Halloween caution urged

Parade slated for Thursday

Another Halloween is here and local law enforcement and health officials are hoping the holiday will pass safely and without incident.

Several agencies are taking steps in the hopes of keeping the holiday safe and without incident.

Pampa Police Chief J.J. Ryzman noted the city will host a Halloween parade at 5:30 p.m. Thursday. The parade route runs from Lovett Memorial Library to the Central Fire Station.

"Once there, Officer Mark King will give a presentation on Halloween safety, the Parks Department will show a film on Halloween safety and treats are available," Ryzman said.

Many of the safety tips the youngsters are likely to hear deal with vision, both of the trick-or-treaters and passing motorists.

Ryzman advises trying to trick or treat while still light outside, or, if traveling at night, carrying a flashlight to aid in seeing and being seen. He also recommends using reflective tape on costumes.

"This allows people driving to be able to see people walking at night," he said. "Also, light colored costumes are recommended."

Ryzman urges youngsters and their parents to consider the alternative of using make-up instead of a mask, which he said greatly impairs vision. If wearing a mask, it should be removed before crossing the street and the trick-or-treater should cross only at corners and not in the middle of the block between cars.

The chief also said youngsters should trick-or-treat in familiar neighborhoods and should not enter anyone's house. He said parents need to be aware of the route taken by their children and encouraged them or an older brother or sister to accompany the trick-or-treaters.

Ryzman advises parents to inspect candy before it is eaten or, better yet, to take it to Coronado Community Hospital to have it X-rayed.

The X-ray department at the hospital will be fluoroscoping candy and other goodies for metal objects from 6:30 to 8:30 Halloween night, according to radiology supervisor Chuck Tanner. Tanner cautioned the process will only detect metal objects and some forms of glass, depending on the lead content of the sand used in making the glass.

But Tanner said Halloween night is a hospital-wide affair, not just a function of the radiology department. The dietary department will have the dining room open for punch and cookies and other department heads will be helping out in various capacities.

"We did this last year and it's a whole lot of fun," Tanner said. He said a good response was achieved last year.

Coronado Community Hospital is also passing out Halloween trick-or-treat bags both at the radiology department and at the Pampa Mall in conjunction with the Wellness Program exercise classes. The bags have safety tips printed on them, advising youngsters not to eat treats that are not wrapped and urging them to use sidewalks.

But children and their parents are not the only people that need to be careful Halloween night. Maj. V.J. Cawthon, commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety Region Five, said motorists need to be careful, too.

"Children will be trick-or-treating and not paying attention to traffic," he said. "The life you save may be your own child."

Cawthon noted a pedestrian's chances of death or injury in a car accident increase 800 percent at night.

The major also cautioned against permitting youngsters to carry jack-o-lanterns with lighted candles due to the possibility of their costumes catching fire. He also warned of the dangers involved in many Halloween pranks.

For example, he noted, throwing water balloons at passing vehicles could result in disaster. He suggested trick-or-treaters not do anything to someone else that they would not want done to them.

"Halloween should be a safe and enjoyable time for everyone," Cawthon said.

Juan leaves Louisiana in fight against floods

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sandbags and pumps were precious commodities today as levees in New Orleans' suburbs and smaller south Louisiana communities strained to resist floodwaters left behind by Hurricane Juan.

The death toll from Juan's four-day rampage back and forth along the coast stood at six confirmed deaths. Juan, downgraded to a tropical storm Tuesday, also left six people missing, thousands temporarily homeless, millions of dollars in damage and at least $1.5 billion worth of crops endangered.

Forecasters said the slow-moving and erratic storm, whose 85 mph hurricane winds had diminished to 60 mph, could produce 4-8 inches more rain today along a broad line extending from the Florida Panhandle to east Texas.

At 4 a.m. CST, the poorly defined center of the storm was estimated to be near latitude 29.5 north, longitude 92.0 west, along the central Louisiana coast near Marsh Island about 120 miles west southwest of New Orleans.

After stalling off the Louisiana coast Monday, Juan backtracked Tuesday and moved over land southwest of New Orleans, then began drifting westward again.

Two of the missing were believed still aboard a jackup drilling barge that capsized Tuesday in a marshy ship channel 20 miles east of New Orleans. One crewman escaped when the 52-foot vessel overturned, and divers recovered the body of another from the barge Tuesday night, the Coast Guard said.

A search for the two missing men was scheduled to resume at daybreak.

Commercial helicopter companies planned to resume an airlift of hundreds of workers back to offshore rigs and platforms evacuated in the Gulf of Mexico during the weekend.

"We're just as busy bringing them out as we were bringing them in," Jim Suggart, a spokesman for Petroleum Helicopters Inc., said Tuesday.

Serious flooding persisted throughout the eastern "toe" of boot-shaped Louisiana, which was punished by high tides and nearly a foot of rain since Juan formed Saturday. Tides were running 4-6 feet higher than usual along the Louisiana coast and 3-5 feet higher in Alabama and Mississippi, the weather service said.

New Orleans measured more than 10 inches of rain during the four-day period, while 8 or more inches fell at Pensacola, Fla., Beaumont-Port Arthur, Texas, and Alexandria and Boothville, La.

People were warned against wading in floodwaters because of displaced poisonous snakes and floating balls of stinging fire ants.

"This is the highest tides we've had since God knows when," said Ron Beason, president of the West Jefferson Levee District in suburban New Orleans.

District employees and volunteers have been sandbagging levees along the heavily populated west bank of the Mississippi River across from New Orleans since Monday night.

Workers formed a human chain nearly a half-mile long Tuesday to sandbag the brimming Harvey Canal, said Jefferson Parish Sheriff Harry Lee.

Gov. Edwin Edwards declared a state of emergency Monday in 13 south Louisiana parishes, and the state's congressional delegation asked President Reagan on Tuesday to make emergency federal resources available to the region.

Edwards said damage would exceed that of Hurricanes Danny and Elena combined. Both storms wrought millions of dollars in damage.

Farmers have said that the $1.5 billion harvest in sugar cane and soybeans were threatened.

An estimated 2,500 evacuees were still waiting in 23 Red Cross shelters for floodwaters to drop in 10 south Louisiana parishes.

Flooding was worst in St. Bernard Parish, to the east of New Orleans, where water stood 7 feet deep in some fishing communities, forcing about 500 people to evacuate Sunday.

High water extended northward into St. Tammany Parish, on the Mississippi line, where at least 200 homes and businesses were reported flooded, and to the tiny fishing village of Manchac, at the juncture of lakes Pontchartrain and Maurepas, northwest of New Orleans.

"There's no place for the water to go. We're just waterlogged," said Don Gary, assistant civil defense director for Houma, a city of 35,000 about 55 miles southeast of New Orleans. "This is the worst I've seen in 35 years."

Waist-deep floodwaters kept Lafitte virtually deserted since Monday, and 1,200 residents remained stranded on Grand Isle, a coastal community under up to 4 feet of water and where a new, two-mile section of hurricane protection levee was swept away.

On Tuesday, the Red Cross flew 1,200 fried chicken dinners to Grand Isle, where Mayor Phillip Bradberry said electricity probably would not be restored until Friday.

Officials in Mississippi said up to 9,000 homes in two southern counties were flooded or isolated by high water. Gov. Bill Allain declared a state of emergency.

In Alabama, the rain and high tides prompted flash-flood warnings in the Mobile area, and residents of Dauphin Island were ordered to evacuate as high tides threatened the only road leading there.

Streets were flooded in Florida from Jacksonville to the Panhandle.

The missing included three aboard crewboats that foundered in the Gulf of Mexico and a wind surfer in Lake Pontchartrain.

Personal incomes increase 1.1 percent through June

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Wyoming, helped by construction of a giant oil project, enjoyed the largest jump in personal income of any state this spring, according to the latest survey of personal income in the 50 states.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday that the 3.1 percent rise in personal income in Wyoming from April through June was far ahead of the average national increase of 1.1 percent.

Other states ahead of the national average were Indiana, with a 2 percent gain; Kansas, up 1.8 percent; Arizona, up 1.7 percent; and Florida with a 1.6 percent rise.

At the other end of the scale, three states actually suffered declines in personal income from April through June.

Delaware was hardest hit with a 0.7 percent decline, which was blamed in part on an effort by Du Pont, a big employer in the state, to encourage workers to take early retirement in order to trim labor costs.

Two other states, Alaska, with a 0.3 percent decline, and Montana, a 0.1 percent dip, were hurt by cutbacks in oil exploration and drilling.

Pay checks in Wyoming were fattened by a big 16.6 percent jump in construction payrolls, with much of the increase stemming from work on a $2.2 billion Exxon plant to produce carbon dioxide for use in refining crude oil.

Nationwide, construction payrolls showed the most improvement of any category, advancing 2.4 percent, followed by a 2 percent rise in service industry payrolls, a 1.8 percent increase in government workers' salaries and a 1.4 percent increase in pay at mining and energy companies.

Manufacturing was the only industry segment to show no improvement this spring as domestic producers continued to suffer from a flood of foreign imports, which have contributed to a loss of 340,000 manufacturing jobs since January.

Consumer prices from April through June rose 0.7 percent, which meant states with income gains below this level lost ground to inflation.

The 1.1 percent nationwide increase in income was slightly below a 1.7 percent advance during the first three months of the year.

Commerce Department analyst Rudolph DePass said most geographic regions shared in the gains, although certain industries were doing much better than others.

"It was a period of moderate economic growth, typified by high import penetration, declining farm prices and declining oil and gas prices," he said. "There are a lot of imbalances in the economy with basic industries like manufacturing growing slowly compared to the service sectors."

Nelson Britten cooks sausage for festival

Polish sausage festival Sunday

WHITE DEER — Members of the Sacred Heart Parish are fixing up more than 6,200 of sausage for the 48th Annual Polish Sausage Dinner and Festival Sunday at the Parish Hall.

The dinner, which will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., will feature steamed and barbecued sausage. The Parish members are hauling in mesquite wood for the barbecue grills and preparing steam ovens for the steamed sausage.

In compliance with Texas Health Laws, a walk-in cooler and steam tables have been installed in the hall kitchen.

Take-out dinners will be available.

DA seeking to have youth tried as adult

By PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

The district attorney's office is pursuing the possibility of getting a 16-year-old boy, accused of stabbing a man to death Saturday, tried as an adult.

Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton said he hopes to present his case to the juvenile court within the next few weeks. Juveniles between the ages of 14 and 18 and accused of felonies can be tried as adults in Texas if the juvenile court waives jurisdiction.

By law, Hamilton has until Nov. 7, 10 days from a juvenile detention hearing held Monday, to come up with the required tests and present his case before the juvenile court. Tests include sociological and psychological studies done by juvenile experts to determine if the child should be tried as an adult.

But Hamilton said he can request another detention hearing after 10 days, amounting to a 10-day extension. He said he anticipates problems with case loads of psychologists and sociologists being backed up in Amarillo.

Currently, the teenager is being held by the Pampa Police Department in connection with the stabbing that claimed the life of Pete Ontiveros, 20, 1005 Neel Road, during a private Halloween party at the Coronado Inn on Saturday night. Police said Ontiveros was stabbed repeatedly in the back of the neck, presumably with a four-inch bladed hunting knife recovered at the scene.

Two other men, James Martin Farrel, 21, 414 N. Gray, and Mike Martinez, 20, 1032 Neel Road, were injured after fighting broke out at the party, described by one eyewitness as "World War III." Farrel was listed in good condition this morning after undergoing surgery. Martinez was treated and released the night of the stabbing.

"I think he's committed an adult act, based on the evidence presented to me. That's certainly not comparable to the Halloween trick or treats or drinking beer when you're 15, shoplifting, or some of the other more juvenile-type offenses," Hamilton said. "If somebody's going to commit an adult act, I think he ought to be tried as an adult."

If tried as a juvenile and found guilty, the teenager faces a maximum sentence of less than five years in custody of the Texas Youth Commission because state law dictates he cannot be held before his 21st birthday. If tried for murder and found guilty in adult court, the sentence could be as long as 99 years.

Hamilton said it could be awhile before any final decisions are made on the youth's fate. If the juvenile court waives jurisdiction in the case, the youth can appeal that decision to a higher court, the prosecutor said.

Reagan to give Soviets interview

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will be interviewed by four Soviet journalists in the Oval Office on Thursday in what the White House said it hoped was "a sign of a new and more open information policy on the part of the Soviet Union."

It will be the first time since 1961 that an American president consented to an interview with Soviet journalists.

The White House also announced today that Reagan will address a joint session of Congress on the evening of Nov. 21, immediately upon his return to Washington from his summit in Geneva with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The four journalists who will interview Reagan flew in from Moscow solely for the interview. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said. They include a representative from the Soviet news agency Tass, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda, the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia and a Soviet news service Novosti.

AGNES BRANSON

AMARILLO - Services for Agnes Branson, 79, of Amarillo, sister of a Pampa resident, will be at 2 p.m. Thursday at the First Christian Church of Amarillo. Officiating will be Dr. Russell Money, pastor, and Dr. Newton Robison, pastor emeritus. Burial will be in West Park Cemetery in Hereford under the direction of Boxwell Brothers Funeral Directors.

Mrs. Branson died Monday. Born in Hereford, she was a graduate of Hereford High School and began her teaching career in a one-room country school while still a teenager. She later earned both bachelor's and master's degrees at West Texas State University in Canyon. She taught at Wolfen School in Amarillo in the late 1920s and early 1930s and later taught at Tucumcari, N.M. She returned to Amarillo in 1942 to teach at Horace Mann Elementary School; she later transferred to Coronado School in 1954, where she taught until retiring in 1971.

Mrs. Branson married W. L. Branson in 1931 at Canyon; he died in 1971. She was the first president of Zeta Delta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma honorary teachers' society. She was also a former president of the Amarillo Chapter of the Association for Childhood Education. She was a member of the FM chapter of PEO and was active in the Retired Teachers Association. She was a member of the First Christian Church at Amarillo, serving as group lesson leader in the Esther Christian Women's Fellowship and a longtime member of the Congregational Couples Class in the Sunday School. She also worked in the church library.

Survivors include a son, Robert E. Branson, Edina, Minn.; a sister, Mrs. Bob (Alleith) Curry, Pampa; a brother, Francis B. "Scoop" Elliston, Wallace, Idaho; and two granddaughters.

The family will be at Boxwell Brothers Funeral Directors from 7 to 9 p.m. today.

The family requests memorials be made to the First Christian Church at Amarillo or to a favorite charity.

Former senator says White wasn't offended by remark

AUSTIN (AP) — Denied a post on the Public Safety Commission, former state Sen. Peyton McKnight says Gov. Mark White didn't seem offended when McKnight used a racial slur while telling an anecdote at a recent charity event.

"The governor was there. He had a part on the program. He didn't leave. He eventually wasn't offended, because he came up and talked to me afterward," McKnight said after White gave the public safety job to someone else Tuesday.

White appointed Calvin Guest of Bryan, former Texas Democratic Party chairman, to the job that aides described as too sensitive to be clouded by questions of racial discrimination.

"The governor felt that because the administration of law enforcement is such a sensitive matter, it was important for the person appointed to this position be above any suspicion of bias," said Ann Arnold, White's press secretary.

At a fund-raising roast in Tyler on Oct. 5, McKnight twice used the word "nigger" while telling anecdotes about state Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas.

White, who attended the function, told the audience just prior to McKnight's speech that he intended to appoint McKnight to the Public Safety Commission, which oversees operations of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Ragsdale, chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus, also attended the roast. The lawmaker, who served as a coordinator for McKnight's ill-fated gubernatorial race in 1982, said he wasn't offended by McKnight's use of the word.

But some of those attending the event were offended by the ex-senator's comments and left in anger. News reports late last week brought the incident to public attention.

In a telephone interview from his Tyler office Tuesday, McKnight said he didn't intend to offend anyone with the remark.

"Anybody who knows me knows I wouldn't say anything to hurt anybody. I've got too many black and brown friends all over the state. I have never done anything to viciously hurt anybody," he said.

McKnight said there were misunderstandings both about his remarks and over the understanding that White was going to give him the job.

"Somebody misunderstood, I guess it was me. Me and about 800 other people up here when he (White) said it was me he was going to appoint," McKnight said.

Dwayne Holman, the governor's appointments secretary, said that despite changing his mind on the appointment, White knows McKnight harbors no ill feelings toward blacks.

However, Holman said, "A lot of people don't know Peyton as well as the governor does."

"The governor is confident that Peyton would have administered his responsibilities (on the safety commission) in an equitable fashion," added Ms. Arnold.

Guest's appointment was announced in a three-paragraph statement.

Guest, 62, is owner of an investment firm. A native of Strawn and a graduate of Texas A&I University, he is a former president of the Texas Association of School Boards.

In 1984, Guest was a co-chairman with Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple of Walter Mondale's Democratic presidential campaign in Texas.

Guest managed former Gov. Dolph Briscoe's successful 1972 campaign.

His appointment fills the unexpired term of the late W.C. Perryman of Athens. That term expires Dec. 31. Guest will resign from the state Sesquicentennial commission to take the public safety post, the governor's office said.

U.S. Steel signs contract to acquire Texas Oil & Gas

PITTSBURGH (AP) — United States Steel Corp. said today it has signed an agreement to acquire

Texas Oil & Gas Corp., one of the nation's largest independent natural gas companies, in an exchange of stock valued at nearly $3.7 billion.

Under the agreement, shareholders of Texas Oil & Gas would receive 0.6333 share of U.S. Steel stock for each of their common shares, the nation's largest steelmaker said.

Based on a closing price Tuesday of $27.50 a share for U.S. Steel and approximately 210 million shares of Texas Oil & Gas stock outstanding, the deal would be worth $3.66 billion, or about $17.42 a share.

That is well below earlier estimates by analysts that put a price tag of Texas Oil & Gas at about $5.2 billion.

However, U.S. Steel was granted several options by Texas Oil & Gas that would protect U.S. Steel and make competing bids less attractive.

U.S. Steel was granted an option to purchase up to 38.9 million shares of unissued Texas Oil & Gas stock at $17.42 a share, something that would ensure a profit if Texas Oil & Gas were acquired by another suitor at the $24 to $25 a share that some analysts have predicted.

U.S. Steel also will be able to buy for $1.3 billion all the capital stock of three companies that represent substantially all of Texas Oil & Gas Corp.'s natural gas pipelines business. Such a "lock-up" option would enable U.S. Steel to acquire the Delhi Gas Pipeline Corp., Tonkawa Gas Processing Co. and the Neuces Co., making a takeover of the rest of the company less attractive.

U.S. Steel said that if succeeds, Texas Oil & Gas would remain a separate business based in Dallas.

Investigators say Rockwell inflated defense job costs

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Investigators for the U.S. Justice Department and Rockwell International Corp. have concluded that six Rockwell employees in Texas falsified time cards that resulted in defense contract overcharges of $300,000, according to a source close to the case.

Rockwell, the Pentagon's second-largest contractor with 1984 defense sales of $6.2 billion, was prepared to admit the irregularities as soon as the Justice Department announced the results of its investigation, said the source, who agreed to discuss the case Tuesday only on condition he not be identified.

He said Rockwell expects the department to announce as early as today a 20-count indictment alleging falsifying of time cards at the Dallas plant in 1981 and 1982.

The Dallas Morning News reported today that it would be a criminal bill of information, sometimes filed in lieu of an indictment when a plea agreement has been reached, may be filed today in Dallas.

"This is not that big of a deal," the source said. "Rockwell does $6 billion worth of work for defense and we're talking about $300,000. It was six employees, 20 time cards, and it was done totally without the knowledge of management."

In Washington on Tuesday at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on money laundering, Assistant Attorney General Stephen S. Trott defended the Justice Department's decision-making in white collar crime cases.

TroTT denied a Wall Street Journal story that said Rockwell had struck a deal in which the Justice Department would charge no individual corporate officers with crimes.

The company would plead guilty and pay $1.5 million in fines to settle the allegations, the story said. Rockwell also would be able to continue doing business with the Pentagon, the Journal quoted congressional aides and government investigators as saying.

"Every word about the Justice Department's decision-making process is dead wrong. Dead, flat wrong," Trott said.

TroTT was responding to a remark by U.S. Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., about the Justice Department's handling of white collar crime cases in which corporations are penalized but not individual company officials.

City buys lots

Pampa city commissioners met in a special called executive session Tuesday afternoon to approve the purchase of property.

The commissioners approved the purchase of Lots 44 - 48, Block 16, of the Keister Addition from Ed and Pat Brownfield for $35,000. The commission also agreed to satisfy all claims on the land asserted by the Brownfields.

The lots, located in the southeast section of the city, are the site of a currently existing water well operated by the city.

In other matters, the commission appointed Phil Vanderpool as an interim judge from Nov. 1 to Jan. 1 to assist with cases and business in the Municipal Court.

Vanderpool, who resigned the Municipal Court judge position at the end of September, will be serving as an additional judge during the period.

Lingerie party caused firing, officer claims

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A former police officer is suing Silsbee city officials for $2.2 million, alleging he was fired because his wife held an "intimate apparel party."

David C. Lusk was an officer in Silsbee, a small Hardin County community, for 3 1/2 years before he was fired on Sept. 4, 1984.

Lusk contends in his federal civil rights lawsuit that city officials fired him after falsely accusing him of involvement in unspecified criminal activity.

However, according to the suit, the officer said he was actually fired because his wife held a party to sell products from a company that markets women's lingerie, novelties and other adult items.

Named as defendants in the suit filed Friday in Beaumont are: Silsbee Police Chief Dennis M. Allen, City Manager Ronald Hickerson and the city of Silsbee.

According to the suit, Allen was offended when he heard about the lingerie party and threatened to fire Lusk.

Allen, however, denied Lusk's allegations.

"It was a personnel matter that was handled by the department and ended as such," Allen said Tuesday. "I've never threatened anybody about losing a job."

Allen declined to comment further on the suit.

Beaumont lawyer John D. Stone, who is representing Lusk, said he sent written requests to city officials asking for details on Lusk's alleged involvement in criminal activity but did not receive any additional information.

"Mr. Lusk's reputation has been unjustly injured because of this social attitude that his employer, the chief of police, had," Stone said.

Stone said the firing has marred Lusk's reputation as a police officer and has made it difficult for him to find another job in law enforcement.

The suit contends officials violated Lusk's constitutional right to privacy and violated his employment contract by unjustly firing him.

Lusk's lawsuit asks for $784,320 in actual damages resulting from the alleged breach of his employment contract and $1.5 million in punitive damages.

Officials say

Juan grew too fast to evacuate many offshore workers

HOUSTON (AP) — Hundreds of offshore oil workers were stranded in the Gulf of Mexico by Hurricane Juan because the storm grew so fast that companies were unable to conduct their standard emergency evacuations, oil industry officials say.

Other company officials speculate that the quick escalation of Juan from a tropical depression to a hurricane on Sunday also could have contributed to the loss of two jack-up oil rigs and the capsizing of a barge off the coast of Louisiana.

Three men were believed trapped in the barge and some 80 people had to be rescued and at least one man drowned after the two rigs toppled.

"There are never ideal conditions, but these were probably some of the worst," said Sarah Colletti of New Orleans-based Shell Offshore Inc., part of Shell Oil Co.

"The storm became a storm right in the middle of the oilfield," Sondra Fowler of Conoco Inc. added. "Hurricanes usually move in, but this one was created in the middle of the gulf."

Tenneco Inc. spokesman David Harpole said Tuesday that when Juan first approached the Texas coast, crews were evacuated from that area.

"When it took such an abrupt turn and began heading to the Louisiana coast, we did not have enough time to safely remove the people," he said. Tenneco had 793 people riding out the storm.

The Coast Guard would investigate the rig collapses and the barge capsizing as soon as the weather allowed crews to return to the wreckage, spokesman Keith Spangler said.

"It depends on what's left," Spangler said. "People want quick answers right away but it doesn't come that easy."

He predicted an investigation would take weeks to complete.

Oil companies, which supplement National Weather Service reports with private forecasting firms and reports from their own rigs, were left with the dilemma that the winds became too strong for helicopters to fly and the waves were too high for crew boats to navigate.

"We're basically mariners," says Barney White of Houston's Zapata Corp. "If it reaches a certain level in a storm, we automatically begin to evacuate. We were not able to do so. We really got sort of bushwacked."

In a routine storm, company procedures call for evacuations to begin with non-essential personnel when the bad weather is hundreds of miles away. As the storm approaches, production crews halt their work and the rig is abandoned. Modern platforms may continue to operate with computers controlled by onshore crews.

More than 250 rigs are operating in the Gulf of Mexico, plus numerous production platforms.

Platforms are concrete-based structures, more secure than the jack-up rigs, which are held inside giant crane-like legs resting on the sea floor. Like auto bumper jacks, they can be raised or lowered, depending on the depth of the water.

"But rigs are not supposed to have legs that collapse like that," White said of the two jack-ups that toppled. "That's most unusual. Who can explain what happened? There could be a thousand reasons."

The typical jack-up, according to White, routinely should withstand 110 mph winds.

"Our people say that the main source of the problem was that those things never really are tied down," said Tom Powell of Pennzoil. "The waves really were big and there was no chance for people to go through their typical list of procedures."

Survivors of the Penrod 61 collapse Sunday said the rig began to list, then sank, 35 miles south of Leeville, La. Thirty-nine of the 43 workers jumped into emergency escape capsules. Others dove into the water.

A spokesman for Chevron USA, which was leasing the rig from Penrod, said the company did not order immediate evacuations because they did not expect the storm to become a hurricane.

Lewis gets four 99-year terms

RICHMOND, Texas (AP) — A 21-year-old man convicted of killing his parents and two brothers was sentenced to four 99-year terms in prison, despite a defense attorney's pleas to show the defendant "love and mercy."

A Fort Bend County jury deliberated about five hours Tuesday before deciding on the maximum allowable prison term for Reginald Lewis. He was also assessed fines totaling $20,000.

Lewis was convicted of four counts of murder Monday in the Feb. 1 shooting deaths of his parents, Henry Lewis Sr., 45, and Mary Lewis, 44, and brothers, Henry Lewis Jr., 22, and Byron Lewis, 13, at their Fort Bend County home.

All four victims were shot to death with a .38-caliber revolver. The elder Lewis was found on fire in a hallway, and authorities said he may have been stabbed, beaten and strangled.

Jury forewoman Linda LeValley said Tuesday that the decision to convict Lewis was a painful one for jurors.

"I think we had the fairest jury that we could possibly have ever had. We wanted Reginald Lewis to be found innocent more than anything in the whole world," she said. "It was very dramatic ... But we also had the evidence, and the evidence was guilty."

Lewis received the maximum prison terms allowed for the four murder convictions. He could have been fined up to $40,000 for all four counts.

Under state law, he will be eligible for parole after serving 80 years.

State Sen. Craig Washington, one of the attorneys representing Lewis, said he will appeal the verdict because some jurors violated their jury oaths and did not follow court instructions.

However, Washington declined to elaborate on his allegations.

As he waited for the jury to decide his punishment, Lewis vowed he would never give up trying to prove his innocence.

"We're going to try this again. And if we lose, we'll try it again and again and again," he said.

Defense attorneys asked jurors to show Lewis "love and mercy" in deciding his punishment.

Two ministers and the defendant's grandmother testified in the punishment phase of the trial that they would help Lewis if he received a probated sentence.

"If these people are willing to forgive Reginald ... then the state of Texas should be willing to forgive him, to show love and mercy," defense attorney Don Bankston said before the jury began deliberating Lewis' fate.

Prosecutors argued Lewis deserved a life sentence. Shortly after the slayings, a probate court named Lewis the sole heir to the family's estate, worth about $267,000. Police had claimed Lewis killed his family for financial gain, but prosecutors never presented a motive.

No murder weapon was found and there were no witnesses. Prosecutors relied heavily on laboratory tests and expert testimony in presenting their case.

An officer with the Houston Police Department's crime lab testified during the two-week trial that blood found on Reginald Lewis' jeans, T-shirt, jacket and shoes belonged to Henry Lewis Sr., the only family member with type O blood.

FCC postpones consideration of Murdoch request

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission on Tuesday postponed consideration of publisher Rupert Murdoch's request to take over six Metromedia television stations.

A vote on the request had been scheduled for Thursday, but there has been a flurry of last-minute petitions to deny the transfer approval.

No explanation was given for the postponement. An announcement from the FCC said Chairman Mark S. Fowler had requested the postponement, but an aide said Fowler and his key advisers were unavailable to explain the move.

A report in Tuesday's Wall Street Journal said the commission was ready to approve the takeover and give Murdoch the two-year waiver he had requested to sell the Chicago Sun-Times and New York Post.

Meteorologist: hindsight dictates warning; but circumstances didn't

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Nearly three months after Jack Williams opted not to issue a severe-weather warning to a doomed Delta Air Lines Flight 191, he says, "I wish I had, knowing what I know now."

But Williams, chief meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Worth, nevertheless stood by his actions Tuesday during the first day of hearings into the Aug. 2 crash that left 137 people dead.

"I wouldn't have done anything different based on the information we had at the time," he told a National Transportation Safety Board panel in proceedings that were to resume today. "We had nothing to indicate severe weather."

Testimony about the weather cell — which crept up on forecasters and the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport before turning into a lethal mass of colliding winds — dominated Tuesday's hearing.

Conditions were calm and dry at the airport not long before the 6:06 p.m. crash, but within minutes, heavy rains swirled around the airport and winds that had breezed the area at 0-7 mph howled as high as 70 mph, records show.

Williams defended his decision not to issue a severe-weather warning, saying none of the data the weather service gathered on scattered rainstorms in the area suggested anything as deadly as that encountered by the Lockheed 0 the ground.

"Once the condition existed, we chose not to issue a warning," said Williams, "one of 32 witnesses scheduled to testify this week before the NTSB. "It was too late."

Compounding that problem, a weather radar scope used to monitor conditions around the airport went unwatched for 45 minutes while the meteorologist went out to dinner, said Jack Hicks, FAA assistant manager for traffic management.

Weather service meteorologist Richard Douglass, who testified he left the Center Weather Unit to eat from 5:25 p.m. to 6:10 p.m., said the radar showed no evidence of thunderstorm activity on his departure.

Douglass said he thought a weather coordinator would monitor the radar in his absence. But Hicks later said the coordinator, identified as Bob Berg, was neither qualified to read the instruments nor assigned to do so. Federal officials refused to give out the telephone numbers of Berg's office, and telephone calls to listings with the name Berg failed to locate him. He was not scheduled to testify during this week's hearings.

A ghostly experience

There are those of you who think I haven't got both oars in the water. Well, after this column, you'll be convinced.

Call this a "believe it or not" column, but I just can't resist telling my first person account of a ghost story one day before Halloween. It's one of those things that can't be explained.

A man tried to break into my apartment once while I was living in Amarillo. Anyone who has experienced such a thing knows how unsettling it can be, and also how this violation of your personal space makes you feel like something else is going to happen any time.

This is the background information, to let you know my frame of mind at the time I encountered a ghost.

My children and I lived in a townhouse, two bedrooms upstairs, living room, dining room and kitchen downstairs. One night I awoke from a really funny dream and saw a man standing at the top of the staircase. He had one foot on the top step and the other on the landing, his hand rested on the bannister. He was a Hispanic, early 20s, moustache, dark short hair. He was wearing dark tan corduroy pants, and a light tan shirt with the sleeves rolled just below the elbows.

Oh, God! I thought, someone has gotten into my house! I grabbed the telephone beside my bed and called my brother who lived across town. I looked up after dialing, and the man was gone. "There's a man in my house," I whispered into the phone. I continued to talk to my sister-in-law as my brother and a friend drove over.

When they arrived, I let them in. The front and back doors were still locked. The windows were all locked. No sign anywhere that the house had been broken into. We looked under beds, in closets, everywhere we could think of. There was no one!

Sheepishly, I thanked them for coming over and locked up behind them. The next day Keith brought me a burglar alarm.

Every night I set the alarm up with the beam across the living room where it would be broken by anyone entering the front door, the windows or who might try to go up the stairs. I made sure no drafts would go across it, which can also set it off.

Almost every night that darn alarm would go off. Legs quaking, I would go downstairs to reset it and check everything out. Never could I find anything that would set it off.

As summer got hotter and hotter, I began sleeping on my hide-a-bed in the living room where the air conditioner would blow on me. One night I was awakened by a piercing scream - my daughter, Angel. As I got ready to run up the stairs to see what was wrong, I saw (here's where you'll think my sanity has left me) two legs and an arm coming down the stairs - one step at a time. It was all arranged as it was supposed to be on a body, except not all the body was there. The hand was touching the bannister, synchronized with each step.

I may have been terrified at what I saw, but not even a ghost will keep a mother from seeing if her children are okay. I ran right through the apparition on my way to the kids' room.

I don't remember what Angel was screaming about now, but it didn't have anything to do with seeing a ghost. I think Three (who was a tiny kitten at that time) had pounced on her foot while she was sleeping and scared her.

After that experience, I was beginning to wonder about my own sanity. A neighbor told me that a Hispanic family had lived in that apartment before, and the man had looked like the man I had seen, but nothing had ever happened in the apartment.

Finally, I came to the conclusion that if it was a ghost it must not mean to do us any harm. The one time I got a good look at him, he was smiling.

Shortly before we moved back to Pampa — by then all three of us were sleeping on the hide-a-bed to keep cool — Angel woke me up: "Who was that, Mommy?" she asked.

"Who was who?" I mumbled.
"That man."
"What man?"
"The man that just walked into our kitchen!"
"It's okay, Angel. Go back to sleep."
I didn't have the nerve to ask her what he looked like.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE
Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Business causes many regulations

You would think that in the United States of America a person or a company would always have the right to charge a price for the goods or services it produces — and that it would be free to deny its goods or services to those unwilling to pay the price.

But that is not necessarily true. For proof, consider the current squabble over plans by the cable television industry to scramble signals transmitted from satellites in space to prevent persons from receiving programs unless they pay for them.

The Satellite Television Industry Association, the people who make and sell backyard satellite dishes, wants Congress to make it illegal for the cable television people to scramble the signals. The reason, of course, is that they won't be able to sell as many dishes if the dishes are rendered incapable of receiving signals from space satellites. Never mind that the cable people spent millions of dollars putting those satellites in space and, under any kind of logic, should be free to refuse to provide signals to those who don't pay to receive them.

You say that Congress would never consider such legislation? You're wrong. One year ago legislation was passed prohibiting the scrambling of signals from space until decoders were widely available. The satellite dish-makers now want Congress to extend the ban for another two years and to prohibit the cable folks from setting the price on the decoders they sell and from setting the fee for each service it is programmed to decode.

That, of course, is nothing but a request for Congress to legalize theft. But don't get the idea the cable television people who own the orbiting satellites are paragons of free enterprise, either. A year ago they wanted legislation making it illegal for owners of the backyard dishes to receive their programs. Congress was right in rejecting that legislative request, but it was wrong in establishing the ban against scrambling.

A dish owner should have the right to pick up any signals he can; the people sending the signals should have the right to prevent him from picking them up without paying if they can figure out how to do it. That is how the free market works.

This squabble perfectly illustrates why there are so many government regulations over business. They are urged on by business, itself, in efforts to hold down competition. People who already have licenses to operate a particular type of business want to make it as difficult as possible for others to obtain licenses. Businesses capable of complying with stringent regulations want to keep those regulations to make it more difficult for new competitors to enter the field. The purpose of most business regulation is not to protect the consumer; it is to protect business.

And until private enterprise stops demanding that government pass laws aimed at either holding down competition or giving one type of firm an advantage over the other, complaints from business leaders about the disadvantages of unnecessary government regulations will not sound very convincing.

Liberation efforts blocked

WASHINGTON - Recent dispute about American policy toward Angola offers two opportunities for diplomatic new beginnings - at home and abroad.

Angolan rebel leader Jonas Savimbi and his UNITA forces have been highly successful in prosecuting a guerrilla war against the Marxist government in Luanda. In a reversal of the Vietnam scenario, whole sections of the country have been under UNITA control, with the nominal authorities reduced to protecting urban enclaves and fighting, for the most part, a defensive battle.

Should Savimbi actually oust the Marxist government, the effects on Southern Africa, and the rest of the globe, would be profound. The so-called "Brezhnev doctrine" - proclaiming that once a state has turned Communist it can never go back - would be repudiated. The Cold War momentum that has seen a steady stream of countries in Asia, Latin America, and Africa drawn into the Communist orbit would be reversed.

Propped up by Soviet aid and Cuban bayonets, however, the Angolan Marxists won't go quietly. Only if Savimbi receives some countervailing assistance from the West is he likely to win his struggle. Much the same applies to anti-Communist rebel forces in Nicaragua, Afghanistan, and Cambodia. Thus the importance of the current bi-partisan effort in Congress to vote some $27 million in U.S. aid for the UNITA movement.

All of this is fully in keeping with the strategy of liberation frequently proclaimed by Ronald Reagan and others in his administration - and exercised in direct if limited fashion two years ago in Grenada. The problem is that the Reagan State Department doesn't believe in such a strategy for a minute. Despite occasional lip service to the "Reagan doctrine" by Secretary of State George Schultz, our diplomatic corps is pursuing a very different program - in Angola and other zones of East-West conflict.

For instance, when Congress lifted the Clark amendment that prohibited aid to the Angolan anti-Communists, the State Department alternately sought to sabotage the effort and/or do nothing. More recently, Schultz has tried to stave off congressional moves to provide assistance for UNITA - getting his knuckles rapped by House Minority leader Robert Michel (R-IL.), Rep. Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.), and other congressional spokesmen in the aftermath.

Thus we have the anomaly - often seen in this administration - of the president saying one thing and his subordinates doing quite another. The identical sequence unfolded a few months back when the House of Representatives voted help for non-Communist rebel forces in Cambodia, and Schultz opposed it. Similar undermining of stated Reaganite objectives has occurred in conduct of policy toward Afghanistan, Nicaragua, and Mozambique.

Instead of pursuing a liberation strategy against such Marxist governments, the business-as-usual types at State (and other agencies) want an accommodation. They have encouraged U.S.

business dealings and Ex-Im bank credits for the Luanda government, arguing that this will lead to a negotiated settlement. They have urged a similar course toward the Marxist regime in Mozambique, including military aid, on Africa's southeastern flank.

In these initiatives and many others, the State Department exhibits the mind-set that has dominated the agency for years, long before the advent of Ronald Reagan. At State, the Brezhnev doctrine is implicitly (and sometimes explicitly) accepted: Once a Marxist government is in power, you try to work with it rather than against it. Detente and accommodation, not guerrilla insurrections, are the standard operating practice.

This continuity of outlook stems from the fact that, in case after case, the same people are making and implementing foreign policy as in years past. To an overwhelming degree, the agency nowadays is still being run by foreign service professionals and hold-overs from the pre-Reagan era. After the purge conducted last year by Schultz, it is doubtful if there are a dozen authentic Reaganites in the department, and those who remain are isolated and under siege.

Hence the two-fold opportunity for Reagan supporters in the current dispute: First, to give aid to Savimbi, and other anti-Communist freedom fighters around the world. Second, to clean house at the State Department, ridding it of detente enthusiasts and business-as-usual bureaucrats who constantly undercut the Reagan program.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, October 30, the 303rd day of 1985. There are 62 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Oct. 30, 1938, Earth was invaded by Mars, or so it seemed, in the radio play "The War of the Worlds," starring Orson Welles. The CBS radio drama, which employed fake news bulletins, caused panic among listeners who thought the invasion was real.

On this date: Ten years ago: Despite a threatened presidential veto, the Senate Banking Committee approved legislation to provide $4 billion loan guarantee to prevent default by New York City.

Five years ago: The Iranian Parliament postponed its first public debate on the American hostages after failing to obtain a quorum of assembly members.

One year ago: Authorities in Poland announced they had found the body of the Reverend Jerzy Popieluszko in a reservoir, 11 days after members of the secret police kidnapped the pro-Solidarity priest. Four police officers were sentenced in February to prison terms ranging from 14 to 25 years.

Let's include the families

However languages differ, all laughter and all pain sound the same.

However ideologies differ, world leaders have filiality, love of family.

For all the divergent interests dividing the U.S. and the U.S.S.R., both great nations publicly embraced little Samantha Smith.

A girl of 13 was a catalyst adequate to elicit mutual responses of affection and admiration and grief.

In international diplomacy we have tried everything except one thing.

Old men make wars. Young men fight them. Their children pay for them.

Yet, notably absent from all our peace-or-war negotiations are our children.

Nov. 19-20 in Geneva our President Reagan and Soviet leader Gorbachev will meet.

This Soviet leader is the first in generations of Soviet leaders to smile. He has managed to project an image of the reasonable, peace-loving statesman.

This conciliatory public image is in his favor now, and it prepares the world to blame any failure of these peace talks on us.

What if -

And please do not discount this suggestion without some contemplation -

What if our President were to invite the Soviet leader to "include the families" in this upcoming get-together.

Including the children.

Including the grandchildren.

The social activities preliminary to negotiations would have an entirely different atmosphere if the attention focus were shifted from subtle maneuvering to preoccupation with the next generation.

It might not work. In business, in academia and in the professions family get-togethers sometimes generate more friction than friendship.

But it works the other way enough times to be worth a try.

President Reagan has wanted to see himself presented more objectively in Soviet TV. This would do that.

It may be that the Soviet mentality is so committed to psychological warfare that there is no real interest in real peace.

If they decline our invitation to invite the families that recalcitrance would be stripped naked.

Taiwan booming despite U.S. policy

By Don Graft

TAIPEI, Taiwan (NEA) - This is really two cities in one.

There is the old Taipei along the Tan Sui River, a place of cramped, twisting streets where sidewalks, where they exist at all, are narrow and virtually impassable for pedestrians. They've been commandeered as parking lots for multitudes of motorbikes.

This is the city, whose main artery is Chungking Road, that Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists found when they hastily moved their capital here in 1949 as the communists were overrunning the mainland.

Another Taipei has come into being in the years since. It is a modern city of wide, straight boulevards lined with high-rise construction that, with busy Nanking Road as its axis, advances steadily eastward. There is no indication that this relentless urban expansion is likely to stop until the city finally collides with the mountains that ring it.

The new Taipei is a city in constant flux, and on this first visit in two years, change is obvious. Traffic, for one thing, is heavier, with a higher proportion of four-wheeled vehicles and far fewer bicycles, the basic form of personal transportation in the developing world and still predominate on the mainland.

It might, in fact, be argued that developing is no longer an accurate label for Taiwan. In some respects, it has become highly developed. Chiang Kai-shek International Airport, 25 miles to the west of the city, is claimed to be the most modern in Asia. It could well be. It is certainly more efficiently laid out than Tokyo's Narita.

Superlatives are invoked in other respects. Taiwan claims the highest rate of school-age attendance (99.9 percent) in Asia and a standard of living second only to Japan's. Per capita annual income is $2,755 and the goal is $6,200 by the end of the decade. The economy is one of the dynamos of Asia. Foreign trade last year totaled $52.41 billion, with exports exceeding imports by $8.49 billion.

By any reckoning, Taiwan, with a population of some 20 million, ranks high among the world's nations.

Yet this is not a nation. That is one point upon which the Nationalists who rule here are in complete and unshakable agreement with the Communists in Beijing, China, both maintain, is one country of which Taiwan is an inseparable part.

(Not such an ancient part, however, as Chinese history goes. It was annexed by the empire in 1206, and large-scale immigration from the mainland didn't get underway until the 17th century.)

When governments other than the two most immediately concerned concur with this "one China" policy, however, it usually does not work to the advantage of Taipei. Since Washington "normalized" relations with the mainland and severed diplomatic ties with the Nationalists in 1978, U.S. interests here have been tended by the American Institute in Taiwan, an embassy in all but name. Most other nations have made similar arrangements.

So the official diplomatic list in Taipei is now very short, comprising the likes of South Korea, South Africa, Saudi Arabia and a clutch of Latin American countries including - are you ready for this? - Marxist Nicaragua. A grateful Taipei, in return for Nicaraguan diplomatic support, is lending the Sandinistas a helping hand with a number of aid programs; primarily in agricultural development.

The short shrift Taiwan has received diplomatically is not holding it back in other respects. The building goes on, in full confidence, it would appear, that the island has a promising economic future, whatever lies ahead politically.

But some things, it appears, may never change. These days it is frequently no easier to negotiate the wide sidewalks along Nanking Road than the narrow old ones on Chungking Road.

The new ones, too, have become parking areas for multitudes of shiny motorbikes.

Fight expected over nerve gas, 'Star Wars' in defense appropriation bill

RIDE TO SAFETY — Lubbock policemen carry an elderly resident to safety from a fire in the Pioneer Retirement Hotel. The fire started Tuesday afternoon in a fifth floor room, the result of an electrical overload, firemen said. Over 100 residents were evacuated from the smoke-filled 60-year-old building in downtown Lubbock. (AP Lasedphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — New fights are likely over spending for nerve gas and "Star Wars" antimissile research when the House takes up a bill which would freeze Pentagon spending for the current fiscal year.

The $292 billion appropriation bill was scheduled for floor debate today, a day after the House gave voice vote approval to a separate measure authorizing the Pentagon to spend a record $302 billion.

Meanwhile, the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee is scheduled to begin marking up its version of the bill appropriating $302 billion for the Defense Department. The differing versions enacted by the two chambers will be reconciled later in a conference committee.

Whatever finally emerges from the appropriation bills will be far less than President Reagan originally sought in what would have been the last year of his record five-year defense build-up.

Reagan asked for $322 billion for the fiscal year which began Oct. 1. That would have been a 5.9 percent increase, adjusted for inflation, from last year's $292 billion Pentagon budget. But he has said he would approve the figure in the Senate bill.

The Republican-controlled Senate authorized a $302 billion budget, an increase to account for inflation, while the Democratic-run House voted for a flat freeze at $292 billion. The conference committee accepted the Senate figure.

Now, House Democrats have vowed to fight for the $292 billion total in the separate appropriation bill which is needed to actually spend the money.

The $302 billion authorization measure contains a larger spending amount because it includes programs that will be funded in appropriation measures in future years.

Two major disputes are expected over nerve gas, the only weapon denied President Reagan as part of his Pentagon build-up, and Star Wars research to find a high-tech space shield against nuclear attack.

The authorization bill approved by the House on Tuesday, and the Senate last July, permits new chemical weapons for the first time since 1969. But $163 million for the Army program was knocked out of the appropriation bill last week when the Appropriations Committee passed the measure.

Rep. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., was readying an amendment to put the money back into the measure. Unless he is successful in what is expected to be a close vote, the Army program would still be blocked because without the appropriations approval, no money could be spent even though the service would be authorized on paper to go ahead.

For the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is known formally, the appropriation bill provides $2.5 billion, a 79 percent hike over last year's $1.4 billion total but less than Reagan's $3.7 billion request.

Opponents lost last week when they tried to cut the research amount to $2.1 billion in the Appropriations Committee, but new attacks were expected during floor debate today.

While nerve gas was eliminated, thousands of other weapons remained, including:

—940 M-1 tanks and 716 Bradley Fighting Vehicles.

—One Trident missile-firing submarine and four attack subs.

—48 B-1 bombers; 84 Navy F-18 jets, 48 F-15 jets, 180 F-16s and 16 C-5B cargo planes.

—Three Aegis-class cruisers, three amphibious ships for the Marines and two Navy oilers.

—12 MX nuclear missiles, 344 cruise missiles and 585 Patriot surface-to-air missiles.

—144 Apache attack helicopters.

Here's Help, If Cause is Sebum

HOUSTON, Texas—If you have symptoms of "sebum" hair loss; oily or greasy forehead; dandruff, dry or oily; itchy scalp; and if your hair pulls out easily on top of your head, chances are excellent that you can now reduce your hair loss...stimulate hair growth...and reverse the balding process.

A firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for excessive hair loss caused by "sebum", that is so successful, they don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself.

According to FTC the great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, how can you be sure what is actually causing YOUR excessive hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR problem. Many conditions can cause excessive hair loss.

Everyone has a full head of hair until some time after puberty. In the case of hair loss caused by "sebum", the problem starts when the male hormone production reaches its peak. This causes an excessive discharge of toxic sebum, which if not properly controlled, will gradually destroy the hair-producing cells on top of the head.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and, if you wait until you are sick bald and your hair-producing cells are destroyed, you are beyond help.

So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to reverse the balding process...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days...at their risk...if you have the sebum symptoms and are not already sick bald. Just send them the information below. Or, call them toll-free at 1-800-231-7157 (in Texas 1-800-833-8387) 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday thru Thursday and they will send complete information. Senate Demos approve trade package

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats were set to unveil today a five-point trade package designed to spur the Reagan administration to closer consultation with Congress before new international bargaining begins.

The outline, which stops short of strict tariff legislation offered earlier by key Democrats, on Tuesday became the first trade package approved by the Senate Democratic Caucus this year.

The package is the product of a group of 12 Democratic senators headed by Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, a chief sponsor of the earlier tariff measure. Senate aides said, however, that the new version does not signal any move by Bentsen to back away from the tougher measure.

The package approved in the closed-door caucus was the latest of several sweeping measures designed to grapple with a projected $150 billion trade deficit this year.

These measures differ from most of the more than 300 trade bills in the hopper because they tackle several broad issues — international bargaining, the high value of the dollar and foreign import barriers in general — rather than focusing on the problems of one industry, such as textiles or shoes.

The new package, like rival trade plans offered by both parties in the House, would not require mandatory retaliation against foreign trade barriers. Instead, it includes these points:

—Before the start of trade talks, the administration would be required to tell congressional committees of its preparations, goals and probable concessions. The panels would have 60 days to weigh the plan and, if they approved, whatever agreements the negotiations produced would get fast-track consideration from Congress.

—The president would receive 10-year authority to negotiate reforms in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade with the objective of toughening enforcement machinery.

—A National Trade Data Bank would be created to aid domestic industry and government negotiators.

—A National Trade Council would be established, replacing the existing Trade Policy Council. The new group would be based in the White House and headed by the president, with the U.S. trade representative as chairman pro tempore. The goal would be to strengthen the trade representative's role.

—A Commission on Trade in the 1990s would be established.

NATO issues statement against alleged Soviet treaty violations

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO allies today called on the Soviet Union to cease what they said are violations of U.S.-Soviet arms control accords, and endorsed U.S. arms negotiating positions prior to the superpower summit meeting.

In a statement at the close of two days of talks among allied defense ministers, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization expressed concern over U.S. reports of Soviet treaty violations.

"We take the most serious view of this and call on the new Soviet leadership to take the steps necessary to assure full compliance with its commitments," the statement said.

The 13 NATO nations endorsed the U.S. approach to arms control negotiations with the Soviets, and said the alliance was united behind the United States as it approaches the Nov. 19-20 summit.

"On the eve of the meeting between President Reagan and General Secretary (Mikhail Gorbachev we declare that the president goes to Geneva with the full support and solidarity of the alliance," the ministers said.

The final declaration did not, however, specifically say NATO supported American "Star Wars" research into a space-based defense system against nuclear missiles, a major obstacle to progress in U.S.-Soviet arms control talks.

Several NATO nations have turned down a U.S. invitation to join the research, and some have expressed concern about its implications for future arms control agreements with the Soviet Union.

The United States had sought the joint NATO statement citing alleged Soviet arms violations. But some European nations, including Britain, a close U.S. ally, argued that judgments on treaty compliance are strictly a U.S.-Soviet affair.

None of the United States' NATO allies is a signatory to either the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty or the 1979 SALT II accords.

In an opening session Tuesday, U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger presented spy photographs and other evidence to support his charge that the Soviets are breaching terms of the ABM treaty and SALT II.

Manfred Woerner, the West German defense minister, told reporters he was impressed by evidence presented by Weinberger showing deployment of SS-25 intercontinental nuclear missiles.

Woerner said Weinberger showed pictures of SS-25s deployed in three locations in the Soviet Union. Woerner did not say how many had been installed.

The Reagan administration contends the SS-25 deployments are a violation of the 1979 SALT II agreement, which never was ratified by the U.S. Senate but which both sides pledged to observe.

The Soviets say the SS-25 is permissible under SALT II because it is a modification of an existing intercontinental missile.

Officials said Weinberger also presented intelligence data on a new radar system being built in Siberia which U.S. officials contend is a violation of the 1972 ABM treaty. The Soviets deny that it violates the treaty.

PUC issues new travel regulations

AUSTIN (AP) — Employees of the Public Utility Commission have new travel rules to follow as a result of recent reports of expensive meals and posh hotel bills charged to Texas taxpayers.

"Please be assured that all travel by PUC personnel will be carefully monitored to ensure compliance, not only with the state's requirements but with the more strict requirements we have established as well," PUC Commissioner Peggy Rosson said in a letter to Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont.

Stiles had questioned commission travel policies after reports that high-ranking officials put $210-a-night hotel rooms and lavish meals on their expense accounts without furnishing receipts.

Rosson, who is acting chairman since Phil Ricketts resigned earlier this month, said in a memorandum to PUC division supervisors that employees should attempt to stay in hotel rooms that cost $70 or less a night, as required of other state employees.

If the hotel room costs runs more, particularly in Washington or New York, an effort must be made to get the most reasonable rate available.

Rosson told employees to document the names of hotels within a reasonable distance from meetings and furnish receipts.

"Any cost over $70 per night must be justified," she said.

She said the commission would review travel expenses four times a year.

Kids who pass this conventional school eye test may see the blackboard fine from the back of the room. But how about up close? Studies prove your child may be one of 15 million school-aged children with reading disabilities due to a visual deficiency this test can't detect.

Is your child giving you any of these early detection warnings?
• Book held only 7 or 8 inches from the eyes
• Makes errors when copying

- Uses finger to trace lines in his books
- Writes or prints poorly
- Short attention span while reading
- Closes or covers one eye

Proper vision therapy using a series of vision exercises and sometimes combined with proper corrective lenses can successfully help many of these problems. Don't take chances with your child's sight. Resident: separatist cult taking over church

BERKELEY HEIGHTS, N.J. (AP) — Disciples of an 1,100-member religious sect are practicing "subtle brain-washing," moving into this quiet suburb in droves and gaining control of the local Roman Catholic church and school, alarmed parishioners say.

People of Hope subordinates its women, discourages social contact with non-members, arranges marriages and moves teen-age disciples to "households" for indoctrination, charges Janice Ross, founder of Concerned Citizens of Berkeley Heights.

But the Rev. Pierce Byrne, pastor of Little Flower Church, members of the Catholic-based sect and Catholic officials say the People of Hope, which has 1,100 followers throughout the state, is recognized by the church.

"It's a group within a group," said Michael Hurley, a spokesman for the Archdiocese of Newark. "It's a legitimate Catholic charismatic community."

Mrs. Ross' group has called for the ouster of Byrne, pastor of the church for eight years, claiming he has allowed the sect to misuse parish funds for its segregated activities.

"They are sort of like fundamentalists or pentecostals and their treatment of women is very Islamic," Mrs. Ross said Tuesday. "From what ex-members tell us, it's a form of subtle brain-washing."

About 200 residents opposed to People of Hope demonstrated Sunday outside the church. The controversy prompted Bishop Dominic Marconi, vicar of Union County, to organize a special church committee to look into the dispute.

Letters from Marconi to the 1,300 families who attend Little Flower were mailed Tuesday, outlining a plan to ease what Byrne called a misunderstanding.

Since 1982, the number of People of Hope families living in this community of 17,000 residents has grown from 10 to 80, and the sect's leaders have built seven spacious homes on 90 acres they purchased in neighboring Warren Township.

The group has flooded the Little Flower School with its children, opened a high school in Warren where 85 sect students are enrolled, and its members have established a foothold in the business community.

Sect members include an attorney, a construction company owner and an accountant. Last month, a member opened up a real estate business.

Residents said they are concerned because the group uses financial leverage to entice people into its fold, then prevent them from leaving.

As an example, Mrs. Ross said, well-to-do members of the group help others buy houses and thereby keep the new members indebted to them. And she said that young couples and teen-agers whose parents live some distance away move in with other families and are subjugated by church coordinators.

"It's unbelievable how sheepish these people are," said Jack Riley, another parish member with children at Little Flower School. "The wives of the coordinators are called 'handmaidens.'"

Soviet ambassador confirms report

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Soviet ambassador to West Germany said today he believes the wife of Soviet dissident Andrei D. Sakharov has official permission to travel to the West for medical care.

Ambassador Vladimir Semyonov's comments were the first made publicly by any Soviet official about the possibility that Yelena G. Bonner will be allowed to leave the Soviet Union for treatment of an eye ailment.

"I have read that she intends to do it, but I don't know when she plans to go or where," Semyonov said.

Brenham couple make a dream come true

BRENHAM, Texas (AP) — Because she loves cooking so much, Emily Urban had always wanted to open a restaurant. Her husband, Loren, shared that dream.

Last March, they opened the Ole Washington Inn east of Brenham, a about four miles from Texas Highway 105 on Farm to Market Road 2193.

The Urbans worked in a printing business for 35 years before retiring to the site where they built their home and restaurant.

Urban says they're never going to retire, they "just changed occupations in 1984."

"We traveled a lot and picked up ideas from little restaurants, combined them and wound up with the fulfillment of a dream," Mrs. Urban said.

But Mrs. Urban, who does almost all the cooking at the Old Washington Inn, had never run a restaurant or even cooked in one although she had cooked for organizations.

"I just like to cook," she said. "It's my forte."

She said she's mainly "just a housewife," and added, "I'm not a chef."

"We have a saying over the door as you come in, 'It's good home cooking.'"

Urban smiles at her modesty and says, "We've been successful because she is a chef."

"Whatever you enjoy doing, you do it to the best of your ability," she said.

Urban said one of his wife's most popular dishes is her gumbo, of which she makes four gallons at a time.

"It takes three or four hours," she said. "It's the roux that takes so long."

The Ole Washington Inn specializes in fresh seafood dishes. Mrs. Urban believes her seafood dishes are special because she grew up on seafood in Louisiana. She says her family has always enjoyed seafood and she has had a lot of opportunity to practice cooking the dishes.

"We lived in New Orleans for several years," she said. "That's where I really developed the knack for fish."

"When we were newlyweds, every Friday night we bought five pounds of shrimp. It was our treat of the week. Of course, that's when shrimp was 50 cents a pound."

Emily said the secret of her special shrimp is her beer batter. "They puff up pretty and light," she said.

Although the recipe is worth it, she has to mix the batter 10 times a night because it goes flat quickly.

Everything is prepared fresh, the Urbans said.

"Nothing is pre-prepared," Mrs. Urban said. "We use low cholesterol oils because we eat a lot of our own cooking. I have to confess, though, we use a lot of real butter in our pies."

She bakes fresh pies daily, including her specialties — pecan, sweet potato (made with two shots of bourbon), peach, pumpkin, apple, lemon, chocolate and coconut.

"We have a full-fledged bakery," she said, "with pies, bread and rolls. People are becoming very health-conscious, so we bake without preservatives."

The restaurant runs a special every week, "depending on what we can buy," Urban said.

"We don't use any fancy names on anything," Mrs. Urban said. "If it's a stuffed crab, we call it a stuffed crab."

The restaurant may not use fancy names, but it does use humorous ones. Each steak is named after a Texas hero. For example, a Sam Houston is a 12-ounce ribeye and a William B. Travis is a 10-ounce strip. The fried chicken is named after Santa Anna, the Mexican general defeated in the Texas war for independence.

Mrs. Urban laughed and said the play on Santa Anna's name is the only one with an underlying meaning. "We tried to stick with Texas names."

The Urbans chose the site for the restaurant 17 years ago. "We considered where the highway was and thought if we built it right on the highway we would have to be open seven days a week," Urban said. "We believed a good, quality restaurant would draw local people."

With this in mind, they chose a site away from the highway.

The Urbans designed a log cabin and sent off for a kit. A local contractor constructed it for them.

The inn overlooks a small pond complete with geese, ducks and peacocks. The Urbans also have a guest house that is available "when the kids aren't using it."

They have a son and daughter and three grandchildren.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Oct. 31, 1985

In the year ahead, you will be bombarded by numerous opportunities. They will come thick and fast, but will be fleeting. You'll have to act swiftly to capitalize.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be extra cautious and prudent in your commercial dealings today. If you suspect something is wrong, call a halt to everything until it's corrected. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, Box 1846, Cincinnati, OH 45201.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't put too much weight on an arrangement where you share something of potential value with another. Each party may expect more than is feasible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Tested and proven procedures will be the most productive today. This is not a good time to experiment with shortcuts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You might get an urgent request today to do something out of the ordinary for a pal. Before you respond, be sure it's necessary.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let victory slip from your hands today. If you start out in a strong position, be careful not to take foolish actions to weaken it.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't exaggerate your financial position today and pretend you have more than you actually have. You'll be in awkward straits if someone requests a donation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't let a friend get you involved in something too rich for your means today. You don't have to mull what your pal spends.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you fail to think for yourself today, people who don't have your best interests at heart may make decisions for you that won't be to your advantage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be certain that any work or service you require from others today is assigned to craftsmen who truly possess the expertise to do a good job.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Proceed at a measured pace today if you are involved in a new enterprise or venture. Mistakes made in the early stages will be hard to rectify later.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your actions will be closely scrutinized by others today, so be sure that your behavior doesn't reflect poorly upon your reputation or image.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may be dissuaded from a wise course of action today because you might listen to a person who doesn't fully understand your intentions.

FOOD

Zesty Zebra Loaf

Variation on melted cheese sandwich

For anyone who likes melted cheese sandwiches, here is a delicious variation that takes the basic idea of the melted cheese sandwich and turns it into a taste-tempting conversation piece. Called a Zebra Loaf, it is a happy hodge-podge of different cheese and breads. The appealing thing about this recipe is not only the variety of favorite cheese flavors but also the interesting contrast of complimentary breads. There is a robustly sharp Cheddar and a pungent Parmesan contrasting with the less flamboyant flavors of cream cheese and mozzarella. The cheeses are all blended together, then spread on assorted bread slices; rich rye bread, flavorful dijon rye and hearty dark pumpernickel. The slices are then all pressed together to form a loaf, wrapped in foil and heated in the oven until all the cheeses melt and meld together. It is when the loaf is finally cut diagonally into slices that the delightful "zebra" stripes are visible. Highly versatile, this Zebra Loaf can be served as the mainstay at a luncheon or again as an unusual party loaf replacing the calvacade of canapes everyone has grown so used to eating at parties.

ZEBRA LOAF
 1-3rd c. soft butter or margarine
 1 lb. mozzarella cheese, shredded
 1 bar (10 oz.) sharp Cheddar cheese, shredded
 1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese
 1/2 c. grated Parmesan cheese
 6 slices dijon rye bread
 6 slices seedless rye bread
 7 slices pumpernickel bread

In a bowl, mix butter and all cheeses. Spread mixture between breads, alternating slices and beginning and ending with pumpernickel to make a long striped loaf. Place loaf on a greased piece of foil. Bake for 25 to 30 minutes at 350 degrees or until cheeses are melted. Cut loaf while hot into diagonal slices so pieces are cut across the striped loaf. Serve hot with pickled cherry peppers, olives and a tossed green salad. Makes eight to 10 servings.

DELICIOUS ZEBRA LOAF is a delectable combination of different cheeses mixed and spread on seedless rye, Dijon rye and pumpernickel bread slices. It makes an ideal replacement for the usual collection of canapes for party giving or can be served as a luncheon mainstay.

Microwave version of ginger jam

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
 Associated Press Food Editor

As I looked through the recently published "The Great Microwave Dessert Cookbook" by Thelma Pressman (Contemporary), I found the author had converted a recipe of mine for thick ginger jam from rangetop to microwave cooking.

In both my original rangetop and Thelma Pressman's microwave version, peeled sliced fresh gingerroot is cooked without stirring. After that the ginger is chopped and mixed with water, lemon juice and fruit pectin and brought to a boil; then sugar is added and the mixture brought to a boil again.

In the rangetop method the chopped ginger mixture is stirred until it comes to a boil and given 5 more minutes of stirring after the sugar is added. In the microwave method even these two very short stirring times are avoided. If you are a devotee of microwave cooking, you may wish to try the Pressman method.

One word of caution: in making ginger jam by any method you need to use fresh, tender gingerroot so the jam will not be fibrous.

GINGER JAM
 (Microwave Version)
 1 pound (approximately) fresh gingerroot
 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 1 1/2-ounce package powdered fruit pectin
 5 cups sugar

Using a swivel-blade peeler, remove outer skin from gingerroot and cut ginger into 1-inch-thick slices. Place in a 5-quart casserole and fill 3/4 full with cold water. Cook on high (600-700 watts) 25 minutes (it should boil for 15 minutes and will take about 10 minutes to reach boiling point). Drain ginger in colander. Return to casserole and fill 3/4 full with cold water. Cook on high until ginger is tender-crisp and can be pierced with a fork, about 45 minutes. Let stand, covered, about 10 minutes. Drain in colander, return to casserole, and fill 3/4 full with fresh cold water. Let stand 15 minutes, then drain well.

In food processor or by hand, chop ginger until it is the size of rice grains. (I leave mine a little thicker for additional texture). Do not puree.

You should have about 2 1/2 cups of chopped ginger. Place it in the casserole. Add 1 cup cold water, lemon juice, and fruit pectin. Cook on high until mixture comes to a full boil, about 5 minutes. Immediately stir in all sugar. Continue cooking on high until it again reaches a rolling boil. Allow it to boil hard for a full minute.

Remove from microwave and use metal spoon to skim off any foam that might appear on the top.

Immediately ladle into hot clean jars, leaving 1/4 inch space at top. With a damp cloth, wipe jar rims and threads clean. If you plan to store jars, follow directions on pectin packages. Jars should then be covered with hot paraffin and sealed with hot lids, etc., as directed.

If, like me, you are not into making preserves and do not have the necessary equipment, you can still enjoy the marmalade by filling Makes about 5 cups. From "The Great Microwave Dessert Cookbook" by Thelma Pressman (Contemporary).

SPICED FRESH green beans are a homemade treat to keep on hand. Use as munchies or as appetizers for guests.

Spice up your parties with crisp green beans

By AILEEN CLAIRE
 NEA Food Editor

Spiced fresh green beans keep well in the refrigerator — up to a month. They are always ready for a munch.

You may want to make several batches to give to friends or just to replenish your supply regularly.

Serve these also as an appetizer with a dollop of yogurt or sour cream on top or include them as an ingredient in a hero sandwich. The possibilities are endless.

SPICED CRISP GREEN BEANS

1 lb. fresh, tender green beans
 3 T. dill seed
 3 c. water
 1 c. red wine vinegar
 1/4 c. sugar

1 t. instant minced garlic
 1 t. celery seed
 1 t. salt
 1/4 t. crushed red pepper
 1 c. onion rings

Trim green beans and cut into two-inch lengths. Place dill seed in a small bowl; crush with the back of a spoon.

In a large saucepan, combine water, vinegar, sugar, garlic, celery seed, salt, red pepper and dill seed. Bring to a boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, for five minutes. Add green beans. Simmer, covered, for one minute. Add onions. Simmer, covered, for one minute.

Pour into tightly covered container. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

Kids should be seen and not hurt.

LIFESTYLES

Dear Abby

Take care of your liver and it will care for you

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last year, you alerted more Americans to the hazard of liver disease than any other public relations activity we have ever promoted. November is National Liver Awareness Month, so will you please be the "voice of the liver" again?

THELMA KING THIEL,
PRESIDENT, AMERICAN LIVER FOUNDATION

DEAR THELMA: I'll try. FELLOW AMERICANS! (with apologies to Paul Harvey): Approximately 50,000 men, women and children die of liver disease every year. You may have liver disease and not be aware of it because liver diseases show few symptoms until the damage is far advanced. There are no treatments or cures for most liver ailments except liver transplants, and livers are hard to come by.

The liver is a miraculous organ; it manufactures blood, vitamins, bile, protein and amino acids. If it is mistreated, overworked or damaged, it will close down. And so will you. Your liver has the job of "detoxing" all the poisons you take in—drugs, environmental pollutants, alcohol and other chemicals you eat, breathe and absorb through your skin. The clotting factors that stop the bleeding when you cut yourself while shaving or peeling an apple are created by your liver.

This is fair warning, and it could be the only one you will ever get because your liver cannot tell you that it is going until it's almost gone.

Liver damage can be prevented—if you know how. For a free booklet on how to care for your liver, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to: The American Liver Foundation, 998 Pompton Ave., Cedar Grove, N.J. 07009.

DEAR ABBY: May I offer a few possible solutions to "Henry," whose second wife (Edith) refused to make love to him unless he wore an undershirt to bed because he had "Gretchen" (his first wife) tattooed on his chest? "Henry" should have a tattoo artist change the "G" to a "W," and the "N" to a "D," so instead of "Gretchen" he will have "Wretched" on his chest. Then he can have "I Am" tattooed above the "Wretched," and "Without You" tattooed below it.

Or he could simply shave his chest and place a piece of adhesive tape over "Gretchen"—then write the name of his present wife on the tape! This would probably be the least costly and painful solution.

Please let me know if I can be of any further assistance.

TOM DUGGAN,
WOODWARD, OHIO

DEAR TOM: Thank you for providing some welcome relief from one of life's more piercing problems.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from Mel, a Marine stationed in Okinawa, Japan, requesting pen pals for a platoon of lonesome Marines, prompts this letter. I've thought about writing to you many times before, but never got around to it.

In 1967, a similar letter appeared in your column. It was from an Air Force man named Joe King, stationed at Korat Air Base in Thailand. From that one letter, approximately 10,000 letters poured into Joe's mail room. Mine was one of them.

To make a long story short, my letter fell into the hands of a man who was not looking for a pen pal, but he answered my letter anyway.

After nine months of corresponding, we met, and four months later we were married. Last May we celebrated our 17th wedding anniversary and have three lovely daughters.

We've often wondered if, or how many, other relationships developed as a result of all those pen pals you put together. Forgive this late thank-you, Abby.

MARILYN ASHER,
CALIFORNIA

DEAR MARILYN: Better late than never. Thanks for the upper.

'Dewey Family' to appear here

The Dewey Family, a Christian musical group, is to appear in Pampa at 7:30 p.m. at the Lamar Full Gospel Assembly.

The Deweys have become famous for their ability to play more than 30 musical instruments. Their vocal quality, musical expertise and unique sense of humor are other featured parts of their program.

The Dewey family are regular telethon guests for Paul Crouch at TBN in Southern California. The network features the family at all their television stations on a regular basis also. The TBN network airs in 42 different states here in the United States.

Recently, the Deweys have been special guests of Jim Bakker on the PTL program, and CONTACT, the television program which airs five times per week on PTL satellite, and three times per week on Pat Robertson's CBN satellite network. They also regularly open the Sing Out America program from Nashville, Tenn., viewed in more than 23 million homes each week.

This family travels all over the world in their ministry. Appearing now in 25 different countries as missionary evangelists for the Assemblies of God, they recently received front page coverage in Lucknow, India. It states in the article about them that "The Deweys are doing more for international relations than all the pacts and treaties put together!"

Jimmy Swaggart recorded their No. 1 gospel song, "Heaven's Sounding Sweeter All the Time." LTD Record Company in Nashville, Tenn.

Area children to receive follow-up care

Infants and children in Pampa and surrounding areas will get regular follow-up exams by Texas Tech Medical School pediatric faculty members beginning Jan. 1 without traveling to Amarillo for the services.

"These are infants who weighed less than 2,500 grams at birth and must be watched closely for normal development during the first several years of their lives," said Dr. Mary Slater, pediatric psychologist in the Amarillo medical school's department of pediatrics.

The satellite clinics are made possible by a grant of $32,000 for each of the next two years from the National March of Dimes in New York. Dr. Slater and Dr. Muburiz Naqvi, neonatologist at Tech, will coordinate the program.

Dr. Naqvi said an abnormally low birthweight places a child at high risk for normal development. "The child might develop into an academic underachiever or one who is slow to crawl, walk, or talk, or who might be at risk for neurodevelopmental disorders," said Dr. Naqvi.

Tech medical school at Amarillo has had a regular developmental program since 1983. High risk infants are examined when they are one month old, again at six months and 12 months, and then annually until they are eight years old.

"Some of these children are not seen regularly because they live a great distance from Amarillo," said Dr. Slater.

Dr. Leora Andrew, developmental pediatrician at Tech, said clinics will be held once each month at Dalhart, Pampa, and Hereford and a fourth clinic will float in and out of areas with the highest concentration of babies and children needing follow-up services, "perhaps at Perryton or Childress or some other Panhandle town," Dr. Andrew said.

Mothers facing what doctors call a high risk pregnancy are sent to Northwest Texas Hospital for care by Tech physicians. Patients come from all over the Texas Panhandle and parts of Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Colorado. The Amarillo hospital has the only facilities to care for low birthweight babies within this broad area.

Physicians from Texas Tech Medical School staff the nursery. After mother and baby are released from the hospital and return home, sometimes many miles away, parents might find it impossible to bring the child to the Amarillo clinic as frequently as they should. So far, only about 40 percent of families with children at risk of underdevelopment have been able to participate in the follow-up program. The satellite clinics will help solve the travel problem for many families.

The purpose of the follow-up program is to identify early any developmental delays and provide the right training and stimulation to help the child develop normally.

Since many parents cannot bring their children to Tech's Amarillo clinic regularly, a team of developmental specialists from the medical school will travel to an outlying area once each week.

Approximately 70 at risk babies are born in this area every year.

Continuing education classes to begin soon

Four new continuing education classes are scheduled to begin in November Clarendon College - Pampa Center.

Two classes are set to begin on Nov. 5 - Income Tax Preparation and Beginning Computer Workshop. Income tax preparation covers completing the 1986 income tax return. Taught by Charles Cooley, a local CPA, the six-week workshop meets from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. in Room 102 of the Pampa Center. A tuition fee will be charged. Beginning Computer Workshop is a beginners' course in understanding the basics of the computer and how to use. Doug Rapstine teaches the class which meets from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Pampa Middle School - computer lab room. The class begins on Nov.

5 and ends on Dec. 17. A tuition fee is charged.

Phil and Donna George are instructors for the country-western dance class scheduled to begin on Nov. 7 from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at Clarendon College - Pampa Center cafeteria. The six-week class ends on Dec. 19.

On Nov. 16, Bonnie Simpson, protective services supervisor for the Texas Department of Human Services, will conduct an all-day seminar on child abuse beginning at 9 a.m. in Room 1 at the Pampa Center and ending at 3 p.m. A small tuition fee will be charged.

Enrollment is open now for all classes listed above. For more information, call the Pampa Center at 665-8801.

Applications now available for scholarship pageant

Applications are now available for the 1986 Miss Top O' Texas Scholarship Pageant set for Jan. 4 in Pampa's M.K. Brown Auditorium. The pageant is open to all area young women who are between 17 and 26 years of age, at least a high school senior, and never married.

Contestants are to be judged by a five-member panel of Miss America pageant system judges in private interview, swimsuit, evening gown and talent. The pageant winner will represent Pampa at the 1986 Miss Texas

Scholarship Pageant in Fort Worth next July.

To obtain applications or more information about the pageant, contact pageant entries chairman Debbie Musgrave at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, 669-3241, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., weekdays, or contact pageant director Ron Graves, 665-5904 after 7 p.m.

Deadline for applications will be Nov. 22. Contestant orientation and first workshop is scheduled for Nov. 30.

SPORTS SCENE

Sports Forum and Agin 'Um WARREN HASSE

THIS IS NOT A NORMAL year for Greg Sherwood, athletic director and head football coach at Plainview High School. His very competitive nature, evidence by the extraordinary successes he has enjoyed everywhere he has coached, enters into the formula.

Those aggressive and concerned qualities placed him in line to become president of the Texas High School Coaches Association. And when he began that rise to the leadership role, House Bill 72, the Perot Commission, "no pass-no play," and Mark White were not even on the horizon. Or if they were, they were unidentifiable as enemies of all that the coaches' organization held dear.

But BOOM, the Commission report and recommendations exploded over Texas a year ago. Sherwood was president-elect of the THSCA, and moved into the top chair last August. And he has accepted the responsibility with the same all-out dedication that has identified his every coaching effort and annual on-the-field performance of his ballclubs. It has probably been costly in one aspect.

The Plainview Bulldogs aren't quite up to normal standards of a Sherwood-coached team. It is possible that a fall-off in talent is at fault. It could be directly attributable to ramifications of HB 72. And it could be that in imposing on his lifestyle that total effort as head of the coaches group he hasn't found the 28-hours a day necessary to adequately meet the demands of both posts.

In a recent message to the coaches of Texas, the group's president says:

"Dark clouds hang over athletics and all extracurricular activities because of failure on the part of our elected officials to realize the educational values these activities play in the lives of young people.

"There has been an attempt to destroy our credibility as coaches by implying that we are only concerned with winning.

"We have to ask ourselves - What are we going to do now? What is our game plan?"

1. Continue to be interested in the mental, physical and spiritual well-being of the kids you coach and teach.

2. Continue to strive to make athletics an enjoyable experience for your kids.

3. Continue to emphasize to your students that the number one reason they are in school is to get an education through academics as well as extracurricular activities.

4. Continue to provide extra time for your players to study and encourage good study habits.

5. Continue to point out outstanding academic achievements by your athletes.

6. Start to get involved in politics. Find out the views of the political candidates.

7. Start to document negative things that are happening to kids as a result of House Bill 72.

8. Start to let the public know the negative problems that are being created, such as:

- a. Students taking easier courses
- b. Student cheating increasing
- c. Students dropping out of school

"Be determined to make this a great year for the kids and for yourselves. Enjoy the God given talent you have - working with young people. Have fun!"

"I challenge you to be such an important and vital part of your community that they would like to keep you even if you were to lose the majority of your games."

I have watched and enjoyed the disciplined and spirited play of Greg Sherwood-coached teams across the Panhandle for many years. And while this year, for whatever reasons, that normal pinnacle of success may not be there for his own 40-50 athletes, the effort he is dedicating to his role as Coaches Association president may, in the long run, be much more important for hundreds of thousands of Texas high school athletes, bandspeople, choir members, extra-curricular activity participants, boys and girls, for many, many years to come.

It could very definitely be a state championship year for Greg Sherwood and his team of Texas athletes and coaches in a very different way.

Halfway leaders easy to figure

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Football Writer

After all the complicated tiebreakers which came into play to determine last season's National Football League playoff berths, figuring out the leaders at the halfway point of 1985 is simple.

It is particularly so in the National Football Conference, where a year ago an abacus and two computers were needed.

If, for some reason, the season were called off today, Chicago (8-0) would be the NFC Central champ, the Rams (7-1) would win the West, and Dallas (6-2) the East. The New York Giants and Detroit Lions, both 5-3, would be the wild-card teams with the Giants getting the home field advantage for their game on the basis of a better record within the conference (5-2 to Detroit's 4-3).

The Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers would be out.

In the American Football Conference, the division champions would be the New York Jets (6-2) in the East and the Cleveland Browns (4-4) in the lackluster Central. Denver (6-2) would win the West over the Los Angeles Raiders because the Broncos are 2-0 in the division and the Raiders are 1-1.

So the Raiders would get the home wild-card spot. The Miami Dolphins, last year's Super Bowl participant, would sneak into the other wild-card spot on the basis of a 4-2 against AFC teams to 3-2 for New England. Both teams are 5-3 overall.

There is, however, a half-season to go, so don't put that abacus away.

Even with Sunday's win over the Rams, the 49ers are still 4-4 and questions persist about what's wrong. Nobody can really say, but here's Coach Bill Walsh's latest version:

"You have to sacrifice a lot of put together an 18-1 season. Then six months later, it isn't easy to come back and try to do it all over again. It isn't easy to get back in the right frame of mind after showing your mental toughness for 18 consecutive weeks. You don't want to admit you have an attitude problem but you know it exists. We've been self-destructing.

"Unless you're right at your best, it's tough to win in the NFL. We showed in the first half we're still capable of the kind of football we played last year. But we aren't a playoff team yet. We're still some distance from being a playoff team."

SMU players honored

DALLAS (AP) — It's been a frustrating season for the probation-stained Southern Methodist Mustangs but some honors are starting to come their way.

After back-to-back losses to Arizona and Baylor, SMU bounced back with a 44-14 trouncing of Texas and is now ranked 20th in the nation by The Associated Press.

And SMU tailback Reggie Dupard and linebacker Kit Case played in spectacular fashion to earn the AP's Southwest Conference Players of the Week laurels.

Dupard, a senior from New Orleans, La., scored four touchdowns and rushed for 117 yards to earn the Offensive Player of the Week laurels.

Case, a senior from Dallas who was leading the team in tackles, intercepted two passes, recovered a fumble, and registered 11 tackles, six of them unassisted, to take Defensive Player of the Week honors.

Dupard scored on two shorts runs, then showed his versatility by catching a swing pass from quarterback Don King and dashing nine yards for a score.

Then Dupard came right back to race 39 yards for another touchdown. Dupard averaged 4.7 yards on his 25 carries.

He passed Baylor's Alfred Anderson and Texas A&M's Joel Hunt for ninth on the all-time SWC scoring list. Dupard has 240 career points, 54 behind the SWC record held by Arkansas' Bill Burnett.

Dupard has had 16 career 100-yard games at SMU.

"I thought we would win but I thought the game would be much closer," said Dupard. "We seem to have put our adversity behind us when we lost to Arizona and Baylor on back-to-back Saturdays.

"We're rolling now."

The defense also is coming along like an avalanche behind Case's alert play.

PAMPA SPIKE — Pampa's Amy Voyles (12) gets a spike past the outstretched arms of a Borger defender during District 1-4A volleyball play Tuesday night in McNeely Fieldhouse. Borger, however, spoiled Parents Night for the Lady Harvesters with a 15-11, 15-5, victory. The Lady Harvesters close the season Saturday at 2 p.m. against Lubbock Estacado in McNeely Fieldhouse. Raiders win Tiger title

The Raiders won their second consecutive Tiger Football League championship Tuesday night, defeating the Colts, 20-8, in the finals.

The Raiders won the league title, but had to come up through the loser's bracket to meet the City Champions Colts for the overall championship.

Paul Brown scored three touchdowns and rushed for 242 yards in 22 carries for the Raiders, who are coached by Wayne Barkley. Brown found some big holes in the Colts' line due to the outstanding blocking of Ryan Erwin and Eric Dickson.

Playing outstanding defense for the Raiders were Brown, Jared Tibbets, Brandon Wells, Bryan

Hall, Chad Shapp and Raulston Young.

Cedrick Wilbon scored the lone Colts' TD. The Raiders conceded a safety to the Colts to keep from giving away good field position.

Cited for playing good defense for the Colts were Phillip Sexton, Jason Brantley and Johnny Pachaco.

The Colts are coached by Don Carpenter.

Pampa hosts an all-star tournament Nov. 9. Two Pampa teams will be chosen for the tournament. Other teams tentatively scheduled to play in the tournament are Perryton, White Deer, Skellytown, Borger and Amarillo.

Basketball tickets available now

Season tickets for the 1985-86 Pampa High basketball season are available now to previous season ticket holders at the high school athletic office.

Previous ticket holders have until Nov. 4 to purchase their tickets before the tickets go on sale to the general public.

Tickets are $25 per seat for 10 home games. The Harvesters open the season Nov. 18 against Palo Duro on the homecourt.

Office hours at the athletic office, located directly south of the high school tennis courts, are from 9 to 11:30 and 12:34 to 4 p.m. weekdays.

The Harvesters are currently working out from 6:45 to 8:45 Monday through Thursday at McNeely Fieldhouse and the public is invited to attend the practice sessions.

Deadline is Thursday for bowling classic

Entry deadline for the Pampa Bankers Bowling Classic at Harvester Lanes is at midnight Thursday. Entry fee is $25 per bowler with $500 added to the prize fund by the participating banks.

White Deer gearing for Memphis storm

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

WHITE DEER — Forget Hurricane Juan. They've issued a storm alert here that will run until 30 p.m. Friday, when the Memphis Cyclones come blowing into town with an 8-0 record.

Memphis could clinch a spot in the playoffs with a win and it's up to the White Deer Bucks to beat back the storm. It is a rematch of last year's District 2-2A playoffs representatives.

Memphis has wreaked disaster in every town it's hit this season.

The Cyclones have scored 284 points and allowed just 52 in going undefeated, and beat Wellington last week 49-0.

Bucks head coach Windy Williams said Memphis is one of the state's better teams, but had better look out against White Deer's gangster defense, which should be called the Hit Mob.

"I don't think (the Cyclones) have been touched like they're gonna get it Friday night," Williams said. "No that we're bragging or making threats, that's just the way these guys play."

"I don't think anybody in Texas can beat us 49-0."

White Deer will be facing a Memphis team which Williams says has "got what it takes...size, speed, skill, depth...They've got good depth and good luck. And they don't make many mistakes."

The Cyclones are big, fast, talented and potent. "They can get you anywhere," Williams said.

Memphis has been tremendous in running its option, which is keyed by a pair of top athletes.

Running back Roy Henderson is a smoker, who proved it again last week with an 80-yard kickoff return for a touchdown. He's not alone.

Quarterback Sam Carter returned a missed field goal 95 yards for a TD in the same game, and gained 88 yards rushing. That not being enough, he completed 5 of 8 passes for 138 yards and two TDs.

Receiver Otis Henderson plays the big role in that department.

Keeping things safe for those fleet feet are a pair of mammoth tackles and returning all-district guard Greg Parr.

Memphis relies heavily on its option attack, which Williams White Deer defends against better than anything else.

"They don't do a lot of different things; they just do it well," Williams said. "I don't know why they throw. They block well and their running backs outrun you real bad."

The coach said his team can't afford to let Memphis' runners turn the corner.

On offense, Williams thinks White Deer can run the ball against Memphis' split-six defense.

The key, he said, is to get downfield blocking against the Cyclones' secondary players, whom White Deer backs can't outrun.

"They do a lot of the same things we do on defense; they just do it 40 miles per hour faster than anyone else," Williams said.

On paper, White Deer still has a chance of reaching the playoffs. The Bucks would have to win their remaining games and hope that Memphis loses to Quannah next week. That would put the Cyclones, White Deer and possibly Wellington in a tie for second.

"We've got to be prepared for the opportunity," Williams said.

The coach thinks his team will be ready, despite the heartbreak of last week's 21-19 loss to Quannah.

"They get ready to play. They don't look at it as a season or a series. It just game-to-game. They're gonna play as well as they can every time they get on the football field."

Do they issue warnings to storms, too?

Mustangs can clinch crown

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

WHEELER — Though you get the feeling this week is no more or less important than any other in Wheeler, the Mustangs can clinch the District 1-A crown in Friday's 7:30 p.m. game at Claude.

An anticipated win there will give Wheeler a 7-0 district record, a berth in the playoffs and the championship trophy no matter what happens. By then beating Gruver, the Mustangs could cap off a 10-0 season. Then there's the playoffs. Head coach Preston Smith said the Mustangs aren't looking that far ahead.

"I don't think we've had those problems," he said. "The kids come up to us on Saturdays and ask us who we're playing this week. I think they're probably more worried about what girl they'll see downtown at night."

So goes the routine of perpetual winning in Wheeler.

The 8-0 Mustangs have simply been terrifying this season. Given a choice, who'd want to take on a team that's scored 365 points and allowed nine all season. Without posture or prediction, Smith conceded that Wheeler is a definite contender for the state championship.

"We're at the point where we're somebody they're going to have to beat to win it," he said. "We're somebody to be reckoned with."

The Mustangs have again been outstanding defensively, and Smith said their offense has improved over that of last year's typically awesome team.

"We've played better as an offense all along. I'm amazed," he said.

Leading that offense has been that TD Terror of Two, the combination of Dicky Salyer and Toby Collins. They've only averaged playing about half of each game, but still managed to put up statistics that read like phone numbers.

The tractor holes Collins and Salyer have been running through mean the offensive line's been doing its job. In particular, Smith said guards Stephen Meadows and Richard Smith are "doing an excellent job" keying the runners' successes on traps and sweeps.

One of the reasons Wheeler has been an offensive machine is who's driving it. Quarterback Randall Hugg, who transferred this season from Shamrock. Hugg is a proven threat running and passing who Smith said "has meant a lot. He's a leader."

On the other side of the ball, Wheeler has proven that the "Black Death" defense still lives. Which is as good a time as any to mention Claude.

Claude's 3-2 in the district and 3-4 overall. Those Mustangs like to pass and favor hooking up quarterback Lance Wood and end Mac Hall. Claude's scored 146 points this season and allowed 153.

Smith said Claude may do like most other teams Wheeler plays and try something completely different against the Mustangs. Who will be ready, especially if Claude does pass often.

"We've got great pass defense," Smith said.

The Mustangs have allowed just 34 completions in 120 attempts for 271 yards. Wheeler has intercepted 20 passes. Cody Wiggins is the leader with seven steals and has returned two for touchdowns, including a 99-yarder against Phillips.

In the Wheeler Mustangs-Claude Mustangs four-furlong horse race, the smart money favors the state's No. 3-ranked horse. Post time is 7:30 p.m. Friday at Claude. Any takers?

Pirates stay on ship

LEFORS — There was a meeting here this week among the 13 players that make up what is left of the Lefors Pirates football team.

Coach John Turner shook his head and told them, "look, we can't quit Friday night's game with Gruver and try and get ready for McLean next week."

"I got 13 Nos," Turner said.

"They said 'we want to play.'" The Lefors Pirates will be in Gruver for that 7:30 p.m. Friday game. All 13 of them.

"They're showing me a lot of guts on their part," Turner said. "It'd been pretty easy for us to forget about it and take a P.E. class and go at home at 4 o'clock like everyone else. I don't know what it is, but they're finding something."

Lefors lost Richard Hernandez and Jamie Wariner in a 67-0 loss to Wheeler last week that was called after three quarters. Hernandez will undergo knee surgery this week and is through for the season. Wariner could return against McLean.

To make matters worse, split end Kevin Howe came to school Monday on crutches, his sprained ankle the victim of a tumbling accident at home. Another player was dropped from the team for missing workouts.

The players forging on in this shipwreck of a season are: Shane Bridwell, Jeff West, Tommy Parks, Kent Kerbo, Kirk Kerbo, Jeff Smith, Cap Pittman, Jeff Wilcox, Chad Bridge, Norman Howard, Jackie Vannatta, Mitchell Flores and John Ledbetter.

"They're the survivors," Turner said.

Gruver is coming off a 15-15 tie with Groom and is led by quarterback Tim Stedje, running back Kip Pittman and receiver Mark Gilbreath.

Lefors can't risk injuries so the Pirates won't have contact workouts this week.

But Lefors is going to Gruver willingly, and Turner said, "Some way or another we'll be ready to play."

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bobby Cox, who guided the Toronto Blue Jays to their first American League Eastern Division title, was named The Sporting News Major League Manager of the Year.

Cox, who resigned to become general manager of the Atlanta Braves, edged out Whitey Herzog of the St. Louis Cardinals by a 7-6 vote of his peers.

NEW YORK (AP) — St. Louis pitcher Joaquin Andujar will miss the first 10 days of the 1986 baseball season under a suspension imposed by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth for the Cardinal right-hander's outburst against American League umpire Don Denkinger in the seventh game of the World Series.

"Such actions are damaging to the game and cannot be tolerated," Ueberroth said in announcing that he was fining Andujar $500, the maximum amount he can impose. Andujar will not be paid while under suspension.

MILITIA WITHDRAWAL — Syrian-backed Baath militiamen, holding weapons aloft, chant their party song and flash "V" for victory signs as they pull out of positions on Beirut's dividing green line Tuesday on orders from party leader Assem Kanso to boost a Syrian-backed peace accord. In the background are poster photos of Syrian President Hafez Assad.

McDonald's sells thousands on first day in Mexico City

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The sign outside the city's newest eatery simply reads "McDonald's — Restaurant," but by three hours after opening its doors Tuesday it could easily have been changed to "Thousands Served."

"We thought people would say, 'McDonald's, what's that?' So we just made it say 'Restaurant,'" said Saul Kahan, 24-year-old general manager of Mexico's first McDonald's.

He need not have worried. With minimal advertising, and despite its location on the southern edge of sprawling Mexico City, the latest addition to the U.S.-based hamburger empire was a smash from the start.

Eight Mexico City police officers directed cars through the drive-in line or waved them away from the constantly full parking lot. Management personnel, down from the Oakbrook, Ill., headquarters for the occasion, herded other customers into lines where they waited up to an hour.

The food is identical to that served in McDonald's U.S. restaurants, without a single Mexican sauce or chili. The menu itself differs slightly. "Quarter Pounder" seems not to translate into Spanish, although "with cheese" does, to "con queso."

Teen-agers, well-dressed and apparently well traveled, dominated the throng. All of those interviewed confessed to being drawn by the memory of hamburgers downed in Texas or french fries consumed in California.

"Listen, it's the best," said Alvaro Montero, 34, a housing contractor who said he and his wife drove 15 miles (25 km) for the grand opening. He said they had visited McDonald's in Los Angeles, Houston, and Laredo, Texas.

Mexico represents the hamburger chain's 36th foreign venture, said Patrick J. Flynn, a senior vice president of McDonald's Corp. in charge of Latin America. As elsewhere, the food is prepared according to company recipes but with locally supplied ingredients, he said.

A second McDonald's is to open in December in the northern industrial city of Monterrey, while a third is due to open next February in Mexico City's swank Polanco District. Marketing studies are being done for possible sides in the Zona Rosa tourist neighborhood and the Ciudad Satellite suburb, Kahan said.

Mexican law requires majority Mexican ownership of foreign firms operating in the country. Kahan, whose family owns a well-known Chrysler Inc. dealership, said he was among about 500 Mexicans who answered a newspaper ad 2½ years ago seeking local partners for McDonald's.

Kahan said he invested 400 million pesos — more than $100,000 at current exchange rates — in the company, which trained him in Illinois for 14 months.

The first site, about 8 miles (13 km) from the heart of downtown on the Periferico Sur highway, was chosen for its proximity to a shopping center and an amusement park which attract families with children, Flynn and Kahan said.

But the first car in line at 10:15 a.m. Tuesday carried Ricardo de la Puente, a retired telephone company engineer, and his wife. Less than three hours later they were back, to order eight apple pies to go.

Residents of a Dallas mansion district say 'goblins go home'

DALLAS (AP) — Most residents of the Swiss Avenue Historical District, an area of stately mansions located near downtown Dallas, plan a chilly reception for the droves of youngsters who will be out in search of Halloween treats.

A district newsletter issued last year recommended that homeowners use the silent treatment to keep youngsters, mostly Hispanic, black and Vietnamese, who pour into the neighborhood each year from nearby low income homes and apartments a few blocks away.

Most residents plan to keep their porch lights turned off, their curtains drawn and will not answer their doorbells Thursday, the Dallas Times Herald reported today.

The newsletter noted that residents should use the silent treatment for homeowners "not wanting to treat the truck-loads of non-resident trick-or-treaters."

Some residents say they no longer can be expected to supply the vast amounts of candy required to treat the large throngs that froup down the tree-lined boulevard in the affluent neighborhood.

Not everyone along the street where some scenes of the television drama "Dallas" are filmed agrees.

"I tell you, it's the saddest thing in the world," said Gilbert Aranza, an attorney who lives in the neighborhood of mansions, some of which are more than 60 years old.

"You can see the disappointment in (the kids') faces. They get all dressed up, come here and what do they have? Maybe me and five other houses (with Halloween treats)."

Although Aranza and others opposed the matter, it was approved at a meeting of the board of the Swiss Avenue Historic District Association with little discussion.

Some residents said later they have no choice but to turn off the lights on the persistent crowds.

"You can't even close your front door," said Linda Molberg. "There's always someone else waiting in the middle of the sidewalk."

Molberg said she gave out 10 bags of candy in less than an hour last year before she turned out the porch light.

"There's no malicious intent," said Cathy Doyle, who said she stopped answering her door between 7 and 8 p.m. last year.

"People just don't want to fool with it. They don't want to spend $30 on Halloween candy," she said.

Aranza, 32, says there may be another reason his neighbors are spurning the trick-or-treaters.

"I think that maybe they don't want any of these (poor) people on their front doors. Somebody said it best for me: 'These people tried to develop a North Dallas neighborhood in East Dallas, and it just ain't so,'" said Aranza.

Mark Sinclair, chairman of the association board, said the newsletter statements were those of the editor and do not represent official association policy. Most residents of Swiss Avenue welcome trick-or-treaters every year, but some people are not at home, run out of candy, or choose not to participate "for financial reasons," he said.

Carol Platt, editor of the newsletter, declined comment on the matter.

Nursing home had continuous problems

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A former state nursing home inspector has testified she saw the same inadequacies at the Autumn Hills nursing home in Texas City nearly every time she inspected the facility.

The poor patient care resulted in at least two "vendor holds" in 1978, meaning Medicare funds were withheld from the nursing home until problems were corrected, Betty Korndorffer testified Tuesday.

In August 1978, after a year of routine visits to the facility, Mrs. Korndorffer testified "we saw many of the same problems that we had been seeing for the past year."

Mrs. Korndorffer, testifying in the murder-by-neglect trial against Autumn Hills Convalescent Center Inc. and five current and former employees, said she saw "wet patients, soiled patients, cruddy catheters."

The former inspector said she saw one female patient "eating with her hands covered with dried feces."

"How did you know it was feces?" asked special prosecutor Jim Vollers.

"I could smell it," she said.

Mrs. Korndorffer said she passed by an open room in which a male patient was strapped naked to a bed.

Another patient, a woman, had been lying in urine for some time, the former inspector said. The urine had soaked a bandage on a large bed sore on the woman's back, Mrs. Korndorffer said.

Mrs. Korndorffer's testimony came despite repeated objections from the defense.

The nursing home corporation and the individual defendants are charged with murder in the Nov. 20, 1978, death of Elora Breed.

The 87-year-old woman died after 47 days at the Autumn Hills facility.

Mexico today

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican Institute of Foreign Trade announced that Mexican companies are participating for the first time in the Havana International Fair in Cuba.

It said several companies are exhibiting their wares in Cuba to promote exports of chemicals, petrochemicals, medicine, cars, auto parts, electrical devices, metals, construction machinery, office furniture and other products.

Cuba's Prensa Latina news agency reported earlier in the week from Havana that 13 Latin American and European countries are participating in the third international fair, the largest commercial event each year in Cuba.

The Prensa Latina dispatch said more than 600 companies had put up displays in the Havana Convention Center.

Mexican culture not confined to one side of the river

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the first in a series of Reports from the Border, AP Special Correspondent Jules Loh describes one Rio Grande crossing where a hand-pulled ferry boat makes international border control appear almost comical. Here the Mexican culture is not confined to one side of the river.

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

LOS EBANOS, Texas (AP) — The river bends sharply here and narrows to no more than 40 yards bank to bank. On each bank is a small building, on each building a flag.

There is no town here, just a spot on the Rio Grande named in the long ago for the rare old ebony trees whose tiny leaves and shaggy gray bark stand out on the riverbank among the mesquite brush and prickly pear cactus.

Rustlers once knew it as a place to ford stolen beef unseen. It remains today remote, miles from any place of excitement or commerce. The only natural sounds here are cicadas humming in the heat and the ripple of the jade green river.

It is, for certain, a most unlikely place for an official flag-flying, document-checking international port of entry between La Republica de Mexico and the United States of America.

Yet that is what it is. And the fact that it is here, a familiar crossing place as old as the ebony trees, demonstrates yet another frustration facing an overworked Border Patrol and a Congress trying to enact an immigration law to deal with a flood tide of illegal aliens — the simple reality of history.

"I cross here all the time," said a young man waiting in the shade of an ebony tree. His car had Texas plates. "I buy whiskey in Mexico. Cheaper. Much, much cheaper, and they don't bother about tax stamps at this crossing."

What's your name?
He laughed. "Juan."
Your last name?
"Whatever you like. Perez. Juan Perez."

Along the border, some, for their own reasons, prefer anonymity. A recent newspaper report of a stabbing on the border south of here, for example, contained this sentence:

"Police said Martinez, who died from the wound, was using an alias he always used while in the United States." No further amplification, except that his real name was Alvarado and his residence was Monterrey, Mexico. He was 22.

There is no bridge at this official international crossing but there is a ferry.

It is a flat barge that holds three cars bumper to bumper. A cable stretched between two ebony trees on either bank holds it to the river and four sweating men pull it across, back and forth, with a rope.

The ferry is privately owned. To ride it costs one American dollar per car and 25 cents per person. The four rope pullers earn 1,000 pesos a day. In American money that amounts today to about $2.70.

One of the four, Carlos Flores, has been pulling the rope since 1954. He remembers that his wage then was the equivalent in pesos of $1.10 a day. He has seen it go as high as $3.50 a day. The capricious value of the peso drives businessmen on both sides of the border crazy.

Carlos Flores doesn't try to keep up with the fluctuations. He just pulls the rope. In Diaz Ordaz 1,000 pesos will barely provide a day's groceries.

Diaz Ordaz is the nearest village on the Mexican side of the ferry.

You reach it by risking your axles for two miles down a rutted dirt road lined with spindly sunflowers powdered with road dust, a village of oh, 1,700.

On the main street, paved, carts pulled by burros park next to John Deere tractors and dirty pickups outside an obvious place of midday recreation, a cantina named El Torito.

The estimate of Diaz Ordaz's population (it varies with the season) is that of El Torito's bartender, Francisco Javier Melendez Lerma.

He presides over a fan-cooled room with sawdust on the cement floor, low ceiling, linoleum bar, loud music, four stools, no cash register. The pictures over the bar, clipped from Ring Magazine, are of Mexican prizefighters. A picture of Our Lady of Guadalupe is there, too.

A hand-lettered sign out front reads, in translation, "No minors, no women, no drunks, no guns." The first prohibition apparently excludes the bartender, Francisco, the son of the owner, who is not yet 15.

He has a bright, startled expression with ink black eyes and pearl white teeth. He speaks no English but is trying to learn.

If the pattern holds true, someday soon Francisco will pay two bits to take the Los Ebanos ferry to the other side and, perhaps, stay.

On the other side are somewhere from 3 to 12 million "undocumented aliens."

The range is that wide because they are a clandestine population. One expert's guess at how many there are is as good as another's. The Immigration and Naturalization Service picks an arbitrary figure vaguely in the middle, 6.5 million, as a working number, but admits that nobody really knows.

Argument over the size of the problem and, therefore, the cost of the solution is the main reason Congress has not been able to agree on an immigration bill for four years.

At Los Ebanos, debates in Washington, or Mexico City for that matter, are far removed from the urgencies of daily life.

The most recent of those, according to Albert Simo, who collects ferry tolls on the north bank, occurred when a car plunged down the south bank, smashed into the barge and ended up nose first in the river.

There is no dock, you see. Chains thrown around tree stumps snug the barge up to the dirt bank and two steel planks, just the right distance apart, flop down for the cars to roll aboard — gently. The driver of the car that missed explained that he was on his way to get the brakes fixed.

The uniformed immigration inspector at Los Ebanos is Tina Salinas. She checks to see that those who cross from Mexico have "papers," usually at this crossing a 72-hour pass — to shop, visit relatives, see a dentist, get the brakes fixed.

"It doesn't take long before you get to know the local people," she said. "Most are regulars."

Does anyone ever cross over on a pass and not come back?

"All the time."

Officer Salinas also explained how whiskey gets through untaxed. Some months ago an American drug enforcement agent was killed in Mexico, resulting in tension along the border. U.S. Customs pulled its inspector out of Los Ebanos, explaining that it was so isolated as to be unsafe, and has not sent him back. Tina Salinas says she, however, does not feel threatened.

On the American side, the counterpart of the village of Diaz Ordaz is not a village at all, just a small community, a neighborhood, of tidy brick homes along paved streets with Mexican names. The contrast in the standard of living is striking; the language, the culture, are the same.

The residents on both sides of the river here have been crossing back and forth routinely for generations, from the time both sides were a part of Mexico, not particularly concerned about choosing a political allegiance, more often just to find a better job, maybe temporarily, maybe not.

The ferry itself is an international enterprise. It was started in 1950 by two friends, both of Mexican parentage, one named Garza, one named Reyna, the one an American citizen, the other a Mexican citizen.

At 4 p.m. every day Immigration Officer Salinas lowers the flag and goes home to McAllen, Tex., a 40-minute drive. The four rope pullers chain the ferry to a stump and go home to Diaz Ordaz. The official port of entry at Los Ebanos is officially closed.

No hay problema. A rowboat sits in plain view on the riverbank — or, like those cattle rustlers of old, you could wade.

The Rio Grande, at least at this tranquil spot along the 1,933-mile Mexican border, is less an international boundary than a local inconvenience.
