Board closes door on band issue

BY PAUL PINKHAM
Staff Writer

A five-point statement passed by the Pampa Independent School Board on Tuesday concerning the "band student ineligibility question" essentially denies a request by Pride of Pampa Band parents to meet with the board and blames band director Charles Johnson for the incident.

The board reached its findings Tuesday after meeting for about an hour behind closed doors with High School Principal Oran Chappell. Previously, the board had met in executive session with Chappell, Johnson and two other teachers involved in the issue.

The board's statement says extracurricular sponsors or directors have the "final responsibility" for checking the eligibility of students participating in their activities.

"This is listed in the personnel manual available to directors and teachers," the board statement reads.

The controversy has centered around a student who supposedly failed a biology class, making him ineligible under the state's no pass, no play law, and was inadvertently marched in a district marching contest in Vernon. After school officials learned of the error, they contacted University Interscholastic League officials, who penalized the band by prohibiting it from marching at state competition in Austin and stripping away its Division I ranking earned in Vernon.

But Band Booster Club members attained temporary restraining orders in Austin and Pampa, permitting the band to march in Austin, where it received a Division II ranking. The parents dropped both suits Friday night and, in a statement passed unanimously, urged the school board to conduct a "thorough investigation" into the matter.

"We call upon the school board to make a thorough investigation into the matter so that this mistake or other similar mistakes will not result in any of the students of Pampa High School being disqualified from any competition in the future," part of the booster club's statement reads. "We invite the school board and the administration to sit down with us and review our position and our findings in this matter."

During the Pampa hearing on the temporary restraining order, Jim Brown, Canyon, attorney for the booster club, testified that Johnson sent all teachers a list of band students and the list was found in the desk of the teacher who failed the student in question. M.B. Smith had been substituting for Anne McAnelly in the class at the time and both met with the board in executive session Thursday.

The board statement clashes with testimony given during the restraining order hearing by Sheila Watson, mother of the supposed failing student, who told the court she had never received a failing notice for her son and added that Smith had told him he could pull his grade up to a 71 if he did three current events projects and took a make-up exam.

Brown testified the student completed the three extra credit assignments and was available for the exam, but was told by Smith he had a 71.

But the board said it found the student to have received a failing grade as indicated in school records and on his report card.

"A signed report card was returned to the student's homeroom teacher," its statement reads.

In other points made in the statement, the board says:

— there was "no willful intent" to violate UIL rules by any of the personnel involved.

— the band director, the teacher, the high school principal and the superintendent responded in the only way they could, once the failing grade was discovered, based on UIL regulations.

— it considers its investigation of the matter closed.

The statement passed with a 6-0 vote. Board member Kenneth Fields was absent.

Booster Club President Danny Courtney said the band parents plan to meet "within the next few days" to decide how to respond to the board's decision. He said he could not comment on the board's decision until then.

"We're going to do something but we're just not sure yet," he said.

Several band parents attended Tuesday's board meeting and indicated during the executive session they feel the board does not have all the facts in the controversy.

Policy changes okayed

Two policy changes were approved by the Pampa Independent School Board on Tuesday, one dealing with sweeping curriculum requirements required by House Bill 246 and the other with a recommendation by administration officials.

The board approved on first reading an administrative recommendation to rescind most of the district's policy regarding staff professional development and growth. However, the board left in place policy dictating the number of college hours a staff professional can take during a semester.

Policy changes require two readings by the board.

Supt. James Trusty said the professional development and growth policy is not needed because the state has instituted a career ladder policy.

"We do not feel that we need a duplicate growth policy," he told the board.

Board member David Robertson asked what policy the district would have in place for teachers uninterested in the career ladder. Trusty replied the district's appraisal process for teachers would remain in place.

Also passed on first reading was "policy update 25," dealing with extensive curriculum changes required by House Bill 246. Trusty said all the changes are state mandated but local districts can opt to change some of them with legal approval from the Texas Association of School Boards.

Trusty said policy update 25 puts

Casual chat during summit meeting

Summit recesses, but news blackout holds

GENEVA (AP) — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev called a temporary recess today in their superpower summit while experts on both sides reviewed the deliberations and debated "whether and how" to report on the historic session.

In the meantime, the two leaders remained at the Soviet mission, conferring informally following two rounds of formal talks and lengthy private talks.

"We are discussing whether and how we will report the occurrences at the summit," Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman said. "There have been no decisions made on how we will report."

An informed U.S. official said the talks were "positive" from an American standpoint and that there would be "a lot to say" on results once a news blackout is lifted. The official, who demanded anonymity, said the blackout could be lifted tonight.

A Soviet spokesman also called the summit talks a "very positive event."

Speakes said U.S.-Soviet meetings had been held on two levels: the formal talks involving the two leaders and their aides, and privately between lower-level experts. This indicated that U.S. and Soviet officials were working on drafts of summit statements.

Mark Palmer, a State Department expert on Soviet affairs, and Oleg Sokolov, the charge at the Soviet embassy in Washington, started work on drafts even before the summit talks.

The unexpected halt interrupted talks that Gorbachev described as "very lively" and focusing on "all the problems of concern to the Soviet and American people."

Gorbachev arranged to hold a news conference here Thursday, after the summit meetings end, and his remarks are to be carried by television to the Soviet people at home. This suggested he might have an important announcement.

Reagan had already scheduled a speech to Congress Thursday night after a stopover in Brussels to brief NATO allies.

While keeping secret whether they had made headway in reducing tensions, the two leaders said they had discussed the likelihood of future summit meetings, and whether Gorbachev would visit Washington for talks next year or in 1987. Reagan said he would welcome such a visit but that "it hasn't been agreed to."

It was learned that Soviet negotiators in Geneva last month approached their American counterparts about a "quick fix" interim agreement to limit strategic nuclear weapons.

The United States responded with a proposal — no details were disclosed — but there was no reply from Moscow before the summit talks opened.

Asked if they had discussed human rights, Gorbachev replied, "We had a very lively discussion of everything." He said the meetings were being held in a "frank, businesslike and I think responsible way."

President's performance labeled 'vintage Reagan'

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

GENEVA — National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane said it would be "vintage President Reagan," and the first meeting between the president of the United States and his Soviet summit partner was just that. Instead of sitting through four hours of serious talk Tuesday by experts who had carefully prepared themselves for months to face each other, Reagan took Mikhail Gorbachev aside, away from the formalities and detail that have never been his strength. As the host for the first day of talks, Reagan scheduled a 15-minute chat with the Soviet leader before joining their advisers at the bargaining table. They remained closeted with their interpreters for more than an hour, leaving only half the time that had been allotted for formal talks.

And in the afternoon, after an hour in plenary session, Reagan invited his guest to take a walk in the garden, culminating in more private conversation in a carefully but secretly prepared meeting site in the pool house of a government-owned estate.

"I think that the most we could get out of it is if we could eliminate some of the paranoia," he told British journalists.

Coaches consider effort to sack governor

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says no pass, no play is no reason for coaches to oppose him in a political scrimmage.

But the governor says he will be ready if the coaches devise a game plan aimed at his defeat next year.

The Texas High School Coaches Association, upset with the rule that bars failing students from extracurricular activities, is considering mounting a beat-White effort.

"I would hope to see the majority of our high school coaches move forward with the leadership they showed in making certain we had 85 percent of the varsity football players passing all their courses," White said Tuesday.

"They should be taking credit for the success of no pass, no play, not trying to defeat it," he told reporters. "I think you'll have many coaches who will be supporting our efforts," White said.

"You can go and point out, as we've done before, the coaches that have done a good job. They're clearly and easily discovered by virtue of the number of students they have that pass every course," White added.

Asked to name names, White said, "You've got the father of the quarterback at the University of Texas. That's one."

Longhorn quarterback Bret Stafford's father is coach at Belton High School. And Dick Stafford said Tuesday he doesn't think much of White or no pass, no play.

"I oppose the governor," he said.

Belton lost no varsity players to failing grades. But the rule became a point of controversy in the Central Texas city when district officials investigated reports that Stafford tutored four players after he obtained a history exam.

No disciplinary action was taken after the investigation. Stafford, a history teacher, said another history teacher offered him the exam when he asked for help in tutoring the four students. The players never saw the test, Stafford said.

The investigation ended with an administration memo telling teachers not to exchange copies of exams, according to Belton school board president Bill Stanford.

Stafford did nothing wrong, Stanford said.

The coach predicted no pass, no play would become a political thorn for White.

"He got the teachers' votes last time. The reason is he promised a 24 percent raise in salary. Now there's a lot of re-assessing of the situation. There's a lot of opposition," he said in a telephone interview.

The coaches association plans to talk politics at its Dec. 14 meeting in Austin.

"I don't think there's ever been a need for us to get so involved in politics. But when we see things being done that are not good for kids, we have no choice," said association president Gregg Sherwood of Plainview.

Asked about opposition from coaches, White said, "We've seen a lot of comment being made by some persons who apparently are not able to provide the leadership we need in Texas. I think many of the coaches are giving that leadership. There are always a few that are reluctant to do so because it means a change in their pattern."

"We are asking for major changes in patterns. We are saying kids are going to learn first and then we'll play," White said.

Some no pass, no play foes say the idea is solid but the six-week suspension period for failing students is too long.

White is sticking by the rule and the six-week suspension.

"There's always somebody who likes to weaken rules and standards. I'm opposed to that," he said.

The governor acknowledged the potential political force of coaches.

"No question about it. They're community leaders," said the governor, who is now appearing on television ads calling for support of no pass, no play.

White's political committee paid for the ads. Stafford said the coaches could become a potent political force.

"There are approximately 10,000 football coaches in the state. They're married, that's two. Take their families and friends, that could be a sizeable force," he said.

Hurricane Kate over water after flailing Florida Keys

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) - Hurricane Kate churned into the Gulf of Mexico today, forcing the year's fourth evacuation of thousands of offshore oil workers after flailing Cuba and the Florida Keys with 115 mph winds and nine-foot waves.
 The late-season storm hit Havana two hours earlier than expected Tuesday, forcing evacuation of 300,000 Cubans and knocking out phones, electricity, television transmission and natural gas lines, said Prensa Latina, the communist island's official news agency.
 At 5 a.m. EST today, the hurricane was centered near latitude 25.0 north, longitude 85.5 west, or over the open waters of the Gulf of Mexico about 210 miles west-northwest of Key West. It was moving west-northwest at 15 to 20 mph.

Kate's highest sustained winds were 110 mph and gales extended 200 miles to the north of the center and up to 100 miles to the south.
 Power lines and tree limbs snapped and wind-whipped tides flooded roadways throughout the Keys, the 100-mile-long chain of islands off Florida's tip.
 As Kate churned westward into the Gulf of Mexico, forecaster Mark Zimmer warned: "It's important for people on the Gulf Coast not to let their guard down. People are thinking about things like Thanksgiving, and it's hard to make them think about a hurricane. But this can still be a danger."
 Forecasters today discontinued hurricane warnings for the lower and middle Keys from Craig Key southward and dropped gale warnings for the southwest Florida coast from Fort Myers to Cape Sable.

 "We expect a turn to the northwest tonight, maybe toward the Alabama, Mississippi, northwest Florida coast," said Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.
 Off the Louisiana coast, which was struck by a record three hurricanes this year, oil companies used helicopters to evacuate many of the 20,000 offshore oil workers in the Gulf.
 Communities in southeast Louisiana, many still plagued by high water and damage from Hurricane Juan, also prepared for the worst.
 "Because of the devastating affect of Hurricane Juan, if it does come this way, my people will be gone," said Grand Isle Mayor Tommy Marullo. "Some older people have already left."

Feminists furious at Don Regan

WASHINGTON (AP) - Feminists demanded an apology from White House chief of staff Donald Regan for saying most women don't understand human rights, arms control or other weighty issues being discussed at the U.S.-Soviet summit in Geneva.

 Regan's gender gaffe came as he told a Washington Post reporter that he expects the activities of first ladies Nancy Reagan and Raisa Gorbachev at Geneva to hold high appeal, especially among women.

 "They're not ... going to understand (missile) throw-weights or what is happening in Afghanistan or what is happening in human rights," Regan said of female summit-watchers. "Some women will, but most women - believe me, your readers for the most part if you took a poll - would rather read the human interest stuff of what happened."
 The chief of staff, through an aide, declined an opportunity to amplify or clarify his remarks. And presidential spokesman Larry Speakes today refused to comment on them, saying the White House would have no reaction to Regan's statements or an editorial about them in the Washington Post.
 He said that so far as he was aware, Regan and the president had not discussed the matter.

Pace of economic growth catches experts by surprise

WASHINGTON (AP) - The economy, boosted by an automobile buying spree, grew at a surprisingly strong 4.3 percent annual rate from July through September, the government reported today.
 The Commerce Department said the gross national product - the broadest measure of economic health - spurted upward during the summer at the fastest pace in more than a year.

 The new figure represented a sharp revision from a projection last month that put growth at 3.3 percent for the third quarter and was up even further from the initial "flash" estimate of 2.8 percent growth.

 The new figure caught economists by surprise. None had forecast anything close to a 4.3 percent annual rate and many were actually predicting the GNP figure would be revised downward, reflecting the country's continuing trade problems.
 The 4.3 percent growth rate represented good news for President Reagan, who has been maintaining for months that the economy was in the midst of a substantial rebound from the weak growth experienced in the first six months of the year.
 From January through June, the GNP grew at an anemic annual rate of 1.1 percent, far below the 6.8 percent growth recorded in 1984.
 But private analysts noted that much of the strength in the third quarter came from a surge in sales of new cars in August and September as consumers responded to attractive cut-rate financing incentives.
 Auto sales, however, fell substantially in October and early November and many analysts believe this will contribute to much weaker growth in the current quarter.

Two city advisory boards to meet

Two city advisory boards will meet in the City Commission Room Thursday afternoon.
 At 3:30 p.m. the Planning and Zoning Commission will hold a public hearing on a request for the drilling of two oil wells.
 The hearing concerns a request for a zoning change from Agriculture to Specific Use Permit in the southwest quarter of Section 116, Block 3, I&GN RR Co. Survey.
 The Bruce - Chisum Oil Co. is seeking the change to permit the drilling of wells within city limits.
 After the hearing, the commission will consider a recommendation to send to the Pampa City Commission.
 In other matters, the zoning board will consider and approve a recommendation to the city commission relative to the preliminary and final plat of the GLC Subdivision relative to construction of the new Pampa Lakeside Apartment Project.

 The board also will consider appointment of a new chairman.
 The Parks and Recreation Advisory Board will discuss problems of vehicles driven in city parks during its Thursday meeting, which will begin at 4:30 p.m. or at the conclusion of the zoning board's meeting.
 The meeting will be held this Thursday instead of the regularly scheduled time because of conflicts with Thanksgiving Day next week.
 The board members will consider problems being created by motorcycles, three-wheeled vehicles and other motorized vehicles being driven through the parks.
 In other matters the board will continue consideration of developing long range plans for the parks system.

the district in full compliance with House Bill 246 but added he expects more reforms required by later legislation, House Bill 72, to begin surfacing.
 In other business, board member Darville Orr recommended on behalf of the facilities committee that Ben Graves, of the Educational Facilities Laboratory in Austin, prepare reports for the board on ways the district can enhance its facilities and comply more fully with House Bill 72 with regard to classroom size and teacher-student ratios. A decision is expected at the board's Dec. 3 meeting.
 If the board approves the committee's request, Graves will be asked to provide a preliminary report by March and a final report by May, Orr said. The report will include all facilities, including the central administration office and the old Sam Houston Elementary Center where Clarendon College now has a campus, he added.

 Orr said Graves' fee will not exceed $6,000. He said Graves told him the fee will probably be closer to $5,000.
 Orr said he thinks the money would be well-spent to make sure the district is in compliance with House Bill 72. Robertson said he thinks an objective report could help the board decide how to proceed with facilities.
 The board also reviewed its first annual performance report for 1984-85. The report deals with educational goals, staff, facility adequacy, financial condition, the impact of legislation on the district, test scores, pupil-teacher ratios, attendance, special programs and disciplinary activities.

 Copies are available for public inspection at the central administration office. Two copies are also at each campus and two will be filed with the Texas Education Association.
 In other action, the board appointed a textbook committee, with Trusty named chairman. Trusty said the state chooses five books for each subject and the committee will recommend to the board what books of those five should be used.
 The committee is made up of "key personnel" in each subject area, Trusty said. All other teachers and all principals, as well as Assistant Superintendent John English, serve as textbook advisors and will have input through committee members, the superintendent added.

State lawyer says

Survey allegedly showing discrimination not significant

HOUSTON (AP) — A survey which purports to show that Texas' controversial no pass, no play rule discriminates against minority and handicapped students is statistically insignificant, the attorney defending the law for the state says.

"It deals with less than 1 percent of the Texas population," assistant attorney general Kevin O'Hanlon said after the 19-district survey was introduced into evidence Tuesday in a class-action suit which seeks repeal of the law that bars failing students from extracurricular activities.

Johnnie Orr, a retired Houston teacher hired by plaintiff attorney Anthony Sheppard, said the random survey showed blacks and Hispanics were discriminated against because of no pass, no play.

The opinion was based on "the survey and my experience," she said. "It's discriminatory in that it excludes youngsters from being able to participate in extracurricular activities and those currently trying to do so are being pushed out of extracurricular activities."

Some districts, however, reported white students with a greater failure rate.

"You're speaking of isolated situations," Mrs. Orr said. "When you look at the overall situation, minorities are impacted much more so than our Anglo youngsters."

O'Hanlon, who was to cross-examine Mrs. Orr today in the case before State District Judge Marsha Anthony, said the districts represented only about 21,000 of the state's three million students "and they're trying to condemn the whole state of Texas."

"The no pass, no play rule doesn't have anything to do with how well we happen to be teaching our kids," he said. "You can take something out of context and say there's a terrible impact. You've got to add them all up and she made no attempt to do that."

The Spring Independent School District, which listed 8,532 secondary school students, was the largest in the survey.

"I believe no pass, no play is discriminating against those who want to do more than just come to school," Leonard George, Spring athletic director, testified. But figures provided by George showed the failure rate for black and Hispanic students involved in after-school activities lower than white students.

"If you look at it, minorities are having their performance enhanced more than Anglos," O'Hanlon said. "The blacks and Hispanics who are participating in extracurricular activities are improving more than the Anglos."

Sheppard said his case was hampered by a lack of statewide statistics.

The law passed by the Legislature last year to encourage students to get better grades made no provision for statewide record-keeping because of the expense and extra paperwork, O'Hanlon said.

Sheppard said the survey introduced into evidence Tuesday was supposed to include all 1,100 Texas school districts. But he said the state Supreme Court, acting on an appeal from the Texas Education Agency, on Nov. 8 threw out Ms. Anthony's request for information from all those districts. The 19, plus two McAllen high schools, responded to the survey even though it was not mandatory, Sheppard said.

Other than the survey, which included districts like Culberson, Hempstead, Bledsoe, Denver City, Floydada, Keller, Knippa and Merkle, among others, opponents of the law have failed to provide figures to show discrimination.

Sheppard acknowledged the testimony from school officials during the first 1 1/2 days of trial was "just kind of mediocre." But the survey information, he said, would shift the burden of proof to the state to come up with some kind of numbers to refute it.

The lawsuit is the latest in a series of legal challenges to no pass, no play, which has become the most controversial part of an education reform package. According to the law, students failing at least one subject in a six-week grading period may not participate in an extracurricular activity for the following six-week period.

About 15 percent of the varsity football players were ruled ineligible for the second six weeks of the school year although junior varsity and freshman teams were hit twice as hard, according to a coaches association survey.

Earlier this year, Ms. Anthony found the statute unconstitutional, but that ruling was overturned by the Texas Supreme Court. The rule's opponents are seeking review of that case by the U.S. Supreme Court.

This latest suit is challenging what is alleged to be an unfair impact on minority students and handicapped students.

Jurors: $10.53 billion meant as a message to corporate raiders

HOUSTON (AP) — A $10.53 billion judgment against Texaco Inc. for breaking up a merger agreement between Pennzoil Co. and Getty Oil Co. was meant as a message to corporate raiders, jurors said.

But Texaco attorney Richard Miller said the company was not engaged in raiding when it merged with Getty.

"We did not crash the party. We were invited," Miller said. "This is the first time in history where the dragon sued the white knight."

After hearing more than four months of testimony and deliberating three days, the jury on Tuesday decided Texaco should pay Pennzoil $7.53 billion in actual damages and $3 billion in punitive damages.

Richard Lawler, foreman of the eight-woman, four-man panel, said jurors were sympathetic to both companies but believed Texaco ignored Pennzoil's rights and deliberately interfered in a binding agreement.

"We wanted to send a message to corporate America: that they can't get away with this type of action and not be punished," Lawler said.

The trial, which began July 8, centered on Texaco's $10.1 billion purchase of Getty Oil in 1984, the second-largest merger in U.S. corporate history behind Chevron Corp.'s $13.3 billion purchase of Gulf Corp.

Pennzoil alleged trial that Texaco used unethical tactics to convince Getty Oil to break its earlier merger agreement.

Pennzoil did not seek to dissolve Texaco's acquisition of Getty Oil, but asked for $7.5 billion in actual damages and $7.5 billion in punitive damages.

Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, argued Pennzoil had no binding agreement to merge with Getty Oil and that it filed the lawsuit to get revenge against a successful competitor.

Pennzoil Chairman J. Hugh Liedtke said the jury's verdict reaffirmed legal and ethical standards in American business.

"I think that is the most important and gratifying thing to come out of this trial," Liedtke said before leaving for a board meeting where Pennzoil directors adopted a preferred stock rights plan to protect the damage award when collected from corporate raiders.

Visiting State District Judge Solomon Casseb set a Dec. 5 hearing to decide whether to enter a final judgment in the case.

Texaco Vice Chairman James Kinnear said the jury's verdict would be appealed.

"The jury's decision was unjustified and not supported by the evidence," Kinnear said. "The overwhelming weight of the evidence was contrary to the verdict and Texaco will seek all available legal remedies."

Kinnear refused to comment on the financial impact of the verdict.

But attorney Miller noted the award exceeded the $8.6 billion market value of Texaco stock.

"Anytime you have an award like that, it will be a tremendous blow," Miller said.

On the New York Stock Exchange, Texaco stock fell $3 a share in heavy trading Tuesday, closing at $36.25. Pennzoil stock rose $7.62 to $57.50 a share.

On Jan. 4, 1984, Pennzoil announced it had reached an "agreement in principle" with Getty's major stockholders — the Sarah C. Getty Trust and the J. Paul Getty Museum — to form a partnership. According to the terms, the trust was to own four-sevenths of Getty Oil and Pennzoil the rest.

Two days later, Texaco issued a statement saying it would buy the museum's 11.8 percent of Getty stock and would later acquire the entire company.

Pennzoil charged, that Texaco threatened Getty stockholders with financial disaster and pressured Getty to break its previous merger agreement.

Pennzoil based its $15 billion damage claim on the assumption that if it had succeeded in the Getty merger, it would have acquired the equivalent of 1 billion barrels of oil and natural gas reserves.

Pennzoil said it would have to spend more than $10 billion to find the same volume of petroleum reserves, but it would have gained the reserves from Getty Oil for about $2.7 billion.

On becoming a believer

I walked out of the newspaper recently, and saw a young mother driving up to the building, a toddler standing in the seat beside her. Behind them, in the back seat, was an empty child's safety seat. A lot of good it was doing, empty, I thought.

This wasn't the first time I saw the same scenario. Once it was a station wagon, and the little one was climbing over the seats while the vehicle was moving. There sat the child safety seat, empty.

Probably neither of these people will ever be in an accident. But there is a chance.

You know what happens when you have an accident and a child is not secured? That child, because its head is so much heavier in contrast to its body weight, is flung forward like a speeding bullet until some object stronger than itself stops it, such as a dashboard or a windshield, or a street.

It doesn't take a major crash to make that happen either; a minor fender bender can do a lot of damage to a child. Just ask any parent who has been through it. For the life of me, I can't see why parents will spend the money for a child safety seat and then not use it.

Many times I've heard the story of how the kid screams and cries when it's buckled into a seat. I know. My kids have been in them since the day they were brought home from the hospital. Their very first ride was spent "buckled up." Sometimes they did cry, but once they realized that I meant for them to stay in that seat, they accepted it. I tried to have toys or something handy to keep them entertained if necessary. Not every ride was perfect, but they always stayed in their seat and most of the time were quite happy with the arrangement.

I'd rather have my kids cry for a few minutes because they can't have their way, than to listen to them crying in an emergency room while their faces are being stitched back together — or never be able to listen to them cry or laugh again because they were killed in a car accident.

The passage of the seat belt law has brought about a lot of controversy. I've heard numerous stories of how people would have been killed if they had their seat belt on. The latest happened this week when a girl from this area died in a fiery car crash. Her friend was ejected from the car and lived (although she was listed in fair condition yesterday). The other girl had her seatbelt on, and supposedly burned to death in the vehicle. (This is based on hearsay, the news report I read did not mention this.)

I have no idea what actually happened, but I do know that some people are already using this accident as an excuse for not wearing their seat belts. Is it possible that the girl would have been trapped in the wreckage whether she had a seatbelt on or not?

I've been to a lot of wrecks in the six years I've worked for a newspaper, my husband Vic and I have estimated somewhere around 30 of them. I never saw a dead person buckled up, but I sure have seen a lot of them that had been thrown out, or thrown through a windshield. Some were crushed by another vehicle or by a train so that there was no way they would have survived whether they had a seat belt on or not.

After my kids got older, school age, I quit making them wear seat belts. I rarely wore one myself. I found out in 1982 though, that there's a good reason for them. I had a minor accident while living in Amarillo. You know what? It hurt! It was just a little wreck, and I hurt all over. I hurt so bad I couldn't sleep that night, and walking up stairs was agony.

That one little wreck made a believer out of me, my kids and Vic. We all started wearing our belts after that. And we continue to do so. We didn't need a law to tell us to put that belt on before we start the car.

I have no illusions that a seat belt is going to keep me from ever dying in an auto accident. But I know for a fact that it will prevent and reduce many injuries in most accidents — even head-on collisions.

That's all I need.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Bailout would be more bad policy

At hand, the Farm Credit System has gone begging Congress for a $5 billion bailout from the taxpayers because its member banks couldn't control their urge to pe farmers into high-interest loans back when crop production was lower and prices were higher.

Donald Wilkinson, the governor of the Farm Credit Administration, the federal agency that oversees the bank system, says the financial woes are the result of a confluence of events and circumstances, many of which are beyond anyone's control.

That's some of the most expensive—$5 billion—rtilizer around.

If the banks hadn't been so eager to lend, and the agriculture Department hadn't been so eager to prop up prices by outright gifts to some farmers and payments to hers to keep their land idle, medium-sized family farms might not be in the financial pickle they are today. The problem with American farming is that the folks in Congress seem to think everyone has a God-given right to a farmer, and a successful one to boot. But they don't. There are too many people growing too much and as long as the government continues to subsidize everyone who wants to be a farmer, regardless of aptitude, circumstances or marketability of the crops suitable to the land, the problem is only going to get worse.

Congress will probably give the Farm Credit Administration the money it wants. Politicians can't seem to say "no" to farmers.

Instead of kowtowing to special-interest groups, Congress should be doing everything in its power to reduce spending. Every time the government borrows, it gives up interest rates, strengthens the dollar in the eyes of overseas investors and close off even more of the world market to U.S. farmers.

Bailing out the Farm Credit Administration is simply more of the same—the kind of logic that got the farmers into trouble in the first place. Restoring the free market in agriculture would benefit everybody—taxpayers, consumers and, yes, even the farmers. This is an opportune time to start.

Missing the point on arms

WASHINGTON - Most of the talk about the summit in Geneva has focused on highly technical-sounding matters, obscuring more important substantive issues that urgently need discussing.

We have heard a lot, for instance, about competing U.S.-Soviet versions of a "cap" on nuclear warheads, ratios of ground and sea-based weapons, a possible nuclear pullback in Europe, a threshold ban on nuclear tests, and so on. This is accompanied by dire-to-hopeful media speculation as to whether the differing outlooks and mutual suspicions of the contending sides will permit significant agreement.

All of which, unfortunately, is a perfect example of missing the point. The numbers game that is being played in such discussions - like that which preceded SALT I and II - is for the most part meaningless. In fact, it is worse than meaningless, since it serves to divert attention from the underlying issues we ought to be considering, but which are obscured in all the static about numbers of warheads and size of weapons.

The basic question that cries out for consideration in this debate is the nature of the Soviet challenge and the strategic posture we should assume concerning it. For upwards of twenty years we have accepted and acted on a particular set of assumptions about these matters - assumptions that have brought us to our present strategic impasse. The issue which needs to be settled, and which could be decisively affected by the summit, is whether we should be doing something different.

Our present strategic posture is that of "mutual assured destruction" (MAD), which holds that peace is best preserved by a stand-off of offensive weapons in which each side is vulnerable to retaliation by the other. Within this framework, we keep trying to negotiate restraints on further build-up and deployment of such weapons. This outlook is enshrined in the SALT agreements, which explicitly embrace the tenets of MAD, banning defensive measures while trying to put a lid on the further growth of offense.

By common agreement, the SALT experiment has not been a success. One problem has been that the Soviets have a very bad track record of abiding by the agreements - and in fact have conducted a massive arms build-up precisely during the period of the SALT accords. We, meanwhile, have not only marked time but in certain respects have been moving backwards - failing to develop weapons that could be provided essential defenses for us and dismantling weapons systems and bases in keeping with the spirit of SALT.

The issue before the house is whether we should continue on this course, or whether we should abandon the assumptions of SALT and MAD and start moving in another direction. That is by far the most important subject that will be considered at Geneva, though it is seldom phrased in this explicit fashion. The Reagan administration itself seems badly divided on the matter, and has approached the summit conference attempting to do a bit of both.

Against this backdrop, the key ingredient in the summit bargaining is President Reagan's strategic defense initiative (SDI). By proposing to move toward defensive measures against incoming nuclear missiles, it represents a radical departure from the SALT-MAD mind-set. And by drawing on our long suit of advanced technology, it threatens to reverse the process by which we have allowed ourselves to become progressively enfeebled vis a vis the Soviets.

Nothing else that will be mooted at Geneva is remotely as significant as SDI. The Soviets understand this very well, and have made the banning or crippling of this project their number-one objective. Disarmament lobbyists within and around our government take a similar view: Their goal, if they can't get rid of it altogether, is to contain SDI within the SALT-MAD framework. In particular, they have been working overtime to insure that SDI is made subordinate to the ABM treaty of 1972 - the ultimate expression of MAD strategic doctrine.

Given President Reagan's repeated statements on the subject, an outright repudiation of SDI at this point seems doubtful. The more likely effort of the Soviets - and of our own disarmament theorists - will be to get some kind of strong reaffirmation of the ABM treaty, agreement on a "restrictive" interpretation of it, or other hindrances to the testing and deployment of SDI. If that occurs, regardless of what is said on other matters, the MAD theorists will have won the summit - and so will Moscow.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 20, the 324th day of 1985. There are 41 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
Ten years ago - on Nov. 20, 1975 - Spain's Gen. Francisco Franco died in Madrid, two weeks before his 83rd birthday. Franco's death ended nearly four decades of absolute rule.

On this date:
Five years ago: After a disastrous reception by New York critics, United Artists announced it was withdrawing its $44 million movie "Heaven's Gate" for re-editing. The movie, which still flopped in subsequent release, is considered one of Hollywood's most costly bombs.

One year ago: U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Jeane J. Kirkpatrick told a news conference she intended to leave her post following the current session of the General Assembly.

Today's birthdays: Author and TV personality Alistair Cooke is 77. Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D.-W.Va., is 68. Actress Gene Tierney is 65. Actress-comedian Kaye Ballard is 59. Actress Estelle Parsons is 58. TV personality Richard Dawson is 53.

Reversal on education

This is American Education Week. My updated file on that subject includes some good news and some bad news.

President Reagan says it is American educators who have "preserved, protected and saved our nation from being engulfed in ignorance."

Yet three years ago a blue ribbon commission on Excellence in Education found our high school achievement test scores the lowest in three decades.

That 1981 report on American education was humiliating!

Thirteen percent of all 17-year-olds - and some 40 percent of minority youth - were "functionally illiterate." That means they got to be 17 and still could not read a TV Guide.

They could not read a help-wanted ad in a newspaper and could not hold a job if they got one because they did not know how to make change for a dollar!

Compared to 21 industrial nations of the world on fully one-third of these tests our children ranked last!

It was not that we as taxpayers are stingy. Thirty-six cents out of every dollar spent by state and local governments go to education.

And that expenditure has been increasing every year.

Yet of all the world's nations which are supposed to be "enlightened" ours was producing the greatest percentage of illiterates.

Now the good news: That 1981 report put the spurs to American educators as nothing ever had. Improvement is already apparent and dramatic.

SAT scores are up nine points in one year. The dropout rate is improved and improving.

College enrollment is up.

Preschool participation has increased from 38 percent a decade ago to 58 percent.

And George Gallup's pollsters discover that we are taking a more active interest in improving quality in education.

We are demanding and getting more stringent teacher certification, merit pay for teachers, tougher academic standards.

For entrance to a public university in Illinois you now need four years of high school English, three years of math, three years of lab science, three years of social studies, two years of a foreign language - and art - and music.

Permissiveness of the '60s has yielded to discipline in the '80s.

And where so recently our educators were stashed by comparisons, today the Census Bureau confirms that a greater percentage of Americans have some college than Canada or East Germany or Sweden or Japan or Norway or almost anywhere...

And we are fast overtaking the elsewhere. In wartime, factories were allowed to fly a special flag which recognized realized production quotas.

This week you will see another flag on the schoolhouse flagpole.

It has a red and a blue border surrounding, on a background of white, a blue and gold flame.

The Flag of Learning and Liberty, a public proclamation of our nation's new pride in education. Long may she wave!

Intimidation of dissident scientists

By William A. Risher

As regular readers know, I have more than once called attention to the unscientific eagerness with which supposedly responsible scientists in various disciplines proclaim the discovery of new scientific "truths." The paleoanthropologists, for example, whose field of study is early man and his ancestors, are forever making monkeys of themselves (if you will forgive me) by discovering a fossil kneecap or whatever in some place like Burma and promptly rewriting, on that slender basis, the entire evolutionary history of Homo sapiens.

But those are the pitfalls of mere overenthusiasm. Of a far different order of seriousness is the conduct of scientists who, consciously or otherwise, put their scientific learning and scientific reputations at the service of their political or social opinions.

Lately, a still newer wrinkle has developed in this grim game of intimidation by science. Dissenters in the scientific community itself, who either disagree with the political objectives of their zealous colleagues or dispute the scientific validity of the contentions used to support those objectives, are beginning to fear for their own careers. Incredibly, the message of the political czars in certain areas of scientific study seems to be: "Shape up, or ship out."

Thus, the science of genetics is currently all but paralyzed by the flat refusal of otherwise sophisticated minds to face up to the implications of modern research in the area of the nature/nurture controversy.

That appears to be especially the case in the arcane field of planetary climatology, which is the specialty of Dr. Carl Sagan. Sagan, a highly articulate Cornell professor with several books and a whole TV series to his credit, is the chief proponent of the concept of "nuclear winter": the dramatic (but sharply disputed) prediction that a nuclear war between the superpowers would produce a global dust storm big and enduring enough to reduce sunlight, lower temperatures and extinguish many species, possibly including our own. Sagan is full of political proposals to avert this supposed disaster.

Concurrently, various scientists have advanced the theory that the mysterious extinction of the dinosaurs some 65 million years ago was caused by the collision of the earth with a huge meteorite, which (they suggest) raised a similar dust storm with comparable consequences. Many paleontologists disagree, believing that the dinosaurs' demise occurred over millions of years and not as a result of a single catastrophe. But these dissenters are now beginning to fear that approval of their proposed avenues of scientific research, and the allocation of grants, may be held up by reviewers who consider them insufficiently loyal to the concept of a "dinosaur disaster" and therefore to Sagan's parallel predictions of a "nuclear winter."

HISTORIC FLIGHT — Pan American Airways' carrying the first United States trans-Pacific Martin M-130 flying boat, China Clipper, leaves San Francisco Bay for Manila via Honolulu, Midway, Wake and Guam Nov. 22, 1935.

Pan Am's China Clipper's first flight 50 years ago

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Flying across the Pacific is routine today, but 50 years ago Friday the first flight of the China Clipper captured the world's imagination.

Pan Am's 26-ton flying boat roared away from San Francisco Bay on Nov. 22, 1935, bound for Honolulu, Midway, Wake, Guam and Manila.

Before that day, the only way across the Pacific was by water.

Pan Am is marking that historic achievement with a nostalgic flight along the China Clipper's route, but there's no way to re-create the thrill of that first flight. It's inconceivable, for instance, that Pan Am would copy pilot Ed Musick's inaugural-day stunt of flying under the Bay Bridge.

Musick wasn't showing off. It was either fly low or crash into the span, which was then under construction.

The Clippers are all gone now, every one a crash victim. Only films and photographs preserve the majesty of a sleek-hulled, four-engined, high-winged Clipper rising from the sea.

The flying boats were the titans of their day, reaching over 90 feet from bow to stern and 130 feet across the wings. The Clipper was the first plane powerful enough to carry the equivalent of its weight in payload.

Built by aviation pioneer Glenn Martin, the Clipper series was capable of flying an astounding 3,200 miles non-stop at 130 mph.

At that speed, the trip to Hawaii from the West Coast took 18 hours, compared to 4 1/2 hours today. The round trip cost $720, more than the cost of a new car.

More than 25,000 people saw the flying boat take off on an 8,210-mile flight that logged 59 hours and 48 minutes flying time to Manila. That total elapsed time was 6 days, 7 hours and 46 minutes.

Pan Am's president and founder, Juan Trippe, was at the airline's temporary base in nearby Alameda to launch the service.

"Captain Musick, you have your sailing orders. Cast off and depart for Manila in accordance therewith," Trippe said into a microphone that carried his words around the world.

A newspaper recounted how the plane's "engines increased to a roar and the Clipper moved slowly out into the bay" — 100 yards to the day after the first clipper sailing ship arrived in San Francisco.

During the ceremony, Trippe called the roll of the island stations by radio: Honolulu ... Midway ... Wake ... Guam ... Manila. The radio operators on the islands, where passengers would spend the night in hotels while the plane was serviced, boomed back: "Ready!"

The radio roll call will be done again when Pan Am's Boeing 747 flies the same route in 40 hours and 55 minutes, including an overnight stop in Honolulu and ceremonial stops in Midway, Wake and Guam.

The best glimpses of the Clipper and its times are on late night television. The movie "Wake Island" has the Clipper fleeing the World War II landmark before Japanese troops landed. That would have been the Philippine Clipper, which was swept by gunfire but escaped. There's also "China Clipper," with Pat O'Brien and Humphrey Bogart.

Former U.S. Rep. Mahon dies

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Funeral services are scheduled for Friday for former U.S. Rep. George Mahon, a personal friend of Lyndon Johnson's who attained the power of the nation's pursestrings during his 44 years as a West Texas congressman.

"He walked with kings but kept the common man's touch," said Kent Hance, who followed Mahon in Congress after he retired in 1978 as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Mahon, 85, died at 5:50 p.m. CST Tuesday at Shannon West Texas Memorial Hospital, nursing supervisor Verna Morse said.

Bryan Mahon, a nephew in San Angelo, said the former congressman died of a heart attack. He said Mahon had been hospitalized for the past week after undergoing surgery to replace a knee joint and had had a reaction to the medication he was taking.

Mahon represented the 19th District in West Texas, serving as that district's only congressman until his retirement.

Elected in 1934, he was a young district attorney in Colorado City when the district was created out of 25 counties.

Mahon was succeeded by Hance, a Lubbock Democrat who turned Republican this year and is running for the GOP nomination for governor.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, said in a statement that Mahon "was the epitome of honor. For half a century he faithfully served the people and best interests of West Texas."

"His lanky frame, quiet wisdom and gentle humor cast a long shadow across the land. Those of us who knew, loved and respected him have lost a cherished friend," Wright said.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said, "He was the kind of statesman you read about in the school books. His was the level of public service that should be the goal of every officeholder. He was a dear friend and we will all miss him."

In Congress, Mahon became known as a conservative with a passion for pay-as-you-go government.

He maintained a home in Colorado City throughout his career, but lived in Lubbock for many years.

He was named to the appropriations committee in 1939. By 1949, after already gaining the reputation as champion of a strong defense, he became chairman of the subcommittee that wrote the first combined defense appropriations measure.

In 1964, he was made chairman of that full panel and held the job longer than any other.

One of the most popular members of the House and a close friend of Johnson, Mahon once displayed enjoyment at being right in the middle of a 1967 budget battle between Congress and the president.

"It's like being in the eye of a hurricane, so to speak," said the rangy Texan. "The president has his responsibilities and I have mine. I don't mind a good fight. I rather enjoy it."

Once describing himself "an apostle of the strenuous life," Mahon kept an athletic appearance by doing calisthenics and walking every day, playing golf when he had time. He was a Methodist who abstained from drinking.

His nephew, Bryan Mahon, said, "My dad (Mahon's brother) told me when he was plowing in the field, he would carry a pocket dictionary and he would learn a new word every day. He had a tremendous vocabulary."

Born Sept. 22, 1900 near Haynesville, La., Mahon was brought by his parents to Mitchell County, Texas, in 1908, where he was reared on a farm.

After graduation from Loraine High School, Mahon got an A.B. degree from Simmons University in Abilene in 1924. The next year, he got a law degree from the University of Texas.

Judge orders cash bond or commitment for Embs

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A congressional candidate arrested for threatening to drop boulders on a former employer says he has been declared sane and does not need psychiatric care.

Nevertheless, U.S. Magistrate Jamie Boyd Tuesday ordered Lowell "Duke" Embs to pay a $20,000 cash bond or submit to psychiatric treatment before he could be released.

Embs was indicted in October for allegedly making threatening telephone calls and writing menacing letters to employees of Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co., where he worked for 26 years.

Embs, 56, is a candidate for the 21st congressional district seat now held by Tom Loeffler.

During the three-hour bond hearing Tuesday, Embs admitted he had been involuntarily committed twice to mental hospitals. But he said he was given a competency hearing in each instance and declared sane.

"Do you believe you need psychiatric treatment?" Boyd asked him.

"Heavens, no," Embs replied.

Embs told Boyd he voluntarily checked into the Veterans Administration hospital in San Antonio a year ago for psychiatric testing so he could get his pilot's license.

"The bottom line (on psychiatrist's report) was that Embs is in no way, shape or form nuts," the candidate said.

But Boyd said he was concerned that Embs testified he had been arrested 35 times since 1982.

A probation officer also testified Embs, who ran for governor in 1982, had one felony conviction for theft of a check and five misdemeanor convictions on his record.

"There's something bothering this man," Boyd said.

"I'm not sure he's competent to comply with the obligations of bond. I believe if I released him on bond, he'll be back here in 30 days," the magistrate said.

After the hearing, Embs said he would not undergo psychiatric care if it involved drugs.

His attorney, Nancy Barohn, said she did not know what her client would elect to do.

Meanwhile, he is being held in the federal prison at Bastrop.

A federal indictment accuses him of telling an official of the life insurance company to be careful when he started up his car because it could be rigged with a bomb.

Embs also is accused of telling another insurance company employee a person could be killed in San Antonio for $1,200.

Also in the allegations is that Embs wrote another official that he was going to drop boulders on his head.

Embs blamed his repeated arrests on what he claimed was Connecticut Mutual's effort to fire him and have him committed.

Embs was fired four years ago after working 26 years as a sales agent. His former attorney, Larry Garcia, testified Embs was dismissed just before he was to retire.

"Connecticut Mutual then started this snowball about Duke being insane," Garcia said.

"Duke has tried to find ways of expressing that he's real upset and concerned," Garcia said.

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man described by a prosecutor as "the blueprint for the death sentence" has been condemned to die for shooting a woman who had no money when he tried to rob her.

Ronald Keith Allridge, 24, got the death penalty from a Tarrant County jury Tuesday, which had the choice of giving him life in prison or lethal injection for capital murder.

Allridge was convicted of the March 25 shotgun slaying of 19-year-old Carla McMillen Otto at a Whataburger restaurant.

Witnesses said Allridge, who served seven years for one killing and claimed to have killed two other people, shot the young woman because she had no money to give him and two others who robbed the restaurant.

Prosecutor Sharen Wilson said, "I really believe that when the death penalty was (instituted), that that Legislature knew there were people like Ronald Keith Allridge. He is the blueprint for the death sentence."

During his closing arguments, Allridge's court-appointed attorney, Don Carter, asked the jury to spare Allridge's life. Carter said that Allridge claimed he "panicked" when he shot Ms. Otto, according to statements he gave police following his arrest.

"I'm not crying for him," Carter said. "But what we've got here is a defective product. He is defective in his mind. He knows it. You know it. Everyone in this room knows it. But he did not shoot that girl deliberately."

Three other men have been charged with the Whataburger slaying, and all will be tried separately.

Jurors heard almost two days of testimony about Allridge's criminal history before sentencing him.

After serving a seven-year sentence for killing a fellow high school student, Allridge killed two more people and committed a string of at least 13 robberies throughout Fort Worth, according to his own statements to police.

His father, James Allridge, told jurors he tried to get help for his son before the Whataburger slaying.

White asks questions at news conference

AUSTIN (AP) — After reporters quizzed the president of a company that's building a Round Rock facility, Gov. Mark White chimed in with a line of questions.

The governor, who apparently knew the answers in advance, wanted to know about football and grades — not the semiconductors the company will make in Texas. White saw an opportunity to score points for no pass, no play, the controversial rule that bars failing students from extracurricular activities.

"Where'd you go to high school?" White asked T.J. Rodgers, president of Cypress Semiconductor.

"Oshkosh High School, Wisconsin," Rodgers replied during the Tuesday news conference.

"Did you play any extracurricular activities?" White asked.

"I played high school football on the Oshkosh High School Indians, who were the state champions my junior and senior year," said Rodgers.

The point became more clear when White asked his next question.

"Did you pass all your courses?" he asked.

"I passed all my courses and that's why I remained on the team. Those who didn't pass their courses didn't remain on the team," said Rodgers.

"I presume you were able to get into college," said White.

A BIG Thank You!

HOMECOMING — Irine Aquilar sits with her three-year-old son Martin at the Harrington Cancer Center in Amarillo where former and present patients gathered recently for a homecoming. Martin has become a kind of a pet at the center since the Aquilars moved to Amarillo earlier this year. (AP Laserphoto)

Cancer patients gather for homecoming visit

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — It was a day for joy and smiles, of needles and radiation at the Harrington Cancer Center. Former and present cancer patients from the center gathered recently for a homecoming filled with worship and singing. "We give thanks this day," the crowd of about 100 people boomed during the litany at the "Rejoicing in Life" service. Patients ranged in age from 3 to 70 and had come from as far away as Hooker, Okla., and as near as Amarillo. "The homecoming shows people are going on," said 62-year-old Bill Kennedy of Amarillo, who was diagnosed with cancer in 1984. He has completed his radiation treatments and now volunteers at the Harrington Cancer Center. "Cancer patients need lots of support," Kennedy said. The doctors and nurses at the center are special, he said, and they know all about cancer, except that they haven't had it. That's where he comes in. "They don't know how it affects you emotionally," Kennedy said. "Devastating" is the only word he says to describe that feeling when someone learns he has cancer. Some people give up, and that's not what to do, Kennedy said. "I look on the bright side of everything," he said. "Cancer is a terrible disease, but we are making strides." Kennedy says the reunion reflects this. One can look around the room at people who were diagnosed with cancer over 10 years ago and are still doing fine, he said. "Just cause you have cancer, it doesn't mean you're going to die right away," Kennedy said. Enjoyment is not something he equates with his volunteer work. But he describes it as rewarding. When someone says to him "Thanks a lot for talking to me today," he says he gets his reward. For him, cancer wasn't the end of the world, and he tries to convey this to other people, Kennedy said. And Kennedy pointed to one particular cancer patient as an inspiration to all the patients who go to the center 3-year-old Martin Aquilar. Martin won the distinction Friday of being the youngest cancer patient at the homecoming. Martin had Ewing's sarcoma, a bone cancer, since he was about 6 months old, his mother, Irene, said. For her, the reunion represented something extra special. Martin finished his last treatment last month, she said. "We can come here, and he's not sick," Mrs. Aquilar said. "At times, I feel like we're all alone, but (at the reunion) I can see how they (other cancer patients) have progressed, and it gives you hope," she said. Martin had become kind of a pet at the Cancer Center since the Aquilars moved to Amarillo five months ago. And he has a special routine to receive his chemotherapy. He is hooked up to the intravenous chemotherapy, but he doesn't have to keep his active, 3-year-old body still. He hops on the movable IV and is pushed all around the Cancer Center. "It makes the day go faster," his mother said. And Harrington Cancer Center gave Martin a birthday party when he had to spend his birthday in the hospital. "They spoil him, but it's a very special place," Mrs. Aquilar said with a grin.

Perot negotiates Harvard museum loan

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot may bring about the first 9-year loan of museum items through negotiations with Harvard University's Peabody Museum, the Dallas Times Herald reported. Perot is negotiating with museum officials to rotate tens of thousands of artifacts in the three-million item Peabody inventory with a Texas museum to be built by Perot. The agreement between Perot and the museum would last at least 10 years, the newspaper said. Small, short-term loans between museums — traveling exhibits of a few hundred pieces — are extremely common. But museum experts said no institution has ever allowed the loan of so many items for so long a period of time. "There's never been anything like that at all," said an anthropologist connected with another museum. "Texas could end up with a better Peabody museum than what Harvard has." Perot, chairman of Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems Inc., a subsidiary of General Motors Corp., said he was enthusiastic about the idea and hoped to meet with Harvard officials in Massachusetts before Christmas. "I think it would be great to have a piece of Harvard in Texas," he said.

Wind tunnels giving way to computers

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Aeronautical researchers at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base have found they can use computer models to test aircraft designs, at about one-tenth the cost of using wind tunnels. Since the days of the Wright brothers, researchers have used wind tunnels to test airframe designs by subjecting scale models to airflow examinations. Now, a research group led by Joseph J. S. Shang at Wright-Patterson's Aeronautical Systems Division is using a hookup to a National Aeronautics and Space Administration computer in California to do the tests in less time and more cheaply.

Recently Shang's group simulated a flight of the X-24C, an old Air Force aerospace research vehicle, at six times the speed of sound. The Air Force had conducted wind tunnel tests on the X-24C's airframe in 1974 and the data were still available for comparison. Shang said his researchers had found differences of only 2 to 5 percent when they compared their findings with the original wind tunnel results. He said the X-24C wind tunnel tests would cost $500,000 today. The computer simulation cost $56,000, and Shang said the price decreases as his group improves the technology.

The complex computer program needed for the tests must be able to simulate the interaction of shock waves that develop around an airframe moving at six times the speed of sound. Shang, an aerodynamicist who has been conducting wind tunnel research at Wright-Patterson since 1967, said computer technology only recently has made such simulations possible. His group uses a Defense Department data network to hook up to a computer at NASA's Ames Research Center to perform the tests. Shang's group of six to eight researchers is one of only two in the nation that has been able to simulate all aspects of a flight at once, including airflow around a vehicle. The other group is at NASA's Ames Center. He calls the technique "computational aerodynamic simulation," or a "numerical wind tunnel." The computer model resembles a video game. Colorful graphics show airflow patterns and gradations of temperature and pressure on the aircraft's surface. Improvements to the system eventually will allow the researcher to move the image about on the screen by using a steering stick. The system now in use allows the researcher to look at cross-sections of the aircraft.

FOOD

Two in one

Stuffing duo equal unique meal

When Governor Bradford declared the first Thanksgiving Day in the autumn of 1621, he sent four men of the Plymouth colony to hunt for wild turkey for the feast. He then invited Chief Massasoit and 98 members of his tribe to join them in the celebration. Little did the Governor know that he was establishing a tradition of thanksgiving and hospitality that would continue to this day.

Most of us have grown up in this lovely tradition of happy get-togethers of family and friends around a "groaning board," heaped high with wonderful food. The star of the menu, of course, is the golden roasted turkey. Although the food is basically traditional, it has certain original touches that make it special to each family's day.

For instance, here is a suggestion for serving two different stuffings for the holiday bird, thus offering an option for the fussy eater, and, for the adventuresome sort, a chance to try both. One, Herbed Orange Stuffing, is spooned into the large cavity, while a Cheesy Spinach Stuffing goes into the smaller cavity. Thus, everyone has a choice. Both stuffings are quick and easy to make with convenient packaged stuffing as the base.

The Herbed Orange Stuffing starts with a 16-ounce package of herb seasoned stuffing which is artfully blended with ground veal, onions, carrots, parsley, currants, orange juice and walnuts. The Cheesy Spinach Stuffing shows a fine Italian hand since the package of herb seasoned stuffing is flavored with ricotta and pine nuts in addition to spinach, onion and bacon.

The turkey itself is glazed with honey, orange and lemon juice, which gives it a distinctively piquant flavor.

HERBED ORANGE STUFFING
1/2 c. carrots

- 1 c. fresh orange juice
- 1 1/2 lb. ground veal
- 2 T. unsalted butter or margarine
- 1 c. chopped onion
- 2 med. carrots, diced
- 1 t. crushed marjoram
- 1 t. crushed thyme leaves
- 1/2 t. crushed tarragon
- 1 t. salt
- 1/4 t. pepper
- 1 c. light cream
- 1 bag (16 oz.) herb seasoned

- stuffing
- 1/2 c. chopped parsley
 - 1/2 c. chopped walnuts
 - 16 to 18 lb. turkey
 - 1 orange
 - 1 lemon
 - 1/2 c. melted butter or margarine
 - 1/4 c. honey
- In small bowl, combine currants and orange juice. Let stand 30 minutes. In large skillet, brown veal in unsalted butter, stirring to break into bits. Add onions and carrots. Cook until vegetables are tender; stir often. Blend in seasonings. Add cream and heat. Remove from heat. In large bowl, combine veal mixture with currants and orange juice. Stir in stuffing, parsley and walnuts.

Stuff into turkey and truss. Roast at 325 degrees F. approximately 20 to 25 minutes per pound.

Meanwhile, grate one tablespoon orange and lemon peel. Squeeze juices and combine with melted butter and honey. Use as glaze last 30 minutes of roasting turkey.

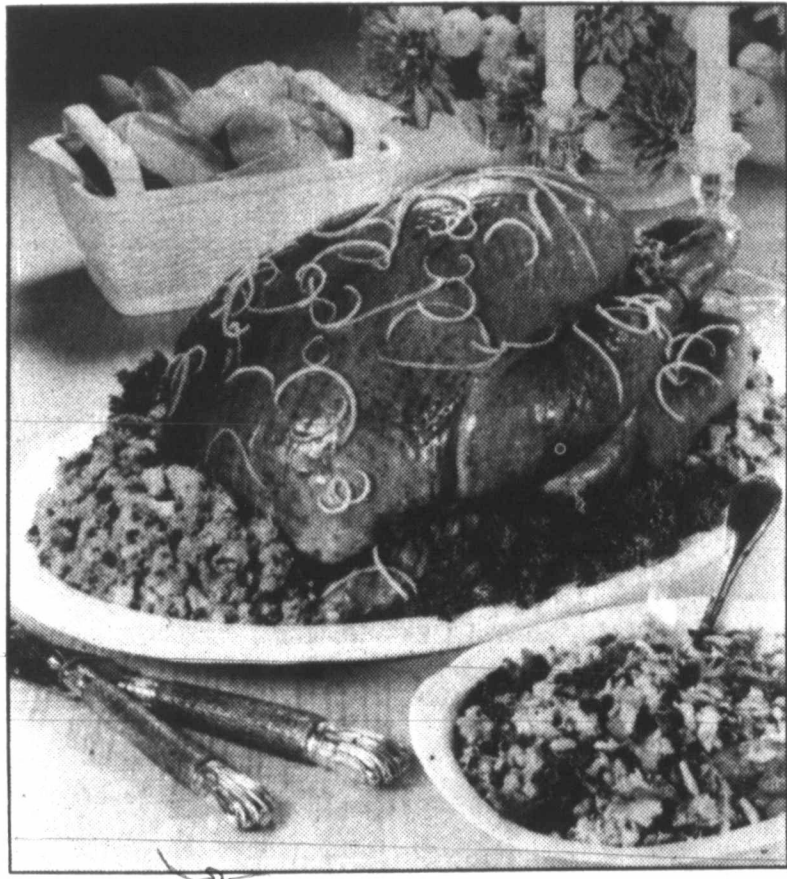

CHEESY SPINACH STUFFING

- 1/2 lb. bacon, minced
- 1 c. chopped onion
- 1 lb. spinach, washed and trimmed
- 1/2 c. unsalted butter or margarine
- 1 pkg. (16 oz.) herb seasoned stuffing
- 1 lb. ricotta cheese
- 1/2 c. pine nuts
- 1/2 c. chopped parsley
- 1 t. basil, crushed
- 1 t. salt
- 1/4 t. pepper
- 3 c. water
- 16 to 18-pound turkey
- 1/2 c. butter or margarine
- Salt
- Pepper

In large skillet, cook bacon until softened. Add mushrooms and onion and cook, stirring often, until mushrooms are browned and onions are tender. Add spinach and unsalted butter. Cook one minute to soften spinach. Remove from heat and combine with stuffing, cheese, nuts, parsley, basil, salt, pepper and water, blend well.

Stuff into turkey and truss. Dot with butter and season with salt and pepper. Roast at 325 degrees F. approximately 20 to 25 minutes per pound. Baste occasionally with pan drippings.

Makes 16 to 18 servings.

THANKSGIVING STAR - Starring on the Thanksgiving menu is this honey-glazed turkey with its unique duet of stuffings. Herbed Orange Stuffing is spooned into the large cavity while a Cheesy Spinach Stuffing goes into the smaller cavity. Finger rolls and old-fashioned dinner rolls make a light and delicious accompaniment to the feast.

Dear Abby

Lifetime of good health begins without any butts

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow will mark the Ninth Annual Great American Smokeout, an upbeat, good-humored, one-day campaign to encourage smokers to quit smoking for 24 hours—just to prove they can do it.

The idea was conceived by the American Cancer Society, which insists that anyone who can live without a cigarette for 24 hours can quit forever. So, if you're hooked on cigarettes (or cigars) and you really want to quit, why not start tomorrow—for just 24 hours?

The following information may motivate you: According to Dr. William G. Cahan, attending surgeon at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, lung cancer is the single largest contributor to the total cancer death rate. It accounts for 25 percent of all cancer deaths in the United States. It is estimated that 85 percent of all lung cancer cases are due to cigarette smoking. As a smoker, you are 10 times more likely to die of lung cancer than a non-smoker.

This year there will be 98,000 lung cancer cases among men and 48,000 among women. Of these, 87,000 men and 38,000 women will die of the disease. The number of women who will die of lung cancer is increasing at an alarming rate. Breast cancer used to be the biggest killer for women—now it's lung cancer!

A word about smoking-related diseases—emphysema, chronic bronchitis and heart disease. This year an estimated 350,000 will die from one of these. This total exceeds the number of U.S. deaths in World War II; it is eight times as many people who die in automobile accidents.

A congressional study has just reported that health costs from the adverse effects of smoking have reached a new high of $65 billion a year in increased medical bills and lost productivity. The loss in death and disability cannot be measured. (And how does one measure the amount of heartache, remorse and guilt suffered as a result of a preventable, self-induced tragedy?)

What about "secondhand" smoke? Is it actually damaging to non-smokers to be in the presence of those who are smoking? According to Dr. Cahan, the answer is yes. Furthermore, studies reveal that the children of smokers are more prone to lung problems and allergies than children of non-smokers.

For years I have begged my young readers, "If you smoke, quit now. If you don't smoke, don't start!" Yet, an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 kids light up for the first time every day. Why? Peer pressure, no doubt.

"How about the rights of smokers?" you ask. Of course they are entitled to smoke if they wish. But they will have to find a place where they can smoke to their hearts' content without offending those who can't tolerate it.

"Quitting cold turkey" is the hardest way to quit, but my readers have told me it's the most effective, and in the long run, the easiest way. Cutting down is less traumatic, but the temptation to smoke is often too powerful to resist while smoking just one, two or three cigarettes a day.

Those who are heavily addicted may require professional help to break the habit.

So, if you're hooked on cigarettes or have been telling yourself, "One of these days I'm going to quit," why not start tomorrow—for just 24 hours?

It won't be easy, but I can promise you, it will be the best Thanksgiving present you can give yourself—and those who love you.

The American Cancer Society has put together a wonderful booklet, "How to Stay Quit Through the Holidays." It's free. Pick one up at your local American Cancer Society office, or write for one, and please include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. The address is in your telephone book.

P.S. A favor, please? If you quit tomorrow even for 24 hours, I want to hear from you. Then write again and let me know how long you were able to stay clean. Good luck. Keep me posted. I care.

County history book nearing completion

The final proofs of the Gray County history book are being mailed this week. Book orders are to close Sunday at 4 p.m. at the White Deer Land Museum. Gift certificates are available, and those compiling the books say that the publishing company is promising a December delivery.

The large book sales, more than 900, and a section of business histories and memorials have helped subsidize the 9x12, 700 page book. Originally planned for 520 pages, the number of history contributions and the family stories, which number more than 1,140, increased so that additional pages had to be added.

The extensive history section will include many pictures and in-depth stories about the geology, early history, organization of range and land syndicates, the county organization, history of livestock, agriculture, and petroleum industries, development of schools and sports, and the history of individual settlements and towns in the county.

The foreword by guest writer Dr. Frederick W. Rathjen, professor of history at West Texas State University in Canyon, briefly traces the history in a community in which many descendants of the pioneer generations are still living. He commended the book committee for their efforts "to gather and preserve grassroots history and tradition," focusing "upon the lives of a work-a-day world... women and men who are... the 'bricks' of which the American republic is built."

More than 80 people have helped research, type, sort, index, edit and proofread. The Alanreed - McLean and White Deer Land museums have assisted. Coordinators of the volume, almost a year in production, are Darlene Birkes, Eloise Lane and Elleta Nolte.

Tips for financing the holidays on credit

COLLEGE STATION — During the holiday season many of us overindulge in food, drink — and credit.

Family economics specialist Nancy Granovsky says consumers should ask themselves whether they need to use credit, which is really borrowing money for a price.

The answer may be "yes," says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist, if you have a good reason and can repay your debt in a reasonable length of time.

"Using a credit card to pay for Christmas gifts can be convenient and cost relatively little if you pay the bill within 30 days," Granovsky explains. "But when you have to carry the debt beyond 30 days, you will be paying 16 to 18 percent interest, depending on your credit card."

In many households, a large purchase of a major appliance, television or furniture is made each year as a gift for the whole family. Before deciding to make this type of purchase on credit, she suggests that consumers consider the cost of the loan.

Business, club give food baskets to needy

Twenty-five needy families from the area are to benefit from a two-part holiday feast on Thanksgiving and Christmas provided by the K Mart store on Perryton Parkway, and delivered by the Top of Texas Kiwanis and K Mart employees.

On Nov. 27, 10 families will receive food baskets from K Mart containing turkey, potatoes, vegetables, stuffing, bread and pumpkin pie — all trimmings necessary for a traditional holiday meal.

Top of Texas Kiwanis and the Salvation Army are to help identify needy families in the area. Top of Texas Kiwanis members and K Mart employees will deliver the food baskets to teach family.

The second half of the program will take place on Dec. 24, Christmas Eve. Kiwanis members and K Mart employees will deliver another 15 food baskets to needy families.

WARREN HASSE

TOMORROW IS THE DEADLINE for public school systems in the state to submit enrollment figures for consideration and use in establishing University Interscholastic League districts for the next two years. The reclassification-realignment process is always a difficult one. The final result always produces some disgruntled people and unfair and inequitable situations. But until someone can devise a better way, it will continue as it has for years.

Enrollment figures on each high school as of November 1 were due in the League office last Friday. League officials then begin the tedious attempt to structure the new competitive and participatory parameters. Set formulas are used to try to equalize the enrollments before the assignment procedures begin. Taken into consideration are the size of the current senior class (which will have little to do with next year, so is specially weighted in the factoring), multi-handicapped students, and whether the school has three or four high school grades.

Then there are other guidelines, or at least considerations. Although little can be done about it, geography of the proposed district has to be looked at. This is especially true in light of the state Education Agency's limitations on school absence and allowable participation time, which includes travel time to and from an event in most instances. Then there is the obvious practicality of having a number of districts in each classification in multiples that lead to state championships without the obvious fairness of a "bye" or "open date".

In that regard, efforts will undoubtedly be made to retain the current structure of 32 districts in Classes 5A, 3A and 2A, and 16 in 4A and 1A, with Six-Man catching the residue as far as football is concerned. When all of the enrollment figures have been obtained, verified and studied, a determination must be made on a cutoff of enrollment for each classification. In use the past two years has been a schedule of: 5A - 1,305 or more; 4A - 650 to 1,304; 3A - 275 to 649; 2A - 135 to 274; 1A - 134 and less; and fewer than 90 students could play Six-Man football if desired.

As enrollments vary and consolidations of systems occur, the inequities of whatever figures are used is blatantly apparent. One school could be playing another that is two to three times larger in 5A, and more than twice as large in any other classification. But then no one said every successful businessperson had to be 6-3 and weigh 205 pounds with blonde hair.

Where do you start? That's a good question. The obvious would be with the 5A schools, filling the 32 districts to maximum load, again considering the geographic and natural rivalry factors. The problem which develops there is the skyrocketing forth of several of the state's metropolitan areas. Houston, for example, has six 5A districts alone in what is considered its metro area. Then out here on the West Texas plains there is only one between the Panhandle and Lubbock. Houston kids can travel on the metro bus system to get to a game while West Texas teams have been known at times to fly.

Part of this problem is met by establishing zones. It is done currently in various areas, and longtime Pampa fans can recall when the Harvesters were involved in such. It was an outgrowth of a district that once encompassed the then single-school systems of Pampa, Borger, Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene, San Angelo, Odessa and Midland. Yes, fans, those eight at one time composed a single district, and students received a great education on the geography and history of the West Texas area. In zone play, teams scheduled 9-game football seasons, with the tenth game a matchup of the two teams which finished at a similar level in each zone, 1 vs. 1, 2 vs. 2, etc., at a site based on another formula or a coin flip. Not very suitable or practical. But as our school systems grow, it may return.

Anyway, once the UIL has determined the new figures for class participation, it will assign the schools and announce the results by February 1. Then the schools have until March 1 to petition to remain in a class higher if travel is a problem. That is the sole permissible factor, supposedly, that would allow any change from the announced new alignment. And seldom is that given much consideration because most systems are not desirous of moving their smaller numbers into a higher classification with little chance to at least compete.

When March 1 arrives, everything is set in concrete for the next two years and athletic directors and coaches start burning up telephone lines and midnight oil trying to confirm schedules in all sports. For until then there is little opportunity to be assured any specific date will be available for a specific game.

The scheduling problem is especially acute for the Panhandle area schools, which because of their location and the structure of their districts, find it much easier to reach into Oklahoma, New Mexico and even Kansas, for opponents. But those non-Texas schools also need to be assured of games next school year, and many times are hesitant to delay signing contracts until next spring for fear of winding up with an open date. Example is Clovis, which comes into Texas for nearly all of its non-conference football schedule. The Texas UIL also has a firm rule that no contracts can be signed until the March 1 date, meaning that a good trustworthy, personal relationship is necessary between athletic directors so that tentative agreements can be made, subject to the final UIL structure.

Meanwhile the rumors of district membership changes and subsequent non-conference competitive opportunities abound. Canyon to 5A; Hereford, Big Spring, Frenship to 4A; Dumas to 3A; Childress to 2A...you can hear them all. But until the UIL sets the final classification figures, none can be certain. And then they are only for two years, and the process begins anew with other changes such as a possible second high school in Canyon, merging of other smaller educational units, major industrial development that assures an overnight census growth. Who knows what might cause a destabilization of a school system?

It's a time of playing the waiting game right now, one that affects not just athletic teams, but band, choir, drama, journalism, every department of the school. And the success with which those groups participate results in a positive or negative morale factor for the school and community, one which, unfortunately, many times has a parallel effect on the basic learning process.

So, the next couple of months can be very critical ones for education in Texas, and critical from a surprising area.

Lady Harvesters win season opener

BALANCING ACT — Pampa's Rogena Fly momentarily loses her balance while dribbling by a Caprock defender, but the 5-5 senior managed to keep control of the basketball. (Staff Photo by L.D. Strate)

After the first quarter netted a high yield in point production for the Pampa Lady Harvesters, it was all downhill the rest of the way in a 65-48 season-opening win Tuesday night over Amarillo Caprock in McNeely Fieldhouse.

The Lady Harvesters used a trapping press and a fast break to run off nine consecutive points and outscore Caprock, 11-2, in the first five minutes of the first quarter. The Lady Harvesters forced 15 first-half turnovers, several before Caprock could get the ball past midcourt. Pampa led by 19-11 at the end of the first quarter and were up by 13, 35-22, at halftime. By the end of the third quarter the Lady Harvesters led by 17, 49-32. Caprock never got closer than eleven points the second half.

"We had some mental lapses when we got ahead," said Pampa head coach Albert Nichols. "The girls wanted to slack up when we got a big lead instead of putting the other team away."

Caprock could have made it closer by hitting its foul shots, but the Lady Longhorns hit only 9 of 18 shots from the line. Pampa did worse, only 3 of 9 for 33.3 percent.

"Our free throw shooting was terrible," Nichols said. "That's going to kill us in a close game."

From the floor, the Lady Harvesters hit 44 percent of their field goal attempts.

Hope Henson, a 5-8 sophomore, came off the bench to score 14 points in the second half and lead the Lady Harvesters in scoring.

Henson scored 12 of her points, mostly on corner jumpers, in the fourth quarter.

"When they went into a zone, Hope hit five of seven shots from the outside," Nichols said. "That kind of shooting will kill a zone faster than anything."

While Henson was scoring from the outside, Dana Wood and Jackie Reed hit for most of their points from just a short distance away.

Wood, a 5-10 senior, slipped inside for most of her 13 points, while 5-10 junior Jackie Reed added 10 first-half points and pulled down 7 rebounds. Wood scored twice on offensive rebounds while shooting 66 percent from the floor. Reed used a short-range turnaround jumper as her main weapon.

Shella Roan and Juanita Colbert tossed in 12 points each for Caprock. Rene Fennel added 10.

Pampa had a 39-27 edge in rebounding with 5-10 senior Melissa Nichols pulling down six rebounds to go with her six points. Wood had six rebounds and Rogena Fly had four from her guard position. Fly, along with Sandee Stokes, sparked Pampa's guard play while scoring 8 points each. Camilia Brown, Landee Cummings and Melanie Morgan added two points each.

Pampa also won the junior varsity game, 49-42. Keitha Clark and Tacy Stoddard were high scorers for Pampa.

The Lady Harvesters play Tascosa Saturday night in Amarillo.

Landry: Cowboys 'in a little bit of shock'

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys' 44-0 loss to Chicago — the worst in the team's 26-year history — is "not a very good indication" of how the club stands in the tight National Football Conference East race, Dallas Coach Tom Landry says.

The loss, the first time Dallas has been shut out since St. Louis pulled a 38-0 whitewash in 1970, left the Cowboys in "a little bit of shock," Landry said Tuesday.

"A game like that happens to you every once in a while. When it does, you have no control over it," he said.

Although the Cowboys went on to the 1971 Super Bowl following the Cardinal shutout, Landry wasn't anxious to make predictions of a repeat performance. He said the NFC East is "up for grabs."

Landry said the New York Giants, despite their 23-21 Monday night loss to Washington, have a slight advantage over the other teams in the division — mostly because they have already played Philadelphia twice.

"I think New York is in the best position," he said. "They caught them (Eagles) when they were down and beat them twice."

But Landry said the race was far from over.

"I don't know what it is going to take," he said. "The team that is going to win it will have to win at least three of their five games," he said. For the second time this season, Gary Hogeboom could start at quarterback against the Eagles, Landry said. At Veterans Stadium on Oct. 20, Hogeboom replaced an injured White, completed 15 of 25 passes, but the Cowboys lost 16-14. Hogeboom threw two crucial interceptions.

Starter Danny White, who sustained a neck injury Sunday against Chicago, has said he plans to play against Philadelphia, but Landry said no final decision would be made until after White practices today.

Canadian clubs Follett

CANADIAN — Canadian boys, under the leadership of new coach Greg Nichols, opened the basketball season with a lopsided 62-32 win Tuesday night over visiting Follett.

Nichols is the younger brother of Pampa basketball coach Garland Nichols.

Shawn Wright and Luke Thrasher paced the Wildcats' balanced scoring attack with 12 points each.

Jeff Beard also scored 12 points to lead Follett.

Canadian also had an easy time in the girls' game, winning 56-28.

Stephanie Byard topped Canadian with 20 points, followed by Sharon Mitchell with 10.

Tracy Tyson led Follett with 11 points.

Both Canadian teams host Sanford-Fritch Friday night.

Shockers lose to PD

Palo Duro defeated Pampa, 55-41, Monday night in a junior varsity boys' basketball game at McNeely Fieldhouse.

Bobby Tillman paced PD in scoring with 16 points. Jason Farmer led the Shockers with 11 points, followed by Troy Owens with seven.

Michael Sims, Greg White and John Tyler added eight points each for the PD JVs.

McLean girls ready to run

By DAN MURRAY
Sports Writer

McLEAN — When opponents take the court against Bill Phillips' McLean Tigerettes this season, they'd better be ready to run.

Phillips likes his basketball fast-paced and the 1985-86 Tigerettes should be aggressive examples of their coach's preference. McLean will harass foes with a constant full-court press, and the Tigerettes offense will look to fast break every chance it gets.

"We're gonna run and gun. That's the way we like to play," Phillips said. "The girls don't get tired; they just run around the court all day. They're in great physical condition."

Inexperience in executing Phillips' running, pressing game plan could cause McLean some problems early, he said, but "day by day we're getting a lot better at it. It may be one of our stronger points when it's said and done."

That's because the Tigerettes have good quickness complimented by more than adequate height.

"Our overall team speed is excellent," Phillips said. "They're quick little devils."

Not too little. One of the Tigerettes' top returnees is 5-11 senior post Melanie Billingsley, who averaged 20 points and 10 rebounds per game last season. She'll get rebounding help from 5-10 sophomore Angie Reynolds and a trio of 5-9 players: Kristie Thompson, Shawn Crockett and Shandee Rice. McLean won't be hurting for size or experience.

Four starters return from last year's turmoil-filled campaign, including Billingsley, Thompson, 5-3 senior point guard LeeAnn Tate and 5-3 wing JemAnn Rice. Tate contributed eight points per game in her playmaker role last season, and Rice matched her average. Crockett is expected to assume the open starter's spot.

The five starters will by no means hog the playing minutes, as Phillips feels he's got the depth to give a number of players court time. Reynolds, Shandee Rice and 5-4 freshman point guard Darla McAnear should play key roles coming off a bench that also features 5-3 junior wing Jennifer Brown, 5-7 freshman wing Misty Magee and 5-9 freshman post Kim Beaver.

"We've got some good talent and some good young kids," Phillips said. "I've got depth this time. Our younger kids can come in off the bench and we won't have any significant loss of talent."

The four freshman Tigerettes who make up the base of that young bench talent lost but two games as eighth graders, and Phillips calls them "probably as competitive a group of freshmen as I've ever seen."

Phillips said his team is well-schooled on its fundamentals, and if the running, pressing style is easily adapted to, the Tigerettes could make a run at the district championship.

Claude won the loop crown last season and Groom finished second in a district that also includes McLean, Lefors and Phillips. Phillips ranked last year's playoffs representatives as repeat favorites, but said McLean will have to be reckoned with.

"I think right now we're one of the top three teams in the district," he said.

Corrington receives defensive laurels

By The Associated Press
Texas A&M defensive back Kip Corrington may not have single-handedly cost Arkansas a Cotton Bowl trip, but he may have cost them at least 10 points.

Corrington, intercepted a pass in the end zone and made what could have been a game-saving tackle in a 10-6 victory over the Razorbacks on Saturday, and for the effort was named The Associated Press Southwest Conference Defensive Player of the Week.

Baylor's Tom Muecke rifled three touchdown strikes and passed for over 300 yards in a 34-10 victory over Rice to earn the AP's SWC Offensive Player of the Week honors.

Corrington intercepted a pass just before the end of the first half in the Aggie end zone when the Razorbacks were within easy field goal position.

On fourth-and-2 from the Aggie 20, Bobby Joe Edmonds swept left end and was stopped inches short of the first down on a tremendous tackle by Corrington.

Red Raiders fire Moore

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Jerry Moore put down the telephone and looked at a photograph of his son, Chris, a walk-on football player at Texas Tech and said, "That was the hard part."

Moore had become the first head football coach fired in Texas Tech's 60-year history and had to deliver the bad news to his son.

The Tuesday firing by athletic director T. Jones becomes effective after Saturday's Southwest Conference game in Houston against the Cougars.

"This puts a big knot in my stomach and a lump in my throat. I'm confused and I'm hurt," Moore said.

Jones said he made a decision to fire Moore, 46, on Sunday night after a 9-7 loss to Southern Methodist.

Jones asked Moore to resign Monday night, but he refused. "A matter of pride was involved," said Moore. "I'm not bitter and I'm not going to say anything bad about the school, but I wasn't going to resign after putting in five hard years to get this program on its feet."

Speculation on Moore's replacement centered around University of Texas defensive coordinator David McWilliams and Texas Tech defensive coordinator Spike Dykes. Jones knew both coaches when he was an associate athletic director at Texas.

Moore predicted the new coach would have almost instant success because of the talent pool the Red Raiders had been building. Moore red-shirted most of this year's freshman crop and had developed some talented performers, such as quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver and sensational wide receiver Wayne Walker.

"Whoever comes in here will enjoy it because they'll have a great bunch of kids, and this could be another Baylor or a TCU in 1984 here next year," Moore said. Jones announced at a 3:30 p.m. press conference that he was "making a change in the head football position" and that he wanted Texas Tech to become more prominent on the national scene.

"I would like to see the university in a consistently competitive position and occasionally get into the Cotton Bowl," Jones said. "We have signed up for games against Ohio State and Nebraska because we feel it is important for athletes to compete against the best."

Jones said he hoped to find a replacement soon.

Two years remain on Moore's contract, which states he can be relocated within the university system.

Jones said he expected Moore to honor the contract "the way the contract reads."

Moore, who's paid almost $60,000 a year, said he would have to discuss that matter with Jones.

JACKSON MEETS GORBACHEV — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, left, gestures at Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev inside the Soviet Mission in Geneva Tuesday. Jackson arrived in the summit town Monday and delivered a petition signed by Americans to the Soviet mission. The other part of the signatures will be delivered in the States, but at a so far unknown location.

Inactive reservists to be called up for one day of active duty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite initial misgivings by the military services, the Pentagon's deputy secretary has decided to order more than 450,000 inactive reservists to serve a minimum one day a year on active duty.

A directive signed two weeks ago by Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV and disclosed on Tuesday specifies the mandatory call-ups will begin during fiscal 1987, which starts next Oct. 1.

Although final details must be worked out, Pentagon officials expect the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force to spread the call-ups throughout the year rather than specify a single, mass muster.

Members of the so-called Individual Ready Reserve who ignore their call-up orders will be subject to disciplinary action, including the possibility of receiving a less than honorable discharge.

The overall goal of the program, which was advocated strenuously by James H. Webb, the assistant defense secretary for reserve affairs, is to determine whether the men and women in the IRR are really prepared to respond to mobilization orders in the event of war.

Webb has said he is positive the program will cause bad publicity for the military, because tens of thousands of the reservists can no longer be located by mail and hundreds of thousands were placed in the IRR because of disciplinary problems or hardship.

Nonetheless, he adds, such problems must be corrected during peacetime because during the early days of any conflict, the IRR will stand as the Pentagon's sole pool of trained manpower.

Webb, who disclosed Taft's decision during an interview Tuesday, said the annual one-day musters would cost an estimated $61 million. He said Taft and Defense Secretary Caspar W.

Weinberger were now backing the program and would include a request for the funding in the fiscal 1987 budget.

"Our main goal is to get our arms around the problem," Webb said, adding the decision required no new laws or regulations.

Dole's farm bill package has conflicting proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, trying to sidestep Senate floor controversy over commodity subsidies in the 1985 farm bill, is offering sweeping new provisions that sometimes directly conflict with each other.

Dole's "multiple-choice" legislation was an admitted attempt to bring together warring farm-bill factions in a vote that would relieve senators of resolving the most difficult questions in the legislation. Instead, Dole would shift the fight to a House-Senate negotiating conference.

But success, even with the high pile of "sweeteners" added to the bill to attract votes of southern Democrats and others, was far from assured. The gambit came in an atmosphere of growing distrust and partisanship, and some Democrats were vowing to filibuster the attempt.

Central to the dispute were two major issues: federal policy over farm income subsidies for corn, wheat, cotton and rice farmers; and the overall cost of the bill, which reauthorizes everything from farm price supports to food stamps to overseas food aid.

The Reagan administration, which had objected for months to the budget-busting nature of the emerging bill, relented in recent days, offering to spend as much as $50 billion on price and income supports over the next three years — far more than the $34.8 billion called for in Congress' budget.

But it will do so only if Congress will send future farm income support levels on a downward path. The bill before the Senate would freeze the subsidies for the bill's four-year life. The administration wants a one-year freeze, with reductions of 5 percent annually in the following three years.

Having failed to win sufficient support for any version of a one-year freeze, Dole on Tuesday proposed putting the conflicting ideas — both a one-year and a four-year subsidy freeze — into the same bill. The move left some senior staff members and veteran lobbyists shaking their heads in disbelief, although Dole said there was a 1978 precedent for the attempt.

"There's a strong indication in the White House that a four-year freeze is going to be vetoed" by President Reagan, Dole warned colleagues. "Sometimes people have to compromise. ... It's my hope we can still get a bill that's going to be signed."

Among provisions in Dole's measure were a new $35-an-acre subsidy, for 1985 only, for qualifying soybean producers; increased forgiveness of federal loans to rice growers; higher disaster payments for soybeans and sugar crops damaged by bad weather.

First ladies bury time capsule message

GENEVA (AP) — Nancy Reagan and Raisa Gorbachev today buried a joint message in the cornerstone of a new Red Cross museum expressing hope for "peace and harmony for all mankind."

The American and Soviet first ladies were joined by Ursula Furgler, wife of Swiss President Kurt Furgler. They put identical messages, in English, French and Russian, in a metal time capsule, which was then placed in the museum's cornerstone and cemented over.

Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Gorbachev were to meet again later today for tea at the Soviet mission. At the first of the "tea summits" Tuesday, the two talked about home and family, and invited each other to visit their countries.

At the museum, Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Gorbachev exchanged their messages, rolled in white paper and tied with different colored ribbons, before placing them in the capsule.

The message read: "This stone is laid in hopes that this museum will contribute to the understanding and strengthening of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent movement and that it will inspire future generations around the world to seek peace and harmony for all mankind."
