By TEX DEWEES
Confusion over the $3,000 homestead exemption from taxes on assessed taxable value of property owned by persons 65 or over in Texas has caused a flood of questions to hit City Hall, the Pampa Independent School District office and The Pampa News.

shall be exempt from all taxation for all State purposes.

assessed value of residence homesteads of persons sixty-five (65) years of age or over shall be exempt from ad valorem taxes thereafter levied by the political subdivision. Where any ad valorem tax has theretofore been pledged for the payment of any debt, the taxing officers of the political subdivision shall have authority to continue to levy and collect the tax against the homestead property at the same rate as the tax so pledged until the debt is discharged, if the cessation of the levy would impair the obligation of the contract by which the debt was created.

No election will be necessary for county taxpayers, since the commissioners court already has okayed the exemption for county tax purposes retroactive to Jan. 1 this year.

Kissinger To Visit China

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger will go to Peking for talks with Chinese leaders Feb. 15-19 after his Feb. 10-13 call at Hanoi, the White House announced Saturday.

China is going to the 12-nation Indochina peace guarantee conference later in February.

and Kissinger has made it plain that the United States wants the Communist superpowers "to behave responsibly in preserving the peace."

Kissinger's midway stopover will not be at Saigon, Ziegler added.

foreign minister level on Feb. 26, probably in Paris.

Peace Groups Hold Meetings

SAIGON (AP) — Vietnam's two peacekeeping commissions are meeting jointly for the first time Sunday amid reports of progress in resolving issues blocking an effective truce.

The military commission is charged under the Paris agreement with the responsibility of agreeing on the places of return and insuring the safety of personnel engaged in the return and reception of the prisoners.

Ziegler said Kissinger's full itinerary is not yet fixed, but between Hanoi and Peking he will probably make "a rest stop of one or two days somewhere in Asia."

The 12-nation peace guarantee conference, which includes major powers interested in Indochina as well as the parties directly concerned, is being convened as part of the Vietnam peace agreement signed Jan. 27. It is to begin at the

Political Questions Remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — There can be little doubt now that the upcoming Senate investigations will not only take up the unanswered questions of the Watergate political espionage trial but bring up some that weren't even asked.

The commission, composed of Canada, Indonesia, Poland and Hungary, will formally notify the four-party Joint Military Commission at the meeting that it is sending observer teams into the field Monday, almost a week behind schedule.

Congress Seeks To Be Co-Equal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 93rd Congress, in session for a month now, has been trying to stand up to the President and show it really is a co-equal branch of the government.

back to Thomas Jefferson, but Nixon's critics charge he has carried it to a greater extreme than any of his predecessors.

Two men were convicted last week of breaking into and bugging Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate building complex here, and five others pleaded guilty early in the trial.

WITH THAT GUN SILENCED—With a hopeful cease-fire declared in Vietnam, this South Vietnamese youngster apparently feels safe riding his bicycle through the gun emplacements. Various violations have been reported by both sides, but the violence had begun to show a decrease a week after the cease-fire went into effect.

Municipal Groups Blast Nixon Budget Proposals

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Conference of Mayors and the National League of Cities said Saturday that President Nixon's budget proposals violate a promise not to substitute general revenue sharing for existing forms of federal aid to cities.

Prepared by the joint Washington lobbying staff of the organizations, the report said that mayors, governors, county officials and the President explicitly agreed at an August 1969 meeting in the White House that there would be no such substitution.

The report cited comments in the budget and in budget briefings by federal departments that availability of general revenue-sharing funds was in part the reason for totally discontinuing aid to public libraries, support for community action agencies which coordinate local antipoverty efforts, and other programs, including the $2.25-billion, two-year Emergency Employment Act, which has put 147,000 unemployed persons to work in public service jobs.

Monetary Controls Imposed

BOONN, Germany (AP) — Amid controversy, the West German government has taken drastic steps to try to dam a flood of inflationary dollars and avoid an upward revaluation of the high-flying mark.

An emergency Cabinet meeting Friday night imposed controls on money movements into West Germany after a two-day dollar plunge. The Cabinet acted after the nation's Central Bank was forced to buy about a billion dollars to support the weakened U.S. currency.

While the congressional frustration over continuation of the conflict in Indochina has faded or been muffled by the Paris accords for a cease-fire, the release of American prisoners and the withdrawal of U.S. troops, the controversy over control of the purse is still building.

But the government prosecutors held their case to the immediate circumstances surrounding the arrest of five men at gunpoint inside the Watergate before dawn June 17.

panic in the city center as tens of thousands fled to escape a threatened bomb and gasoline explosion that was averted by British explosives experts.

The report said, "cities will find themselves far behind their position last year, before general revenue sharing was enacted."

Authorities Recover 12 Bodies From Explosion

EAGLE GROVE, Iowa (AP) — The death count in a massive explosion and fire that leveled two buildings and damaged a third rose to 12 Saturday with the discovery of two more bodies, state officials said.

thing he had left after the blast was "what I've got on my body."

The information gathered thus far by the subcommittee, Kennedy said, "strongly indicates that a wide range of espionage and sabotage activities did occur during the recent presidential campaign and especially its primary phase, that these activities were planned and initiated no later than the middle of 1971, that one key participant was in repeated contact with the White House, the White House convention headquarters and White House aides during the relevant time periods."

Rioting broke out for the third straight night in East Belfast, a mainly Protestant sector of Northern Ireland's capital.

In East Belfast, rioters hijacked four panel trucks carrying newspapers and set fire to at least one of them.

The report also criticized two aspects of Nixon's "new federalism" proposals to turn money and power back to the states and local governments.

PPROA Officials Heading To Washington For Action

An effort to stimulate domestic oil and gas production in the Texas Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

Allen, PPROA president, to coordinate their efforts at a meeting of the industry's national association executive committee Feb. 7-8.

Guerrilla gunmen opened up, meanwhile, on British troops investigating a suspected bomb in a car in the Falls Road area.

The soldiers escaped injury, but the army said a 15-year-old boy standing nearby was hit in the arm by the gunmen's bullets.

The special revenue-sharing plans, which Nixon has proposed unsuccessfully twice before, are supported in principle by the two urban groups, because they consolidate funds from many narrow programs into broad block grants with fewer Federal restrictions on how the money is spent.

The PPROA announced Saturday that Jack M. Allen of Perryton and Daniel Conklin and James Walker of Amarillo were scheduled to leave today for Washington, where oil and gas industry representatives will meet Wednesday and Thursday to call for action to ward off the growing energy crisis.

Other area men attending the IPAA meeting are vice president John Chisholm of Cabot Corp., Pampa, and executive committee men E.S. Morris of Amarillo Oil Co. and Avery Rush Jr. of Diamond-Shamrock, both of Amarillo.

But the bomb, a five-pound device wrapped in a rubber sheet and set to trigger the gasoline, was defused by the British army.

The military explosives experts said they had received a warning from the guerrillas and thus had time to evacuate downtown Belfast.

But staff members pointed to the model cities program as one with transition problems.

Price Wants FPC Power Decreased

Congressman Bob Price of Pampa announced Saturday he has introduced legislation similar to that which he introduced during the last session of Congress, to take the Federal Power Commission out of the business of regulating the sale of natural gas in interstate commerce — directly or indirectly — in order to allow these prices to fluctuate according to the free market laws of supply and demand.

The Price legislation comes on the heels of the energy crisis which has been adversely affecting states all over the nation this winter.

The time has already passed for Congress to face up to its responsibilities in order to assure an adequate and reliable supply of natural gas for the consumers of the United States," Price said.

"Natural gas, which is the cleanest burning, cheapest fuel we have in this country, has been discriminated against by repressive legislation. While other fuels, such as coal and oil, are regulated by the laws of supply and demand, subject only to national security consideration, gas is regulated by the Congress through delegation to the FPC."

The Price legislation is designed, he stated, to provide the consumer with an adequate supply of natural gas in the future by providing a sufficient amount of economic incentives, which will encourage rather than discourage the exploratory activity necessary to recover the abundant gas supplies which lie below ground.

"The continuation of present policies with respect to natural gas will result in a situation where no gas will be available to many consumers," Price added. "It is my hope that the Congress will support this legislation to place natural gas on the free market — an action which will not result in drastic increases in the average consumer price of natural gas, but will assure our nation of a continued supply of this commodity."

Man Injured From Beating At Local Club

A 32-year old Pampa man, injured in an affray at a local lounge Friday night, told police he intended to press charges against the men who allegedly beat him.

He told investigating officers he was seated at a table talking to a woman when she said another man at the table wanted him to move because there were too many at the table.

He said he went to the bar then walked back to the table. He was conversing with the woman although he had not taken a seat at the table again.

At this point he was struck by either a bottle or a "billy club" and beat to the floor by two other men as he wrestled with his assailants.

Witnesses tell the same story and said they could identify the man's assailants.

One of the men at the table said the complainant was asked to leave because he was causing a disturbance.

Both men were told they could file charges Monday.

The complainant was treated at Highland General Hospital, where some five or six stitches were taken above one eye.

Kiwanians View Movie On US-Soviet Weapons

A 27-minute documentary motion picture film rejected by the nation's three major television networks was shown to the Downtown Pampa Kiwanis Club at its Friday noon luncheon.

The film, "Only the Strong," was inspired by the President's Blue Ribbon Defense Panel and produced by the Institute for American Strategy in cooperation with the American Security Council.

It documents and graphically compares the various weapons systems of the world's two super-powers, the United States and Russia.

Most of the dramatic film footage was shot inside the Soviet Union and shows Russia's strategic might to have a 3 to 2 advantage over the U.S.

The film was a bit of a shocker to local Kiwanians as they watched the Soviet might in action and listened to U.S. military experts give their views on the growing military advantage Russia is mounting over the United States.

The film was introduced by Jack Skelly, who said it is available for rental by local church groups, civic clubs, fraternal groups and schools.

Skelly said the film was shown on KGNC television in Amarillo but was not run on the two other Amarillo stations for fear of repercussions from the Federal Communications Commission.

Statistics depicted in the film as defensive strategic weapons comparison showed Russia has 3,000 fighter-interceptors and the U.S., 500; Russia has 10,000 surface-to-air missiles and the U.S., 500; Russia has 200 anti-ballistic missiles and the U.S. none.

As for offensive strategic weapons, Russia has 1550 ICBMs and the U.S., 1054; Russia has 840 medium and heavy bombers and the U.S., 470; Russia has 580 sub-launched ballistic missiles and the U.S., 656.

On offensive strategic weapons the U.S. is outnumbered by Russia 2970 to 2170.

On the defensive strategic weapons the U.S. is outnumbered by Russia 15,000 to 10,000, according to the documentary film.

Western Beef Has Record Earnings

AMARILLO—Western Beef, Inc., which has a packing plant in Pampa, announced record earnings for its fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1972 of 94 cents per share as compared to 54 cents per share for the previous year.

Earnings amounted to $967,269 on revenues of $46,838,939 as compared to earnings of $541,389 on revenues of $37,762,986 for the previous year. On a fully diluted basis, net earnings amounted to 87 cents per share for 1972.

The significant improvement in Western Beef's revenues and earnings is the result of the additional expansion of its feedlot facilities and the high occupancy are enjoyed through the year," said George E. Feaster, President.

"Our one-time feedlot capacity was increased from 160,000 head to 182,000, and at the year end we had 171,372 cattle on feed for an occupancy rate of 94 per cent. We anticipate that the high rate of occupancy in our feedlots will continue during fiscal 1973," Feaster said.

Nixon Is Nobel Nominee

OSLO (AP) — The director of the Norwegian Nobel Institute confirmed today that President Nixon is among "dozens of candidates" proposed for the 1973 Nobel Peace Prize.

The deadline for nominations was Thursday.

"My secretary is ill and we have a pile of letters still to check before I can give any exact figure for the number of candidates," said the director.

August Schou, Finance magazine, an American publication that waged a campaign to nominate Nixon for the peace prize, reported Thursday that the nomination had been officially accepted.

"I cannot deny that," said Schou, "but the editor of that magazine has broken the general rule of not publishing the names of nominees."

Price's action came as a result of the recent decision announced by the Department of Agriculture aimed at terminating the Emergency Loan Program of the Farmers Home Administration.

"If this decision is allowed to stand, 'Price announced,' it will have a severe effect on many of our nation's farmers."

The Price bill would repeal the $5,000 "forgiveness" clause and the 1 per cent interest provision established by the "Hurricane Agnes" legislation since the continuation of this procedure would require considerably more funds than there are available at this time.

However, the Texas Congressman's legislation provides that all loans made by the Farmers Home Administration be insured or guaranteed and makes clear the intent of the Congress that the Secretary of Agriculture make disaster area declarations for areas which meet the specifications set out in the consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act.

Furthermore, the Price bill would make 3 per cent loans available for up to 40 years on real property and for up to 12 years on personal property.

SOMETHING IN COMMON besides peace can be seen between President Nixon and national security adviser Henry Kissinger in this Key Biscayne, Fla., scene. They both hold their left hands in their pockets.

You Can't Swear or Libel on the Phone But . . .

You Can Hate All You Want

By TOM TIEDE

PHILADELPHIA — (NEA) — Racial trouble in the Navy? Minority group gangs in the street? Black power, welfare, narcotics? Philadelphians worried about woefully complex problems can get woefully simplistic answers by using their phone.

Dial RE 9-5624

Ringing.

"Hello, this is Dick Bierderman of the National Socialist White People's Party. Talking about everything from shop-lifting to school strikes. The answers are easy: Get rid of Jews, Negroes and the other unclean. Everybody knows niggers cause the trouble. Let's ship them back to where they came. You can take the nigger out of the jungle, but you can't take the jungle out of the nigger."

It's Dial-A-HATE message. Programmed in this city and several others, the caller can for a dime get bigoted pontifications which date to the dark ages of couth.

The sponsors are the die-hards of the late American neo-Nazi organizer, George Lincoln Rockwell. Rockwell was murdered outside a Virginia shopping center three years ago, but his memory lingers on. Loyalists keep his ashes well guarded in a "place of honor" and keep his faith in the form of continued "Nazi" agitation toward what the devoted believe will be the eventual assumption of "white party power" in America.

According to FBI agents whose job it is to keep book on extremists, the National Socialist White People's Party, never very much, is merely a pimple of what it was under Rockwell. Headquartered in Arlington, Va., the group reportedly has "no more than a few hundred active members." Despite its size, however, it pops up periodically, in Los Angeles, or Cleveland, or wherever, usually for small demonstrations.

The party branch in Philadelphia is perhaps one of the more active. Bierderman, a tall, 21-year-old "midwestern farm boy," says he was sent here from Arlington to organize the Delaware Valley. This includes the continuation of our phone message. We run it 24 hours a day. Unfortunately, we can take only one call at a time. Even at that, we get some 3,800 calls every week. We think people are interested."

MIDWESTERN FARM BOY Dick Bierderman has some Philadelphians who care to give him a ring.

Doubtless, people are interested. But not necessarily for the reasons Bierderman wants. A good number of the calls placed to Dial-A-Hate each week are for monitoring purposes. Everybody from the NAACP to the Jewish Defense League is thus interested. "We keep monitoring because we want to catch them," says Sam Bortnik of the JDL. "There are laws against abusing the phone system."

There are, however, not that many laws. And JDL watch-dogging has not yet been able to slap the Nazi line with anything resembling an illegality. "We are completely protected," says Nazi Bierderman, "the constitution guarantees us freedom of speech."

It does indeed. The issue concerning phone messages was settled long ago. In the 1960's the John Birch Society launched a national phone message campaign called Let Freedom Ring. Blatantly anti-Communist in nature, the messages also condemned citizens such as Dwight Eisenhower. Several suits were proposed to stop the slander, citizens' groups issued complaints and denunciations, the Ohio Bell company went so far as to cut the phone message in that city.

The issue, however, was never pursued in court. Today the telephone company says there are 50,000 phone messages in the nation, including vestiges of Let Freedom Ring. The message laws are thus: "You can't swear and you can't libel," sighs Sam Gaber of the B'nai Brith Anti-Defamation League, "but apparently you can hate all you want." Pennsylvania congressman Joshua Eilberg, who once promised legislation curtailing Dial-A-Hate messages, now concedes nothing can be done constitutionally.

"Scum like this," an Eilberg aide says, "is the price we pay for a democracy."

There are those who feel the price is too steep. Last summer, the JDL, tussled with residents in a known Nazi neighborhood (many residents of the neighborhood, a lower-middle-class industrial area called Kensington, say they're opposed to new Nazis). A cluster of cherrybomb firecrackers were exploded near one Nazi's apartment. A black gang in town has threatened to "bump" Richard Bierderman "on sight."

By the far greater number in Philadelphia take the Nazis for what they are, or ignore them completely. Gaber, of the Anti-Defamation League, believes the latter approach is the best.

"Some people have overreacted. I think that's unfortunate. The bigots thrive on publicity. When we hear of, say, somebody painting a swastika on a man's door, we hurriedly advise him to clean it off before the word spreads. We feel that if nobody pays any attention to sneers, they'll just go away."

For its part, the National Socialist White People's Party denies enthusiastically it will ever go away. Bierderman, who believes "Adolf Hitler was the greatest mortal who ever lived," says the mood of the nation is swinging in the new Nazis' favor. He says the party has reached the point where it now does not need to recruit indiscriminately, but is looking only for "people ready to die for the cause."

Highways Get New Top Hand

AUSTIN — The Texas Highway Department has a new top hand. B.L. DeBerry is now State Highway Engineer.

DeBerry, a 35-year veteran with the department, moved up from the No. 2 post with the retirement of J.C. Dingwall when Dingwall reached the department's mandatory retirement age of 65.

DeBerry is only the third chief administrative officer the Highway Department has had in the last 33 years. D.C. Greer, now a member of the Texas Highway Commission, held the top post from 1940 until 1968 when Dingwall took the helm.

DeBerry's experience is varied and well-balanced. In the decentralized organization of the Texas Highway Department, the key men are 25 district engineers and an urban area engineer-manager in Houston.

DeBerry was district engineer in a largely rural area (Lufkin) and in a highly urbanized area (Dallas).

For the last five years as assistant state highway engineer, he has had a statewide overview of the highway program in Texas. He recently has been named to the Design Committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials.

API To Hear Speech On Drill Stem Testing

The February meeting of the Panhandle Chapter API will be held next Thursday, at the Pampa Country Club at 6:30 p.m. A buffet will precede the business meeting.

C.C. Olson, Halliburton Services, Duncan, Okla., will speak on "Drill Stem Testing." Olson has spent many years in the oil industry starting in 1929 with Cities Service Oil.

During a four year period, during World War II, he saw service in the South Pacific and at the Navy Patrol Reserve No. 1 at Elk Hills, Calif.

After the war Olson spent one year with Signal Oil and Gas Co. in California, setting up a bottom hole pressure survey department. In 1947 he joined Halliburton Services with the responsibility to organize and upgrade drill stem test pressures.

Shortages Change Petroleum Trends

HOUSTON (AP) — Severe weather and supply shortages of recent weeks have caused rather drastic changes in statistical trends within the domestic petroleum industry.

Crude oil and products imports have broken the 6,000,000 barrels a day mark the first time in history.

Domestic refineries ended January operating at 90 per cent of capacity compared with 81 per cent a year earlier.

Refiners continue to place increased emphasis on production of light and heavy fuel oils.

The latest American Petroleum Institute statistical report placed light heating oil output for the week ending Jan. 26 at 20,495,000 barrels compared with 18,350,000 the comparable year earlier period. Heavy fuel production of 7,943,000 barrels compared with 6,284,000 a year earlier.

At the same time, however, crude oil and gasoline inventories dropped to abnormally low levels for late January.

The final January report placed gasoline inventories at 223 million barrels, compared with 240 million the same week in 1972, and 229 million in 1971.

Refiners normally are increasing their gasoline stocks at this time of the year in preparation for the heavy spring-summer demand season.

In anticipation of continued cold waves in the weeks ahead, officials in both industry and government already have expressed concern that the current level of inventories will lead to gasoline shortages by mid-summer if not earlier.

Gasoline demand exceeded expectations in 1972 by increasing 5.8 per cent above 1971 and a similar gain has been projected for 1973.

Crude oil inventories at the end of January were estimated at 236 million barrels, compared with 252 million in 1972, 264 million in 1971, and 262 million in 1970.

Domestic crude production the week ending Jan. 26 averaged 9,417,000 barrels a day. This represented a 12-month increase of only 157,000 barrels a day despite nearly a full year of effort for maximum output in both Texas and Louisiana.

Religion Is Inspiration For Primitive Paintings

By ERIC NEUHOUSE
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sister Gertrude Morgan's Prayer Room is a 3-by-5-foot chamber between a sagging screen door and a tiny, drab bedroom.

In it, she prays, prays and preaches.

And from it, painted prayers have gone to the Museum of American Folk Art in New York City, the LaJolla, Calif., Museum of Art and, in between, on a tour of the country with an American Federation of Art show called "Symbols and Images."

At 73 Sister Morgan has a spreading reputation as an artist whose religious mysticism inspires her brightly colored paintings, and whose paintings inspire her preaching.

On her wall is a "sermon" in red and white.

She preaches it with a tambourine, enthroned in white robes with white shoes resting on a faded silver footstool, belting out the spiritual "Twelve Gates to the City" in a husky street-singing voice which sends the important words — like "power" and "hallelujah" and "amen" — echoing across the rutted street and through the neighborhood.

In her painting a cloud of angelic faces stare down on the gold streets in the fabled city below.

PRAYER ROOM — Sister Gertrude Morgan, 73, plays a tambourine in a 3-by-5-foot chamber in which she also paints, prays and preaches. On the wall to left is a sermon in red and white.

"Heavens," she says, "are people."

Sister Morgan's life has been her religion since she was a little girl in Lafayette, Ala. A pillar of Dr. J.B. Miller's Baptist Church, as she had been since her late teens, she was sitting beside her stove one night in 1937 when she heard the Voice.

The Voice said "Go, Preacher, tell it to the World." And after the third repetition, Sister Morgan ran into the night to tell neighbors the miracle had occurred.

Then she came to New Orleans as a missionary.

In New Orleans, Sister Morgan became a street preacher, rolling newspapers into a megaphone, singing to attract crowds and preaching to save them.

With two other women she started a relief mission and orphanage, supported by nickles and dimes and quarters they raised through street collections, but she gave up the mission a few years ago.

Now she sits in her Prayer Room, painting the Bible scenes that only she sees, and preaching them in song and chanting near-song to anyone who will listen.

One of those who listens is E. Lorenz Borenstein, a French Quarter Art gallery owner. It's through his gallery that the crudely drawn paintings, with their bright colors and scripture scrawled across the sky, reach the world.

Sometimes before a showing, Borenstein will drive out to her two rooms in an old New Orleans neighborhood. He will bring Sister Morgan back to the gallery where she'll sit — a commanding white-robed presence with a broad black face under her white headpiece — singing her spirituals and sermons in a corner as the well-dressed strangers stop in awe.

Musicians who have heard her were so thrilled with her voice and the perfect percussion of her well-worn tambourine that Borenstein brought out a private record of some of her songs.

And sometimes when an enthusiastic stranger — buys a couple of Sister Morgan's paintings, Borenstein will slip him a record. She lives on those sales.

Red Cross News

By LIBBY SHOTWELL
Executive Secretary ARC

The Red Cross will hold a Multi-Media First-Aid class Feb. 10, 8 a.m. at the Marie Foundations for the supervisors at the plant.

Dale Greenhouse, manager at the plant, is working with the Red Cross in making arrangements for the heads of the departments. J.D. Ray, FA chairman, is in charge of the instructors who will teach the course. If any instructor is interested in helping with the course, call the Red Cross office or J.D. Ray.

Plans are being made for a Mother & Baby Care Class in the near future. Mrs. Forrest Hills, RN, and Betty Margaret, RN, will teach the class. Watch for time and place.

This course is for parents expecting their first baby. Prenatal care and the first six months for the baby is taught in the class.

Jerry works very hard training persons in First-Aid.

We were glad that we had some tall crutches for a friend whose daughter had a broken foot this week. We were sorry that we did not have a small pair for another family that needed one.

If you have a good pair of crutches in your closet, bring them by the Red Cross office so that we can loan them to someone in need.

Jerry Bertram from Shamrock, was in our office this week. He told us he would begin a Standard and Advanced First-Aid Class in Panhandle on Tuesday, Feb. 6, from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. There will be four classes.

This class will be for the Fire Department, and the ambulance drivers and interested persons in the community.

Texas Facility Working On Catering for Skylab

COLLEGE STATION—When NASA's Shuttlespace System goes into operation about four and a half years from now, research underway by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station will make the food catering situation more efficient and easier.

The TAES is working on ways to keep vegetables and cereals tasty and nutritious, yet light and compact—no easy assignment.

Shuttlespace is a relay system to and among space stations. It is the next step after Skylab and will enable astronauts to probe deeper into outer regions.

Actually, the space effort is not new to TAES. The agency has been consulted about foods and preservation methods since the beginning of the Apollo series. Some of the snacks now being nibbled by Apollo 17 astronauts stemmed from Experiment Station studies.

The man heading up Shuttlespace food research for TAES, Dr. E. E. Burns of the Texas A&M University Soil and Crop Sciences Department, says he and his associates have been working on the project about a year.

Burns, a food technologist, said the Experiment Station has the "commodity expertise" to delve into such studies.

"We are constantly seeking vegetable varieties that lend themselves to freeze drying and compression," he said. "This means that plant breeding and genetics also come into play."

The main problem in developing space travel foods is bulk. So far, freeze drying is the best method because it affects food quality less than any other preservation technique.

After freeze drying, the vegetables are compressed into candy bar sizes, then sealed in heavy plastic. No refrigeration is required.

To eat, remove the bar from the plastic and add water (rehydration). The vegetable puffs back to its normal state, and its texture is damaged very little.

Burns' investigations to date have been mostly on vegetables. The cereals phase is yet to come. Vegetables which have worked best so far are green beans, carrots, corn, peas and spinach, which the scientist says are items not likely to encourage little boys to become astronauts.

"But then, our astronauts have never been real spinach buffs," he pointed out.

Tomatoes, melons and such salad greens as lettuce have eluded every effort toward preservation for space travel.

No one, Burns says, has figured out how to freeze dry a tomato and still keep its original quality.

But despite these failures, the scientist believes that a full selection of vegetables and cereals will be available by the time Shuttlespace becomes a reality.

Strangely, fruits have posed no difficulty.

"In fact, we just reached back a couple of thousand years and copied the sun-dried fruit techniques of the ancients," Burns explained.

The fruit is dried, mashed into thin sheets and then rolled up like a sheet of paper. Or it can be cut into bite-size chips. Burns said the final product is light in weight, tasty and keeps well.

COLLEGE STATION—With the help of federal funds recently appropriated by Congress, the Texas 4-H program is expected to make new inroads for reaching more of the state's two-and-a-half million eligible youth.

Texas will receive some $276,000 for expanding its 4-H program. "Our goal is to boost 4-H enrollments in Texas during the 1970's to 10 percent of the eligible boys and girls, those between the ages of 9 and 19," points out Dr. Don Stormer, state 4-H and youth leader for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The Extension Service is the parent organization of 4-H.

"Such an increase would mean a doubling of our present enrollment of 125,000 members," notes Stormer.

Expansion efforts will initially concern the addition of new staff members to give added impetus and direction to 4-H activities. At present the state has three area 4-H and youth specialists located in various regions. This area staff will be increased so that a 4-H specialist will be located in each major area and serve either one or two Extension districts. There are 13 districts in the state.

To provide for additional leadership at the county level, 4-H program assistants will be added to the county Extension staff in 46 counties.

"We need to improve the viability of our program and expand our overall efforts to reach more of the state's youngsters. Our youth today must cope with many problems and pressures, and we have a responsibility to provide them with information and guidance so that they will be better able to make intelligent decisions."

"We must especially offer more programs dealing with the social and physical sciences and with the humanities," says Stormer. "4-H today has something to offer to every youngster who is inquisitive, who is interested in doing things, and who wants challenges. Whether living on the farm or in the city, boys and girls can join 4-H and can select projects and activities that are of particular interest to them."

"Learning to live a life, a chance to grow and develop, that's what 4-H is all about," contends Stormer.

Through this new expansion effort 4-H should indeed continue to progress as one of the state's and nation's foremost youth organizations.

Last Saturday's 75-80 MPH wind leveled the remaining unharvested milo. This was a devastating blow after the hardships of suffering through the bad weather conditions last fall through the new year.

Farmers have changed from one type of combine pickup attachment to another. Since the recent high wind, most farmers are changing to a pickup reel in combination with special pickup guards. However, many farmers that still had milo in the field are abandoning their unharvested milo. This is especially true on dryland. Cattle will be turned in to salvage the remains.

One farmer said the other day that he hoped he got his 1972 milo harvested in time to plant his 1973 crop. This is past the joking point with some irrigation farmers that have up to $110 per acre in the crop and now find much of their crop flat on the ground.

Some authorities are saying you will have to go back to 1892 to tap this winter for setting records.

NEW FARM PROGRAM REGULATION Evelyn Mason, manager ASCS office, now has information about the 1973 Farm Program that would be most helpful to farmers in making their plans for 1973. Why don't you drop by and visit with them before the deadline for signing. There are still a lot of alternatives to choose from.

SOIL TEST Now would be an excellent time to test your soil for fertilizer needs. The cost is only $2 per sample.

Panhandle Water

By FELIX W. RYALS

Texas Tech University is making a study of the underground fresh water aquifers of the High Plains of West Texas and the Texas Panhandle. The study is being conducted under the direction of Dr. James E. Osborne of the Texas Tech University Department of Agricultural Economics.

The West Texas study is a part of the Texas Board of Water Development compilation of the water reserves of State of Texas 2020 Water Plan.

Dr. Osborne and his staff were in Dumas working with the North Plains Water Conservation District on Thursday of the past week and moved on to White Deer on Friday to confer with officials of the Panhandle Ground Water Conservation District. Robert Winn, Underground Water Consultant of the District, was also on hand. The team under Dr. Osborne was particularly interested in the approximate supply of underground fresh water in the District's underground reservoir in 1956-1972—and what portion of the original volume is still available.

The study team was also interested in the number of years the remaining portion would supply the needs of the fast growing agri-business economy of the area.

Most people will recall that studies made by the District since 1956 have indicated that a water crisis period would probably begin between 1985 and 1990.

Most people will also recall that the Panhandle Water Conservation District area began the change over from dryland farming to irrigation in 1955 and 1956. Today's high school students cannot recall what a dryland economy was like. Most of them can only remember grain crops and golden harvests with the green fields dotted with feeder cattle during the fall and winter and spring months of the year. The majority of these managers assume that things have always been this way.

The 1957 yearbook "Soil," published by the United States Department of Agriculture describes an aquifer as "A water-bearing formation through which water moves more readily than in adjacent formations of permeability. The same yearbook describes soil permeability as, 'The quality of a soil horizon that enables water or air to move through it. It can be measured quantitatively in terms of rate of flow of water through a unit cross section in unit time under specified temperature and hydraulic conditions. Values for saturated soils usually are called hydraulic conductivity. The permeability of a soil may be limited by the presence of one nearly impermeable horizon even though the others are permeable.' A horizon soil is a layer of soil approximately parallel to the soil surface. The yellowish soil we call caliche used to surface the section line dirt roads of the county is an example of this. The dark soil of the nearby field takes water more readily than the caliche.

The low humidity of the High Plains and the great depth to the underground water coupled with the sun and wind prevents most of the moisture falling as rain or snow from reaching the underground reservoir. A number of rains following closely on each other would push some of the moisture beyond reach of the wind and sun and would eventually reach the underground reservoir.

Due to the small amount of recharge or refilling of the underground reservoir, it is only logical to come to the conclusion that with the ever increasing withdrawal by the industry, and agriculture from the underground reservoir, some day the "well will run dry."

State officials seem certain that there will be a number of bills in this session of the legislature regarding ground water. Some of these bills are being instigated by "so-called" conservation or environmentalist groups and who of the nature not needed or desired by the water authorities of the state. There will be some bills introduced that will be favored by the water groups of the state. Any bill proposing state ownership, management, and regulation will be strongly opposed by the underground water conservation districts of the state.

Plastic Film Wrapping Saves $24,000 Weekly

COLLEGE STATION—A thin sheet of plastic may represent large savings for beef processors and improved beef quality for consumers, according to the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Called polyvinyl chloride film, or PVC film, the plastic can be used as a wrap for large cuts of beef being shipped from the packer to distributors. It is similar to the plastic food wraps used in the home and is intended to do the same thing—keep the meat fresh and delay spoiling.

Currently, most beef is shipped without wrap from processor to distributor, simply being hung in large, refrigerated trucks. During the transfer, the meat dries or shrinks and picks up bacteria. This leads to waste, lower quality meat and a loss of money.

Wrapping beef cuts can not only help keep this from happening but can do so cheaply enough to create important savings, as much as $10,000 to $24,000 per week for a large packing firm.

Dr. Thomas Sproleder, an agricultural economist with the Texas Agricultural Market Research and Development Center, based these conclusions on research done in cooperation with the Department of Animal Science at Texas A&M University. The center is jointly a service of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Sproleder compared the economic results from using paper bags, polyethylene bags and PVC film to determine which created greatest savings.

Both the PVC film and the polyethylene bags paid for their use in terms of shrink alone, he found. This was without regard to other potential savings such as extended shelf life of the beef or less trimming. Paper, on the contrary, were found ineffective.

Net savings were greater from PVC film than any other material, especially for primal cuts—rounds, chucks, loins and ribs.

For a relatively large plant with an output of five million pounds of primals a week, a net savings would amount to $24,330. For the same size plant, figuring for quarters instead of primals, the savings would be $10,065 per week.

Sproleder, also an associate professor with the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology at Texas A&M, predicts that in the future most beef may be distributed from packer to distributor using some type of wrapping material.

Such research by the center points up savings that can reduce beef marketing costs and provide better quality beef at lower costs to consumers.

Capital Dwellers Fear Crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senator says he barricades the doors of his home at night for fear of intruders.

A taxi driver says he won't risk leaving the front door open long enough to go lock the back door.

Apartment managers clamp more and more locks on their buildings, and one talks of placing guard dogs on the premises.

In the District of Columbia, many residents can illuminate the statistics of crime with personal experiences. Many more express fear, stay behind bolted doors at night.

Paranoia? Or justifiable alarm at the crime that seems to grow more brazen, if not more frequent, in the nation's capital?

Whatever the answer, the shooting of Sen. John C. Stennis Tuesday night set off fresh cries of concern about crime in Washington.

"In my own house," said Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, "we are barricaded in at night, with huge wooden beams across the doors. Available windows and available french doors are nailed shut."

"This is the kind of life which we are compelled to lead in a city where the corruption of lust and greed is rife."

Relatively speaking, Washington appears to be neither safer nor more dangerous than any other major American city. But its special status as the capital, governed ultimately by Congress and the White House, and the national prominence of some of its crime victims thrust its problem more glaringly into public view.

Although the cries of alarm were more prevalent than concrete proposals, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., urged quick passage of a bill raising penalties for carrying concealed weapons in the district.

A similar proposal, favored by Police Chief Jerry Wilson and submitted by him to Mayor Walter Washington, would set a mandatory minimum prison sentence of six months for the first conviction of carrying a gun without a license. Subsequent convictions would mean a mandatory minimum of one year in prison.

Jeffrey Alprin, general counsel to the police department, said Wilson seeks the new penalties because a department study showed that in a three-month period, two-thirds of those convicted of carrying guns illegally "didn't get a day in jail."

The proposal is under study in the mayor's office before

Washington decides whether to ask Congress to approve it. The mayor could not be reached for comment in repeated efforts to contact him.

The issue is complicated by a dispute over crime statistics compiled by the FBI from information furnished by the police department.

The most recent FBI figures say that in the first nine months of 1972, there were 28,592 serious crimes in the capital, compared with 30,024 for the same period a year ago. The tally includes murder, forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault, larceny of $50 or more, burglary and auto theft.

Burglaries led the list—14,396 were counted in 1971, 9,937 a year later. For robbery, second in frequency, the figures were 8,524 in 1971 compared to 5,726 a year later.

The decline in FBI statistics prompted President Nixon to declare last April that Washington "is one of the safest cities in this country for the millions of tourists who come here."

The crime rate in the capital was "cut in half" in the first three years of his first term, the President said.

Nixon was announcing the results of an intensified law-and-order effort in the district, which grew out of his 1968 campaign pledge to make the capital's streets safe again.

But analysts have disputed Nixon's claim and have accused the police department of failing to report all crimes to the FBI, allegations the department denies.

Twenty-eight separate kinds of rattlesnakes live from southern Canada to Uruguay, but most live in the dry region from the southwestern states of the United States through the Mexican highlands.

Bureau Still Silent On Duck Epidemic

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Louisiana officials said Friday a man-made epidemic is killing thousands of ducks in South Dakota and the U.S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries is withholding information on it.

"They have failed to respond to our inquiries," said a spokesman for the Louisiana Department of Wildlife & Fisheries, "but our contacts in South Dakota indicate this kill is still progressing."

"We have reports there is burying and mass burying of mallards and some geese," he added.

"They have sealed off the area to our personnel and any other visitors, but we have heard the disease has spread from the refuge into nearby lakes...and ducks are dying there."

Last Friday state wild life officials telegraphed Spencer H. Smith, director of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries in Washington, asking information on the reported outbreak of viral enteritis at the lake Andes National Wildlife Refuge in South Dakota.

"They said they received no reply, despite reports that up to 1,000 mallard ducks and geese were dying each day."

A Louisiana official said the disease is caused by overpopulation, a situation created because grain was spread in the refuge to lure ducks and geese, shortstopping their natural migration to southern feeding grounds.

"In fact," the Louisiana spokesman said Friday, "we have reports they put out more food to try to keep the fowl there and hold the disease in, but it is attracting additional birds."

Using Cash Is A Little Bit Vulgar In Small French Territory

DJIBOUTI, Territory of the Afars and Issas, (AP) — You sign for it in this steamy, French garrison port. Cash is just a little bit vulgar.

In the cozy way of small towns everywhere, the barber takes an IOU and the grocer puts the daily shopping on the account. Credit cards are unknown but red coupons substitute for money at the gas station. The post office will even bill you later for stamps.

Some 20 per cent of the debts never get paid, but creditors don't usually sue. Merchants shrug and mark up prices accordingly. Living in the French Territory of the Afars and Issas, where desert heat warps the wine bottles on the junk heaps outside town, can be tough enough without getting into unnecessary hassles over money.

This take-it-easy life on the cuff is deceptive. France holds on to its last territory in Africa by force — 5,000 troops and Foreign Legionnaires whose arsenal includes some recently delivered F100 Supersaber jets. There are more soldiers than French civilians in Djibouti.

Several hundred security reinforcements came in for the recent visit this month of French President Georges Pompidou.

Somali nationalists, mainly Issa tribesmen, are the main opponents to French rule. The 60,000 Issas in the south outnumber the pro-French Afars in the north, but a 1967 referendum went 60 per cent against independence. Some observers suggested that the French had packed the electorate by importing friendly nomads across the Ethiopian border.

The French say they are willing to leave Djibouti — some day. Until then, the deep-water port guarding the Red Sea provides a Western window on the Indian Ocean side of Africa, where both Somalia and Tanzania have slid Eastward.

Ethiopia and Somalia, strong voices against white-minority rule elsewhere on the continent, have been restrained on the sensitive subject of the French territory. Bloody skirmishing between Afars and Issas simmers in the countryside and town. If the French left suddenly, the two African neighbors could be drawn into conflict to protect their tribal allies and strategic interests.

This territory is the size of New Hampshire. Boundaries were agreed to by Ethiopian Emperor Menelik II in 1897. Ninety per cent of it is desert, yet the most important export is well water — to the ships that stop to refuel.

Djibouti contains hundreds of temporary bachelors during the summer when wives and children fly back to France en masse to escape sandstorms and temperatures up to 110.

Djibouti's languid pace, its arcaded, Arab-style buildings and palms beguile visitors, but the town is ringed with barbed wire and military watchtowers, as if under siege. Parts of the fence carry low-voltage electricity, and a few land mines remain from some trouble six years ago.

Hundreds of nomad herdsmen lacking entry documents inhabit primitive hemispherical huts just beyond the barrier. Occasionally a flare goes off as one of them tries to sneak through at night.

Without the fence, the French say, Djibouti and its schools and hospitals would be overwhelmed by jobless, antigovernment Somalis. More than 12,000 a year still slip into the town, mostly with false identity cards.

Cost is a big problem in Djibouti — to the French who live here and to the government back in Paris. Nearly everything is flown in from France. A quart of milk is 55 cents. Djibouti is a duty-free port, but shopkeepers' big profit margins cancel tax advantages on many items.

There are few mineral deposits and no industries except for the port and railroad to Addis Ababa.

Pampa Loses To 'Dogs In Heartbreaker, 64-62

By CLAY LIVELY
 BORGER—Pampa lost a squeaker, 64-62, to the Borger Bulldogs in District 3-AAAA action Friday night in the Bulldog "Barn."
 Despite brilliant scoring performances on the part of Freddy Wilbon and A.J. Brewer and good defense by the whole team for most of the game, the Harvesters were unable to win the tilt which would have given them a share of the first-half district crown.
 Wilbon led all scorers in the game with 25 points (including seven of seven attempts from the free-throw line) and Brewer added 20 more.
 High scorer for the Borger squad was Chuck Ballman with 17 points.
 The Harvesters held Russell Dickson (who was tied for the district scoring lead going into the game with a 19.1 average) to only four points in the contest. Those came on a field goal in the first quarter and two free throws in the third.
 The Harvesters trailed by one point, 17-16 at the end of the first period but fought back to lead, 38-35, when the buzzer sounded ending the first half.
 Pampa upped that lead to four 50-46, going into the final quarter but the Bulldogs outscored the Harvesters, 18-12, in that decisive period to gain the win.
 What finally determined the outcome was that Borger was successful in the use of its "stalling" game when it was ahead and the Harvesters were unsuccessful in their efforts at using up the clock when they had the lead.

 With the score tied at 58-all, Borger's Chuck Forrest sent two free throws through the net to give the Bulldogs the lead by two, 60-58. 3:49 seconds were left on the clock at that juncture.
 Over a minute later the score remained the same and Pampa called timeout to talk over strategy. When the clock started again Pampa was still unable to make a basket or get control of the ball.
 With half a minute left in the game, Bulldog Don Birtell was fouled and the Harvesters tried desperately to get the ball for a shot. Birtell made one of two efforts to stretch the Borger lead to three, 61-58.
 Brewer then pulled Pampa to within one, 61-60, with a driving lay-up but Ballman then made a shot to give Borger a seemingly comfortable three point lead again.
 But it still wasn't over.
 Bill Simon scored once more for the Harvesters and Borger added a free throw to wind up the scoring in the game.
 Pampa called timeout once more with one second left but a long, out-of-bounds throw by Ricky Beesley toward the basket (apparently an attempt to give Freddy Wilbon a chance at a tip-in) was unsuccessful.
 The loss dropped Pampa to 15-9 for the season and 3-2 in district. Borger is now 20-4 and 4-1. The win gave them a share of the district's first half title with Tascosa, which defeated Caprock, 41-35, Friday night.

 In the junior varsity game preceding the Harvester contest, the Shockers were beaten 58-50. Howie Lewis led the Shockers with 16 points.
 The Harvesters and Shockers continue district play Tuesday as they host Caprock in Harvester Fieldhouse.
 BORGER — Russell Dickson 12-4; Alford Jackson 6-2-12; Chuck Forrest 4-1-14; Chuck Ballman 4-8-17; Kevin Frasier 3-1-7; Don Birtell 0-3-3; Sam Campbell 1-2-2-4
 PAMPA — Freddy Wilbon 17-11-34; A.J. Brewer 20-9-28; Steve Richardson 3-0-4; Randy Warner 2-2-2; Billy Wilbon 2-2-2; Bill Simon 1-0-2; Ricky Beesley 1-0-2
 TOTALS — 22-18-41; FOULED OUT — Warner

Tom Watson Maintains Four-Stroke Golf Lead

HONOLULU (AP) — Youthful Tom Watson birdied three holes in a row down the stretch Saturday for a four-under-par 68 and maintained a four-stroke lead through three rounds of the $200,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.
 The 23-year-old Watson, who missed a five-foot putt on the 18th hole for a fourth consecutive birdie, had a 54-hole total of 207, a whopping 15-under-par on the 7,154-yard Waialae Country Club course.
 That put him four strokes in front of non-winning tour veteran John Schlee, who finished at 67-205.
 Moody, a heart-broken loser in a playoff a week ago in the Bing Crosby tournament, was along in third after a 68 for 206, five strokes back.
 "I'm still fightin' it, that's all I can do," said Moody. "Just keep fightin'."
 Former Masters champion Gay Brewer and longshot Joe Carr followed at 68. The 40-year-old Brewer had a 68 in the weather that alternated from drizzling shower to bright sunshine. Carr had a 69.
 J.C. Snead had a 68 and was alone at 209 while Japan's Junbo Ozaki, in second after two rounds of this chase for a $40,000 first prize, blew to a 73 and dropped back to a big group at 210, a distant nine strokes off the pace.
 Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino were out of it, 13 strokes behind Watson at 214. Palmer had a 69 and Trevino a 70.
 Watson, a tour sophomore and a Stanford University product, saved his big move for the holes that were covered by national television, starting at the 15th.
 Schlee, 33 and still seeking his first title after eight years on the tour, had crept to within two strokes of the front-running Watson when they reached the TV holes.

 Watson quickly regained a four-stroke margin. He rolled in a 20-foot birdie putt on the 15th and Schlee, his playing partner, made a bogey for a two-stroke swing.
 Watson broke into a big smile—and it broadened even more on the 16th when he made another birdie, this from about 30 feet.
 "It was almost like I could see a trench from my ball to the hole," he said. "And I had a real good feeling on the next one. I almost knew I was going to make it."
 He did. This time, on the 17th, it was from about 25 feet.

Hailwood, Watson Take Early Lead At Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—A Gulf Mirage and a lone Matra carrying the colors of France winged far ahead of the field Saturday during the early hours of the Daytona 24 Hour sports car race.
 A stiff breeze, gusting off the nearby Atlantic Ocean at about 12 m.p.h., greeted the drivers as they roared off on their twice-around-the-clock journey at 3 p.m.

American Officials Make Olympic Bid

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — American and European winter sports officials are rivals this weekend in a "back to simplicity" campaign to stage the 1976 Winter Olympics.
 The perilous trend followed at present would be radically altered and, in consequence, the survival of the Winter Games assured.
 Chamonix wants to stage the Olympics over a region, each event being centered on a village resort. This line could appeal to some members of the IOC who are concerned about the commercial growth of the Winter Olympics and the loss of the intimate charm that once was part of them.
 But Mayor Robert Peacock of Lake Placid, leader of the American delegation, said: "We can match the Mont Blanc region in this respect. All our facilities are within a few miles of each other. If we stage the Winter Olympics they will have all the intimate charm anyone could wish for." The Rev. Bernard Fell, chairman of Lake Placid's provincial organizing committee, arrived Saturday to join the group.

Martin Breaks Ski Mark

IRONWOOD, Mich. (AP) — Jerry Martin of Minneapolis scored a 449 feet Saturday to break the Copper Peak record and take the early lead in the first day of official jumping in the Samsonite Sky Flying Classic 10 miles north of this Upper Peninsula community.
 Martin also had a jump of 387 feet. He made his leaps in near perfect weather as a wind of less than 5 m.p.h. prevailed under sunny skies.
 Ski flying differs from ski jumping only in the length of the hill. Ski fliers slide down a 24-story ramp at Copper Peak and catapult themselves an average of 400 to 500 feet. Ski jumpers normally soar about 300 feet.

Hogs Blast Rice 90-69

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Dean Tolson grabbed 14 rebounds and scored 15 points in the second half as Arkansas pulled away from Rice to score a 90-69 Southwest Conference victory over the Owls here Saturday.
 The 8-foot-8 Tolson finished the game with 21 rebounds, one short of his school record, and 23 points.
 The victory hiked Arkansas' conference record to 4-2 while the Owls dropped to 2-4 in SWC play.
 Arkansas led by six points in the early going and then Rice forged ahead before Roger Spears' three-point play put the Razorbacks' ahead to stay 37-25 with less than six minutes remaining in the half. Doug Campbell's basket at the buzzer gave Arkansas a 38-35 halftime advantage.
 Rice stayed within five points until Tolson and Campbell scored from the field to give Arkansas a 48-39 lead. Two baskets by Martin-Terry put Arkansas on top 54-43 and the Owls never got closer than nine points the rest of the way.
 Rice's Perry Gaudet led all scorers with 24 points. Arkansas' Martin Terry, who was averaging 28 points a game, scored 16 points and Dennis White celebrated his 21st birthday by adding 14 points.

Baptists Win

MARSHALL, Tex. (AP) — Brian Nichols scored eight points in the last minute and a half Saturday to help East Texas Baptist College pull away from Baptist Christian College of Shreveport, La., 75-66.

Wolfpack Survives

RALEIGH (AP) — Virginia's stall which produced an upset of North Carolina last week, came within an inch of doing the same Saturday, against North Carolina State in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game, but the second-ranked Wolfpack survived to win its 16th straight, 64-59.
 The Cavaliers, employing a sticky zone defense and four-corner spread on offense, frustrated the Wolfpack's running game, but clutch shooting by Tommy Burleson, David Thompson, and Monte Towne in the final minutes protected State's unbeaten record.

Maryland Falls 85-81

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Maryland, No. 3 in the nation before an 89-78 loss to North Carolina State this week, fell to another Atlantic Coast Conference opponent Saturday as Gary Melchioni scored 39 points in leading Duke to an 85-81 basketball victory.
 Duke, next-to-last in the ACC, moved in front of the Tarps late in the first half and never trailed again.

Marquette Beats De Paul

CHICAGO (AP) — Allie McGuire and Larry McNeill combined for 12 points in the final four minutes to break open a tight game Saturday and lead Marquette to a 70-55 triumph over De Paul in college basketball.
 Marquette, winning for the 16th time against two losses, had to rally from a five-point deficit midway in the second half.
 After Marquette grabbed a 32-26 lead early in the second half, the Blue Demons, behind little Greg Boyd, scored 11 consecutive points for a 37-32 advantage.
 De Paul then was called twice for three-second violations and both times Marquette's George Brazier connected for a basket.
 Marquette then reeled off 12 consecutive points, between McGuire and McNeill.

Cougars Beat Cincinnati 90-85

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The 11th ranked Houston Cougars, sparked by the top second-half shooting of Louis Dunbar, came from behind Saturday to edge Cincinnati 90-85 in a college basketball game.
 Dunbar, held to only four points in the first half, popped in 15 in the second half to help the Cougars overcome an 11-point Cincy lead.
 Cincinnati led 42-35 at the half and quickly built up an 11-point lead 48-37. Houston kept chipping away, however, and tied it up 56-56 on Maurice Presley's lay-up with 12:29 remaining in the game.
 Houston held the lead then until 6:26 was left when Cincinnati's Lloyd Batts hit from the corner to give the visitor's a 74-73 lead.
 After Steve Newsome tied it up 74-74 with a free throw, Dunbar hit three straight layups to give Houston the lead they never relinquished. Cincy closed it to 85-83 but never got closer.

Indiana Rolls

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — The fifth-ranked Indiana Hoosiers, led by John Ritter's 20 points, blew open a tight game in the second half Saturday and rolled past Northwestern 83-65 for their sixth straight Big Ten basketball victory.

Two Share Lead In Bareback Riding

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Two bareback riders took a share of the third go-round's lead Saturday afternoon at the Southwestern Exposition Rodeo with scores of 75 points each.
 Van Vannoy of Thermopolis, Wyo., and Chick Elms of Stephenville drew identical scores from the judges.
 Don Graham of Troup, a recent graduate of Texas A&M University, was close behind with a 74 point ride.
 Vannoy, who split for second place in the first go-round and won $477.97, also split for fifth in the second run, which was good for $155.62.
 In that second go-round, Sandy Kirby of Greenville, with an 81-point score, took first place money of $644.70.
 Vannoy was the only one who placed in both go-rounds.
 In the afternoon's calf roping, only three men had qualifying times, the fastest, a 10.5 second one posted by Jack Wallace of Ellensburg, Wash.
 Bruce Hough of Claremore, Okla., had the best time in the steer wrestling competition, 4.2 seconds. Another Oklahoma Cowboy, and a former world

Gardner-Webb Wins By 87

HONOLULU (AP) — Surpassing the record high point total in a college basketball game, Gardner-Webb College of Boiling Springs, N.C., smashed a Naval communications station team here Friday night, 185-98.
 Freshman John Drew, with 45 points, paced the Gardner-Webb rout of the Navy team, NAVCOMMSTA, in a game at Wheeler Air Force Base.
 Because the game was an exhibition against a service team, the Gardner-Webb point total will not be listed as a record.
 The highest score in the major college division belongs to Houston, which posted a 158-81 victory over Valparaiso, Feb. 24, 1968.

Air Force Wins

AIR FORCE CADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Air Force Academy shot into the lead in the second half while Corpus Christi ran into a frigid spell and went on to drub the Tarpons 72-53 in a Saturday afternoon college basketball game.
 At one point in the second half, the Cadets led the Tarpons, 67-45. Corpus Christi, which shot an unimpressive 27 per cent from the floor in the half, scored only eight field goals in the entire second period.
 Franz Klammer, a 19-year-old Austrian, finished second in 2:27.75. Philippe Roux of Switzerland, also 19, was third in 2:27.95, with Bob Cochran of Richmond, Va. fourth in 2:28.02.

Curtis Person Wins 4th Title

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — Curtis Person dropped a 10-foot par putt on the final hole to take a one-up victory over Jackboro rancher Henry Richards Saturday and claimed an unprecedented fourth Life Begins at 40 Golf Tournament championship.
 Richards, now a four-time runner-up in this tournament, though never a winner, stayed in the match all the way. He birdied the 14th hole to pull even, fell behind when Person birdied the 15th with a 15-foot putt, salvaged a tie at 16 by getting up and in from well off the green, and chipped in at 17 for a birdie to again tie.
 He used only 10 strokes on the greens over the final 9 holes.
 Person, a 62-year-old Memphis, Tenn., auto dealer was even-par for the day and had three birdies. He went two holes ahead at 16 with a par but lost 13 when he three-putted from the edge.
 Person was winning his 13th amateur tournament and said after the match "this was undoubtedly one of the most pressure-packed I've ever played."
 Richards' only lead of the day came with consecutive wins at the 3rd and 4th holes with a birdie and a par. He lost number one with an out of bounds tee shot and put his drive on the eighth hole into a water hazard.

Record Broken

ST ANTON, Austria (AP) — Bernhard Russi, world and Olympic champion in the downhill, raced to a record-smashing victory Saturday in the Arlberg-Kandahar event, marred by an injury to World Cup point leader Roland Collombin of Switzerland.
 The 24-year-old Russi, in scoring his second skiing triumph of the year and the sixth for Switzerland, smashed the track record set in 1969 by Austrian star Karl Schranz. The former stuntman in a James Bond movie flashed down the 3,900-meter course with a drop of 1,920 meters and 34 control gates in two minutes, 25.86 seconds.
 Franz Klammer, a 19-year-old Austrian, finished second in 2:27.75. Philippe Roux of Switzerland, also 19, was third in 2:27.95, with Bob Cochran of Richmond, Va. fourth in 2:28.02.

No. 1 on Football's Least-Wanted List: John Amos

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — John Amos, who surely holds the international record for having been cut from more football teams than any man who has ever had nose and nose-guard mashed in the mud. Yet he still maintains he was "very underrated, man."

Amos is 32 years old now. He has of course gone on to other things, being a grown man. He has become a television and movie actor (his latest picture is Walt Disney's "The World's Greatest Athlete," in which he plays not the athlete—since he did not cast parts—but the coach).

His pursuit of pigskin glory, is no longer a frustrating reality. It is a frustrating memory.

"Oh man, you won't believe it," Amos says, his eyes taking on a rather frenzied aspect. "But every time I was on the threshold of greatness, something unbelievable happened."

Amos began lugging his football dream around when he was a high school full-back on a losing team in East Orange, N.J. He sweet-talked his way into a full scholarship at Long Beach (Calif.) City College. He had it figured that after he made Little All-American he would be sought after by every major college football power.

One day at practice the coach yelled at Amos. "Don't scream at me," Amos yelled back. The coach told him that he had a bad attitude and gave him the boot, thus launching the most spectacularly unsuccessful football career in history.

Amos learned that Colorado State University had the longest losing streak in col-

JOHN AMOS, actor and record holder.

Foreman Told To Use "Slaughterhouse Punch"

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Maybe it won't go down in history alongside Lou Nova's "cosmic punch," but Archie Moore says he advised George Foreman to use a "slaughterhouse punch" that helped Foreman win the heavyweight title.

Moore, the former light heavyweight champion, helped train Foreman for his heavyweight title bout with Joe Frazier, and was in Foreman's corner in Kingston, Jamaica, last month when he knocked out the previously unbeaten champion in the second round.

Sometime before the fight,

Moore said in an interview, he and Foreman had the following dialogue:

"Hit him on top of the head," Moore said.

"That sounds crazy. Why?"

"George, have you ever been to a slaughterhouse?"

"Yes."

"Where do they hit the steers when they kill them?"

"On top of the head."

"Do you think you could knock down a steer by hitting him in the jaw?"

"I see what you mean," said the 24-year-old Foreman.

Are Dallas Chaparrals On The Selling Block?

DALLAS (AP) — An unidentified owner of the Dallas Chaparrals has told the Dallas Times Herald that the American Basketball Association club will be sold and possibly will be moved to another city.

The club will finish the season in Dallas, where paid attendance has averaged below 2,000 for 23 home games. The team is in fourth place in the ABA's western division, 16 games behind division leader Utah.

Rice Drowned

HOUSTON (AP) — Divers Dick Ferris and Dick Rayback and the 400-yard medley relay and 400-yard freestyle relay teams pushed the University of Arkansas to a pair of dual meet swimming wins Friday night in the University of Houston pool.

The Hogs beat Houston 64-49 and then drowned Rice, 91-20. In a third dual meet, The Cougars also swamped Rice, 98-13.

Ferris won both diving events against both the Cougars and the Owls and teammate Rayback finished second in both events to pile up 16 points in each victory.

Arkansas' 400-yard medley relay team of Larry Brand, Rick Wary, Bart Cobb and Vernon Smith set a pool record of 3:45.57 in beating Rice and UH and the Hogs came back with a 3:20.59 clocking to win the 400-yard freestyle relay and add another pool record.

Steps toward moving the club from Dallas could come at the ABA meeting in Salt Lake City Tuesday.

No prospective buyer was indicated, nor did the source identify any city that might take over the franchise.

The Times Herald said speculation about a new location for the franchise centers around Los Angeles, Tampa, Fla., Chicago and Albuquerque, N.M. Los Angeles and Chicago both have National Basketball Association teams.

GOLF FESTIVAL SET
SEBRING, Fla. (AP) — Golf director Ben Roman has set a Mid-Florida Golf Festival at the Harder Hall course in Sebring for Jan. 9-13. The third day will be taken over by the Bob Gray Cup Matches featuring American and Canadian professionals and amateurs.

In the festival, 44 teams will take part with one pro golfer and three amateurs making up each foursome.

The handwriting clearly on the wall, Amos decided to bestow his talents on the University of Denver. When the University of Denver heard the good news they dropped football.

All this was prologue to Amos' loftiest goal: pro ball. He called the Denver Broncos, asked them for a tryout in the fall. Denver, desperate, agreed. That summer Amos worked construction, wearing lead vest and ankle weights to build himself up. After each grueling day, he'd work out at night, doing windsprints, lifting weights.

lege football. Amos figured that this was the place for him. "I got to be a star here. Right?" Not entirely.

Amos moved up to second team. He was also among those players complaining of too little meat at the training table. In the locker room a couple days before the game against the University of Pacific, Amos, experiencing creative urges in other areas, wrote a limerick on the blackboard:

"If U. of P. / We would beat / We would need / Much more meat." Back to third team, after the coach stroled in.

In the next game, the coach called for Amos along the sideline. This was it! Amos came crashing over, furiously trying to button his helmet. The adrenalin was flowing. "He recalls, 'I could hear my friends in the stands screaming and yelling for me.' The coach said, 'Amos, give Pigeers Hinton your shoulder pads, he just broke his...'

Amos went on to gain 142 yards and score three touchdowns in that game. "Every time I scored a TD I bugaled, I frugged, I jumped around in the end zone. I banged the ball to the ground. 'How you like that Pigeers!' I screamed. 'Stuff that in your hose!'"

"Now I'm about 24 or something. I still got the dream. I know I can go all the way, man. So I call Hank Stram. Why not?"

Stram is coach of the Kansas City Chiefs. Amos gets the tryout. "As I ran onto the field just before the first exhibition game, against Denver, guess what? My hamstring goes again."

Kansas City cuts him. The Norfolk (Va.) Neptunes cut him. Then he tears his Achilles' tendon with wheeling and wheeling bids him adieu. When the tendon heals Amos rings up Stram, who has not been waiting breathlessly for the call. Yet Amos gets a second chance with the Chiefs.

Well, I'm so obsessed with making the team that I'm tight," said Amos. "I can't remember the plays. Gone again."

He leaves the country, understandably. The Toronto Rifles, however, trade him to the Brooklyn Dodgers before he has a chance to get in a game. And the Dodgers drop him hastily, too.

"Now I'm about 25 or 26. I'm not sure at this point," he said. "I hear the Victoria (British Columbia) Steelers need help. They are the leistungest team in Canada. I have trouble at customs. My hairline is receding by this time and I tell the official I'm a football player. He thinks I'm a bum."

Amos is the oldest guy on the team. Everyone else is making $50 a game. They offer Amos $25. He and his pride are next seen on the practice field of the Vancouver (B.C.) Lions. The rule with U.S. imports is that they must be given a minimum four-day tryout. Amos is cut in two days.

Amos reluctantly decided that football is for other people. It was the final hint.

Amos went on to gain 142 yards and score three touchdowns in that game. "Every time I scored a TD I bugaled, I frugged, I jumped around in the end zone. I banged the ball to the ground. 'How you like that Pigeers!' I screamed. 'Stuff that in your hose!'"

Derek Bell And Cevert Had Daytona Pole Slots

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Blond Derek Bell, a witty, outgoing Britisher, and Francois Cevert, an angel-faced extrovert from France, held the lead positions Saturday as 53 cars rumbled off the starting line in the Daytona 24-hour race.

The flying start down the long back stretch at Daytona International Speedway was made under bright, sunny skies—a welcome contrast to three days of soggy weather that had hampered practice and qualifying sessions.

A stiff breeze, gusting off the nearby Atlantic Ocean at up to 12 knots, greeted the drivers as they moved off on their twice-around-the-clock journey at 3 p.m. EST.

The survivors of North America's longest and most prestigious sports car race will be flagged to a halt at 3 p.m. Sunday. Just over $50,000 in prize money will be distributed.

Bell, 31, had placed his little Gulf Mirage prototype in the pole position after recording a near-record lap of 129.995 miles per hour for the 3.81-mile track road course.

Cevert, who is Jackie Stewart's protege on the international Grand Prix circuit, started in the other front row position in a French Matra prototype qualified by teammate Henri Pescarolo of Paris. The speed was 127.541 m.p.h.

Behind these two in the starting order were several other prototypes—the term means non-production, racing vehicles—that will run for the world championship of manufacturers title, won last year by Ferrari of Italy.

Ferrari will defend its title this year, but none of the Ferrari prototypes made the Daytona event. A strike in the Ferrari plant at Modena cut short the building program.

Two Records Broken; 50 Yard Mark Is Tied

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Iris Davis and Glenda Reiser struck a blow for women's equality at the Toronto Star Maple Leaf Indoor Track Games. In fact, they went a step beyond equality.

The two were among a group of women who either broke or tied world marks at the Games Friday. Meanwhile, the best a man could do was a world record.

Miss Davis, of Tennessee State, broke the world record for the 50-yard dash in the time of 5.5. She shaved 1-10th of a second off the previous standard.

Miss Reiser, a 17-year-old lass from Ottawa, ran the 1,000-yard race in 2:29.4 to eclipse the record of 2:32.2.

Maime Rallins of Tennessee State equalled the world best of 6.4 in the women's 50 hurdles. She tied Patty Johnson's world record.

Herb Washington, meanwhile, of East Lansing, Mich., tied his own world best of 5.0 in the 50-yard dash.

Along with the new records, there were also upsets. Danny Smith of the Bahamas, a student at Florida State University, pulled off the stunner of the night by winning the 50-yard hurdles in 5.8. He beat a field that included Olympians Willie Davenport and Rodney Milburn.

Along with the upsets, the Games also had the additional drama of photo-finishes. Kipcho Keino of Kenya won the three-mile event by beating Canadian Grant McLaren in a controversial finish in which a photographer interfered with McLaren.

The collision sent the photographer flying and cost McLaren the lead. Keino burst in front by a couple of strides and won the race in a time of 13 minutes, 23.8 seconds as the crowd boomed.

Martin McGrady of the California International Track Club defended his 600-yard title in a time of 1:19.9, well off his world record of 1:07.6 set in New York in 1970.

Mike Boit of Kenya won the 1,000-yard run in 2:08.1. Steve Smith of the Pacific Coast Club, Los Angeles, won the pole vault in 17.5' and Dwight Stones of the Pacific Coast Club won the high jump with 7-3 1/2, a Canadian and meet record.

More than 300 drivers were on hand to man the cars, with each driver being limited to no more than three hours in the cockpit at one time.

World Bobsled Meet Will Begin Saturday

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Bobsledding's superstars should hit speeds of up to 120 miles per hour in the World Bobsledding Championships at nearby Mt. Van Hoevenberg Bobsled Run starting Saturday.

And if run superintendent Joseph McKillip is correct, the two-man and four-man single heat world records will fall by the wayside. Both records were set at Mt. Van Hoevenberg in the 1969 World Championships.

Two-man races will be held Feb. 10-11, followed by four-man competition Feb. 17-18.

Rain and warm temperatures the last three weekends hampered the American and Canadian teams preparing for the World Championships. The National Amateur Athletic Union Championships, scheduled for this weekend, were postponed because of the weather.

"The only thing I can think of is that they'll combine them with the North American Championships on Feb. 24-25," McKillip said.

With the postponement, the AAU's Bobsled Committee will have to be guided by past performances in picking the U.S. team to compete in the World Championships, according to McKillip, a former world class driver himself.

Navy Lt. Cmdr. Paul Lamey and Air Force Sgt. Jim Hickey, both members of the 1972 U.S. Olympic team, were expected to be strong contenders for the American team.

Besides U.S. and Canadian entries, teams from 10 European countries and Japan—160 athletes in all—were expected to begin practice Sunday, weather permitting.

Wolfgang Zimmerer of West Germany, who won the two-man Gold Medal at Sapporo and the European championships last month in Cervinia, Italy, is a man to watch in the World Championships.

Gianfranco Gasperi of Italy also is expected to be on hand. He was the driver when the four-man single heat record of 1:04.62 was set here in 1969.

PJH Cagers Grab Wins Over Dumas

Pampa Junior High's two basketball teams were both successful Thursday as they hosted Dumas in District action.

The ninth grade Reapers won their game 60-36 and the eighth graders turned their opponents back 47-38.

Jerry Matney led the ninth grade in scoring with 18 points. Frankie Lemons and Robie Mallard added 14 each. Robie getting in the scoring column were Tim Hill, 6; Randy Harris, 4; Jim Crocker and Jewel Landers, 2 apiece.

David Caldwell led the eighth grade with 12 points. He was followed closely by Rayford Young with 11. Lorenzo Griggs hit for 10 and Randy Britton added six.

Both teams travel to Borger tomorrow for games. The ninth grade will play at 4 p.m. and the eighth at 5:30.

Smoking Problems In Russia Arouse Protests To Magazine

MOSCOW (AP) — Russians are smoking twice as much as they did 10 years ago. Nonsmokers protest that they are enjoying life less as a result.

More than 1,000 readers of the magazine Health wrote that inconsiderate puffers pollute the air in communal apartments, trains and workshops, fritter away work time on smoking breaks and set a bad example for young people.

The magazine, publishing some of the irate letters in its February issue, urges responsible officials to take up the struggle. Russian smokers spent the equivalent of $3.6 billion to cultivate their habit in 1971 — the latest figures available — that was about twice the sum spent a decade ago. They smoked about 365 billion cigarettes, compared to about 536 billion in the United States.

Smoking is so widespread among Soviet officials that the nonsmokers have a tough time finding allies. Leonid I. Brezhnev, for example, is an inveterate smoker. His cigarette case has a mechanical time lock which opens at preset times. The aim is to cut down his consumption to about 17 a day.

"It's time to stop talking and start doing something," wrote radio operator V. Artemyeva of Kamehatka's Yelizova airport. She urged that a law be passed to prohibit smoking in places of work, on airplanes and in air terminals.

A. Kolotov from Stavropol says smokers' workdays ought to be lengthened by at least an hour because they spend so much time on smoke breaks. "Maybe this will make them think whether it's worth smoking at all," he wrote.

The director of a physical education program for children in Chelyabinsk, V. Lobankov, wrote that smokers should be given lowest priority on union-subsidized vacations at Crimean health spas because they show a flagrant disregard for their health.

Other readers offered such suggestions as a shutdown of tobacco plantations, restrictions on the sale of cigarettes, more antimoking propaganda including health warnings on cigarette packs, a ban on smoking in close quarters such as communal apartments and even development of such currently contraband substitutes as chewing gum.

"All the readers agreed on the need for a decisive struggle against smoking among teenagers and young people," the magazine said.

A young girl from Sevastopol wrote that many female co-workers smoke because they think it will keep them slim. "But nobody explains convincingly how harmful cigarettes are for the girls' health and appearance.

A. Azimova of the Tashkent Institute of Oncology and Radiology added: "Studies have proved that pupils who smoke become absent-minded, lazy and crude and lag behind in physical development."

Engineer V. Tikhomirov noted that practically every dashing figure on movie and television screens smokes continuously.

"Isn't it possible to portray an intelligent or strong character without a cigarette?" he asked.

A recent film opened with a sequence of 14-year-old boys smoking on a park bench. Next, the camera zoomed in on a long-haired, guitar-playing youth singing a jingle about how groovy and grownup it was to smoke. Seconds later, an authoritative male narrator intoned:

"The nicotine from five cigarettes can kill a rabbit. The nicotine from 100 cigarettes can kill a horse. What about man?" Viewers then heard that a smoker was 13 times as likely to get cancer or stomach ulcers as a nonsmoker.

The letters in the current Health were prompted by a September article by a woman deputy to the Supreme Soviet (parliament) and a female physician at a Kazakhstan hospital for railroad men. They said: "If someone decided to entertain himself by whistling or shouting in a public place, everybody else would protest and drive the noisemaker out. But the public is merciful to smokers."

Actress Likes France For Bringing Up Her Children

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
France is a great place for raising children "because it is 40 years behind the times," in the opinion of actress Olivia de Havilland, who lives in Paris. Her children are Benjamin Goodrich, 23, and Gisele Galante, 16. "A lot of people have the erroneous impression that the French are very sophisticated, but they aren't really... In fact French boys are terrified of English girls. When they are sent off to England to learn a language they are warned the girls are very precocious. At 16 my son was telling me how fast the English girls were, and he has been leery even of having his English cousins visit him when I am not around. One French mother was appalled that her son, who had lived with an English family while attending school, "became involved." She sadly told Miss de Havilland "it has happened." Though they are behind "in the ways of American children, they are more fluent in languages - some study Latin and Greek for seven years. In fact schooling keeps French children so busy they have time for little else. "Learning is the child's profession" in the opinion of Miss de Havilland, who is in favor of the heavy emphasis on school. Gisele began school at 4 1/2 years, and is at school six days every week at 8-10 a.m. and doesn't return home until 5:30 p.m. - with lots of homework. On Thursdays and Saturdays she has half-day school holidays and might go horseback riding.

But, she might study. Their examinations are rugged and the final one, at the end of the 12th year "is horrendous." "But at the end of that time many children are so well educated, they need no more schooling," she commented. Gisele may be "too young in spirit" even at 18 to cope with American life and its schools, she observed. "She has never been anywhere, not even a movie, with a boy." But this summer she will take her on an educational tour of America, retracing its early development, beginning at Jamestown and going on to visit Plymouth Rock, Sturbridge, Washington and Philadelphia before going West. Benjamin still is studying advanced math and physics - at The Faculte des Science and plans to aim for a "high degree" in America when he has received one in France. But like many American mothers, Miss de Havilland says she doesn't know what her son is up to. "I suspect he has made up his mind what sort of career he wants, but he doesn't find it necessary to tell his mother," she observed. "However French children do not usually treat their parents casually

Benjamin was born in America and has lived in France since he was 4, but he is extremely American-minded and subscribes to two American news weeklies. In fact he was so involved abroad in the recent American elections, she says, that when President Nixon was reelected, "I sent a wire of congratulations to Benjamin."

Traditional Weddings Still Count For Parents

By MITSUO KIMURA
TOKYO (AP) — Kiyoko Sato, 23, wasn't as happy as a bride-to-be should be as her wedding day approached. The reason: parental insistence that she and Keichi Nakajima, her 24-year-old fiancé, don formal kimono and go through a traditional Shinto wedding ceremony.

Kiyoko's home a few months ago to give her an engagement ring and 300,000 yen (about 1,000 dollars). Kiyoko termed that another compromise with old fashioned wedding ways.

The problem faced by the couple still is a common one in economically booming Japan, a country that has swung into some western ways with enthusiasm.

Bunji Ioki, a marriage counselor-researcher in Tokyo, said about 80 per cent of the one million couples expected to marry in Japan this year will have chosen their mates on the basis of their own feelings rather than through the old matchmaker system.

The young couple said all they wanted was a small, western-style wedding with only a few of their close friends as guests, not a big two-family affair.

Although Kiyoko and Keichi have been courting for five years, the fiancé had to take his parents and a matchmaker to

Jane Addams Is Topic For Preceptor Chi

The Preceptor Chi Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its regular meeting recently in the home of Mrs. Gerry Grayson. The president, Mrs. Jack Vaughn, conducted the business meeting. Plans were discussed concerning the Valentine Dance, which will be held on Saturday, Feb. 10, at the M.K. Brown Auditorium, to honor chapter "sweethearts. Prior to the dance, the Preceptor Chi Chapter will honor their sweetheart, Mrs. Jack Vaughn, with an open house to be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Mitchell.

The chapter members also reviewed their sales of the Beta Sigma Phi cookbook entitled "Fondue and Buffet Cookbook". Following the business meeting, Mrs. James Trusty presented the program on another woman of courage, Jan Addams, the founder of Hull-House. Mrs. Trusty told of Jane Addams' early life and devotion to her father, John Addams, a prosperous Quaker mill owner. Even as a child Jane felt compassion for the poor and the desire to help them. Because of a siege of typhoid fever and later tuberculosis of the spine, Jane was pale, thin and held her head slightly to one side.

Jane graduated from Rockford Seminary. Her father believed education was important for a girl and that women should share equally with the men in the affairs of the world. At Rockford Seminary Jane met friends who influenced her life very much, but none gave forth more decided opinions than Ellen Starr who was to found Hull-House with Jane Addams.

After graduation she and Ellen Starr visited Taybee Hall in London, the first social settlement in the world. Jane went there for ideas on her own project, a home for the poor and underprivileged. She and Miss Starr returned to America and Chicago, a place she had visited years before and a place she felt needed some kind of settlement house to give aid to the poor and needy. For their house, they chose Holsted Street, a section lined with small shops, saloons and ready-made clothing establishments.

The foreign-born had congregated there in a crowded rat-infested tenements, the streets were dirty, the paving miserable and the stables foul. Soon volunteers eagerly offered to help with clubs and classes. In Hull-House the teachers and they taught, the helpers and they helped, combined in a search for aiding each other.

A boarding house was built for women, and later, a house for men and the Children's House, as well as various other buildings for recreation, until the old house expanded and developed into thirteen buildings.

Following World War I she was active in efforts to bring about peace throughout the world. In 1915 she was elected President of the International Congress of Women at the Hague in Holland.

In 1920 she helped found the American Civil Liberties League, whose purpose was to contest all attempts of the courts to violate the rights of free speech, free press and free assembly.

In 1920 she received an honorary L.L.D. degree from the University of Chicago and in 1931 she, along with Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, received the Nobel Peace Prize.

In conclusion, Mrs. Trusty told that Jane Addams died May 18, 1935, but her work will long be remembered and because of Hull House thousands of men, women and children were enabled to be healthier, happier and have a brighter future.

Members attending the meeting were Mmes. Dona Cornutt, Ralph Esson, Joe Fischer, Henry Gruben, Ray Jordan, George Massie, Cletus Mitchell, James Trusty, Jack Vaughn and Gerry Grayson.

ANCIENT PLAY GARDEN NEW IN N.Y. NEW YORK (AP) — What's new for children in Central Park is an ancient play garden.

The newly opened playground is based on the architecture of the ancient middle East. There are pyramids and obelisks to climb, and water runs in aqueducts of antique design.

The architect, Richard Dattner, says the garden gives children the feeling of ancient cultures and makes them more aware of the forces of nature.

Go Classic With Spring Accessories

COLLEGE STATION — Gloomy winter may be outside, but in accessory showrooms it's bright springtime as designers show their ideas for the new year.

"With tailored clothes coming up, classic accessories will go along—creating a touch of drama," according to one authority.

Marilyn Brown, consumer education-clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University, viewed the spring look.

"Starting from the top down, hats definitely belong in the spring picture."

"Fashion leaders have already adopted the stretch jersey turban, and to it they'll add the sharp-brimmed hats, especially cowboy styles."

Along with hats, scarves remain in the spring picture. Favorite prints come in every possible arrangement of dots and stripes, the specialist observed.

"If you're not concerned about the 'latest thing,' any brightly colored print will work. A major scarf style will be the small cowboy type, tied close around the throat inside the open collar of a shirt-top dress."

"Belts also will continue to be important," she predicted.

"In keeping with the classic trend, they're now less overwhelming. About the widest you'll find for spring is four inches, but lesser widths are more common, and the one-inch belt is back."

Leather belts will be well-cut and honestly accented without cut-outs or appliques. Suede, brushed cowhide and grained leathers appear in belts of various widths.

"Hardware closings, big plain buckles, top-stitching and gilt rings all accent the tailored look of pants, suits and sportswear."

Spring handbags will return in such favorite shapes as the envelope, pouch, saddlebag and clutch, the specialist noted.

"Good leather is the theme, whether grained, semi-polished, soft-suede or glossy patent. Trimming is part of the design, whether in the prints done on suede, the gleaming hardware closings, or the handling of leather in taked or shirred forms," she concluded.

What's Behind The Price Of Beef?

CHICAGO — Lots of people think the supply of beef is automatic and no farther away than their favorite food store...and that the farmer, packer or retailer "sets" the price.

"But that's not so," says David H. Stroud, President of the National Livestock and Meat Board, the research and information arm of the nation's livestock and meat industry.

"Despite tremendous farm efficiencies, there's no short cut to a choice T-bone steak or a pound of hamburger," according to Stroud. "If there were, we'd have a lot more beef and it'd cost less, too."

It still takes two years to grow the steak or roast you have for dinner, plus 2,500 lbs. of grain, 450 lbs. of protein supplement and 12,300 lbs. of hay, silage and pasture and tremendous substantial investments in labor and capital before a steer is feedlot-finished and ready for market at 1,900 lbs.

Supply and demands set the price for beef regardless of farmer-rancher cost of production. And unlike most manufactured products, the price of beef moves both up and down. When homemakers buy more beef, supplies are reduced, and prices tend to rise because consumers are bidding against each other for available meat. Rising prices are signals for farmers and ranchers to increase beef cattle numbers.

After the tour Miss Starr will fly to Korea for a six-day engagement and then perform in Manila, Singapore and Bangkok.

She received a letter from the president of Brith Sholem asking her not to appear in Russia because of that country's treatment of Jews. She wrote a reply in which she said that her refusal to go would probably be unheeded in Russia but that her appearance carries with it a message of freedom.

Members of the Twentieth Century Culture Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Rufe Jordon with Mrs. N. Dudley Steele, co-hostess, for their regular meeting.

Culture Club Presented Review Of Twain's Books

Mrs. M.K. Griffith, president, presided at the business meeting. The minutes were read and approved. Mrs. Jordon gave a report from the nominating committee concerning the selection of new officers for the coming year. The following members were nominated and elected by acclamation:

President, Mrs. Ross Buzzard; vice-president, Mrs. J.M. Stallings; secretary, Mrs. Paul Turner; treasurer, Mrs. Vernon Hobbs; reporter, Mrs. Wyatt Lemons; and parliamentarian, Mrs. M.K. Griffith.

The program was presented by Mrs. Buzzard and Mrs. Turner.

Mrs. Turner presented the interesting life of writer Samuel Clemens, whose pen name was Mark Twain. She stated, "hardly a day goes by that we do not see Mark Twain's name in print or hear a quotation from his numerous stories."

He was born Nov. 30, 1835 in Florida, Mo. to John and Jane Clemens. As a young man, 21 years old, he became a pilot on the largest river boat in the trade, the "City of Memphis".

Three years later young Sam accompanied his brother, Orion, west when Orion was appointed territorial secretary of Nevada and resided in Carson City. He tried mining for awhile and then gave it up to become a featured writer on the territorial Enterprise.

It was about this time that he chose the Pen name, Mark Twain, an old river term, signifying 2 fathoms or twelve feet deep. "It was a pleasant sound for pilots to hear," the speaker pointed out, "for it meant 'safe water.'" Later, restless in temperament, and very talented, Mark Twain roamed world.

He was married to Olivia Langdon, who was a great

His life was often tragic and always eventful. The speaker told of many interesting events in the remarkable author's life.

Mrs. Ross Buzzard gave a book review by Mark Twain, "The Diaries of Adam and Eve." She said Eve's Diary, was written after the death of Twain's beloved wife, in 1904. The reviewer made the book come to life by stressing certain humorous and dramatic passages by this gifted author.

Mrs. Griffith presented the thought for the day which was a tribute to the late Lyndon B. Johnson.

Refreshments were served to the 16 members present.

A Tribute To Our Boy Scouts

By BILL DOWNS

When Lord Baden-Powell, the Englishman, conceived the idea of the Boy Scouts and, later, our own American, Dan Beard, furthered and promoted the idea here, neither, we suspect, ever dreamed what world-wide fountains of Youth he was putting in action! Today the Boy Scouts are the flower of young manhood in every quarter of the globe. Their deeds are legion. Their clean, manly characters shine forth from their scrubbed faces and the trim uniforms they wear. How very proud we fathers and mothers of Boy Scouts should be! Their merit badges are a symbol of sincerity, eagerness to serve and pride in their organization. God bless them all. They'll be leaders tomorrow!

Mrs. Brown introduced Mrs. N. Dudley Steele, who reviewed the book, "Smile Please" by Mildred Spurrier. The book is a humorous, historical account of Mrs. Topp's own mother and life in Greenwood, Miss. The setting of the book dates back to 1904, and the title came from the expression used by photographers when taking a picture. "Mrs. Topp's mother, Lillian Spurrier, was one of the first women in this country to choose photography as a profession, and the story is true," the speaker observed.

After the review, refreshments of valentine cookies and coffee were served from a tea table decorated with early spring flowers.

Quotable Quotes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Here are some quotable quotes from women during the week:

"You know, if a lot of women would listen to their husbands more, they'd stay out of a lot of trouble. They had to believe in him when they got married. I've kind of left everything up to Mooney." Singer Loretta Lynn, Country Music Association's "entertainer of the year."

"The war is not over and will not be over until the United States stops aid to Gen. Thieu. This aid is used to continue the U.S.-supported repression of all opposition to Thieu's dictatorship. It is a means by which the United States after withdrawal of the military forces hopes to maintain control of South Vietnam." Alice Ansara speaking for Citizens Against the War.

"A phone call can make such a difference in your life. The kids are still afraid. We've had our hopes up so many times, but now we are beginning to believe he's coming home." Kay Perkins, after announcement of her husband's impending return from a prisoner of war camp.

"He always wanted to fly. He got his pilot's license at 17 and figured this was a good way to get his flying in." Mrs. Dal Pozzo, speaking about her son, WO Anthony Dal Pozzo, 22, a U.S. helicopter pilot; the first American killed in Vietnam since the cease-fire went into effect Sunday morning.

"I'm going to cry, I'm going to laugh, I'm just going to go crazy." Mrs. Aran Tellier said when she and her husband found out that their son, Marine Sgt. Dennis A. Tellier, was among the American POWs who would be coming home.

"So many have expressed sorrow since last Monday that my husband had no knowledge of the cease-fire agreement in Southeast Asia. I think his friends should be told that fate was kind."

Old timers might describe the bidding of today's hand as "way out."

They might ask, "Why did North use Blackwood when he held two small clubs?"

The answer to that question is that North was willing to gamble that if South did not hold the ace of clubs he would hold second round control so that he was going to six hearts if South showed just one ace.

What about North's bid of six clubs? What was that bid for?

It was a grand slam force and said, "Partner we have all the aces and I am particularly interested in kings. What I want to know is do you hold the queen of hearts?"

How was South supposed to show the queen of hearts? He was supposed to jump to seven hearts if he held it.

Then why did South bid seven clubs?

We'll let Tom Smith, one of our very fine young players who held the hand in a rubber bridge game at New York's Cavendish Club, give his reasons.

"I decided to let my partner place the grand slam. He might have held the queen of diamonds and no jack or 10 of hearts. In that case diamonds would have been a safer place for the grand slam. He wasn't going to pass to seven clubs."

Seven hearts made easily but there were only 12 tricks available at either spades or no-trump so the "way out" bidding was way in.

Dear Abby

He's pitched three strikes, so OUT!

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1973 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old woman who has been married and divorced three times in the last 10 years. You will probably say what everybody else says when you find out I married and divorced the same man all three times.

Our last divorce became final three weeks ago, and now Mike is begging me to marry him again. We have no children and we don't want any. I really love the guy, Abby, but the only time he is good to me is when we're divorced. Mike is a wonderful lover, but he's a rotten husband. When we're man and wife he drinks, runs around, and stays out late. I never know where he is or who he's with, which drives me up a wall.

If you knew how much we've spent on lawyers you would think we were out of our minds. I know there will never be any other man for me, but I know if I marry Mike again he'll go back to his old mean, abusive ways. Can you help me?

THREE-TIME LOSER

DEAR LOSER: Three strikes and a man is OUT, no matter how good he pitches. Some men are great to date but not to mate, and Mike could be one of them.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 21, and she shares an apartment with another girl. Until she went to college she was very considerate, and since she was an only child we were a very close family.

Altho she was invited, she did not spend Christmas, Thanksgiving, Mother's Day, or Father's Day with us. She sent cards, but she spent those special days with her boy friend and his parents.

Naturally, I was upset, and when I confronted her she said there are 365 days a year to love us, and why should she give up these particular days? She says times have changed and I am square. Am I? VERY HURT

DEAR HURT: No, but don't make an issue of it. I can understand your being "hurt," but if you continue to make her feel guilty, you may see even less of her.

DEAR ABBY: My brother, Bob, was adopted by my family when he was a small baby. Bob is now over legal age, and was just informed that his real mother is an Indian living in Alaska and he is getting money from her oil rights.

Bob says it is all like a dream, because he never knew he was adopted. He is trying to make up his mind whether to go to Alaska to collect the money. He doesn't know what to say to his mother, who is still living, because he has always considered the mother who raised him his one and only mother.

Would you ask your readers how adopted children and real mothers feel after meeting each other after being separated for over 20 years? Is it a good experience or a bad one? NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: I would guess it's almost always a tearfully joyous reunion, but I'll ask Readers?

DEAR ABBY: Here in Iowa the winters are pretty cold, so my sisters and I have made a habit of putting out food for the squirrels, birds, and rabbits. Today, we had an especially heavy snowfall so we put out a little extra food for the animals and birds.

Today, we saw a little squirrel who had been in our neighborhood for as long as we can remember go into a neighbor's yard and start to eat out of a bird feeder. Abby, this neighbor came out of his house with a shotgun and with one shot KILLED that little hungry squirrel while he was eating! It just made us sick.

Please print this and tell people if they don't want animals in their yard to just chase them away. You can't teach a dead animal anything. And for those of you who do help these little creatures in the winter when food is hard to come by, God bless you.

Love and peace to you, Abby. Please don't use our names, sign us, 18, 16 AND 15 IN WATERLOO.

DEAR 18, 16, AND 15: And love and peace to you, too! I'm sorry you won't allow me to disclose your names. You are three beautiful sisters.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 62760, L. A., Calif. 90060. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

You can use canned mushroom soup, diluted with a little milk, as a sauce for chipped beef. Sprinkle with lots of freshly minced parsley.

Before you start to heat the oven, look to see if the oven racks are placed where you want them.

When you want to remove the core from grapefruit halves, a kitchen scissors will do a neat job.

Coconut that comes in cans or packages should be refrigerated, tightly covered, after it has been opened.

Scouting Scoops

By Mrs. G.J. Boyd

This will be the first in a series of articles spotlighting an individual troop, their activities and their leader.

"Dear Parents: We are ready to start a new year and I know it will be a rewarding one." This is the first sentence of Newsletter No. 4 to the parents of members of Troop 9 written by their leader, Mrs. John Grooters (Diane).

The letter lists the following activities for a four month period: Went on a bike hike, completed toymaker badge, gave a party for the pre-schoolers at the Catholic Children's Home in Panhandle, made mobiles, books, and bean bag game and presented to these children. Had a slumber party with a sister troop, visited the Police with goodies at Thanksgiving, sold 180 calendars, went Christmas caroling, gave birthday gifts to all pre-school children at the home in Panhandle. Made pomanders at Thanksgiving and angels at Christmas, marched in the Santa Day Parade. Visited Firemen with goodies at Christmas and learned many new skills, games, songs and crafts.

The troop will be awarded the Toymaker, World Games and Health Aid badges at their Court of Awards to be held in March. At the bottom of the Newsletter Diane had written "Please encourage your girls to work on badge requirements at home."

In a personal interview with this leader, it is very apparent why this troop accomplishes so much. Such interest and enthusiasm.

"We recently moved here from Birmingham, Ala. - our tenth move in seven years," stated Diane, "and we're happy to be back in West Texas and hope we'll stay a while. My husband, John, is now working with Cabot. We have two little boys, Little John and Brandon."

"It's a pleasure to work with such an enthusiastic and imaginative group of girls. We have twenty-five members. They have several projects planned for the upcoming months. The most interesting, I think, is the Hawaiian dinner and program they will be giving for their Court of Awards in March. With a World Games party for their sister Troop (No. 116). The girls made flags, cut out paper dolls from other lands and learned games from twenty countries."

"Being a Scout does not mean going to a meeting and having an hour and a half of undisciplined free time. It's each individual girl working, learning, playing and giving of herself to make herself a better person and the world around more pleasant because of her."

The last sentence of that interview just about sums up Diane Grooters herself. Enthusiastic, interested, involved and a Nice Person. A good example for her Girl Scout Troop.

Perry Lefors Field . . . Where Pampa's Business And Industry Is On The Move!

By RAY BAXTER

Every city in the world lies at the bottom of a vast sea of air . . . only hours away from any other given point in this plane of reference.

Early in its history, Pampa took its place as a "port" on this ozone ocean with "air-gonauts" rising from a small field east of town.

As the town grew, so did aviation until the only similarity between the airport of that day and Perry Lefors Field now is the wind sock.

And else is new . . . proving Pampa has kept pace, for that is the story of civil aviation today.

Three factors share in the responsibility for such progress: the early pioneers of Pampa's flying community, far-sighted county officials and the Chamber of Commerce.

Today, the field is operated by Pampa Aircraft Inc., formed by Gene Gatewood and Clarence Swindle. Both are seasoned pilots and Swindle holds aircraft and powerplant mechanic license and is a federally authorized inspector.

Two tremendous runways, 5,400 and 4,500 feet long, accommodate most aircraft carking at Pampa. An instrument approach is published for the north-south runway.

No fee is charged aircraft for use of the field. Tiedown service on the ramp is free. Hanger space is available for rent. Service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

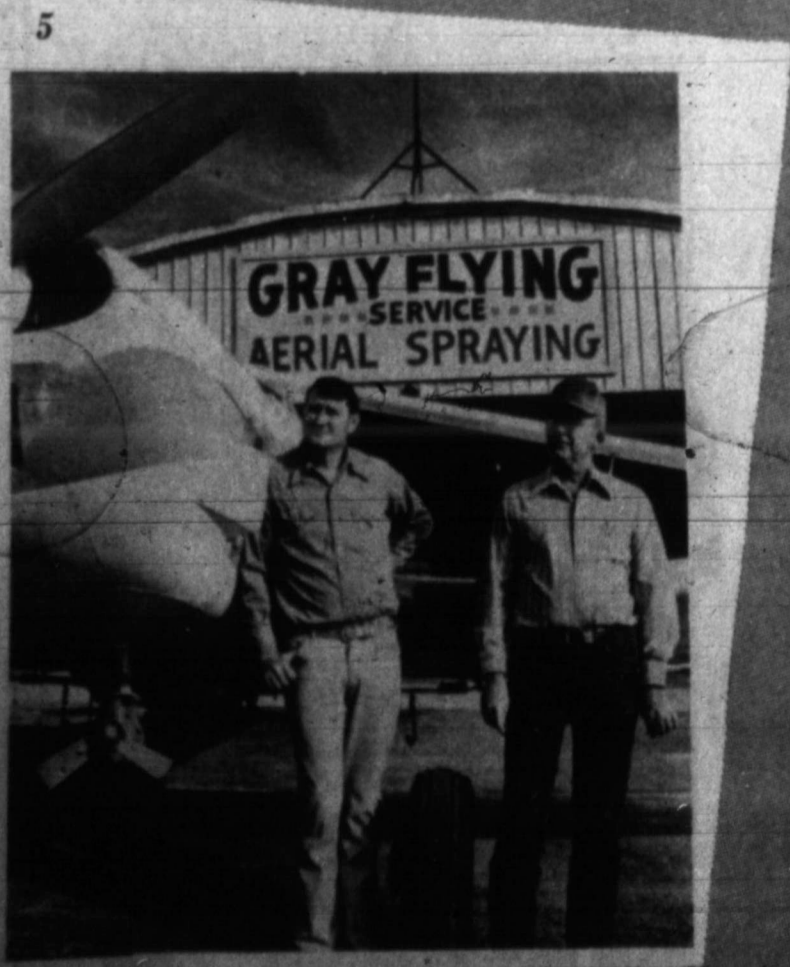

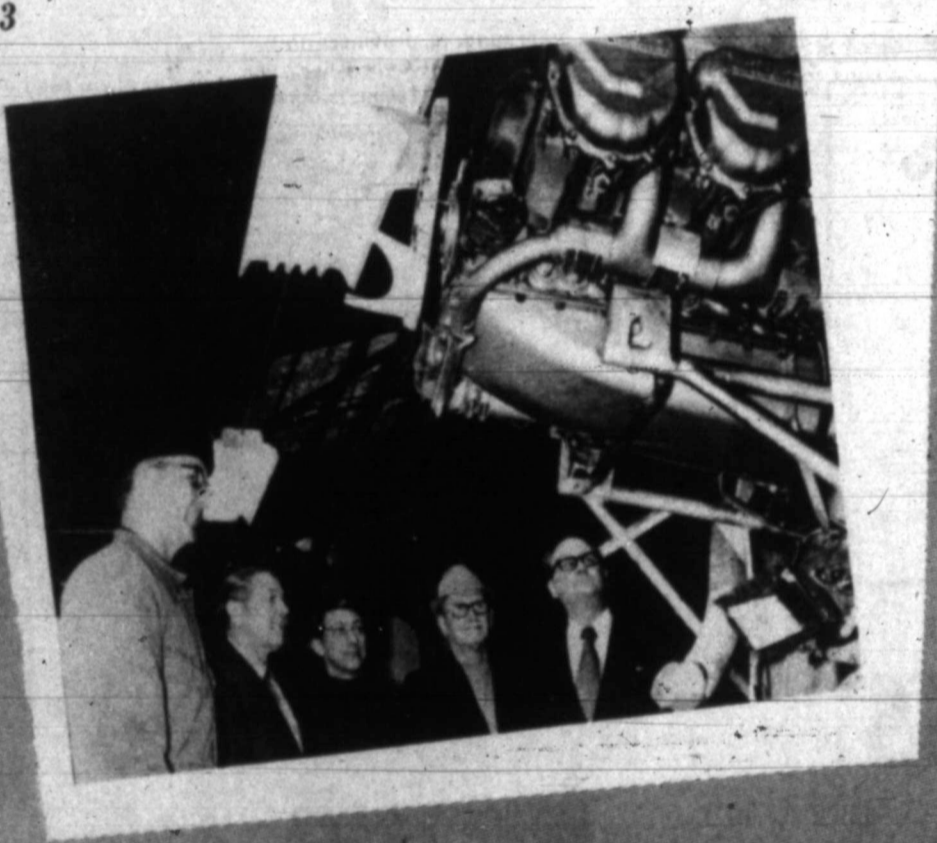

Pampa Aircraft Inc. is dealer for Cessna aircraft with models in stock at the field.

A number of qualified pilots give instruction with planes available for rental for the new or learning pilot.

The airport serves as a base of operations for a number of services to the area such as Pampa Flying Service offering air charter, taxi, ambulance and light cargo flights and Gray Flying Service serving local growers with an agricultural spraying service.

Lauded as one of the greatest services of the field is playing host to both the locally based industrial aircraft and those visiting on business connected with the growing business and industry of Pampa.

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

LBJ And Power Failure

The Presidency of the United States frequently is referred to as the most powerful office in the world. That suggests that the man who holds the office is the most powerful man in the world and as such commands awe and respect from all others.

When a man who has held such an office dies, he often is eulogized excessively and his faults and errors minimized. For that is the way the living seem always to remember the dead.

This newspaper has never shrunk from its position of challenging political government as the fountainhead from which the blessings of peace, prosperity and happiness flow.

He unleashed the awesome power of America's military and failed to end a war against an underdeveloped aggressor in Southeast Asia.

He succeeded in building the government bureaucracy and in enlarging its powers, but the problems both domestic and foreign were never solved.

Thus, here was a man in a powerful office with expertise in the use of power. Here was a man who wanted to accomplish good things yet was all of this failed.

Does it not suggest that political power is not the answer? But what the eulogies fail to acknowledge is that the programs, initiated at staggering costs and sending inflation spiraling, have failed to accomplish the stated purpose.

Collegiate 'Buyer's Market'

Though there were many exceptions to the rule, America's colleges and universities overall managed to show a slight increase in numbers of students this year over last, according to the 53rd annual higher education enrollment survey conducted by the University of Cincinnati.

The survey this year included 1,428 institutions or systems, an increase over the 1,200 reporting last year. Enrollment in these schools was 6,407,050, an increase of 0.2 per cent.

Dr. Garland G. Parker, author of the study, predicts that when the final count is in for all two-year colleges, the increase for all collegiate-level, credit-hour students may be 2 per cent, and grand total enrollment may approach 9,215,000.

At the same time, noting a 3.1 per cent drop in first-year students at 876 colleges and universities, he foresees the admission scene in the years ahead as one of "incredibly keen competition" among institutions of all kinds, but especially the four-year schools.

Think 'Fire Engine Yellow'

Everybody knows why a fireman wears red suspenders. Many people may not be aware, though, that the traditional red fire engine is on the way out. The recommended color today is bright yellow.

The reason is greater visibility on streets and highways and thus greater safety, especially at night, explains American La France of Elmira, N.Y., one of the world's leading manufacturers of firefighting equipment.

So if anyone ever asks you why a fireman drives a yellow fire engine, tell him. To hold up traffic, of course.

Moscow's Plans For Conquest

Two of the most important Communist documents published in the last few years—one carefully detailing Moscow's current line on worldwide revolution, the other explaining the real significance of recent trade and disarmament agreements signed by the U.S. and Soviet Party officials—have failed to stir our free world leaders who are so hell-bent on "accommodating" the self-sworn Marxist-Leninist enemy.

The first, written by Boris Ponomarev, one of the most powerful men in the world Communist movement, appeared originally in the October, 1971 issue of Kommunist, official house organ of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party. Entitled "Problems in the Theory of the World Revolutionary Movement," the Ponomarev piece set down guidelines to be followed by Communist parties around the world, including directives to step up work in mass organizations, trade unions, youth organizations and the armed forces of each country singled out for subversion.

Typical of the entire article's tone is Ponomarev's admonishment to Party leaders that their members should display "faithfulness to the (Soviet) theory of scientific Communism; pursuit of a 'course toward the revolutionary liquidation of the capitalist system'; mastery of 'all forms of the class-struggle,' including the ability to perform fast tactical switches; (and) an ability to convince the masses of the need for revolutionary changes," and to mobilize them for specific economic and political demands.

As the Kremlin's man in charge of Communist subversive activities throughout the non-Communist world since 1955, Ponomarev's words must be taken very seriously. Dr. Lothar Metz, a former Central Intelligence Agency analyst now with the Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies at George Washington University, has prepared an important monograph on the Ponomarev directive. It is available, along with a translation of the original Kommunist article, in a U.S. government document entitled Detente and the World Revolutionary Process from the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee.

Hanoi Timetable Now, Five Months Of Vietnam Terror

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Recently captured North Vietnamese documents give a timetable for Hanoi's operations in South Vietnam in the five months following the signing of the truce.

First: Communist operatives throughout South Vietnam have been told that headquarters will not communicate with them for five months, precisely, after the accords are signed. You will receive no visits and no messages from the legal operatives and no instructions from headquarters during this period, these documents say and therefore must rely on the instructions herewith delivered for your actions during that period. At the end of five months you will receive detailed instructions as to what you will do then.

Second: The Communist cadre in the South is to organize on their own initiative during these five months acts of terrorism: assassination, demonstrations and resistance aimed at destroying confidence in the government, thus preparing the stage for the countrywide operations which are to be outlined to them about July 1, 1973.

Third: Cadre are to foment incidents which will make it appear the Saigon government is breaking the accords, making certain these provocations are carried out in such a way that the truce teams are not aware of the causes, but do see the Saigon government's retaliation to what appears to be peaceful legitimate protest.

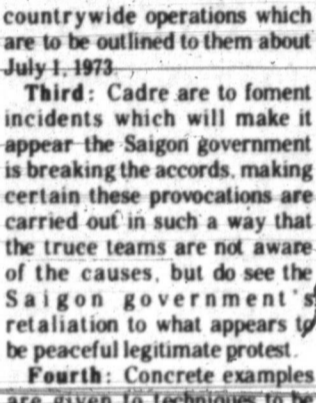

Fourth: Concrete examples are given to techniques to be used. One example will give the flavor of the provocations Hanoi has ordered its men to organize in the five months just ahead.

Demonstrations of protest are to be organized with old men and women in the forefront. These protests are to center around genuine grievances. At the start, only ordinary citizens are to be involved, with emphasis on the old and helpless. Then gradually, you will add to these demonstrations young able-bodied men with chains, knives and sticks (clubs), the instructions say. Finally, as time goes on, you will add skilled cadre armed with guns.

The old are to be kept in the forefront. But the armed men will gradually escalate the demonstrations until they turn into riots. The riots will intensify until the police are provoked into retaliation. (Since the old men and women are to be kept in front, they will bear the brunt of the police shooting or clubbing.)

Your Health Test Measures Blood Clotting

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Would you please explain the readings in a prothrombin blood test of 25/13. I am taking five Coumadin tablets a week. I had a heart-attack last year.

Dear Reader—Many people are taking Coumadin after heart attacks so I am sure your question will be of general interest. To find out how effective the medicine is in preventing your blood from clotting, a sample of normal blood is tested at the same time your blood is tested. The number 13 refers to 13 seconds required for the normal control blood's clotting mechanism and the 25 refers to the 25 seconds it requires for your blood to react. Basically this means that the clotting mechanism of your blood is prolonged to about twice that of a normal individual.

These laboratory tests are reasonably complex and tend to vary depending on the reagents used and this is why a controlled blood sample from a normal person is used to check against your blood each time the test is done.

If your medicine is effective, your prothrombin time should be considerably prolonged compared to the normal blood. The object is to prevent your blood from having a tendency to clot, hoping to prevent a new heart attack. Too much medicine may cause bleeding while too little isn't effective in preventing blood clotting.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I read your daily column and always find it interesting. I would appreciate some answers to these questions.

Q—How can 10 glasses of alcoholic beverage be poison if one is not?

A—That's simple. Even our best medicines if taken in excessive amounts can be poisonous. Digitalis, for example, one of our most common heart medicines when given in the right amount can prevent heart failure. When given in too large an amount it can be toxic and even cause death. Even small amounts of alcohol, however, are harmful to some people.

Q—If your patient needs a sedative, do you prescribe alcohol?

A—If the individual tolerates alcohol well and it is not upsetting for him to use it, I wouldn't hesitate to prescribe it to an individual. It's just as good or a better sedative than a lot of sleeping pills which are used. It doesn't happen to be the medicine that I usually prescribe for this purpose, but on the other hand I see no harm in it in reasonable amounts in specific cases.

Q—You tell your readers not to smoke tobacco and not to drink coffee, why don't you tell them not to drink alcohol?

A—If you've read my columns regularly as you mentioned, you'd know that I do.

Q—Should anyone besides husband and wife or those engaged to become husband and wife kiss on the lips?

A—That's a moral question not just a medical one, and up to the individuals concerned. Between healthy people it is unlikely to cause any problems.

By TEX DEWEESE Editor Of The News

DESPITE THE fact a cease-fire was officially declared in Vietnam at 6 p.m. Texas time one week ago yesterday, the war still goes on.

More than 1,900 cease-fire violations were reported in the first three days of the so-called truce. As this was written they were still shooting it out in Vietnam.

The Associated Press reported that although the level of fighting was a little lower Wednesday and Thursday than on the first three days of the week—it still was higher than at many times during the 12 years of fighting in South Vietnam.

The same report said 1,760 Communists and 276 South Vietnamese soldiers had been killed in the first three days of the "cease-fire." That's about the way casualties ran prior to the "end of the war."

Deployment of the cease-fire supervisory team has been slow in getting under way and there have been only very sketchy reports on the progress made, if any, by the four-nation Joint Military Commission supposedly making arrangements for the release and transportation of American POWs in North Vietnam.

Fortunately, only one American soldier has been reported killed and four wounded since the cease-fire hour.

But, American planes still were flying bombardment missions over Laos at mid-week.

ABOUT THE only good news to come out of Vietnam since the cease-fire agreement is that American troops have not been involved in the ground fighting still going on there.

The South Vietnamese continue to fight off the North Viets and the Viet Cong who have continued their capturing of entire villages.

Reportedly the Viet Cong swooped in and took 135 hamlets in the 3rd Military Region that includes Saigon and 11 surrounding provinces in S. Vietnam. That's where much of the ground fighting is taking place with the South Viets reporting they have retaken 114 of the villages and were still fighting Thursday to regain the other 21.

IT'S ABOUT time, we should think, that every non-Communist nation in the world would come to the realization that Communists are not too keen on keeping their word and breaking an agreement is one of the things they do best.

As has been expressed at the cease-fire prayer and thanksgiving services held in the U.S. during the last weekend—there was one in Pampa—we must continue to pray that American involvement in Vietnam is at an end and will not be renewed—there or anywhere else.

The war that continues should be a matter for the South and North Viets to settle among themselves.

If the cease-fire isn't working, that's their baby—not ours. All we want is to get the hell out, get our fighting men and prisoners of war back home and have a full report on our MIAs. The American people have had it. We get the message that the average American is interested in solutions to our domestic problems, keeping an eye on the Communists and protecting our own country.

RAY CROMLEY, Newspaper Enterprise Association's writer on international affairs, reports on this page today that recently captured North Viet documents set up a time-table for at least five more months of terror in South Vietnam as a follow-up to the so-called cease-fire agreement.

The plan, according to Cromley, is to stir up all kinds of trouble in an effort to place blame on the South Vietnam government so the international truce team there will try to convince the world the South Viets are breaking the agreement.

This, then, will give the Communists a chance to launch some kind of, as yet unidentified, action to take over South Vietnam, which has been their aim ever since the war started many years ago.

Keep in mind—Communists don't give up. They keep right on heading for the ultimate goal of conquest. Cease-fire and peace agreements mean nothing to them if they stand in the way of that goal.

We'll bet Jimmy the Greek will give you odds that the cease-fire agreement will be used by the Communists to lay plans and map out the final push to take over in South Vietnam six months from now.

SINCE WE make no claim to being an authority, or expert on world affairs and military or political strategy—it just occurred to us: why all this prose about the cease-fire agreement?

Maybe it was because we have talked with so many townspeople who have expressed disbelief in what has transpired in the past week or ten days.

Most of them say they won't even believe prisoners of war are coming home until they are given proof they are back in the United States.

It's a pretty sad commentary when faith is lost in the announcements that come from high government sources.

Like the Rev. Martin Hager said of the cease-fire at last Sunday's thanksgiving prayer service here:

"There seems to be a leaden numbness—even in Pampa—that we are not so sure what we have."

It would appear that quote is a pretty fair summation of what is in the minds of most Americans one week after the cease-fire was supposed to become effective.

The war still goes on.

BY THE way—the City Hall Cat, who spends quite a bit of time in the South during the cold spells, plans on being back in town within the next week or so. He says it is possible he may have a choice morsel or two.

Thought we would pass that information along to some who have been wondering about the Cat's absence.

H. L. Hunt Writes

THE NO THIRD-TERM AMENDMENT

There was some talk in my office recently about the ratification of the 22nd Amendment to the Constitution and it sent memories swirling around the momentous fight this columnist waged to get it passed. That Amendment limits the Presidential tenure of one person to two terms. It seems ironic in retrospect that the cause of the ratification of the Amendment was really non-partisan and not aimed at any individual and yet the fight to get it passed by two-thirds of the states' legislatures was a hard one to win.

The basic cause behind the failure of the legislative bodies of the individual states was apathy. Legislators chose to sweep the Amendment under the rug after it was submitted to them by the Congress of the United States. In January of 1951, this columnist launched his own campaign to get action.

Telephone calls to the lawmakers, letters and mailings to individuals and appearances before interested groups became the order of the day. In less than two months, the inertia of the officially responsible people was overcome and ratification became a legal fact.

That battle has long since been won. It serves to remind all of us that apathy and lethargy can do us in on other causes. These are the main factors in the fight against the evils of the communist cause. It has always been my belief that an one person CAN do something to advance the cause of freedom. Get your friends and neighbors interested in the fight to save the Republic. There is no obstacle we cannot overcome. That was proved in the case of the 22nd Amendment.

Television Chef Turns to Design And Sailing Around the World

By EVE SHARBUTT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) —

What it boils down to is whether or not people believe that a man who leaps over chairs can make good lobster bisque.

Even expert chef Graham Kerr, who was television's galloping gourmet from 1961-1970, cannot leap over chairs forever. The cook-turned-kitchen designer has recently published a collection of every recipe he ever cooked on television and says this will be his last major cookbook.

"I never had the luxury to do the same dish twice in 200 shows," said Kerr. "Now I have begun a designing career and I believe it will be more successful than anything I've ever done before. And I'll have time to do some cooking for my family."

His family — wife Trenea, who produced his television show, and three children — figure largely in his new life-style.

A planned sabbatical became an enforced leave early this year when doctors discovered that Trenea Kerr had tuberculosis.

"At first they thought it might be cancer, that she might have only 15 months to live. In two weeks, I changed substantially. The fact that she was worn down enough to have even TB, from all the pressures of our activities, fairly well asured that we would change our way of living," Kerr said. He was lucky. He had something else he really enjoyed — sailing.

"We own a sporty sail boat, an ocean racer, and I've built a kitchen and a workroom aboard. I'll be developing new kitchen designs and testing them, starting right at the bottom of the barrel again but without deadlines or compromise."

The Kerr-family will begin their new way of living next year, sailing around the world, touching at various ports when the whim strikes. And, if all goes well and they like it, Kerr has already begun designing a new concrete sail boat.

The handsome Englishman has already marketed cookwear, cutting boards, knives and other kitchen implements of his design.

"The cookwear was, I think, too expensive. But we've developed a new method of manufacture and we will market a new kind of cookwear. I'm especially proud of my chopping board, which will last generations. It took us two and a half years to find the right tree to make our spurtles from. It's a Formosan hay natural hardwood from Taiwan."

Kerr is into 117 new projects, among them kitchen appliances. A design dear to his heart is a round dining table with a pedestal base through which electric wires would warm a lazy susan type server. Foods could be kept steaming hot and more appetizing.

"Giving friends an out of the ordinary meal and a damn good cup of coffee at home and discussing all the world's malfunctions is the ideal dinner party," Kerr added.

His new "Complete Galloping Gourmet Cookbook" pleases Kerr because it documents "everything I've ever done, good or evil, in one six and a half pound volume." It is, he said, a useful, workable book.

"I hope it isn't used as a status symbol to weigh down coffee tables and never gets into the kitchen. It is a plain, plain book. If it is a smash best seller, fine, but it was not done for that purpose.

"All the recipes will stand the test of time. They're for future affairs and they're good for the next 20 years. After that, I feel people won't be cooking very much. We'll be using frozen and dehydrated things instead," he said.

People cook for others because they care for them, Kerr said. If the cook gets no response to his food effort, he doesn't enjoy cooking.

"In 70 per cent of homes worldwide, with the exception of the Jewish family and Italy and France, people are critical of home cooking. There's no appreciation of the fine cook. That will eventually kill good cooking."

Kerr won't be giving up, however. His sailing life, designing, building and trying out his designs, will be a saner way of living, he said.

It may be difficult for a feminine woman like his wife Trenea. Every so often, he fears she may develop an absolute hatred for the whole business. But he added that there should be many good moments to compensate.

Indonesia To Investigate Anthropologist Wedding

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The Department of Social Affairs called today for an official investigation of Wyn Sargent, the American anthropologist who married the chief of a Stone Age tribe in a West Irian jungle.

A statement by the department charged that Miss Sargent married Chief Obaharok to make him a human guinea pig to satisfy her adventurous nature in her research on the sex life of the Mulia tribespeople, who still live like their ancestors did thousands of years ago.

Miss Sargent was reported to have said she would shed her Western clothes and dress in the strings and straps of the natives after her marriage to Obaharok.

"If Miss Sargent sheds her clothes then her method of approach to the tribes is not correct," the department's statement said.

The government is spending $720,000 on a two-year program, to be completed by the end of this year, to civilize the West Irian tribes by clothing them and teaching them to speak, read and write Indonesian.

The department says she had harmed this program.

The 42-year-old explorer and journalist from Huntington Beach, Calif., who has a teenage son from her marriage to a pilot who was killed in an air accident, married Obaharok on Jan. 8. She paid a dowry of 11 pigs and five sets of native headress.

PERSONAL FINANCE

Burglary's Now A Daytime Job

By CARLTON SMITH

Your financial loss, if your house is burglarized, will be just under $500. That's the average, as reported in a recent study for the National Institute of Law Enforcement.

You can do a number of things, it indicates, to cut the odds on being burglarized. The title of the report is "Patterns of Burglary," and out of the patterns emerge some unexpected conclusions about how, when and why people are burglarized.

First off, forget the conventional picture of the burglar as a somewhat paunchy, middle-aged guy in a mask, with a sack on his shoulder, who invades your house somewhere between 1 and 3 A.M. He's a teen-ager—or at least under 25—who hits you most often in broad daylight. The study reports that 50 per cent of residential burglaries occur between 10 A.M. and 4 P.M.

Chances are he'll get in through your front door, or a nearby window. Study of police records "showed a marked preference for front doors and windows." But don't, of course, neglect equipping other entry points with burglar-resistant locks. Burglars simply use the easiest or most convenient entry.

Suburbanites, it appears, tend to be careless about such things. Doors and windows are forced open more often in the cities—probably because "city dwellers may be more security conscious," making force necessary, "as opposed to suburbanites who make it relatively easy for the intruder with their carelessness about security."

The first rule, then, would simply be "lock up"—almost too obvious, but one that's evidently neglected by a large number of victims.

There's no particular season for burglaries. No correlation could be found between burglary rates and the season of the year, the year, the month, or the day of the week—except that the rate does not rise, as you might expect, on weekends. The report's authors label "surprising" the extent to which "residential burglary is a daytime, weekday phenomenon."

What's your burglar going to steal? Easy. He wants whatever can be most readily converted to cash. "The burglar," the report notes, "keeps up with the changing value of items, and as a result now steals more television sets than horses."

In fact he heavily favors, after cash, "home entertainment equipment"—radios, stereo gear, etc. "No other single category of goods comes close to either of these two in relative popularity as burglarizable items." Police departments strongly urged keeping a record of serial numbers. It's also wise not to put the hi fi on display where it can be easily seen through a front window.

Warding off burglars comes in two parts. First, there's good physical security—locks. Second, psychological warfare.

You've seen the injunction to leave lights on when the house is vacant at night. Fine—but use your head. "The burglar is often notified of the victim's absence," the report notes, "by the lone living room light shining away brightly at 3 o'clock in the morning."

One highly effective weapon of psychological warfare is available to the householder. Says an expert of burglarious behavior: "A burglar will usually commit a burglary, once he has decided to do it, unless he encounters one particular indicator: noise. Any kind of noise creates uncertainty. Noise is the burglar's main concern and fear."

A good alarm—one that will raise the neighbors, and bring the police — would seem to be one of the better investments in burglary insurance.

Old Woman Likes Modeling Career

SEATTLE (AP) — Elizabeth Bisson stretched out her 4-foot-11, 94-pound frame and said she thought this business of being a model is just her idea of something with a promising future.

"I like being a model at this stage of my life," she said. "I think I'd like to do more of it."

Elizabeth is 99. She will be one century old sometime in September.

Friends in the Tehodora Home conducted by the Volunteers of America, already are thinking about a birthday party for her.

Fame reached out to touch Elizabeth when Goodwill Industries, which promotes handicraft by the handicapped, conducted a style show of 19th century costumes at the Tehodora.

The producers chose Elizabeth to model an 1872 costume—the year of her birth—with a kind of Empress Eugenie hat and a museum piece handbag to match.

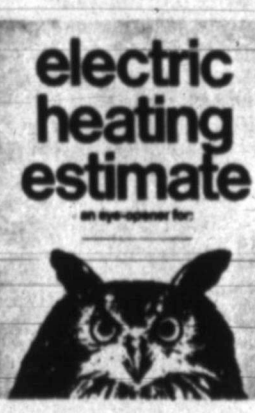

Elizabeth was an immediate hit, and a television company is building a show around it.

Slim, girlish, alert and darling, Elizabeth is impressed but not over-awed about being a one-shot TV star.

Her "debut" was made in a raw silk gown featuring hound's leg sleeves, fitted waistline and bustle back.
