirt should be removed from the base of the tree.

Further information on control of the peach tree borer is available through your Gray County Extension Service DANDELIONS IN TURF

The recent wet weather has revived a lot of dandelions in my lawn. Now would be a good time to give them a good spot spray treatment with a mixture containing one or more of the following herbicides: 2, 4-D, dicamba or MCPP. Also, if a person was real careful and only sprayed or wiped the dandelion plant itself, then Roundup could be tried. However, turf grass damage would probably occur if Roundup

Introduction to dinner

By ERMA BOMBECK

I was trying to remember the other day when restaurants were places where you sat down, ordered, ate, talked to one another and left. There were no introductions, no social amenities and no monologues. Oh, occasionally, a group of waiters and waitresses would hoist a cupcake with a sparkler on it and sing "Happy Birthday," but it was no big deal

The other night we drove into the restaurant parking lot and a kid from valet parking opened the doors for us and said. "My name is Hal and I'll keep an eye on your car. Have a good dinner. "I said, "Thank you, Hal. I'm Erma and this is my husband, Bill, andour friends, Dick and Bernice.

Inside we were seated wehn a young woman appeared and said, "Good evening. My name is Wendy and I'm your cocktail waitress. What could I get you this evening?" I introduced all of us again and we ordered something from the bar. .

My husband leaned over and "So Dick, what's

A waiter brought a basket of bread to our table and said, "Good evening, folks, I'm Brick and these are our special toasted garlic rounds with just a hint of parmesan and fresh parsley. If you need more, yell. Enjoy."

"Thanks, Brick," said my husband. "So, what's happening, Another waiter appeared and said, "Hello, I'm Stud and I'll be your waiter for this evening. I'd like to interrupt for just a minute to tell you about our specials for this evening. The chef has prepared Osso Bucco. This is made with knuckle of veal, garlic, chicken sauce, white wine, tomato paste and anchovy fillets finely chopped. The catch of the day is Smoked Cod's roe which the chef makes into Taramasalata smothered with black olives, heavy cream, lemon and olive oil. The soup of the day is everyone's favorite, Watercress and Apple, with just a pinch of curry. I'll give you a minute to Numbly, we all looked at one another. His monologue had lasted longer than most marriages. "So

Dick, what's happening with you?' began my husband. Wendy reappeared and said, "Refills, anyone?" We shook our heads

Stud followed her to the table and said, "Are we ready to order now?" No sooner had Dick and Bernice agreed to share the salad when a table appeared and Stud narrated the drama of the birth of a Caesar salad like a midwife. Meanwhile, Frank (the chef) appeared with a naked fish which he stuck under my nose for approval. (Thank God I didn't order the strangled duck!)

After the salad table came another table with flames leaping off it and Stud once again electrified us with his commentary on sauce for the Moroccan meatballs. Arthur appeared with a key around his neck and a book that weighed 36 pounds and introduced himself as our wine steward. I introduced him to Bill, Dick and Bernice.

As we got into the car my husband said, "I'd like to get together again and get to know

"Thanks," said Hal. "I was talking to Dick and Bernice," said my husband.

Process preserves boiled eggs

The chicken may have come before the egg, but Pete Kontos is making sure the egg stays fresh in salad bars from Hatteras to Hawaii long after the chicken has clucked

Kontos, president of P.K. Foods Inc. of Advance, N.C., has developed a process to give hard-boiled eggs a shelf life of several months without freezing or preservatives. He said his nine-employee company supplies all the fresh-chopped hard-cooked eggs used around the country, except in parts of the Midwest and Alaska.

"On a weekly basis, we're talking about some place around 80,000 pounds," said Kontos. 'That's about 650,000 eggs.

United Way

About four years ago, Kontos and other processers were making a decent living selling 5-gallon buckets of hard-cooked eggs preserved with chemicals when someone came up with the process for producing diced frozen eggs.

The process took away a lot of his customers, and Kontos wasn't impressed with what it did to the

"It becomes like a sponge," he said. "There was a lot of demand from customers for something better than the frozen egg. I developed this process, and the U.S. government has awarded us two patents."

The eggs, most of which are chopped but some of which are sold whole, still must be refrigerated. But Kontos has developed another process to preserve a whole egg without refrigeration. He hopes to introduce the product in the next two or three months.

"I have talked to some people dealing with the military," he said. That is what we are aiming at."

In tests, the eggs have remained fresh after three months at 100 degrees Fahrenheit, said Kontos.

In addition to the U.S. patents, Kontos has patents for fresh-chopped hard-cooked eggs in Europe, Canada, Japan, Israel, Australia and New Zealand. He plans to start marketing the eggs in England and Australia soon.

College son home as 'guest' demands a new set of rules

By Abigail Van Buren

ily conflict. Our son, a senior in college, was home for the summer, and for the first time he stayed out all night. He went out on a date and didn't even call to let us know he wouldn't be home to sleep—he just walked into the house the next afternoon without a word. After this happened, I asked him to please call us if he knows he will not be home to sleep. He ignored my request and continued to do the same thing frequently until the end of the sum-

After he went back to college, he wrote us an angry letter saying he is an adult now and shouldn't be bound by high school rules. He also said he is no longer a part of our household, he's a "guest" and shouldn't be expected to let us know if he's going to stay out all night.

My husband says I should calm down-our son is now 21. What does that mean? I really would like to know how you feel about this, Abby. CHICAGO MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I would argue that even though your son is 21, when he's home, he's still a part of your household. However, if he insists that he's a "guest," remind him that as a matter of courtesy, a guest always informs his hosts in advance that he will not be home for the night-assuming he knows, which may not always be the case.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a sophomore on campus and we started to talk. I walked her to her class and that's how we got acquainted. I asked her if she wanted to go out with me, and although she didn't exactly jump at the chance, she did give me her telephone number. Well, I called her that night (Monday), and asked her if she wanted to go out with me on Friday night. She said she was busy so I asked her for Saturday. She said she was busy on Saturday, too. Then I asked her for a week from Friday and she said she had a date,

DEAR ABBY: Please settle a fam- so I asked her for a week from Saturday, and she said she didn't want to tie herself up so far in advance!

So how can I get a date with this girl? Or do you think she's trying to tell me something?

she has already told you something. You are not for her. Don't despair. There's somebody for everybody. Try another girl.

DEAR ABBY: Our next-door neighbors have not bothered to put a curtain or window shade on their bathroom window. Because that window is visible only from our house, they probably feel safe and unnoticed. But when nighttime comes and their lights go on, it looks as though they are on a stage! Not only that, but one wall is mirrored, so we get a view of the entire bathroom.

My husband and I weren't too concerned about all this until our 10year-old daughter suddenly began to take a great interest. Even though I've explained to her that she should respect the privacy of others, their blatant display is difficult to ignore. I'm embarrassed and don't know how to handle this. I hardly know these neighbors except to wave at them now and then.

MRS. Y IN LAGUNA HILLS

DEAR MRS. Y: It's time to quit waving and start talking to your neighbor. If you're too embarrassed to talk, write. But do ask them to put some kind of covering over their bathroom window because your 10-year-old has become fascinated with the

Haute cuisine goes high tech

PARIS (AP) - Get set, diners. Another French gastronomic revolution is under way. This time it's prefab food.

Jean-Pierre Morot-Gaudry, who runs a top restaurant near the Eiffel Tower, and three other well-known chefs - all heaped with stars in the Michelin Guide - are launching their experiment in plastic-packaged food. Some of their standbys include old-fashioned French dishes such as beef stew, or "daube de boeuf."

"But it is really good food," said Morot-Gaudry. "Our dishes with sauce are prepared in advance, but with an artisanal approach - by cooks, not machines.

"The food is neither frozen nor preserved by traditional means. But we're providing up to 25,000 individual dishes a day to furnish 30 restaurants who microwave-heat the food for serving.'

They supervise a laboratory of cooks producing dishes that can be saved up to three weeks in plastic boxes, heated quickly by restaurants or home consumers. The chefs contend that their products taste better than most

At a recent evening performance at a model summer camp along Tripoli harbor, group after group of children in green uniforms - the prophet Mohammed's battle color as well as Libya's national hue took to a wooden stage decorated by a painting of Uncle Sam taking a kick in the rear from a green boot.

For five hours, they sang of the TRANQUILIZERS Tranquilizers are medications designed to relieve anxiety and nervousness. A physician knows of many potent medications that can be pre-scribed for "nerves" or simple tension. Medications, however, are usually only a temporary measure in the treatment of nervous disorders. Professional counseling often is more therapeutic than taking medicine. No over-the-counter drugs are marked as tranquilizers and over-the-counter sleep aids should not be used as tranquilizers. One must visit a physician to obtain a prescription for a tranquilizer. The physician can also provide for or arrange professional counseling for range professional counseling for problems that are the cause of anxiety or tension. There is no long-term shortcut to peace of mind.

DALLAS - A $10 billion-plus transit system destined to become second only to New York City's in size is quibbling over small change.

The Dallas Area Rapid Transit system, or DART, is trying to decide whether to strip the advertisements off the sides of its buses - thereby losing as much as much potential revenue as $1 million a year.

It voted to ban the ads, then held off the edict until a new hearing next month

No ads would send a classier message and would lure commuters and yuppies from their beloved automobiles and onto buses, "no ad" backers say

Opponents counter that for DART to throw away the money from those ads is to send a message of financial foolishness - an image DART can ill-afford as it builds a bus and rail system financed almost entirely by local taxpayers' money

"I think the marketing argument (for no ads) is very strong. We've got a product just like a box of soap," said DART board member David Johnson of Dallas. "You add little green specks and say 'new and improved.

The problem, Johnson said, is that it can't be shown how many more riders will use the buses simply because they are new, stripped of ads and painted high-tech vellow.

The loss of the advertising money instead "becomes a bad signal to our taxpayers," he said.

The concept is not new. Transit authorities in Atlanta, Houston and San Antonio, for example, allow no outside advertising on buses.

But bans on ads are still rare. And it's stickier in Dallas, where the growing transit system is less than two years old and under intense scrutiny from taxpayers, cities, counties and customers.

DART is the largest public works project in the United States.

By the 21st Century, it will link the city of Dallas and 15 surrounding communities with more than 1,000 bus routes and a network of rail lines

Created by voters in a 1983 election, DART is financed almost totally with local money. None of the rail systems, for example, will use federal or state money. Instead, consumers pay an additional penny in sales tax on every dollar spent to fund DART In an annual operating budget of $324 million, the estimated revenue of $385,000 to $1 million from ads touting everything from a local laundromat to Southern Methodist University's football team is tiny. But the idea that DART would willingly lose that $1 million for something as intangible as image is irresponsible, critics say

"If we have to choose between a check and a clean side on a bus, I think we owe the taxpayers the (check),' said Dallas City Councilman Jerry Rucker or not to get on a bus because it has a sign on it," he said

DART's investment in image, however, goes beyond taking ads off

In moving public transportation from the era of aging, city-run buses to today's independent transit system promising subways, rail lines and sleek new buses on express routes from the suburbs, DART must show it is different, managers say.

"All of urban America that has a transit system is dealing with the people who choose to ride, not those who have to," said DART executive director Ted Tedesco. "Those are the people who look at how the buses look, are they clean, are they reliable.

"We think painting the outside of buses with $2.99 breakfast ads is not the way to market that," Tedesco said. "If they (critics) want to be fiscally responsible, why not put advertising on city vehicles, on dump trucks, on police

Economics is not the issues, Tedesco argues. Much more than the lost revenue can be made up in other forms of advertising that are not as obtrusive,

For example, he has suggested an aggressive advertising program 'that would place more ads inside buses, on schedules, passes and maps. That could bring in up to $1.3 million a year, he DART already has invested thousands of dollars to shed perceptions that buses are second-class transportation. New buses have high-back seats covered in cloth instead of vinyl, new floor coverings, tinted windows, reading lights and other amenities

"The argument is that if we get you out of your comfortable Chevrolet, we're going to have to provide something comparable," said Johnson. Still, he believes the ads should stay.

"I'm saying a fiscally conservative image is more important now," he said. Lobbying heavily to keep the advertisements is Winston Network, a

New York-based company which places most of the transit advertising in the United States. Winston's local attorney, Richard Lannen, said systems across the country must depend on local funding, including advertising revenues, because the federal government is phasing out its contribution.

"To give up this revenue seems ill-advised," Lannen said.

To sweeten the pot, Winston has offered to raise its investment in DART from about $400,000 a year to nearly $1 million in bus-side advertising, Lannen

The DART board voted July 9 to banish the advertisements, but no action was taken after Dallas City Council and Dallas County commissioners, among others, asked for further discussion. Another meeting is scheduled for November.

Although every transit system works to attract more riders, the Dallas area's history of sprawling growth along highways created a dependence on the automobile that is difficult to break, observers say.

Buy American, labor urges

AUSTIN (AP) - Warning that thousands of Texans are losing their jobs because of cheap foreign imports, labor leaders Friday launched a bid to encourage consumers to "Buy American.

Some 50.000 Texas production workers have lost their jobs in the last five years alone because of foreign goods, said Harry Hubbard, president of the Texas AFL-CIO.

"If Hitler had been able to do to Texas manufacturing and oil refining industries what imports are doing, we would be a German colony today." Hubbard said.

"Much of our state's basic manufacturing industries have shut down part of their production or closed entirely," he added.

Hubbard said the AFL-CIO expects 5,000 people to gather in Austin on Nov. 2 for a "Buy American" march and rally to call attention to the dilemma. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who is pushing fair trade legislation in Congress, will speak to the rally

Small towns draw doctors

By RICK BROWN Odessa American

KERMIT, Texas - Two-year-old Jay Spinks toddled out of the examination room with his cheeks shining bright red, a testament to tearful wails minutes earlier. Jay, the son of Pat and Karen Spinks of

Kermit, made a contended gurgling noise as a medical secretary bribed him into happiness with a stick-on cartoon The man in the white jacket who followed

Gibson had a slight paunch and a kindly "I'm not just treating patients - I'm treating friends — people I know." the 62-year-old Gibson, a Kermit general

Jay seemed the picture of a typical small town doctor. Gray-haired Dr. Joseph practitioner since 1952, said recently His comment seemed to summarize the reasons he and other doctors choose a small town practice. Another West Texas physician, Dr. D.J.

Stafford, 55, recently enumerated in quick succession the reasons he has moved his practice to Crane. "I like small towns. I like the people. I like the kind of practice you can do in a small town," Stafford said

Littlefield, a town of about 7,500 people 40 miles northwest of Lubbock, was the site of Stafford's previous practice, he said

But a decline in the town's farm-based economy prompted Stafford to move elsewhere, he said.

In his search for a new location, Stafford said he "looked at a lot of places, including Lubbock." But he decided establishing a practice in a large city would be too impersonal.

"I like to know the whole family, and whether they get well or whether they don't," he said. "I'd been in rural practice for 28 years before moving to Crane.

And the comments of Crane residents to Stafford when he established his practice is a telling indication of the doctor-starved state of some communities, he said. One of the things that everyone wanted to know when I came was: 'Are you going to stay?" he said. Statistics from the Texas Department of Health bear out residents' fears.

A 17-county West Texas area that constitutes the department's Region 12 has a ratio of one licensed physician to every 908 residents, department statistician

Marcia Collins said recently.

In comparison, 10-county Region 11, which includes the city of Houston, has a ratio of 497 residents per each licensed physician, she said. That ratio is 588 to one in Lubbock-centered Region 2.

The ratio for the entire state is one doctor for each 593 residents, Ms. Collins said.

The fact that Crane County recently finished construction on a new hospital was a large factor in Stafford's decision to commit to the city, he said. "It was an indication to me that they needed a new facility and that they were willing to support it," he said. Both Gibson and Stafford contended that a rural doctor's practice likely will be more lucrative than that of his city brethren. But the director of Texas Tech University's

Office of Rural Health in Odessa disagreed "I can tell you for a fact that Medicaid and Medicare payments are less, and that's one of the problems in recruiting," said director Lois Barry

Neither Barry nor Collins were able to estimate the average salary of urban physicians, but Barry quoted statistics setting the rural physician's income at about $40,000 yearly.

Gary Shreve, administrator at Ward Memorial Hospital in Monahans, offered a solution for towns that are having a problem keeping their doctors.

Shreve, whose city has 10 practicing physicians, said that a "quality care focus" and "good management" are attributes that doctors seek in a small town hospital. "I think community hospitals definitely hurt themselves if they don't establish extremely high standards," he said. Those high standards also guard against a "quack" doctor starting a practice, he

Gibson commented that the absence of up-to-date diagnostic equipment in rural locations is not the problem that might be supposed for practicing medicine.

"Eighty-five percent of making a diagnosis comes from a face-to-face office visit," he said Stafford, however, acknowledged a hospital to get such equipment. "The stuff is so damn expensive that you can't just run out overnight and replace it

Gibson said that he's seen at least five doctors come and go in Kermit, and in some cases the small town atmosphere was to blame for their departure The rural surrounding was not so much a negative factor for the physician, but for his wife, he said. 'The spouse has the hardest adjustment to make if they are coming from a large city to a small community," Shreve said in agreement. Gibson said he moved to Kermit in his early 30s after his oldest child was diagnosed as asthmatic and in need of a dry

"I was looking for a small town," he said. "Even Odessa was too big for me." A friend already had started practice in Kermit and invited Gibson to join him, he said. "I thought Kermit was a good little town, a prosperous town. "The only problem was that we only had one examination room, so I had the office in the morning," he said, adding that he "did a lot of house calls because I had half a day to do them. Gibson said he occasionally continues house calls because "I guarantee you, you'll learn more from a house call than from an office visit.'

But Stafford said the clinic system he works with in Crane suits his practice best. Patients "like the idea of an old-fashioned country doctor," he said. "But now you've got to see 40, 50 or 60 of them to pay the bills. Both physicians said the variety of their practices also contributes to their enjoyment of small town doctoring. 'In the rural areas, you have the

Lone Star comfort just a newsletter away

By ANN ZIMMERMAN Dallas Times Herald

AUSTIN (AP) — Shortly after Sandra Allen-Lovewell moved from Houston to Nashville last year, she found herself walking around the advertising agency where she worked singing, "I wanna go home to the armadillo," from Jerry Jeff Walker's song "London Homesick Blues."

Having lived in Texas all of her 38 years, Mrs. Allen-Lovewell expected to be homesick. But she never thought it would be incurable. After months of seraching for good Mexican food, Blue Bell ice cream and a tortilla press to no avail, Mrs. Allen-Lovell convinced her new husband, a Minnesota native, that they had to go home to the armadillo for good. "I said, 'Come with me. Texas will set you free, ''' she says.

Mrs. Allen-Lovewell moved to Austin this spring. But her year of Tex-deprivation was not for naught. It gave her the idea to start a compnay that provides comfort to terminally homesick Texans who can't go home again. At least not yet.

The Lonely Texan, Mrs. Allen-Lovewell's a 3-month-old business, provides a variety of services: For $25 a year, subscribers — she has 130 so far — receive a bimonthly newsletter called Mother Texas, a charge card for discounted Texana items from a soon-to-be-released Lonely Texan catalog, and a toll-free Texas Hotline number that can be called 24 hours a day to request Texas information or to just hear a friendly "Hi y'all." The Mother Texas newsletter is full of Texas tidbits, culled from newspapers around the state. There's a synopsis of the latest news in politics, law, business, sports, education and the arts. The newsletter also provides recipes (there's one for guacamole and chicken enchiladas in the most recent issue), a calendar of upcoming events around the state. updates on Sesquicentennial events and merchandise, the where-abouts and latest endeavors of famous Texans around the country, and a list of the latest books written about Texas or by Texans. In addition to the newsletter, there is an out-of-state report that provides recommendations on where to find passable Texas-like establishments.

The Hotline to Texas, Mrs. Allen-Lovewell says, can be called to find out anything you want to know, from the latest Southwest Conference scores to the names of all the rivers and lakes in Texas. She recently had a request for the history of the armadillo. Some people call just because they're lonely. One woman called at 2 a.m. from California just to hear a Texas accent. The woman was coming home to Dallas for a visit. and she also wanted to know what events were going on so she could plan her weekend.

Mrs. Allen-Lovewell answers the questions and prepares the newsletter with the help of a press clipping service and a computer.

'And I read like a fiend," she said. Many of the calls placed to the hot line are for information on where out-of-staters can find authentic Texas items like Big Red soda, Lone Star beer or a Lone Star flag. The most requested and hardest to find items for out-of-staters, such as picante sauce and Lone Star Native bumper stickers, will be in the catalog, which will be available in about six weeks. The catalog also will include armadillo and cowboy boot Christmas tree decorations, Texas-made fruitcake and "great, wouldn't - be - caught - dead - out of - the - house armadillo slippers."

"It's a pathetic sickness, this Texana thing," Mrs. Allen-Lovewell says. "It really takes over."

Just ask her subscribers. Mel Lavergne, one of the earliest subscribers, is a Houston native who moved to Orlando a year and a half ago to pursue the sort of real estate development that had ceased during the depression in Houston. Now he's nursing his own depression.

A 50-year-old bachelor who says he still thinks he's 33, Lavergne says the thing he misses most about Texas "is the girls. There's nothing like Texas girls in this country," he says. "You could take a seven out of Texas and she'd be a 14 in central Florida. They've got a long way to go."

Lavergne didn't subscribe to Mother Texas for the purpose of meeting girls. He thought the newsletter would keep him apprised of business news in the state he hopes he'll live in again some day. He also thinks the catalog will come in handy around Christmas time. But he says he was pleased to hear that Mrs. Allen-Lovewell is starting a displaced Texans locator service. With permission, she'll print names and addresses of subscribers in the newsletter so dispaced Texans can contact each

"So far," Lavergne says, "no pretty girls have called me yet."
Rita Mayer, who moved to Nashville from Texas 14 years ago and never recovered, has used her membership to get a "Native Texan" bumper sticker and "Native Texan" bar glasses. "I'm going to serve them to people who give me a hard time about being from Texas," Ms. Mayer says.

Mrs. Allen-Lovewell runs the operation with her 21-year-old daughter, Paula, who handles the merchandising and helps answer the Hotline to Texas. "We dream of the day we have banks of operators," Mrs. Allen-Lovewell says.

For the time being, she just hopes she'll recoup her initial investment of $20,000. "I think the potential is there to make really good money," she says. Between 1975 and 1980, 850,000 Texans moved out of the state, she says, citing information she got from the Census Bureau before she started the company.

Even if she doesn't hit it big, Mrs. Allen-Lovewell is just glad she's home. "I was so homesick for Texas. What I missed most was the friendliness of Texans. They couldn't be matched. Tennesseans were pleasant, but they weren't sincere. And it wasn't home. I missed the mystique of Texas, the openness of the land, believing you can change anything if you try hard enough, mesquite-grilled food, ranch-style beans, picante sauce..."

As for her husband, she says, "He's very impressed with Texas. I'm very proud of him. He finally understands what I mean. Texas is a place place.

"You miss it when you're gone because of the people and the lifestyle. They're distinct. I don't know anyone, for example, who misses Montana."

The Hotline to Texas number, toll-free from outside Texas, is (800) 423-4944; in call Texas (512) 440-0474. The company's address is P.O. Box 17907, Austin, Texas, 78760.

Welfare payment errors may cost Texas $5.3 million

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Texas officials say they will fight federal efforts to penalize the state up to $5.3 million because of alleged errors in figuring child welfare payments.

Randy Washington, an assistant commissioner of the Department of Human Services, said last week that Texas had already begun an appeal of the federal penalty assessed for 1981 and would fight any penalties for 1982 and 1983.

The penalties were levied on Texas and 21 other states for not meeting error-rate goals set by the federal Department of Health and Human Services, which oversees Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

An announcement from Washington in April said Texas owed a $1.1 million penalty for not meeting the error-rate goal in 1981.

Linda Hill, a public affairs specialist in Washington, told the Bryan Eagle that error rates for 1982 and 1983 have already been formally announced and that Texas could be charged an additional $2.1 million for each of those years.

Ms. Hill said that no state has lost a cent yet because the internal appeal process takes time. Neither have the states been formally notified of their "disallowances" for 1982 nor 1983, she said. Those notices are expected to trigger a lengthy appeal process for those years as well.
