Parade launches holiday season

Lights, trees, angels, dancers, bands, choirs, Santa Claus and a parade all will mark the official opening of the community holiday season this weekend.

The annual torchlight parade, sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, will move out at 6 p.m. Friday from its gathering place at Cuyler and Craven streets and wind its way through the center of town toward the M. K. Brown Auditorium parking lot.

The bands, floats, police patrol cars and color guard, fire truck, church choirs, bicyles, classic cars and Santa Claus will go north on Cuyler to Francis.

From there the parade will move west on Francis to Ward, then north on Ward to Hobart. At the Somerville bridge the parade will turn west into the auditorium parking lot, where it will disband.

Spectators and parade participants then are encouraged to gather in Coronado Park for the lighting of the community Nativity scene and the community Christmas tree, erected and decorated in conjunction with the city's Parks and Recreation Department.

Those planning to catch the parade at Hobart and Somerville may visit the Festival of Christmas Trees and Gift Boutique in the M. K. Brown Auditorium as doors open to the public at 6 p.m. After the parade and the lightings in the park, visitors may tour the festival event until 9 p.m. Friday.

The festival, featuring decorated Christmas trees, crafts, children's story hours, crafts demonstrations and displays by artists and craftsmen, will also be open from 1 to 7 p.m. Saturday and from 1 to

Band parents to seek meeting with trustees

Leaders of the Pride of Pampa Band Booster Club decided Wednesday night to try to place themselves on the agenda for the next meeting of the Pampa Independent School Board, Dec. 17, club president Danny Courtney said this morning

The decision is the latest chapter of a saga that began in early November, when the high school band was disqualified from state marching competition in Austin because an ineligible student under the state's no pass, no play rule was inadvertently marched at a district contest in Vernon. The University Interscholastic League also stripped the band of its Division I ranking earned at Vernon.

The band eventually traveled to Austin and marched to a Division II rating after band parents obtained temporary restraining orders in Pampa and Austin, permitting the band to march in the state contest

The school board investigated the incident by talking to the teachers involved and to High said. However, he noted, the School Principal Oran Chappell. In a statement issued Nov. 19 it said it considered its investigation of the matter closed, despite a request by band parents several days earlier to meet with the school board.

School officials have said, and records indicate, the band parents never formally requested to be on the board's agenda and did not informally ask to be heard at any school board meeting. Courtney said he had trouble getting everybody together to make a decision on how to approach the school board due to the holiday season and people being out of

The band parents met the night of Nov. 15, too late for their request to be placed on the Nov. 19 agenda. Formal requests to be on the board's agenda must come at least five days before a meeting.

Courtney said the silence of band parents during the board meetings is also a matter of not being able to get organized prior to the meeting.

"A lot of it, too, is ignorance on our part as to how to do that," he parents did invite the board publicly, through the media, to meet with them and discuss evidence the parents have.

Courtney said he has met with several board members individually since the Nov. 19 meeting and several have told him the board should have asked the parents to speak.

At the Dec. 17 meeting, Courtney said, the parents plan to ask five major questions of the board. The parents plan to ask

- if the district is required by policy to send home a failing slip three weeks into the semester.

"Our whole thing was based on this failing slip thing," Courtney said. The mother of the student in question testified she was never notified of her son's failing grade.

Assistant Superintendent John English said although parents are to be notified after three weeks if their child is failing, the student in question did not have a failing grade at the three week period, and there was, therefore, no reason to

Local jobless rate improves

The unemployment rate for Pampa and Gray County fell half a percentage point in October. according to figures released by the local Texas Employment Commission office today

Pampa's unemployment rate dropped to 5.4 percent from the 5.9 rate recorded in September, while the Gray County rate fell from 6.0 to 5.5 percent

The September figures showed increases in the number of persons holding jobs and declines in the number of jobless. The rates improved even though the total

There was no immediate explanation for the improvement in the employmyment picture.

"There was no activity in our office to indicate why the rates dropped," said Charles Vance. manager of the local TEC office.

The October figures do not reflect the usual increase in number of temporary jobs available during the Christmas

The figures showed that Pampa had 10,115 persons holding jobs, up from 9,863 recorded a month earlier. The number of unemployed fell from 614 to 580, while the total labor force grew from 10,477 to 10,695. In Gray County, the number of jobholders increased from 12.896 to 13,163, while the total unemployed fell from 773 to 730. The total labor force grew from 12,896 to 13,163.

Vance reported that the TEC office had job listings for a licensed plumber, convenience store clerk and fast food workers this morning.

In the four area counties served by the Pampa TEC office, the jobless rate fell in all but Lipscomb, where it climbed slightly from 1.9 to 2.2 percent.

Hemphill's unemployment rate fell from 7.3 to 7.2 percent; Roberts' dropped from 1.9 to 1.6 and Wheeler's declined from 5.3 to 4.4 percent.

Pampa man found guilty in cocaine trial

BY PAUL PINKHAM Staff Writer

A jury found a 22 - year - old Pampa man guilty of cocaine possession Wednesday and 223rd District Judge Don Cain fined him $2,000 and sentenced him to 10 years of probation

The jury of eight men and four women deliberated about 40 minutes before finding Steve Paul Echols, 2200 Beech, guilty after two days of testimony. Echols was arrested in the Citizens Bank and Trust parking lot on July 20, 1984, along with Billy Phillips of Oklahoma Phillips is in the Gray County Jail awaiting further court proceedings in his case. He is also charged with possession.

In his closing argument, Assistant District Attorney David Hamilton, pointed to testimony earlier in the day by Duane Harp, a Citizens Bank vice president, who said he first saw a blue Cadillac occupied by two white males in the parking lot at about 10 a.m. and, after several hours, became concerned because it was still there and called the sheriff's office. Sheriff's Deputy Doug Davis testified that he arrested the two men from a blue Cadillac at about 4 p.m.

Davis said he found containers of marijuana, cocaine and other substances in the car, although only the marijuana and cocaine were admitted as evidence before the jury

"Were they out there talking about football? Were they out there talking about their girlfriends? Do you think they were out there counting daisies in that parking lot?" Hamilton asked the jury. "The evidence is they were out there snorting cocaine in that parking lot.

But Echols attorney, Phil Vanderpool, called Hamilton's evidence "overwhelmingly confusing. He said one of the few established facts in the case is that Echols was a passenger in Phillips' car.

"He was a man in the wrong place at the wrong time, and if he's guilty of anything, he's guilty of that," Vanderpool told the jury. "You have to make a connection between Steve Echols and the contraband that was found in that car.

Vanderpool questioned the length of time his client was in the car by pointing to testimony by the defendant's father. Robert Echols, who testified that his son called him at noon for lunch the day of the arrest and went by a car dealership shortly after 1 p.m. to see about getting his car worked on. He said his son's car was at home when he got home from work

Mr. Echols said Jay Holmes, an employee at the dealership, told him his son had been in that day, but, when he talked to Holmes this week, Holmes said he could not testify as to the date.

Vanderpool also noted neither client was charged with public intoxication or driving while intoxicated and neither was given a blood or breath test. He said there was no reference to intoxication in Davis' report, although Davis testified the subjects were, in his opinion, intoxicated.

'Why do we all of a sudden come up with it now?'' Vanderpool asked. "The only thing the state has to connect him to that cocaine in that car is intoxication.

Davis had testified the hospital will sometimes turn down a blood test request if suspects are belligerent, which the suspects were, he said Hamilton had some more questions of his own. He questioned why the defendant's father would wait almost a year and a half to ask Holmes to testify and why he would wait more than a day to get his son out of jail if he believed in his innocence.

Echols elected to have his punishment chosen by Cain and not the jury and Cain reached his decision after testimony by Sheriff's Deputy Jerry Holland, who said the defendant has a bad reputation, and the Echols' mother, Reed Echols.

Mrs. Echols said the penitentiary would be "completely inappropriate" for her son, comparing it to a death sentence. She said her son has potential and added she feels he can live up to the terms of probation.

"Some kids take longer to mature than others," she said. "Knowing Steve like I do, I think prison would be almost a death sentence for him.

She said she does not feel his crime is the type of offense that deserves a prison sentence.

White Deer school report blasts new state requirements

BY CATHY SPAULDING Staff Writer

WHITE DEER - Having to produce a 62-page performance report when the state is calling for paperwork reduction is a "farce" White Deer-Skellytown School officials believe

Still, White Deer-Skellytown superintendent Tom Harkey managed to use the report to criticize such state education mandates as the performance report, career ladder merit pay and a discipline management program.

While admitting the state education reforms helped focus attention on academic excellence, Harkey said that school administrators and teachers are getting frustrated because of "ill thought-out programs and procedures for implementing these programs."

'As a result of poor planning on the part of our legislators, the State Board of Education and the Texas Education Agency, numerous policies have been defined and redefined in a short period of time," he wrote. "These poor planning techniques have resulted One of a series in a great deal of confusion and unneccesary duplication of work." "The reduction of paperwork called for by the state is a farce," this report." Harkey observed that the TEA "does not and should not have the adequate staff to get around to reading more than 1,100 annual performance reports.

he declared. "A prime example is

'The average layman in the community will not understand many of the items contained in this report," he wrote, adding all the information the school spent more than 100 hours compiling is already on file at the TEA and the report "produces nothing that the schools were not already aware of and using.

Another batch of paperwork that Harkey would like to do away with is the state mandated Discipline Management Program. He claimed that the program has diminished the effectiveness of the school in disciplining students and has increased the faculty's work

No students were suspended, removed from school, assigned to home based instruction or referred to the criminal justice system during the 1985 school year, he reported.

Harkey also criticized the career ladder program, claiming it caused a "tremendous loss of respect" for state officials. The school placed more than half of its teachers - 27 out of 49 - on the second level of the career ladder. Those teachers received a $1,500 pay supplement in June.

Harkey concluded that because of state mandates and decreases in state funding, the school district is assuming a much greater portion of the financial burden of the school program.

Harkey said that if such programs are not revised, the tax burden will be "astronomical."

"The taxpayer will not and should not sit idly by and allow such a burden to destroy an otherwise productive school system and community.' See WHITE DEER, Page two

Alco to expand store size in move to Ward building

Alco Discount Store in the Coronado Center will be moving to an expanded store in the spring of 1986, manager Bob Chambers announced this morning in a press conference at the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

Alco, which has been at its present location since April, 1977. will be relocated to the building previously occupied by Montgomery Ward's on the south end of Coronado Center.

The building will be extensively renovated and remodeled. Chambers said. The interior will be completely removed and reconstructed, including all new ceilings, lighting, flooring and fixtures.

The expanded store will provide Pampa with an Alco that will be approximately 58 percent larger than the current building on the north end of the shopping center off Hobart and Kentucky streets, Chambers explained.

"It will enable Alco to carry expanded lines of merchandise in most every area," he stated.

The new building was made available through Coronado Center Management, represented by Ralph G. Davis, Inc., Amarillo realtor.

The renovation will be done by Wiley Hicks, Jr., general contractors of Amarillo, with local contractors including Quarles Electric and Malcolm Hinkle Plumbing and Heating.

Chambers said no date has been set yet for the store to move into its new facilities. He said it will be sometime in the spring, depending on how the renovation and remodeling progresses.

He said the store probably will be adding additional employees but that has yet to be determined.

'The support of Pampa and the neighboring communities has made the new store possible,' Chambers claimed. "Alco associates enjoy serving Pampa and wish to thank our trading area for making the expansion and relocation possible.

The expansion is the second for the corporation in Pampa.

Alco has been in Pampa since the mid 1960s, when it was named Duckwall Variety Store. The business was first located in the present Cinema IV location and then moved into an expanded Piggly Wiggly Grocery Store building in April, 1977, as Alco Discount Store. Steve Jones, vice president of both the Chamber and the Pampa Industrial Foundation, said Alco's commitment to the expansion speaks well of the diversity and variety of the economic base in Pampa.

"Alco has confidence in our economy, and they've shown it by their expansion plans," he said.

Jones also praised Alco and their employees for their involvement in community affairs.

Chamber Manager Floyd Sackett said the expansion "is a positive thing" and should be beneficial for the local economy.

Chambers said the corporation's vice president of real estate had been in the city earlier this week to check on the facilities.

Although the school received $10,000 more in federal funds in 1985 ($43,039, compared with $32,417 in 1984), state funds dropped from $512,976 in 1984 to $399,852 in 1985.

Funding from local sources rose steadily from $2,398,090 to $2,563,972 in 1985. Total revenue rose from $2.6 million in 1983 to barely over $3 million in 1985. But, Harkey said, the district's

A state district court jury ruled Nov. 19 that Texaco used unethical tactics to break up a merger agreement between Getty Oil Co. and Pennzoil Co. Texaco bought Getty Oil early last year for $10.1

Jurors recommended Pennzoil get $7.53 billion in actual damages and $3 billion in punitive damages, the highest civil judgment in U.S. history. The award, nearly $2 billion more than Texaco's stock market value, could bring the company to its knees, Texaco officials said

Visiting Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. scheduled a hearing for today to decide whether to accept, reduce or reverse the jury's ruling Houston-based Pennzoil is asking

Casseb to accept the judgment. But Texaco argued it doesn't owe Pennzoil anything. The jury's award is "remote and speculative" and a product of numerous errors, according to motions filed

Wednesday with the court.

"As a matter of law, the maximum amount of damages, if any, that could be awarded under the appropriate damage theory would be $496 million," according to Texaco. The amount was based on a $15.50 a share difference between Pennzoil's offer of $112.50 a share and the $128 per share paid by Texaco.

Even if the judge upholds the $10.53 billion award, Texaco can seek another jury trial and appeal the verdict.

But Texas law requires that if defendants appeal a damage judgment, they must post a bond in cash or liquid assets equal to an award, plus attorneys' fees and

Texaco's appeal bond would total almost $12 billion, a sum Texaco officials say is beyond the company's ability to pay. The White Plains, N.Y.-based company has a stock market value of $8.6

If the company had to post a $12 billion bond, Texaco officials said they would seek all available legal remedies, including reorganization proceedings under federal bankruptcy laws.

"If we had to pay the judgment, it would mean the destruction of the company," Texaco Vice Chairman James Kinnear said.

Texaco stock has fallen $7.75 a share from $39.25 on Nov. 18 to $31.50 by Wednesday.

CONROE, Texas (AP) -Anthony Scambray didn't have to check his household closet for skeletons — he found part of one in a local creek when he went bass

Scambray and his brother-in-law Eddie Cox were fishing at Rush Creek in Montgomery County when something apparently took the bait

"I said, 'That's looks like some kind of head. And my brother-in-law said, 'It is a head,' said Scambray of his catch last Friday. "I guess I hold the Conroe record for catching the most skelton heads while fishing.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) -There was nothing the pilot of Delta Air Lines Flight 191 could do to recover from wind shear the plane encountered before an Aug. 2 crash at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, a Delta pilot said at a seminar on the weather phenomenon

(AP Laserphoto)

The pilot, Bill Melvin, said Wednesday that anybody who thinks extensive flight training can overcome wind shear is "whistling past the graveyard."

A government study conducted by a NASA researcher concluded the flight crew of Delta 191, whose crash killed 137, could have flown the L-1011 out of a wind shear, a violent downburst of air from a thunderstorm But Melvin, head of the Air Line Pilots Association's airworthiness committee who was among the speakers, said people greatly underestimate the power of wind shears. "We've shown that analysis to a number of professors," Melvin said, "and we feel it will not stand the test of time. In another presentantion at the seminar sponsored by the National Weather Service and the Federal Aviation Administration, a physicist said improved pilot training and better detection equipment are the answer to windshear hazards to airliners. "Pilots have come a long way in the last 10 years," said Dr. Fernando Caracena, a physicist with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

But still a lot are not sufficiently concerned or not well informed about the microburst (windshear) problem. I'd like the number to be zero," Caracena Caracena said there is no general forecasting technique for windshears.

And there is no storm too small to cause windshear.

Another speaker, United Air Lines pilot David Simmon, said 40 percent of airline disasters in the past 40 years were windshear

Asked if windshear is the greatest danger or fear in the said, "I think it probably is."

Simmon has been a United pilot 29 years and has been involved in pilot training.

The problem of windshear, he said, "will be generally solved when we can put into service the advances made by improvements in aviation safety. It will be achievable in the next five to 10

ELYSIAN FIELDS, Texas (AP) - Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission officials stopped an an illegal whiskey-making operation by smashing 55-gallon drums and chopping copper tubing and glass

Officials from Harrison, Gregg and Upshur counties discovered the "moonshine operation" last week, said TABC agent Jim Hays.

"Like with anything of this nature, we received information that the still was operating, and we located it and watched it until the old man got it brewing good. We try to catch the people in the act and that usually takes a lot of walking through the woods and staking out places. But it pays off," Hays said.

He said that agents planned later to investigate a report of another still north of Marshall. He said the raid was the first of the year

How else but by rebellion? My friend put down the newspaper he was reading.

"These letters to the editor today are interesting," he said.
"You actually read those?" I asked, turning away from the TV set. Well, of course. I find they can sometimes give me different perspectives on what's happening. Like this letter on the South African situation.

'What's in it?'' I inquired, trying to view the show out of the corners of my eyes and hear the sound over what I knew would be a long period of chatter from him.

This guy points out that the blacks in South Africa are really better off than their counterparts in most other African nations. There's apparently thousands of blacks trying to get into that country so they can live better.

'Live better than what? "Huh? Well, you know, better than they were living in the other "In actuality," I said, forgetting the TV, "they probably will be better off. There just ain't much going for them in the other African

"Yeah. So, see, this guy says the blacks in South Africa shouldn't be causing so much trouble because they really have it good.' 'Oh? I suppose they have it good just like the whites in that

'Well, I don't know about that . . . '' he started to say "That's for sure," I interrupted. "You don't know, if you get your information only from letters by self - appointed experts. The letter writer ignores the real conditions. Apparently all that should matter to the blacks is that they have a job. Typical comfortable American

'What do you mean?' my friend asked, putting down his

How the blacks are living — or not living — in the rest of Africa is really irrelevant to what's happening in South Africa. The turmoil, the fight for rights is coming from those who have lived in the nation for generations, amid a supposedly democratic — or republican form of government."

'So they haven't been getting all the benefits that should acrue them from such a system. Sure, they have better jobs, a better lifestyle even, perhaps. But they really haven't shared in the blessings of a so - called free society: no real voting rights, no real rights of property, no freedom of movement, no equality with the white minority. Until recently, they were even limited in who they could choose to marry. Well, sure, I've heard all about those problems. And the others, before you bring them up. But they do have a better standard of living then their other black neighbors," my friend argued "Is that's all that's important? What if you were offered a job, good pay, but only at the expense of your rights to choose where you would work, who you could have as friends, who you could marry, where you could travel in your off time and so on. Would it be worth it to

"Of course not. This is a free nation. What's the use of being free if you can't enjoy some freedoms?' 'That's my point

"Okay, a good point, I admit. Even so, those blacks shouldn't be causing all that trouble. They're breaking the laws of the land, for

'Just because they're the laws don't mean they're just.'' 'Oh, come on now, that sounds like you support rebellion," he stated forcefully

"How do you think we Americans got our freedoms? By a democratic vote? By waiting patiently for the British to accede to our wishes? By meekly submitting to harsh and unjust laws? Hell, no. We - pardon the expression - actually rebelled, we fought, we drove the British out." I noted

'Yeah, but it was different back then,' he said, though not so forcefully "Sure, it was over 200 years ago, and the weapons weren't so powerful, and there was no extensive media coverage, and there was no communism - before you bring that up," I stated. "People today conveniently forget that 'democracy' was as abhorred back then as Marxism' is today "But," I continued, lifting my finger to stop his attempt to interrupt, "like it or not, rebellion is still as much an instrument for change today as it was then. It's just that America, with its settled traditions and systems, now too often finds itself on the other side of

"What do you mean?"

"We fear rebellions today for the same reasons that other nations feared it hundreds and thousands of years ago. It could interrupt our business interests, our trade routes, our alliances. Our objections come not because we're wiser; it's just the old selfish self - interests crouched in new language.

"Again," I interrupted, "Americans have conveniently forgotten that even in our own nation, many of our rights have been won from rebellion, from confrontations, from armed battles with the wealthy and powerful and with their servants.

"Oh, yeah? Like what?" "Like minority rights. Like unions. Like the women's vote. Like the end of slavery. And more. Go read your history books more thoroughly. He remained silent

"Rebellion — and I think it's unfortunate — will always remain a factor in the battle for human rights and freedoms until we all learn to accept and to truly share in our brotherhood and sisterhood. Until we can willingly grant others the rights, freedoms and respect we expect for ourselves.

I turned back to the TV, but not really watching it. 'I just wonder how the letter writer feels about the attempts of the Poles to gain freedoms, how he felt about Hungary and Czechoslovakia. He probably supported them; after all, those rebels

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the fight to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consisfent with the coveting commandment.

The public pays for unemployment

We've said it before and, as more and more information comes to light, we'll say it again. Massive government spending doesn't necessarily solve problems-often it makes them worse.

A new study by the National Academy of Sciences reports exactly that: too many federal anti-povery programs are at the least wasteful and often counterproductive.

This particular study focused on jobs programs-by the late 1970s there were 23 different government-run programs reaching 6 million youths and costing $2 billion. But look at the results: unemployment among non-white men aged 20-24 actually increased from 12.7 percent in 1957 to 20 percent in 1977. Although not as dramatic, there was also a slight increase in unemployment for whites in the same category

The government finally caught on to the problems its programs had caused. In 1977, it came out with the Youth Employment and Demonstrations Projects Act. According to the NAS study, that program failed as well.

In fact. NAS says the only program that showed any positive results was the Job Corps. But there are many who believe the Job Corps. too. with its $824.5 million price-tag in fiscal 1985, is wasteful. The Reagan administration is looking to abolish the program— as it has several others, replacing them with the Jobs Training Partnership Act that reduced the federal role in favor of the private sector.

What do you expect, argues economist Walter Williams, from a government that discourages productivity by taxing wages and encourages laziness by subsidizing unemployment? what do you expect from a government that comes up with a disincentive to minority hiring— the minimum wage law— and then spends billions to train minority youths anyway

As Rep. Jack Kemp. R-N.Y., is fond of pointing out. minimum-wage jobs are often less profitable than taking advantage of federal benefit programs.

You get what you pay for.

Balanced budget amendment

By CHARLES D. VAN EATON

For the second time in less than a year, the Michigan House of Representatives has failed to pass a resolution, previously approved by the Michigan Senate, which would issue a call for a constitutional convention to propose a balanced-budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution

When this issue first came before the Michigan House last spring, I offered testimony in favor of its approval before the House Appropriations Committee. That effort failed. It's hard to say with perfect certainty why it failed because there was absolutely no one who testified on the bill who had anything good to say about the federal deficit or about the probability that Congress would do anything about it.

Yet both last spring and this fall two arguments against the constitutional convention continued to be made. One was made by conservative opponents if the convention call and another was made by the proposal's liberal critics. Of the two, it seems to me that the conservatives' objection carried little or no weight with the House. The liberals' objection, however, seemed to impress the Michigan House just enough to provide the margin against passage.

Conservative opposition against a constitutional convention to prepare a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution or, for that matter, even a balanced-budget amendment prepared by Congress itself, was based on the fear that such an amendment would largely, if not solely, rely on tax increases to achieve a balanced federal

Editorial writers of the Detroit News spoke out strongly against Michigan's passage of a balanced-budget constitutional convention call on precisely that point. "The real danger is that the nation would get a balanced budget amendment requiring high taxes . . . a balanced budget amendment would simply be an excuse to tax the nation up to congressional spending habits," was the theme established by the Detroit News.

The liberal objection to a constitutional convention was based on the argument that such a convention could not be limited to one issue and could result in the destruction of the Bill of Rights. It would, they argued, be a "runaway convention" threatening our most basic civil liberties.

Former U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell has argued that a "runaway convention" would be flatly impossible. Bell has been joined in this view by a host of constitutional scholars, including John T. Noonan of the University of California at Berkeley, who is generally regarded as one of the legal professions' most astute constitutional

My own response to the Detroit News' objection to a call for a balanced-budget amendment is that they seem not to have carefully read the amendment which has already been cleared by the U.S. Senate (Senate Joint Resolution 58) and which barely failed to pass the U.S. House (House Joint Resolution 350). Section 2 of this amendment explicitly states that "Total receipts for any fiscal year set forth in the statement adopted pursuant to this article shall not increase by a rate greater than the rate of increase in national income in the year or years ending not less than six months nor more than twelve months before such fiscal year." In fact the amendment which some conservatives fear is both a tax-limitation and a balanced-budget amendment. This fear is, in my opinion, misplaced.

The liberals who testified before the Michigan House know that a balanced-budget amendment to the U.S. Constitution would achieve a balanced budget through spending cuts. That's why they oppose it. All their talk about a "runaway convention" was, and is, a smokescreen.

Michigan, being the big-spending welfare state that it is, has more than its share of people who enjoy eating at the federal trough. Furthermore, they know that if Michigan's legislature issued a call for a constitutional convention to prepare a balanced-budget amendment the U.S. Congress would have no choice except to pass SJR 58 and HJR 350 and submit it to the states for ratification. The issue of a balanced budget, they fully understand, as a matter of spending, not taxes.

Are we ever going to have a balanced budget through spending cuts? Without an amendment to the U.S. Constitution, I do not believe we will. Neither did Thomas Jefferson. A decade after the U.S. Constitution was written Jefferson wrote, "I wish it were possible to obtain a single amendment to our Constitution. I would be willing to depend on that alone for the reduction of the reduction of the administration of our government to the genuine principles of its Constitution; I mean an additional article, taking from the federal government the power of borrowing.

Since 1964 there have been four explicit statutes passed by Congress requiring a balanced budget. Congress has ignored all of them. At this moment Congress has been unable to agree to legislation raising the debt ceiling because the Gramm-Rudman provision attached to it required spending cuts to bring about a balanced budget.

Only a strict Constitutional amendment will do what has to be done - restrict taxes, reduce spending, and balance the budget.

Sad time for yard man

Ottis (Smokey) Bailey looked me up one day last week. It has been at least a couple of years since

"I been prayin' hard for you, Brother Grizzard." he said

I said I appreciated that.

"I was even going to come see you in the hospital," he went on, "but I couldn't get a ride." Smokey said he kept up with my recent illness through the papers. "The Lord can shore bring you down in a hurry, can't he?" Smokey said, and I agreed wholeheartedly.

You meet some unforgettable people in my line of work. Soon after I started this column - it's hard to believe it's almost nine years ago - I met Smokey when I went to pick up a date at his apartment building.

Smokey was the yard man there. On the side, he was a street preacher. What was unique about his street preaching was that he did more than

Soon after the Bibles thing, Smokey got fired. The landlady said Smokey had been giving away Bibles instead of taking care of the apartment

She literally kicked him out. I found Smokey sitting on the sidewalk in front of the apartment building with all his earthly belongings, which

Smokey said he was living with some relatives now and, try as he would, he just couldn't find decent work anymore. "Yard work just ain't around anymore," he explained. "I go by and see my regular customers and they say they done hired a landscaper and didn't need me no more. "I say, 'Listen, here, I can do yard work and landscaping, too.' They say, 'We don't need you no

"You need help, Smokey?" I asked him: "I could use just a little," he answered.

I gave him a couple of small bills.

He smiled his toothless smile, thanked me and then he was gone.

Beyond credentials of judge nominee

By ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — In theory, President Reagan ought to have little difficulty in securing Senate confirmation of his nomination of Alex Kozinski to fill an important federal judicial position.

Kozinski's supporters in the Senate include Republicans and Democrats, liberals and conservatives. His judicial, academic and political credentials are impeccable.

If confirmed to a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit, which reviews the decisions of all federal trial courts in the nation's nine westernmost states, the 35-year-old Kozinski would be the youngest federal appellate court judge in the

Moreover, there is recurrent speculation in legal circles that Kozinski is being groomed by the Reagan administration for a seat on the Supreme Court. That would make him the first Jewish justice named to the high tribunal by a Republican president since Benjamin N. Cardozo was nominated by Herbert Hoover in 1932. But Reagan's selection of Kozinski for the appeals court seat has lan-guished in the Senate for more than four months - and it is becoming increasingly controversial because of the nominee's record during the past 4

Kozinski graduated first in his class at UCLA Law School, worked for the prestigious Washington law firm of Covington & Burling and served as a clerk to Chief Justice Warren Burger. He was a volunteer worker in Reagan's 1980 presidential campaign and served in the White House legal coun-sel's office in early 1981. The presi-dent then selected him to be special counsel to the Merit Systems Protection Board. The special counsel is supposed to protect the constitutional rights of federal employees, especially of "whistleblowers" who frequently are threatened with reprisals after they expose illegality, fraud or abuse of authority.

During Kozinski's 14-month-long tenure in 1981-82, approximately 1,500 complaints were filed by whistleblowers and other government workers alleging that they had been victims of illegal personnel practices. But Kozinski's record in protecting those employees was abysmal. He called for corrective action in only one case of alleged illegal reprisal and never recommended disciplinary action against managers accused of mistreating subordinates.

His lack of sympathy for the workers contrasted with his affinity for their bosses. He prepared a manual and conducted seminars instructing managers and personnel officers how to suppress dissent within their departments and agencies

Pollard has been charged with espionage and is being held without bond. His wife, Anne Henderson-Pollard, also is being held without bail pending grand jury action on charges of unauthorized possession of classified documents.

Israel has apologized publicly for the alleged espionage "to the extent that it did take place," and said if espionage is confirmed by investigators, any spy unit involved would be disbanded. Such a unit is believed to operate out of the Defense Ministry.

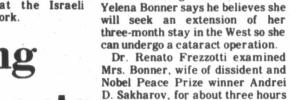

An Israeli source here said, meanwhile, "No one was spying on the United States. If there was anything it was to gather information on others.'

Individuals who violate the law could be fined up to $200 and could be prosecuted in municipal court, but only after a complaint is filed with the city attorney's office.

"This ordinance changes the presumption that smoking is okay when you walk into a public building," said Dallas attorney Joe Guida, chairman of the city subcommittee that developed the ordinance.

More than 20 speakers from both groups appeared before the council Wednesday to present their positions.

Smoking was formerly considered legal in banks, grocery and other retail stores unless it was restricted by a sign.

The new ordinance, which takes effect on Feb. 6 and will make Dallas among dozens with similar restrictions, requires restaurants with 50 or more seats (about 80 percent of the city's total) to set aside an unspecified number of tables for non-smokers and to prohibit smoking in common areas, such as restrooms and around cash registers.

Actress Anne Baxter hospitalized

NEW YORK (AP) - Academy Award-winning actress Anne Baxter remained hospitalized in critical condition early today, authorities said. She reportedly had suffered a stroke.

Miss Baxter, 62, was in the Lenox Hill Hospital intensive care unit, and her condition had remained unchanged since Wednesday, Beulah Corrigan, a hospital spokeswoman, said this morning.

The actress collapsed on the street and was admitted to the hospital at 10:15 a.m. Wednesday, Ms. Corrigan said, but would not discuss the actress's ailment.

Miss Baxter's Los Angeles publicist, Joyce Wagner, told the New York Post, "She's had a serious stroke.

"We don't know yet what damage has been done. The next 48 hours will tell," she said.

The actress, granddaughter of architect Frank Lloyd Wright, currently appears on ABC-TV's "Hotel" in the role of Victoria Cabot, the wealthy widow who runs the hotel.

She joined the series after Bette Davis, who starred as hotel owner Laura Trent, was taken ill in 1983. Bill Barron, the press agent for "Hotel," said the television show is currently in production and he doesn't know what will happen as a result of Miss Baxter's illness.

"We are all praying for her," said Douglas Cramer, executive producer of the "Hotel" series. She made her Broadway debut at age 13 in "Seen But Not Heard." Miss Baxter made her feature

Her television roles include the miniseries "East of Eden," and "The Money Changers," the TV movies "Little Mo" and the BBC's "Masks of Death." She also has appeared in "The Love Boat."

Miss Baxter also wrote "Intermission: A True Story," a critically acclaimed, best-selling book about her life as the wife of cattle rancher Randolph Galt in Australia after she left Hollywood.

ublicity-shy physicist takes security council helm

Poindexter, the publicity-shy nuclear physicist picked as President Reagan's new national security adviser, says he is not worried about White House power struggles because of assurances of unchallenged access to the Oval Poindexter, the No. 2 an on the National Security Council staff, moved up Wednesday with the resignation of his boss, Robert C.

Despite well-publicized friction with White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, McFarlane denied he was leaving because of any feud. "That's nonsense," he replied.

Reagan also dismissed reports of tension between the two top aides. 'You have all been misinformed about that," the president told reporters during an appearance in the White House press briefing room with McFarlane and Poindexter.

A 27-year Navy officer with the rank of vice admiral, Poindexter was virtually unknown outside the realm of foreign policy and defense

He shuns contacts with reporters and once, on the eve of the U.S. invasion of Grenada, instructed presidential spokesman Larry Speakes to tell a reporter that it was "preposterous" that American forces were about to land on the tiny island.

During the brief appearance with the president and McFarlane, Poindexter said he was not concerned that he will face a power struggle with Regan, the strong-willed, frequently combative ex-Marine who ran the Treasury Department in Reagan's first term.

"The Navy and the Marine Corps always get along well together, Poindexter said. "I don't anticipate any problems."

As far as access to the president is concerned, Poindexter said, Don Regan told me that yesterday, that I had direct access. So, it won't be a problem.'

The president underscored the point. "I can just simply say that the national security adviser reports directly to me and does not go through the chief of staff.'

McFarlane, concluding 30 years of government service - most of it in the Marine Corps, is expected to land a high-paying job in private business or perhaps take a job in academia. As of now, however, he said, "I have no plans and I don't

"If you've got any leads, let me know," he joshed to reporters. The light-hearted comment belied the seriousness and emotionality of the moment, which was apparent in McFarlane's somber face and red-rimmed eyes, glistening with tears.

Reagan said Poindexter, who joined the NSC staff as a military assistant in 1981, was "a truly steady hand at the helm" and that his appointment was a symbol of "the great value I place in the continuity of our foreign policy." One senior administration official, speaking privately, predicted Poindexter would keep a much lower profile than McFarlane, an occasional guest on network television talk shows, but would be influential with Reagan.

Philosophically, Poindexter is 'cut from the same cloth as McFarlane - a hard-line pragmatist," the official said.

By MICHAEL PUTZEL AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - When contact with all three presidential President Reagan announced he was changing national security advisers, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan was conspicuously absent from his usual place just off stage.

But he was no less the center of attention.

There were widespread reports that it was friction between Regan and outgoing National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane particularly over access to the president - that led to McFarlane's decision to resign.

McFarlane dismissed the reports as nonsense on Wednesday, and his successor, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, assured reporters Regan had promised him direct access to the president

But the latest White House personnel change nonetheless was interpreted in many quarters as yet another case in which the chief of staff had cemented his own position as gatekeeper to the Regan's been in it than it has in a long time.

There used to be three to take the various lightning bolts aimed at this place," said the aide, recalling Reagan's first term when James A. Baker III, Michael K. Deaver and Edwin Meese III shared power just beneath Reagan. "Now, there's

But that explanation, by an aide who with others inside the White House discussed the McFarlane departure and Regan's role in it on condition they not be named, doesn't fully explain the controversy that dogs Reagan's second-term chief of staff.

Regan's brusque, impatient style and his perceived tendency - one he vociferously denies - to surround himself with faceless. loyal followers have made him a prime target of critics inside the administration and on Capitol Hill who prefer not to Regan's more amiable and much more popular boss. Congressional Republicans question Regan's political savvy. And there were cries of outrage from members of both parties during last month's summit meeting between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev when Regan was quoted as saying women were less interested in substantive issues than in the two leaders' wives.

One observer who served on the senior staff in a previous administration says of Regan, the former Treasury secretary and chairman of Merrill Lynch & Co., "He thinks he's in the executive suite of his old company, where he says, 'Jump!' and everybody jumps. But the White House isn't that kind of place. It's a collegial environment, not a fiefdom. There is, indeed, hardly anyone left at the top strata of the White House who doesn't owe his job to Don Regan. McFarlane was among DALLAS (AP) - Builders of the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant have been criticized by a federal licensing panel for misleading the board on sampling of U-bolts in the plant.

The Atomic Safety and Licensing Board order, released on Tuesday by tehe Citizens Association for Sound Energy, urged Texas Utilities Generating Co. to be more 'careful, precise and trustworthy.

The order found that a random 'representative sample' U-bolts examined last year by the utility did not include any bolts in Unit 1, the first reactor scheduled to become operational in the two-unit plant. The Unit 2 bolts may have been representative of the Unit 1 bolts but the utility never presented any such evidence, said Peter Bloch, board chairman.

The board said the effect was to

Trying to save American Motors with private investment

By ROBERT O'MEARA Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AI') — Patrick J. Lucey is no stranger to challenges — he was John Anderson's running mate in the 1980 presidential campaign — and now the former governor and ambassador is working to keep American Motors Corp. in Wisconsin.

His second objective is to help the troubled automaker regain its financial health. And he has to accomplish both tasks that without state money.

"We have to do everything we can to keep them alive and keep them here," Lucey, 67, says of his assignment from a fellow Democrat, Gov. Anthony S. Earl. AMC says it can't survive in its AMC says it can't survive in its antique facilities in Kenosha, and will decide by this spring where it will locate a new factory.

For the 4,100 AMC employees in Kenosha, and for the city, the issue is critical. Unemployment in Kenosha County was 11.2 percent in September, compared to 6.8 percent statewide.

The company has two plants in Kenosha, where boarded-up storefronts blight a downtown mall only a decade old. About 77,000 people live in the southeastern Wisconsin city hard by Lake Michigan.

AMC's balance sheet looks just as dismal

From 1980 through 1984, the company reported losses of $622.5 million. In 1984, AMC managed a modest profit of $15.5 million, but through the first three quarters of this year it is $118 million in the

AMC's share of the market for domestically built cars has slipped to 1.5 percent, ranking fifth behind American Honda AMC's body-making operation is in a six-story, turn-of-the-century building on the lakeshore, while an assembly plant is across town. Production is about 550 cars a day, half the plants' capacity, and the company has said the factories are outlated.

Simply selling more cars would not solve AMC's predicament of building low-profit autos in a high-cost plant.

AMC, 46.1 percent owned by Regie Nationale des Usines Renault, the French automaker, makes the subcompact Renault Alliance and Encore autos in Kenosha and its profitable Jeep vehicles in Toledo, Ohio.

AMC President Jose Dedeurwaerder, a former Renault executive, said the company will decide early next year where to make the cars that will replace the Alliance and Encore, which will be phased out within three years.

Building a new plant will take several years, and AMC says it has been contacted by several unspecified "governments." The cost of new factories has

The cost of new factories has been estimated at between $300 million and $600 million, but Lucey says that is the best strategy for keeping the partly French-owned automaker in Wisconsin.

He's examining the idea of building a factory usable for more than just making automobiles.

In Detroit, company spokesman Lloyd Northard said AMC would respond to any of Lucey's comments only when it hears directly from him.

Dedeurwaerder has threatened to pull AMC out of Wisconsin if the state doesn't offer incentives.

Wisconsin's Constitution,

however, bars incentives to one company that aren't available to

"There are limits to what we can do for a private company" Lucey said. "If we help one company, other corporate executives will say 'what about me?""

It's a question AMC workers in Kenosha are asking, too.

"I have to hope this company is going to survive," said Rudy Kuzel, president of the United Auto Workers Local 72 at AMC. "If they can get some financing for a new plant, Kenosha has a lot going for it"

"I do think they'll continue," says Mike Fechner, 36, and owner of Fec's Place.

Navy drops bidding deadline so General Dynamics can bid on subs

WASHINGTON (AP) - The General Dynamics Corp. may have been suspended from receiving new government contracts, but the Navy also is suspending a bidding deadline on a major submarine contract so the firm can participate.

The step was taken, despite General Dyanmics' indictment on fraud charges earlier this week, "to preserve competition and therefore lower prices in shipbuilding," Navy Secretary John F. Lehman said.

Lehman confirmed Wednesday the service had suspended "indefinitely" a Friday deadline for bids on construction of four nuclear-powered attack submarines.

Only two companies can make the Los Angeles-class submarines the Electric Boat division of General Dynamics in Groton, Conn., and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. in Newport News, Va. The Navy has emphasized annual competitions between the two since the program started in the 1970s.

"This is not an action to protect General Dynamics," Lehman added. "This is an action to protect the public interest. ... It would be foolish of us to award a sole-source contract just to spite another contractor.

General Dynamics was suspended from receiving any new government contracts on Tuesday, just one day after the company and four of its current or former executives were indicted on fraud charges. The charges involve alleged mischarging of cost overruns in producing prototypes of the Army's Sgt. York air-defense

General Dynamics spokesman Alvin Spivak declined to discuss the Navy's decision to suspend the bidding deadline. The company has denied any criminal wrongdoing in connection with the Sgt. York contract.

Jack Schnaedter, a spokesman for Newport News, also declined comment Wednesday.

The Navy's decision, made by Assistant Secretary Everett Pyatt and endorsed by Lehman, was described by another Navy source as "ironic" but necessary.

"Obviously if the suspension goes for an extended period, the situation might change," the source said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"But the problem we're faced with is if we don't extend the deadline, we're facing a sole-source bid. And they've been suspended because of misconduct on an Army contract.

"We don't want another Trident situation," the source concluded, referring to the fact that General Dynamics is the country's only source for Trident ballistic missile submarines.

The suspension is for an indefinite period. General Dynamics has 30 days to contest the action or to propose corrective actions that might convince the Pentagon to lift or limit the

When the freeze was announced, Pentagon sources warned it could have a major impact on the firm if not resolved quickly because of the approaching Friday deadline for bids on the attack submarines. Thanks to Pyatt's decision, the St. Louis-based defense giant for the time being may concentrate on getting the suspension lifted, confident that the submarine work still will be available.

As the nation's third largest defense contractor General Dynamics received $6 billion in business in fiscal 1984.

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) -Jefferson County authorities are joining forces with representatives from the chemical industry to draw up a blueprint for better handling accidents involving hazardous

A newly formed Hazardous Materials Advisory Council will draw up a "tentative plan" in January to prepare for emergencies, County Emergency Management Coordinator Dick Nugent announced.

There is an acute need for the development of a planned, coordinated response to emergenies involving hazardous materials," said Nugent, who heads the council. "Events involving the release of toxic

County Judge Richard LeBlanc said hazardous material accidents are not uncommon in the Southeast Texas county, where many oil and chemical companies have plants.

"We have them (accidents) here almost on a monthly basis, mostly with trucks and railroad tank cars," LeBlanc said.

Nugent said such accidents frequently are "complex situations crossing jurisdictional boundaries (and) often exceed the capabilities of one agency, company or emergency response service.

But under the umbrella of the Hazardous Materials Advisory groups that now function to protect the community on an individual basis will have more information and, with the coordination of efforts, will be more effective in responding to emergencies."

Nugent said the council will probably devise a "tentative plan" in January for meeting hazardous materials emergencies. The plan must then be tested using drills, he

Dave Willette, manager of the Du Pont company's Beaumont Works, said the chemical industry recognizes an obligation to help public officials prepare well for chemical accidents, whether they occur inside plants or during transportation of hazardous products.

"The key in this program is to provide a bridge between what we're doing inside and what's takes place outside a site," Willette said. 'However, today we don't have the degree of coordination that we'd like to have between the various agencies so that we can add the capability of each agency together," when responding to an

Lawmakers mourn death of Mahon

By KATHRYN BAKER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - When young district attorney George Herman Mahon arrived in Congress to represent the new 19th District of West Texas, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was in his first term as president. Sam Rayburn was in his second as Speaker of the House, and Harry Truman was a senator from Missouri.

When Mahon left Congress 44 years later, he had served longer continuously as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee than anyone else in history. His portrait hangs in the Capitol, where one of the committee rooms is named after him.

Mahon died on Nov. 20 in San Angelo, seven years after retiring from Congress. He was 85.

For 14 years, he ran the committee that writes the legislation that pays the nation's bills. Anybody who wanted government money for virtually any program - be he lowly freshman or president of the United States - had to go through

But the tall, lanky Texan had an unassuming manner that belied his

Shortly after Jimmy Carter took office, Mahon, who had been chairman of Appropriations Committee for 12 years, requested an autographed photograph of the new president. It was a simple, typical request from a congressman.

As if he felt he had to prove the worth of his request, Mahon included with his letter a photo of himself standing respectfully in front of a wall of photos in his office autographed by all the presidents back to FDR.

"He was the kind of man who had influence without having to display it," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen. D-Texas.

"It's been hard to follow him," said Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., who came to Congress four years after Mahon and took over as chairman of Appropriations when Mahon

The day after Mahon's death, a stream of mourners who had heard the news that morning took to the House floor to remember him. They included the Speaker, the majority and minority leaders, members of the Appropriations Committee and other congressmen who just knew Mahon and liked

The speeches weren't the usual canned tributes meant to be written up in the Congressional Record. Many weren't especially articulate. They were personal, off the cuff, from the heart.

Several colleagues recalled how leading others in old-time hymns, then calling his wife, Helen, to his side to sing "Ma, He's Makin' Eyes

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said he always thought that Mahon the golfer mirrored Mahon the "pennypinching" keeper of the nation's pursestrings.

"We had a little standing joke out at Burning Tree that if there was not a tee left on the tee, you know, a little wooden one, George Mahon must have passed through here just before us in a foursome," Michel said. "I have seen times when he used to take those little broken tees and, just like a whittler, renew the point so that he might use it the next time around."

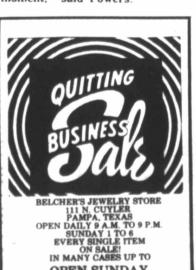

'He was literate," said Sidney Yates, D-Ill. "He was civilized. He was well-read. He loved music and he loved art.

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., now ranking minority member on Appropriations, recalled that Mahon was an accomplished bridge player.

"As I stood here and listened to you, Sid, I just could not help but visualize George running the defense subcommittee with that green visor over his head there so that the lights of the room would not bother his eyes. He really looked like a poet sitting there as chairman of the subcommittee on defense.

Ed Powers still works for the Appropriations Committee, as do several other staffers Mahon hired. Powers said they never were asked about their political affiliation, just their qualifications. (Whitten said he has continued that practice, unique on Capitol Hill.)

"He was a real pleasure to work with, a total gentleman in every moment," said Powers.

DEAR MR. ANONYMOUS: I'm glad you wrote. Your letter gives me an ideal opportunity to share some helpful hints on how to interact with a blind person. I quote a booklet provided as a public service by the Braille Institute:

The Otwells' most recent appearance as part of the Lawrence Welk troup was in New York's Madison Square Garden. Slip into sleek but cuddly outfit

By Florence De Santis

Sleep-and-loungewear styling has been simplified, keeping in step with general fashion trends. Instead of ruffles and flounces, designers are concentrating on fabrics, using satin and knits for gowns and brushed fabrics for softly cozy robes.

Trims are now often part of the degn instead of an addition, as in Lily France's sporty pajama of ivory brushed Captiva nylon tricot. Its blouson jacket has lace sleeves and panels of lace and tricot, but no additional trim. At Royal Robes, the glamour of gray polyester moire is enough for their tailored pajama and robe set. Juli for Slumbertogs trims an ample jacquard robe in white satin dot with navy cuffs, collar and piping. It is worn over a navy camisole and navypiped white pants.

Color forms an important way to glamorize without adding trim. Fernando Sanchez, who usually likes a lot of trimming, shows a black, quilted silk lounging pajama piped in emer-ald. His romantical and full quilted robe in rose has oversized black velvet lapels and a two-color sash. Maria Romano does a smoking jacket-styled top. This is in charcoal silk charmeuse, piped in hot pink, with pants in hot pink, for Ria Designs.

Revelry resurgence sours, Georgetown

EDITOR'S NOTE - In its heyday in the late 18th century, Georgetown's inns were boisterous gathering places, especially during 'Fair Days' when everybody in town was free from arrest "except for felony and breach of peace." But a resurgence of revelry in the elegant neighborhood is souring many of today's residents.

By JOAN MOWER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -Georgetown, the quaint Washington neighborhood favored for decades by the rich and powerful, is being spoiled by thousands of weekend revelers and a proliferation of "shlock shops," some residents complain.

Traffic, noise and commercialization have soured many people, including Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and his wife, Midge, who recently put their $208,000 house on the market.

"Alas, the dirt and drunks who wake us up every weekend at 2 a.m. are driving us out." Mrs. Baldrige wrote in a letter to the Citizens Association of Georgetown

Still, "the village," as some locals call it, has maintained its status as an "in" spot to live with its red brick town houses, huge mansions, gourmet restaurants, green parks and smart shops.

Rising from the Potomac River in the city's northwest quadrant, Georgetown is a place where you're as likely to bump into a congressman as a preppy from nearby Georgetown University; where old ladies with blue-tinged hair walk their fashionable Jack Russell terriers; where nannies still wear white uniforms, and where the local grocery store keeps charge accounts and makes deliveries.

It is also a place which attracts 20,000 people every Friday and Saturday night; where young suburbanites come to guzzle beer and dance; where cheap shoe stores are as common as cobblestones, and where finding a legal parking space is seen as divine intervention.

The influx of people triggered a weekend crackdown as police added more officers on Friday and Saturday nights and imposed additional parking restrictions.

As more people poured into the small area, vandalism, crime and disorderly conduct increased. authorities say

Part of Georgetown's attraction stems from peculiar drinking laws in the area. Nearby Maryland and Virginia prohibit anyone under 21 from purchasing alcoholic beverages; the District of Columbia allows 18-year-olds to buy beer and wine, but they have to be 21 to buy spirits.

"This law is an incentive for kids to drive into the district, drink and then drive home," says Hunter Wolkoff of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, a citizens group

Others are disturbed by the type of development that has boomed particularly on the two main thoroughfares - Wisconsin Avenue and M Street.

David Roffman, publisher of The Georgetowner, a weekly newspaper, says there are so many 'schlocky shops' on the once-elegant Wisconsin Avenue that parts of the street resemble a "Middle Eastern bazaar.

Polly Shackleton, a District of Columbia council member who has lived in Georgetown for 46 years. adds, "After all, we don't need eight or nine or 10 shoe stores and we don't need palm readers or fast-food restaurants for the residents

Maurice and Elsa Pairel, owners of the French restaurant Chez Odette, an institution on M Street for 32 years, sold the homey establishment with red-and-white curtains last summer

"We felt that it was just the right time to get out of it," said Mrs. Pairel.

"I have worked here for 25 years and Georgetown has changed so much," her husband says. "Georgetown has become for the young, young people, for bars and drinking.

Like Pairel, some long-time Georgetown residents complained that the charm has vanished from the European-style neighborhood.

"It's lost its neighborhood quality in many respects," says Marty Levin, whose family has run Sugar's Campus Store since 1930. But Levin refuses to become too sentimental, noting the area has always been transient

Other parts of Washington besides Georgetown have seen rapid development and growth, and the nation's capital in some areas has turned into a cosmopolitan city with luxury hotels, outdoor cafes, a thriving theater and arts community and scores of gleaming glass skyscrapers.

Washington's n e w cosmopolitanism seems to have paralleled the opening and growth of a shiny new subway system, which crisscrosses the capital and reaches into Maryland and Virginia.

Residents of Georgetown bitterly - and successfully - fought efforts to put a subway stop in their area, whispering that it might allow too many people to travel to their area.

Even without a subway stop, Georgetown has exploded to the point "where it's completely saturated," Roffman says.

That saturation has helped squeeze the housing market and push up prices. A two-bedroom brick town house with a postage-size patio rarely sells for less than $200,000.

On the other end of the scale, Washington Post editor Benjamin Bradlee and his wife, Sally Quinn, paid $2.5 million for a 40-room mansion that once belonged to Robert Todd Lincoln, former President Lincoln's son

Georgetown also is home to one of the area's most glittering new shopping malls, an underground complex with plants, swirling staircases and some of the world's best-known shops like Mark Cross Inc. and Abercrombie & Fitch.

The neighborhood's permanent population of about 30,000 includes some of the nation's most powerful people, both Democrats and Republicans.

Michael Sullivan, owner of a real estate firm, thinks Georgetown is probably more popular with high-ranking Reagan administration officials than it was during the Carter administration, when pickup trucks, cowboy boots and country-style Southern cooking were the height of chic.

Politicians aren't the only ones living in the town houses and mansions. Socialites, diplomats, lawyers, authors and newspaper people abound, among them author Herman Wouk, former columnist Joseph Alsop, and Bradlee's boss, Katharine Graham, chairwoman of the Washington Post Co.

Their neighbors include Evangeline Bruce, the wife of former diplomat David Bruce and a noted hostess; Averell Harriman and his wife, Pamela, who is active these days in political circles.

Despite certain hassles, Georgetown came in second to northern Arlington, Va., in a local magazine's recent survey in which residents rated their own neighborhoods. So popular is the place that one real estate agent estimated she received 150 telephone calls after listing a small apartment at $675 a month. Bedlam erupted when she held an open house to show the unit. Georgetown's reputation as a place to have fun goes back a long

In its heyday of the late 18th and early 19th centuries, the area's inns were centers of activity, especially during "Fair Days" when "all persons within the bounds of the town" were free from arrest "except for felony and breach of peace," according to a Suter's Tavern was where George Washington and the commissioners of the proposed federal capital met in 1791, the night before signing the agreement that led to creation of the city.

Earliest historical records indicate the Anacostan Indians selected Georgetown in the early 1600s as a site for their village of Tohoga, partly because they could navigate the Potomac River from either direction.

The Indians later abandoned their village until around 1700 when the beginnings of Georgetown were laid as a result of land grants. The city was incorporated in 1789.

As a flourishing port in the late 1700s and early 1800s, Georgetown boasted a flour mill that shipped around the world, a gun factory and an international tobacco trade.

Begun in 1828, the C&O Canal was expected to enrich the area even more, but the railroads soon made canals obsolete. Today, the canal and the towpath alongside it are a vital recreational area favored by Georgetown residents for jogging, bicycling, canoeing and dog walking.

A central role in the community is played by Georgetown University, founded in 1789 and the oldest Roman Catholic college in the United States.

Paterno favors playoff format

NEW YORK (AP) - Coach Joe Paterno, who has seen three previous Penn State teams cap perfect seasons with Orange Bowl victories only to have the national championship trophy wind up in somebody else's showcase, hates the idea of that happening again to this year's undefeated Nittany Lions

What's more, he's got a way to revent it - if not this season, then n the future. He wants college football to adopt a playoff system.

"I know a lot of people are not in favor of it, but you're asking me and I hate to see anybody voted out of a national championship," he "It's happened to us three Zimes.''

In 1969, Penn State completed an 11-0 season with a 15-14 Orange Bowl victory over Kansas and then aw Ohio State win the championship. In 1970, Paterno's eam defeated Missouri 10-3 at Miami for another 11-0 finish, and watched Texas, with a presidential endorsement from Richard Nixon, win the championship. Each time, Penn State finished No. 2.

Later, Paterno wondered how come the president knew so much about college football and so little about Watergate.

In 1974, Penn State finished 12-0 after beating Louisiana State 16-9 in the Orange Bowl. It earned the Nittany Lions a No. 5 ranking behind national champion Notre

"I felt if we had played (the teams that finished No. 1) on the field, we'd have won," Paterno

Paterno's playoff plan would take four teams after the bowl games and advance them to the semifinal round of a national tournament on the first Saturday after New Year's Day. In a year

OSU schedules baseball camp

The fourth annual Mid-America's All-Star Winter Baseball Camp is scheduled for Dec. 26-30 at Oklahoma State University in Stillwater.

The camp is open to youngsters 10 years of age and older, except for high school seniors. The cost is 275.

The camp is hosted by Oklahoma State University and Cowboy coaches Gary Ward, Tom Holliday and Dave Holliday.

Major League players, such as Greg Pastors, shortstop for the Pittsburg Pirates and and Randy Whisler, outfielder for the Toronto Blue Jays, are also on the 20-man instructional staff. All defensive and offensive fundamentals will be taught at the camp. No games will be played due to the players' lack of conditioning.

More information on both winter and summer camps at OSU are available by writing "Mid-America's All-Star Baseball Camps, Oklahoma State University, Reynolds Stadium, Stillwater, Okla., 74078." Phone 105-624-5849 for more details.

like 1986, when Jan. 1 falls in mid-week, the game would be scheduled 10 days later with the championship game the following

The Penn State coach said most schools are on break between the fall and spring semesters at that time of year and so missed class time would not be a factor. He also pointed out that the NCAA already sponsors playoffs in all other sports, including football at the Division I-AA, Division II and Division III levels.

"We ought to be doing in our sport what we do in every other sport under NCAA auspices," Paterno said. "The 1,500-meter swimming championship is decided head to head. Wrestling, lacrosse, soccer, volleyball, gymnastics ... you wouldn't have people looking at gymnasts in different parts of the country and then voting on who's the best.'

Participants could be determined by computer ratings, power indexes, or vote of a media panel, he said. The coach is not particular about that, as long as it settles the annual dispute objectively on the field and not subjectively in the minds of voters.

With Penn State No. 1 going into the Orange Bowl, a victory over No. 4 Oklahoma might be expected to seal the national championship for Paterno's team. Lurking at No. 2 is Miami, headed for a Sugar Bowl date with No. 8 Tennessee.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, while worrying about a date this week against Southern Methodist. could be excused for thinking that if his team survives that test and goes on to beat Penn State, it would have a valid claim on the national championship.

But what happens, Paterno was asked, if No. 2 Miami, already armed with an earlier victory over Oklahoma, wins its bowl game, too. Who's No. 1 then?

"Let them fight that one out." he said, adding thoughtfully, "if they

CHILDRESS - Here, as they say, we go again.

Rewind: Nov. 30, 1984. The Munday Moguls score twice in the fourth quarter here, once with 44 seconds left, to edge the Wheeler Mustangs 20-17 in the Class A state football playoffs. The Moguls go on to capture the state title.

Fast forward: Now. Munday and Wheeler are preparing for what is becoming a playoffs rivalry and a game that history says should again decide the state Class A championship.

Saturday's 2 p.m. collision in Childress' Fair Park Stadium will pit the No. 1-ranked Moguls against the No. 3 Mustangs in what should be a classic encounter between two talented and polished Texas football teams.

Munday, 13-0, will be looking to replace Wheeler as The powerhouse team in Texas Class A football, extend its winning streak to 30 games and keep alive its hopes for back-to-back state championships

Wheeler. 12-0, wants to end all of that. The Mustangs are after the school's third state championship in the past 10 years and are trying to live up to the legacy of past Wheeler teams. They want, too, to erase the painful memories of last year. (See last year's game story on this page). Pleading semantics, Wheeler head coach Preston Smith said the Mustangs don't want revenge, but 'redemption.'

'We're glad we've got a chance to come back and redeem ourselves," Smith said, but added that his coaching staff is trying to guard the Mustangs from becoming too emotionally hyped prior to the game.

I know they've been talking about us all year," Munday head mentor Jim Edwards said, "but you can be involved for one series about things like that and then playing football takes over.

"I think there's been a lot of anticipation," Edwards said. "That was probably the state championship game last year...It's going to be a very good football game and I think everybody realizes that. Edwards is right. Talk around the state football circles has it that a bunch of people with no affiliations to either school or to any schools remaining in the playoffs will be in attendance. College scouts. Coaches. Media. Football fanatics.

"There's a lot of people aware of this game. I hope we're able to live up to our end of it," Smith said.

In certain key aspects, Wheeler, which drummed Crowell 47-0 to get here, will be fielding a team that differs from the one that lost to the Moguls last season.

The Mustangs were without the services of fullback Dicky Salver, who suffered a leg injury and couldn't play. Other players weren't healthy

'We were kind of limited on offense," Smith said. "This year it's a little bit different story. We've got everybody healthy and our two running backs have matured some. Injuries are going to be real vital to whoever can go ahead and win the state championship.

Edwards said his team is healthy, too, but he's worried about how the Moguls will be able to stop a Wheeler backfield with a healthy Salyer and Toby Collins, both of whom have had 1,000-yard seasons despite playing in only half of most every game. "We've got to stop Salyer and Collins and not give up the big play," Edwards said

Last year against Munday, Wheeler ran the ball with good success. Inside traps, sweeps, bootlegs, reverses and off-tackle plays worked well for the Mustangs, who had 315 yards rushing but none passing.

Wheeler needs for its passing game to have some impact to loosen up the Munday defense, and that falls on the arm of quarterback Randall Hugg and on the Mustangs' receivers. At times this season. Wheeler has shown the ability to throw the ball well.

While the teams are equal in size, the Moguls seem to have an edge in speed, so Wheeler can't expect to break many long plays.

We've got to make our offense go," Smith said. "If we can't drive Analysis

Wheeler team, and one that's pretty much been the standard of Class A football excellence over the past decade, during which the Mustangs have won two state championships. No. 3-ranked Wheeler's 12-0 and its statistics are as impressive as the Moguls', for the Mustangs have scored 531 points this year and given up only 30 while recording eight shutouts. Who'll win? Take heads or tails and flip the coin. It's one of those. The Harris Ratings System says Munday by seven, but that's as small a spread as the Moguls have gotten all year. Usually it's something like Munday by 50.

The quietly spoken opinion here is that Wheeler will win by three, Why, and what will happen if they don't? Wheeler showed last year that it can run the ball against Munday's defense, and did so without Dicky Salyer. The Mustangs gained 315 rushing yards against the Moguls and should be able to do it again, this time with Salver in the lineup.

Wheeler will come out and force Munday to prove that it can stop Toby Collins on the sweeps and Salver on the inside plays. Head coach Preston Smith knows when to use Randall Hugg on bootlegs and players like Dale Hazel on reverses to keep things off-balance.

If, in its first two series, Wheeler can drive 50 yards or more and score without passing the football, there's no way Munday will win the game. The Moguls will become so intent on stopping the rush that openings in the passing lanes will be offered to the Mustangs as

If the Mustangs can't stick the ball down Munday's throat, they'll have Hugg look for receivers on quick slants and out patterns to loosen things up. Wheeler didn't gain a yard passing against the Moguls last year, but things will be different this time around.

Wheeler should have better luck rushing Munday's fine passer, Dent Offutt, who's a major college prospect and who burned the Mustangs badly last season. Again, Salyer's presence will be a key. He's got the quickness to help pressure Offutt, and don't be surprised if Wheeler blitzes hard in certain situations.

Wheeler can stop Munday's wishbone running game.

That the Mustangs feel they have something to atone for from last year is to their advantage, because it's always harder for the team on Wheeler's players want to be remembered as one of the school's great teams, and they know they have to win a state championship to earn that. They love their football in Wheeler, and the Mustangs seem to be good at living up to almost impossible standards.

If Wheeler doesn't win this game it will be because the Mustangs fumbled their chances away and because they couldn't control Offutt, who should have several scouts watching him from the

If the Mustangs allow Offutt the kind of night they did a year ago, they might well go home feeling the same as they did then the

It seems that a fellow named Wade Roberts, a former writer for the Chicago Sun-Times, has been asked to split by that newspaper writing a story that the kecutives there figure he must have made up.

It sounded too good to be true.

The feature story came out in that newspaper on Nov. 18, a day after the Chicago Bears whipped the Dallas Cowboys, 44-0. The setting of it was a bar called Bonner's, which according to the dateline on the story would place it in or near Eden, a small ranching and farming community between San Angelo and Brady.

Let's just cover some of the more salient facts of the story. Our players include Jefferson Davis Bonner (the proprietor of Bonner's, a place with pickled eggs), some other characters with typically Texas names, and the key figure of them all — one Les Smalley, "a craggy, weathered rancher known as Buster."

The story takes place while several Bubba types are gathered around the bar's TV set watching the Bears-Cowboys game. Before the game begins, some of the others try to enlist Smalley in a bet. Here's how the story describes

"'Sorry,' said Smalley, looking timid all of a sudden, 'done made my bet today,' 'Just who and what,' demanded Bonner, 'are you bettin'?' 'The wife. The Cowboys win, and she don't bother me the rest of the season. The Bears win, and I don't get no football 'til the Super Bowl.'"

Towards its finale, the story tells of a distraught Smalley with "his lower lip hanging lower than his Mack truck belt buckle." And right before that, of course, one of the boys in the story punches E-7 on the jukebox, and they all accompany Bobby Bare in a round of "Drop kick me Jesus through the goalposts of life."

Now, some of the people at the Sun-Times found all of this a tad hard to swallow. So they sent Roberts, the author, along with Ken Towers, the managing editor, to Eden and vicinity so Roberts could show Bonner's to the boss and clear himself.

It never happened. During two days of searching, Roberts couldn't find the bar. Roberts claims the bar exists and that the reason he couldn't find the bar again is that it is being run illegally, and that

Jim Schumann, the mayor of Eden, agreed with Agnew that there's no saloon named Bonner's in the Eden area. But like Agnew, Schumann saw the story as doing some good for the community — at least on a light level.

"It's been a pretty good joke around here," he said. "I think there's even been some bumper stickers ordered — 'Follow me to Bonner's Bar- Eden, Texas.' I don't know if that's going to be a fact or not. I just heard it. We won't know it for two or three weeks. If you call me back in two or three weeks, I'll know if there's any bumper stickers or not."

So even though the people in Chicago are mad at him for the story, it sounds to me as if Roberts could move to Eden and get himself a job as town publicist.

What the heck? He'd probably be happier living in Texas than Illinois, anyway, considering he writes about bars such as Bonner's, real or imagined."

Patching over a falling-out

By BARRY SCHWEID AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tremors are finally subsiding, now that Israel has followed up its private apology with a public apology to the United States for the Jonathan Jay Pollard spy case.

Worked out in a lengthy telephone conversation between Secretary of State George Shultz and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, it may help repair any damage to the exceptionally friendly relationship between the two countries.

Israeli espionage in the United States was wrong "to the extent that it did take place," and, if confirmed, the suspect intelligence-gathering unit in the Israeli Defense Ministry will be disbanded, Jerusalem said Sunday.

Sunday.

"I think this is an excellent statement," Shultz quickly observed in a nationwide television interview, hoping thereby to put the matter to rest. Subsequently, the same U.S. officials who last week were quick to criticize Israel's handling of the Pollard scandal suddenly grew silent.

They refused to say, for instance, whether Israel had begun to carry out its two principal promises: to return the intelligence documents Pollard is alleged to have sold to contacts in the Israeli Embassy and to make two Israeli diplomats recalled to Jerusalem available to the FBI for questioning.

Obviously, from Shultz on down, U.S. officials are trying to get the case of the Navy counterintelligence analyst off the front pages and out of the nightly television news shows.

And yet, in a year of astonishing spy disclosures, the Pollard case somehow still stands out. The reason, probably, is that the United States and Israel are such good friends.

Americans and Russians spy on each other routinely, and sometimes get caught. No one seems surprised, although it was startling to have former FBI officials estimate recently that up to 40 percent of the approximately 2,500 Soviet and East European officials in America are spies.

For sheer embarrassment, it's hard to top the reverse defection of Vitaly Yurchenko, the KGB officer who returned to the Soviet Union three months after he had provided important information to the Central Intelligence Agency.

Still, Pollard's alleged sale of hundreds of pages of classified military documents to Israel was considered so compelling by the newspapers and TV networks last week it overshadowed developments in two other spy cases — both of which presumably could be of greater security consequence to the United States, considering the countries involved.

One case concerned a former communications specialist with the National Security Agency accused of spying for the Soviet Union, the other a retired CIA analyst held on charges of spying for China.

Israel, on the other hand, shares intelligence information with the United States, each side helping the other in an often hostile international environment. Their scraps have been family affairs—differences over dealing with the Palestinians, for instance, or whether U.S. jet fighters and other modern military equipment should be sold to Arab governments. Their interests generally have been parallel.

Are stocks overpriced?

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Seldom is there any convincing answer, which is why the market's eternal question is whether stocks are overpriced, underpriced or correctly priced.

It is a question, you might say, that employs hundreds of thousands of brokers, analysts, advisers, regulators and others. It moves the market. It is a simple question that produces incredibly complex answers.

It is a question to which almost everyone has an "answer," although the answer might differ from day to day or from minute to minute. Even those who claim expertise are known to change answers at the latter speed.

The phenomenon's explanation is equally elusive, although perhaps the most rational attempt at one is that analysts can analyze mountains of data in research reports but they cannot analyze the workings of the mass mind.

After reading these assessments of the market and the economy it reflects, see if you can arrive at an unequivocal answer.

The first, from Wright Investors' Service, points to the fact that stocks today are 42 percent higher than at the market peak of five years ago, while book values have risen less than 20 percent and profits less than 10.

The market is also high in terms of equity, with the current level of the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index being 1.7 times estimated yearend book value. That's higher than at any time since 1973.

Moreover, there's money to be made elsewhere at much less risk. That is, Treasury bonds yield close to 10 percent, and that, Wright observes, is more than a 2 percent premium over yields on stock earnings.

It is unlikely that you were not influenced by such research. But now take a look at the economy and the market from another perspective, this one provided by Roger Brinner and Robert Gought, Jr. of Data Resources Inc.

After three years of expansion—the anniversary is this month—inflation has been brought under control, nominal interest rates are less than half what they were four years ago, and over 8 million people are back at work.

"The stock market has liked" what it has seen in the last three years, and so too have foreign investors, who increased their share of U.S. held assets to 11.1 percent in the second quarter of this year," the two analysts say.

And most recently, they continue, optimism over the Soviet-United States summit "suggests that world tensions, both economic and political, may ease 1985 ends"

Both views, essentially objective, can stir up profound, subjective lines of reasoning for those who would attempt answering the big question. And they are mere fragments in the vast pile of research directed toward an answer.

Now consider this additional

Tree planting begins at capitol

AUSTIN (AP) - State ground crews have begun removing young live oak trees in front of the Texas Capitol as part of a plan to plant sycamores along the driveways that lead from Congress Avenue to the Officials said Wednesday that three dozen sycamores are to be planted, probably in February. Clifford Beaver, superintendent of grounds, said the 12 live oak trees will be transplanted to various places around the Capitol complex.

Capitol architect Roy Graham said he was not sure how old the live oak trees were, but he said some of them dated to the administration of Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who served from 1973 until 1979.

Sycamores were planted on the south entrance, or 'allee," a century ago when the Capitol was built. Later, elm trees were planted between the sycamores, said Graham. Sycamores are gone, and the elms are dying, he said.

Graham said the state plans to restore the Capitol and its grounds as much as possible to the way they were designed, instead of replacing the trees with more live oaks.

Sgt. William Henry Millsaps, 38, was indicted Monday by a Fort Bend County grand jury for ordering the Nov. 24 beating of 20-year-old Raymond Neal of Richmond, District Attorney Bill Meitzen said Tuesday.

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) - Are you curious about the potential of hamsters to breed in the wild? Do you care about pocket gophers gnawing on electrical cables?

Did you ever wonder about the value of acorns in the diet of steers?

Gophers studied in 1953 chewed through non-metallic cables, but results weren't clear when it came to munching small wires and sturdy metal.

Kenneth Wagnon warned in the title of a 1943 study that "great steers from little acorns do not grow." The study explained that cattle fed acorns in a dry year suffered severe weight loss without a protein supplement.

Oddities in single animals were enough to prompt three reports by Walter Howard

Howard examined a black mouse with white feet in 1957 and a bullfrog that caught a brown towhee bird in 1950. A 1949 study entitled "Gopher snake killed trying to swallow cottontail" rabbit 'notes a factor which may occasionally account for some deaths of snakes.

A 1980 report on the feeding habits of 8,300 game birds relied on 38 years of stomach analyses. A study of 21 species of parasites found 520 mammal hosts, including Animal diets were the subject of numerous reports.

In 1953, Henry Childs Jr. reported a preference by raccoons for albino tadpoles.

Not too surprisingly, sweet-toothed calves liked poor quality forage after it was sprayed with molasse Advice on the best size of bait to get rid of pocket gophers indicated bite-sized was best.

Ranchers who leave cull potatoes in their pastures for cattle feed were warned to "guard those spuds" in a 1951 report that noted voracious squirrel's show appetite"for them. A 1946 study on rattlesnake stomach contents showed their penchant for squirrels. Then a 1978 study of squirrel behavior found both those experienced and inexperienced with snakes reacted in similar ways when confronted with the predators.

Ranch maintenance also was a pertinent subject for research.

The ability to withstand the searing summer heat and winter fog of the foothills produced studies on the weathering characteristics of fence posts and 32 types of particle board.

Ranchers were warned against a generally accepted practice in a report "in defense of blue oaks."
